A resolution was adopted to have the money collected at this conference used in paying off a debt on the church at Avatoru, Rairoa, and repealing an ordinance passed at last conference, whereby it was to be used to help build a church at Fakarava. Adjourned to meet Tuesday at eight a. m.

TUESDAY, MORNING SESSION.—A resolution was adopted unanimously that the church in this mission sing three hymns during preaching service. A letter was read which had been written by Bro. T. W. Smith, favoring such a move. It gave great satisfaction to have this long standing question settled. A motion was made that the conference repeal an ordinance passed a number of years ago for the purpose of having the members each pay $1.20 at each annual conference for a church building and repairing fund. After considerable discussion the motion was rejected unanimously. A resolution was presented to do away with the confessing of sins just previous to taking sacrament. An amendment was made that they should be confessed at a previous service. Adopted. A letter from an elder at Taronia, Tahiti, who could not be present, was read and placed on file. An elder's report was read and adopted which did not reach the secretary in time to be read at last conference. A resolution concerning the ordination of certain members was laid on the table indefinitely. A number of petitions were read from different branches and were placed on file for consideration—the different branches desiring that missionaries be sent there. It was unanimously decided to hold the next annual conference at the island of Manihi. Adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.—The report of the committee appointed to audit the Bishop's agent's books was read, and as they found them correct the report was unanimously adopted and committee discharged. The matter of organizing the priesthood of this mission into quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons was presented for discussion, and a letter was read which had been received by the president of the mission from President Joseph Smith, sanctioning the movement. It was moved by Elder Tagata and seconded by Elder Tehopea that the suggestion be acted upon and that the president and assistants proceed at once to the work of organizing the said quorums. Carried unanimously. to do their duty as becomes true Saints. Bro. Case gave a short address on the responsibility of their positions and their duties. Bro. Newton also addressed the quorums for a few minutes, after which some of the members of the quorums asked questions in regard to some points not quite clear to them.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

The Eastern Michigan district Sunday school association severed its connection with the Northern Michigan district, and organized an association of its own June 10, 1895, at the regular meeting of the Eastern Michigan district conference, at Detroit, Michigan. BISHOP'S AGENTS NOTICE.

Saints of the Central California District.
Dear Brethren and Sisters:—As the times seem to be improving, and there are prospects of good crops, send in your tithes and offerings, and help roll on this glorious gospel. Let us have a better report next year than ever before. If you cannot pay much, pay what you can, and according as you make sacrifice, so you will be blessed. Please send post office order or Wells Fargo express money order on Hollister, California. My address is Albert Page, San Benito, California.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

To the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints in America; Greeting, in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Amen:—We, your brethren in the Lord do take great delight in hereby extending to you our sincere thanks and gratitude for your great love for us in sending the missionary vessel Evanelia to aid us in the establishing of the kingdom of the Messiah. Therefore we receive your offering with great joy, and shall ever pray the Lord to bless you all, and that his peace may be with us all. We are also greatly pleased that we have had the privilege to meet our beloved brethren and sisters in the Lord who have recently arrived; viz., Bro. and Sr. Burton, Bro. and Sr. Case, and Bro. William McGrath. We rejoice in meeting them, and sincerely welcome them among us, and we sincerely desire that at the proper time our Bro. Joseph Burton be returned here to labor among us if the Lord will. From the Church of Jesus Christ in the South Sea Islands. Written in Panau, Kaukura, February 1, 1895.

Translated from the Tahitian by J. W. Gilbert.

REUNION NOTICE.

To the Saints and Friends of Southwestern Missouri and Eastern Kansas; Greeting:—The southwestern reunion committee have located the next reunion at El Dorado Springs, Cedar county, Missouri, to commence on Friday, September 20, and end Sunday evening, October 6, 1895. The location is a pleasant one.

This reunion bids fair to be one among the very best ever held by the church. The best of speakers will be sought for, and everything in reason done to make it a spiritual feast to all that may attend. Full particulars will be published in their time.

We lack one thing yet, and that is a large tabernacle tent. Who among the Saints and friends throughout Southwestern Missouri and Eastern Kansas, comprising Independence, Clinton, Southern Missouri, and Spring River districts will be one of ten to give ten dollars each towards purchasing a large tabernacle tent for the special purpose of holding reunions and camp meetings throughout Southwestern Missouri and Eastern Kansas for years to come? Who will be one of twenty to give five dollars each? Who will be one to give one dollar each? Without this fund our reunions and camp meetings will be practical failures. Let every one act promptly for himself. This fund will be payable September 1. We must know the amount you will give, on or before July 15.

Every dollar of this fund will be accounted for and an itemized account published and read at the reunion. Presidents of districts and branches will be interested in the success of our reunions to call the attention of the Saints to this fund so as to give all an opportunity to donate to prevent a failure in our coming reunion.

Let each party send a card or letter stating the amount they will pay on September 1, to I. N. White, Independence, Jackson, county, Missouri. These cards and letters will be put on file and returned with receipts for the money when paid. Now, Saints, you all want a part in this work. Don't fail to send a card stating what you will give. Do so at once after reading this appeal before it is forgotten.

Praying that God may bless and prompt the many kind-hearted Saints to respond to this appeal, we subscribe ourselves, your brethren and colaborers in the Master's cause,

I. N. WHITE,
J. B. GOLDSMITH, } Committee.
E. W. LLOYD,

CAN YOU?

There are still some hundreds of dollars owing us on Autumn Leaves. Perhaps your own unpaid subscription is part of it, and if you can, we earnestly ask that you will send it soon. We have waited without mentioning it or our need of it, because we feared yours might be even more urgent than ours, but now ask you that if possible you will remember us.

Address remittances to Bro. David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa. M. WALKER.

PASTORAL.

To All Whom it May Concern:—As I have been appointed submissinary in charge of Arkansas and Indian Territory, and not being acquainted with the field, I would like to hear from all the scattered Saints, as well as officers of branches, priests, and elders laboring in the mission. Please give an explanation as to the condition of the work in your localities, so that I may supply all demands for labor, as far as possible. It will greatly assist me in carrying on the work. It is necessary for us all to work together for the success of the work. Let every one do what he can to make openings, by distributing printed matter, etc., as opportunity permits. Would like a report from all the ministry by July 1, as arranged by the Twelve. We want this mission to be in the front ranks. My permanent address will be Independence, Missouri. Your brother in gospel bonds,

H. H. ROBINSON.

To the Saints in the Tennessee and Kentucky District:—I would like to call your attention to the fact that the annual reunion of the district will commence, in connection with the district conference, on Saturday, July 27. The change of time from August to July, making it a month earlier, was thought to be wise, on account of the fact that August is a very busy season with the farmers; and most of the Saints in the district are of that class.

The reunion will be held at what is called "the Temple," four miles south of Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky. Those who come by rail should come to Wingo, on the Chesapeake, Ohio, and Southwestern railway; and by writing to Bro. Albert Snow, Pilot Oak, Kentucky, arrangements will be made to meet them at the station.

Let us try to make this the most successful meeting of the kind that we have ever yet held. Come to the reunion prepared to stay. Let each one come prepared to do his part toward making the meeting a success. All the blessings of the gospel that we have ever enjoyed were brought to us by sacrifices made by some one. Cannot we do something to better our own condition and send the gospel to others? All come and let us have a good, not a gay time.

Some say we are not ready for reunion work as yet; that we have not got high enough spiritually; that we are not strong enough, etc. But when will we be ready? If there is any good in such meetings to those who attend, do not the weak ones need that good more than the strong ones? Do not those who are lower spiritually need help more than those who are higher? It seems so to me.

We can make a success of this meeting if we will. Let every one come to work for victory, and not come to find fault with or kick against the good work that can be and will be done if we are united and all pull together. No cowards are wanted in the ranks. "Let us all be valiant soldiers" and press on to victory.

In gospel bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

PURYEAR, Tennessee, June 12, 1895.

THE COLLEGE.

The College Committee have been doing what they could to secure the College at Lamoni. The land has been surveyed, platted, and the plat recorded. Lots are now for sale in Graceland Addition to Lamoni; and we hope that those who may desire will purchase, and thus give the needed aid to the funds for carrying on the College work, building, and teaching.

The Committee at its last meeting decided that it would be advisable to secure a loan of from five to ten thousand dollars, with which to push the building to completion. It is therefore desired that if any who may read this shall have funds that they are willing to lend the committee at a reasonable rate of interest for two or more years, they will greatly aid the College enterprise by notifying the committee, addressing either Joseph Smith, chairman, or D. F. Nicholson, treasurer.

Chairman of Committee.

FARRAR.—At Burlington, Iowa, April 15, 1895, to Mr. W. S. and Sr. Bell Farrar, a daughter, named Margaret Ellena. Blessed June 9, 1895, by J. S. Roth and J. R. Evans.

WALLWORK.—At Crenshaw, Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, May 30, 1895, to Bro. George and Sr. Mary Wallwork, a son; blessed May 31, 1895, by Elder W. H. Garrett, and named George.

MARRIED.

BURLIER—MEREDITH.—On April 17, 1895, in the home of the bride's parents, (Brother and Sister Richard Meredith,) at Greggspport, Nebraska City, Nebraska, Mr. Emil J. Burlier, and Miss Louisa Meredith. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Mark H. Forscutt in the presence of an audience larger than could conveniently watch the bride's changing countenance of hope and trust, or take the customary inventory of the bridal tresseau; but all seemed to wish for the gratified couple every good that can adorn, happily, and bless.

PRIEST—MCINTOSH.—At the Saints' church, Coleman, Michigan, at 2:30 p. m., June 10, 1895, Mr. Charles E. Priest and Sr. Catherine McIntosh, Bro. E. J. Martindale officiating. About one hundred and fifty invited guests were in attendance; the church rostrum and windows were nicely decorated with flowers and ferns. All was very attractive indeed. The wedded couple, choir, and many others, were ushered by too little girls to Sr. Gordon Blasdel's, where refreshments were served to the satisfaction of all who were there. We wish the united pair a happy and useful life.

DIED.

LOACH.—At Lamoni, Iowa, June 10, 1895, Sr. Angeline Loach, after a long and painful illness. Sister Loach was born March 22, 1842, in Monroe county, Virginia. Married to Thos. Loach October 1, 1860, there was born to them two children, one dying in infancy, the other, Bro. J. W. Loach, residing at Hiteman, and is the worthy president of the branch at that place. Our departed sister was baptized September 28, 1879, by Elder John Watkins, Sen. During her life in Christ, she was unassuming, patient, and faithful, and of her it can be truthfully said, A good saint has gone to rest, and to await the reward of the righteous. Funeral sermon on the 11th, at the brick church, from Isaiah 26: 19, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, assisted by President W. W. Blair. Interment in Rose Hill cemetery.

JONES.—Elder Evan G. Jones departed this life on Saturday, April 23, at his home at Hastings, Victoria, Australia. He was born at Key West, Florida, December 16, 1831, was baptized at Queensferry, January 8, 1882, by Elder J. W. Gillen, and ordained an elder the same day. He was at one period of his life an active Wesleyan local preacher. Becoming dissatisfied with that connection he united with the Disciples. But when Bro. Glauod Rodger, on his way to Melbourne from Queensferry, preached at Hastings, Bro. Jones got very much interested in the latter-day work. Being well acquainted with him, and he being a frequent visitor at Queensferry in the course of his business, I lent him what tracts and books I had, and the result was that when Bro. Gillen came this way he united with us here, and a faithful, always honest life, made it a comparatively easy task for Bro. Burton to quickly raise up a branch in Hastings, Bro. Jones' home. Since then, he, until his death, ably presided over that branch; and when the district of Victoria was formed he was chosen to preside. He was a man whom to know was to respect and love; unselfish, kind, and loving, a faithful husband, a kind father, and a most excellent friend. The gap that has been made will not be easily filled. The funeral services were conducted by Bro. Butterworth. A vast concourse of people from all parts of the surrounding country was present, testifying to the esteem in which our late brother was held by those outside as well as in the church. A sorrowing widow, four sons, and four daughters grown up, and several grandchildren mourn. Memorial services have been held at Hastings and Queensferry, the former by Bro. Butterworth and the latter by the writer, both being largely attended. Thus pass away to their rewards the faithful, the tried, and the true.

D. MCINTOSH.

BANKS.—At his home in Lowry City, Missouri, March 6, 1895, Bro. James Banks, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. Bro. Banks was born in Bartholomew county, Indiana, August 30, 1836; united with the Reorganized Church, August 1, 1880, from which time till his death he tried faithfully to live as becometh a follower of the Lord. He leaves a wife and one child to mourn their loss, but they do not mourn as those without hope.

SMITH.—At Persia, Iowa, June 10, 1895, Essie Evanelia, daughter of Bro. W. A. and Sr. M. A. Smith, aged 2 months and 18 days. She was blessed May 26, by Elders Frederick Hansen and W. A. Smith. The funeral sermon was preached on the 11th by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

BRAY.—At her home in Little Deer Isle, Maine, June 9, 1895, Mrs. Clarissa H. Bray, aged 32 years. A husband and six little children mourn. She intended to be baptized at our last conference, but death came too soon. Funeral by Elder J. C. Foss.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

COLONEL INGERSOLL TROUNCED.

To hear Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's public addresses on the subject of religion characterized as "blasphemous" is nothing new. In fact it would be rather difficult to say anything quite new by way of denunciation of Colonel Ingersoll, for he has from time to time received the critical attentions of every style of writer, from the scholarly and polite controversialist down to the coarse lampoonist. Nevertheless, the Rev. William Ashmore contributes to The Christian Inquirer (Baptist) a few remarks concerning the Colonel which are spirited enough to freshly arouse interest. Referring to Colonel Ingersoll's latest public lecture in New York, Mr. Ashmore writes:—

"Such an audience, gathered to hear such a man, in such a place, on such a subject, was a pitiable sight even for New York City. That it was blasphemy gone to seed was about all expected, but it was something else besides that—it was coarseness and vulgarity and low buffoonery gone mad. As a buffoon on that night, Colonel Ingersoll outdid himself. For when a man starts out to deal with some sober, ponderous, and momentous question, people expect him to have something serious to offer, and to try, at least, to shed a little light into a dark place. When he fails utterly in that, and has nothing to exhibit but the jokes and antics of a clown exhibiting for fifty cents a head, then as a clown people will rate him."

Mr. Ashmore adjures us to think of this matter, reminding us that "these problems of human destiny are serious questions," that they have appealed to the sober thought of truly wise men in all ages, and that "none but a fool seeks to make sport of them." He points to the ancient philosophers—Plato, Socrates, Aristotle, Demosthenes, Cicero, Marcus Aurelius, and others—who have dealt with these subjects in the most dignified thoughtfulness. He cites great heathen leaders, like Zoroaster, Sakyamuni, Confucius, and Mencius, who faced these awful problems, but always soberly, seriously, and anxiously, even when most mistakenly. He continues:—

"They never turned mountebank, they never giggled on the edge of the grave, they never answered their inquiring pupils with a joke and a grimace in order to draw from them a guffaw of senseless laughter. As for the men of intellect and weight of character in our own lands they have not agreed on explanations to be given, but they have agreed in the reality of these stupendous issues, and in the conviction that they are too intensely momentous to be treated in any other than a candid and cautious spirit. Such men as Shakespeare, and Bacon, and Burke, and Brougham, and Scott, and Hale, and Washington, and Webster, and thousands like them have all stood together here. Men like Jefferson and Franklin may have been inclined to skepticism in some things, but they always spoke soberly and never indulged in idiotic mirth. To the minds of them all it was apparent that we are in a world of unsolved problems; that there has been an awful catastrophe of some kind in the history of the past is what is universally admitted; that we are suffering the painful consequences now in our own selves is what none deny; that there is, or ought to be, some door of deliverance is what all fondly hope for. Whence came we? Whither are we bound? Who will show us any good? Who can help this poor, crushed, shuddering, suffering race?

"Who can point to a helper? We will stand hushed in silence while you speak. This is the sober voice of humanity to-day, in Christian and in heathen lands, in the heart of Asia and in the heart of America. Men differ in the answer to be given. Christians declare confidently that they have a key to the whole mystery, and can tell of One upon whom help has been laid and who is mighty to save. Followers of other religions will not accept this but have other solutions to offer. Mohammedans, Parsees, Hindus, Buddhists, Confucianists, Shintoists, and Agnostics, who, like Pilate, ask mournfully, 'What is truth?' All these there are; and there are brainy men of our own kith and kin in America and Europe whose minds are not at rest, and who, after their several theories, express themselves in books and magazines and reviews. But in all the clash of opinion and interchange of articles there is maintained a dignified seriousness. The subject is felt to be one of infinite weight and one calling for infinite soberness of thought and feeling. In it all there are no jokes of the circus type, no crackling of thorns under a pot, no laughter at fools, no badinage at a death bed, no dancing of jigs at a funeral."

Mr. Ashmore here sets forth and analyzes the substitute that Colonel Ingersoll offers the world and asks it to accept in place of Christianity; and he reduces this proffered substitute to the sensual doctrine of "Eat, drink, and be merry." In closing he says:—

"Alas for his audience—some went from curiosity, but the majority of them because they love to have it so. The scoffers, the infidels, the saloon men, the courtezans, the gamblers, the agnostics, the 'haters of God,' are always in full force when he speaks. The blind leader of the blind goes blundering along the edge of the ditch, and the poor blinded crowd come tumbling after. 'Their foot shall slide in due time.'"—Ex.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE DUE TO CONFINEMENT.

THE close confinement of milch cows in barns is roundly condemned by Our Animal Friends (New York, May) as the best possible means of bringing on the dread tuberculosis. It says:—

“The danger is manifest, but it is more than a danger; tuberculosis is a plague from which the weekly tables of mortality prove that human beings are dying, not by the hundred or the thousand, but by the million, every year; and in the United States this plague is probably spread more widely by tuberculous cattle than by any other agency.

“Now, the susceptibility of cattle, and indeed of all animals, to the infection of tuberculosis, depends largely upon their general health. A healthy person who takes sufficient daily exercise and lives much in the open air may be perfectly impervious to the poison of tuberculosis, unless he has some hereditary predisposition toward it; but if the constitution of the same person becomes impaired, and if his vitality is lowered by confinement in a close room, he may fall an easy prey to the infection of that terrible disease. In like manner, cattle which are perfectly healthy and which are kept in a healthy condition may be and remain insusceptible of the virus of tuberculosis; but if they are kept, month after month, in the close atmosphere of an ill-ventilated stable, their treatment is a direct invitation to the disease.”

In reply to the statement that in Holland cows are habitually kept in the stable without ill effects, the superior cleanliness and ventilation of Dutch stables are pointed out, as well as the care taken by the Dutch farmer to guard against infection and to kill infected animals at once. In conclusion, a certain class of dairymen is thus castigated:—

“It is cynically said by dairy farmers that, ‘whether it is good hygiene or not to keep their cattle housed for months together in close stables, it is good business.’ They argue that when milch cows are out of the stable, they move about to some extent and take some exercise; that this, of course, uses up some of the nitrogenous elements of their food; and consequently that some of these elements which would otherwise go to the enrichment of their milk are lost.

“Now, even granting the truth of this contention, for to some small extent it is undoubtedly true, we must maintain that ‘bad hygiene’ in the dairy is exceedingly ‘bad business’ in the long run. It is as certain as anything can be, that bad hygiene shortens life, and to reduce the average productive life of cows by one year will far more than make up for any small increase of their milk product while they live. But, besides this, the confinement of cows in a close stable invites the plague of tuberculosis; and if one animal is infected, the whole herd is almost certain to be destroyed. Unless, then, the dairy farmer is willing to become a wholesale distributor of poison and death among his neighbors, and unless he is willing to see his property destroyed by his own lack of common sense, there are three things, at least, that he must do: he must see that the stables in which he keeps his cattle are kept clean and sweet, and perfectly ventilated; he must see that the cattle are well and carefully groomed every day, since good grooming is almost as useful as exercise; and on every day when the sun shines, he will turn his herd out to be refreshed by one of God’s best, and brightest, and cheapest, and most necessary gifts.”—Ex.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

“By Higher Biblical Criticism is meant a critical inquiry into the Divine authority of Sacred Scripture, which depends on its inspiration; into its ecclesiastical authority, which depends on its canonicity; and into its human authority, which results from the genuinity, integrity, and credibility of the sacred books. It is the business of the higher critic to analyze the documents with which he has to deal, to determine their value, relative age, and general credibility. If such is the meaning of the word, surely no valid objection can be made against this science itself, but only against the manner in which it is sometimes cultivated. For, thus understood, the exercise of criticism is not only allowable, but even desirable. The best way to know what a thing is, is to learn how it came about, how it came into existence. There is no reason why a Christian should be afraid of the most searching inquiry into the human authorship, date of composition, and meaning of the several books of Sacred Scripture, provided, of course, that the critic is not misled by false principles in his researches.”—The Rev. Charles P. Grannan, in The American Catholic Quarterly.

GIFTS, NOT REWARDS.

ONE cause of misunderstanding and consequent doubt concerning spiritual gifts is that we consider them from the wrong standpoint. If we consider them as a reward of merits solely, we will often be perplexed to account for the manner of their distribution among the membership.

Indeed, we have known of some who occupied this false position, stumbling and losing confidence in these heavenly inspired gifts. It is quite common to hear Saints say something like the following:—

"I do not see why Bro. A. or Sr. B. should have such wonderful gifts and such remarkable testimonies when their lives are no more exemplary than mine, if so much so, and I do not receive such wondrous things." If the Saints would remember that spiritual blessings are just what they are called—gifts, and not necessarily rewards, this matter would not be so puzzling. We should not conclude that our standing before God is better than our brother's because we have more outward manifestations than he; nor should we be discouraged if we have less; neither should we condemn the gifts because of the weakness of the instruments through which they come unless such instruments seek obnoxiously to fasten their manifestations upon others as law. I may be unfit to receive law for your guidance because of my imperfect and erring life, and yet God may wondrously bless me notwithstanding my weakness. While it is essential that we always live humbly and strive earnestly for purity that we may enjoy an abundance of the Holy Spirit, yet it is a fact that God often blesses those who have peculiar weakness, and who are striving to overcome, more abundantly in some ways than he does the stronger ones.

This upon the principle explained by Paul,

For our uncomely parts have no need: but God has tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked.—1 Cor. 12: 24.

This is but just and kind. As earthly parents we gently lead and carefully nurse the weaker children, and even require the stronger ones to minister to their wants simply because they are weak; while we do not extend special care to the healthy, robust child. Of course we do, or should, have the same general care for all, giving them recognition, approval, and instruction. Should we then complain, or think it a strange thing if God so deals with his children? While we should be careful and watchful lest we be deceived by false manifestations, we should not condemn a gift because exercised by a weak or erring person. When those whom we know to have peculiar weakness tell of the wondrous love and condescension of God towards them, we should rejoice that he is succoring the faltering ones, even though our special manifestations may be few. If our heavenly Father but gives us the smile of recognition, and assurance of approval, we should be satisfied, rejoicing with those who do rejoice, remembering that the leaving of the ninety and nine to find and gather tenderly in his arms the wandering one was a wondrous exhibition of God's love and care. Nor should those exercising gifts esteem their bestowal an evidence of complete approval, but rather let them be thankful for the gift and manifest gratitude by striving to use the gift to God's glory and their own improvement in mind and body. All are necessary, so let all rejoice together.

SHARPS.

THE editor of the Return, published at Davis City, Iowa, as the organ of the Church of Christ, or "Whitmerite Church," is a very shrewd, or a very unfortunate man. In the Return for March 1, 1895, the salutatory contains the following reference to the work which was interrupted by the death of Elder E. Robinson:—

He felt that his work in reviewing the past was done, and intended to devote all the space of the paper in the future to gospel work.

We take it up right where he dropped it, without reference to any other work or issue.

Our only apology for so doing is that we have felt the burden laid upon us, and the means to do it have been placed in our hands without any seeking on our part.

At the head of this issue, and each subsequent one until the one for June 15, there has been the following supposed quotation:—

Condemnation rests upon the children of Zion, even all, and shall remain until they turn, and remember the New Covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments, not only to SAY, but to DO, the things that are written therein.—Joseph Smith.

At the head of the issue for June 15 of the Return, we now find this:—

Condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all, and shall remain until they repent, and remember the New Covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments, not only to SAY, but to DO, according to that which I have written.—Joseph Smith, D. C. sec. 83, par. 8.

In this same issue for June 15, the editor of Return, distinctly avers that he holds it to be honest to misquote a statement to be found somewhere, and then to give Joseph Smith as the author of such misquotation. He writes thus:—

THAT QUOTATION.

Under date of March 22, 1895, we received a letter from Joseph Smith, asking the question, "Why do you misquote from sec. 83, D. C. and give Joseph Smith as the author? Is that honest?"

We answered emphatically, Yes, sir. If for the sake of brevity I shorten the terms and drop out useless repetitions, but am scrupulously careful to preserve the exact meaning, I cannot truthfully be charged with dishonesty.

The Return continues:—

Having drawn the fire of the Herald, in an editorial under the heading "Questionable" on page 255, in the April 10th number, we cheerfully comply with the editor's suggestion—give the words quoted just as they read, and state where they can be found. And now that this is done we ask anyone to tell us wherein the meaning and sense is changed in any degree.

When a man, or a party of them are posing as reformers and attacking other people for having departed from right ways and invite them to return to original and better things, it is always best to start fair. We wrote to the Return asking a fair question. The Return had a garbled quotation from a revelation given in September, 1832, at a period when David Whitmer was an active member in the church and in good standing, and purports to be the word of the Lord to Joseph Smith and six elders, placed on its first page as a motto; and this garbled, misquoted quotation was placed there, and Joseph Smith given as the author, without a citation to where it could be found. We asked if this was honest, and the Return answers "Yes." But, then proceeds to say that he complies with the suggestion of Herald and gives the words quoted as they read, and again garbles and misquotes the quotation; as anyone will see who will read from the book itself.

And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.

Thus this editor who holds it to be honest to misquote and then give a name as author not warranted in the quotation states that he will give the words as they read in the quotation cited, and deliberately leaves out eleven words from a total of fifty-four, about one fifth; and does it in such a way too that changes the sense, as anyone can see who cares to read the two quotations in comparison.

If the cause the editor of the Return is advocating can be served or advanced in any way by quoting and using anything to be found in any of the standard books of the Reorganized Church, it can be done quite as well by giving the quotation as it will be found in the book or books, and giving the reference to the book, chapter, and verse where the language may be found. That is the honest way of doing that sort of work; the other way is not the honest one, no matter who may hold that it is.

In giving Joseph Smith as the author of the words quoted, as the Return has them, the editor makes Joseph Smith to say what he does not say; and, failing to give reference from March to June 15, leaves the impression on those reading the Return and not informed, that Joseph Smith did say what is attempted to be quoted in manner and form as stated, which is not correct. Again, in leaving out from the attempted quotation the words, "which I have given them," the Return distorts the whole paragraph, and fails to identify the sentiment found in it. Such work as this coming from those making an appeal to others to return to lost paths cannot inspire confidence in those they strive to reach; for the thought is sure to be present that if they will in this manner distort what may have been written, so will they do in regard to any other passages of either human or divine writ, should it suit them, and may not be safely trusted.

We venture to suggest to the editor of the Return that he had better take the advice of the motto, and return to the words as they are written, and not continue to flaunt a garbled misquotation at the head of his paper making Joseph Smith its author.

If this specimen of the work of the editor of Return is intended to be a sample of the work dropped by Elder E. Robinson and taken up by the editor "right where he" so dropped it, it will be easy to measure such work as it progresses.

PROPORTIONATE ADVANCEMENT.

BRO. E. W. NUNLEY while doing mission work among the people settled a long-standing difficulty that had existed among members of another church, to the general satisfaction of the community. See his letter.

"Blessed are the peacemakers," etc. Bro. Nunley has evidently proceeded upon the injunction, "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do it with all thy might." "Church unity" is now a popular theme of religious discussion. Our Texas brother has not only been setting forth the true doctrinal basis of unity, but contributing to the internal conditions essential to it. Our gospel is a practical one, designed to meet the very issues of life that enter into the general conditions of the people in the habits of life that so largely assist in the makeup of their characters and general status.

"God hath set in the church" stewards over the general departments of the spiritual temporal economy, who stand ready to set in order and keep in order all things that tend to the general and local welfare of the people. Our system of government is all right—heaven-born, and we are glad to see some of our denominational friends benefited by it to the degree that they have been. We trust they shall so recognize the further good extended to them in the message Bro. Nunley is delivering that they shall conclude to fully conform to the order of God. To do so in the full sense is simply to "enter into life" in its largest and broadest sense.

There is a principle running through all law—religious as well as social, political, and all phases of natural law. It is this: Advancement is proportionate to the extent that law is honored; so far, but no farther. A person who observes a principle by honoring it—by conforming to it, is to that extent uplifted, advanced, carried forward,—"preserved by law." With that step forward, however, he is confronted by other principles that invite him to further progress by honoring them in turn; and as a pupil masters the elementary principles of mathematics and is thus enabled to take up the intermediate, and so on to comprehend the more intricate and higher ones essential to a knowledge of various sciences and arts, so knowledge in all phases of life is the power to do and be that comes only to those who "receive" and "know the truth" by obedience.

A sick man is helped by correcting his diet, but helped only in degree. If in addition to the observance of law he also properly regulates his rest, taking sleep "in the hours set apart by God for the rebuilding and strengthening of the body and mind," he is further aided; and if he is observant of all other rules essential to his physical welfare he is contributing to his speedy and permanent recovery by a combination or system of laws designed to promote and preserve his health. So in the observance of the Word of Wisdom; one may "avoid the use of tobacco" and his health improve thereby; or if addicted to the use of intoxicants he discards them, he is further improved; and if he further honors law by abstaining from tea, coffee, and other injurious substances, he further contributes to his physical benefit and general welfare.

In addition to these principles of "the law of the spirit of life" are those that enjoin "temperateness in all things, control of the temper, the cultivation of the spirit of brotherly kindness, patience, charity, etc., which contribute to mental equanimity—a pleasant condition of heart-content and agreeableness of disposition; all essential to the physical, moral, and spiritual health of individuals and their associates, and the cultivation of which are necessary to the good of individuals themselves, and due from them to society for the general welfare.

So we might continue to enumerate the steps in the ladder of faith comprehended in the gospel, taught in the plain teachings of the word; remembering that while we teach the world the better way we are under obligation to practice what we preach, and so bear witness to the truth as the Master did—by example as well as precept.

Like others we are pilgrims, seeking the better country as we grow in ability to discern our own failings, and shall be prepared to enter in and occupy a place there by observing fully the law that can clothe us with the wedding garments of preparation, of fitness.

Let us honor all principles that we may be fully conformed to the divine image. The observance of one, two, or three will not save. All are necessary to completeness—perfection. There are and can be no exceptions. What we preach to the world we must ourselves observe.

By "these things" we are to be made "partakers of the divine nature"—changed from the fallen condition in which man at present exists into the higher and nobler state to which the law of the Spirit is designed to bring all who subscribe to it, by receiving it in the heart and retaining it.

BRIGHAMITE elders are more numerous in the States than for some time heretofore, according to the reports from the brethren in the field. Bro. Henry C. Smith, writing from Milton, Florida, June 21, says:—

I have just had an interview with two salt land elders. They are visiting every house in this country. There are about two hundred of them in the South, circulating tracts and talking among the people. They will not air their views in comparison with ours publicly. Had quite a sharp talk with them on the differences between us, but find the books to be of no use in personal controversies, they being disposed to change the plain teachings to suit their case. We are holding regular meetings here in the courthouse, also fourteen miles north—at Coldwater. Have been feeling quite poorly since arrival here; climate seems rather enervating. Don't know how it will terminate, but hope to be better soon. Sr. Smith is feeling pretty well.

Brighamite missionaries will no doubt receive respectful and courteous treatment from elders of the Reorganization, but their special features of doctrine will be subjected to open examination always, as all principles put before the people as a means of salvation ought to be. The ministry of the Reorganized Church have been sent out to advocate and defend the truth—the message committed to Israel in the last days. They will defend it to a man and not stand by and see the latter-day message misrepresented and distorted by the peculiar tenets of the Utah philosophy; hence those representing that philosophy need not be surprised to find the old time injunction "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good" constantly held up before them and they asked to "walk by the same rule."

BRO. W. W. BLAIR started from Lamoni the 26th, for California, Nevada, and Utah, on church work. He expected to reach San Bernardino by June the 30th, where he will labor till the reunion at Downey the 12th, which he would attend. He will thence work north for the fall work in the Santa Cruz and San Francisco districts; thence to Nevada and Utah in due time. Sr. Blair accompanies him, and will aid the sisters work in Sunday school and other work, with her presence, counsel, and experience, as opportunity will afford. Sr. Blair is an earnest worker, of gentle manners, and good judgment, and will greatly help the work where her aid is invited. She is president of the Sisters' Mite Society, of Lamoni, and under management the society has been a very efficient helper in the general financial work of the branch.

We bespeak a hearty and kind welcome to these yokefellows in the Lord, among the Saints where their work may call them.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. L. WARE is sick. He asks prayer that he may recover. He wrote from Richmond, Missouri, June 24:—

This is to inform you that I am sick, and have been since the 8th of this month, in bed most of the time, with some kind of fever, scarcely able to write these lines. Don't know when I will be able to do anything in the ministry. Ask your prayers.

Bro. U. W. Greene, Machias, Maine, June 19:—

Have commenced work with our district tent. Excellent success so far.

Bro. Heman C. Smith, Pleasant Grove, Utah, June 22:—

I have preached here the last two nights. Will go to the city to-day to minister there over Sunday, while Hyrum will continue here.

Bro. James Moler, Hemlock, Ohio, June 22:—

I closed a successful series of meetings at Blackford, Hoeking county, Ohio, last Thursday night, with eight baptisms. Others are interested.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, Clifford, North Dakota, June 21:—

Having good meetings. Plenty of rain; crops are good, and all seems cheering.

Bro. James Kemp, Conifer, Colorado, June 20:—

I am laboring as circumstances permit, doing all I can for the cause. I baptized two ladies here on Sunday, the 16th. So they come by ones and twos. We are all well.

Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, of the Twelve, writing from Manchester, England, June 14:—

Bro. Caffall is in London. I shall leave for South Wales Monday next (17). I am well, and shall do my best for the work while in this mission. The work in this district is onward; but little is being done in the other districts in England.

Courage, good brethren, a foothold in England will before long be of good advantage in the work.

Bro. John H. Lake, of the Twelve, wrote from London, Ontario, June 22:—

I have been preaching in the Chatham district of late, in some new places with good results; friends to the cause have been made, and there are more calls than we can fill. There are many in this district also. An opera house is offered to Bro. R. C. Evans to preach in, at Dunnville. I am to remain here over the Sunday, then go to the reunion at Niagara Falls, see the great waterfall of the world, and meet the Saints of the Canada mission. We look for some from New York, Ohio, and Michigan. Shall hope for good to come to the cause.

Bro. Lake reports the troubles at London in a fair way to be settled.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, North Attleboro, Massachusetts, June 18:—

Seven were baptized at Plainville last Sunday by Elder C. A. Coombs. Mr. and Mrs. David Bethel and Mrs. Ella Grinnell were among the number. There is some talk of locating the gospel tent within about three miles of here. It is now located at West Dighton.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOME of the ministry in California are requested to visit and labor at Lower Lake, Lake county, that State, with the promise of finding a home and some interest among the people; this by letter from Sr. E. E. Cobb.

Bro. C. E. Blodgett has been preaching of late at Shelton, Nebraska, in a neighborhood among the United Brethren. He baptized five, which caused criticism by a local minister, to which Bro. Blodgett made reply to large audiences, the excitement causing many people to come out and learn the faith of the church. Bro. B. will return and continue the effort, by earnest invitation of the people. He reports the branch at Fairfield as growing in membership.

Bro. James McKenzie, of Albany, Maine, wishes to correspond with some of the ministry in the Pine Tree State with a view to arrange for preaching near his home. He will care for the minister who goes.

Bro. R. E. Grant sends us clippings from the Detroit, Michigan, Tribune, of June 9, and West Bay City Tribune of the 16th. The former is a half-column article on the late conference of the Eastern Michigan district; the latter an article of about the same length describing the Northern Michigan conference. Both give extended details and a correct statement of the position of the church. The accounts are well written and will go far toward setting forth the work in its true light before the people of Michigan.

Brn. W. C. Cather and Henry Sparling, engaged in tent work at Springfield, Missouri, request supplies of HERALDS, and Ensigns, and tracts from those who have any to spare. Address them at No. 1323 Benton Avenue.

Bro. C. J. Spurlock baptized four persons in Stoddard county, Missouri, of late, riding over one hundred miles on horseback to induct the candidates into the church. He returned via Poplar Bluffs, where his labor was interrupted by a prevailing contagious disease.

Bro. J. R. Lambert returned home on the 25th ult., from a missionary tour in the Nodaway, Missouri, district.

Brn. E. L. Kelley, William Anderson, and D. F. Nicholson visited various points in Iowa and Missouri, looking up the architecture and general arrangement of school and college buildings in the interest of the Lamoni college, which the building committee expect to soon begin the construction of. While absent Brn. Kelley and Anderson attended and assisted in the dedication of the Saints' chapel at Maysville, Missouri. Brn. Joseph Luff and T. W. Chatburn were present. The dedicatory and other preaching services were well attended by the citizens of Maysville and vicinity, where there is an abiding interest in our work. Bro. T. W. Chatburn was in charge of the exercises. Bro. Kelley reports an excellent trip.

Bro. James V. Roberts writing from Shenandoah, Iowa, 25th inst., reports the Saints as striving to do what they can for the work. The late visits of Brn. W. W. Blair and Geo. H. Hilliard had been profitable to the work there by wise instruction both upon the spiritual and temporal matters pertaining to duties under the law.

Bro. J. W. Gillcoat, formerly of Arkansas, now located ten miles east of Dallas, or four miles southwest of Mesquite, Texas, wishes former friends to know his whereabouts, and that he is preaching the word to some interested, while others, especially those of the Campbellite persuasion, are much opposed to the doctrine. He would like assistance from the ministry in Texas. He requests prayer for himself and family.

Advices from Odessa dated June 17 state that the Russian cereal crop this year will almost equal in abundance the splendid crop of 1893. The condition of the rye crop is said to be especially good.

By letter from Bro. E. Miller we learn that the work begun in Cleveland, Ohio, one year ago is slowly progressing, with Brn. Miller and Burgett in local charge. Brn. W. H.

Kelley, G. T. Griffiths, and M. H. Bond have done much toward establishing the church permanently in the city.

BRO. R. S. SALYARDS, associate editor, has concluded that it is not good for man to be alone, and as a result has wedded Miss Anna Stedman, favorably known to the church as an active Sunday school worker, and writer for the Autumn Leaves and Gospel Quarterlies.

The entire office force join in wishing these contracting parties a long, peaceful, and contented domestic life.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Do with thy strength, do with thy might
The work that lies nearest, 'twixt morning and night.
The talent entrusted thee try to increase,
Lest they rust in thy coffers and rob thee of peace.
The pathway of duty keep ever in sight,
Then work with thy strength, work with thy might."

HARD TO UNDERSTAND.

A YOUNG friend who has been very helpful to us in our work upon the church publications has recently written us explaining the cause of our not having heard from her for some months and in closing adds: "There are many things that are hard to understand, but I trust that God will help me to see and feel that he knows best. I often wonder why it is that when we desire to work to advance the cause we love so well we are compelled to sit, as it were, with folded hands. I hope that whatever is intended to be taught, that for one I may learn the lesson well."

This is a hope we should all entertain, and that a lesson is intended to be taught by One wiser than any earthly teacher, in the failing of our plans, the blighting of our hopes, no child of God can afford for one moment to doubt. How unwise, then, is complaint or fretfulness upon our part. If faith and patience may but have their perfect work, the result will be advancement in the spiritual life. But, upon the other hand, if like our young friend we earnestly desire to learn well the lesson divine wisdom has set for us and apply our minds to the task with all diligence, may we not expect that in due time we will be advanced, not prove to be like those of whom Paul wrote who, while always learning, never came to a knowledge of the truth? How often we sing,

"My times are in thy hand,
My God! I wish them there."

Must there not be some mistake, then, when we are made acquainted with the appointing of those "times," if we murmur or complain? The work which is nearest to our hand may be work very different from what we had planned, but if God's planning is wiser than ours then it should be accepted with perfect trust and with assurance unflinching. It may not have been a part of God's intention towards us that we should understand. If all was understood there would be little room left for the exercise of faith and were this the case our Christian character would lack in the symmetry of perfect development. It is enjoined upon us to "grow up into the stature of a perfect man." God seeks for us a perfect development and when we fully realize this will we not welcome with gladness all which tends towards making us more like him?

SYNOPSIS OF READING, CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN, HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

THE POWER OF A MOTHER'S LOVE.

THE power of a mother's love cannot be overestimated as an agency in shaping the character of a child. No human love or tenderness is like that of a mother. Nothing can supplant the impressions made in a child's earliest years by the love and tenderness of a true mother, and nothing can make good the loss if these be lacking. Many a man who seems hardened to every other influence for good has yet a tender side to his nature because he remembers his mother's prayers and tears. When a mother is so much to a man, it is because she was all in all to him when he was a child.

God compares his love for us with the love of a mother. He says: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you," as if inviting the sinner to come like a grieved and weary child who finds rest in his mother's arms and is sure of cheering words from her. As if to call our attention to that which is surest of anything that we know of human fidelity, God asks, "Can a woman forget her nursing child?" And then to show that his love is yet surer, he adds, "Yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee."

David expressed abiding confidence in God in these words: "When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up." Expressive of the profoundest depth of human sorrow, he said, "I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother." The Savior hanging on the cross, turned, as it were, for a moment, from the work of eternal redemption to recognize the tenderness and fidelity of his agonized mother and to commend her to the care of the beloved disciple.

The Bible abounds with pictures of loving mothers and of a mother's love; representative mothers whose like are still about us on every side. There are also many Bible injunctions concerning mothers. "Honor thy father and thy mother," is distinguished as the first commandment with promise. Solomon said, "Forsake not the law of thy mother," "and despise not thy mother when she is old." It is indeed a foolish and unnatural man who "despise his mother." In all ages true children of a true mother "rise up and call her blessed," for God gives no richer blessing than that of a mother's love.

Carlyle wrote of his mother, "I thought if I had all the mothers I ever saw to choose from, I would have chosen my own." A mother can never be replaced. There is always a sense of dependence upon a mother which is never outgrown while that mother lives. No matter how old her son may be, she is always his mother and he is her boy, and when she dies it is as if a shelter had been taken from above him. No earthly music can equal the words, "My dear son," spoken in a mother's tones.

When Dr. Johnson was fifty, and his mother ninety years old, he wrote to her, "You have been the best mother, and, I believe, the best woman in the world." He thanked her for her indulgence to him and asked her forgiveness for his shortcomings, closing with the words, "I am, dear, dear Mother, your dutiful son."

When Luther's mother was dying he wrote tenderly to her, regretting that he could not be with her. Near the close of the eventful life of St. Augustine, he said, "It is to my mother that I owe everything. If I am thy child, O my God, it is because thou gavest me such a mother."

John Quincy Adams mentioned his mother, who died at the age of seventy-four, as "an angel upon earth," the real personification of female virtue, of piety, of charity, of ever-active and never intermitting benevolence. He had not been with her except at long intervals, but the mere knowledge of her existence added to his comfort, and when she was gone he said, "The world feels to me like a solitude."

When President Nott, of Union College, lay dying at an age of over ninety years, he could be soothed to rest by gently patting his shoulder and singing his mother's lullabies, causing him to fancy that she was again at hand to care for him.

Lord Macaulay said, "In after life you may have friends, fond, dear, kind friends, but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which mother bestows." He sighed in the midst of the struggles of life for the sweet peace of childhood hours, when, nestled in his mother's bosom, she read aloud to him. And he said, "Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared asleep; never her kiss of peace at night."

Napoleon Bonaparte looked up to his mother with a reverent affection, attributing to her all that he had and all that he was. When a lonely prisoner on the Island of St. Helena, with all else seemingly lost to him, Napoleon found comfort in the thought expressed in these words, "My mother loves me." He had felt able to rule a world unaided, but now he was not above feeling a dependence on a love like that.

A young army officer lay dying. In his delirium, after a wakeful, restless night he was commanding his forces, in great excitement. He gave orders rapidly. Everything seemed to be going wrong. Just then his mother, who had come from the north to nurse him, entered the room. He turned, expecting to meet a new enemy, but when he saw her all anxiety passed away, and the troubled soldier was a soothed child again. He said, "Ah, mother's come! It's all right now."

"Every man is a child to his mother to the last; and it is the best in man that keeps him in this child-likeness toward his mother. It costs something to be a good mother; but there is no reward which earth can give to be compared with that love which a faithful mother wins and holds from the son of her love. Oh! if good mothers could only know how much they are doing for their children by their patient, long-suffering, gentle ways with them, and how sure these children are to see and feel this by and by, the saddest of them would be less sad and more hopeful, while toiling and enduring so faithfully, with perhaps apparently so slight a return."

THE MESSAGE OF THE FLOWERS.

THAT flowers have a message for all is observed in the fact that every one, no matter what the condition in life, no matter what the moral or material environments, is responsive in more or less degree to their subtle influence. This response may be as unconscious as the appeal of the winsome messengers themselves, as voiceless as their own silent eloquence, but it is none the less true that it is universal and potent, sometimes leaping to the heart and to the conscious mind with a suddenness and force which dims the eye and opens the floodgates of the soul.

Watch the little toddling child as it reaches out its tiny hands for the bright flowers of lawn or wayside, and runs with baby delight to throw the plucked and stemless blossoms in its mother's lap—what is the joy-freighted message they bring to the child-soul? And so on through life. To the schoolboy and girl, to the care-free youth and maiden, to the man and woman burdened with the thought of the morrow, and to the aged whose feet are upon the threshold of another world, the flowers bring a message that none can refuse to hear, a message that warms the heart and expands the soul; they exert over all hearts a fascination peculiarly their own.

What a pathetic sight, and withal a suggestive, is the little street gamin standing with longing eyes and itching fingers in front of the flower stands on our city streets! Who shall say that the beneficent influence of the beautiful messengers has not a potency even there?

Rich and poor, old and young, saint and sinner, all are touched at some point by the sweet breathings of the spirit of the flowers—a spirit which because it breathes universal love and good will is universally listened to. We may not be able to analyze the law which makes the human heart quick to open to these subtle influences, but the veriest child feels its operation. Beauty of form, of color, of fragrance—these please the senses, while that higher and invisible something which lies back of these, and which brings forth their beautiful harmony, touches a chord in the human soul and causes it to vibrate in unison, if but for a moment, with its own beautiful spirit.

"What do the flowers say to you?" was asked of a girl who had been "knocked down" by one who should have been her protector, and who was being tenderly cared for by a white-ribboner in a home where flowers bloomed in rich profusion.

"They make me feel sorry," was the reply, "sorry for myself and sorry for him; they seem to take the terrible bitterness out of my heart." And, indeed, that we think, is the special mission of flowers—to take the bitterness out of the heart, and thus "prepare the way of the Lord."

All things beautiful have their mission. It is a cheering sign of progress that the world's thinkers to-day are coming to recognize the power of the beautiful in the development of the higher faculties; that they are beginning to see that the truly beautiful is the truly useful; that beauty in music, in art, in literature, in "nature," is of the utmost utility in the uplift of humanity on all moral and sociological lines.

We often speak of a man or woman "with a mission" as if to have a mission necessarily distinguished that person from the ordinary run of mortals, when the fact is everybody and everything has a mission. Every atom in the universe, every offspring of the creative Word—without whom "was not anything made that was made"—whether organic or inorganic, protoplasm or man, has a mission; and that mission is, in its highest and broadest sense, to help carry forward the great plan of creation, the great purpose of being—to reveal the Creator. The question with us then is not, have we a mission, but what particular part have we to play in the great all-inclusive mission?

Of one thing we may be sure—that it is the duty of each one of us to recognize and cooperate with whatever influence for the general uplift we may see around us.—Selected.

Letter Department.

COOKS' POINT, Texas, June 22.

Editors Herald:—I have been engaged of late in the work like I think Paul was when he went from house to house teaching the people, and I believe I have done more good in this way for the last month than ever before in the same length of time; and among other things I settled a serious difficulty in the Baptist Church, which they had failed to for a long time. This set aside much prejudice; the people of the community seemed to rejoice on account of it, even those who were not members of said church, because it had become a nuisance to them all.

I visited many families in Brazos and Robertson counties, explaining to them the truth of the gospel, and they as a rule seemed much interested. I was invited to come again and preach, which I aim to do. I attended several of their meetings and gave a Sunday school lecture by request of the superintendent. The school seemed to be interested in the talk. I have an appointment to preach in a new place Sunday next, the result of visiting as stated above. I expect to do more of this kind of preaching in the future; if I cannot get to preach to them in public, I will give them a private sermon to bait them as I see it works well.

be in better condition just now. Several places are open for preaching now that have not been heretofore. Brn. Beall and Currie are preaching some in the district and other local brethren are putting in some time in spreading the good tidings; so we hope for a better harvest this year than for many years past in Texas Central district.

We expect a debate to commence at Durango, Falls county, this State, July 15, between Bro. I. N. White and C. W. Sewell, a Campbellite preacher.

Yours in the one faith,
E. W. NUNLEY.

CLAY COUNTY, Iowa, June 22.

Editors Herald:—Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard have many reasons to rejoice and thank God. We have had seasonable rains and the crop prospect is good and farmers, generally, are encouraged. Saints, as a rule, are well and hopeful and quite energetic in the Christian warfare, though some perhaps ought to do better than to straggle so far behind.

Brn. J. F. McDowell and C. J. Hunt are doing good work, holding tent meetings at Marathon and looking after the interest of the work at other points as opportunity affords. Bro. W. W. Whiting is holding meetings in the vicinity of Ayrshire, Palo Alto county, and the writer is holding forth in the Cook schoolhouse, Clay county, and all of the meetings referred to above have been fairly well attended, and attention has been good. Sunday I had the pleasure of baptizing two men, heads of families, whose conversion is due, in part at least, to the labors of other ministers and Saints, and I hope the Lord has given the increase. There is a little Campbellite cloud in the spiritual horizon "about the size of a man's hand" down near Pocahontas Center, resulting from the labors of Bro. C. J. Hunt, and Elder Hunter, of the Christian Church, which at present threatens to spend its force in a religious discussion. I am glad to know that a true soldier for Christ is always ready for the battle when the interests of the work demand it, feeling assured that under wise management the truth is in no danger and that there is no such thing as failure for the humble soldier for Christ who follows the lead and obeys the commands of our victorious general, Christ Jesus.

Our conference which closed at Deloit the 2d inst. was well attended and withal a fairly good one. Two were baptized by Elder C. J. Hunt. The district Sunday school association had a good convention and the entertainment on Saturday evening was very good. At Harlan something new under the sun happened this year in that our church was recognized as having an equal right with other churches to conduct memorial services. I have learned that Elder T. W. Williams preached an excellent memorial sermon at that place on May 26, and that Elder H. A. Stebbins delivered a good oration there on Decoration Day. We believe that the efforts of these brethren at Harlan have resulted in good. Memorial Sunday at Dow City found the large M. E. church crowded with patriotic people and the writer pronounced the discourse. At the same town Elder J. F. McDowell delivered an excellent patriotic oration in the S. Green Hall on Decoration Day. As "straws" may "show which way the wind blows," so these signs are omens for good to the cause we love. Who can play when there is so much to do? Who can rest at ease in Zion when cries are coming from every quarter, "Come over and help us"? O Lord, help thy servants and saints to be all that they should be, and richly endow them with thy Holy Spirit and give them wisdom, perseverance, patience, brotherly love, and divine grace that they may continue to labor for the advancement of the truth, the salvation of souls, and the glory of God, until the race is run and the prize secured; until the battle is fought and the victory won; until the world is warned and a people prepared to meet their God; until the veil shall part and reveal the glory of the coming Lord and the shout of victory is heard!—Amen.

THE PERFECT DAY TO COME.

There is a time to come,
Most blessed and fair;
When Jesus Christ our Lord shall come,
To bless his people here.

O then we shall behold
His glory here below;
And peace, and love, and joy, behold,
From all their fountains flow!

No sorrow then we'll know,
Nor sickness, pain, or woe;
The life, and love, and power of God
Shall conquer every foe.

O then we shall rejoice.
With all the sanctified,
And dwell within that heavenly place
With Jesus and his bride!

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, June 20.

Editors Herald:—A week ago last Sunday Mr. Stephen Phelps, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church, delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the benefit of the High School graduates, and in the course of his remarks took occasion to refer to the "Mormon question" in such a way that it included all called "Mormons." It was entirely out of place in a high school exercise to single out any religion and speak either reflectively or approvingly thereof.

I wrote him a personal letter but received no reply. I then addressed an open letter through the newspapers, a copy of which I send you, which elicited the accompanying explanation. This has done us much good. It forced Dr. Phelps to publicly acknowledge a difference between us and the Utah Church.

The great majority of the people here could not help but see that his reference to any church or religion was unfortunate and un-American in addressing a high school class. In talking with newspaper men, doctors, and business men, they acknowledge that my exception was well taken. I learn that the Junior Order of American Mechanics, which is quite strong here, passed a resolution denunciatory of Dr. Phelps' unfortunate reference to the "Mormons."

Dr. Phelps did know that there was a

"Mormon" church in this city. Their place of meeting is advertised every week. He also knows that our church is generally spoken of as the Mormon Church. This is not the first time that Dr. Phelps has spoken reflectively of our work, but I think he will be more careful hereafter.

Everything progressing nicely here. We are having tent meetings every night with good interest, Bro. Fred A. Smith and others assisting. Your brother in Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

MATHEWSON, Okla., June 10.

Editors Herald:—The "land of promise" as spoken of in Book of Mormon, page 503, was to be preserved for a righteous people; and according to the decree of God the people that should possess that land should serve him or they should be destroyed when they had ripened in wickedness. Twice has this "promised land" been peopled by those whom God has directed to come here, and twice have they been destroyed. The third time God in his mercy and love moved upon "a man" (B. M. pp. 23, 24) to come across "many waters" to the promised land and open the way so this chosen spot of earth might be peopled preparatory to the latter-day glory or fullness of times. And now for the third and last time the people are fallen into the same old ruts and are fast ripening in iniquity, when again the wrath of God will be poured out without mixture and the wickedness swept from off God's chosen land.

Men, churches, nations, and worlds all have to bow to the laws of the unchangeable God, and as Paul has said, reap what they sow. These famines and drouths, storms and earthquakes, wars and pestilences are the "finger boards" at the cross roads along the line of march, telling us that we are nearing the time when opportunities will fade away and man's agency be confiscated by the coming of the King of kings, and Lord of lords.

Work "while 'tis day: the night cometh, when no man can work." Man, the highest type of God's creation, is seemingly as indifferent as though he was not the highest type. People in this age get tired so quick; they like to rest. They read and hear that which would lead them to God and Christ, but they forgot it so easily. They should have more force in their nature. If they don't feel inclined to pray, pray anyway; if they don't feel like going to church, go anyway. "Cease to do evil and learn to do well." No one can do well or do right until he learns how. Every man to his trade; he has got to learn it first.

So many people are counting on being "saved," entering into the kingdom of God, yet they don't take time to think about their salvation, the ways of life; what God would have them do, more than one minute in a week. And yet they expect to obtain a glorious salvation without scarcely any work. The wonderful surprise that awaits the multitudes of people! "What manner of men ought ye to be." "A living sacrifice" to God is what we should be.

hearted, too easy in times of famine and trials. These things are for our good. How can we expect to be a "tried people" unless we have trials? How can we be benefited unless we endure those trials?

'Tis a war that calls for valor,
'Tis a conflict with the world.

Those whom God has chosen to lead his army, the generals and officers, can see the magnitude of the conflict—they can see the weary soldiers as they falter in the line of march; but at the sound of the bugle and the drum they can cheer them on, telling them the victory will be ours if we faint not for

We have all for life enlisted
In the army of the Lord.

I hope to do all I can in this great warfare, knowing that without God's help I would fall by the wayside. I cannot report work in this mission, only that there are many calls coming for preaching. We hope for an abundant harvest in the vineyard of the Lord, though there be a failure in crops.

Please say to the readers of the Herald that we can use Herolds, supplements, and Ensigns to good advantage in this field; and if they will send them to my address I will be thankful to them. And so all can work together for the saving of souls and the latter-day gospel. In gospel bonds,

R. M. MALONEY.

SPRINGDALE, Ark., June 20.

Editors Herald:—The above date finds me well provided for at the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. E. C. Wildermuth, one mile south of Springdale on the S. F. and St. L. R. R., in Washington county. I came here on the 15th and have been preaching every night this week to small but attentive congregations. I will be obliged to close tonight to reach other appointments in Benton county.

I find, since coming into this field, a greater demand for preaching and more open doors and invitations to "come and preach in our schoolhouse" than I ever met with in any new field before. I am very agreeably surprised to find so many neat, well-built, and comfortably seated schoolhouses, every three to four miles throughout Benton and Washington counties, and I suppose they are in other adjoining counties as well. There are grand opportunities indeed for gospel work; but where are the laborers? If the prospects remain as they are I could put in my entire time preaching, and not get over one county in a year. However, I expect to concentrate my efforts to such points as seem to promise the best results.

We have a splendid little branch of Saints now at Maysville, Benton county, Arkansas, of about forty members, Bro. W. W. Shumaker in charge. They are nearly all from Texas and Southern Indian Territory, most of them poor in the things of this world, but rich in those things that go to make up the life and character of a Saint in latter days.

I would be glad to hear from any Saints living in Northwestern Arkansas, or friends who may desire preaching. My home address is Maysville, Benton county, Arkansas. I will do all I can to reach you sometime during this year, always remembering that the traveling elder is a creature of circumstances and can only go as ways and means are offered him.

To the Saints everywhere: Your faith and prayers are especially requested in behalf of the work in this section, that notwithstanding we are laboring alone most of the time and part of the time on foot, we may be able to meet every emergency and use the seemingly splendid opportunities to reach the people in a way and manner that will bring the greatest good to the Master's cause.

Your brother in hope,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

BLAIRSTOWN, Missouri, June 25.

Editors Herald:—Bro. D. C. White and self just closed a grove meeting near Oak Grove schoolhouse. I go to Creighton tomorrow to commence a series of meetings in the Advent church, which they have kindly offered me. Will wend my way homeward to spend the 4th, thence on to Durango, Falls county, Texas, to commence a debate, July 15, with Rev. C. W. Sewell of Disciple fame. Our obligations say, twelve sessions upon the two churches.

I pitched tent at El Dorado Springs early in May. Called in, as time passed along, Brn. Curtis and Keck to assist. Clark Braden was sent for and billed the town with posters, saying:—

MORMONISM UNMASKED.

"Clark Braden will deliver a series of lectures in the Christian church in El Dorado Springs, exposing the giant fraud of this century, Mormonism. Subject to-night, Tuesday, May 28, 'Mormon perversions of prophecy.' Wednesday night, 'The fundamental errors of Mormonism.' Thursday night, 'The evils and dangers of Mormonism.' Friday night, 'Why Mormons have been persecuted.' Saturday night, 'Mormonism in West Missouri, in Cedar county, and in El Dorado Springs. Sunday, three p. m., 'What are you going to do about it?' Sunday, eight p. m., 'Do we need revelations in addition to the Bible?'"

Well, who would have thought of Braden putting in an appearance at El Dorado, where he had so recently been snowed under so completely! Poor Braden had a hard road to travel. The first night, I understood, he had nineteen souls all told to hear him. He attempted to do what he utterly failed to do in the debate, when I stood by his side to show him up in his snide trickery. By Saturday night Braden was talking to about one dozen, all told, so I was informed. Sunday at three p. m., when he was to have lectured upon, "What are you going to do about it?" Braden did not even put in an appearance. All of this time we were having from about seventy-five to overflowing tentfuls of interested listeners. The warm greeting that we received, seemingly upon all sides, was cheering indeed, and we felt to thank God that we had been made able by his Holy Spirit to defend a work that was worthy of such a defense and is now appreciated by so many. The brethren baptized six, all heads of families, during the meetings, and others have obeyed since,—and still they come. I understand since the the tent meeting closed the brethren have bought the nice frame schoolhouse and about one half acre of ground,—which will be fixed up for church purposes. The schoolhouse is of good size and on an excellent rock foundation and is quite sightly located.

Our cause is not dead at El Dorado Springs and vicinity, nor are the good brethren sleeping. I understand the wide-awake brethren, A. Lloyd and C. M. Schrader, are the prime movers in backing the "purchased possession"—the schoolhouse church movement. I will venture my word that they are not alone very long in this needed enterprise; too many noble-hearted Saints in that part of the vineyard to let the few carry the burden alone.

Brethren of the ministry are moving all along the line; Keck and Curtis in west of Nevada; Walter, Sawley, and Mannering in north of Clinton; Sparling and Cather at Springfield in tent work; Beebe and Duncan in tent work at Lebeck. Goldsmith just closed north of Nevada. Some local brethren, such as A. and D. C. White, Pement, etc., are doing some commendable work. D. C. is a rustler all around, which no doubt others would be were their hands loosened a little more. Bro. Baker and local brethren are not at all idle in the Spring River district. Brn. E. A. Davis and Pender report from Eastern Kansas, as pushing ahead. They report the Campbellite brethren wanting a debate at Hallowell, Kansas, ask that I carry the sword during the fight; but here comes word for me to come to Orchardville, Illinois, and meet a Missionary Baptist. Questions were agreed upon, but time not set. Bro. Luff thinks I had better go and assist the brethren.

Be careful, brethren, about arranging for debates. Don't let the adversary have it all his own way. Two questions are enough for one debate. We should not affirm everything. If our opponents have the truth, let them say so one-half of the time, at least. If our cause fails to be sustained as the truth of Christ, in debate, that is no evidence that our opponents have anything better. Let their cause be tested side by side with our own. If they refuse so honorable an offer as that, nine times out of ten they are unworthy of an honorable debater's attention. Don't be so anxious for debate as to agree to affirm three or four questions to your opponent's one. Debating is hard work. It is doubly so when forced to affirm questions that do not fairly state our position. Have fair, honorable questions, or none at all. We should not debate for mere victory over our opponents, but to convince the people that the truth we are defending brings peace and eternal life, if obeyed. Seek for honorable propositions and rules governing, then stand by them as though your life depended upon their maintenance. Anything less than this should be avoided in debate as dangerous to our case.

To those in my mission: Let the Saints be careful to live right all around. Keep your word; pay your debts; let your light shine by always telling the truth, and living what you have professed. Don't be too anxious to baptize people before they have shown a genuine spirit of repentance. The work is now suffering in places because of hasty baptisms. The ministry should seek the Spirit to assist them in their work. A meek, humble life is preferable in all of your work.

Your colaborer,

I. N. WHITE.

MANCHESTER, England, June 11.

Editors Herald:—So many of the Saints in the States have requested me to write on my arrival in Europe, hence I take this means of informing them that I arrived at Liverpool on the 7th inst. I left home on the morning of May 30 for my distant field of labor. No one but God above knows what a terrible cross it was to have to part with loved ones and leave home under present circumstances. However, we have made the sacrifice in the interest of the Church of Christ and for the salvation of our fellow men, and we sincerely trust and do humbly pray that the Lord of the harvest will abundantly bless our weak efforts to the good of his great cause.

The officers and members of the Manchester branch gave me a kind reception last Sabbath. Such kind treatment from the Saints, especially at a time when a person feels a little homesick, tends to encourage and stimulate a man to greater activity in the service of the Lord.

I was pleased to note the great progress that the work has made in this city since my departure. They now have two branches in the city presided over by Brethren James Beatty and Henry Greenwood, both of whom are worthy men and highly respected by the Saints. Bro. Dewsnup, Senior, president of the district, is constantly at work with the aid of a host of able, active young ministers, effecting new openings throughout the district. The entire local officers, with the exception of a few who are appointed to assist the branch officers where help is needed, are out on the Sabbath preaching the gospel unto their fellow men; and some of them walk ten miles to fill appointments, and the president of the district goes before them and leads the way. This is as it ought to be in all the world. If the elders and priests who are not branch officers would make it their duty to open up new places a few miles from home on the Sabbaths and thus magnify their calling it would be well for the work; for the command is, "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand." I feel confident that if every officer would honor his calling in obedience to the above mandate that greater success and prosperity would come to the church in all the world.

May God give each of his servants strength to labor faithfully in the calling whereunto he has called us, that in the end it may be said unto us by the great Head himself, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Perhaps a few items as to my ocean voyage, the size and speed of the ship, will be read with some degree of interest by some of the Herald readers. The magnificent steamer Campania of the Cunard Line sailed from pier 40 at eleven o'clock Saturday, June 1, with 1,743 souls on board; first cabin 390; second cabin 303; steerage 600; crew 450.

The Campania is 620 feet long; horse power 30,000, tonnage 12,950. She consumes between 400 and 500 tons of coal per day. On the first day out we made 482 miles, on the second 516, the third 491, the fourth 492, the fifth 518, the sixth 458.

About eight or nine o'clock on the 6th we reached Queenstown. We spent some time at that port transferring mail and passengers who were booked for Ireland. It was late Friday night when we arrived at Liverpool and we did not land until Saturday morning.

The writer was very glad to stand on terra firma again, for we experienced a very unpleasant voyage, the sea being very rough, and as a consequence the majority of the passengers were compelled to pay tribute to Neptune. The grand old ship rolled and tumbled about for four days. Indeed, the water rose so high that it worked its way through the upper port holes and got in among some of the steerage passengers on the second deck and played havoc with them; boxes, tin pans, bottles, dishes, and a great many of the people being carried about, all mixed up together by the water. The sailors seemed helpless for a time, and considerable crying and much praying was indulged in by some of the poor souls. However, the sailors got the port holes closed at last and we sailed along very nicely thereafter. There was one death during the voyage, that of a little child. I did not get seasick; nevertheless, I prefer to be rocked on the land than in the cradle of the deep, blue sea.

Bro. Caffall is in London. I shall remain in this city over the 16th and go thence to South Wales, where I will labor until the mission conference in August. My permanent address until further notice will be No. 17 Dawson Street, Manchester, England. My health is good. The weather is nice and cool in this country. Kind regards to all in the office and all the Saints in every land.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 13.

Editors Herald:—Our local conference closed last Sunday after a peaceful and spiritual session of a little over three days. Perfect joy, peace, unity, and love seemed to prevail during the entire session. The only thing that marred our pleasure or that we could have wished otherwise was the fall of rain that caused us to dismiss earlier than we desired. And now that the conference is a thing of the past we desire to renew our efforts for the cause in this district; and as a minister to the people of God, I desire to make this appeal to those of the ministry that are and will be associated with me in this part of the vineyard, and also the members of the district to put forth renewed efforts that with prayer and fasting we may be able to obtain enough of the Spirit of the Master to enable us to push the work in these parts with more energy than has ever been before done. To do this several things must be taken into consideration. And while we reflect upon the past and view with admiration the much good that has been done here from time to time for the past thirty years, and that by sacrifices by the servants and the people of God; and while we do not seem to increase in number, yet many have been gathered out of this country and all seem to have their faces turned Zionward. The Spirit of God seems to turn their faces in that direction, and while one drops out another drops in, and thus the ranks seem about the same from year to year in this country. There are some things that we as ministers should drop off and some things we may lay hold of that will altogether tend to progression if we make this change in ourselves, and it will be easy for us to do this if we but seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit; for the Savior promised the Comforter and said that when he had come he would reprove sin and righteousness. Then if we have any self-righteousness or self-esteem we should give room for the Spirit that it may come and crowd it out and let it return to the Spirit that originated it, and pray God for that Spirit that will guide us into all truth, thus doing away with unfriendly criticisms, slight remarks, and jestings, never encouraging even the appearance of sin; but on the other hand hold each other up in our weakness, ever whispering good counsel in the ear. Thus in unity and humility we can be bound together in the love of the Master with the Spirit to guide us and we will be able to accomplish a glorious work here this year.

We are looking for Bro. A. B. Moore and later for Bro. H. P. Curtis. We hope also to see Bro. George Montague, our presiding elder, sometime during the year, from whom we expect to receive some wise counsel. And to the members, we solicit your support and knowing your zeal for the work we look over the noble efforts you have made in the past, with admiration and with uplifted hands to heaven ask God to bestow his boundless love with the blessings of eternal life upon you.

Dear Saints, remember that we are engaged in a progressive work and that we never do so well but that we can do better. We trust then that we will have renewed energies on the part of the membership. God has blessed your fields this year, and this will enable you to give at least some time to divine worship and when the elders come to your neighborhood to hold meetings you will be able to encourage them with your presence and uphold them with your prayers. For you to remain at home while the elder is striving to hold meetings no great distance from you is very detrimental to the work in more than one way; it discourages the elder and causes the world to think that as there is nothing to attract or draw the members, there is nothing worth their time. Another thing; we are too careless in our remarks and making choice as to whom we want to do the preaching when several elders are together, often discouraging the one and causing the other to think more of himself than he ought to think. Let us reflect upon those things and govern ourselves accordingly. Let us then sing the redemption of Zion is drawing near, and put on the whole armor that we may be able to withstand the fiery darts of the adversary and when we have filled the measure of our probation we will be able to enter in with our Savior when he shall reign and we will be prepared to progress for a thousand years and be heirs to that kingdom when it shall be handed up to the Father.

Finally, let us march on in the great work hand in hand in unbroken columns with Christ our King at the head, fight manfully, nobly, and lawfully, and the reward is ours. Pray for wisdom, for it is written he that lacketh wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth "to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him." And again, Book of Doctrine and Covenants 5: 3: "Seek not for riches but for wisdom; and behold, the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you."

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8: 31, 32. Again: "If ye will enter in by the way and receive the Holy Ghost, it will show unto you all things what ye should do."—2 Nephi 14: 1.

Then we have the word of wisdom and knowledge; and as we as a people claim more than others, let us do more, and sing,

"God be with you till we meet again."

LONDON, England, June 12.

Editors Herald:—We are marching slowly but steadily forward in this portion of the Lord's harvest field. All our arrangements for the little edifice to be erected in this great Babylon, to the honor of our God, and his Christ, are completed and the ground opened; and we hope ere long to see its completion. We propose holding a dedicatory service and hope to gain a favorable recognition of our efforts, by at least some of those who are not of us.

Elder Caffall is with us and we are being both instructed and entertained by his lucid and logical discourses, in exposition of the marvelous work of these latter days. We are also charmed with his earnest and humble demeanor. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them," is just as true a test to-day as when "the Master" gave utterance to it, away in Palestine nearly nineteen hundred years ago.

May God bless the work in the British Isles, is the ardent and prayerful wish of Yours in the covenant of grace,

A. T. BRADSHAW.

NAPOLEON'S RELIGIOUS VIEWS.

In touching upon the religious life and views of the first Napoleon, Baron de Meneval, in his recently issued biography of the great conqueror, says: "Bonaparte was sincerely religious—I may add a true Catholic. His detestation of the free-thinking cynicism which preaches contempt for religion—which was considered, on the contrary, by him as the basis of morality and decency—was as great as his horror for the bigotry which fetters human intelligence. . . . His respect for the doctrines of the gospel was the outcome of his convictions and early training."

PROGRESS.

THE important question as to whether we as Latter Day Saints are really making the progress in this Latter Day work that we can, is one which should be seriously considered by us as a chosen people of God. Inasmuch as the primitive gospel has been committed to us by an angel, in fulfillment of Revelation 14: 6, 7; wherein the righteousness of God is revealed to us, it is now incumbent on us to be exceedingly careful to improve our talents, by using every effort to that end; that we may not be idle, but make that progress that our heavenly Father designed in our creation that we should. The voice of the Spirit is, to come up higher; and it will not be obeyed unless we make progress.

While we are as saints in a scattered condition and cannot make the advancement on certain lines that we shall after the gathering, yet it is necessary that we make advancement in order that a work preparatory to the gathering may be done. By an examination of the work done in the field the past year it is seen that more baptisms are reported than before in one year in the history of the Reorganized Church. Let us consider the cause. Is it because our lives are more pure, or because our number was greater at the beginning of the year than ever before? or, have we made an unusual effort to comply with the law of tithing? or is it all of these things combined?

For one I surely believe that we as ministers can do more than we have been doing for the spiritual advancement of the Saints. We should instruct the Saints to pray vocally and in secret. Both men, women, and children should thus be taught as directed in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. When we visit the Saints who by reason of being absent from any branch seldom hear preaching, we should take great pains to instruct them from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, especially if such persons have not the book in the house and know little concerning the revelations contained therein. We believe that that book is to the people of this generation, and that the revelations therein are especially binding upon us as a people, hence the necessity of all having a proper understanding of it that we may not only know the will of God concerning us but keep his commandments, as well as the "Word of Wisdom" contained therein.

St. Paul says in Hebrews 3: 6:—

But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

The reader should carefully note that Paul here declares that "we" constitute the house over which Christ is a Son—not the apostles alone—but as Paul was addressing the Hebrew brethren we see that the pronoun we must include both—laity and ministry—apostles and all. Then let us as Latter Day Saints apply this same scripture to ourselves, remembering that we as Saints compose the building of God, or shall compose it when Christ shall come again, providing we endure the process of preparation to which the timbers that are to compose this building when it is perfect are necessarily subjected. Let us all resolve in our hearts that by the assistance of God we will make greater advancement during this conference year than in the past one.

A BROTHER.

SERMON BY ELDER J. W. WIGHT.

At Lamoni, Iowa, January 13, 1895.

SUBJECT, THE LATTER-DAY WORK.

YOUR attention is invited to a portion of the third chapter of Malachi, as the lesson upon which to base our remarks:—

Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me.

Many have thought that the messenger here referred to, is John the Baptist. But as we proceed with the reading and the comment we may offer, we think it will be discovered that it has no reference whatever to John the Baptist. We have this fact positively laid down, God says through the prophet,

I will send my messenger before my face.

We turn your attention to the fact that God sent his messenger—John the Baptist—before the first coming of his Son, and we expect to show, this morning, that there is to be a second coming, when he shall come in the clouds of heaven taking vengeance on them that know him not and have not kept his commandments; when he is to come to reign a thousand years among the children of men and upon this earth. The same prophet, in the same chapter, verse 6, says:—

I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

The apostle puts it like this,—

Jesus Christ the same yesterday [time past], and to-day [the present], and forever [in the future].—Heb. 13: 8.

With whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1: 17.

Now since he sends a messenger to prepare the way before the first coming of his Son Jesus in the flesh, and he is the same unchangeable being, when he (Jesus) shall come a second time, necessarily he must send a messenger to prepare the way before him. So the prophet says:—

Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek [and that is Jesus Christ], shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts.—Mal. 3: 1.

Here you discover that the messenger first referred to cannot be John the Baptist, from the fact that Jesus Christ, at his first advent, did not come suddenly, neither did he come to his temple, for at that time it was in an unprepared condition, and at his second coming, at his second appearing, to which he is to come suddenly has to be prepared for him.

But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap.—Mal. 3: 2.

Now, it was not a difficult matter to abide the day of his coming when he was born as a babe in the manger, but at his second appearing there is to be one class at least who are to call for the rocks to fall upon them and hide them from his face. So we all discover that the coming here referred to is that special occasion when he shall come and his feet shall stand upon the mount of Olives and the mount shall cleave in twain, when he shall come to reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. And when that coming shall take place there must necessarily be a preparation made; and that a preparation may be made there must be a messenger come to prepare the way.

And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years.—Mal. 3: 4.

Was the offering of Judah and Jerusalem pleasant unto the Lord when he came as a babe? If so, why? On that occasion, when he went out upon the mount and looked down upon the city with his hands stretched out towards it, he cried in the agony of his soul:—

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not.—Matt. 23: 37.

Was the offering of Judah and Jerusalem pleasant unto the Lord then? Nay, verily. Consequently the occasion when he is to come, referred to in our lesson, must be an entirely different one, and we trust we shall discover—partially at least—that when that coming takes place there shall be a necessary preparation made that the offering of Judah and Jerusalem shall be pleasant unto the Lord as in days of old. Let me tell you just here,—if their offerings are to be pleasant unto the Lord like as they were in days of old; then there must be that divine communication known as the revelation of God existing between heaven and earth; for when the offering of Judah and Jerusalem was pleasant unto the Lord, he spoke unto them by the mouth of his servants, the prophets, he communicated unto them his will, so that they knew how to offer unto him an offering that was truly acceptable.

How should they know that that offering was accepted of him and acceptable to him, unless it was made manifest by the revelation of his will? How can you and I, to-day, know that the offering we make unto God is accepted of him, unless by the means that he himself has used in ages gone by? And so far as we have any record concerning the dealings of God with his people for four thousand years, it is that he revealed unto them his will from time to time during that period, and how shall we know that our offering is accepted of him unless he shall make it manifest as he did then? In him "is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," he is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever;" and in the very manner in which he manifested that their offerings were pleasant unto him in ancient days, so must he to-day make manifest that the offerings of his people are acceptable to him; for in him there is no change, he says,—

I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.—Mal. 3: 6.

We have selected this subject because it is in direct harmony with the subject that has been so lately treated upon from this pulpit, and seems so clearly to follow out this subject, that we had thought it possible that your interest had been aroused to that condition, that it will, for the space of time allotted to the speaker, be held in continuation. We realize, this morning, that we need especially to be borne up on the arms of faith. We feel in need of your prayers, that God shall so work that speaker and hearer shall be edified, for without the aid that is given from on high, we feel that, so far as the speaker is concerned, we shall not be able to offer that which shall be to your edification.

Your attention is called to the eleventh chapter of Isaiah and the eleventh verse:—

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathos, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea.

Now here is a time in the history of the world that Isaiah was permitted to behold in prophetic vision; a time yet unborn, away in the future; and he tells us that in that specific time, "the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people," etc. Now, just in connection with this thought I wish to invite your attention to the third chapter of Amos and the seventh verse, which reads:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing; but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.

Now mark that! It is a basis upon which we can build successfully; there is no danger in this, for this kind of a basis is founded upon the rock of God's eternal truth. Here it is positively declared that he (God) will set his hand to do something, and the Prophet Amos emphatically declares:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.

He will not even set his hand a second time to recover the remnant of his people, according to that declaration, without revealing his secret to his servants the prophets; we know that that basis is founded upon the rock of eternal truth; and I have no wish in my soul to offer any apology for that which is presented in these pages, that you and I look to as having been inspired of Almighty God. Those holy men, when led by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, looking down the vista of unborn time and beholding the events that are now transpiring, could with accuracy predict what should come to pass. Now note,—

The Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left from Assyria, etc.

Here is shown, as clearly as anything can be, the general and complete dispersion of this people at the time when he shall set his hand a second time to recover them; showing clearly that it is to be in a day and age of the world when Israel is to be scattered, peeled, or in that time when Moses stated they should be a hiss and a byword among the nations of the earth. Those things stand out in bold relief, directly in favor of the work that we are endeavoring to present, which work was established in 1830, when the organization of the church was effected; when the "young man" stood out upon the rostrum of the world and declared that God had spoken unto him by the voice of revelation; in that day and in that time, Israel was scattered and peeled.

Now let us remember a very important fact as we proceed in the investigation of this prediction concerning the wonderful events that are transpiring in our own times; I have often thought about it,—I don't know how you may have felt,—but it seems to me that with such prophetic declarations as these, we may venture out in opposition to those who are in opposition to God.

And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.—Isaiah 11: 12.

Now these two events are to be immediately connected together; God is to set up an ensign to the nations of the earth and restore the gospel to the children of men; and in connection with that fact, he is to gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth, showing conclusively that they were to be dispersed and scattered at the time when he shall set his hand a second time to restore and to gather them back yonder.

When he set his hand the first time to restore and gather Israel, Judah had not been dispersed among the nations of the earth; but these passages show that this gathering is to be at a time when they are to be in the four corners of the earth. God shows how he will do it; namely, he will "set up an ensign to the nations" of the earth. We turn to the 18th chapter of Isaiah, and he says, according to the marginal reading which seems to be a better rendering to the mind of your speaker,—

Ho to the land shadowing with wings.

This is said to be the land upon which God was to set in operation a wonderful and marvelous work. From time to time, doubtless, you have heard the argument made, that North and South America must be the land referred to, because it is the only land that has the semblance of wings; as shown by the map. But we wish to present another thought in proof that America was the land referred to by the prophet. The government of the United States has stamped upon its coin an eagle with outspread wings; and again upon the ensign or flag of the country that noble bird is emblazoned with outstretched wings, as the emblem of a free government; and in the circulation of the coin and the waving of the flag all over the land, it may truly be said to be "the land shadowing with wings." The land of North and South America was the land upon which Isaiah was looking when he made this declaration, and he saw that upon this land God was to proceed to do something marvelous in deed. And when was it to be? In the day when he would send ambassadors by sea in swift rushing vessels (in vessels of bulrushes it is stated here), in a time when it was to be accomplished swiftly. And they were to go to a "nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled!" What nation was this? None other than the Jewish nation, which had been scattered and peeled, having become a hiss and a byword among the nations.

Now in connection with the thought—and it seems to me to be a safeguard to every land—that boy was willing to stand out before the whole world, and right against the popular belief, to declare that the set time had come to favor Israel, that the time had come when God designed to set his hand again the second time, to recover them; and when that boy stood out upon the rostrum of the world and told the people that God intended to restore Israel, the world, the pulpit, and the press came right out against him and declared that he was a false teacher, a false prophet, “away with him, he is not fit to live!” But the years have come and gone, and it stands out in bold relief that the boy was right, and the world was wrong. And he was right because the inspiration of God had spoken, and that inspiration had so moved upon him as to give him to understand what the combined wisdom of the world did not know,—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets.

I don't know what you would do; how you would feel, to stand up—and more especially as a public minister for Christ—to declare that God had ceased to work by prophets; what position would you take, and how would you feel, with this positive declaration thundering in your ears.—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the prophets?

I will tell you exactly how I would feel. It seems to me that I would want to crawl away and hide, for I would feel small indeed, if especially believing that it was inspired I would make a declaration that I believed the Bible was inspired from Genesis to Revelation, and then declare that there was not to be prophets in this day and age of the world, and then some one would turn my attention to this saying of Amos:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets.

I would feel like crawling away to hide. How would you feel?

All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.

When people lift up an ensign and blow a trumpet to the world, the world should be able to know something about it. When your speaker was in a foreign land wherever he traveled he discovered that they knew something about Joseph Smith, they had heard about him; his name had traveled around the world, encircling the globe, and had gone out to the islands of the sea. It was declared by the angel who first visited him, that this should be the case, that his name should be had for good or for evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues. We turn to the forty-ninth chapter of Isaiah and twenty-second verse, and there read:—

Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders. And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens thy nursing mothers: they shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

Here the very important fact is discovered that when God shall set his hand again the second time to recover his people, he will lift up his hand to the Gentiles, he will commence his work in the midst of the Gentile nations. Please remember that important point, and by and by we will discover the very nation that he is to commence his work among.

And they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.

I thank God this morning for one very important fact, namely, that the nation of the United States of America has always been willing to show favor to the Jew. I thank God for that fact; that when he should set up his standard and commence his work, the Gentile nations were to favor his people,—

And kings shall be thy nursing fathers, and their queens shall be thy nursing mothers: they shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth, and lick up the dust of thy feet; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord: for they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.

You heard from Brother Blair the present condition of the Jew, how they occupy in high places. You remember that but a few years ago one of them was Premier of Great Britain, one of the mightiest nations on the face of the earth. I observed that in the land of Australia, in the British colonies, the Jews held exalted positions; and wherever you go to-day it is just the same. Indeed kings have become their nursing fathers and queens their nursing mothers, and the time has already come when the nations are beginning to grovel in the dust, as it were, to lick up the very dust of the feet of the Jews. And why? Because of this financial question. You know that the Jews hold the purse strings of the nations of Europe. You know that it is said by the prophet that the nations shall gather themselves together against that people, they are to go for the purpose of taking a spoil and a prey, because the wealth of the nations shall be in possession of the Jews. When you see these evidences indicating and so plainly showing that the hand of God is in it, how can you help but marvel and realize, that the Lord God has revealed his secret to his servants the prophets in these last days, and that the claim that has been made by them to the inspiration of God's Spirit, is correct? In the sixty-second chapter of Isaiah and tenth verse, it reads:—

Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people. Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world.

Where is the end of the world? Some may say that the world is round, and it does not have any end. Speaking emblematically, the end of the world is the farthest point from the place where we stand, eastward, westward, northward, or southward; and if you stand in the place occupied by the prophet when he made this prophetic declaration, when he said that “the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world,” you will discover, geographically, that the end of the world is in the land of America,—you would not expect to find it out on the ocean would you? The land of America is the only land that can answer such a declaration; the only land that is in harmony or in touch with such a thought,—and “the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world.”

Now I want to keep this thought before you, especially, that, “Surely the Lord God will do nothing”—says one, that is what we have been telling you all the time, that the Lord is not doing anything; he has performed all his work, and now the time has come when surely the Lord God is doing nothing. That is just the way the thief said he came to be in such a position; he said to the judge the Bible taught to steal. "What," says the judge, "does the Bible teach it is right to steal?" "It says," replied the thief, "'Let him that stole, steal.'" He stopped before he got through with the thought, the same as you do, my friends, when you quote, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing." He ought to have kept on, "Let him that stole, steal no more;" and you should have done likewise and repeated the complete statement of the prophet, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets."

I know it is a very hard pill to swallow, especially to those who have been brought up to believe that Joseph Smith stole a black sheep, and that he did a great many dreadful things. The question is, Who said he did these things? His enemies. Who say he did not do them? His friends. My friends, I want to be fair with you. I don't want you to take the testimony of his friends, for I firmly believe they will present the matter too favorably. I don't want you to take the testimony of his enemies for they will overdo the matter against him. The testimony of his enemies represented Christ as a devil, a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, etc.

How shall we measure this prophet of whom the world has heard so much? We propose to measure him by the record he has left. He is dead now. He has left his writings and his teachings. I want to tell you I can take the writings of that man, as contained in that little book, the Doctrine and Covenants, and show the whole world that he never stole a black sheep nor any other kind of sheep. I can show that he was not a thief; I can show that he was not a profligate; I can show you that he has left on record some of the highest and best moral teachings found anywhere.

I propose to measure him by the best standard I can, and not by the standard of his enemies or friends. I don't care if the man's name was Thomas Jones, it would not make a particle of difference to me; if God saw fit to reveal himself through Thomas Jones I would respect him as a prophet as I would Joseph Smith. We know it was said of Christ,—

We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not whence he is.—John 9:29.

They say now, "We know that God spoke to the old prophets and apostles, but we don't believe that he spoke to Joseph Smith." On one occasion when preaching in Australia, having occasion to mention the name of Joseph Smith, a gentleman jumped up and asked the question, "If Joseph Smith was such a good man, why did God suffer him to be killed?" I said to him, "You people call us, that come from America, Yankees and you say that the Yankees answer one question by asking another. I am going to be a Yankee and ask you why God suffered the Savior to be killed?" "O, that was Jesus Christ the Savior!" "Then we will waive that question, and ask, Why did God suffer his apostles to be killed if they were such good men?" He said, "We—wel—wall—," and sat down. He had been caught in a trap of his own setting.

Now you discover that I want you to remember I am emphatic on the point. I am one of those fellows that are foolish enough to believe that God reveals himself in latter days, and that he revealed himself through that boy to the world. It does not make a particle of difference if his name was Joseph Smith. Now listen,—

Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him.

Jesus Christ cometh and his reward is with him, and his work before him. Ah, a work had to be accomplished before he came, and when he did come his reward was to be with him! One of the first declarations that "young man" made was that Jesus was coming, and that the Lord would gather the Jews back to their own land. But horror of horrors! that anyone should make a declaration like that in the face of the declaration of the whole religious world at that time, to the contrary! And they were just as emphatic in their declaration that Jesus would never come in person to reign on the earth and that the Jews never would gather back to their own land. I have found people that don't believe, to-day, that the Jews will gather back to Palestine, notwithstanding there are thousands of them gathered there now. When the "young man" made that declaration, a hue and cry was raised against him, of false prophet, impostor, etc., but time has proved the declaration of that young boy to be correct, and has proved the declaration of those that stood against him to be false; notwithstanding the wisdom of the world was arrayed against him.

Did you say that God would no more speak to his people? Did you say that God would have no more apostles and prophets? If you will take the pains to read the next to the last verse of the sixty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, you will there perceive your mistake; we have not time to call your attention to more than one verse in this connection:—

And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer.

This is speaking especially concerning Israel and their restoration:—

Before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear.

Any comment on such a passage as that is entirely useless, it is so emphatically plain; and yet as we proceed you will discover that it is more plainly, and clearly, and emphatically made known in others of the prophecies. We next invite your attention to Jeremiah thirty-first chapter, beginning at the ninth verse which reads:—

They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them.

Did you know that over yonder in the land of Palestine, in the city of Jerusalem, they have to-day a "wailing place"? Do you know that the Jews go daily to weep and wail for the restoration of the land? Do you remember that when Solomon made the prayer dedicating the temple, how he prayed that wherever the Jews should go they might turn their faces towards that place when in prayer? Now wherever they are, when they pray they turn their faces towards Jerusalem. And the prophet sees the time when they are to have a "wailing" and weeping place, and the declaration is already fulfilled. In Jerusalem they have a wailing and weeping place, and they go to pray God that they shall be restored to their long lost possessions.

I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn. Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattereth Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.

This wonderful work, this great restoration, is one of the events of the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." In this wonderful event when God shall set his hand a second time to recover his people, Ephraim, of all Israel is to be the firstborn—the first of Israel unto whom he shall reveal himself. And don't you know that the Prophet Hosea has declared that Ephraim shall be a cake that is only half done? You ladies, when you bake a pancake and turn it over, know it is only half done. Well, Ephraim is to be "a cake not turned"—only half done—when God shall set his hand a second time to recover his people, and reveal in the midst of the Gentile nations the descendants of that little boy Ephraim, who was blessed away back yonder, and was to be the "firstborn" of all Israel.

Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations.

This does not look as if the Lord was not to speak any more, for the Prophet Jeremiah says the nations were to hear "the word of the Lord and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock." You have all seen sheep, and perhaps a great many of you—like the speaker—have gone out on the hillside, and plodded there, through a long, tiresome day, looking after those sheep; and the shepherd boy tending those sheep never was taught that he had a right to go away from them; he was always taught to watch them, and stay with them; he was never taught that those sheep could go to pasture all day alone without danger of the wolves coming.

Here God says he will care for his people as a shepherd does for his sheep. How does the shepherd tend his sheep? Don't he go and stay with them and care for them all along through all portions of the day? Don't the Lord stay with his people, and reveal unto them his will and pleasure concerning them, and care for them, care for them "as a shepherd doth his flock?"—"Surely the Lord God doeth nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets." I now invite your attention to the twentieth chapter of Ezkiel (you will remember I told you that as we proceeded the testimony would get clearer and clearer) and beginning with the thirty-fifth verse you will find the following: "And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you"—through the Bible. Is that right? Does the record read that way? You and I have been taught from time to time, that the canon of Scripture was full, and consequently if that be the fact, if God is pleading with you and me to-day, he is pleading through the Bible, and only through the Bible; but here the declaration says:—

I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

How did God plead with their fathers in Egypt, in the wilderness? Did he not reveal unto them his will by the Prophet Moses, from time to time? On one occasion when Moses learned that some were prophesying in the camp, didn't he say that he wished that the whole camp were prophets?

Let me tell you something here (probably you think I have not been telling you anything thus far). It is said that the first Jewish colony—mind I emphasize the word colony—the first colony that returned to Palestine, by the firman of the then existing government of Turkey, was in 1830. That colony came (don't understand the speaker to say that there were no Jews there prior to that time, don't understand him to say that no Jewish interests were represented there, prior to that day, they had not been permitted to return to colonize there, prior to that time). And in 1856, by the terms of the Crimean treaty, the Jews were allowed freedom of worship.

Ah! God declares that he will set his hand a second time to restore them; he declares that he will set up an ensign; that he will blow a trumpet. In April, 1830, the church was organized with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. The word of the Lord through the prophet says:—

And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant.

Israel, that has so long rejected the name of Christ, is to be brought finally into the bond of the covenant, when God shall plead with them face to face, like as he pleaded with their "fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt." Now I wish to call your attention to the prophecy of Joel for a moment, because it is in direct harmony with the subject upon which I am treating. Beginning at the twenty-first verse of the second chapter:—

Fear not, O land [here it is positively made plain that the prophet is talking about some land] be glad and rejoice: for the Lord will do great things. Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field: for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength. Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

It seems to me, just in connection with that that I am here presenting from this twenty-third verse that we don't need any other evidence than that to put the statement made by the unbelieving world, in denying the fact that God would restore the Jews back to the land of Palestine, forever at rest. I realize, and so do you, that we are living in an enlightened age, possibly as much so as the world has ever seen, and if the knowledge and wisdom of man could do anything in the direction of telling what shall be in the future, we are certainly living in a time when this should be made manifest. Where is the man that can stand forth and make a genuine prophecy a hundred years before the event transpires? show me one unless—and here we emphasize it—unless that man shall be moved upon by the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit, for it is the only way that such an event can be made manifest, from the standpoint of Joel:—

For he hath given you the former rain moderately.

Now anyone reading that casually would not think there was much in it, and might say, "What do we care if God has given the rain on the land of Palestine?" But if you read it carefully, you will realize this important fact, that that land lay in an arid condition for seventeen hundred years. But ah! he says the former rains shall come moderately. Now, sir, if next spring your land should continue dry, and the rain should come with strong force and immoderate in quantity, the soil would be washed away; even so would it have been the case with the land of Palestine which had lain for seventeen hundred years in such a condition; but God said he would send the rain moderately. And what for? That the soil might be spared. After that God says he will send the former and the latter rain, which has taken place, as Brother Blair told you, and which can be established outside of the testimony of the Latter Day Saints. Thank God for that!

It is stated on the authority of travelers who have visited the holy land, of late years, that in 1853 the former and the latter rains came on that land to the astonishment of the natives (they had never seen such a thing before), and that land is yielding bountifully its increase as predicted by the prophets.

Sometimes when I state to the people that they are raising grapes over there that weigh from seven to ten pounds to the bunch, they laugh at me. And I have seen a smile come over their faces as much as to say, "We know better than that," and yet they will easily swallow the saying contained in Numbers 13: 23, that two of the spies sent out by Moses, cut down by the brook of Eschol, a bunch of grapes of such a size that they had to run a pole or staff through it and carry it on their shoulders. But when I tell them that the same land under God's blessing bears bunches of grapes weighing seven to ten pounds it is too much for their credulity.

And it shall come to pass afterward [after the restoration of the land something is to happen to the people over there], that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy.

I want to know how they could prophecy without being prophets; can some one tell me? I see my time is gone and I am only half through with what I have endeavored to present. I thank you for your attention.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints in Southern Missouri District:—As I am busy with tent work and unable to visit all the branches personally, I therefore make this appeal to you, my beloved Saints, that inasmuch as the Lord has blessed you with the prospects for a good crop this year, and you have been made to feel and enjoy the blessings of this latter-day work until your hearts have been made to rejoice in the power of this gospel since it came to you, free, without purse or scrip, let us by the help of that perfect law of the gospel give as the Lord has commanded us, to help send it to others as free as it came to you. Our heavenly Father has promised great blessings to those who will obey the whole law. The families of those elders that travel all the time must be cared for. The tithing law is just as much a duty as baptism, and if we fail to pay it we will lose the reward of those that do. The people of Southern Missouri are poor as a rule, and some think if they had more they would pay. If you have only goods amounting to ten cents the Lord requires one of them as his, as the commencement of that law, and then one tenth of your increase yearly, not income as some churches teach. Those who paid their tithing last year in Southern Missouri, as well as elsewhere, felt the hard times less.

We have only one brother who made an estimate of his goods this year after paying his tithes, and we found he has gained four times the amount that he paid in tithing, while most all others of his neighbors had not held their own because of the hard times. The reason some of the Saints are poor and have nothing to pay is because they have never tried to comply with that part of the law which will bring that kind of a blessing. Try me, saith the Lord, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour out a blessing there is not room to contain.

Remember our conference which convenes July 12, at Mountain Grove, also our reunion. All come who can. I shall be here a month or six weeks, so address letters to me and make post office orders payable at Springfield. Send registered letters to 1323 Benton Avenue, Springfield, Missouri.

HENRY SPARLING.

To the Saints in Denver; Greeting:—On the recommendation of Bro. James W. Gillen, missionary in charge of Colorado, I appoint Bro. M. F. Gowell as my agent, to collect and receive tithes and offerings from the Saints in the Denver branch, hoping and trusting that all will contribute freely as the Lord may bless them, from time to time.

Yours truly,

JAMES KEMP,

Bishop's Agent for Colorado.

CONIFER, Colorado, June 20.

To the Saints in the Northern California District:—I would not feel that I were fulfilling my duty to remain silent in the present condition of affairs. The fund is exhausted, and the Bishop has no funds to replenish me with.

I am therefore under the necessity of appealing to you for aid that the elders' wives and families may not suffer. I trust all who can will send their tithes and offerings to meet this necessity. The church is the body of Christ. "If one member suffer, all the members suffer with it." You would not see a part of yourself suffer if you could help it, would you?

We are "all baptized into one body," "by one Spirit." What Spirit is that? The Spirit of love. And "whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it." "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves." The Lord said that some people robbed him in tithes and offerings. Let us do our whole duty that he may say to us, "Well done," for he is a God of truth.

I WILL SAY, "YES."

Saints and Friends:—Don't forget the tabernacle fund. To fail in this, is good-bye to our reunions and camp meetings. This tabernacle will be free to be used anywhere throughout this Southwestern mission field. All are interested.

Who will send me a card stating, "I will give ten, or five, or one dollar?" Two hundred seventy-five dollars will get a fine one, 60x100 feet. Some interested in the cause have responded. Will you be the next? Let us hear "yes," all along the line, or it's a failure. Which shall it be?

Address,

THE COLLEGE.

The College Committee have been doing what they could to secure the College at Lamoni. The land has been surveyed, platted, and the plat recorded. Lots are now for sale in Graceland Addition to Lamoni; and we hope that those who may desire will purchase, and thus give the needed aid to the funds for carrying on the College work, building, and teaching.

The Committee at its last meeting decided that it would be advisable to secure a loan of from five to ten thousand dollars, with which to push the building to completion. It is therefore desired that if any who may read this shall have funds that they are willing to lend the committee at a reasonable rate of interest for two or more years, they will greatly aid the College enterprise by notifying the committee, addressing either Joseph Smith, chairman, or D. F. Nicholson, treasurer.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

RULES OF ORDER AND DEBATE.

A manual of parliamentary practice for all deliberative assemblies of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Each chapter is headed, each section has its subhead. The book contains rules for the government of General and District Conferences, Branch Business Meetings, and other assemblies. Its parliamentary rules are based upon the latest and best works of accepted authorities. The Articles of Association of the Reorganized Church, also the General Conference Rules of Representation are included. Instructions and rulings concerning General, District, and Branch Records, the holding of Elders' Courts, etc., are also embodied in the work. Revised and republished in 1891. A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

A MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

This is a work by Elder Charles Derry, in which is set forth the order and nature of the Priesthood. The writer also defines the duties and prerogatives of all Church Officials, from the First Presidency to the Deacons inclusive. It is compiled from the Standard books of the church and the History of Joseph Smith as published in the Millennial Star. Indexed for ready reference, 132 pages, cloth bound, 25 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

IS THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND DRIVING TO DESTRUCTION?

How often during the past thirty or forty years must it have appeared to casual lookers on as though an un-directed fate was driving the Church of England to its destruction! This exclamation is uttered by The Methodist Recorder, which says that it can distinctly remember the time when it was quite the exception to find a Methodist who actively favored the disestablishment of the church; when there was in the Methodist Electorate an earnest and intelligent determination "to resist a policy which, according to the views then prevailing, involved the weakening, if not the downfall, of the greatest existing bulwark protecting the country against Romanism;" but that it is not so now. This paper states that even among the very large section of Methodists who stoutly sympathize with Unionism, and will always vote with the Conservative party against the dismemberment of the Empire, or against that which they regard as dangerously Socialistic, there are very many who will vote for the disestablishment of the English Church, and very few who will actively resist it. The reasons given for this are,

"In the first place because the Church of England has ceased to be a reliable bulwark of Protestant faith and liberties. Its largest and most aggressive section is deliberately playing into the hands of that ancient enemy whose shadow across the page of English history has been a blighting curse. And in the second place the pretty tyrannies and annoyances to which we have referred have stored up in thousands of Methodist hearts, especially in rural England, wrath against the day of wrath."

The petty tyrannies and annoyances alluded to are further exemplified, and it is remarked that they might not have irritated so deeply if they had been directed exclusively against the strongest and wealthiest and least dependent of the non-conformists, but when, "in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, they have been concentrated with pitiless pertinacity upon the widow and the farm laborer, the small shopkeeper, and other apparently helpless folk in remote villages and small towns where charity might be used as a weapon of spite and tyranny, then little wonder if in process of time it has become an evil, the pressure of which cannot be endured." Some illustrations of "petty tyrannies and annoyances" are here appended.

"A lady in Wales died. Her relatives wished that she might be buried in her husband's grave. The Vicar wrote, "No grave can be opened in the churchyard for the burial of Elizabeth H—, who is not a parishioner, and has no claim under the 1880 Act, except the permission of the Vicar is asked for in writing. He will then grant as a favor what is now demanded by non-parishioners as a right, and the payment in this case will be twenty shillings. A clergyman will read the church service for the burial of the dead. No other service will be allowed.'

"Another case occurred only a few weeks ago, and was reported to us. We wished to protest on behalf of the friend, but on inquiry Rev. J. E. Clapham, Secretary of the Committee of Privileges, informed us that the clergyman was well within his rights, and that this was one of the points which the bill on being promoted by the Committee of Privileges and by the other non-conformist bodies was intended to cover. We will give the story as it was told by Mr. Perks in the House of Commons.

"A Wesleyan lady died a few months ago in the village of Caldecote, Monmouthshire. Her son desired to bury his mother in the grave in which her husband had been laid many years ago. The Vicar inquired who was to conduct the service. The son replied, "The Wesleyan minister;" and the clergyman answered, "Well! if that is your intention I cannot allow your mother to be buried in your father's grave." The son declined to bury his mother in the Caldecote churchyard, and her body was interred in the Chepstow cemetery some miles away.'

"Another curious story was told of a Devonshire vicar who refused to conduct a burial service if the undertaker, who chanced to be a Wesleyan, entered the church. When the friends gave notice that they would have the service conducted by their own minister under the Act of 1880, the vicar retaliated by refusing to allow the burial in the grave selected, and the dissenter was consigned to a part of the graveyard called the 'Strangers, Hill.'

All kinds of petty annoyances are indulged in by a certain section of the clergy. The church bells are refused, biers withheld, the services of the sexton denied. Non-conformists are told that their hymns cannot be sung at the grave, funeral processions are directed into the churchyard by some back way, or the graves allotted are in a remote and ineligible corner.

"A few years ago the child of a laborer died in the village of Kiln-down. The parents were Wesleyans. Notice was given that the funeral would be conducted by the minister of the neighboring town. On the appointed day the minister walked over to the village, some eight or nine miles. The funeral procession started from the cottage. At the churchyard gate they were met by the curate, who objected to the funeral taking place, as proper notice had not been given. The laborer and his wife returned to the cottage with the little coffin, and a new notice was prepared for a funeral on the following Monday. Forty-eight hours' notice had again to be given, and Sunday did not count. The vicar arrived home on Saturday night, and informed the father that the second notice was wrong, and the funeral could not take place on the Monday. It was only on the threat of legal proceedings that the laborer and his wife were permitted to bury their child in peace."—Sel.

UNMERITED EULOGIES OF THE DEAD.

"PROBABLY more nonsense is written concerning deceased persons than upon any other subject. We read accounts of the 'most useful,' 'distinguished,' 'honored,' and 'beloved' citizens, whom we know to have been financially dishonest, unkind to their families, or intemperate; and yet the papers speak of them as models.

"But the most striking illustration recently appearing is this:—

"She was of a nervous temperament and was easily moved to anger, but she was also of a forgiving spirit, and frequently retracted a hasty remark.'

"Speak nothing but good of the dead' is a safe maxim, but it does not require the attributing to them of qualities that the whole community knows he or she did not possess. One of our ministers—who was afterwards expelled for immorality—preaching at the funeral of a man of the most disreputable character, a common drunkard, a miser, and profane, delivered his usual closing exhortation and called upon us 'so to live as to be prepared to meet the old gentleman in another world'—something that every one in the house, including his own family, hoped to avoid."—The Christian Advocate, New York.

SCIENCE BREVITIES.

A QUARREL AMONG SAVANTS.—We have more than once had occasion to remark on the fact that inventions and discoveries are usually made gradually, and while more than one man is striving to bring them to a head, so that the result is a struggle for priority, divers claims of infringement and injustice are brought forward. A notable instance of this sort of thing has recently been going on in England between Professor Dewar, the English chemist, and Professor Olozewski, of Cracow, Poland, regarding the part taken by each in the liquefaction of certain gases. As our readers know, Professor Dewar was certainly the one to make known the facts to the English-speaking public, which he did in his lectures in the Royal Institution. He claims, also, that he properly credited such of his experiments as required it to Professor Olozewski, and that he acknowledged the priority of much of his rival's work. The Polish scientist, however, thinks that this claim has not been justified, and that the Englishman so worded his descriptions of his experiments as to make his hearers believe that he and he only had performed them. It is not our place to express an opinion as to the merits of the quarrel, but it certainly is an unfortunate thing for science that these periodical outbursts should give its opponents reason for asserting that scientific work is generally done for money or notoriety—not simply to establish truth.—Sel.

NOISES THAT HELP DEAFNESS.

"I have noticed that deafness is on the increase," said a physician. "It is a deafness of a peculiar sort, too. For instance, I know a number of people who are very deaf when addressed in a quiet place, and yet if surrounded by various loud noises they can hear without any trouble. Engineers tell me when off their engines it is impossible for them to hear ordinary conversation, but as soon as they get back on their engines they can hear the lightest sounds. This strikes me as being strange, yet it is a fact. The telephone has been recommended by certain medical authorities as a cure for deafness of some sort, the causes of which are quite ordinary. When there is a hardening process of the membranes of the ear the gurgitating noise of the telephone when put to the ear stimulates and promotes circulation so that it is beneficial."—Louisville Journal.

RELIGIOUS BREVITIES.

Christ's call to men to-day is not a call to preach big sermons, or to do things great in the eyes of the world, but it is a call to self-sacrifices for the salvation of others—a call to the Christlike work of going about doing good and proclaiming the glad tidings of salvation to a lost world.—Religious Telescope.

By the simple preaching of the gospel, the apostles and early Christians "turned the world upside down," revolutionized society. The same result may yet be accomplished by the same means under the powerful agency of the Holy Spirit.—United Presbyterian.

A NEW FAITH.

REV. CHARLES W. SAVIDGE, of Omaha, Nebraska, with whom Elder T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, held discussion last winter, has lately discovered a new phase of religion in Omaha, of which Rev. John Morrow of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, is the teacher.

The chief distinguishing feature of this faith is that the devotees shall worship in a naked state, men and women, girls and boys, together. The World-Herald, of Omaha, for May 31 contains a two column article, including Rev. Savidge's written statement. This statement which we give below is preceded by editorial comment as follows:—

A most startling story was that related yesterday by Rev. Charles Savidge—one entirely original in its essential features, although in some measure resembling the narratives of old Mormon rites, while touching in a way upon the "heaven" of Schweinfurth, the apostle of free love, free babies, and general cussedness.

This is nothing more nor less than the establishment in Omaha of a church the prime feature of which is worship in the state of nudity. The communicants worship the Lord without a stitch of clothes upon their bodies, and this applies to women as well as men, to girls and children as well to boys and youths.

Rev. Savidge's statement:—

The story as related by Rev. Savidge is almost beyond belief, but it is fully borne out by investigation, and indeed the worshipers at this strange shrine are by no means reluctant to acknowledge their connection with the church. Mr. Savidge came to the World-Herald office to-day, and so that there might be no doubt whatever as to any feature of his narrative, he wrote it himself in the form of a letter. That letter here appears:—

MR. SAVIDGE'S STATEMENT.

"A matter has come to my attention which I think ought to be made public. I refer to the teaching of Rev. John Morrow in this city. Many will ask, who is John Morrow? He is a resident of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He has lived there for many years. He belonged, I think, formerly to the Presbyterian Church. He founded a bible school in that city and conducted it for many years. He is the editor of a well-known paper called the Faith of God. I first met him in the summer of 1889 at Chicago. I heard him speak on the platform at that time with such men as Captain Kelso Carter, David Updegraff, the great Quaker preacher; A. B. Simpson, the world-renowned missionary and evangelist; Miss Carrie Judd, founder of the Faith home in Buffalo, and Miss Sissen of Bethshand, London.

"You may see at a glance that I was prepared to treat him as a Christian brother and minister, especially as I saw that he was a man of deep scholarship and a thorough acquaintance with the scriptures. He has been visiting in this city for the last three or four years, occasionally. I attended but one of his meetings; that was a bible reading. I was well pleased with it. There was nothing objectionable about it. When he came to this city two years ago I entertained him one evening in my home. I felt profited by his society. But lately I have noticed that some people, whose judgment I highly respected, treated him with great coldness, and on last Thursday, in company with Mrs. E. Watson, residing at 612 South Seventh Street, I was making some calls on the sick.

MRS. WATSON'S EXPERIENCE.

"Mrs. Watson is an elderly woman of uncommon intelligence and deep piety. She is one of the members and officers of my church. She did not go in to see Mr. Morrow with me, and when we had entered the buggy and drove away a few blocks I turned to her and said:—

"Sister, why don't you treat Mr. Morrow as a Christian brother?"

"She said, 'I do not consider him worthy of it.'

"I asked her to state the charge, and she replied that he taught that the work of sanctification in the human heart could be and ought to be carried on to such perfection that fear and shame and passion should be dead, and to prove this, the spirit indicated to him and to other men and women that they should appear in each other's presence in a nude state. I said at once with a good deal of spirit that I did not believe that he ever taught such abominable doctrine. She replied that she thought there was no mistake about it.

MORROW ACKNOWLEDGES IT.

"I turned my horse around and drove as rapidly back to his place as I could and stated the charge before him. He said he taught that doctrine. I asked him if he practiced it. He said he had. I asked him what authority he had. He said he found it all through the bible. He referred especially to John 13:4.

"I told him that that referred to Jesus laying off his outer garment, but it did not refer to or mean that Jesus was naked. He thought differently.

"I asked him what good could come from the teaching of such doctrine. He said it would prove that shame and fear and passion were dead, and there were probably other benefits that God alone knew. He didn't.

"I told him I hoped that he was honest, but I was sure he was a deluded man, and that I should oppose him with all the power I had.

SOME OF THE DUPES.

"I later stated to a lady who attended his meetings what question I had asked him and his reply. She appeared not to be surprised. She said she had believed the doctrine and had practiced it. To my certain knowledge others have practiced it.

"Mr. Morrow went away from this city on Monday night last. He may return at any time. He has a number of correspondents in this city. Two of our Omaha girls have been in his bible school in Pittsburg. One young woman, I am very certain through his teachings has come to her moral ruin. I believe that he ought to be opposed in such teaching and practice and that as a city we should fear him as much as if he came to burn our houses and murder our people.

"Moral ruin is the worst kind of ruin. He is as much worse than the Ninth Street people as you can think, because they practice their debaucheries in the name of the devil and know they are on the road to hell, while he does these things in the holy name of Christ. The great papers of Pittsburg have shown him up time after time, but he seems not to care. I think we should try to save him and pray that the light of reason and the spirit of God will show him the truth. But our first duty is to protect society and perhaps our second to reform the criminal. I have given these words to the paper because I felt it my duty as a Christian, who ought always to be a promoter and protector of public morals."

We join Rev. Savidge in the statement that "moral ruin is the worst kind of ruin," and congratulate him on the quick stand he has taken against the system of mental debauchery, if it be nothing worse, that the Rev. Morrow has been leading disciples into:

We are not aware, however, of any foundation for the editor's comment that it resembles "the narratives of old Mormon rites;" as no rites are found provided for in "old Mormon" doctrine, history, or teaching; nor was anything of a similar sort ever heard of among any class of believers in Mormonism, that we are informed of, except a few who after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, gathered in the Cumberland Valley, below Pittsburg, and which had only a brief existence indeed.

The statement of Rev. Savidge was confirmed by Mrs. E. Watson, Mrs. May Laird, who had both heard Rev. Morrow state his view that such worship was conducive to sanctification of spirit. Mrs. Nels A. Christensen and Mrs. Thomas Grocox, both believers in Rev. Morrow's theory and devotees, had both been present at meetings when worship in nude condition had occurred. Morrow seems to have been the only man who had been present, however.

Rev. Savidge has done well to expose this reverend deceiver. Such teaching can only result in moral mischief and social ruin. It is stated that the husbands of Mrs. Christensen and Grocox, while themselves not holding to the faith, permitted their wives to hold and practice it, which seems incredible, indeed.

A UNITED BRETHREN MIRACLE.

SOME time ago we published an account of "a Baptist miracle" and, later on, another, of "a Campbellite miracle"—each attested by a well-known minister of his church. We now publish a United Brethren miracle, taking the clipping from the Kansas City Star of June 19, 1895, the account appearing originally in the Chicago Inter Ocean.

It is well known that disbelief in the manifestations of miraculous power in the present age is one of the cardinal negative points of the faith of the churches named; and, that the preaching of the elders, that God in the manifestations of his power as in other respects is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," has ever brought out opposition from those churches. It is a question whether, even now, those who affirm the restoration of the blind preacher's sight would accept the faith which includes the restoration of spiritual gifts and powers. It is not strange, however, to note actual spiritual experiences that condemn the false positions of the popular churches; for whether the account which follows be true or not, it is doubtless true that the prayer of faith often is answered even where individuals break through the lines of modern theology and "have faith in God" sufficiently to "ask and" "receive."

Modern theology has been so modified by the preaching of the latter-day philosophy that we shall not be surprised to see almost any kind of change of front. The old forms of faith have become so lifeless and inert in some respects that greater changes in belief than those already made are not unlikely. Indeed, it is a question if such vital errors as those proclaimed from popular pulpits can much longer survive the searching spirit of criticism peculiar to and increasing in the present age, and the natural tendency to exercise faith in God.

It is well indeed that with its tendency to destroy the errors of modern theology the truth is also reconstructive. While truth assails error aggressively, it also provides a remedy against doubt and loss of faith by presenting and affirming the true foundation.

No reform movements can equal in force and power the destructive and constructive power of the gospel. It is a ponderous, steadily progressing advance movement, with such energy within it as to destroy all that is false and wrong, and supplants such with the sure and abiding things of truth. Nothing can resist it, nothing can prevail against it. Its enemies are obliged to confess its correctness and will or must finally acknowledge its supremacy.

THE BLIND PREACHER'S SIGHT.

The members of the United Brethren Church of East Metropolis, Illinois, firmly believe that they have witnessed the direct manifestation of divine power in the sudden recovery of sight by their "blind boy preacher" Sunday night, and they have for two days since devoted themselves almost wholly to thanksgiving and singing hallelujahs.

Joseph Benton was born in this country twenty years ago. Nine days after birth his eyes became inflamed, and when the fever had left them three months later the sight was entirely gone. His parents were poor, and, although a local oculist did what he could to restore the sight, the case was pronounced incurable. No treatment had been given for the last twelve years.

The child's wonderful memory enabled him to retain all that was read to him. He joined the Methodist Church (South) at the age of eight and began preaching at the age of seventeen. Last November he attached himself to the United Brethren denomination. He has preached throughout this end of the State, Eastern Missouri, Western Tennessee, and Southwestern Kentucky with phenomenal success, having had no less than three hundred converts since last August.

Sunday night the blind preacher stood upon the steps of a vacant storehouse, addressing a congregation in the street. His face was turned toward heaven. He told his hearers that they could look up and see the beautiful moon and twinkling stars, while he was groping in darkness, but that he prayed always that sight be given him.

As the preacher finished that sentence he stopped, passed his hands across his forehead and, pointing to the moon, asked what that great something was. He was told it was the moon. Other strange things fell upon his vision, and with great shouts of hallelujahs he declared that his prayers had been answered; that he could see.

The Rev. Mr. Benton walked home without assistance and there was no sleeping for him that night. His sight has steadily grown stronger, and his joy has no bounds. He says that he will have to learn as a babe the names of all the strange objects he sees. One of the greatest sensations he experienced was the sight of himself reflected from the mirror. Mr. Benton is positive that the gift of sight is a direct answer to his prayers. To-day he attended a quarterly meeting in an adjoining county.

THE following from the Morrison, Wales, daily Leader is quite a good notice of our people and their work:—

MORRISTON.

A correspondent writes: On Sunday the reunion of the eastern and western districts (South Wales) of the Reorganized Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints took place at Hope Chapel, Morriston. This denomination, which has flourished in Wales at irregular intervals since its organization by Joseph Smith in 1830, is again making a special effort to remove the prejudice which exists against the church, owing to false doctrines having been introduced by a section led by Brigham Young, who deviated from the original tenets of the church. There were present among others: Elders James Caffall, United States; J. R. Gibbs, Morriston; David Lewis, Dewi Chwefrer, Llansamlet; Alma N. Bishop, Brynmawr; Thomas Griffiths, Lydney, Gloucestershire; Rees Jenkins, Pembroke; T. Lewis, Aberdare; Thomas Gould, Cardiff, John Edwards, Adolphus Edwards, and D. Williams, Llanelly. There were also present a large number of members from Nantyglo, Neath, Llanelly, and other places. Services commenced at nine a. m., when a testimony meeting was held. At 10:30 there was a well-attended, preaching service at which the president, Elder James Caffall, and Elder David Lewis preached impressive sermons. At the evening service Elder J. R. Gibbs (Morriston), preaching on the subject of God holding intercourse with his people, said that it was part of the divine programme, and instanced it throughout all ages by the divine communications to Adam, Moses, Noah, and others of the patriarchs. If then, argued the speaker, why not now? God was unchangeable, and had shown this to his people when they had lived according to the doctrines taught by Christ, by granting all the gifts he had promised. Their church embraced all these doctrines, viz.: Faith, repentance, baptism, the laying on of hands. They also believed in a resurrection, and in an eternal judgment. Elder Caffall also preached a very able discourse. The conference commenced at eight o'clock on Monday morning.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

THIS item, of possible interest to those seeking locations, is sent us by Bro. C. J. Spurlock:—

Should you see proper to insert this in your columns perhaps some may be benefited by it. I have just returned from Butler county, Missouri. This county contains much fine timber and good soil. Much of the land is yet in the woods and can be bought very cheap, so I am told. There are only about five Saints in the county and they would like if others would locate among them. Should the Saints desire further information relative to land located in that part of the State, they may address Mr. William H. Harrison, or Bro. James F. Taylor, of Poplar Bluff, Missouri. Though Mr. Harrison does not belong to the church, he is a business man and a gentleman.

Bro. M. T. Short, Peoria, June 27:—

We have our tent more commodiously located than either of the two previous places. We baptized an aged Dr. John F. Wellman, yesterday, as our first fruits. He had never belonged to any church, and had almost entirely quit attending meetings about a quarter of a century ago; but he is well pleased and in deep earnest, I assure you. Bro. Keck is my fellow servant and colaborer but he is more or less ailing. The Saints here, though few and poor, are willing and united in the main.

Bro. J. H. Lee, Independence, Missouri, June 28:—

You have visited me for more than twenty years, and I have always found you an advocate of righteousness. I hope you may be always on time and in the right place, with your words of cheer and comfort; and in order that you do this, it is necessary that I do my part. I saw something about the colored label lately. I looked and found that it meant me. You did not call my name, but I know that it meant me because I had not done my duty. I hope to be forgiven this time, as I expect that sometime in the near future the time on the label will be changed; then I will know that it means some one else.

Bro. Levi Phelps, Grand Rapids, Michigan, June 27:—

I had the pleasure of baptizing two more here last Sunday and we truly had a time long to be remembered; for a great portion of the Spirit was felt during the confirmation meeting. The outsiders wept, for they felt the hallowed influence that was present. Our hall is on No. 692 South Division Street, near Eleventh Avenue. Sunday preaching services at three and 7:30 p. m.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Nebraska City, Nebraska, July 2:—

Our conference held with the Palmyra branch, June 16 and 17, was a good one. The preaching by Elders C. H. Porter, J. F. Mintun, and M. H. Forscutt was good. A splendid, good, kind feeling prevailed throughout. It is to be hoped that effective work will be done this fall and winter. Uncle Mark's health is not very good, but I hope that after the cool weather comes he will feel better.

Bro. W. R. Pickering, Springfield, Missouri, July 3:—

You will note by clipping from this issue of the Springfield Democrat that we are still holding forth in our new tent. Bro. Henry Sparling and W. C. Cather are conducting the meetings. We have an average attendance of about eighty. We have good interest and think good will be accomplished. This city has had but little preaching, so it is new to them. We advertise to answer from the stand all questions pertaining to the doctrine, hence this question to be answered to-night. We expect to keep the tent here several weeks yet.

The Latter Day Saints' tent meeting on Springfield Avenue, between Pacific and Locust Streets, still continues with increasing interest. Preaching every evening at eight. All questions pertaining to the doctrine of Christ answered from the stand. The question to-night to be answered is: "You say you are not Mormons, then why do you believe in the Book of Mormon?" All invited. —Democrat.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser, Wellston, Ohio, July 2:—

Four more added by baptism here on the 1st with three on June 23 adds seven promising members. We had some splendid seasons of rejoicing in the truth.

Bro. T. W. Williams, Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 5:—

Have been holding tent meetings nearly every night; good results; three baptized recently, one more next Sunday. Brn. F. A. Smith, H. N. Hansen, Charles Derry, and G. H. Hilliard have given us a call. Bro. Hilliard and I go to Little Sioux to-morrow; I to deliver Fourth of July oration, he to preach. Bro. Hilliard is the right man in the right place. May God keep him as firm as he is now.

Bro. Roderick May, Independence, Missouri, July 2:—

The work in other parts of the district is in a prosperous condition. We are to raise a large gospel tent in Kansas City, Kansas, Saturday. We expect to have the use of the public park in the center of Armourdale; a first-class location.

Dr. Cyrus Edson says 99 per cent of human beings are unconscious for several hours before death comes.

In the year 1893 7,346 people were killed and 40,393 were injured more or less seriously on our railroads.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

CARD from Bro. Blair en route to California, dated Grand Island, Nebraska, indicated that he would go to San Bernardino, via San Francisco. He would remain at the latter named place for a week, then go to Downey for the reunion on the 12th of July, reaching San Bernardino by the 25th.

Sr. M. J. Shaner, of Honcutt, Butte county, California, requests prayer for the recovery of her son and herself from long continued afflictions.

Bro. T. J. Lawn, of Sacramento, California, announces the death of Bro. J. R. Cook and refers feelingly to the loss to the work in California in the death of Bro. D. S. Mills and Bro. Cook.

Bro. Paul Ayres commends the labors of Bro. I. A. Morris at Clarkston, Illinois. Our people have built a church there and now enjoy it as a church home of their own, in the spirit of contentment and unity.

Bro. J. D. Erwin began labor in his new field—the Southeastern mission—in the early part of June, reaching Scranton, Mississippi, on the 4th. He has been busy preaching, and baptizing some. He attended quarterly conference at Theodore, Alabama, where he found good Saints and earnest workers. He hopes to see a good work done in the South.

Bro. Eli Hayer, of Head Grove, Iowa, reports a growing interest in the work upon the part of the people. He baptized three during the month of June.

Sr. Huldah Flinn, Amity, Missouri, is working in the interests of the Sunday school cause. As a result of her own and others' labors a school of sixty members is now in operation; a growing power for good among the people.

Letter from Bro. J. S. Roth dated Burlington, Iowa, July 1. He and Bro. J. R. Evans had just closed tent work there with four additions, all adults. They shipped the tent to Blandinsville, Illinois, the next point selected for field work.

Bro. J. J. Cornish was to meet Joseph Musser, a former adherent to the faith, in debate at Boyne City, Michigan, July 1. We learn there is considerable interest in the conflict. Judging from past experiences the efforts of Bro. Musser will probably result in much good in the defeat of the harm he seeks to do us and the proper statement of the faith by the elders.

Pres. Joseph Smith delivered the Fourth of July oration at Decatur City, Bro. J. R. Lambert acted in a like capacity at Lamoni, Bro. T. W. Chatburn at Stewartville, Missouri, and Bro. T. W. Williams at Little Sioux, Iowa. With others to hear from, the showing would doubtless be in evidence of the acknowledged sound patriotism and ability of our representatives.

Bro. E. A. Erwin writes that the Manchester, Texas, branch is progressing. They have meetings, and Sunday school at stated hours; and he thinks doing well. They are going to have a big meeting beginning July 13, and invite all Northeastern Texas Saints to meet with them; promising plenty of apples, peaches, and the products of the earth to eat beside gospel preaching.

Bro. R. J. Anthony wrote from Idaho Falls, Idaho, July 2. He had just returned from a missionary tour to St. Anthony and other settlements on the Snake River, among Mormons and Gentiles; presenting the question of succession to the former and the principles of the gospel to both. Of the condition of the work in Utah and surrounding regions he says: "The work in this field is just as peculiar as the people, and I am just now strongly of the opinion that it requires a peculiar kind of an elder to make a success here. Now I don't think I am of the right makeup. Wouldn't it be a good idea to send some of the elders to this field that could get nearer to the people than I do? I will only speak for myself. Some think if we were just awful good to those people they would come by the score. One brother thinks the Lord has a large number at Salt Lake. It would be wonderfully refreshing to me to see the hosts marching Zionward. I am sure I would be pleased to see them coming out. I am of the opinion that it will be a good many moons before the church in Utah goes to pieces or before we see any great change in this people."

"Put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good; yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously, and this is my Spirit." "Remember in all things the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted."—D. and C.

"ONLY A YEAR."

One year ago—what loves, what schemes,
Far into life!

What joyous hopes, with high resolves,
What generous strife!

One year—one year—one little year,
And so much gone!

And yet the even flow of life Moves calmly on.

—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

THE article which appears below has been sent us for use in our columns, and we earnestly ask each mother into whose hands it falls to give it a careful reading, for we feel sure that if you will do this, its plain, homely truths will so impress you that if you have daughters of your own you will not only put it in their hands to read, but you will add to it the weight of your own solemn warning against these evils—evils many of which are becoming so common as scarcely to attract attention.

DON'T, GIRLS.

1. Don't flirt—don't even try. Flirts are flirted sooner or later. Flirts are never happy, for the false cannot be such. The evil-designed combine to destroy. Then, flirting is unwomanly, un-Christian, and undermining of all that is lovable and sweet in the young life. Don't flirt, girls.

2. Don't correspond with young men unless your mother consents, and not then without an understanding that she is to read all letters. It so frequently occurs that your big-hearted utterances are read by others than the one to whom they are addressed.

3. Don't answer anonymous letters, nor pay any attention to the many advertisements that appear in the newspapers asking for a correspondence, or that propose "good wages and requiring but little work." Be deaf here.

4. Don't hail the stranger by smile, gesture, or waving of the handkerchief. Please don't. Those who would ruin your young life accept such advances as evidence that you lack in those characteristics that make you proof against their evil designs. You should not so much as seek for an introduction to the stranger for the same reason. If you are deserving, you will be found, sought after, and duly wedded. Don't be forward, presuming, bold, brazen. For your life, don't.

5. Don't let young men fondle with you, pack you, as they accompany you, by taking your arm or holding your hand. Don't. "Hands off." It's no indication of esteem or preference. No! Just so sure as you suffer these familiarities, so sure will others be sought, then you stand about the pitfalls of moral death. If you are chided as being "prudish," "too particular,"—that others do not object to these "gentlemanly courtesies," don't be deceived by this craftiness. This is Adam's old apple and means death—a thousand deaths.

6. Don't lay that innocent head on any bosom save that of the home. Don't let sentimentality betray you into such perilous trusting of your dear young self; almost questionable confidence, this. As Sampson lost his great strength thus trusting himself in the hands of Delilah, so will you. There can be no occasion for risking any such impropriety. None, girls.

7. Don't go into restaurants "these evenings" and sip with young men. Just wait for the luncheon under the paternal roof. The resort may be "respectable," "firstclass," and all this, yet the serpent of death may be concealed in this place of popular gathering.

8. Don't take these strolls out into the highways and byways of the town or city; nor take the buggy ride far into the country, and especially far into the night! Don't, unless the relative, brother, or the father be near you. What shadows gather about the midnight buggy ride! When there comes the stillness of the street, the business doors slam to, and the laborers are hieing away to their loved ones, in the home is the place of safety for the daughter. Don't forget this, girls. Many a one shudders at the very mention of the perils incident to such "night outings."

9. Don't accept at the hands of any young man, the glass of wine, or any intoxicant. He puts a low estimate on your character who asks you to sip with him. He means your moral death. He may protest otherwise, but he is false, false as the infernal impulse that prompts the proffer. Sip and you are helpless. Your womanly sensibilities are gone. It means this, and this only. Within sight of this writing sits one, hidden from public gaze, lost, lost, who when the flowers began to bloom the last spring, was as pure, happy as they. The glass of wine shadowed her young life forever. Girls, don't sip wine. Scorn the proffered draft of your would-be destroyer, and begone from his presence.

10. Don't accept gifts from young men unless you are betrothed to the giver. Not then, unless the day of your marriage is in sight. And hear the warning, for all that is sacred grant no privileges conditioned on the fulfilling of these marital vows. Don't.

11. Don't haste to quite your homes for clerkships, "office help." If you must give up your home in the town or country, be sure as to where you trust yourselves and especially where you lodge. Shun hotels and popular boarding houses. Tens of thousands curse the day when they quit home, for the "better place." Better know and have less, than peril all for the gains assured. Ponder this, girls.

12. Don't have a secret from your mothers. With the close of each day tell them all that has passed, keeping nothing back. Do your gallants object to your bringing the maternal eye on their words and acts? Do they? Then get out of such companionship, and promptly. Don't hesitate. It will be a parley with the assassin of character. You can have no promise of protection—absolutely none.

13. Don't live aimless lives—that of the gad, the visitor from place to place, the simple pleasure-seeker. Have some object, some end, that which will make you grander and some one else the better. Turn your talent, time, and opportunity to the best account. Quit you like women.

14. Don't read trashy, sentimental literature, that which finds its characters and ideals in deceptions, shadowings of character, or that in any sense lacks in an exalting tone. Drink only of pure fountains. Girls, be guarded, do.

15. Don't neglect to have God as your refuge, your sure trust; commit yourselves wholly to him; with the opening of each day, ask his guidance; with the close, his blessings; and accept no other standard in morals as yours save that which is sanctioned and authorized by his word—the Bible.

16. Don't betray indifference to religion, nor deny your religious faith for any consideration. Weakness in these things betrays weakness of character, and will make you unstable, vascillating—the ready prey to those who would blight your womanhood. Girls, don't.—Ex.

BE PATIENT WITH THE LIVING.

Sweet friend, when thou and I are gone

Beyond earth's weary labor,
When small shall be our need of grace
From comrade or from neighbor;
Past all the strife, the toil, the care,
And done with all the sighing—
What tender truth shall we have gained,
Alas, by simply dying?

Then lips too chary of thy praise
Will tell our merits over,
And eyes too swift our faults to see
Shall no defect discover.

Then hands that would not lift a stone
When stones were thick to cumber
Our steep hill path will scatter flowers

Sweet friend, perchance both you and I,
Ere love is past forgiving,
Should take the earnest lesson home—
Be patient with the living!
To-day's repressed rebuke may save
Our blinding tears to-morrow;
Then, patience, e'en when keenest edge
May whet a nameless sorrow.

'Tis easy to be gentle when Death's silence shames our clamor;
And easy to discern the best
Through memory's mystic glamour;
But wise it is for thee and me,
Ere love is past forgiving,
To take the tender lesson home—
Be patient with the living.—Sel.

CAN YOU?

There are still some hundreds of dollars owing us on Autumn Leaves. Perhaps your own unpaid subscription is part of it, and if you can, we earnestly ask that you will send it soon. We have waited without mentioning it or our need of it, because we feared yours might be even more urgent than ours, but now ask you that if possible you will remember us.

Editors Herald:—I am alone in this field, so far as eldership is concerned. I have preached a number of times in the last few days, and to-day had the pleasure of leading two into the water, and have every reason to believe that they came out with a resolution to walk in newness of life. There are a few members at this place with Bro. Henry Alexander and the Herald to do their preaching. Bro. Alexander is a bright and shining light. He never loses an opportunity to tell the gospel story. Quite a number at this place believe the restored gospel. No elder except myself has ever visited this place, and the distance is so great that I only get here for a short time about once a year. Were it not for the sake of being at the local conference near San Antonio, on the 6th of next month, I would remain now for some time with the two that yielded obedience to-day. I have baptized five at this place. I hope any elder seeing this in publication will, if in his power, visit those people; I assure him he will find a warm-hearted and zealous people. They are some distance from the railroad, but if they will inform Bro. Henry Alexander he will meet them at Ballinger, on the G., C., and S. F.; or at Abilene on the Texas and Pacific. I go to Burnet, Llano, Gillespie, and Blanco counties, and on to San Antonio.

Yours for the truth,

SINKING SPRINGS, Ohio, July 1.

Editors Herald:—Having done service in and about Middletown, Ohio, I came here employing two weeks in preaching, visiting from house to house, etc. On the 23d three young men were baptized, while a number of older ones, long since convinced, still stand back. What for?

The Sunday school is holding the gospel banner highest here. It is a source of true delight to the missionary to find local workers who not only pray but fast and pray for the success of gospel work. Such efforts never fail, while they may not bring all that short-sighted mortals expect.

Sr. Edith Wren, of Middletown, and Sisters Minnie and Allie Rhodes, of this place, deserve especial mention as Sunday school workers.

The pioneer work of Brn. Devore and Beatty still shines here. I was signally blessed on yesterday while making an all-around talk on "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith;" and as good examples are sometimes followed, insert one from an old-time Saint of these latter days.

WILLED TO MORMON CHURCH.

LYONS, N. Y., March 5.—By the will of Jesse Seelye, late of Savannah, Wayne county, one of the first converts of Joseph Smith to Mormonism, his farm of twenty-five acres in Savannah becomes the property of the Mormon Church after the death of his widow. The will is in the handwriting of the testator, who was eighty-seven years of age when it was drawn up. It reads as follows: "After the death of my wife, Mary Ann Seelye, I give the same property to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which Joseph Smith, the son of the martyr Joseph Smith, is now prophet, seer, and revelator, to pass into the hands of the bishop of such church to be used by him in purchasing lands in the land of Zion or in the region round about the lands of Zion, for the inheritance of deserving poor saints of such church or in any way building up the cause of the Lord as he may see fit and just."—Cincinnati Weekly Times, March 14, 1895.

Some Illinois people are trying to redeem the past. Will Joseph and Hyrum Smith's case be reached? They labored for the freedom of all mankind.

LOVEJOY DAY CELEBRATED.

ALTON, Illinois, June 10.—Lovejoy day was duly celebrated yesterday afternoon by various clubs bearing his name. Lovejoy was the first martyr to the cause of freeing slaves, and was murdered here November 7, 1837. To commemorate this event yesterday's exercises were held. Addresses were made by several prominent speakers.—Middletown, Ohio, Signal, June 10.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., June 22.

Editors Herald:—Last Monday witnessed the close of the best conference of the Southern Nebraska district that I ever had the pleasure of attending, and it was a pleasure indeed to be there. We had with us some as good workers as are in the church and the Spirit was there in a marked degree to assist them and give comfort to all. The word was dispensed by Elders Forscutt, Mintun, and Porter to the edification of all.

The Sunday school association met on Saturday. The officers were ably assisted by two of the best Sunday school workers we have; Brn. Mintun and Forscutt, and we feel that the association has received an impetus that will push it along and do a great deal of good. We feel that with the able corps of elders we have this year that the work will progress rapidly, both in the Sunday school and in the church. May God's Spirit ever be with us.

Your brother and collaborer,

J. L. DIFENDORF.

MINERAL, Ohio, June 24.

Editors Herald:—Since the conference at Independence Bro. J. L. Goodrich and I have been laboring in Vinton and Ross counties, effecting openings in new places. Although this is a busy time among the farmers, yet while we were together we succeeded in making five new openings. We still have the prejudices of the churches to contend with, which requires much patient and persistent labor to remove; and though we could not continue long in one place on account of short nights and busy time of the year, yet we think the way is paved for future work, as we have made us friends for the cause in every place we have gone. In Ross county we were permitted to occupy three different churches, from one of which we were shut out.

I am holding forth at this place at present. I began on Thursday night in the M. E. church, but since then have had to occupy the town house hard by the church. Have held four meetings up to the present time. Will continue as long as interest will warrant. Am now having good attendance and attention.

I am staying with Mr. P. B. Wilson, a distant relative of mine, and where I have been kindly treated since my coming here. I expect to continue in this (Athens) county for some weeks yet. From here I expect to go to Marshfield where Sr. Ruby, of West Virginia, has relatives. From there will likely go to the vicinity of Athens and Millfield.

The reunion of the Ohio district convenes at Limerick, Jackson county, August 29. Everyone is expecting to see Bro. Joseph there. A good time is anticipated. I am encouraged in the work.

Yours in the gospel,

H. E. MOLER.

JONESPORT, Maine, June 28.

Editors Herald:—The glad tidings of Zion's progress elsewhere cause us to "rejoice with them that do rejoice." The quickening extends to the Pine Tree State.

On the 5th ult., at Mountainville, I was permitted to baptize two, who bid fair to become excellent helpers in the branch there. Saints at Green's Landing have erected their beautiful church edifice. It occupies a commanding site west of music hall, and is a credit to the town and the church. Dimensions: main auditory 35x40; vestry 15x28, connected by folding doors. It is all finished outside.

The conference at Little Deer Isle was largely attended by Saints and friends. The smiling faces of Brn. S. O. Foss and J. N. Ames from the Eastern district lent cheer to our gathering, and their talents contributed to its success. The following week we journeyed to Jonesport. Was informed that a friend who was born blind desired to put on Christ; so Friday, Brother Joel Wilson piloted me among the islands through the fog to his home. As we gathered by the shore the sun appeared in its glory, driving back the dark vapor clouds, and the Holy Spirit's presence brought light to our souls. While our brother may never see the beauties of this earth, we know that he can see and appreciate the beautiful gospel of Christ.

Saturday morning found us at Indian River where the new district tent was pitched. Saints from far and near were gathering to worship the Lord and attend conference. If the crowds who attended the services are a criterion, then tent work will be a success with us. Many said: "Nothing like it has been in this place since the days of G. J. Adams." The celebrated village choir thrilled our souls with the beautiful songs of Zion, materially adding to the success of the meetings. Sunday morning social service was a time of spiritual rejoicing, after which we dedicated the tent to the Lord's work. The service was in charge of S. O. Foss, sermon by the writer, dedicatory prayer by J. C. Foss. On the 18th inst. one was baptized in the clear waters of the river. On the 23d at Jonesport, another entered through the door into the kingdom. As we came from the water he testified: "It is the way you people have lived. Your good works and kindness to me in my affliction led me to believe the gospel." O, that all would live so it might be said of them, Your life has reflected the characteristics of the Christ! How much easier the work of the ministry would be in many places.

That afternoon our service was to be on Beal's Island, at the schoolhouse. The Advents claimed prior appointment. They would not worship with us or let us worship with them; neither were they willing that we should remain in their service. "Alas, for the rarity of Christian charity" on Beal's Island. We withdrew to the home of Sr. Sarah Beal. A large audience greeted us, who patiently listened to the gospel story. Several are to be baptized there next Sunday. On Tuesday last, at South Addison, I led another into the kingdom. The good work moves all along this line. Brethren are active, Saints united, and the Lord blessing. Why shouldn't the work move? Those conditions will always bring good results.

I expect to occupy the tent with our congenial brother, H. J. Davison, as yokefellow till reunion time.

The Maine reunion will be held at Green's Landing, September 7-16. To those who enjoy the picturesque in nature or life on the ocean wave, let me suggest, the attractions of the Maine coast are proverbial; its sea breezes will bring color to your cheeks, drive away dyspepsia, and revivify your enfeebled energies. Come and angle for the cod and halibut, dig the succulent clam, boil the lobster. Come and rejoice with us in the gospel, receive the heavenly food that will satisfy the soul; and assist in bringing others to the knowledge of this latter-day work.

Hopefully,

U. W. GREENE.

JUNIATA, Mich., June 28.

Editors Herald:—I see a notice in the Herald that the Eastern Michigan district Sunday school association had severed its connection with the Northern Michigan district, which is a mistake. I have a letter from Bro. Blakeslee. He said that the schools now in the Eastern district which belonged to the Northern district association are properly members of the Northern district association and would be until they applied to the Northern district Sunday school association and secured release, which we have not done and will not do so until a proper time. As I understand it, if we were to apply now it would have to come before the next convention. More than that, the notice states they severed their connection on the 10th of June. It was June 14 when the delegates from the different schools—the Eastern as well as the Northern—met in Bay City to do the business of the Northern district association. It seems strange that we had severed our connection four days before and neither the schools nor the officers of the Northern district association knew anything of the matter. We belong to the Northern district association and intend to until such time as we can divide in a proper way and the different schools be allowed a voice in the matter. As none of the schools were notified of the fact that anyone had any intention of organizing an Eastern district association, I did not not know before that a school had the right to choose officers for the association and then invite the other schools to unite with them.

OAKLAND, Cal., June 26.

Editors Herald:—As I have been placed in charge over Northern California and the State of Nevada, I take this means of informing my brethren and sisters and friends that I have no one but the branch officers to help me in my mission. I have calls from several parts of my mission, but it is impossible for me to fill them all; it would keep me traveling all the time to visit all the towns in my field and it would be unwise to do so. I will do the very best I can to carry on my Master's work, ever praying for the divine guidance of the Holy Spirit.

I thank God that he has blessed my labors. I have baptized twenty-three since my report to the Spring Conference. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that my lungs may be made strong. I am improving; I have been preaching all I was able to. It is very little rest I have had since March 1. My permanent address will be, No. 426 J Street, Sacramento, California.

Mrs. Mollie R. Haight and daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Musser, were baptized by Elder Thomas Daley at Oakland, June 26. If there are any members of the church in Lincoln, Nebraska, they will confer a favor on Sr. Mollie R. Haight by calling on her mother who resides at that place—Mary A. Pace, No. 1,743 R Street.

Yours in bonds,

THOMAS DALEY.

NAUVOO, Ill., July 1.

Editors Herald:—Having been appointed as one of the committee on location of reunion of the Des Moines and Nauvoo districts, and not having learned anything definite from any of the other members of the committee, would say through the Herald that the citizens of Nauvoo did not see fit to invite the Saints to hold their reunion at the above-named city. One meeting was held, a committee appointed to see if the Smith Grove could be had, the terms, and report at a subsequent meeting. The time came, but only two or three besides the city mayor were present; and nothing being done, the matter fell through.

There is a place about six miles above Nauvoo which I think can be had for the camping ground. Good water is near, and abundance of it for drinking and cooking; plenty of water in the river for teams; fuel as handy as any place I know of. Excursions and picnic parties often frequent the place through the summer season. A place for the tabernacle can be had, I think; also good camping ground. The grounds are about nine miles from Montrose, and four or five from Fort Madison. A steamer would run daily in connection with trains. Near by are what are known as the "Mormon springs," from which water for use of campers can be had.

Some may think it a little out of the way, but it can be reached by the river road and river. I think that arrangements for furnishing straw without cost can be made with farmers, and also to furnish milk at reasonable rates. I think too that needed groceries will be furnished on the grounds at regular rates. Should like to hear from other members of the committee if they think favorably or otherwise of the above. I will make further investigation and will write again if need be. Yours for the reunion,

D. D. BABCOCK.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 24.

Editors Herald:—I am now at the above-named place, where I told you I was coming some time ago, to work with Bro. Sparling in a tent. The tent work is moving in a nice, smooth way. On Tuesday evening, the 18th, Bro. Sparling preached the first sermon. We have preached eight times with increasing interest. This is a town of about thirty-five thousand people, with about forty churches; some of them rather fine, as the town affords a considerable wealth from the world's standpoint.

I am informed that the ministry of the city get salaries ranging from fifteen to twenty-five hundred dollars per year, so you see we have got something to meet here with our little cotton tabernacle, size 20 x 40, which seats one hundred and twenty-five people. Yesterday at three o'clock we dedicated it to the service of God.

I am pleased with the outlook for the work here. I believe the power of Israel's God will open the way for our seemingly insignificant craft, and push it forward to a mighty work and replace truth for error in the hearts of honest people in the city of Springfield.

It is through the kind benevolence of our Bro. and Sr. Pickering of this place that we are here with the tent for they have bought it on their own responsibility, and now afford us a nice home, and are willing to do all they can to assist in pushing the work. Bro. Pickering is a thorough business man, and goes about the gospel work in a humble, systematic manner. I find Bro. Sparling an interesting companion, and quite able to help me in the work, in many ways.

I am doing my best to be humble that God may stand by me in this great work. There is no sacrifice too great for me to make for the work. When I came the folks seemed considerably surprised, for I had only been preaching a little over a year, and my dress was so poor that I really did not look much like a preacher. I am learning that it is God and not man that must be feared and worshiped. In my preaching here I have been blessed with good liberty, so far. I know that without God's help I am a failure in this gospel work.

In our tent we have a question box. A question was given us, "Are the ten commandments in force since the resurrection of Christ?" This was answered last night by Bro. Sparling in an able way, for he was blessed with good liberty. The tent was crowded; several Adventists were present and splendid attention given. He showed that the "old law" was not perfect (Heb 7: 18, 19; 8: 8); that much was added by Moses and not God (Matt. 19: 8; and Jer. 7. 21, 22; Isa. 1: 13); that there was to be a new commandment (John 13: 34); and a higher law (Matt. 5: 21). Much interest was manifest and we expect good results.

Yours in bonds,

W. C. CATHER.

MARATHON, Iowa, June 27.

Editors Herald:—It comes to mind that fifty-one years ago to-day the relentless hand of blind mobocracy was laid upon the prophet and patriarch of the church in the startling deed of assassination. Urged by a misdirected zeal emanating from a perverted judgment the act was perpetrated

"In the land of the free
And the home of the brave."

But that system of religion known to New Testament history as "the kingdom of God," "the doctrine of Christ," still lives, and though hindered for a time by circumstances adverse to its advancement, it has rallied and is marching onward as never before.

We are yet in Marathon, this being the third week; audiences quite good, attention excellent; liberty in speaking splendid. The two past evenings Bro. Whiting talked to the friends, as en route southward. His sermons sparkled with good thought and we felt that he was under the magic spell of "Mormonism" as found in the New Testament, the Holy Spirit bearing witness that the gospel is all right. It rings with the sentiment of "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

One, Elder Dempsey A. Hunter, of Bro. Campbell's "restored" order, located at Laurens, seven miles east of here, has been talking to friends at the Scibert schoolhouse four miles west of Pocahontas Center for a few times. His presence was desirable there, as Bro. C. J. Hunt had been sowing the old-fashioned Palestine wheat seed, and some good soul feared it might germinate. A debate seems to be on the tapis, and on the evening of the 18th inst., it was thought that perhaps the writer had better be present to hear Bro. Hunter; so we drove twenty-three miles across the country to Bro. O. E. Coiner's, to listen for the sound of battle should any cannonading occur. Folks were singing when we entered, all unknown. The sermon was preached, then song, then Elder H. said: "Well, guess you've come out to hear about the debate; well, we're going to have one; yes, we're going to have a debate. The Latter Day Saint folks want to affirm Joe Smith as a prophet and the Book of Mormon as of divine origin; but I wouldn't affirm any such thing; but they want to. I will not consent to discuss the proposition involving the Christian Church. If they settle the question of their church being right, of course that will dispense with ours. The Latter Day Saint folks are nice people; I've heard several of their ministers from Kelley [E. L.] down; Mr. Blair, Mr. Forscutt, etc., all nice men. But bless you, they claim so much; why it seems to me that all this expense and trouble of debate could be saved if one of their men would come here and work a miracle; that would settle the whole matter! For one, I will help hold him if some other gentleman will put the strychnine down him. Ha, ha! I know all about Mormonism; am brimful and running over; yes, I know about it; but we're going to have a debate!"

As the amen of dismissal was said we called out, "A moment friends: All willing, I will preach here to-morrow evening at about eight o'clock. I am an elder of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints; my name is—and my home is in Harrison county, Iowa." This was like an electric shock. The next evening the house was packed, and God blessed us abundantly, and at the close of the service the talk was not scarce.

On Tuesday evening, the 25th inst., the same man was to speak against our faith at Mud Lake schoolhouse north of here about eight miles. A friend to the cause so informed Bro. Hunt, who preached there last winter, and some thought they had smelled the fumes of heresy; so Bro. Hunter was to remove the odor. Bro. Butterworth was to be present as an angel "unawares," and we await news from there now. Let us all sing,

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word."

We, Bro. Hunt and the writer, are busy working up matters on some Book of Mormon lectures. A good sciopticion from a firm in Chicago has been procured; our canvas is made, "slides" for plate views, and "positives" being worked on by a photographer at Sioux Rapids, seven miles west. We expect to give about forty-eight fine views in the course. We hope for good results. Bro. Hunt has two canvas charts, and we propose to have some more of different sorts illustrating gospel topics of special kind. They are clearly effectual. So goes the good work.

In gospel bonds,

J. F. McDOWELL.

MACHIAS PORT, Maine, June 22.

Editors Herald:—Our conference has just closed. We had a very pleasant time. It convened in our new tent at Indian River. There were over two hundred present. The business passed off harmoniously, with a very good social meeting on Sunday morning. The preaching throughout the day was excellent. Since conference four have been baptized; one by Bro. Greene, three by your correspondent, and there will be a baptism on to-morrow.

We are glad to note the fact that the latter-day work is appearing brighter in this district than for some little time. Prospects are that there will be quite a number added to the church here this conference year. There are calls coming from all around, "Come and preach." I am now preaching in this place to quite full houses and very attentive listeners. The people here seem to be very good and are not creed-bound, and express themselves as being thankful that they are not,—that they are progressive. The trouble in this district is, there are not laborers enough to fill all the calls. We shall try, however, to do all we can to keep the work moving on.

Being president of the district I feel obliged to be with the Saints doing pastoral work; as a rule the Saints need instruction and encouragement. I shall try to exercise as much judgment in this respect as I can, praying God to guide me that I may be led where I may do the most possible good for the church. I trust the Saints in every place will try to exercise good judgment and may try to inculcate good principles into their lives, being written epistles read and known of all men, that the world may see the beauty of the latter-day work in this respect and be led to glorify God. I hope the Saints will try to be active and diligent in the work, and try to bear each others' burdens, and help carry the good news of the gospel to others by casting in their mites. In bonds, Editors Herald:—Bro. Thomas Daley has just left us after a two weeks' series of meetings. Four were baptized and another would have been if her husband had permitted; but he threatened her life if she joined, so I understand. Bro. Daley and his son, also Bro. M. H. Forscutt, were here during the month of February and baptized sixteen. We have the promise that if faithful there shall be a large branch raised up here. We now have about forty who are earnest workers. We have a church and a nice Sunday school.

We have no stationed elder here at present, but Bro. Parkin will probably be with us every other Sunday and preach in the morning and administer the sacrament in the afternoon. I feel thankful to my heavenly Father at all times for his goodness to me.

Your sister,

IDA MAY COOPER.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., June 21.

Editor's Herald:—When I last wrote you it was amid the roar of battle brought on by Methodist and Disciple people, having Joseph Musser (the Burlington apostate) as their field piece. Of course we knew it was only a trick of his Satanic Majesty, so I concluded to stay with them until some one could rightfully claim the victory.

At the close of our last contest, after the smoke and dust had cleared away, we found that the hot shot poured into their ranks from the gospel battery had taken such immediate effect, that Musser left the field, notwithstanding he had one more engagement publicly announced; while Methodists went home to count the costs, and found to their surprise that their unrighteous fray had cost them their class leader at Bell River, (W. H. Harrison by name,) with nearly all his family, six in number, as Bro. Davis had just lead them into the rippling stream, for the remission of sins. A dozen more at that place are contemplating the idea of being baptized in the near future. Brethren, it pays to be on the field in time of war!

On the 7th ult. I went to attend our conference at Detroit, and on my arrival found the beautiful tent just purchased by the Eastern district nicely located on the corner of Baker Street and Scotten Avenue ready to do its mission work. It proved to be a success, as it did its own advertising; for nearly everybody that came that way was curious to know what it was there for, and after some little chat by the way of inquiry, would seem to be at home. Conference drew on with Bro. E. C. Briggs in the chair, assisted by J. A. Grant, district president. Nothing but peace and joy pervaded the entire session. A full representation from the district was had, while several of the brethren from Her "Majesty" the Queen's Dominion came also; and among the rest was Bro. R. C. Evans, the Canadian orator, who in his sweet way of telling the gospel story won for himself and the cause hundreds of friends among the listeners. Every speaker honorably acquitted himself as a minister, unless it was the writer, and he did the best he could, I assure you.

The Detroit conference was one of the best ever held in the Eastern district, and will do perhaps more than any other held in the district by the way of mission work, as there were nearly a thousand people present at some of the preaching meetings; all of whom paid splendid attention and seemed anxious to learn all they could.

The dedicatory prayer for the tent was offered on Sunday by E. C. Briggs. Truly all present felt that God recognized the little tabernacle and would prosper its mission.

At the close of this soul-stirring meeting I started for Bay City as the Northern Michigan district was to convene in conference a week later at that place. On my arrival I found the Saints and friends all alive to the work. They had engaged the Bay theater hall and every thing was in apple pie order. When the allotted time came Bro. Briggs was again appointed to the chair, assisted by J. H. Peters the president of the district. Instead of an R. C. Evans it was a J. J. Cornish that so gracefully told the story of the cross at this place, while all the other speakers were equal to the occasion. Business moved off harmoniously; and, best of all, the ministry are a unit in all things pertaining to the work throughout Michigan; each working for the best interest of Zion's cause.

It was decided that the district tent was to be erected in this place, and accordingly now stands on the corner of Michigan and Fremont Streets, West Bay City. Four more have given their names for baptism.

And now Mr. Editor I will tell you the part I love to tell; that is the noble band of big-hearted Saints and friends here presented me with a lovely suit of clothes, costing nearly twenty-five dollars, for which I am so thankful, as they came in the very hour of need. And while contemplating this gift I felt to go away and thank God for his answer to prayer, and ask him to write with an indelible hand the kind acts of those noble ones in his great record, that they may be rewarded according to their works when he shall come to number his jewels among men. Hastily yours,

R. E. GRANT.

MINISTERIAL SLANG.

EDITORS HERALD:—Your issue of April 10 contains an article on the above subject that I think requires a little notice. I agree with the brother that slang expressions should be avoided, but the question arises, What is slang?

I wish to say for the benefit of the brother that I got my education between the plow handles mostly, and when this gospel found me I spoke as a "Missourian." I read that the apostles spoke as Galileans, hence used language not strictly grammatical. Was it slang?

Some of the quotations referred to are from my pen; and while they may not sound so well to our more refined and aristocratic brethren as some other words might, yet we deny that they are slang. I notice the brother himself uses the expression,

The braggardism of toughs.

I am inclined to think this should be classed along with what the brother criticises.

As the brother has introduced Webster, we will also question him as to what is slang. He says:—

Low, vulgar, unmeaning language.

Then, according to this, a word must be entirely void of meaning to be slang.

He criticises the expression "They took their medicine;" and then adds,

If it was gospel medicine it should have shown its effect.

Why did you not set a good example, brother, and say "gospel truth" instead of "gospel medicine?" You should practice what you preach.

The expression "battle closed," etc., requires almost a "stick" of type for the brother's criticism. I wonder if Paul's expression, "I have fought the good fight," does not grate rather heavily on the brother's ear. Also, "taking the shield of faith," "helmet of salvation," "sword of the Spirit." Christ said,

I am not come to send peace on earth, but a sword.

Now this looks about as much like war as anything in the report of the White-Braden debate. Again Jesus said, Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel.

Does the brother call that slang?

Big guns.

No brother who respects his superiors in position, experience, or intellectual ability, will speak of them as "big guns."

The above language makes a hard charge against me, for I frequently use the word. I have never yet applied the title to the brother, however, so he should not feel so bad about it. I will let my brethren with whom I have associated judge as to my respect for them.

Cyclone debater.

I did not invent this title for Bro. I. N. White, but used it because others had done so, and it comes nearer expressing the nature of his style of debating than any words I know of. He sweeps everything before him in the way of argument.

Jacob said by inspiration:—

Judah is a lion's whelp.

Was that slang for the Holy Spirit to thus speak through Jacob using figurative language?

Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels, so that his rider shall fall backward.

Again,

Issachar is a strong ass couching down between two burdens.

According to our brother's way of defining slang the Bible is full of it. I do not question but that improvement can be made, but a reasonable hint would seem more brotherly than an egotistical "roasting." (Is "roasting" slang?) In bonds,

C. R. DUNCAN.

SERMON BY ELDER J. W. WIGHT.

At Lamoni, Iowa, January 20, 1895.

SUBJECT, THE LATTER-DAY WORK.

(Concluded.)

By request the unfinished subject of last Sunday morning is continued today. It is possible that it will be concluded. It is thought well to present Amos 3:7 as the basis upon which to build:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets.

This basis is presented from the fact that prophetic mission and angelic visitation will have largely to do with that which may be presented from a biblical standpoint. The last citation—save that found in the second of Joel—to which reference was had on last Sunday, is found in the twentieth chapter of Ezekiel, and today your attention is invited more especially to the reading of the thirty-fourth verse, which was then passed over:—

And I will bring you out from the people.

Here, through the prophet, God is directly stating that he will do something by revelation to Israel, scattered and peeled, in the latter days. And it is but natural, in connection with the text presented, that all studious and reflective minds should stop and consider what is meant by the statement, "I will bring you out from the people;" and to further reflect (note that please) how God will bring Israel out from the people.

Now, I wish to especially emphasize the thought that God has positively declared by the prophet that he won't do anything, but he will reveal that thing to or through his servants the prophets. The existence of living prophets is an unpopular thing to present; while on the other hand, and with seeming avidity professing Christians accept as true the statement made concerning the existence of prophets in days gone by.

Just in connection with this thought, we stop and inquire, In what particular manner did God make himself manifest to his servants in days gone by? There were at least two special ways or means of revelation, angelic ministration and the ministration of God's Holy Spirit; by these two means of communication the will of God was revealed to men, and more especially by the latter this side of Christ—mark this side of Christ—from the fact that Jesus said that when the Comforter was come, he would teach the things of the Father, and he promised even more than that, viz., "He shall show you things to come." And when the Holy Spirit is made manifest in the life of any individual to that extent, that individual necessarily becomes a prophet, one that can foretell, one unto whom is revealed futurity.

And will gather you out of the countries wherein you are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out.—Ez. 20:34.

And as you remember, on last Sunday it was presented further:—

I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt.—Ibid 20:35, 36.

It seems to me—if you here permit the interpretation, realizing that it is but an individual one—that in the recent persecution of the Jews is seen his "fury poured out," when that nation of the north, Russia, heaped upon that peculiar people such a visitation of wrath. It seems that here, at least, is a partial fulfillment of the declaration made, that it will be "with fury poured out" that he will gather them, and especially when we consider that, incident to that occasion, the mightiest nations of the world were moved, impelled by this awful persecution, to begin to reflect upon what their future shall be, and, as you and I have read, those nations began to determine in their minds that the proper and rightful place for scattered and peeled Israel, was their own land. Next your attention is invited to a portion of the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, commencing at the thirteenth verse:—

Wherefore the Lord said [now mark the Lord said it], Forasmuch as this people [the peculiar or particular people had reference to here, are living in the time when this event transpires] draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men: therefore [for this reason], behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people.

Among that class of people who drew near to God with their mouth and with their lips had done him honor, but their hearts were withdrawn from him; among that people God would "proceed to do a marvelous work, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." And now it is natural, at least for the Bible student—and it occurs to the mind of your speaker that every Latter Day Saint ought to be a Bible student—to inquire as to when God is to proceed to do this marvelous work. Let me remind you that one of the most marvelous, if it be true, of works that has come into existence in our own time, is the work known in the theological world as the latter-day work, more commonly called Mormonism. Now I want to present one thought here, that there has been an apostacy, which the whole Protestant world agrees to, there has been a departure from the faith that was given by the Lord Jesus Christ. And it seems to me to be a very simple and yet a beautiful way to present this thought as follows: For instance, Jesus places before the world a pure church. I might, by way of illustration, take out of my pocket, if I had it there, a pure coin of silver or gold, and on the other hand take out a spurious coin, and place them side by side. Now Jesus placed a pure coin (church) before the world, and left it there, and departed to the Father. By and by because of a departure from the faith, the pure coin was rejected, and in its place there was sought to be placed a spurious one, and in the days of the reformers—I thank God for those men, I want to say it right here publicly, because I want it to go on record that I am not one of those that believe that we as a people, or any other people for that matter, have any right to berate the religion of anybody, from the public stand or anywhere else. I believe that whenever we do it we are not only lowering the standard of our manhood, but are lowering the dignity of that basis on which we should stand as ministers of Christ. But when these reformers came, they evidently, if it be true that the spurious coin was the only one in existence, and if there was a departure from the faith, it was, they evidently took up that spurious coin, and what did they undertake? They undertook a reformation.

To illustrate the thought clearly, suppose I take up that spurious coin, and in order to make it appear genuine, so far as my mind may grasp such fact, I begin to burnish it, and the more I burnish the more it brightens, until by and by I present it as being genuine, and then assume the character of a reformer. What would you think of me? Would you think that I could do such a thing? Now while I honor the work done by those men in the position they occupied and from the standpoint of their occupancy, it occurs to my mind, reflecting as it does in this particular direction, that that was the exact position of affairs with them. They found only the spurious coin, and in honor to themselves, so far as their work was concerned in that which they did, they never made the claim that there was any revelation in the matter; they never made the claim that there was any restoration; and if that genuine coin had been lost, I want to know how it could come back in its place, only by a restoration.

I want to know, because it seems to me in order to arrive at a logical conclusion there must be some way to determine how it would be possible, by means of reformation to bring into existence that which had been lost. Now mark, I don't charge those men in any sense of the term with doing what they thought to be a crime, for you know the record says, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," and they could only be held responsible to God, and to the world, for the light that was in them. And so long as their light reflected only the light of reformation, as men they ought to be honored, and I believe that God will honor them in the day of reward.

Now mark, we come to that particular passage which says that God will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder, and when he says he will do it, and when the prophet says he won't do anything only as he revealeth it through his servants, the prophets, then, it seems to me that we can rightly determine, by logical deduction, how it shall be done, and we can do it on no other basis and be right. When is God to proceed to do this marvelous work? I follow on down to the reading of the seventeenth verse to determine.

I want just here for a moment to reflect on what was told you on last Sunday from the second chapter of Joel, concerning the restoration of the land, and how that the former and the latter rains were manifestly restored in the year 1853. The prophet here says:—

Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?

Travelers going through the country of Palestine to-day, tell us that such a restoration has actually taken place, and by way of confirmation give us to understand that they are raising grapes whose branches are three feet long. I hope there is no one present this morning that will think that that is a fish story. I hope that your minds will rise above these things. But somehow or other we have got in such a skeptical condition in this nineteenth century that anything that is, what shall I say, big? we can hardly swallow it. Is it because God is a respecter of persons? He says, "I am the Lord, I change not," and he worked by miraculous power in many instances eighteen hundred years ago. But there was no miracle in the matter in the grapes of Eshcol, when the spies visited that land when Israel wandered in the wilderness, and I cannot tell how people can believe now, that a bunch of grapes could grow so large that it had to be carried on a pole, on the shoulders of two men; I cannot think how people now can believe that the bunches of grapes could be that length then and yet call this a "fish" story, unless it is because the Bible says so.

It is acknowledged that in that day and age of the world God did make revealments by angelic ministration, and there are thousands of people in the world now, that believe it with all their heart, because the Bible says so. But it seems to me that if logical conclusions are worth anything at all, that such ministrations ought to be had by God's people at the present time. Have we gone down so far in the scale of the animal creation, that we have even dropped below that long-eared animal that was ridden by Balaam? It would so seem, if popular opinion can be taken for any worth, because popular opinion, from a religious standpoint, is that God did reveal by angelic ministrations from time to time, right down the ages for more than four thousand years, and at one time did give knowledge by angelic revelation to that long-eared animal of Balaam. But God has become so partial in this age of the world, that we are considered below that animal that can only say, E-aw! E-aw! so that God won't reveal anything unto us. I am emphatic upon this point, that God is no respecter of persons. I do believe that he revealed to that long-eared animal, and I do believe that he will reveal his will to his people to-day, whether their ears be long or short, providing they will do his will, if there should be an absolute necessity, in the sight of God, for it.

From 1830 to 1853 would be a very little while would it not? Twenty-three years. It is not very long, it is not a very long period, so far as man is concerned; but God is here making a revelation so far as he is concerned; he says that he will proceed to do a marvelous work, and how shall we know when it shall be?

Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field?

Once when preaching in Australia—I had just commenced and it was very warm—a gentleman in the audience, away down by the side of the building got up to open a window. Nearly everybody in the audience turned to look at him. I said, "Say!" They all looked at me and I said: "That gentleman is opening a window," and they all turned to look at me. I guess you know what I mean. [The attention of the audience had been diverted by the janitor fixing the curtains.]

Now God positively declares that he will do a "marvelous work, even a marvelous work and a wonder." And within the nineteenth century there has been no claim of a more specific nature, than that God has, within that period of time, restored the gospel by angelic ministration; again brought into existence a prophet of God. Do you know of anything more marvelous in its nature?

We know that he is doing that work because we are living in the time of the restoration of the land of Palestine, and he was to commence this work just a little while before Palestine should be restored. And one thing I am especially thankful for, so far as this latter-day philosophy is concerned, that no claim has been made in this nineteenth century, of the gospel being restored by angelic ministration outside of the Latter Day Saints; and I am told that there are more than eleven hundred religious denominations claiming divine recognition.

This restoration of the gospel by angelic ministration, was to take place just a little while preceding the year 1853, for in that year that land was so fully and completely restored, that since that time they have been exporting a surplus of wheat, of wine, and of oil, just as the Prophet Joel said they should do. Now before the first coming of Christ as a babe in the manger, as we presented on last Sunday, there was angelic ministration, and as God works like himself and in him there "is no variableness, neither shadow of turning," then prior to his second coming he would again send his angels, and in order that the messenger might be sent to prepare the way before him, he must reveal himself to the children of men, for he surely does nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. In the twentieth chapter of Matthew Jesus says:—

The kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder.

Jesus goes on to tell what the householder did, simply to illustrate what God had done in the world's history; how that in the morning he called his servants and sent them forth to work in his vineyard. There is not one of you—I don't care whether you are Latter Day Saints, or outside of the church—there is not one of you but what believe that when God sent his servants forth in the early morning, he did it by revelation. There is not one of you but what believes that when he sent his servants forth in the third hour of the day he called them by revelation as well as in the sixth and also in the ninth hour. If, in the early morn, in the third, sixth, and ninth hours, God did by the revelation of his will call the children of men into activity, I want to know how he is to do it in the eleventh hour? He positively says that in the eleventh hour he went out—went out of his habitation, moved upon to make a journey, to go and reveal his will to the children of men in that hour, or dispensation; he went out and found others standing idle, and "saith unto them"—ah! did not somebody say he would not speak again? Did not somebody say that the canon of Scripture was complete, and per consequence God could not speak any more? If that be the fact, when God went out, as is declared here, and "said" unto these his servants, how did he communicate his will to them? Will somebody tell me how he could say and not speak? I don't know how it could be done; I cannot understand how it is possible that he could go to these that are idle, and say unto them, etc., without speaking.

Mark you, they were standing idle, I want you to reflect upon that point, they were perfectly idle, in a churchly sense, and in this kind of occupaney, if it can be called by that name, God found them. And he told them he wanted them as his servants, and he told them he would pay them whatever was right. Here we have a positive declaration that in the eleventh hour dispensation—and we as a people believe it to be the dispensation in which we are now living—that God went out from his habitation and he hired his servants, not promising any emolument of money other than a "penny," but that he would pay them according to their day, "the laborer is worthy of his hire," and we are clearly and emphatically taught that that worthiness will be determined over yonder when we shall stand in the presence of God, and if we are faithful it will be said of us: "Well done, good and faithful servant; . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." And it seems to me that an individual that wants a better price than that, is one that thinks more of money than of his soul's salvation. I don't know how you will think about it. I turn to the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew in order to bring to your notice testimony that comprehends events of to-day. I want to turn to the third verse reading as follows:—

And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world.

It is a prevalent idea in a portion of the religious world, to-day, that the peculiar theology presented by the Lord Jesus Christ, among men and to his apostles before his death, has been reflected down along the line by continuation until the present time. I am presenting a directly opposite theory to that, that there has been a departure from the faith. Now if the gospel has been upon the earth continuously until the present time, I want to ask you if it would be any sign of any definite period of the world's history? If it has continued to be preached from then till now, would it be a sign of the second coming of Christ? Would it reflect the latter days? That is the point. How could it? If the gospel of the kingdom has been continued right along down the line without any interruption, I ask again, Could it be a sign of any period of the world's history? You say, No. The disciples asked Jesus:—

When shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

And among other things that he said in reply, you find in the fourteenth verse:—

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

A witness of what? If there is anything that is a sign of the times, this gospel of the kingdom being preached certainly is. It "shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." The preaching of the gospel of the kingdom was to be one of the many signs that was to precede the coming of Jesus, and of the end of the world.

Upon one occasion, while preaching, after conversing all the day long with a lady who was of a different faith and who had from time to time been trying to make believe that her faith and ours were not so far apart but that we might stand side by side; I was moved by the influence of God's Spirit to show that the gospel should be preached as a sign of the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that if the gospel had continued, it could not have answered that purpose; and as I watched the face of the lady, there was a spirit moving her to see and reflect. As I noted her facial expression it seemed to me to be a sure index to her thoughts, denoting that she saw and comprehended the thought; and I thank God for the moving of his Spirit in this direction, from time to time, as an evidence of the truth of the work we are doing. Don't you?

I examine a little further, and I want to just reflect this thought, that if this gospel of the kingdom has to be preached—and Christ has said it should be, no "ifs," nor "ands," nor "buts" about it, unless the whole work is at fault—when this gospel of the kingdom is to be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, how am I to determine whether it is to be found in any of these eleven hundred different phases of belief? I try to discover which one, if any, is reflecting this gospel of the kingdom in its teaching. Now, would I find it until I found a church organized exactly as the Church of Jesus Christ was eighteen hundred years ago, with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers? Would I find it until I found a church with this kind of an organization, preaching the doctrine of Christ?

The Savior says:—

My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

He says further:—

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

If I am told that I have no means of knowing now only as I read it in the record, and if God's Spirit will not move me to that end, then, I want to ask the man that makes such a claim, Is that going by the record? And more especially if the church is not organized with apostles, prophets, etc., there being no communication between heaven and earth? Would you not know that God was not doing anything to-day? How would we know that he was doing anything? The prophet said:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets.

That is how you would know. Now I turn to Ephesians 1:10 and read, "That in the dispensation of the fullness of times,"—ah! that must be our dispensation, the last dispensation of God on earth, when he is to "gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him;" showing conclusively that there is to be a dispensation in which God would, by the inspiration of his Spirit, be actively engaged in doing a work which should gather together all things in one, in him; and it seems to me that that will be the time spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began.

Now the question naturally arises, How is this dispensation to come in? I don't propose to answer only as it it shall be reflected through the revealed word; and for a more direct answer your attention is invited to the eighteenth chapter of Revelation:—

And after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory.

If we are not to have angels to visit us any more, what are they to come down from heaven for? Will somebody tell me? Now, if you turn to the fourth chapter of Revelation, and first verse, you will find an angel saying to John,—

Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter.

Among these things he saw that an angel was to come down from heaven having great power, and the earth was to be lightened with his glory. Did not our brother from this pulpit just recently tell us how the earth is becoming lightened to-day, and of the wonderful works of men, and the remarkable progress made since the revelation in 1830? Just think, When in the history of the world, has there been such a degree of enlightenment or revelation in such a short period of time? At the time this latter-day theology burst upon the world, the theologians of the day were wont to talk about this little pigmy of an earth as though it was all there was of the work of God, but when that boy came, by the inspiration of God, he told us there was not only this little earth, but there were millions upon millions of worlds in existence, and the astronomers have since proven that the boy was right on that point as well as on other points. Has the earth been lightened? or, has it not? In the fourth verse of the eighteenth chapter of Revelation it reads,—

And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

Now, mind you, by revelation the apostle is shown that which is to transpire far down in future time, not merely what would happen then; what he saw was to happen in distant futurity. In the future an angel was to come down from heaven, and a voice from heaven was to be heard saying.

Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partaker of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

Now, the Palmyra seer is the only one of all the great workers upon the earth who has ever announced that the time had come for the fulfillment of this revelation to John, and the work has been going on from that time to the present. How is it that the fulfillment of one revelation after another stands out in such bold relief, and serves to establish that which we have presented from the beginning? It can only be accounted for upon the theory of present revelation, that that boy was made to know what the whole religious and scientific world had not discovered. Is it not remarkable? Ah! more remarkable still,—in the fourteenth chapter of Revelation and sixth and seventh verses it reads:—

heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people [If the gospel had been preached continuously, pray tell me why this angel was to fly in the midst of heaven having it to preach to all the world], saying with a loud voice, Fear God, [Ah! they were not fearing God, were they?] and give glory to him [They were not giving glory to him, but taking the glory to themselves evidently]; for the hour of his judgment is come. [There you have it, there you have the fact revealed, that the angel was to fly in the midst of heaven with the gospel, and he was to come in the hour of God's judgment, that time just prior to the second coming of Jesus Christ]; And worship him [Was the world worshiping God as they should? If so why did the angel declare, Worship him?] that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

O if we had time to dwell upon this to make it more clearly manifest! and yet it is so plain that it should reach the mind and comprehension of every one, that the angel was to come to bring the gospel, showing conclusively that the gospel had been taken into heaven or he could not bring it from heaven.

That gospel was to be preached in all the world, to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people in the hour of God's judgment; showing it to be in the hour or time that Jesus referred to when he said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come"—not before.

I take up this little card and read the names of ten different kingdoms. The first on the list is that of the Huns in Hungary, arising in the year 356 of the Christian era; second, the Ostrogoths, in 377; third, the Visigoths, in 378; fourth, the Franks, in 407; fifth, the Vandals, in 407; sixth, the Suevi and Alans, in 407; seventh, the Burgundians, in 407; eighth, the Heruli and Rugii, in 476; ninth, the Saxons, in 476; tenth, the Lombards began to reign in Hungary, in A. D. 426, and were settled in the northern part of Germany about the year 483. Not one of these kingdoms had come into existence in the days of Christ, when he was upon the earth; all of them, had not come into existence until the year 483 after Christ. You remember the great vision of Nebuchadnezzar, and how Daniel gave the interpretation of it and showed the king the successive orders of governments that should arise after his, down to the end of time. The fourth kingdom (Roman) that was to arise, was to be divided and subdivided into ten different kingdoms, and in the forty-fourth verse of the second chapter of Daniel, it is said: "In the days of these kings,"—the days of the kings, or kingdoms, that I have just read to you about. It does not positively say that they shall all be in existence, at that time, but in the days of their existence.

In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom.

Now note,

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret to his servants the prophets.

You haven't forgotten that, have you?

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people.

You don't want any more than that do you? God was to do a work in the days when these kings, or kingdoms, were to be in existence, and they were not in existence when Jesus came as the babe in the manger; but just prior to the time when he shall come a second time and by the power of his might reveal himself to his saints; when he shall come as King of kings and Lord of lords; just prior to that time, in the days of these kings, the God of heaven shall set up his kingdom. And we as a people make the claim, that the Lord has revealed his secret unto his servant the prophet, has authorized him to organize his kingdom on the earth, restored the gospel by angelic ministrations, and clothed his servants with authority to proclaim it to all the world as a witness unto all nations, before the end comes.

I feel thankful that we have no rival claimants. I feel abundantly thankful that the record is so replete with this latter-day philosophy, and that God has, from time to time, revealed his will to his people, from the time the little stone was first cut out of the mountain without hands until now. And I pray that it shall roll forth, until the work of God's glorious kingdom shall be so great and magnificent that the lamb and the lion shall lie down together, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy as foretold in the Scriptures.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Southern California:—Having been put in charge of Southern California district, I wish to notify all Saints, especially scattered ones, that I desire to cooperate with them in preaching the gospel. Of those appointed to Southern California perhaps Bro. Charles Baly, of Garden Grove, and myself will be all that will labor in this field, Elder Harris having been sent north; and Bro. R. Dana has gone to work (so I hear) for the summer; but we will try and fill all calls for preaching.

The Saints can greatly aid in the work appointed to all, in making openings. The work of preaching is a duty intrusted to all, so the revelation says. Some can make appointments that could not fill them; so make them and send for those who can. In this we see the necessity of all working together. The elders cannot do this work alone, nor are they commanded to do it of themselves. "Let every man warn his neighbor," is the command. A good way to do so is to make an appointment and have an elder fill it, always remembering that the result of such in those baptized, is a matter with God, our obligations are discharged when we have faithfully preached the word; so let us, Saints, unite in this grand work, in pushing the work outside of branches. We have a good tent well equipped that can be taken wherever it may be deemed best, but we don't intend to confine our labors to it. The address of Elder Charles Baly, Bishop's agent, is Garden Grove. My address is San Bernardino. Let us hear from many and you will see and hear us.

HIRAM L. LOLT.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northeastern Illinois District; Greeting:—Having been appointed Bishop's agent for the above-named district, I take this method of addressing you concerning tithes and offerings. This is recognized by the church as a part of the gospel, and as important, doubtless, as any other part, the Lord having commanded his servants to execute this law "in order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law."—D. C. 114:1. He also promises certain blessings to those who observe this law. See Malachi 3:10; Doctrine and Covenants 64:5.

Some things need to be remembered in reference to this matter. We are admonished not to give grudgingly, or of necessity, "for God loveth a cheerful giver."—2 Cor. 9:7. It should be remembered too that this, as all of God's law is designed for man's benefit. It was not purposed to distress anyone, but rather to prevent distress.

As interpreted by the church, a tithe is a tenth. At first a tenth of all we possess belongs to the Lord; after this is paid into the Lord's "storehouse," then a tenth of our increase annually.

Those who cannot pay all their tithing at once without distressing themselves are urged to pay it in such installments and at such times as may be convenient; only let all make a beginning. We should also bear in mind that in order for anyone to obtain credit for tithing it is necessary that it be paid into the Lord's "storehouse" that it may be properly accounted for as the law directs, rather than that every man should act as Bishop over his own tithes.

We have over six hundred members in our district. Out of this number less than fifty names are on the Bishop's agent's books for tithes and offerings dating from January 1, 1894 to June, 1895, a period of one year and a half. This small showing may be partly accounted for by some paying their tithes directly to the Bishop instead of to the agent, yet it is clear that the larger portion of our membership have failed to have their names recorded either on the Bishop's or his agent's books. This ought not to be.

During the coming year we would like to see the name of every member on these books, either in tithes or offerings, or both, in such amounts as you may feel to give freely; and we will receipt for five cents, if that is your portion, just as willingly as for five hundred dollars; only let all do what they can.

To aid in this work I earnestly call upon presidents of branches to cooperate with me by calling the attention of their members to this matter and to collect such amounts as may be offered, and send it to me with the names of the donors and I will send them receipts for the same.

The treasury in our district was nearly empty when placed in my charge. Can we not replenish it—sufficiently at least to meet our expenses, so as to avoid having to call upon the Bishop for aid?

Either tithes or offerings may be paid to the president of your branch to be forwarded to me, or may be sent directly to me.

F. G. PITT, Bishop's Agent.

WELSH REUNION.

EASTERN AND WESTERN DISTRICTS.

The reunion in connection with above districts was held at the Saints' chapel, Morris-ton, on Sunday and Monday, the 2d and 3d of June, 1895. On Saturday evening, the 1st, an entertainment was given by the Saints at the chapel. Popular local artists had willingly volunteered their services and a most pleasant evening was spent by visiting Saints and friends.

On Sunday at nine a. m., the reunion convention was opened by singing and prayer, Elder James Caffall being voted president, Sr. S. J. Gibbs secretary, and Mr. W. H. Thomas assistant secretary. Such a comparatively large assembly of Saints had not been witnessed in Wales for many years before, there being about sixty present. Bro. Caffall, after giving a short and appropriate address, opened the meeting for prayer and testimony. Consequent upon the organ being played Bro. Caffall referred the Saints to the revelation of 1887 bearing upon the point. Meeting closed with singing and prayer. At 10:45 a. m., preaching in English by Bro. Caffall, and in Welsh by Bro. David Lewis. At 2:30 p. m. Saints' fellowship meeting opened by singing and prayer. Bro. Caffall read the revelation of 1887 wherein the Lord requests that instrumental music of all kinds be silent in meetings of this order. Bro. Caffall read to the Saints a personal letter from Bro. G. T. Griffiths announcing his embarkment for England on the 2d of June. The Saints bearing their testimony acknowledged the presence of the Holy Spirit in their midst. All felt encouraged and expressed a determination to go forward with the work. Six p. m., preaching to a large and appreciative audience by Elder James Caffall in English and Elder J. R. Gibbs in Welsh.

Monday, eight a. m., opened by singing and prayer. Bro. Caffall expounded the meaning of a chapter upon "gifts." Bro. T. Griffiths, of Lydney, asked an explanation upon the law of tithing. Bro. Caffall explained that tithing was a tenth of increase to be paid to the church. Bro. Griffiths' question was couched in the following instance: A brother makes an increase of £25 in a certain year and pays due tithing upon it. The following year he loses the £25, and again at the end of the third year finds himself £25 to the gain. He asked whether he should at the end of the third year have to pay full tithing upon this £25 as a new increase or simply pay tithing upon the interest thereof as recovered property. The question entailed much discussion, being viewed in different aspects. The opinion of Bro. Caffall was at length accepted; viz., that tithing should be paid upon the money as new capital.

Proposed by Bro. A. N. Bishop, seconded by Bro. J. R. Gibbs, that we as a reunion consider it wise to have a reunion next year at Whitsuntide.

Bro. J. R. Gibbs in a short speech said that comparing our present district conferences with the semiannual mission conferences of years gone by, the overbearing, self-assertive Brighamite element which used to make itself so unpleasantly apparent in the latter was now quite outgrown. Conference business in Wales was now being more effectually and methodically carried out, the sovereign rules of the church were being adopted. He hoped that any contention would now cease and all go on prosperously. Bro. Caffall read from the revelation of 1873 bearing upon contention; of the admonition of the Lord to be peaceful—to let peace predominate. He then spoke as to the perfect unity of the priesthood. Bro. A. N. Bishop spoke in his capacity as president of the Eastern district. No contentions amongst the priesthood existed there, all feeling well in the work. As a point essential to success, he recommended visiting outsiders individually and inviting them to come to hear the gospel preached. Bro. T. Griffiths, of Sydney, then spoke. Whilst agreeing with the method of individual visiting, he thought that outdoor preaching was also essential to reach the people.

Bro. Caffall drew out and presented the following resolution: Be it resolved that we the representatives and members of the Eastern and Western districts desire to promote good fellowship, union, and peace, and regret that there should have been any unpleasantness in the past, and hope, and will try to live in the future that peace, order, and love may abound, and sincerely hope that what unpleasantness may have existed in the past may be buried. Bro. A. N. Bishop seconded the motion. The Saints were unanimously agreed to abide by all herein mentioned and the resolution prevailed. Bro. Caffall read a section of Doctrine and Covenants bearing upon fault seeking and being unforgiving—admonishing all to be forgiving.

Bro. S. Griffiths asked how the expenses of the reunion were being met. Bro. J. R. Gibbs reported having received £1 9s. 6½d. towards defraying of expenses. Meeting closed by prayer.

Eleven a.m. preaching in English by Elder James Caffall. A most impressive sermon. At two p.m. the meeting consisted chiefly of five-minute speeches delivered in order by the officers, elders, and priests of the districts. The following brethren spoke: Presidents of districts, A. N. Bishop and A. H. Edwards. Bishop's agents, T. Gould and J. R. Gibbs. Presidents of branches, David Thomas and Rees Jenkins. Elders, D. Williams, S. Griffiths, and David Lewis. Priest Lot Bishop, and Brn. Thomas Jones and John Jenkins. A spirit of hope, encouragement, and determination to press forward for the love of the gospel was apparent throughout. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Gibbs and family for the excellent manner in which they provided for the visitors, and also to Sr. Lizzie Gibbs for presiding at the organ. Proposed by Bro. T. Gould, seconded by A. H. Edwards, that we vote to Bro. Caffall our hearty thanks for the able manner in which he presided and instructed at the reunion. Proposed by A. N. Bishop and seconded by T. Gould that Morrision friends be accorded a vote of thanks for their kindness in providing sleeping accommodations for the Saints. Proposed by Bro. Dewi Lewis and seconded by Bro. A. N. Bishop that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded Mr. W. H. Thomas for the active interest he displayed in reporting and advertising the reunion meetings in the local daily papers. Proposed and seconded that the next reunion be held at Llanelly. Bro. Gould proposed that this matter be deferred for six months. This proposition being adopted, the reunion convention was brought to a close by singing and prayer, and adjourned to meet Whitsuntide, 1896.

S. J. GIBBS, Secretary.
W. H. THOMAS, Assistant.

NOTICES.

To Whom it May Concern:—Mrs. Jones, formerly of Dymore Valley, South Wales, after expulsion from the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was denied admission, for legitimate reasons. And as we learn that the said Mrs. Jones has migrated to America with the intention, as we learn, of uniting with the church, hence our caution. Further information if desired may be obtained by applying to Mr Reese Jenkins, Tonyrefail, near Perth, South Wales. We have not her address. She is about Oliphant or Scranton, Pennsylvania.

REESE JENKINS,
Pres. of Penygraig Branch.
JAMES CAFFALL,
Missionary in Charge.

THE COLLEGE.

The College Committee have been doing what they could to secure the College at Lamoni. The land has been surveyed, platted, and the plat recorded. Lots are now for sale in Graceland Addition to Lamoni; and we hope that those who may desire will purchase, and thus give the needed aid to the funds for carrying on the College work, building, and teaching.

The Committee at its last meeting decided that it would be advisable to secure a loan of from five to ten thousand dollars, with which to push the building to completion. It is therefore desired that if any who may read this shall have funds that they are willing to lend the committee at a reasonable rate of interest for two or more years, they will greatly aid the College enterprise by notifying the committee, addressing either Joseph Smith, chairman, or D. F. Nicholson, treasurer.

JOSEPH SMITH,
Chairman of Committee.

DIED.

GREGG.—Elder M. H. Gregg was born in Belmont county, Ohio, August 23, 1823, and died in Harrison county, Missouri, March 22, 1895. When seven years old he moved with his parents to Meigs county, Ohio, where he was married to Miss Susannah Day, November 28, 1854. In September, 1865, he moved with his family to Harrison county, Missouri. In the year 1869 he homesteaded a piece of land in Lincoln township, Harrison county, where he lived until his death. He leaves a wife and six children, two sons and four daughters, to mourn his departure. When quite young he joined the M. E. Church and lived a faithful member until May 18, 1871, when he united with the Latter Day Saints Church, being baptized by Elder A. Himes, and was soon ordained an elder, and was a faithful worker until death.

LOVELL.—Elder Ekin Lovell was born in Northamptonshire, England, and died near Lamoni, Iowa, June 29, 1895, aged 74 years, 6 months, and 21 days. He received and obeyed the gospel in his native land in 1848; came to America in 1855; united with the Reorganized Church in 1877, being baptized by Bro. James Mc Diffett, and lived a faithful and consistent life as a man and a member of Christ's Church. He suffered much but endured patiently, and he welcomed release, so that he might have rest in the paradise of God. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. J. R. Lambert. Bro. Lovell was married in 1843, and, after nearly fifty-two years of companionship, the wife is left with five sons and one daughter to lament their loss. He was noted for his meekness of spirit and humility of heart, as also for his strict honesty and truthfulness.

COBB.—At his home near Lower Lake, California, November 13, 1893, Elder John Cobb, aged 79 years, 5 months, and 25 days. He was baptized by Elder Wm. Potter May 2, 1867, and was ordained an elder in August, 1874, by Elder Jacob Adamson. He was chosen president of the branch in 1883, which office he held till God called him home to rest from his labors. He had not been very active in the work for some time, as he was getting quite old and feeble. He was born in Henry county, Kentucky. He was a good man and has gone to his reward.

CUMMINGS.—At Independence, Missouri, Sr. Mamie E., wife of Bro. William Cummings. She was the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Alfred White, of Clinton, Missouri, and was born in Jasper county, Iowa, April 30, 1867. She was baptized by Elder I. N. White at Edenville, Iowa, September 2, 1877; and was married at Independence, Missouri, February 20, 1884. Her home was at Clinton; but six days before the day of her death she came to Independence to attend the funeral of her sister, Viola White. Immediately after the funeral service she was taken to bed and never rose alive. She was a true Saint, and her testimony was always firm, even to the hour of death. She prayed for death and longed to go and dwell with the Saints who had passed on before. Funeral sermon by Joseph Luff, in the stone church.

FROMAN.—At Maysville, Missouri, June 23, Sr. Eliza Froman. She was born in DeKalb county, Missouri, September 22, 1859, and was baptized near Cameron, by Elder James Dillon, about eighteen years ago. Less than two years ago, upon her refusal to renounce her faith even at the threat of being killed, her husband discharged the contents of a shot gun directly at her, intending to kill her. She raised her arm for protection, and thus saved her life by the loss of her arm, which had to be amputated. Her husband, supposing she was killed, turned the gun on himself and killed himself instantly. Her last illness was of only three days duration. She leaves five children to mourn, only two of whom are self-supporting.

Relatives have taken the others. Funeral sermon to a crowded house, in the Christian Church on the 24th, by Elder Joseph Luff.

FISHER.—At her home in Sandwich, June 7, 1895, Sr. Clarintha C. Fisher. Our departed sister was born in Williston, Vermont, December 3, 1813; was baptized November 22, 1885, at Plano, Illinois, by Elder J. C. Foss. Death came as a blessed release to this suffering one who so patiently bore her great afflictions. She was a faithful, devoted wife, a loving, tender mother. She has gone to her rest and her works do follow her. An aged husband, one son, three daughters, and a number of grandchildren mourn. Funeral sermon by Bro. F. G. Pitt at the Saints' church, to a large congregation.

GRIST.—Sr. Lottie Grist (formerly Granger), daughter of Sr. Catherine Herrick, was born at Quincy, Illinois; was baptized at Quincy when a child, and later at Nauvoo by Bro. Thomas Revel; died at Plano, Iowa, June 25, 1895, at 10:30 a. m., aged 50 years, 5 months, and 25 days. Buried at Centerville, Iowa, June 26. Although her health has been very poor the last four years, her last sickness lasted but one night. She leaves an aged, sorrowing mother bowed with grief, alone in the faith and the world as well, whom we pray God to comfort and sustain as he alone can.

COOK.—At his home, Sacramento, California, April 20, 1895, Bro. John R. Cook, aged 54 years, 3 months, and 11 days. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn their loss.

CAMPBELL.—William Willis Campbell was born February 22, 1842, and died May 28, 1895. Was born in Wayne county, Indiana, and leaves a wife, six children, 3 brothers, and six sisters. He retired in the evening apparently well, but was cold in death in the morning. Heart failure the cause. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams, at their home three miles from Council Bluffs.

WALKER.—At Genoa, Nevada, April 6, 1895, Sr. Ann Walker, aged 68 years. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1868 by Alexander Smith. She was a good wife, and affectionate mother, a good, faithful saint and neighbor. Her house was always open for meetings, and her pleasant greetings of welcome to all will not be forgotten. She rests in peace and a glorious hope of the first resurrection. Funeral on the 8th at the M. E. church, conducted by Bro. D. R. Jones.

HEASTON.—Amanda J. Heaston, daughter of Bro. Solomon and Ellen McMullen. The deceased was born December 30, 1855, and died May 8, 1895. The deceased was not a member of the church, yet she was administered to several times with beneficiary results. A husband and three children mourn. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams at the Crescent church.

It may be this permission given women to exert open influence in higher educational matters will lead to a more careful study of political history by the mothers of the nation. Girls will cease to learn names of kings or dates of battles, but in the higher schools the philosophy of national life will be unfolded. Comparative history of different governmental institutions will be so taught that the student may decide for herself the relative value of each upon the highest civilization of the race. More women will take such courses in our colleges, and they will gradually become ready to meet the responsibility which they anticipate.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

HISTORIC DATA.

THOSE who take an interest in the history of Illinois are well aware that the old town of Nauvoo, on the Mississippi River, nearly opposite Montrose, Iowa, was the scene of momentous occurrences away back in the forties. In those days it was the head center and settlement of the Mormon Church, and of a religion that is to-day divided into several independent bodies, one of them the Latter Day Saints, distinctly repudiating the grosser forms of the marriage relation which permitted a multiplicity of wives. Governor Ford, whose neglected grave in Springdale cemetery is to be the site of a state monument, was a central figure in those stirring times. . . . The original Joseph Smith was lodged in jail . . . and was taken out by mob force and put to death.

Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the first as mayor, the second as one of the city council, and some fifteen others were charged with riot, for the destruction of the Nauvoo Expositor press and office. R. D. Foster, F. M. Higbee, Wilson Law, and some others had become dissatisfied and had started the Expositor to spread all their filthy allegations before the public. The city council, by resolution, declared it a nuisance, and ordered the mayor and marshal to abate it. It was abated. Charges were filed against them for riot before Justice of the Peace Robert Smith, of Carthage, one of the most bitter anti-Mormons in the county, and captain of Carthage Greys, an independent military organization. Warrants were placed in the hands of Constable Bettisworth, and he went to Nauvoo to arrest the men. But it was not until Joseph and Hyrum voluntarily rode to Carthage and surrendered to the custody of the constable that they were arrested. This was done the morning of June 25, 1844. Accompanied by the constable they went to see Gov. T. Ford, who promised them protection against personal violence, which had been threatened, and that they should have a fair and impartial trial. At about eight o'clock that morning Joseph and Hyrum were arrested on a charge of treason sworn out before the same justice, Robert F. Smith; Augustine Spencer and Henry O. Norton, complainants. At four o'clock that afternoon Joseph, Hyrum, and thirteen others were taken before Justice Robert F. Smith to be tried for the charge of riot, in destroying the press, Expositor, etc., and were admitted to bail, to await further proceedings, J. S. Fulmer, Ed Hunter, Dan Jones, John Benbow as sureties. Nothing was said or done about the charge for treason.

About dark the constable came with a mittimus issued by Smith, justice, and demanded that Joseph and Hyrum should go to jail on the charge of treason, on a false statement that the trial had been begun, but was postponed. By counsel, Woods and Reid, they appealed to the Governor, who refused them aid. So Capt. Smith took his troops and violently lodged the two in jail. John Taylor, Willard Richards, John P. Green, S. Markham, Dan Jones, J. S. Fulmer, Dr. Southwick, of Amboy, Illinois, and L. D. Wasson went with them.

The morning of the 26th Joseph wrote and asked the Governor for an interview. At 9:30 a. m. Gov. Ford came to the jail and had a lengthy talk with Joseph. At that interview Smith distinctly charged the Governor with knowing that the hostilities were commenced by the mob; that the Nauvoo Legion had been ordered out upon an order of the Governor himself; that the Saints had not broken or transgressed the law. The Governor on parting with them again promised them protection, and fair treatment before the courts.

At 2:30 Constable Bettisworth went to the jail and demanded the prisoners, but was refused by the jailer on the ground that they were in his charge until released by due course of law. Again Captain Smith with a detail from the Carthage Greys took the men and went before Justice Robert Smith with them. They asked for time to secure witnesses, but were opposed. Finally at five o'clock in the afternoon, Smith adjourned court until next day at noon to allow the accused to get witnesses. Subsequently and without notice Smith continued the case until the 29th.

The next morning, the 27th, Ford refused to permit visitors to the jail, and made preparations to go to Nauvoo. Frank Worrell, officer of the guard, told Dan Jones that neither Joseph, his brother, nor any who remained with them, would see the sun set that day. This Dan Jones told the Governor that threats were being made, but Ford laughed at him. The Governor went to Nauvoo, and left the guard from the Greys to protect the jail. The rest is known.

They were illegally detained in jail at the suggestion of Governor Ford himself, who may have thought that no violence was intended though it was clearly stated to him that there was. So it will be seen that it was on a charge of treason, technically, that they were to be held, but were in the jail as a precaution against violence from the mob, and not for safe-keeping as prisoners usually are.—Peoria, Illinois, Journal, June, 1895.

LE PLONGEON ON MEXICO.

THE Review of Reviews for July, in an article on "Mexico as the cradle of man's primitive traditions," publishes some of the results of Dr. Augustus le Plongeon's remarkable researches in Yucatan. M. le Plongeon has spent twelve years in exploring and excavating the ruins of lost cities in that interesting country, and is thoroughly familiar with their antiquities. As a result of these investigations, he has become convinced that Yucatan is the long-sought "cradle of the human race." The Review publishes Dr. le Plongeon's speculations for what they are worth, but his laborious research is certainly commendable, and has brought to light much valuable material; it is to acquaint American readers with the wonderful remains of prehistoric civilizations that lie across our Southern boundary that attention is directed to his discoveries.

In the first place, it was obviously necessary to find, if possible, a key to the hieroglyphics in which the mural inscriptions are written, and to the solution of this problem Dr. le Plongeon directed all his efforts. For a long time his attempts in this direction were futile, and it was only after the most prolonged and careful analysis of the characters that he at length stumbled upon a clue. The discovery came about in this way: he happened to observe that certain signs carved on the walls of one of the buildings closely resembled those of the ancient Egyptian alphabet, with which he was familiar; this led him to seek for further points of resemblance, which he also found. The next step was to determine the language of the inscriptions. Knowing how excessively conservative are the aborigines of Yucatan in all respects, Dr. le Plongeon inferred that probably the language spoken by them at the present day might have at least some affinity with that of the mysterious writings on the walls. To satisfy himself on this head, he devoted himself to patient study of the living tongue as spoken by the fierce and warlike tribes known as the Quiches, who dwell amidst the fastnesses of the mountains in Guatemala, and who have maintained their independence against all invaders. These tribes are the direct descendants of the ancient Mayas, and, as Dr. le Plongeon discovered, they have retained the ancient language of their ancestors in almost its pristine purity.

This Maya language is one of the very oldest tongues known to us, quite as old as Sanskrit, if not still more ancient. By giving to the mural characters the same phonetic value which they possess in the language of the Quiches, the doctor found that they formed intelligible words and phrases, and he quickly then perceived that the language of the inscriptions was identical with that still spoken by the aborigines. The construction of the entire alphabet followed, and with that key Dr. le Plongeon has succeeded in fully deciphering these hitherto incomprehensible hieroglyphics. The comparison of the hieratic alphabet of the Mayas with that of the ancient Egyptians reveals a similitude which amounts practically to identity. Dr. le Plongeon furthermore points out that there exists a singularly close resemblance between the grammatical forms and the syntax of the two tongues, many of the words and characters having a precisely similar meaning in the two languages. Stranger still, the initial letters of the Maya names for the various objects which constitute the Egyptian alphabet are the very letters so represented; from this it would seem, therefore, that both of these people acquired the art of writing from the same source, or that one of them taught the art to the other.

Dr. le Plongeon next turned his attention to the few known MSS. of the Mayas which escaped destruction at the hands of fanatical Bishop Landa, who accompanied the Spanish invaders. These MSS. are written on sheets of parchment prepared from deer skin, in the colored characters of an alphabet which is supposed to have been formulated after the invasion of the Nahaults in the early centuries of the Christian era. The Mayas are also known to have made a species of paper from the bark of the mulberry tree by a process similar to that employed by the Egyptians in preparing the papyrus. Of the extant MSS. the most important is that known as the Troano MS., which is in the British Museum; it is a very ancient work, dealing mainly with the subjects of geology and history, and it is furnished with numerous illustrations. This Dr. le Plongeon has succeeded in translating, and from it we learn that in ancient times the peninsula of Yucatan was called "Mayax," meaning the "first or primitive land." It gave its name to the whole empire of the Mayas, which extended from Tehuantepec on the north to the Isthmus of Darien on the south, and thus comprised all these countries which to-day constitute Central America. The two chief cities were Uxmal, which was the city of government, and Chichin-Itza, which was the great metropolis and the center of the ancient Maya civilization, whither came men of learning from all parts of the world. In the illustrations of the Troano MS. some of these visitors are depicted as bearded men like the ancient Assyrians. The ruins of these cities still exist, and to them Dr. le Plongeon devoted his chief attention.—From "Mexico as the Cradle of Man's Primitive Traditions," in the July Review of Reviews.

FAITH.

IF, as the Apostle Paul states in his letter to the Hebrews, "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," as the record stands in the King James' Version of the Scripture; it must stand as the modified form of confidence, or unproved consciousness of the things hoped for, but not seen.

To us the Inspired Version gives the same scripture, in different words:—

Now, faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.—Heb. 11:7.

This leaves no necessity to modify the meaning to make it convey the impression which it is evident the Apostle intended to make; that in the absence of proof by which knowledge is produced in regard to things stated, or promised, there should arise in the mind an assurance or confidence almost absolute that the things were or would be; and that this was faith.

Cavilers are wont to deride the Christian because the latter assumes to believe in certain things appertaining to the world to come, and man's duty toward them upon faith; claiming that as no evidence tangible alike to the unbelieving and the man of faith, is produced, therefore the faith stated to exist is a grave mistake and those holding it are deceived.

However, there are great differences in men, the result of natural endowments. Some men see where and what others cannot, even in the physical world. Some perceive things that are, and things that must be by reason of those things which are; while others see not, or are bewildered by what they do see, the things seen having no relation one with another. Whatever this faculty may be called in the material world, it is certain that the apostle writing in regard to the spiritual realm meant to state clearly what he understood faith to be.

We cannot, and do not see God, the creator of the universe, in our temporal life; and yet we are constantly surrounded by those things which in their mute ministrations to our necessities, and our wants as well, constantly testify of him; for in countless ways these things breathe forth by their very existence the power, wisdom, goodness, and love of their Creator; and yet in, nor on any one of them is his name inscribed. They are an assurance of the thing hoped for, the evidence that God does exist, and that neither his existence nor his attributes are misunderstood by us, the things which are not seen being comprehended by the things which are.

The faith which willingly accepts the existence of God as a fact; and subjects the thoughts, words, and acts of life to the direction and subordination of the consciousness of that fact, and that God will reward, or punish according to merit, or demerit, fits and prepares a man for all the main conditions of the life that now is, and for the most serious exigencies that are possible to an existence on earth in the flesh. The want of this sort of faith causes bad moral development and final shipwreck of life and its best issues.

The prayer, "Lord, help thou mine unbelief," is not meaningless to the man who values life and its possibilities. It evinces trust in God, and confesses distrust in self. It acknowledges dependence and consciousness of human weakness, and accepts the situation with an appeal to the only source whence strength and help can come.

The faith once delivered to the Saints included in its wide reach this confidence in God as a result of an obedience to the commands of God through Jesus Christ. It was the addition of faith to faith, as it is written, "the just shall live by faith."

Let no man be ashamed of his faith in God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

DOES IT SIGNIFY ANYTHING? IF SO, WHAT?

THE following remarkable dream of Joseph Smith the Seer as related by W. W. Phelps is published in Millennial Star, vol. 39, p. 837:—

In June, 1844, when Joseph Smith went to Carthage and delivered himself up to Governor Ford, I accompanied him, and while on the way thither, he related to me and his brother Hyrum the following dream: He said:—

"While I was at Jordon's, in Iowa, the other night, I dreamed that myself and my brother Hyrum went on board a large steamboat, lying in a small bay, near the great ocean. Shortly after we went on board there was an alarm of fire, and I discovered that the boat had been anchored some distance from the shore, out in the bay, and that an escape from the fire, in the confusion, appeared hazardous; but, as delay was folly, I and Hyrum jumped overboard, and tried our faith at walking upon the water.

"At first we sank in the water nearly to our knees, but as we proceeded we increased in faith, and were soon able to walk upon the water. On looking towards the burning boat in the east we saw that it was drifting towards the wharf and the town, with a great flame and clouds of smoke; and, as if by whirlwind, the town was taking fire, too, so that the scene of destruction and horror of the frightened inhabitants was terrible.

"We proceeded on the bosom of the mighty deep, and were soon out of sight of the land. The ocean was still; the rays of the sun were bright, and we forgot all the troubles of our mother earth. Just at that moment I heard the sound of a human voice, and, turning round, saw my brother, Samuel H., approaching towards us from the east. We stopped and he came up. After a moment's conversation he informed me that he had been lonesome back, and made up his mind to go with me across the mighty deep. We all started again, and in a short time were blessed with the first sight of a city, whose gold and silver steeples and towers were more beautiful than any I had ever seen or heard of on earth. It stood, as it were, upon the western shore of the mighty deep we were walking on, and its order and glory seemed far beyond the wisdom of man. While we were gazing upon the perfection of the city, a small boat launched off from the port, and almost as quick as thought, came to us. In an instant they took us on board and saluted us with a welcome, and with music such as is not on earth.

"The next scene, on landing, was more than I can describe; the greeting of old friends, the music from a thousand towers, and the light of God himself, at the return of three of his sons, soothed my soul into a quiet and a joy that I felt as if I were truly in heaven. I gazed upon the splendor, I greeted my friends. I awoke, and lo, it was a dream!

"While I meditated upon such a marvelous scene, I fell asleep again, and behold, I stood near the shore of the burning boat, and there was a great consternation among the officers, crew, and passengers of the flaming craft, as there seemed to be much ammunition or powder on board. The alarm was given that the fire was near the magazine, and in a moment suddenly it blew up with a great noise, and sank in deep water with all on board. I turned to the country east, among the bushy openings, and saw William and Wilson Law endeavoring to escape from the wild beasts of the forest, but two lions rushed out of a thicket and devoured them. I awoke again."

I will say that Joseph never told this dream again, as he was martyred about two days after. I relate from recollection as nearly as I can.—Phelps.

Is it possible that the boat represents the organization which was left by Joseph and Hyrum when they took their departure for the pearly gates closely followed by Samuel, and that she has taken on a cargo that will eventually prove her annihilation, with the destruction of all who remain on board?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

THE Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, in general session at Boston, is creating quite a stir. Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows, of the World's Parliament of Religions fame, thus states the movement in a telegram to the Chicago Tribune:—

The Christian Endeavor movement means better churches, more inspiring prayer meetings, a revival of civic righteousness, the ultimate regeneration of our cities, and the uprising of the young men and women of our churches in behalf of the world's evangelization.

No doubt this movement will result in the accomplishing of much moral good by the young people of the various denominations. Our readers doubtless stand ready to credit this movement with its good intentions and all the good it succeeds in doing. We believe, however, they also share with us the opinion that the Endeavor movement lacks the true basis or groundwork of success; the life-giving, inspiring, motive power of the Spirit of truth, which as "the gift of the Holy Spirit," prompts and directs the disciple in all his work, and moves upon those who "obey the truth" and become "fellow heirs" with others in the "kingdom" or "government of God."

The kingdom of God is a specific, definite, clearly defined organization devised by "the author and finisher of our faith," with power within it to redeem the world. So far as the various movements among men work in harmony with it they may accomplish a degree of good. They can never evangelize the world, however, by using other means than the God-appointed method or plan. Any means out of harmony with God, or lacking his approval, cannot obtain his sanction, cannot be correct, hence cannot receive "power" by which men are to "become the sons of God."

As we understand it, it is our mission to call attention to the gospel method that men and women may avail themselves of the greatest and only true opportunity they can have,—the right to ask and receive power to know God and Jesus Christ, and do the will of the Father. We do this not in any sectarian sense nor narrowness of spirit, nor in boasting spiritual arrogance; but in the spirit of meekness and interest in our fellow man, as those entitled with us to place and privilege in the house and benefits of our common Father.

We wish some of our apt, capable representatives could go among these young people and succeed in getting a hearing and in placing before them a plain, terse statement of the faith and its restoration; in friendly spirit, in true interest in their welfare. Can it not be done among these various societies? Have we, though often refused a hearing, exhausted every means within our power of reaching these people, popular and entrenched behind the leading religious organizations of the day, as they are? We think we have not and that opportunities of reaching them are better than in the past, and becoming better and more numerous as a more liberal and inquiring spirit prevails.

As a rule, it is not the people themselves, but their leaders—their ministers and local heads—that would deny us access to them. With a fair chance—the right kind of an appeal to the people—these barriers often give way and a means of communication is open, and half the work is done.

The Apostle Paul met every phase of opposition peculiar to the age in which he lived, but prevailed against it; and steadily, persistently continued his work until he defeated Jewish fanaticism, Gentile superstition, and philosophy, and established churches right in their centers of religious and philosophic thought. We can do the same thing and are destined to do it. We have succeeded so far in the face of the strongest kind of opposition and most discouraging combinations of circumstances possible to conceive of; for the enemy of righteousness has left no means untried to defeat the success of God's work.

We shall yet have to besiege the cities, towns, and hamlets systematically and more closely study the most successful means of aggressive and defensive warfare. The situation is constantly changing, requiring the adoption of new methods to take advantage of it; and to feel the force and power of doing, to believe one can do is often more than half the battle.

We hope to see a constantly growing army of intelligent workers among the ministry and the laity—young people, middle aged, and old—pressing the battle to the gate, winning the deserved favor of the people where they reside, by uprightness of conduct and the manifestation of a true, friendly spirit with neighbors and friends; thus cultivating an interest and influence for good by which they can reach them, heart and mind, with the message of peace and good will; while the ministry labor in the same spirit, meeting the emergencies that demand aggressiveness when necessary.

The movement of these young people in the Endeavor Society should stimulate us to fully appreciate the better opportunities and privileges that are ours and to meet the greater responsibilities imposed upon us thereby.

If we are truly converted we will work diligently, faithfully, intelligently, from a natural love of and interest in the work of God. We will work unitedly, humbly, intelligently, too, for no one who is sufficiently prepared for his work can work with other than pure motives, true methods, or intelligently. The Spirit of God prompts to goodness, to trueness, and brings intelligence—if sufficiently heeded; if fervently sought; if humbly obeyed.

No one, in any sphere of action, need be a hindrance, but should and can be a help; all can "adorn the doctrine;" all can thus contribute to its advancement. In this sense the kingdom of God is a unity, a society of Christian endeavor whose members are to discern and advance all truth in every sphere and branch of life's activities. We can and ought to surpass every other organization in moral and general good. Our righteousness ought to exceed that of others bound by the traditions of their fathers.

LOCAL IRRIGATION.

THE irrigation problem is a very important one, involving as it does the food supplies and vast material interests of millions of people. Our readers in general, especially those "making homes" as agriculturists will be interested in the following account of a local irrigation plant:—

GOODLAND, Kan., July 9.—The first irrigation plant erected by a State east of the Rocky Mountains was completed here to-day and formally put in operation by the State Irrigation Board. There were many visitors present from Colorado, Nebraska, and Kansas, and the event was made much of by the people of this city and county. The exercises consisted of speeches by irrigation experts, among them being Judge J. Emory, lecturer of the National Irrigation Association, and W. B. Sutton of the Kansas Irrigation Board. The well of irrigation station is a six-inch tubular, 166 feet deep. The pump is a single stroke and will lift 150 gallons a minute. The power is furnished by a gasoline engine. It is estimated that the plant will irrigate eighty acres of land.

IN CORRECTION.

It appears that the memory of Sr. Frances A. Ernst, was a little at fault, as to the names of those administering to her at the time she has stated she was helped to receive her sight. The following letter from Elder T. J. Franklin, and note from Sr. Ernst will be all the correction needed, we think:—

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 29, 1895.

FRANCES A. ERNST-LUMLEY;

My Dear Sister:—I write to inform you of a mistake made in your testimony made before a Justice of the Peace in regard to the persons officiating in your confirmation, and in the anointing your eyes. It was E. C. Brand, Thomas J. Franklin, and Jesse Cravens who were the three elders that confirmed you and anointed your eyes, after you had been baptized by Elder E. C. Brand. Thomas J. Franklin anointed your eyes after the confirmation, and E. C. Brand sealed the anointing, and Elder Jesse Cravens assisted in the administration. The reason that I have written to you is because I have testified many times in Independence, and many other places, of the power of God in opening your eyes through the administration of E. C. Brand, Thomas J. Franklin, and Jesse Cravens.

It appears in the Herald that you were confirmed by E. C. Brand and Thomas Dobson. I do not know the elder only by seeing his name in the Herald or Ensign; but I was well acquainted with Elder E. C. Brand and Elder Jesse Cravens. At that time I had just returned from Utah, where E. C. Brand and myself had been preaching together. We met in the conference at Park's Mills, near Council Bluffs, Iowa, I coming from Far West and Bro. Cravens and Bro. Brand from Utah, and if you remember who preached that morning; it was Elder E. C. Briggs; Thomas J. Franklin and Bishop I. L. Rogers presided over the afternoon meeting, when you gave in your name for baptism. Elder E. C. Brand baptized you and Elders E. C. Brand and Thomas J. Franklin and Jesse Cravens confirmed you; and also administered to you, anointing you with holy oil in the name of Jesus Christ, to restore to you your eyesight, which was accomplished by faith and prayer. Praise be to his holy name. All that I would like is to see that mistake rectified if it is possible to be done.

Please write me as soon as you can. My address is, THOMAS J. FRANKLIN, Independence, Jackson Co., Missouri.

DELOIT, Iowa, July 8th, '95.

Dear Brn:—I enclose letter. I have made a mistake, as you will see. If necessary, you will please correct; and oblige. God ever bless you all.
SISTER FANNIE.

A NEW TRACT.

BRO. R. E. GRANT has written a small tract containing questions and answers on the first principles of the gospel, for the information of persons who know little or nothing of the faith.

The tract is written in simple language, plain in statement, and brief in its wording,—just the thing for new beginners; a sort of faith primer of the first principles. It is entitled, "Questions and Answers." It ought to prove helpful in the mission work.

Two pages; price 3 cents per dozen, 15 cents per 100. On sale at the Herald Office, tract No. 5, order by number.

SOME time ago we received from Bro. William Woodhead a series of articles on the Book of Mormon, which we have delayed publishing for the reason that there has been quite a run of articles of the kind running in the HERALD, and we thought the matter a little overdone for a period, hence waited until the article will be opportune again.

There is much transpiring in the world of research, every day almost, that has a bearing on this most interesting subject, some of which might modify views already in print, if known to the writers. Brn. H. A. Stebbins and George F. Weston have been engaged of late in arranging a map of Central America as the same is described in the Book of Mormon according to their reading. It is quite elaborate; and when completed will, we think, add interest to the study of the book.

Dr. le Plongeon has an interesting article in the Review of Reviews for July, that will be read with interest by those delighting in the study of archæology and the Book of Mormon.

A LATE press telegram announces another "prophetic conference" as among the possibilities. What will they do in the end thereof?

TO HOLD A PROPHETIC CONFERENCE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 8.—A conference is to be held at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall in this city next Monday, to discuss the advisability of calling a prophetic conference here in the fall. The Rev. Joseph Kyle, of the United Presbyterian Church, S. P. Harbison, and W. S. Miller, prominent workers in established churches, to-day issued invitations to twenty-five clergymen and lay church workers to meet Monday and examine the Scriptures with a view to preparing for the conference. They say present conditions, notably the political, sociological, and industrial disturbances, indicate the approach of the fulfillment of the prophecy touching the Savior's second coming to earth. They feel the subject has been sufficiently studied. They fear their movement will be classed among those of cranks and they refuse to make public all the details of their proposed conference.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH WARD, Pomona, Missouri, July 4:—

I have returned from Wheeling, Arkansas, a new place where none of our brethren had ever been,—not even a Saint or acquaintance there prior to my visit. I had large crowds to hear me, and the Campbellites challenged me for discussion. I accepted, and they are looking for some one of their ministers whom they will indorse as a gentleman, sound in the faith, to meet me and rout what they term Mormonism from their midst. I baptized two, Bro. A. A. Farra and his better half, and left several more investigating. I will go to Coats, Arkansas, on the 6th, thence to Ravenden Spring. I am traveling alone, and most of the time in an entirely new field,

I am feeling well in the work, though I think I have the hardest field in the United States.

Bro. W. W. Blair writing from San Francisco, California, July 5:—

From what I learn, church work is in fair condition throughout California. I preached here last Sunday night; we attended prayer meeting at Sr. Anthony's last Wednesday night; to-night we have service at Bro. Saxe's; Sunday I am to preach twice here, or once here and once in Oakland, and Monday next, or Tuesday, go South to Downey for twelve or more days. Letters from San Bernardino press me to reach there soon. I shall probably remain South till August 25. It was manifestly best that I came via the U. P. & C. P. route, for my interviews with Brn. Burton, Gilbert, Harris, Price, Lincoln, Parkin, Daley, and others, have resulted well. Sr. Blair is enjoying the trip well and is a good helper in gospel work.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Drain, Oregon, July 4:—

I am in my field of labor, but am greatly afflicted bodily. As I see so much to do and am able to do so little, it makes me feel almost discouraged, but I greatly hope and desire that I may yet be able to gather some of the sheaves that are lying around. The harvest truly is great in this part; there are twenty-eight places that are now urging me to come, and nearly all of them want me to come immediately; but I am greatly hampered and can only go as the Lord opens up the way. I hope the Saints will pray for this mission.

T. J. Sheppard, Maysville, Arkansas, July 6:—

The good work is beginning to roll here. Many who have been rocked to sleep in the old cradle of sectarianism are being aroused. Two noble young people, husband and wife, were baptized near this place on the 1st of July—the first fruits of our labor in Arkansas. The Saints feel much encouraged and are striving and praying that the truth of the gospel may be fully made known in this section of country.

Bro. Morris T. Short, Peoria, Illinois, July 4:—

Stephen A. Douglas, of Chicago, speechified here at 2:30 this p.m.; but he could not hold a candle to his illustrious father, I trow. The races, and the parks, and to-night the theaters will draw. It is not much pleasure to me to hear this great din, and smell this powder smoke; but old glory has the field to-day. This glint, and gloss, and sham, and hypocrisy that are prevalent, I see on all sides, but I must seek to tide through and abide in truth and right.

Bro. J. B. Roush, at Wilmington, Illinois, the 9th inst:—

I spent Sunday at Mission, and on Sunday afternoon had the pleasure of baptizing four candidates. Tent work here at Wilmington is moving nicely.

Bro. J. A. Grant, Detroit, Michigan, July 10:—

Bro. W. J. Smith and the writer are holding forth in the new gospel tent with a fair interest manifest. This is a city of upwards of three hundred thousand. What shall the harvest be?

Sr. Emma Miller, Little Sioux, Iowa, July 9:—

The two days' meeting at this place, July 6 and 7, was a success, with Brn. T. W. Williams and G. H. Hilliard as speakers. One was baptized who was a member of the Christian Church at Mondamin. Many strangers attended the meetings and the sermons seemed directed especially to them, and they were spoken highly of except by a few religionists who were established in their views. Some who are on probation thought their preacher might profit by hearing the sermons if he would attend the meetings.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. R. J. ANTHONY baptized L. L. Booth, at Vernon, Idaho, June 28, which has brought local wrath down on Bro. Booth. The teachers (Utah church) called on him, to labor with him; though he had been there eighteen months without having been looked after. Verily, the path of the wouldbe faithful is beset by thorns. How fervently those who are happily located with associate Saints should sympathize with and pray for the scattered and isolated ones.

The Herald Office cannot fill further orders for the Gospel Quarterly, Senior Grade, for July, August, and September. The supply is exhausted; please take notice.

Letter from Bro. E. F. Shupe, Denver, Colorado, July 8. Bro. J. W. Gillen had baptized seven a short time ago.

Bro. E. W. Depue has baptized three at Tiff City, Missouri, and expects to baptize others soon. He states that citizens of that place offer to donate a site and several hundred dollars in money to anyone who will build a first-class flouring mill. They regard it a good point for such a mill. Write Bro. Depue if interested.

Bro. C. E. Blodgett requests us to announce the baptism of Bro. N. D. Lacey, who resides near Shelton, Nebraska. This brother comes to the church after a long-continued investigation of its faith.

We wish to obtain two or three copies of the first issue of the Gospel Quarterly, Primary Grade. Send us a copy or two if you can spare them.

Bishop Kelley, accompanied by Sr. Kelley, visited and held services with the Saints at Pleasanton, Iowa, on Sunday, the 14th inst.

Bro. J. R. Lambert left home for Blandinsville and other portions of his field in Illinois, during the week of the 7th. He reports many and increasing demands for labor, with comparatively few men to respond. The field widens, and as in former times the laborers are all too few.

Farmers in Southwestern Iowa and Northern Missouri, are harvesting a good crop of oats; prospects for corn are excellent, and hay promises a better yield than was expected. As a result, most of our agriculturists are in good spirits.

Court Kalnoky, for fifteen years Prime Minister of Austria-Hungary and a strong Catholic, has been succeeded through the influence of Baron Banffy, a Hungarian, Liberal, and anti-Clerical. Indiscreet actions of the papal nuncio brought about this change in the government. There are prospects of continued growth of anti-Catholic sentiment and the tendency to separate political and religious affairs in the empire.

The French Chamber of Deputies has adopted a motion asking its government to negotiate a permanent treaty of arbitration with the United States.

TO YOU.

WITH good crops and returing prosperity we trust the Saints will not forget their obligations to the Herald Office. As the grocer and dry goods merchant want their pay, so also do the printers and paper manufacturers. We request on behalf of the office management that the amounts due the publishing department be remembered and remitted—not as the last consideration, but as obligations as necessary to be met as any other.

The office needs what is due it; its credit must be kept good by prompt payment of its bills. Other tracts and publications will be issued just as soon as money necessary to publish comes to hand. Your remittance means that you have the practical interest in the welfare of the work that no neglect shall permit a department of it to be crippled.

How does your label stand? What do you owe the office on book account? Please remit.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"BEAR YE ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS."

INTO the morning hours so many tasks were crowded. The noon brought added heat, but no surcease of toil. And when the cool sea breeze at last reached the fair valley among the mountains, it swayed the willow boughs most temptingly. But inside the little cottage was many a step to take, four little forms to clothe and feed. Beloved as they were, the mother longed for a little change, for she bore her load of care alone, but for a little while each year. How she longed for a ride out among the orchards, heavy laden with fruitage, or the stretches of meadow,—the fragrant alfalfa meadows,—and down by the cool, clear mountain stream. A cry of baby voices, the click of the sewing machine, filled the little home, where she spent day after day—without change of scene? Nay, thank God there are those ever ready to "bear another's burdens," even when their own were heavy. Brighter and brighter grow the galaxy of helping hands outstretched in times of perplexity, care, pain, and sorrow. How often a cheery voice called from the easy, wide-seated carriage, "Thought you would like a ride." How the children shouted from the vine-wreathed porch as she ties the halter strap, gives sleek brown Nell a pat, runs up the path to help get babies ready. Ah, that ride! what a rest, down through the busy streets, amid the sounds of commerce and life, then on through shaded country roads, past those longed for scenes, orchard, meadow, and stream. The ringing sound of the mowers, the call of friendly voices—ah, home looked so much rested, too. The burden had been lifted. Ah, how they throng about her memories, fair young friends and sisters with soft, white, untried hands and happy, hopeful hearts. Mothers with hands hardened by toil but hearts grown more tender by sorrow and care; dear old white-haired friends, with bent forms and trembling limbs, but a world of sympathy. Ah me! They are going, going, so gladly for them, but missed by us so sadly. That hour of death must come to all, and one day the fond heart within the cottage met the foe upon her heart's threshold. They were there. Those ready to help bear the burden, those from whom she had stood aloof and deemed strangers, gave proof of their many virtues, and those whom she had learned to trust. The good and true drew closer. Their own bleeding hearts bled anew as they stood over the dying, and sought to comfort the living. Far, far away those who could not be near sent upward upon wings of prayer the name of the one who was bearing a burden alone. Alone. Are we alone when all about are willing hands and loving hearts? Bear we one another's burdens?

Standing by that open grave, while the loved one was lowered to rest, a strong, gentle arm stole about the mourner's waist, giving support to the trembling frame, while a woman's heart throbbing in unison with her woman's heart beat close to her own. A woman's sympathy and tender thoughtfulness for another woman betrayed itself, not in word, but in a loving act. A stranger, maybe; at least, just who she was the weeping one never knew. Only she helped to bear the burden.

Some one heaped high the casket with flowers,—great clusters of white lilies bound with snowy ribbons, violets, daisies, roses, and ferns, "Bear ye one another's burdens" in a thousand dainty, tender, loving little things. She had called these people strangers; she never should again. How her mind flew back to her first meeting with some of these very ones. Of them all there were some whom she remembered now particularly. She had not been sure of how to treat them. Her own heart went out to one, with great grey eyes and a sweet, low voice—but a word let fall. This one was haughty and proud; that one hated the Mormons. Here a little, and there a little, until she met them with a coolness and reserve unnecessary, to say the least, and an indifference which was death blows to friendly overtures. From time to time they met in public places or by the bedside of an afflicted one, a friend of each, but meeting was all, until that day when a low voice spoke from the open door, a slender figure approached with outstretched hands, "We have heard of your trouble and come to bear it with you." Dumb with surprise and shame she stood a moment, thinking, "Sweet, gray-eyed Kate, you have been in a deeper sorrow than this, a living, growing sorrow, intermingling with shame, hope, despair, heartache, and toil." Not until a few days before had she known of it, though; then through the medium of the physician, who recommended her as nurse. "She a nurse?" Then came the story of her trouble. Brave little woman! The one you offered to comfort was not the one who sought to know and comfort you, else she might have helped you bear your burden.

Another came who came timidly and proved a woman free from the thing that had kept them strangers for years, with a half block between. What was it? When she called on the mother with her little ones the mother thought, "I like her; she will be a nice neighbor." But a voice had said, "You don't want to take your children there. They don't have any of their own and want no one else's." "Ah, so!" and the children never went, so of course the mother did not, for it is a trait of these mothers to dislike places where babies are unwelcome. And what of this thing? Was it true? About as true, no doubt, as are many such accusations. A home without children it was, where no place could they have been more eagerly welcomed. Here were two whom she might have helped bear heavy burdens. Had she not clothed herself about with iciness? Were there not more? A glimpse down the aisles of the past—she turned with a sick heart. A burden-bearing throng filled those aisles. Burdens she might have lifted if only for a little while. Weary mothers like herself, only twice as heavy were their burdens. Bent forms of aged ones, breaking hearts and aching feet, throbbing heads and toiling hands. They were such little things. Pale faces, and sad, tear-wet eyes. Hours of sorrow, pain, affliction, poverty, shame hung about them like shadowy curtains, hours she had tripped lightly by, nor touched them with her own life's sunshine.

The past was that. What of the future? "Bear ye one another's burdens," ye young, ye daughters, ye mothers; past, present, and future mothers. Ye young, help the aged with your own bright sunshine. Know you not they stand where you must shortly stand? Help the weary new mothers and the weary old mothers. There are few who love not the company of the young. Make them all young with you. Do not be afraid.

It is not so very long since I heard a voice saying, "I cannot go for a ride to-day. My baby is just asleep, and I must bake bread and wash dishes while she sleeps. She is teething, you know." The answer was practical as the foregoing: "Come on. Take these lines. I can wash dishes, and bake bread, and I have cared for babies enough to know just how."

Homely, was it not? Beautiful! The dishes she washed, and the bread, you say, Yes; her every movement and touch was beautiful. While the weary mother tumbled her boys and girls into the buggy that had carried many such happy loads before, the little boy and girl of the dear, good owner had been laid away together in one little grave, and away they went behind the trusty old horse. A long draught of nature's elixir, change of scene, and the blue sky above, and brown, green earth beneath. You see these people with means of riding about, some of them, know how to bear the burden awhile. "Bear ye one another's burdens." Deformity, perplexity, poverty, shame, despair, infirmity, toil, care, loneliness, sorrow, pain, heartsickness, and brain weariness, all or only one. Let us bear it a little while. They must bear it all the time, all alone, in many cases.

There are sick and lonely ones who need not your alms. Go share with them for a little time your own buoyant health; steep the hour so full of joyousness and sympathy that it will be a constant pleasure to them to think upon it. Ye mothers, mothers whose birdies have left the home nest, mothers whose little ones cling about your knee, mothers who linger yet in the happy world of girlhood, bear ye one another's burdens. Stand by each other. You are women? Then be women in deed and in purpose. Rise to the very heights of your womanhood, and if the crowning heights be something more glorious than motherhood, it must be worth the effort—but while we rise let us dig deep and build our womanhood on a strong, broad, firm foundation. In unity is strength. "Bear ye one another's burdens." If it be to reach down from the heights and lift up, up, those below; if it be to sing a song to cheer a fainting heart; if it be a word of appreciation, a letter full of comfort and cheer; if it be washing dishes, rocking babies, taking stitches in torn garments, washing the tear stains from little neglected faces, do it, do it! Homely things fill the life of some. They know of nothing so beautiful as the life of some of our mothers, past, present, and future.

Have you not among you those who bear a double burden, and that without even the consideration they might receive from those in whose midst they live? Those who should, in view of their sisterhood, receive your help in bearing their burdens, doubled, aye, often trebled by the sacrifice made that Zion may be defended, that her ranks may be filled, her walls guarded, her pickets out, and all chosen of the best and noblest in the great, broad land? Then some mother among you is lonely, with a loneliness mixed with timidity that makes night a horror. "Foolishness!" you say. Maybe, but it is a burden to her, and sacrifice is great. "Bear ye one another's burdens." Happy day when this shall be easier to do, for not until it is will it ever be done; not until we come to the day when "Love one another" shall be our rule, our pleasure. Then shall the days be full of rejoicing, for they shall be full of good works and glad hearts, "Hearts that bear one another's burdens," because they know and love each other.

READING FOR YOUNG DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

ANYONE who has time and resolution to spend ten or fifteen minutes every day in certain exercises which will be given in detail and which require absolutely nothing else but time and persistence, may avoid the undue accumulation of adiposity in the abdomen, and retain that lightness on foot which is so desirable.

The best time for taking these exercises is in the morning immediately after leaving one's bed, and before any garments that compress the figure in any way are put on. The air of the room should be pure and sweet, so that the lungs may be benefited no less than the abdominal muscles, and the blood be purified.

1. Draw in the abdomen as far as possible, fill the lungs with air, and then raise the arms above the head till the hands meet, without moving or bending the knees, bend the body as far back as possible, and then, allowing the air to escape from the lungs gradually, bend the body as far forward as possible until the hands approach the floor. Repeat this ten times, following exactly the directions for breathing.

2. Place the hands upon the hips, akimbo, draw air into the lungs, as before, and bend forward, first to the right as far as possible, allowing the air to escape from the lungs, and then, after filling the lungs again, to the left. Repeat this exercise ten times.

3. Place the hands lightly on the breast, draw in the abdomen, fill the lungs, and turn the head and body without moving the knees or feet, as far, first to the right, and after filling the lungs again, to the left, as possible. Repeat this ten times.

4. With the arms at the side, draw in the abdomen, fill the lungs with air and raise the arms to their height above the head, keeping the lungs fully expanded, then, breathing out, allow the arms to fall slowly to the side again. Repeat this ten times.

These exercises strengthen all the muscles of the abdomen and cause in them a gradual contraction, which, as it increases, restores symmetry of form, restores the center of gravity to its proper position, and gives the exerciser a command of herself in movement that is very delightful. As hunters when short of food tighten the belt, so these exercises have a similar effect; they tighten the natural belt of the body, so that less food is required to produce the feeling of distension requisite to comfort, and as less energy needs to be spent on digestion, there is more left to be applied in other directions.—Medical Journal.

BRO. JOSEPH MORRILL, of Kansas, asks your faith and prayers in his behalf, that if it be the Lord's will he may be restored to health and live to do good in the world.

Sr. G. E. Deuel, of Garden City, Kansas, asks you to intercede in behalf of her father, Bro. William Britain. He is sorely afflicted and she earnestly desires your prayers and faith.

Sr. Anna Starkey, of San Jose, California, asks your faith and prayers in her behalf that her life may be spared to her little family, and also asks that you pray for her husband that he may have courage to obey the gospel.

Sr. Servilla Clapp, of San Jose, California, desires most earnestly that you remember her husband, Bro. Joseph Clapp, now on missionary work in Oregon. His health is very poor but he refuses to quit his post, preferring to die with the harness on. She is thankful for former intercessions, when she knows that God has heard you, and begs you will not forget her now, when the waves are going over her.

Letter Department.

FLAGLER, Iowa, July 8.

Editors Herald:—We are having good meetings here since June 29. Some questions have been presented which I have endeavored to answer according to that which is written. On the 2d inst. I was asked to speak from the text, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." (2 Cor. 6: 14.) I read the whole chapter. I tried to show that Christian people were to separate themselves from the world and devote their time and talents and all to the glory of God; and as I dealt with the evils that are in the world and appealed to Christians to abstain therefrom there were many responses, but when I got down to and examined the line closely between believers and unbelievers, using 2 Timothy 3: 1-7; Mark 16, and other places, showing how God kept his word, I asked them to decide for themselves as to who was a believer or who unbelievers, and to take advice of Paul to be separate and turn away from them; to follow no one that would lead them to reject any of God's precious promises. To this part of the subject one would suppose they were all dead in the amen corner, or they were short of breath. The preacher could at least hear himself talk.

On Sunday I baptized Bro. Daniel James, a man of family. A large attendance gathered at the waters where I talked to them on baptism. They were quiet and orderly.

The M. E. people were holding their quarterly meetings here in the forenoon, and as all the meetings here are held in the Lyceum Hall, which is open for all, and whoever has regular appointments here must give way for protracted meetings, I attended the M. E. services in the morning and did not accept of the invitation to commune with them. At night I told them the reason why I could not commune with them, calling attention to the first article of faith. I could not recognize their god as thus described, as the God of the Saints; and as Presbyterians and Methodists here commune together, I had to examine their god along with the Methodist's, and as the M. E. pastor and another preacher of that persuasion were present, I told them if these things were not so they ought to know and would have the privilege to correct if needed. At the close the pastor announced a review on Thursday night of the 11th inst. I have secured the Seventh-day Adventists' church at Knoxville for the 10th, 11th, and 12th; so I shall not be far away if our building should be torn down, of which I feel no alarm.

Everybody is talking religion, so many seem near the kingdom, and as far as time has permitted to visit the people, I have been received kindly and with respect. I have visited people of different persuasions, making no distinction in this regard. Bro. J. M. Brown, of Leon, Iowa, was here early in the spring, and all the people I have talked with hold him in kind remembrance. Many are anxious to see and hear him again. He baptized some while here, but they have moved to Hiteman.

I see by a late Herald that there are many of the Utah elders preaching through the States. I met two in Boone county four weeks ago, but could not get them to discuss their belief in public. They defend polygamy as well as they can, in private. They deny the Adam-God and blood atonement theories. They say Latter Day Saints ought to accept anything that has the signature of Joseph Smith to it. I lectured on the difference between us and the Brighamites at Incline, Boone county. Elder Christensen, of Utah, was present. I gave him privilege to reply. He said I had misrepresented them, but when I offered to meet him in public discussion and bring their own records and prove from them every point, he declined, pleading ignorance of those things and admitting that I might have told the truth. I hope to see them return to the old paths. In bonds,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

SHERIDAN, Wyoming, July 9.

Editors Herald.—While living in this town I have never read a letter in our Herald from Sheridan, Wyoming; so I do not know if any members reside here or in the county.

This is a very nice town, nicely laid out; good residences, good business houses of all kinds of merchandise, three newspaper offices, one electric light plant, flour mill, lumber yards, brick yards, brewery, soda water works, big coal mine, and big gold mines.

It is splendid land for grain and raising cattle, horses, and sheep; and the climate is very healthy. Most of the people come here for health and pleasure, as they can see the wondrous great mountains with snow on their tops all summer long. It is a splendid place for fishing, hunting, and mountain climbing. Sheridan is fifteen years old and the Burlington and Missouri River railroad has been running through trains from Lincoln, Nebraska, to Billings, Montana, by Sheridan, Wyoming, for about one year.

The country before getting to Sheridan is very hilly, but presents a picturesque vein, which is simply grand. I have passed over this road five times to and from Nebraska City, Nebraska, so I have seen the country pretty well; and those great sand hills, written about by Elders James Kemp and C. H. Porter, one has to see those hills to really comprehend what they are. Such hills I have never seen before. I can readily comprehend the hardships of the elders in traveling on foot over such a country to preach the gospel and hunt up the members, as for miles I have traveled on the cars and never saw a house over those hills and prairies. No wonder they get footsore and tired out trying to establish the restored gospel everywhere to a dark and gainsaying world.

My desire is that all the Saints will be ready and willing to contribute of their money that the gospel may be preached in every village and city, and that the elders may never have to write any more in the Herald that they had to walk for miles because the Saints could not give them a few dimes so they could go on the cars. It is very painful to read that from the missionaries.

I have always been willing to sustain the cause with my means as well as with my talk, and I have never got any poorer by giving freely as the Lord requires of me. My desire is that the gospel may be preached here and everywhere, that all the honest may hear and obey it.

Your sister,

ANNA NIELSEN.

ARMSTRONG, Kan., July 11.

Editors Herald.—I am glad to announce that the Independence district tent is pitched in Armourdale, and clouds are flocking to hear the gospel. The writer came here on Monday and found the meetings in good progress, and we were glad to note the active part the young Saints were taking. May God bless them.

With Sr. Dora Berg as organist, Bro. Edgar Harrington with the cornet, and a number of good singers, the praises are made to float far out on the balmy evening breeze. Another pleasing feature is the excellent order; everybody seems to be interested.

We often hear persons remark, "That is truth;" "I have heard more from the Scriptures to-night than I have in three months past." Prejudice is breaking away, so the obstacles in the way are fast crumbling; even the Salvation Army's loud drum has but very little effect. Our tent is everything we could wish; the best one I ever saw of the kind. Its seating capacity is about three hundred, thanks to Bro. John May for his excellent work. Local brethren are assisting nobly.

May God speed his work here and elsewhere.

In bonds,

R. W. DAVIS.

WELLSTON, Ohio, June 29.

Editors Herald.—I suppose some of the good Saints of the Pacific Coast would like to know where I am and what I am doing; and I suppose some will be astonished to hear of me away out in Southwestern Ohio; but here I am all the same, and my health is much better than it was last year in California; and so far as health is concerned, I am well pleased with the change. But I cannot say that I like the climate or the looks of the country as well as I do California. As to the opportunities for preaching and the number that comes to hear, they are better than in California. And as to being treated well by all, I have no complaints to make.

I am now in the district tent, after waiting for about six weeks to get it brought a few miles; but I have nothing but local help so far. Bro. Kriebel, the local elder, with others of the brethren, have assisted in putting up the tent, and Bro. Kriebel has preached once; and so we are holding the fort. The attendance and attention are good with but very little disturbance on the outside, and I think our congregations will increase if the weather proves favorable and some one will come to help.

My faith is unwavering as to the ultimate success of the work, but I am often made to feel ashamed when I go into places where there is a branch of our people and get to talking with people about joining who do not belong to the church and they point out members who are in good standing and say, "They are no better than we are;" "They have made no change," and many other complaints as excuses for not obeying, saying, "I want to find a church that lives, its religion. The day of precept is past; let men live their religion, then we will join." Thinking men and women outside of all churches are looking and talking in this way. Then we see how important it is that Saints should set higher examples than all other churches or people that men seeing our good works may glorify our Father in heaven. I pray God to help all to come up higher that the work may not be hindered; for every member is either a great help or a great hindrance to the great latter-day work.

Your brother,

A. HAWS.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., June 10.

Editors Herald.—Since writing last have continued in Sydney with fair liberty and interest, baptizing some. The two to-night will make thirteen since I arrived from Melbourne, or just thirty additions to the branch in six months. A good Sunday school is one of the coming signs of permanency in Sydney. They are adopting the latest literature and methods, which of course are found in the General Sunday School Association. Their ambition is to make it the banner school of Australia.

We have seen the presence of human weakness, the cunning of the adversary, and the ever-potent Spirit in the work here. Have had enough of the latter to encourage us and make us more determined than ever to be true to self and the cause.

The branch and school were lately robbed of all their money. A sneak thief got away with nearly ten dollars.

There is some difficulty in getting the delegate system into working order in this district. It is a new thing to some and a misunderstanding of it has obtained.

Since January there has been some improvement in the commercial world.

In hope,

GOMER WELLS.

MAGNOLIA, Minn., July 10.

Editors Herald.—Since last writing Bro. Tyson and I have labored in McCook and Miner counties, South Dakota. We spent about five weeks there; preached in seven different localities; held in all about forty meetings. Bro. Howery and Rooker of the Salem branch did all they could to make our meetings a success. In all the places except one attendance was good. The people seemed willing to learn of our faith, and we feel hopeful that a good work will be done there in the future.

On the 1st of this month Bro. Howery took us to Garretson, and on the 3d we reached this place, commencing services here on the 5th and continuing till last evening when the M. E. minister demanded that the church should be closed against us. The people of this place are not in favor of such proceedings, but it seems that they could not help themselves. We are confident that our cause will not suffer by it. On last Sunday we baptized Bro. Simon Pokett of this place.

To-day Bro. Tyson returned to Garretson. He has filled appointments in different places and given good satisfaction. I do not flatter him, because I do not believe a young man starting out to preach the gospel is benefited much by flattery; all must have their own peculiar experiences in this work, but with the aid of the Spirit of God and humility, faithfulness, and persistence upon his part he will yet become an efficient worker in the church.

Generally the prospects in our field are good. We cannot reach as many places as we would like, nor stay as long in each place as might be desirable, but we intend to labor according to our best judgment, and leave results in the hand of the Master Builder.

The prospects for good crops in this part of the country are good and the farmers feel hopeful.

Yours for truth,

PETER ANDERSON.

Editors Herald:—Our mail has just arrived bearing the glad tidings from the General Conference, and we fully expected to see the name of some good brother appointed to Australia to take charge of affairs and give us some timely aid and instructions the coming year; but my expectations, I see, must be extended. The work on the New South Wales side has taken a regular boom lately, and not a few have been added to the church. Brn. Wells and Kaler are standing faithfully at their posts to feed and see that no harm comes to the lambs of the fold.

If I should say that Victoria is holding its own, that is all I think that could be said for it. I visited "Boneo," a place where there has been some labor performed in years gone by, and was hindered on the start by a concert and dance in aid of the minister of the district. This is what I call "doing evil that good may come;" but I have never seen any good come out of such kind of conduct thus far in life, and I doubt whether anyone else has.

After delivering a few sermons I was called away on account of the death of Bro. Jones, president of Hastings branch, one of the most noble, kind, fatherly Saints I have ever met. The loss to me was great, for he has been as a loving father and a true friend to me ever since I knew him. To know him was to love and admire his saintly qualities. May his rest be glorious.

I attended our district conference at Drysdale, and although there were comparatively few in attendance, the meetings were attended by an unusual, calm, and peaceful influence, which caused all to feel thankful that they were engaged in such a noble cause. Bro. William Craig was ordained a priest, and the Lord at once acknowledged his position, through prophecy, and gave suitable word of encouragement upon condition of his faithfulness. All went well to the close, and the Saints returned to their different avocations feeling glad that they had attended conference.

From there I came to Strathbogie, where I have spent one of the most enjoyable times that it has been my privilege since I engaged in ministerial labor. Every barrier seemed to be moved out of the way, and the Lord came to my rescue in a marked degree; so that the people were astonished at the doctrine. The people have given me food, money, and paid the hall rent, besides lending their presence, which is all that could be desired. I have spoken nearly every night during the month and will continue for a time. None have been baptized, although several express themselves as being convinced of the truthfulness of the work. I never enjoyed better liberty in my life, and I praise the Lord for his kind remembrance in time of need.

My faith grows stronger as I move along, and I feel assured of the ultimate triumph of truth over error and the redemption of Zion if we will only "hear what God the Lord will speak unto his people and to his Saints," and bring our lives into the line of duty.

In bonds,

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., July 5.

Editors Herald:—Four more were baptized here last Sunday; three Methodists and a Baptist deacon. All were over sixty years of age. Allow me to say to the public tent workers that I have gotten up a model for a folding bench to be used in tent or hall that to my mind is just what we need. Two dozen benches will seat one hundred and ninety-two people; and will cost not more than forty dollars; that is, twenty dollars a dozen. They are strong, handsome, and very easy to sit in; and are so constructed as to ship in the flat and two dozen of them can be set up in two dozen minutes, or taken down in the same length of time. Brn. Briggs and Kier say they are the best they have seen.

Anyone wishing to order them may do so by addressing me at Box 874, West Bay City, Michigan.

Hastily,

R. E. GRANT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 2.

Editors Herald:—Since last communicating to your columns, I have returned to America, and I feel under obligations to give an account of myself. While in the islands I wrote the First Presidency asking to be permitted to return to America for awhile at least. In due time I received answer granting my desire, and I concluded to return shortly after our April Conference. At the conference it was desired that some one be sent to the island of Rarotonga, an island under the British flag and about six hundred miles beyond Tahiti. There was no one else to go, so I decided to go, and wait a few months to return to America. I decided to go with the understanding that a great many of the people of Rarotonga could talk Tahitian, and that some of them could talk English; but when Bro. Case and I went down to Tahiti after conference we talked the matter over, after consulting several persons from Rarotonga, and finding that but very few of the natives of that island could talk either Tahitian or English, and that only in a broken way, we concluded there would not be much use for me or anyone else to go there unless with the intention of staying long enough to learn the language; and this I did not feel to do. So as the Tropic Bird was ready to start out to sea in a few days, I packed up and bade the brethren and sisters good-bye, and found that I had become considerably attached to them after a two years' sojourn among them.

Bro. and Sr. Case were thinking some of going to Rarotonga, as that is a new field, and as it is best for some new missionary to go there and learn the language. There are several islands in the group, and it is important enough for some one to go there, learn the language, and stay with them and build up the work. If we are shut out in the Society Islands, he and his wife will be almost sure to go to Rarotonga.

We were notified by the governor of the Paumotu Islands that we could have three months in which to procure permits to preach, and at the end of that time we would have to suspend labor if we did not have permission from the government. Bro. Case and I called on the United States Consul to ascertain how things were going, and he said they could stop us if they wanted to, and that possibly they might do so; but he thought it would only be a matter of time till we would be recognized as a church. If I remember correctly he said the governor had refused to grant permits to us, or the Mormons, or Adventists; so I do not know but what we are closed out by this time, as the three months are up. The next mail may bring some news about it. Bro. Case will write concerning whatever may develop. He is a noble young man and I believe will do all in his power to forward the work; and I am convinced that if he ever should make a mistake of any kind, it will be of the head and not of the heart. If Sr. Case's health is good, she will do much good in the Sunday school work, I believe.

Our conference went off smoothly. The best part of it seemed to be the organizing of the priesthood into quorums. We organized one elder's quorum, one for the priests, one for the teachers, and one for the deacons. The officers we think are all good men; and the movement we think will result in good, as it is the duty of the officers to teach the quorums "their duty" according to the rules and covenants of the church. There will be a greater effort among those enrolled in quorums to learn and come up higher; and truly there is a need of some systematic way by which the regulations of the church may be more uniformly understood among the natives. It seemed to give them all a new impetus.

After conference I went to Makatea to labor until the Evanelia should come by for me on the way to Tahiti. I preached there for three weeks; the natives opened up their large "farehimene" (music hall), and brought their large choir in and made music for me. Nearly the whole island came out to hear. We went to the waters quite often, baptizing fourteen at that place. This makes seventeen in all I have baptized since last writing to your columns.

I had a very pleasant voyage back to America, being thirty-one days on the waters. On the 12th of June we sighted again the glorious land of America. I was truly thankful to again set foot on my native land. It was quite a contrast stepping from the quiet islands into the busy streets of San Francisco. The hurry, scurry, and whirl of civilization and meeting again with Saints of my own race and language seemed so good that I could hardly realize it for awhile. The dear friends and Saints gave me a reception at Bro. Knight's, where they rendered some good music and recitations. Sr. Pearl Price gave us a recitation that was well worth what one would pay to hear and see in a whole theater.

I met Bro. and Sr. Burton at San Jose a short time ago. I have preached at San Francisco, San Jose, and Oakland since returning. I contemplate going with Bro. and Sr. Burton to a reunion in Southern California soon, if all things work favorably for me in that direction. I lecture to-night in Oakland. I desire to do all I can to help in the work.

In bonds,

J. W. GILBERT.

BEEKER, Kan., June 28.

Editors Herald.—Just arrived home to stay over the Fourth, and found Bro. James Wedlock, of St. Joseph, whose instructions have edified the Saints very much. He will preach for us on Sunday. Bro. Arthur Davis and the writer started out in our field of labor April 27. We find that this mission is in much need of ministerial work although our work is moving along nicely under the careful direction of Bro. J. T. Davis.

We have been able to open several new places with good interest being manifest and we see no reason why a glorious work cannot be done. But our capabilities of doing good in our ministerial work largely depend upon our brethren working in harmony with us and saying pleasant things about us to increase our influence; for our desire and prayer is to lighten the Saints' burdens by brightening the gospel horizon, from which the river of life is sparkling with the glory of God. The tree of life with its healing and life-giving force is in our gospel. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; Noah, Job, and the prophets, apostles, and the perfection of heavenly society is in our gospel. Everything that purifies us from sin and that will raise us to the place of immortality, and whatever we can form any conception of as desirable will be there in our gospel.

But we must bask in the forgiving smiles of God. We must have access to that exhaustless fount of vitality, the latter-day gospel. We must drink from its life-giving fountain; we must walk on its golden sands, and feel that we are no longer exiles; and that the days of our humiliation are ended. We must put off the rent garments of our warfare for the white robes of triumph, and feel that the conflict is ended and the victory gained. We must exchange the toil-worn, dusty girdle of our pilgrimage for the glorious vesture of immortality, and feel that sin and the curse can nevermore pollute us. O day of rest and triumph, why delay thy dawning. Let the angels at once be sent to gather the dispersed of Judah. Let the promise be fulfilled which bears in its train these matchless glories, in Jesus' name.

Yours in bonds,

J. W. HUDGENS.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, July 6.

Editors Herald.—After three weeks of faithful labor by Brn. Roth and Evans our tent meetings closed on Sunday evening, June 30; and notwithstanding the tent was conveniently and centrally located, and comfortably seated, and the preaching good, the attendance was never very large. Burlington is a hard place to get up an interest. We think, however, some good has been done by these meetings. Four were baptized by Bro. Roth at the close; three young ladies and the wife of a Bro. Giesch, he having been baptized about a month previous.

Of those who came out to hear we noticed that most of them were persons who had not attended our meetings before, and we have been informed that a more favorable opinion in regard to our faith has been established in the mind of the people here, so that the effort put forth has not been entirely in vain. We wish it was so that an elder could be stationed here for six months or a year and devote his labor to this city almost exclusively, much in same manner as Bro. Williams at Council Bluffs—to go out among the people in the different parts of the city as well as preaching at the appointed times and places on Sundays. By this means I believe that much good could be effected; but in a city of this size a mere notice of our meetings among dozens of other notices more attractive draws but little or no attention.

I do not want to be understood as not appreciating our good and zealous brethren who have labored and who are laboring in this district. They have the work at heart and have the esteem of all the Saints here and I believe everywhere; but this city needs the undivided attention of one elder for several months at least, and if we did not have a debt of several hundred dollars for a church building on our hands and but few who are able to assist in lifting it, we would offer to support an elder here for a year with the view of getting the city thoroughly canvassed and get the gospel before the many careless and willingly ignorant people here. But as it is, we must do the best we can under the circumstances; and while that may not come up to what we wish, yet if we succeed in doing so the Lord will hold us justified.

"SAY NOTHING BUT REPENTANCE UNTO THIS GENERATION."—No. 1.

BY ELDER E. STAFFORD.

THIS is the language of the Almighty in answer to Hyrum Smith who was desirous of being the means of doing much good in this generation:—

Say nothing but repentance unto this generation.

This was also the answer given to John and Peter Whitmer when they desired to know of the Lord that which would be of the most worth unto them. The Lord said:—

And now, behold, I say unto you, the thing which will be of the most worth unto you, will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me, that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father.

We have here the Lord's estimate of that which will be of the most worth for his elders to perform, even to declare nothing but repentance to this generation. We do not know all that might have been in the mind of the Lord when this command was given to the elders, which we believe is applicable to all who go out as ambassadors for Christ; but some thoughts of what he might have meant are suggested to our mind. He might have meant that we were not to indulge in preaching pet theories, or in riding certain hobbies, or in discoursing to those who are without the kingdom on the mysteries thereof; for Christ has said that though those who are within the kingdom are to have the mysteries given to them, those that are without are denied that privilege; we would not teach an individual abstruse theories before he had learned his alphabet. He might have meant that the gospel as it is in Christ, should be preached; not as it is in this or that man.

We remember being at a conference when the instruction at the head of this article was given to the elders going out into the gospel field, by the president of the church,—and of hearing the elders commenting on it afterwards, saying, "Shall we say nothing but repent, repent, repent?" thus, as we thought, through a misunderstanding, receiving the admonition with a species of distrust.

To our mind the command embraces the entire law of the gospel. When mankind are in sin they are in open rebellion against God, whose law is given against those things which are evil in his sight and pernicious in their effects against the welfare of his creatures, both here and hereafter; and therefore they should cease to rebel against their Creator, their benefactor, their everlasting friend, and yield obedience to him in all things; when they have done this they have repented.

The principle of repentance involves a belief in God and his Christ, whose laws have been broken; and also of the baptism of water, and of the Spirit—the mode of entrance in the kingdom of God—whereby men and women become the citizens of the kingdom of God; sons and daughters, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Then being entitled to the possession of that Spirit which “searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God;” which guides into all truth; which leads the sons of God; by which they are guided and instructed in the things of God, and progress and grow into perfect men and women in Christ Jesus. Through the goodness of God to man whom he hath created he has revealed for what purpose this earth upon which we dwell was created or formed.

The prophet Isaiah, in the forty-fifth chapter of his book, and eighteenth verse says:—

For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it; he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited.

Here we discover that the earth after its creation was to be a permanent thing, for he who formed it hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited. And if we want to know the ultimate object or purpose for which the earth was created, we can learn it by turning to the mind of the Lord concerning it, as revealed to the latter-day seer, as found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants 85: 4, which reads:—

Therefore it [the earth] must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it forever and ever; for, for this intent was it made and created; and for this intent are they sanctified.

We here have made known by the Creator himself the intent and purpose for which the earth was created; namely, that after it hath been sanctified from all unrighteousness, having filled the measure of its creation, it will be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God, and bodies who are of the celestial kingdom, or in other words, those who have in this probation so lived in obedience to the commandments of God that they have filled the measure of their creation, like the earth, and become sanctified from all unrighteousness,—they will attain to the possession of bodies that are celestial, to dwell with God upon the earth when it is celestialized. But what is first in conception is generally the last in execution, as we perceive will be the case with the earth in its final state, and with man whom God has created to inhabit it, when it shall be crowned with the glory of God, and his presence upon it. The word says:—

For, for this intent was it [the earth] made and created; evidently inferring that the ultimate purpose of its creation was conceived before the earth was formed.

Passing by the history of the creation of this earth and of man to dwell upon it, as we find it recorded in the first portion of the Book of Genesis; and without indulging in the idle speculation as to what might have been the condition of Adam had he not fallen, we come to the actual fact that man fell and entailed upon himself and posterity death, or banishment from God's presence, which would have continued to all eternity, and thus the purposes of God in the creation of this earth and of man to inhabit it, would have been frustrated, had not infinite wisdom, love, and mercy provided a Savior and Redeemer from before the foundation of the world, who hath abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. The individual who tempted our first parents to use their God-given agency to disobey the giver, and to obey him was according to the record, once an angel of light; but who sought to obtain the honor and glory of God, and rebelled against him, and a third part of the host of heaven he turned away from the rightful allegiance to God, because of their agency. They were thrust out from the presence of God, and thus became the Devil and his angels, and enemies to God and his Christ. But though cast out of heaven, God allowed Satan and his fallen companions to roam the earth until the time should arrive for their confinement. Satan having lost none of his malevolence toward heaven's King, sought early to subvert his purposes in the creation of man, and sought to destroy the world, as we find recorded in the third chapter and seventh verse of Genesis, Inspired Translation, which reads:—

And Satan put it into the heart of the serpent, for he had drawn away many after him [the third part of the host of heaven]; and he sought also to beguile Eve, for he knew not the mind of God; wherefore he sought to destroy the world.

He knew that on account of their agency he had drawn that great host of heaven from their rightful Sovereign: and he also knew that Adam and his wife had received their agency from the God of heaven, in the garden, and that the penalty of death or banishment from the presence of God was the consequence of disobedience; hence he used his influence through the serpent to tempt them to use their agency to disobey God, to secure that banishment. In this he accomplished his purpose, and caused the banishment of our first parents from the presence of God.

In a revelation of God, given to his people in this age of the world, speaking of this circumstance, he says:—

Wherefore, it came to pass, that the devil tempted Adam and he partook of the forbidden fruit, and transgressed the commandment, wherein he became subject to the will of the devil, because he yielded unto temptation; wherefore, I the Lord God caused that he should be cast out of the Garden of Eden, from my presence, because of his transgression; wherein he became spiritually dead; which is the first death, even that same death, which is the last death, which is spiritual, which shall be pronounced upon the wicked when I shall say, Depart ye cursed. But, behold, I say unto you, I, the Lord God, gave unto Adam and unto his seed, that they should not die as to the temporal death, until I, the Lord God, should send forth angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption through faith on the name of mine only begotten Son; and thus did I, the Lord God, appoint unto man the days of his probation; that by his natural death, he might be raised in immortality unto eternal life, even as many as would believe, and they that believe not unto eternal damnation, for they cannot be redeemed from their spiritual fall, because they repent not, for they will love darkness rather than light, and their deeds are evil, and they receive their wages of whom they list to obey.—D. C. 28: 11, 12.

We see by this that although man had transgressed the law of his Creator, and been banished from his presence, becoming spiritually dead, had fallen from his position as a son of God and become a servant of Satan, subject to his will; yet the purpose of his creation was not overlooked or forgotten by his Creator. He gave unto Adam and his seed a state of probation that they should not die as to the natural death until the gospel of repentance and redemption from the bondage and power of Satan through faith on his only begotten Son should be preached by angels unto them; and all who would use their agency to forsake the service of Satan and engage in the service of God might be redeemed from their spiritual fall, becoming the sons and daughters of God, and at their natural death be raised unto immortality and eternal life; while those who pursue the opposite course, will not believe on the name of the only begotten Son of God, as the Savior of the world, will not repent of their sins, and forsake the service of Satan, cannot be redeemed from their spiritual fall, and must receive their wages of him whom they list to obey.

Enoch, the seventh from Adam, as recorded in the sixth chapter of Genesis, Inspired Translation, speaking of the condition of the children of men in his day, and also of the plan of redemption, the gospel of repentance as made known unto Adam in the beginning, says:—

The Lord which spake with me, the same is the God of heaven, and he is my God and your God, and ye are my brethren; and why counsel ye yourselves, and deny the God of heaven? The heavens he made; the earth is his footstool, and the foundation thereof is his; behold, he laid it, and hosts of men hath he brought in upon the face thereof. And death hath come upon our fathers; nevertheless, we know them and cannot deny, and even the first of all we know, even Adam; for a book of remembrance we have written among us, according to the pattern given by the finger of God; and it is given in our language. And as Enoch spake forth the words of God, the people trembled and could not stand in his presence. And he said unto them, Because that Adam fell, we are; and by his fall came death, and we are made partakers of misery and woe. Behold, Satan hath come among the children of men, and tempteth them to worship him; and men have become carnal, sensual, and devilish, and are shut out from the presence of God. But God hath made known unto our fathers, that all men must repent. And he called upon our father Adam, by his own voice, saying, I am God; I made the world, and men before they were in the flesh. And he also said unto him, If thou wilt turn unto me and hearken unto my voice, and believe, and repent of all thy transgressions, and be baptized, even in water, in the name of mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth, which is Jesus Christ, the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, asking all things in his name, and whatsoever ye shall ask it shall be given you. And our father Adam spake unto the Lord, and said, Why is it that men must repent, and be baptized in water? And the Lord said unto Adam, Behold, I have forgiven thee thy transgression in the garden of Eden. Hence came the saying abroad among the people, that the Son of God hath atoned for original guilt, wherein the sins of the parents cannot be answered upon the heads of the children, for they are whole from the foundation of the world. And the Lord spake unto Adam, saying, Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up sin conceiveth in their hearts, and they taste the bitter, that they may know to prize the good. And it is given them to know good from evil; wherefore, they are agents unto themselves. And I have given unto you another law and commandment; wherefore teach it unto your children, that all men, everywhere, must repent, or they can in no wise inherit the kingdom of God.—Gen. 6: 45-59.

We see by the foregoing that the Savior atoned for original guilt, and that children are not answerable for that, but only for their own transgressions; and they are innocent before God until they attain the knowledge of good and evil, and being conceived in sin—or when their parents were under the condemnation of a broken law and therefore, in the state of sin—as they grow up, sin conceives in their hearts, and they become carnal, sensual, and devilish, and are shut out from the presence of God. This being the case, another law and commandment was necessary to be given, to be taught to Adam's posterity in order that they might be adopted in the family of God, becoming citizens of his kingdom, and finally be brought back into the presence of God, when the earth, having answered the measure of its creation, is celestialized and made fit for the immediate presence of God. And this law and commandment was that all men everywhere should repent; turn from the service of Satan, from violating the law of their Creator, and enter into his service through the law of adoption which he has established for that purpose, and live by every word that has proceeded out of his mouth, or that shall be given while they are in this probationary state. This law and commandment, has been in force, according to Bible history, from the days of Adam to the present time, and will be until all the posterity of Adam shall be made free from the bondage of sin and death, when the last enemy shall be destroyed, and death shall be swallowed up in victory; brought about by a crucified, risen, and triumphant Redeemer.

The gospel of repentance was preached by Adam and his immediate posterity. It was preached by Enoch, the seventh from Adam. It was preached by Noah. It was preached by Melchisedek, by Abraham, and by Moses. The Lord from time to time sent his chosen messengers, the prophets, to Israel, when they forsook the Lord their God and served strange gods, even those of the nations with whom they were surrounded, to admonish and to exhort them to turn from their worship of idols and from the service of Satan unto the service of the living God, even the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, their fathers.

And in the meridian of time, John the Baptist was sent of God to prepare the way of the Lord and to make his paths straight. The Jews at this time had departed from the way of the Lord, had made crooked the paths of the Lord; hence John was sent to them to preach the gospel of repentance, crying, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The Savior after being baptized of John, went forth to the Jews preaching the gospel of repentance. He chose and ordained his disciples, and sent them with the same gospel message to the Jews, and commanded them, at that time, to go not into any of the cities of the Gentiles, but to go unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel, "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

They declared the gospel of repentance unto the Jewish nation, faithfully performing their mission, until after the crucifixion and resurrection of the Lord; who appeared unto them, as recorded by Luke in the last chapter of his book.

And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things. And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.—Luke 24: 43-48.

Their mission was to assume a wider scope, not confined to the house of Israel, but was to be to all nations. Repentance and remission of sins were to be preached to all nations beginning at Jerusalem. They were to tarry there until the promise of the Spirit was realized by them, to enable them to declare all that the Savior had commanded them to preach to the nations, for their salvation. They needed this promise of the Father, even the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, the Comforter; for the Savior declared unto his disciples, as recorded in John 14: 26, that they would need it to teach them all things and to bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said unto them. And he had said unto them, as recorded by Matthew 28: 18,

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.

They needed this Spirit, then, to bring to their remembrance all things that he had commanded them to teach; for he says in John 12: 49, 50:—

For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

The Savior might well command them to tarry till they had received the power to bring all things to their remembrance which he had commanded them; for that which he had commanded them to preach was for life and salvation, and he had been commanded of the Father to teach the same conditions for life everlasting. He says to his Father in John 17: 8, 18,

For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me. As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world.

The Father was particular to command the Son what he should say and speak, that the sons of men might have life everlasting; the Son was particular in sending his disciples to teach all things that he had been commanded of the Father; hence the necessity of that Spirit which "searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God," that it might bring all things to their remembrance that the Father and the Son had commanded for life everlasting. No chance for nonessentials to creep into the commandments of God that he has given for life and salvation. Query, Will not the servants of God in this age of the world need the same Spirit for the same purpose that Christ's disciples did; namely, to declare all things that he has commanded to be taught for the salvation of the race? We cannot see how it could be otherwise.

The disciples, after receiving the great commission, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," went forth to fulfill that commission, as the word records:—

And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following.

Historians generally agree that all the apostles, except John the Revelator, suffered martyrdom for the gospel they preached, in different parts of the world. But this was not the dispensation, when the prediction of the Master was to be fulfilled, when he said:—

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

The Almighty God had foreseen that an apostasy from the faith, from the pure principles of the gospel would take place, and had inspired his servants by the Holy Ghost to predict the same. The Savior himself foreshadowed the same when he said:—

And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven [or church of God] suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.—Matt. 11: 12.

Paul, in his second letter to the Thessalonians, says:—

Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition.—2 Thess. 2: 1-3.

The apostle here states that the coming of the Son of man, or the time of the end, will not come before there has been a falling away, a departure from the faith, a ceasing to preach the gospel; and he is so sanguine about it that he says for them to not let any man or spirit deceive them by any means. This dispensation of the preaching of the gospel in all the world could not be the one foretold by the Savior in which the gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then the end come, or the destruction of the wicked; for, as we have seen, an apostasy was to take place from the faith, or from the gospel preached in that age, prior to the coming of Christ.

Paul was so confident of this taking place, that on his way to Jerusalem, calling at Miletus, he sent to Ephesus and called the elders of the church together to forewarn them of that event. He says:—

And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost has made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.—Acts 20: 25-31.

The apostle knew whereof he affirmed, and had known it for three years, and had ceased not to warn them night and day, in tears; and now, knowing he should see their face no more, that the time of his departure from this earth was drawing nigh, he called them together again, warning them again of these grievous wolves that would enter in and destroy the flock; and that of their own selves men would arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them. "Perverse things" would be wrong things, consequently would not be in accordance with the gospel, and they and the disciples they drew after them would be departing from the gospel of Christ.

Paul not only told the Thessalonians that there would be a falling away from the true faith of the gospel, and the elders of Ephesus that grievous wolves would enter in among them destroying the flock of God; that men would arise speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them; but he told Timothy in his first letter to him. Of this great departure from the faith, he says:—

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils.—1 Tim. 4: 1.

Seducing or evil spirits, emissaries of the Devil, would be apt to preach the doctrine of the Devil, and the doctrine of the Devil has always been the opposite of the doctrine of God and his Christ, and leadeth to destruction. This has been the case ever since the Devil rebelled against his lawful King in the heavens; and his first attempt to preach his doctrine on the earth was in the Garden of Eden, and it was diametrically opposed to the doctrine of God. The Lord said unto Adam, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die;" but the Devil said, "Ye shall not surely die." Adam and his wife chose to obey the doctrine of the evil one, and woe followed in its train to them and their posterity and the earth on which they dwelt. And so will woe follow all of Adam's posterity in this world and in that which is to come if they obey the doctrine of the Devil.

The Savior says in Matthew 15: 8, 9:—

This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

I have quoted this text to show that there are doctrines of men, as well as doctrines of devils, and it makes no difference as to which is taught, the Savior says it is in vain. Certainly the doctrines of men cannot be in harmony with the doctrine of Christ, otherwise they would not be distinguished as the doctrines of men. So that either the doctrines of men, or of devils, are antagonistic to the doctrine of Christ; and John says,—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed.—2 John 9, 10.

It seems from this that if we obey not the doctrine of Christ we cannot sustain a relationship with God and Christ, therefore cannot obtain life and salvation. No wonder, then, that the apostle warned us against receiving anyone that brought another doctrine, whether it be of men or of devils. Paul again warns Timothy, in his second letter of the apostasy that should take place in the latter times, thus:—

I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, who are out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering, and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn their ears from the truth [doctrine of Christ], and shall be turned unto fables.—2 Tim. 4:1-4.

When we tell professing Christians (and the world has become indoctrinated through them) the sound doctrine that man cannot preach for God unless called by direct revelation by him as Paul says, in Hebrews 5: 4, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron," who was called by direct revelation through Moses, they cannot endure that sound doctrine, and call us all kinds of unpleasant names because we teach it. They are not aware, when they deny direct revelation in these days, that they are fulfilling the prediction of Paul by heaping, after their own choice, or lust, teachers, who being sent of man, must—though ostensibly preaching the gospel of Christ—be preaching the doctrines of men. When those clothed with authority direct from God preach the sound doctrine of Christ, they preach according to the great commission of Christ as follows:—

Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth [your preaching of the gospel] and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

The major portion of professing

Christians cannot endure it, and say that baptism is not a saving ordinance; that it is nonessential; thus they openly antagonize the Savior, who says it is necessary to salvation. They must, therefore, be teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, and not the doctrine of Christ.

HEALED OF BLINDNESS.

WHILE reading the testimony of Sr. Lumley, as written by Bro. C. J. Hunt, and published in your columns of June 26, I felt it my duty to add what has come under my observation, to corroborate her statement of having been blind. I have heard many testify that they knew her when she was blind, saw her baptized and confirmed, and that she received her sight at that time. But as a friend of mine in this town went to the trouble and expense of getting affidavits, (which of course he had a right to do,) from those who claimed she could read fine print, etc., after the ulcers were cured, and seemed to believe them in preference to her testimony, (for he wrote her and received an answer, and as many others may do the same,) I will state as briefly as I can what I know.

I first heard of Sr. Ernst (her name then) in December, 1882, through Elder E. C. Brand, who was preaching in Dorchester, and who baptized me while here. He told me of her coming to their conference blind; and that after the elder baptized her she received her sight, and how she tried to encourage others to come to the Savior who had done so much for her. From that time I was anxious to see her and hear the statement from her own lips; not that I doubted Elder Brand, but I knew it would be a stronger testimony to others to tell them I had. My anxiety was increased by a conversation I had with a preacher in Crete, nine miles east of Dorchester, who had in 1875 or 1876 baptized me as a member of the so-called Church of God. I had in 1880 joined the Christian Church, as there was no Church of God here, which he did not consider a very grave departure from the faith. In trying to explain to him and a lady preacher my new faith they used so many arguments I could not satisfactorily answer, being but a babe, that I related this circumstance, which seemed to make matters worse; for he tried more than ever to prove to me I was deceived, and thought I had so much confidence in Elder Brand that I was ready to believe any statement he made. From that time I determined if possible to see Sister Ernst, so in the fall of 1883 I attended the Saints' reunion near Persia, Iowa.

I arrived Sunday before noon. Every face on the grounds was new to me. I asked the lady I sat down by—who proved to be Sr. Josephine Wood—what the elder's name was that was preaching. She said: "That is Bro. Joseph Smith." I was so glad to see him and hear him preach.

Sr. Ernst arrived on the grounds about Wednesday or Thursday, and we soon became acquainted and were together most of the time during my stay. One day she spoke of Elder Brand being the one who baptized her. I said: "Was it Elder Brand? He did not tell me he was the one who baptized you." She replied: "He was too modest to take the honor to himself" (on account of the great miracle of course). Some one said to her: "Your eyes do not look natural; wasn't it strange they were not restored to look as they did before?" Her answer was, "I think they were left that way for a testimony to unbelievers that I had been blind. I could deceive any oculist in the world, they always think I am blind, and when I say I am not, they are much surprised." Ere we parted we promised to write to each other, and kept up a correspondence for several years. We met occasionally at reunions and tented together, and in August, 1886, the sister after a severe sickness, by my invitation and through the advice of a physician, made me a visit.

She had been here but a short time when wild hairs growing on her eyelids troubled her much. We both felt bad that she should have trouble with her eyes while in this town, for we knew the gentleman who had procured the affidavits and others would watch closely, and we feared that if they knew she was having trouble with her eyes they would take that as proof that the Lord had not restored her eyes. Something must be done to relieve her. A doctor and doctress Butin were then living in town, with whom I had conversed several times on the subject of the restored gospel, and although they were called skeptics or infidels, they always talked reasonably. I said to Sr. Ernst, "I will take you to the lady doctor. On the way down it seemed as if every one eyed us suspiciously, and I believe we both felt like culprits. We found the doctor and his wife both in the office. I introduced the sister, and stated the object of our visit to the lady, who placed a chair where she wished her to sit; then stepped in front of her with her tweezers in her right hand, was going to begin operating on the left eye, but looking at it exclaimed, "Why, you can't see out of this eye can you?"

"Yes."

"Well, that is singular." Then looking at the right eye she said, "You can't see out of that one."

"Yes, I can."

The lady called to her husband, "Doctor, just come here and see this woman's eyes." After examining them he seemed more surprised than his wife had been, and became the interrogator.

"Can you see to work?" he said.

"Yes, I do my own work when I am able."

"You cannot read or sew?"

"Yes, I can do both."

"Well, that is strange; I do not understand it; your eyes certainly look as if they were blind."

Seeing he was so puzzled, the sister said: "I do not see as others do; the Lord restored my sight; it was miraculous.

He answered, "If you can see out of those eyes it is a miracle to me. His wife finally bethought herself of our errand, and removed the cause of suffering, but would take no remuneration then nor afterward when she performed like service for her and gave her medicine two or three times besides. God bless such noble-hearted doctors, and enlighten their minds on the truth of the gospel, that they and many others may be led to "Believe the wondrous story,

Of the prophet of Cumorah;

And give to God the glory,"

as Sr. Lumley entreats them in her poems to do.

That circumstance was a wonderful proof to me of the wisdom our merciful, unchanging Father. I have before me the sister's testimony, dated November 26, 1870, and published in the Saints' Herald, January 15, 1871. Nearly twenty-five years have passed since the Lord wrought such a wonderful miracle in her behalf, which is only a drop in the bucket to what he has been doing for humanity since the restoration in 1830.

MRS. R. S. COATES BROWN.

DORCHESTER, Nebraska, July 1, 1895.

THE WORLD DO MOVE.

HUMANITY learns slowly; however, it is quite encouraging to discover that they do learn. On February 27, 1833, the Lord said,

And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill.—D. C. p. 245.

This should have been sufficiently plain and instructive to all Saints; nevertheless there were some who excused themselves for one cause or another to continue the use of the weed.

On April 11, 1887, the Lord said by way of instruction,

Avoid the use of tobacco.—D. C. p. 344.

All who love God and desire the association and companionship of the pure and the good will find in those statements of the law all that is necessary; and no regulation or resolution will make more plain or binding the requirements of God, for the word of the Lord still stands true, Behold, the Lork requireth the heart and a willing mind and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days.—D. C. p. 194.

Mr. Charles Fosdick, of Eagleville, Missouri, in his book, "Five Hundred Days in Rebel Prisons," among other things of interest says of tobacco:—

There was one class among us that felt the keen sting of privation far worse than the rest, and these were men who had acquired the habit of using tobacco. Their craving for this article became so great that they would give their last morsel of food for a few crumbs or a small twist, that would last but a day. They would chew this till the last particle of strength of the tobacco was gone, then they would dry the old quid and smoke it. After witnessing these scenes, I was thankful that I had never made use of the weed, as I had no money; and the only way I could have obtained it would have been like the rest, trade my much needed rations, which were barely sufficient to sustain life. Although many a Virginian, during the first settlement of that State, came in possession of a wife by the sale of a few hundred pounds of the Indian weed, I do not now nor ever could see any good reason why the plant should have been cultivated and become one of the principal products of our country, as it is useless, expensive, and obnoxious.—Page 19.

Next comes the dark skinned race with the following:—

SMOKING IS SAID TO BE A SIN.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24. — In the Delaware conference of the A. M. E. Church today, Bishop Ruley decided that smoking is a sin. Hereafter, he said, any minister in the conference who shall be convicted of using tobacco will be dealt with as one who had violated a law of the conference. — Missouri World, May 1, 1895.

What say you, do the world move? These colored men have said more than God did about tobacco. They say the use of the weed "is a sin." God said it was "not good for man."

The Holiness people are very bitter against the use of tobacco. A short time ago I was in a community of these people, where a man seeking for truth and desiring to do right asked me how our church stood upon the tobacco question. I read to him what is found in the Book of Covenants, without comment or explanation further than to say: "Our church sends out no minister that uses tobacco." He was silent a moment, then looking up, said, "That is all right." That day he quit the use of the weed.

Another man, who is not a professor, but has been hectoring by the Holyites, made inquiry of me. I gave him the same answer, and he expressed himself that our position was "common sense and reason." I make no compromise with evil, but am fully satisfied that more good can be accomplished by meekness, kindness, charity, and example, than by harshness, force, or arbitrary rule.

May the world continue to move upward and onward towards light, knowledge, peace, and righteousness.

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

LUCAS, Iowa, June 19, 1895.

IMPORTANCE OF LOCAL MINISTRATIONS.

THE Doctrine and Covenants says in section 17: 10, that the priest shall visit the house of each member, and exhort them to attend church, pray in their families and in secret, etc., but it is not stated how often he shall visit them, nor when. Now suppose he only visits them once a year, or once in five or ten years, what does he know of their spiritual condition?

It seems to me that the very spiritual life of a branch depends on the faithful work of the priest and teacher. All these years things might exist in a branch that would bring a reproach on the cause and destroy harmony and brotherly love, and prevent God's Spirit from resting upon them.

How is it, brethren, in your branch, how often do you see your people in their homes? Are there any differences existing in your branch—any persons that do not attend sacrament services? Are there those who are doing those things that the law forbids? If you know that such things exist and do not look after them, do you magnify your office? Would it not be a good thing, brethren, to look after every member once a quarter at least? Would it not prevent many sores from becoming chronic?

Beloved, let us remember the parable of the ten virgins, and see to it that we have oil in our lamps when Jesus comes. God help us to keep his law with a perfect heart, that it may be said of us, "Well done, good and faithful servant," "thou hast been faithful over a few things," "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Yours in bonds,

J. S. STRAIN.

REUNION NOTICES.

The annual reunion of Northwestern Kansas district will be held at Blue Rapids, Kansas, commencing Thursday, August 15, 1895, continuing ten days, closing with the evening service of the second Sabbath, August 25, 1895. This location is well known to most of the Saints and can be easily found by visitors by inquiring for the Latter Day Saints' reunion camps. It is north of the business part of town about five minutes' walk. Committees have been appointed to make all necessary arrangements, cooking stoves and wood will be furnished on ground free of charges. Hay and grain for teams furnished at reasonable rates. There will be one restaurant on the grounds, good hotels in the city to accommodate those who do not wish to camp; though we would say to the Saints especially that we think it very pleasant and profitable to come prepared to tent on the camp ground and thus sustain and uphold our annual reunions. Elders who come will be provided for by the Saints. All are cordially invited to attend. Bring the Spirit of God with you, and let us have a time of rejoicing, long to be remembered.

ZELONA SMITH,

Chairman of Com.

CLAY CENTER, Kansas.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District: Greeting:—Inasmuch as there has been much of late in the Herald concerning tithes and offerings and needs for continued consecration; it may seem quite unnecessary to again remind you of duty. Nevertheless, because of our duty and the pleasure and blessing that we feel sure will accrue to all who cheerfully hearken, not only to say amen, but to do as requested by the law, as voiced by the Bishop, we venture this our appeal; that if possible we need not again have occasion to call on the Bishop for aid. In our last report you will notice there were no funds in our hands to relieve the wants of the poor, or furnish allotments to families whose husbands are laboring continuously for the redemption of Zion. For the last five or six years this district has stood in the front rank. Shall we, now that we are coming higher in the knowledge of the law of life, forget to do that which we already know will increase our present zeal and thereby render our knowledge of none effect? God forbid! for how shall they that know to do the law be justified by the law, which they obey not? Perhaps you will say, "Times are too hard; I cannot." True, times are such that money is not plenty with the majority of Saints.

Why is it? If you were sick, would you only pray for health? or would you couple faith with works? The latter, of course. Why, then, do you not treat these sickly, hard times in the same way, by uniting faith and offering in harmony with the law? (See Luke 11:42; Malachi 3:10-17.) And, God willing, we would soon have no poor in the church; and Zion would joy in the Holy One of Israel. If the poor and well to do have done nobly in the past and desire to continue, is'n't it possible for the rich to see that the present necessity is their opportunity to manifest faith by their works, that they may have right to enter into the beautiful city? Brethren, let us not go back, but onward, consecrating ourselves truly unto him who is keeper of the gate, and whose glory shall yet destroy all things contrary to his will. But this is according to his will, that we consecrate according to the law; that we might be glorified of him, when he shall come to glorify the earth, and give inheritances to the meek according to his promise. Shall we have our names written there? Please forward all tithes and offerings to 3,713 North 22d Street, Omaha, Nebraska, except where there is agent in branch to receive them, or to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa.

Your servant in the one faith,

G. M. L. WHITMAN,

Bishop's Agent.

RAILROAD RATES.

To the Saints of Northern and Central California Districts:—Our reunion at Santa Cruz, beginning August 30, and lasting ten days, is fast approaching. Railroad certificates can be had of me, by the use of which you can return home for one third fare; ALL should use them, for if fifty be not used, no reduction can be had. Those outside branches should send to me for them. When you purchase your ticket pay full fare and have agent sign certificate or no reduction will be allowed.

Bishop's Agent.

James McKiernan having resigned as chairman of said committee, and the conference having appointed me to fill the vacancy, I desire to urge each one on the committee to renew his efforts. Hoping to hear from all the committee soon, I remain,

Your brother in Christ,

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE REV. TALMAGE'S REMARKS EXCEPTED TO.

One of our subscribers takes exceptions to some of the statements made by the Rev. Dr. Talmage, and as the exceptions are well taken, we give them publicity by publishing the following letter in full:—

Editors Telegraph:—Doubtless many of your readers like myself are more or less interested in the weekly discourses of Dr. Talmage published in your columns. Probably no other clergyman in this country is so widely known or so much read by the masses. Yet it is a well-known fact that like many other public speakers he is not always careful in his reference to historical facts. I beg leave to comment briefly on some recent statements, not for the purpose of criticism, but thinking your readers may find interest therein.

Dr. Talmage gave as it a fact not long ago that wheat from ancient Egyptian tombs had been found capable of reproduction, and used that as an illustration of the power of God to demonstrate the possibility of the resurrection of the human body. The story is an old fiction. It has often ornamented addresses and stories, but has no foundation in truth. Probably its nearest approximation to being true is shown in the following incident: A wooden sarcophagus, bought of the Khedive of Egypt in 1871, was pronounced by Dr. Birch, one of the most famous Egyptian scholars, a genuine unopened mummy case 2,600 years old. Inside were found some grains supposed to be wheat which were sent to the Royal Botanic Society, under whose care they germinated and produced twelve grains of, not wheat, but oats. But oats were unknown in Egypt at that period. The simple fact was demonstrated that a clever Arab had manufactured an antiquity and outwitted the learned doctor. Mr. Villiers Stuart, Egyptian traveler and author, says there is no such thing as mummy wheat that will sprout. Another authority says: "You might as well suppose that an egg which had been embalmed 1,000 years would sprout." Dr. Davis, editor of Biblia, the organ of the Egyptian Exploration fund, says: "The best botanical authorities say there is no such thing as an authenticated case of mummy-wheat germination." The testimony of Alphonse De Candolle in his "Origin of Cultivated Plants," one of the International Scientific series, is to the same effect.

A still later sermon of Dr. Talmage from the text, "Let God be true, but every man a liar," contains many statements to which I should like to call the attention of your readers did space permit, but can only refer to two or three.

He says: "God was so careful to have the Bible in just the right shape that we have 50 manuscript copies of the New Testament 1,000 years old and some of them 1,500 years old." The latest and best authorities tell us the oldest manuscript of the Old Testament entire is just 896 years old, and the oldest manuscript of any part of it is only 979 years old.

Again: "This book saw the cradle of all other books and will see their graves; you cannot add anything, you cannot subtract anything. Divinely protected book in the present shape—the same catalogue that has been coming down through the ages, much of it 4,000 years old." One hardly knows where to begin comment on lines so pregnant with mis-statements. Modern scholars do not place the oldest fragments of the Old Testament back more than 3,200 years, and no book in its present form is more than 2,800 years old. In the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris is a manuscript book of Egyptian poems which was more than 1,000 years old when the earliest fragment of Hebrew sacred literature was cradled, and old as it is, it is but a copy. The original was written 800 years before. But few, if any, of the Bible books are as old as the poems of Homer. Some of them are younger than the history of Herodotus and the plays of Æschylus. There is a famous Egyptian poem ascribed to Pen-ta-urt, the manuscript of which is in the British Museum, the text of which is inscribed on the temple of Abydos, in the Hall of Columns at Karnak, on the Ramesseum at Thebes, and the temple carved from the living rock at Abu Simbel, and this poem is four centuries older than any book in the Bible. The British Museum has 30,000 parts of volumes, and the University of Pennsylvania many more, from the resurrected library of Old King Assurbanipal, who reigned and collected these volumes before most of the books of the Old Testament were written. This library contained works on history, on metals and plants and geography and medicine. The sacred book of the Egyptians, known as the Book of the Dead, is thought by the best Egyptian scholars to have been written, much of it, before the reign of Menes, which is the beginning of Egyptian history, and is placed by Wallace Budge and others 6,400 years ago. Its most famous chapter, the 125th, contains the germs of most of the Hebrew commandments, and probably more than 1,000 copies of it are in existence which have been taken from ancient Egyptian tombs, some of which are known to date back four centuries before any fragment of the Old Testament was written, and it is believed to be much older than that.

"Divinely protected book in its present shape," says Talmage. Sixteen books are lost which are referred to in the Bible as if of equal authority with those preserved. A list of the references to them will be furnished by the writer to anyone on application. Eighteen other books still extant though discarded have all at some time been regarded with favor. Fourteen other well-known books constituted the Old Testament Apocrypha. Says Emil Schurer: "The church of the first three centuries made no essential difference between them and those in the Hebrew Canon." The Council of Trent in 1545 included them in the canonical books. The Westminster assembly in 1647 rejected them. One third of the church membership in the United States today accept them. They are accepted by more than half of all the church membership in the New England States; New York, California, Colorado, Louisiana, Montana, Nevada, and Wyoming. There are 41 extant apocryphal books of the New Testament and 68 lost books which are referred to in the writings of the Christian fathers. The manuscripts of the New Testament were all written in capitals, without division into words or syllables, and without punctuation. The chapter division was made in the thirteenth century, the verse division in 1555. It is well known that the Old Testament was written only with consonant outlines without vowels or points. The vowels were not added until the seventh or eighth century after Christ. Talmage dramatically describes the finding of the Sinaitic manuscript by Tischendorf and attributes its preservation to a miracle, but neglects to say that that manuscript contains two books now rejected from the canon which according to him was divinely protected from the beginning. He refers to the Vatican manuscript as one of the highest authorities, but does not say that its canon corresponds to the present in either the Old or the New Testaments. He says Marcion was expelled from the church for "wickedness" but left a list precisely like the present canon. Marcion's sin was that of being a student and critic, in the middle of the second century. His list is said to be the first ever made of the New Testament and it included one Gospel without a name, since called Luke's, and ten epistles.

Marcion, died 165 A. D. and the second epistle of Peter was not then written, according to good authorities. Melitio 175 A. D. was the first Christian writer to make a list of the Old Testament books and he omitted several now in the canon. Tertullian is vouched for by Talmage and he rejected five books now in the canon and included one now excluded. Origen, 250 A. D., is also accepted as authority by Talmage, and he included three books in his canon now excluded and excluded twelve now included. St. Chrysostom 407 A. D., rejected five books now in the old and five now in the New. Luther rejected Esther and James. It was not till 1827 that the British and Foreign Bible society decided to no longer circulate Bibles with the Apocrypha, and the American Bible society followed, and the Protestant Canon was finally fixed unalterably.—L. D. Burdick, in Chenango, New York, Telegraph, of June 26, 1895.

JEWS IN JAPAN.

THERE are believed to be Jews, probably descendants of the ten lost tribes of Israel, in Japan, because of recent discoveries by Mr. H. L. Phillips, who was a resident in that empire for the last four years, and who has visited nearly all the islands of the Mikado's domain. Although in the Kai Fong Fu, a district in China, Jews are known to exist, yet Japan had, until now, not been known to contain any of that people. Mr. Phillips describes the Japan Jews as having prominent noses, full lips, intellectual eyes, not quite so obliquely shaped as those of the pure Japanese. The men are taller than other natives, and their women have a fairer skin and are much prettier. They are good parents, and appear to appreciate more than the average Japanese, the comforts of the domestic hearth.

Mr. Phillips then details the circumstances of his discovery as to the Jewish descent of these people. He chanced one day to walk into Motomachi, a leading street in Kobe, entering the largest native curio store. The proprietor proved to be of a pronounced Japan-Judaic type. Examining a small porcelain vase, for which five yen (Japanese dollars) was asked, he was surprised to notice upon the label attached to the article two Hebrew characters. The proprietor remarked that these were his private signs, representing the cost price. The visitor humorously questioned the proprietor if five dollars was not too high a figure for an article that cost but 32 cents? This question dumbfounded the proprietor, who could not realize that a foreigner could decipher the signs which he and his sons alone possessed. The two Hebrew characters represented L (30), or lamed, and B (2), or beth, which are not only Hebrew consonants but are numerals as well, and both stand for 32.

During a lively conversation the Japanese Jew said that these characters had been handed down from father to son for many generations, yet he could not give their origin. They employed these signs only in business and as private numerals. Otherwise they could not speak or write in that language. These typical Jewish-featured Japanese are scattered as far north as the islands of Yezo and Sapporo, all maintaining the same characteristics. The five families of the latter place claim that they originally came from the south. As to their origin they are totally in ignorance. They are Japanese and wish to remain so.

THE QUALITY OF TACT.

Tact is not dishonesty, writes Frances E. Lanigan in the July Ladies' Home Journal. It does not mean the suppression of the truth nor the expression of an untruth, but it does mean the withholding of gratuitous disagreements from arguments in which they are quite superfluous; it also means the effort to induce an agreement kindly when possible, and if an agreement is impossible it demands a gracious acceptance of opposing views. Tact cannot be said to be synonymous with policy; tact is always honest and policy cannot invariably be said to have that distinguishing mark.

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 24, 1895.

A STRONG INDICTMENT.

Two brothers, one at Denver, Colorado, the other Terre Haute, Indiana, have sent us copies of a sermon preached by Rev. F. F. Passmore, member of the Colorado conference, which is a remarkable production. It was spoken from the following texts:—

I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel.—Ezek. 33: 7.

Feed my lambs. . . . Feed my sheep. . . .
Feed my sheep.—John 21: 15-17.

From first to last it is a scorching arraignment of the ministry of the times; especially of the Methodist Episcopal Church, naming Bishops Warren, Simpson, Hedding; and Chancellor McDowell, the latter of the Denver university. From this sermon we excerpt the following spicy portions taken from the Railway Times, of Terre Haute, Indiana, for July 1, sent us by Bro. Benedict.

I am no longer surprised at the condition of the church, the country, and the age, when I think that our bishops and great preachers, with few exceptions, have joined with corrupt politicians, gamblers, saloon men, Sabbath breakers, prostitutes, money-changers, and the the oppressors of the poor and weak. Instead of driving the money-changers from the temple, they are invited in and made welcome. Dare anyone think for a moment that such preachers are preaching Christ, living his spirit, and representing his doctrines to the world? Christ's doctrines, principles, and spirit would change all these things and would bring about an era of well-being to mankind. The trouble with our age is that Christ is not being preached in our great churches by our great preachers. I mean just what I say; Christ is not being preached in one of the great Methodist churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

THE DENVER MINISTRY.

If Dr. McIntyre and Bishop Warren are preaching Christ, how is it that the longer they preach, and the more fine churches they build, there is the more immorality, drunkenness, crime, and poverty?

Worldliness and political corruption have come into the Methodist Church like a flood, and have affected our chief ministers to such an extent as to have caused them to preach the teachings of Christ down to the level of a corrupt and effeminate age, and to league themselves with the Republican Party and the immoral and criminal classes of society. Our great ministers in this State, with Chancellor McDowell, last fall and also last April, joined hands with the corrupt Republican politicians, gamblers, saloon men, and fallen women of Market Street to "redeem" the State and city. They succeeded, and as one of the results of the "redeeming," Denver was never so nearly turned over to the criminal elements, and gambling and prostitution were never so flourishing as now. A fine lot of "redeemers!" Preachers, chancellors, university professors, saloon men, and gamblers, and scarlet women. A fine lot of "redeemers"—such a lot as redeemed Babylon, Tyre, and Rome just before those great powers fell. A fine set of reforming preachers, preaching a little about Christ in the pulpit and flirting with gamblers and scarlet women at the ballot box.

See what the bishops, editors, elders, and old preachers now on deck have bequeathed to us. They have left to us a desecrated Sabbath, about three millions of drunkards, an annual death harvest for perdition of about one hundred and fifty thousand drunkards, two hundred and fifty thousand saloons, patriotism almost dead, expiring, four million tramps, the rich growing richer, the poor growing poorer, the rich in power, controlling the navy, army, and government; the general government the most corrupt the world ever saw; two saloons running full blast in the capitol of the world's republic. These are only a few of the conditions that a compliant, complacent, obsequious, time-serving, and man-pleasing ministry have left to this age for solution. And amid all this degeneracy and moral disintegration, these old brothers of ours are not turning over a hand to save or reform the age. They are so busy with the saloon men, gamblers, and scarlet women "redeeming" the State, that of course they have no time (?) and less disposition to spend their time on trifles. It would never do to neglect such weighty matters as "redeeming" the State and city, if the church and Sabbath, and manhood and justice and right go to perdition.

We have not a bishop nor great preacher to-day that is thundering against sinners and corruptions that are overturning our homes, the church, and nation itself. Our great preachers to-day are preaching for big salaries, fine mansions, and sumptuous living; and they are getting them.

Our bishops and great preachers are bobbing along to eternity on the high waves of riches and fine mansions, and "flowery beds of ease," while millions are hungry and poor and are sinking beneath dark, cruel waves of inhuman wrongs that these "redeeming" bishops will not condemn.

It may be that Bishop Warren and Chancellor McDowell will take this indictment seriously and arraign Rev. Passmore before a tribunal of his peers and try him for a wholesale slandering of the church and his fellow ministry; but it will not cure the fact that the church is largely responsible for some of the things of which he so rabidly complains. Whenever any church, or its ministry leaves the common people and their needs, and the plane of their humility, to pander to the quasi respectability created by wealth and the false estimate of life usually placed on the wealthy and their surroundings, they certainly lose their efficacy as preachers of righteousness and are "teachers" heaped up to those who have "itching ears," and are "turned unto fables."

There is an evidence of spleen running through the sermon, and it is not hard to imagine that Bishop Warren's "thirty thousand dollar home," if he has it, and a site in "University Park," is possibly envied by the poorer pulpiteer. Nor do we credit the sweeping charge of wholesale abandonment to speculation, and the association with disreputable persons, so vehemently made by this Colorado evangelist. He may have come into contact with so much of that sort of thing in a few that he concludes all are equally guilty; but the average itinerant minister in the M. E. Church is a poor man in this world's goods; and many of the superannuated are made so by a too careless devotion to the things of the world, in close attention to the ways of their class in enlarging the borders of the church and increasing its grasp on society.

If the Rev. Charles Parkhurst has been able to revive a spirit of cleansing the political courts of municipal New York, it may be that the Rev. F. F. Passmore may have a call to cleanse the ministry of his own and other churches of the worldly taint which he claims is so strong upon them.

In the meantime let us take heed that the ministry in which we are serving is kept free from the vices of which Rev. Passmore justly complains.

WARNING OF TROPICAL HURRICANES.

THE Bible prophecies of the Savior concerning "the sea and the waves roaring;" of Jeremiah concerning the "whirlwind of the Lord"—the cyclone—"in the latter days," "from the coasts of the earth;" also those in the revelations of the latter days concerning the sea heaving itself beyond its bounds, and the destroyer upon the waters as well as on land, have been strikingly fulfilled, so far, in the destructive storms at sea and on land—and especially those that have prevailed along the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf Coasts, and in the Lake regions.

The government has taken steps to protect by warning signals, and from the item given below it appears that further or special warning signals have been determined upon.

The infidel and orthodox unbelievers in latter-day prophecy have tried to set aside those "signs of the times" with the statement that "such things have always been;" that we but hear more reports of calamities of that nature "because modern facilities for newsgathering are so multiplied and superior to old-time methods of making reports." The action of the government does not seem to bear out this effort to rebut such evidences and the claim that destructive elements are more and more unloosed to the peril of the people. The statement of Isaiah, that when God's judgments are in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness, is supported by the increasing manifestations of the "chastening hand of Almighty God." The government finds it necessary to provide additional warnings to give notice of increasing dangers:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16.—With the object of giving warning of the approaching tropical hurricanes, as well as the severe and dangerous storms that pass across the Lake region and the Atlantic coast, the Weather Bureau has adopted a special signal to be known as the hurricane signal. It will consist of the red flags with black centers displayed one above the other. This signal will be displayed at all Weather Bureau offices and wind signal display stations on the Atlantic and gulf coasts and the great lakes and at numerous other points at sea and lake ports and along these coasts. In a number of instances arrangements have been made with steamship and steamboat lines to display the signal on their vessels.

THE GRAVE OF THOMAS B. MARSH.
IN the Ogden, (Utah,) cemetery, on an elevated point of ground between where flows the sparkling waters of Ogden and Weber Rivers, and where the towering mountains stand as silent sentinels over the tomb, there stands a humble marble stone on which is chiseled the following inscription:—

Thomas B. Marsh, First President of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Born at Acton, Massachusetts, November 1, 1799. Died January, 1866. Erected by his friends, July 17, 1893.

By the above dates it will be seen that he had lain in this silent mound for over twenty-seven years ere a monument was erected to his memory, though he passed away in a country where there were thousands who professed to love the cause he served, and in the faith of which he died. Upon inquiry we have learned that his resting place was neglected and apparently forgotten until about three years ago when Mr. G. W. Larkin, who was then sexton, was looking over the old records he found the record of a lot deeded to T. B. Marsh, and also the record of his burial therein. Search was made on the spot indicated by the records, when a grave was found marked by some small rocks laid around it, and a head board, then rotted off at the ground, which bore simply the initials, "T. B. M." It was overgrown by sage brush in such a manner as to obscure it from view. Larkin and Son, Undertakers, cleared off the lot, and published in the city papers an account of their find.

Then a Mr. David M. Stewart took charge of a subscription paper, and in this way raised the neat marble stone which marks his resting place, at a cost of sixty-five dollars. Brigham Young was the second president of the Twelve, and he too has passed away. His burial place has been well cared for. His family cemetery is a beautiful, well-watered, green lawn, inclosed in an iron fence. And now subscription papers are being circulated widely with a view of raising a splendid monument to his memory to cost many thousands. The last account we saw the amount subscribed was over seven thousand dollars.

We understand that fifty thousand dollars are desired. Why this distinction? When the records of the two men are finally examined, where exact justice is meted out, will these two monuments be an index to the rewards there given? If not, will anyone feel rebuked for unjust discrimination here?

ANOTHER NEW TRACT.

TRACT No. 1; "The Nature of Man. Is he possessed of Immortality?" By Bro. J. R. Lambert. Twelve pages; 15 cents per dozen; $1.00 per 100.

This tract is a brief statement of the general argument presented in Bro. Lambert's book, "What is Man?"

The purpose of the tract is to indicate briefly the teachings of the Bible concerning the nature of man; and to permit the Bible as a standard of evidence to settle the question of his immortality.

This tract ought to interest anyone. Besides containing matter of general interest, it will be found very effective in refuting the arguments of skeptics, Adventists, Christadelphians, and others who claim that man is but mortal.

"MARRIAGE NOTICES."

A CORRESPONDENT, an elder in the field, suggests this:—

The charge for the publishing of a marriage notice in the Herald is one dollar. Do not therefore, if you give the minister no marriage fee, or a very small one, do not murmur at him for not spending an extra dollar out of his little all, if that "all" be "anything at all;" even if you forget to reimburse him for his railway, street car, and laundry bill, do not think unkindly of him, or complain of him, if he forget to pay the Herald a dollar to advertise your marriage to the world; please do not.

Considerate persons will not need to be reminded that the elder's expenses should also be provided for when he is called to perform service of a different character; for instance, a man called to attend upon a funeral service requiring money for the journey and other incidental expenses should not be forgotten in those respects. The gospel in its ministrations by the elders is just as "free" as it is possible to make it, for the ministry go on an "actual cost" basis—a purely economical one; in frequent instances far below it. No one should be so forgetful as to neglect them in their actual needs; and certainly no one should be so close or indifferent as to cause them inconvenience and annoyance by drawing upon their meager store for a personal accommodation; unless indeed the one making request for service is actually unable to offer anything, when the service will be cheerfully rendered and the attendant expense be made up in some way, without doubt.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

WE have not heard from presidents of branches on the new Saints' Hymnal, nor have choristers and singers flooded the office with orders for the oft-requested "smaller sized and convenient hymn book." The issuing of the book was urged upon the Board of Publication and it has provided for it at a very low price—fifty cents per copy, payable in advance. Send us your orders that the book may be put on sale at an early date.

THE Wellston, Ohio, Sentinel, July 6, copy sent us by Bro. R. Etzenhouser, has a lengthy defensive article by Bro. Albert Haws; a good one and right to the point, which the editor supplements in the following manly words. The "Rev. J. E. Thomas" has evidently put his foot in it, to use a common expression:—

A WELSH MINISTER WHO THINKS THE LATTER DAY SAINTS SHOULD BE SQUELCHED AT ONCE.

Rev. J. E. Thomas, an aged Welsh pastor of the Baptist Church, and a resident of Orpheus, Ohio, called on the Sentinel Tuesday to protest against the Latter Day Saints who are holding evangelistic services in a tent in the center of town. Rev. Thomas says he has known this denomination in Missouri, and that they are no better than Mormons. "If," he says, "I should mount a horse and ride through town sticking everybody I met with a poisoned lance, I could do no more harm than those who preach this latter doctrine." Rev. Thomas asks the newspapers, authorities, and citizens to silence the meetings, lest some be led astray and join this new sect. The Sentinel, though, in keeping with its policy of free speech and free worship to all, does not share the opinion of Rev. Thomas, that any denomination should be silenced so long as they obey by their actions, the law of the land. In another column appears an article contributed by the Latter Day Saints explaining their orthodox doctrines. Those who read them can judge for themselves how much there is that is scriptural, apostolic, and reliable in their teachings.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. A. PARKIN, San Francisco, California, July 11:—

We hear that Bro. Clapp is improving in health. God grant it. The work moves on, only we have no funds. To-morrow the reunion at Downey, Los Angeles county, opens with Pres. W. W. Blair and J. F. Burton in attendance.

Bro. Henry C. Smith, writing from Milton, Florida, July 13, says:—

Weather very warm, not much vitality in the atmosphere for us. Field corn ripe on the 4th; peaches, pears, plums, figs, and all kinds of vegetables on the market; nothing very good; too wet. Expensive place to live; we are keeping house. Interest in the good work is nothing to boast of; not enough opposition to make it profitable.

Bro. T. T. Hinderks, Stewartsville, Missouri, July 15:—

Our conference is just over; a good representation from all over the district was present. The business was disposed of in a good spirit; in fact, we met with the Spirit of the Master and we parted under the same influence. On Saturday night there was a grand entertainment by the Sunday school; preaching by Brn. Chatburn and Terry; a special social meeting in the afternoon; one ordained to office of priest—T. H. Hinderks—a member of the German branch. All is well.

Sr. Cynthia Cato, Eureka, Kansas, offers the following HERALDS. If wanted write her, sending postage:—

I have the Saints' Herald from 1888 to 1893, that I will give away to anyone sending me stamps to pay for postage, during the months of July and August. I will send them to anyone who desires to have them. They can get them by sending to my address. I can send but four pounds by mail at a time, which costs sixteen cents.

Bro. J. B. Roush, Wilmington, Illinois, July 13:—

Bro. F. G. Pitt baptized five here yesterday. Good crowds, and interest increasing. Zion prospers; all is well.

Bro. Henry Sparling, at Springfield, Missouri, July 15:—

Tent meeting here well attended; some to baptize to-morrow; many more about ready.

Bro. W. E. Peak, Fairbury, Nebraska:—

We are having very good meetings here and expect to continue over Sunday, July 21.

Bro. C. H. Jones, St. Clair, Missouri, July 15:—

You see where I am located. Bro. A. S. Davison has done well in hiring a nice little church, and I will stay with him awhile and see what can be done. There is prejudice against the work, but we hope to do some good by the Father's blessing. Before coming here I was in St. Charles county. Had a pleasant time with the people; visited them at their homes and talked on the gospel; spoke several times at their schoolhouse; baptized two and left several near the kingdom. Will return soon; more will obey without doubt. I am glad to be in the work and hope to do some good. Shall strive to do the best I can.

Here is a practical object lesson in tithing, from a late letter from Bro. J. S. Strain of a brother living near Wheeler's Grove, Iowa. The injunction, "Go thou and do likewise," seems to suggest itself on reading it:—

Bro. Elswick says that when he bought his farm five or six years ago he was seventeen hundred dollars in debt with wife and children to provide for, and no money. He promised the Lord that if he would prosper him he would give him the tenth of his increase; and he has paid all the debt but three hundred dollars, has paid the church about five hundred dollars, and will be able this year to pay off all he owes and have money besides. Bro. Elswick has prospered in everything, and lost nothing. Might not others profit by this example? God has made good his word in this case, and will in every case where men trust him.

Bro. J. M. Terry, St. Joseph, Missouri, July 16:—

Our quarterly conference was a peaceful one, and I think will result in good for the district. Bro. Kinaman is about well and ready for gospel work which, his actions say, he loves dearly. Bro. Chatburn is feeling well. His lungs have not fully recovered from the strain at the debate. Bro. Hinderks is alive to the work, and anxious for its advancement. The local brethren are feeling quite well.

Bro. Charles Sheen has been so well treated and protected in his labors that an unfair opponent was threatened with tar and feathers. Time works wonders; it used to be fashionable in religious circles, not to only threaten with, but to administer such orthodox medicine to the elders, for want of a better argument. Bro. Sheen is evidently safe without a body guard. He wrote from Highmore, South Dakota, July 15:—

Saints in this part of the Lord's vineyard have reasons to rejoice and thank God. We have had plenty of rain up to this date, and the crops are in good condition, I am glad to say the few Saints here are not ashamed of their profession. On the 7th of July we assembled at the water for baptism and I had the pleasure of baptizing five. I am doing all I can in every way to advance the cause I so much love. A short time ago I was invited into the county east of this to speak, and there I met opposition from a Mr. Fisk, a minister of the Congregational Church, who said he was well acquainted with Bro. W. M.

Sparling, formerly of Potter county. The people thought him very unmanly, and made threats if he ever interfered with me again that they would "tar and feather him."

Brethren of the Nauvoo district and adjoining districts have been arranging to hold a reunion at Nauvoo sometime during the fall season. Hearing of it, the citizens of the beautiful city extend the following kindly invitation:—

NAUVOO, Ill., July 19, 1895.

TO REV. JOSEPH SMITH,

President of the Church of Latter Day Saints, Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Sir:—We, the Mayor and City Councilmen of the city of Nauvoo, Illinois, do hereby tender to you and those having charge of the matter of seeking a location for the proposed General Conference or reunion of your church, an invitation to hold said conference or reunion at this place; and do promise that in the event of your doing so, the Smith Grove, just south of our city, overlooking the river, will be furnished you gratis for such purpose.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

In another place will be found a communication from Elias Land, a whilom member of the Church of Christ, (Whitmerites, so-called,) and who some time ago took us to task for supposing that J. C. Whitmer was the leading, or presiding elder of the Church of Christ, while he was living, after the death of Elder David Whitmer. He sharply handles the Return and its present management. We wait developments. Does Elias Land, or the editor of the Return represent the Whitmerites, so-called?

We have tried carefully to take conservative and correct ground on the economic question of labor strikes and their results, and to avoid partisan views; however, men differ as to how they see things, this question included. Please read letter from Bro. O. J. G. Preston in this issue.

Bro. Frank Criley, accompanied by Sr. Criley and children, arrived at Lamoni on Monday, the 15th inst. Bro. Criley locates at Lamoni to take charge of Herald Office interests as Business Manager. His record at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, as Bishop's agent of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district and as a local worker in the branch has been a good one in behalf of the cause. He brings with him the same zealous spirit and will doubtless do well in the wider field upon which he will soon enter. Sr. Criley is widely known among the Saints for her kindly hospitality to the traveling ministry and her friendly ministrations to all.

Bro. J. H. Bradt reports the arrival of Bro. Joseph Luff at Boston. Brn. Bullard, Fisher, and others were actively at work.

By an oversight the report of the High Priests' Quorum in the last General Conference Minutes appears unsigned. It should have the signatures of Bro. Charles Derry, President, and Brn. H. A. Stebbins and R. M. Elvin, Secretaries, as in the original.

Bro. J. S. Strain, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, had been visiting Saints at Macedonia, Wheeler's Grove, and at other local points. He found all well and earnest in the spirit of the work.

By letter from Bro. J. G. Stewart, we learn that Bro. William Britton, an aged veteran in the cause of Christ and presiding elder of the church at Garden City, Kansas, passed from this life on the 12th inst., funeral services being conducted by Bro. Gordon E. Deuel. Bro. Stewart also sends a contribution to aid in the gospel work. Notwithstanding, he is living in what is termed "drouth-stricken Kansas," he is determined to fulfill all the law relative to the celestial kingdom and have a part in the publication of the gospel of peace.

Brn. S. V. Bailey and A. S. Cochran, of Lamoni, held services at Allendale, Missouri, on Sunday, the 14th inst. Bro. Bailey baptized three—Bro. Joseph Robedau, wife, and daughter, formerly of Detroit, Minnesota.

Sr. C. C. Judkins, of Midway, Arkansas, has not heard a sermon for three years, and asks Brn. H. H. Robinson and J. W. Jackson to labor at Midway, if possible. They will be cared for at her home. She has relatives in Bro. Erwin's field, whom she desires him to visit, of whom we suggest that she write him personally.

Fifteen were baptized at St. Joseph, Missouri, the last quarter. As Bro. J. M. Terry states it, "some substantial ones."

Bro. Thomas Wellington baptized three near his residence, three and a half miles northeast of Lamoni, on July 7. He has been preaching near there at intervals all summer, and those baptized are some of the results of the sowing of the seed by the preaching of the word.

Letters from Brn. F. Gregory, St. Mary's Ontario; J. D. Erwin, Garland, Alabama; F. C. Smith, Grawn, Michigan; D. M. Rudd, Rhodes, Iowa; will appear in next issue, nothing preventing. All alive and in the heat of the fray.

Bro. Columbus Scott started for Tama county, Iowa, on the 16th inst., to meet Elder W. P. Gray, an Apostolic Disciple, in discussion on questions involving the truth of the Book of Mormon, the Book of Covenants, and the church each represents.

Letters noted because of limited space. Bro. Oscar Case, of Moorehead, Iowa, is pleased to read of progress made by the church. He accepted the responsibilities of the eldership about one year ago; and in the performance of duty the promise of divine aid has been realized. He desires to do good. Bro. G. H. Hilliard had been with the Moorehead Saints to their encouragement and strength.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly has returned to his field in Southern Indiana, after a brief rest at home.

Tent work is prospering in the city of Council Bluffs; good congregations every night; some seeking for truth; so writes a brother of late.

Sr. M. A. Twaddle reports the Southern California reunion well under way at Downey with Brn. W. W. Blair, J. F. Burton, W. Gibson, Wilmer Gilbert, H. L. Holt, Charles Baly, W. P. Pickering, A. Carmichael, and Nelson Van Fleet present; and all looking forward to a season of spiritual refreshing and social enjoyment. Attendance good. Minutes with particulars later on.

The Herald Office people acknowledge a friendly call from Professor Fessler, of Stanberry, Missouri, Normal College, who visited us on the 19th. We found the Professor thoughtful on the main problems, and progressive.

Letters—late arrivals—are from Bro. W. H. Kelley, Temple, Ohio; H. P. Curtis, Porcupine, Wisconsin; C. H. Porter, Hebron, Nebraska; C. E. Butterworth, Cherokee, Iowa; part or all of which will be published next week, space permitting. Bro. Kelley, we notice, has just returned home from a trip into New York State, East Pharsalia, where lions are wont to come out of their lairs, except in the month of July, being the objective point. Particulars later on. Bro. Curtis' letter has good news of success in that field. Bro. A. H. Smith is with him. Bro. Porter is among the drought-stricken regions of Nebraska; Saints encouraged in the gospel in the face of two failures in crops and prospects of a third. Bro. Butterworth is so closely engaged in meeting ministerial opponents that we must let his letter speak in behalf of himself and Brn. McDowell and Hunt, his collaborators. The elders certainly are busily engaged, showing the valor called for in the army of the Lord.

The Governor of Wyoming was implored on the 16th inst. to protect settlers from an Indian outbreak, which is feared on all sides. Fort Washakie is the nearest military post.

Crops are "fair to good" in many of the Western States. Harvest hands are in great demand in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

The Rev. H. G. Vincent of Pencader Presbyterian church at Glasgow, Delaware, has resigned because of the General Assembly's treatment of Dr. Briggs. He will become an Episcopalian.

DRINK THREE PINTS OF WATER DAILY.

"A reason," says a physician, "why I often prescribe one of the mineral waters for my patient and have them take it daily in considerable quantities is simply to give them sufficient water. It is an error committed by many otherwise sensible and intelligent persons that drinking much water interferes with digestion. One of those persons said to me lately: 'I rarely drink a swallow of water; a cup of coffee with my breakfast, a cup of tea or chocolate with my luncheon, and an after-dinner cup of coffee again with my dinner, that is practically all the liquid I take' (this with an air of conscious rectitude). To begin with, tea, coffee, chocolate, or beer, wine, and like are not substitutes for water, which is one of the most important of all substances required for the nourishment of the body. Don't drain a half-pint glass of iced water just as you sit down to eat: that is palpably injurious; but do have a big glass of water that has been boiled and cooled brought to you on waking, and by the time the bath and toilet have been accomplished and breakfast is to be taken the water will not be an interfering agent. About three pints of water a day should be regularly taken; fully this is needed by the system."

"Be not selfish in thy greed
Pass it on!
Live for self, you live in vain,
Live for Christ, you live again;
Live for him, with him you reign—
Pass it on."

A PETITION.

O Thou who art Father of all,
Hear us while we pray.
Strengthen us to obey thy call,
And keep the "narrow way."
Send showers of blessings upon us,
And lead us in paths of peace,
And courage and light O give us,
And our faith in thee increase.

We are in the furnace of trial,
And our sufferings are great.
O comfort us with thy smile,
And give us patience to wait.
But affliction maketh us better,
And it draws us nearer to thee,
And we pray for faith to sustain us,
In all trials that are to be.

For unless we suffer with thee
With thee we shall not reign,
Nor witness thy glorious triumph,
When in splendor thou comest again.
Then send us a testimony
Of this holy gospel of thine,
And help us to truly serve thee
And trust in thy love divine.

For it is promised unto us,
That all who believe and obey,
They shall know the will of the Father
In this the latter day.
Then in the first resurrection,
May we rise with thee to reign,
And dwell in the city of Zion
Forever and ever. Amen.

FOUNTAIN GREEN, Illinois, July 2.

Dear Sisters:—I write a few lines to redeem a promise made to some of the sisters when I was at the conference. They wanted to know my thoughts and feelings about the sisters following the silly fashions of the world. I don't think that it is right to load their hats with ribbons, and artificial flowers, and feathers. I don't see any utility or beauty therein. I have reason to think that it is pride and that their hearts are set more on those things than on their religion. Another thing, those large sleeves with cloth enough in them to make a child a dress! My dear sisters, don't the good book say, "Come out of here my people"? and "Let your garments be plain and the workmanship of your own hands"? Now I think that the money that those extra trimmings and large sleeves cost would do more good in the Bishop's hands to send more elders into the field than to adorn your hats.

I do not want to hurt anyone's feelings, but I think it my duty to warn you all against pride. It was the downfall of the Nephites. They were lifted up in the pride of their hearts to wearing of costly apparel and forgot the Lord their God who had so often delivered them out of the power of their enemies and blessed them with great abundance. When I was at the Spring Conference and looking over the congregation, my mind went back to the old church, and I could not but think of the plainness of our bonnets and dresses, and we wore them for comfort and not for show. We had no little pretence of a bonnet not bigger than your hand trimmed to extremes. We thought more of sending the gospel to the world that was dying in ignorance and darkness. I don't think it is right to hold entertainments in the house of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints to make money.

I attended the debate at Blandinsville. I am pleased to say that Brother Williams did nobly and made an opening there that will do much in the future. We expect Brn. Roth and Evans to set the tent there this week, and hope that it will be the means of much good. Your sister in the cause we love, KATHARINE SALISBURY.

DES MOINES, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—I have just been reading the letter in the Home Column from Sr. Cora B. Cohrt, and the beautiful trust displayed therein brought tears to my eyes. I was reminded of the words of a certain sister. Not long ago she said to me, "If I were you I wouldn't get married. Your trouble will begin then. You're too young yet, anyway. [I'm twenty.] You don't want to burden your life so soon." I wonder if her tender, loving, bright-eyed, sunny-haired husband knows or even dreams that she deems the holy tie which binds her to him a burden. If marriage is a burden I shall always be too young to enter into it. But true marriage, pure and holy, is ordained of God, and I am foolish enough to believe that marriage is no burden save when the contracting parties make it so. There may be trials and responsibilities, but trials come to young and old, single or married, and to the Saints, with each trial there comes grace from above strengthening and cheering the heart for life's warfare.

How many times we hear unkind remarks about young people who appear happy in each other's society, such as, "If they were not happy now when would they ever be? Just wait awhile." "O it's all well enough now. A new broom sweeps clean," etc., implying that the first happiness of married life is not lasting. Nine times out of ten these remarks come from persons who are possessors of happy homes, and I cannot believe that they are spoken from the heart. But the words spoken fall upon some hopeful young heart as frost upon the tender plant.

I am at present enjoying single blessedness, but if God wills it that I reign queen of a pure and godly heart and have bestowed upon me such a priceless treasure as the pure love of that heart, may the sod cover my head before I consider it a burden to perform my duty toward the one who, next to God, would rightly claim the first place in my life. A labor of love is one of sweetness. There is nothing more ennobling than to live for another.

O the peace, the joy of a home where bickering and strife and unkind words are unknown, but where instead there is found love and self-sacrifice. There, the Spirit of God dwells. Husband and wife, one indeed, each living for the other and both living for God. Where is the burden? Where is the bondage?

I do not speak of married life from my own experience of course, but I speak from the experience of others whom I know, and my own experience could be no better than theirs.

While the wife may have cares she is not alone. The husband also has care and responsibility resting upon him. He has his wife and little ones depending upon him for support, and his strength is taxed to the utmost in his effort for their welfare. It is a selfish wife indeed who expects her husband to bear all his trials and disappointments alone while she lives in idleness, free from care and anxiety, making no effort to render his life happier or to lighten his load. Rather let her share his every hope and ambition, trial and disappointment. Let her lips speak loving words of encouragement and her hand smooth the lines of care from the aching brow. This will prove no burden if she is a true wife, and if she is aught else, I fear her husband finds her a still greater burden than she deems him.

Now ye burdened (?) wives, please pardon my boldness in writing thus to you, and when I enter your ranks I shall strive to practice what I preach. "OLIVIA."

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri.

Dear Sisters:—As I find myself alone on this Sabbath day, I thought I would like to write a few lines to the dear old Herald. While I know that I am the weakest of the weak, yet I feel to rejoice in the gospel of Jesus Christ, for I can truly say, "I know that it is the power of God unto salvation." I love to be numbered among the Saints of God, and am glad to be able to bear a little of the shame and trials that our Savior bore. When I contemplate the bright crown that awaits the faithful, I feel to thank God, and pray that we may all be faithful to the end. I am permitted to meet with the Saints only once in a great while, so the Herald and Ensign are about all the preaching that I have. The people here are very much opposed to this latter-day work, and often when I give out my papers for them to read, this passage of Scripture is brought to my mind: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." But I still hope that the seed sown may bring forth some fruit.

Your sister in the faith,
SALOME CAIRNS.

[DEAR SISTER:—If we hope to reap we must sow beside all waters. We do not know which will thrive, the seed sown here or in another place; but we must sow in faith, looking to God for the increase, and if our own hearts are purified and our own lives conformed to the gospel of Christ, we shall not labor in vain. Truth must triumph. The day of her triumph may be near or it may be far, but it is certain to come, and all who labor to establish her reign, will surely receive their reward.—ED.]

REWARD.

Dedicated to "Aunt Sarah" Luckey.

Peaceful as the gentle wind,
Restful as the setting sun,
Are the glories of that mind
Which at the last can say, "Well done!"
Sadly weak, the body worn,
Whose years have reached their farthest span;
But strong that soul, and free from storm
Where "life's waters" have been the balm.

O, life's frail bark! Contending tides
And threat'ning storms and rocks opposed,

But now thou'st crossed, and safely ride
Celestial shores in blest repose.

Thou didst choose the better part,
And thy life's voyage is nearly run;
Receive from Him, O gentle heart,
Heaven's reward, "Thou hast well done!"

GEORGE BARRETT.

LAMONI, Iowa, Sunday, July 14, 1895.

Letter Department.

DEERFIELD, Mo., July 15.

Editors Herald:—As I am privileged to read the good and encouraging news the dear Herald brings every week from all parts of the world, some are just as anxious to hear from here as we are from other localities.

I have been actively engaged in preaching since General Conference. I assisted nearly four weeks in the protracted meetings at El Dorado Springs and it was a success, if Clark Braden did lecture against us. The work is firmly planted in El Dorado. It has come to stay. There seems to be an interest for preaching all over this district; calls for preaching more than can be filled, and as I don't have to preside over this district this year, I want to do all I can towards opening up new places. There is no time for idleness among the priesthood. O, the need of Saints living righteous lives and keeping the commandments of God! The Spirit has admonished us to come up higher.

I am now preaching at Deerfield in a hall hired by outsiders. Two ladies hired the hall, paying five dollars per week for it. One lady belongs to the Christian Church, the other to the Missionary Baptist Church. You can see which way the wind blows. We are having good crowds and interesting listeners, and the very best of liberty in preaching. Bro. F. Belkham has assisted me. The ladies that hired the hall heard preaching last winter at the Hackbury schoolhouse when it was closed against me, so they wanted to hear more. I never have seen a building closed against us but what two more places would be opened.

I feel encouraged; I don't feel like giving up until the battle is won. May God bless all the dear Saints and those outsiders who have cared for my temporal wants. May his blessings be with the wives of all his ministry, because surely they are the ones that make the sacrifice.

Yours for truth,

F. C. KECK.

ANGOLA, Kan., July 5.

Editors Herald:—I am holding forth here, but it is a busy time among the farmers and difficult to get them out to meeting. The glorious Fourth was not celebrated in this locality in "pomp and splendor" but in a quiet, orderly manner at the homes of friends and relatives; and that is a splendid way to celebrate. In addition to home amusements, there was a sideshow carried on quite successfully in the timber by the Holiness people. In company with some brethren and sisters we attended their services in the afternoon. At the close of the preaching service it rained and the people assembled under the tent for shelter; therefore I requested the privilege of the preacher to testify while nothing was going on. I was a stranger in their midst and they did not know to what pew I belonged. The minister called them to order and stated, "Here is a brother, who desires to bear his testimony." As I arose upon my seat, so that all could see and hear, I was greeted with several amens, "Glory to God," "Bless our souls," etc. I told them I believed in people being just as holy as it was possible for them to be; the holier the better. "Amen, glory to God!" But their exclamations suddenly ceased when I began to talk about the plan of salvation. I told them what the principles of the gospel were, and that it required obedience to those principles before we could be saved in the celestial kingdom of God. Then I said, "These signs shall follow them that believe," etc. Here I was interrupted by several who felt inclined to ask questions. "What are you driving at?" "Say, brother, tell us what Jesus has done for you, we know all about the gospel." I replied that if they would keep still I would. "I took up the sign question again, but my voice was drowned by one of their old revival songs, "The old-time religion is good enough for me."

At the close of the song "a holy man of God," jumped up on the seat and said his soul was afire with the Holy Ghost. He talked a few moments about the signs and said he believed everything in the Bible. "Bless God," etc. The brother sat down, and I arose and stated that I desired to continue my speech, as they had interrupted me with their singing. No amens this time. I quoted John 3: 5 and told them that a man must be born of water and the Spirit before he could enter the kingdom of God. "We don't believe in water salvation." "Yes," I replied, "but Jesus Christ did." They started up another song and I sat down. The crowd gathered around me and wanted to know where I came from, what I belonged to, and what we believed. I told them if they had not interrupted me they would have found out. I stated our belief to them and emphasized the thought that one must be baptized for the remission of sins. The minister said, "That is not necessary, and the Bible doesn't teach it." I told him the Bible did teach it, and challenged him to affirm that it didn't, and I would negative his arguments before this congregation. He said he wasn't in that kind of business; he didn't believe in argument. I replied, that I would not believe in argument either if I had as weak a faith as he had. Several of the brethren and sisters gathered around me and asked if I was without sin. I told them it was possible for me to sin, and if I did, I had an advocate with the Father. "Now brother, won't you get down on your knees and let us pray for you?" "Get sanctified to-day." I kindly told them God did not pay much attention to people's prayers, when they discarded the words of Christ. (John 3: 5.) I arose and advertised my meetings, and invited them all out, and we expect a good crowd.

NORWALK, Conn., July 11.

Editors Herald:—After spending six Sabbaths, giving three sermons each and one every night during the week except two evenings when it rained, we packed tent and shipped by boat to this place, commencing operations Sunday morning. The effort in the city was not as successful as we hoped for. However, we sowed the gospel seed to as many as would come out. The first two weeks was our largest audiences except on Sunday evenings. During the week nights our audience was small. One, at least, I think, will find her way into the fold as a result.

Bro. Robley has been at Baldwin, Maryland, for ten days; some interest manifested. People are anxious here for meetings, so I will commence, and hope for help, as I am alone.

BENNINGTON, Mich., July 10.

Editors Herald:—The scattered Saints of this region of Michigan collected on the banks of Shiawassee River, Shiawassee town, to celebrate the Fourth of July, which they did in the Saints' peculiar way,—in preaching and prayer and testimony meeting. Elder Blackmore, who is laboring in Brant, Saginaw county, who came with other Brant Saints, was chosen chairman of the day. By motion Elder Phelps, of Grand Rapids, preached us a sermon in the forenoon, then after a beautiful picnic dinner the time was spent in pleasant converse and rowing on the river. Then came prayer and testimony meeting. Some thought it would have been better to have had that before breaking our fast. Bro. Horton, of Williamston, Ingham county, was with us; also the Saints from Flint, Genesee county; Durand, Burton, and Bennington, Shiawassee county; and Sr. Supry, of Lansing, who had been visiting some of the Saints, cheering and comforting by her genial presence. We all went home feeling it was good to be a Saint in latter days.

A drouth is prevailing in this region, and the Saints have somewhat to discourage them, but they all seem filled with love for the cause, and desirous of paying their tithing as often as convenient. Those living near enough together, meet and enjoy sweet communion with their Lord.

Yours in hope,

ELJA S. THAYER.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, July 15.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Hilliard was in our district a few weeks ago and attended our conference held at Hamburgh and commenced his noble work at that place, preaching the word and expounding the law of life in Christ Jesus, in a very forcible and plain manner, causing the hearts of the Saints, and all lovers of truth and right to rejoice in God; enabling them to feel grateful to him for the revelation of such a law as will enable them through obedience to reach celestial glory; and dwell in the presence of the Father and the Son.

We visited with him Mill Creek, Shenandoah, Tabor, and Plum Hollow. In all these places the Saints were cheered and comforted in the word and hope of eternal life. At Plum Creek I left him to visit Glenwood and Farm Creek with other brethren, equally interested in the work with myself.

Bro. O. B. Thomas is doing what he can for the work in this district. He has done good work, to the satisfaction of the Saints and friends in several points, and is now trying to open up the work in Red Oak, Stennett, and adjacent schoolhouses. We expect to join with him so far as is practicable.

Bro. D. Hougas is working his way, holding two days' meetings with the assistance of Bro. Thomas in Glenwood and on Farm Creek. All the presidents of branches are doing what they can for the work in their respective neighborhoods, preaching in their branches, trying to keep the Saints alive, and stirring them up to duty; and some are spreading out in the regions around their branches, and making themselves approved of God as workmen in his vineyard.

We spent yesterday, Sunday, in this place—Shenandoah; preached morning and evening to good, attentive audiences; had good liberty. The Saints seem to be alive to the interest of the work. The Sunday school is in a prosperous condition under the management of Sr. Pace, who has always been a faithful worker in this cause. Bro. Leadingham is doing the best he can to teach, instruct, and keep a lively interest moving for good. All the officers have good desires, and we are all striving to overcome our imperfections, and get a better understanding of the work and its needs, and to better understand one another, that we may be able to labor in unity and in harmony with the law.

I attended the Nodaway district conference held in the Long Branch Union church, June 22 and 23, and was made glad to meet with Bro. Lambert, whose wise counsels and admonitions in business meetings were of great help to us all, and highly appreciated; and as he so faithfully, zealously, and ably expounded the word of God to Saints and those non-members, our hearts were made glad.

The Saints in the Nodaway district are up to the times. They have a tent that will be worked by Bro. E. B. Morgan, assisted by Bro. John Ford and others this summer, and we trust that a good work will be done. Bro. M. P. Madison as district president, with E. B. Morgan as missionary, and other faithful coloborers, trusting in the promises of the Master, can hardly fail to do a good work this summer. May God speed the cause to its ultimate triumph and victory.

Your brother,

HENRY KEMP.

MAGNOLIA, Minn., July 13.

Editors Herald:—Having recently been left alone on account of illness in Bro. Anderson's family, which called him home, and as I am only a new beginner in the work, it sometimes makes me feel lonely to have such a faithful coloborer absent.

When Bro. Anderson last wrote we were at Hills, a small town about twenty miles west. After holding a week's meeting, which resulted in baptizing three good and noble Christians, we started for Salem, South Dakota. On our arrival we were hailed by Brn. Howery and Rooker, the former being the presiding elder, the latter the priest of same branch, who gladly took us to their homes. After preaching there for two weeks we were taken over some fifteen miles northwest where a few isolated Saints live, to hold meetings in neighboring schoolhouses. I staid almost two weeks, while Bro. Anderson went back to hold meetings in a small village where our faith has been unknown till now. The Christian church was procured, while the Christian minister and his wife led the singing. He heartily indorsed all that was said the first night, but as the services continued he was led into doctrine too strong for his digestive capacity, so on the last night he brought his encyclopedias and was going to undermine our house that is founded upon a rock; but before the discourse was ended he had no use for his line of argument. Like a frost it melted before the morning sun. He could only get up and plead ignorance. He did not know what God wanted to speak to man for in the nineteenth century. He was informed that under the different creeds of the world to-day, all claiming to be the right one and none of them identical in faith, practice, and organization with the primitive church, it was essential for God to call laborers into his vineyard and say, "Thus saith the Lord;" for his gospel was to be preached in all the world before the end comes, and that it was to come with authority as in the days of Christ when he taught them as one having authority and not as the scribes. He wanted to debate but would not defend his organization.

This is not the only place where opposition is raging, for on our arrival at this place the church that was built for union purposes has been closed by the M. E. pastor. Several are very near the kingdom, and that is what makes them rage so. I clip the following from a paper published here:—

"Rev. H. Jones, of Adrian, was here Tuesday, conferring with his church people in regard to closing the church at this place and only allow its use by the Methodists for religious services hereafter. We are informed that the above action was decided upon and ordered carried into effect at once. Comment on our part is not called for, as most of our people are aware how and by whom the church was built. It is to be hoped that the church will be opened as heretofore for use by all Christian organizations."

The Saints here are few in number, but energetic, and are highly esteemed by outsiders, as will be seen.

I am going to hold meetings Sunday at Bro. and Sr. Premo's and on Monday will go to Hills. As harvest is now in full blast it is going to be hard to get hearings in the country. Crops are splendid, although late frost has damaged corn that is on low ground to some extent. Good liberty manifested most of the time.

In gospel bonds,

D. T. TYSON.

OREGON, Wis., July 11.

Editors Herald:—It would do your hearts and very souls good to come into our gospel tent some of these evenings and see the crowds of earnest, anxious people that gather in to hear what they say is the wonderful gospel of Christ. Truly was the Prophet Isaiah inspired when he uttered those words, "Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work, . . . even a marvelous work and a wonder."

This is our third year in gospel tent work, and at other times we thought we had large crowds and fine interest, which indeed we had; but what is manifest here in Oregon exceeds anything we have ever seen. Old gray-headed men and women, the middle aged, young men, and young women by the scores came to hear, and manifest that they are interested; while at the same time in this little town of only six or seven hundred people there is a theater troop playing at the hall every night, and three or four other churches with their regular meetings going on at the same time. Last evening and the evening before more than two hundred people were out to hear our preaching and the interest is increasing.

Yesterday we had the privilege of leading two precious souls, heads of families, into the kingdom of God. Others have declared their intentions to come in soon. Thus the glorious word goes on, gathering into the fold the honest in heart. May the Lord give us wisdom to preach his word acceptably. The brother, William Robinson, whom we baptized yesterday, was until yesterday the class leader, and leader of the Epworth League, and in full fellowship and high standing in the M. E. Church. Sr. Robinson was also one of their leaders in their Sabbath school, and leader of the Junior League.

E. W. WILDERMUTH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 4.

Editors Herald:—I have read your valuable paper with more than ordinary interest, and fully appreciate the good work in which you are engaged; but I am pained to read the article in your last issue, entitled, "Strikes, with violence, unlawful."

I am indeed surprised to see you take the view of the situation that you seem to.

It seems self-evident that the laborers of this country are becoming more numerous, and as they live under the competitive system they must compete with one another, and as there are monopolies of land, machinery, and all products, the poor are on the increase and the rich are getting fewer and richer—to prove this take the principle of "interest" and study it.

Did not the Lord say, "I will be a swift witness against the . . . and the oppressor of the laborer in his wages"?

Read what James says in fifth chapter, fourth verse, which shows how the apostles felt about the rich and the laborers.

These things in themselves oblige you to be well informed for you must not be an accessory to the oppressor, even unconsciously

Did you not assume in your article that Mr. Debs was being punished for the part he took in the riots? Now everybody knows that he continually exhorted his men to obey the law. And an injunction was issued at the request of the General Managers' Association restraining him from speaking or corresponding with his men, and his attorney advised him to disobey the injunction and to demand a trial by jury—to which he is entitled by the national Constitution. He was adjudged guilty of contempt of court by the Federal Court, (for the injunction was purposely taken out in said court.) To put the government on record an appeal was taken to the United States Supreme Court by defendant, (E. V. Debs.) and a decision was given affirming the judgment of the lower court. Now a trial by jury was refused by the Federal Court, and the Supreme Court in order to establish a precedent, affirmed. Now then, it's all fixed, the next time a strike comes they will jail the leaders for contempt and suppress the indignation of the poor laborer with force—such as bullets, swords, etc., etc.

It was never contended by the prosecution that Mr. Debs was in any of the riots, or took any part in them—but simply was guilty of contempt of court, still all the papers in the country (Herald included) have told their readers a falsehood.

Now, dear brother, you are simply at fault for not proving all things and holding fast to that which is good. I wish that you, as a servant of the Lord, would work more in harmony with him, for he is the light.

Comfort those who are oppressed, with the assurance that when he comes he will avenge them and will be their Messiah.

The powers of the earth will not always be, for governments are like men, and earthly men are like animals. Earthly men are in darkness and so are the kingdoms of the earth, unless they have the light and use it they cannot see, and must perish.

You must not prove a thing by taking what some other paper has said (the Chicago Tribune, for instance) for the press of these days are greedy after filthy lucre and will always side with it—not with justice and right without money.

I should think the Saints of Missouri and Illinois can realize how easily injustice can temporarily triumph.

Hoping you will continue to do the Lord's work and do it well I shall remember you in my prayers.

May the Spirit of the Master guide you in my prayer in Jesus' name.

Your brother,

O. J. G. PRESTON.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 12.

Editors Herald:—We are having good interest in our tent meetings at Armourdale, Kansas (a part of Kansas City, Kansas, proper). I believe we have now found a plan by which we can reach the outside world better than in any other way. If we went to the corners of the streets we could not get the respect that we can by having a tent, yet the tent can be placed so near the corners of the streets and almost in the way of the passers-by that it is so easy for them to step in and listen, at least for a little while; and some who do not intend to stay, and perhaps will stand on the outside for a few moments, will conclude to take a seat, and the next evening will come to stay, and come early; and in this way we can catch the ears of the honest in heart.

Churches are so far away and hall stairways so hard to climb, and in places like the two Kansas cities nine-tenths of the people are bound up in bundles, or in other words, they belong to some church or other society, that they have no time to go to Latter Day Saints' meeting; such a thing is entirely out of the question.

We have one church in Kansas City, Missouri, and one in Kansas City, Kansas, and a branch just organized in the northern suburb of Kansas City, Kansas, called the Chelsea Park branch. All these three branches are in good condition and using every effort in their power to advance the work, but all the brethren in these branches are sons of toil and cannot do much only in a local way. With the assistance of quite a number of the brethren we raised the first tent on Saturday, July 6, we believe, that was ever raised in this part of the country by the church. The tent stands thirty-one by forty-five feet, nineteen feet high, and made from the very best material—twelve ounce army duck on the top, hand sewed, heavily roped. The walls are eight ounce army duck, machine sewed, roped top and bottom. The tent cost one hundred and fifteen dollars. It was made at Independence, Missouri. The tent stands at the corner of the Shanee Park in a first-class location, and has been overcrowded every night since it was put up. The speaking has mostly been done by the local brethren. Elder I. N. White spoke the first Sunday morning and evening. The brethren have tracts on hand to place in the hand of those who come.

Bro. Luff, missionary in charge, has permitted us to have the assistance of Elder R. W. Davis to look after the interest of the tent. He stays at the tent from nine to twelve and from two to four o'clock to wait on parties who wish to ask questions, and also visit the houses of those who request him to do so. He is assisted by Elder George Hicklin, of Armstrong. Yesterday evening we hoisted an American flag on the tent. We wanted to show the people that we honored our nation and country and were loyal to our government. Hoisting the stars and stripes in Armourdale signifies much, as this is a hotbed of the A. P. A. Although we are not now members of nor do not know that we ever shall belong to this society.

I wish we were in such a condition financially that we could have six such tents in this district. Two could be used in Kansas City, Missouri, two in Kansas City, Kansas, and the other two in other parts of the district. I believe this could be done in a business way and each tent be self-sustaining, and if carried on in the right way would not cost anything to the church. Some of our people are very tender-footed in this way and think it is almost a crime to take up collections, but if such persons were Bishop's agents for awhile they would perhaps change their minds, especially if they had as much financial difficulty to contend with for the lack of church moneys as the writer has had in the past few months.

I feel jealous when I see how diligent other people are in pushing forward their church interests. Should we be behind? No; we ought to be in the lead; for we are supposed to be the light of the world.

Yours in Christ,

RODERICK MAY.

MACHIAS, Maine, July 8.

Editors Herald:—On June 16 I attended the Eastern Maine conference at Indian River and spoke once on Sunday. I then, in company with my brother, S. O., went to Machiasport, where I preached two sermons. We left a very good impression, so we learned. I then visited Little Kennebec, the place where Elder T. W. Smith raised up a branch and built a chapel twenty-six years ago.

I found the old shingles on the roof that had been on for twenty-six years very poor, and each rainstorm was leaking through on the plastering, so I called for help of the people for shingles and nails, and in a short time ten thousand shingles were at the house and nails to put them on. I called for help to shingle the roof, and the good boys and men responded and thirteen of us soon had the house in good shape once more.

The ladies thought the inside ought to be cleaned, so five of them went to work and cleaned up the inside and put up new curtains at the windows. While at work I could but look back on the happy days gone by, when Bro. Smith was here and labored so hard for the cause of the blessed Master. I could only say, Dear Thomas, you are gone to the Master. Ended your hard toil and labor here, but now at rest.

I preached eleven times in the chapel to a full house of attentive listeners. On Sunday I baptized one man; others are very near the kingdom.

Yours truly,
J. C. FOSS:

"SHARPS."

EDITORS HERALD:—Permit me, please, through your paper to thank you for your notice of C. A. Wickes, the "shrewd" or "unfortunate man," as you have denominated him under the above head in the Herald of the 3d inst., and to place myself on record as one of the so-called "Whitmerites" who does not indorse the proceedings of C. A. Wickes or his motto as is clearly manifest in the now so-called Return.

Just think of it! He says: "We take it up right where he dropped it." This statement is not true in any sense of the word, either spiritual or literal. The spirit of E. Robinson's Return and the spirit of C. A. Wickes' Return differ as much from each other as daylight differs from dark, as anyone may see. In a literal sense, Wickes did not take "it up right where" E. Robinson dropped it. Elder E. Robinson dropped the paper in the hands of his wife at his death, and his wife turned the paper over to George W. L. Schweich, of Richmond, Missouri, and the executors of the Adam's estate, and notified subscribers that George W. L. Schweich would publish the paper. Schweich published the paper under contract with the executors for twelve months, at the end of which time the executors concluded to suspend the publication for an indefinite short time. In the meantime John C. Whitmer died, leaving Schweich the only approved executor, and while Schweich was making preparations to recommence the issue, lo and behold, C. A. Wickes crawls into the editorial chair of George W. L. Schweich, issues the now so-called Return, ignoring the twelve months' issue by Schweich, and says: "My paper." Is such a procedure right, either morally or religiously? Who but a crank or a "very unfortunate man," can indorse such proceedings?

The writer sounded the alarm of an approaching head to the church, called "Whitmerites," in two articles of protest in this so-called Return, and yet there are three as literally and practically at the head of a few of the so-called Whitmerites as there are at the head of the so-called Josephites. But it would not be justice to call those "few" Whitmerites; for they have trampled the precepts and teaching of David Whitmer under their feet; hence, it would be just as proper to call those "few" "Wickesites," as it would be to call the Reorganized Church, "Josephites."

The Wickesites may deny this assertion. If so, let them open the columns of the now so-called Return to the writer, and proofs will not be wanting.

Respectfully yours for truth,

ELIAS LAND.

"SAY NOTHING BUT REPENTANCE UNTO THIS GENERATION."—No. 2.

BY ELDER E. STAFFORD.

WE might go on pointing out other portions of the doctrine of Christ that they ignore, or cannot endure. Some of the religionists of the day reject one portion of the gospel, some other portions. Many deny that baptism is for the remission of sins, while the word declares that John, the forerunner of Christ, who came to prepare the way before him and make his paths straight, baptized for the remission of sins; and Mark says his preaching was "the beginning of the gospel" in that age; and Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost received in that remarkable endowment, while preaching to those that inquired what they must do to be saved, said:—

Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

Some accept that part of the gospel—that baptism is for the remission of sins, but deny that men must be authorized by direct revelation to preach and perform the rite; and thus that which is performed is not baptism, because they run before they are sent; and having no authority to act, their performance is not lawful in the sight of God; thus they are not preaching the doctrine of Christ. All denominations of professing Christians ignore the laying on of hands for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, which was an ordinance in the Church of God in the days of the apostles, as witnessed in Acts, chapters 8, 9, and 19.

We might bring other predictions from the Old Testament prophets showing that there would be a departure from the doctrine of Christ in the last days, but think what we have already given will be sufficient to satisfy the candid mind that there has been an apostasy from the true faith, or the gospel.

It is often stated by honest inquirers for the truth, when our elders are discouraging upon the apostasy from and the necessity of a restoration of the gospel, that they cannot see a necessity for a restoration of the gospel, it having been handed down to us through the medium of the New Testament. But it takes something more than the letter or word to constitute the gospel. The Apostle Paul, in his first letter to the Thessalonians, 1: 5, says:—

For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance.

We see that it requires something else to compose the gospel besides the mere word. It requires the power or authority delegated from God to preach that word; for Paul in the tenth chapter of Romans asks the question, "How shall they preach except they be sent [of God]?" And in Hebrews he says:—

No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.—Hebrews 5: 4.

It requires the power or authority from God to administer in the ordinance of baptism, spoken of in the word; the word or Bible could not officiate in that ordinance. It also requires the authority or power of God delegated to man to officiate, after the baptism of water for the remission of sins, in the ordinance of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost; and after a man is born of that Spirit, then comes the much assurance; for as the word says, "The Spirit beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God;" for the spirit in the one that has been born of water has been born of the Spirit, fulfilling Christ's word. We do not deny that men may have had portions of the Holy Spirit given to them in all ages—men who have had a desire to do good. No doubt many noble souls have; but we do deny that men can be born of that Spirit, receive it as an abiding Comforter, except by complying with the conditions that God has laid down by which the sons of men can receive that birth. We see, then, that if the gospel had been kept inviolate from the days of Christ until now there would have been open communication with the heavens; there necessarily would have to be for men to be sent of God to preach and administer the gospel; and the fact that religious professors admit that for eighteen hundred years and upwards, there has been no direct communication from heaven, argues that the gospel has not continued.

But the Savior predicted that "this [the same] gospel of the kingdom" should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations before the end should come. The Savior defines the end of the world to be the harvest, as will be found in Matthew 13: 39, 40.

The harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares [or wicked] are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of the world.

John the Revelator was permitted to see in prophetic vision the time when the gospel would be restored, and that it would be by means of an angel from heaven, and just prior to the downfall of spiritual Babylon, and in the hour of God's judgment, and just prior to the coming of the Son of man; also to see the harvest or end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked, as you will find by turning to Revelation 14: 6:—

And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

We can see that at the time this angel was to bring the gospel to be preached, that all the world, every nation, kindred, tongue, and people upon the face of the earth, was without the gospel; for if any portion of the world had it, there would have been no necessity of bringing it, and it could not be said that it was for every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, if any portion of the inhabitants of the earth had it. Here was a sure sign that a departure had taken place from the gospel, and we are further assured of this by the language, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

This is virtually charging all the inhabitants of the earth at the time the angel should bring his gospel message with being estranged from God; with not serving him—with not fearing him, not giving him the glory; but with worshiping a God that did not make the heavens, and earth, and sea, and the fountains of waters. And, according to the various creeds established among professing Christians, as a belief in the God they worshiped it is stated of him that he is without body, parts, or passions; and that he dwells in a place which is stated by them to be beyond the bounds of time and space. This is an impossibility, and an absurdity; for there is neither person, place, nor thing that can exist without space to exist in. Their imaginary God can exist in no way. He is not the God that created Adam, for Adam was created after his image; and his only begotten Son took upon him flesh, and dwelt upon the earth in the form of a man; was crucified, died, and rose again and took his body; and went to where his Father dwelt, and sat at his right hand; so the Scriptures say.

We see, then, that all the inhabitants of the world being in a state of apostasy from the true worship and service of God, having departed from the gospel as taught by Christ and his disciples, there was a necessity for a restoration of the gospel to fulfill the prediction of Christ that the gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations before the time of the end.

It will be seen by reading the fourteenth chapter of Revelation that the time that the angel would restore the gospel again to the earth would be just prior to the downfall of spiritual Babylon; just prior to the coming of the Son of man riding on a white cloud, having in his hand a sharp sickle, coming to reap when the harvest of the earth should be ripe; just prior to the time when the clusters of the vine, whose grapes were fully ripe, were gathered and cast into the great winepress of the wrath of God; or just prior to the end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked.

When the gospel was first preached by John the Baptist, the Savior and his disciples, they began to preach it among the Jews. The gospel ensign was raised first among them, and then went to the Gentiles; but of the restoration of the gospel in these last days the Lord through the Prophet Isaiah predicted that the ensign or gospel standard would be raised first among the Gentiles, and then go to the house of Israel. In Isaiah 11: 1-9 the prophet portrays the situation of things under the reign of Christ in the millennium, after the destruction of the wicked. But of the condition of affairs prior to that time, he says:—

And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious.—Isa. 11: 10.

It may occur to the minds of some that because of a description of the condition of things having been given before the 10th verse, that what is said to take place in that verse must take place after the other; but we think little reflection will dissipate that conclusion. Paul says:—

There remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God.—Heb. 4: 9.

Peter in his first epistle says that the people of God are made so, by this process:—

Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. . . . And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.—1 Peter 1: 23, 25.

The "rest" of the root of Jesse or Christ, is only for the people of God. To become the people of God and eligible to that rest the Gentiles would have to seek to the gospel ensign, which is the ensign of Christ, or the root of Jesse, and yield obedience to that gospel, being born again; and before they could yield obedience to that ensign, or seek to it, it must be set up, or the gospel be restored. We conclude from the foregoing that what is stated in the tenth verse must take place before the rest referred to in the foregoing verses can be obtained either by Gentile or Jew.

It may be a sort of puzzle to some how I arrive at the conclusion that Jesus is the root of Jesse. Well, we will explain. I present the following:—

I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfill all my will. Of his man's seed hath God, according to this promise, raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus.—Acts 13: 22, 23.

"But," says one, "you have only made him a son of David, and a grandson of Jesse, how can he be the offspring and the root?" Jesus says of himself,

I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star.—Rev. 22: 16.

It is easy to be seen how he became the root of both Jesse and David. In the first chapter of John's Gospel it is written of Christ,

The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.—John 1: 2, 3.

This being true he must have been the creator of man, therefore the root whence man sprung; and he was the root of both Jesse and David, and was the offspring of David through the flesh.

We see that according to the Prophet Isaiah the gospel standard was to be first raised among the Gentiles, and then it was to be raised to the nations of Israel (verse 12), changing the order to what it was in the days when Christ was upon the earth. And this was to be just before he smites the earth with the rod of his mouth and with the breath of his lips slays the wicked (verse 4); thus he agrees with what we have quoted from Revelation 14.

We now turn to Isaiah 18. There the prophet tells us where the ensign shall be raised, agreeing with John the Revelator respecting the time; for it is to be before the harvest—the end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked. He says:—

Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: that sendeth ambassadors by the sea even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled! All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye. For so the Lord said unto me, I will take my rest, and I will consider in my dwelling place like a clear heat upon herbs, and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest. For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruninghooks, and take away and cut down the branches.—Isaiah 18: 1-5.

We see by this prophecy that upon this land shadowing with or symbolized by wings, there is to be an ensign raised and a trumpet blown, which ensign answers to the gospel, and the blowing of the trumpet to the preaching of the same. And it must be that it alludes to the same thing, to take place at the same time that John the Revelator saw when the angel brought the gospel to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; for this gospel ensign concerns all the inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth; and the time of its transpiring is represented to be before the harvest, or end of the world, or the destruction of the wicked, who are represented as the vine of the earth whose grapes are to be reaped and destroyed. And from this land ambassadors are to be sent as swift messengers with the tidings of this gospel ensign, across the waters to a nation scattered and peeled, etc.

No doubt it would be very gratifying to the reader to have this land located, and to know whether or not this angel has restored the gospel, or that this ensign has been raised upon it. To do this I shall quote from Mr. Winchester's "History of the Priesthood," commencing on page 117. He quotes the first and second verses of this 18th chapter of Isaiah, and says:—

Now any person who is acquainted with the Hebrew language, knows that an improvement in the translation of the above can be made with propriety.

It should read thus: "Ho! to the land shadowing with (or in the symbol of) wings, that lies beyond the rivers of Cush." This by no means changes the sense, but reduces it to the modern style of phraseology, which I trust will greatly assist the reader in understanding the true meaning of the prophet.

But now the question is, what land does the prophet address these words to? In order to directly come at this, we must first consider that the prophet resided at Jerusalem, or somewhere near that city; secondly to find the land that he speaks of, it is necessary to be certain as to the location of the land of Cush, or Ethiopia. The general name that the Jews gave all the north part of Africa was "the land of Cush." Ethiopia proper is situated south and southwest of Egypt, and is now called Abyssinia; but according to Herodotus, the Ethiopian nations were very numerous; and it is evident that the Greeks and Romans called the most of the African nations Ethiopians. The writer of the celebrated voyage of Hanno (which is to be found in Mr. Murray's Encyclopedia of Geography) a Carthaginian navigator who attempted to sail around Africa, gives an account of Ethiopians near the Straits of Gibraltar, or Pillars of Hercules; also that he sailed twelve days along the western coast of Africa, which he says was then inhabited by Ethiopians, who were very numerous. This coast is now called the coast of Morocco; hence, the ancient Moors were called Ethiopians or Cushites.

Indeed after a careful research into the history of this people, I have come to the following conclusion: Cush was the son of Ham, and his progeny, soon after the flood, settled somewhere in the neighborhood of the river Euphrates; but at a very early period some of them emigrated to Africa, and at first located somewhere about the head waters of the Nile. According to Josephus these Ethiopians were a powerful nation in the days of Moses; and also that they inhabited the country that lies south, and southwest of Egypt; but they were a warlike people and had a great desire for conquest; hence they soon spread over the north part of Africa; and in consequence of their inhabiting the greatest part of the continent, which was then known to the civilized nations, the Jews called it the land of Cush or Cusheam; but the Greeks and Romans gave it the general name of Ethiopia, and the people they called Ethiopians, the same as we give the inhabitants of Europe the general name of Europeans; although they are divided into many nations; therefore, it is evident that in the days of Isaiah the north part of Africa was called Cush, and the rivers that the prophet alludes to, are those that flow into the Mediterranean sea along the coast of the Barbary States; and also those that flow into the Atlantic Ocean along the coast of Morocco. Now I presume that from the foregoing the reader will readily discover that the prophet alludes to a land that lies directly west of Jerusalem, which course strikes the Atlantic somewhere on the coast of Morocco; but still beyond this is the land in the symbol of wings, which must certainly be America; for this reason, no other land will answer the description of the prophet. Indeed, if the prophet does not speak of this land, then he has wrote a mess of incomprehensible nonsense.

Again, North and South America, as will be seen from a miniature drawing of them on a map, in form and shape, very much resemble the wings of a bird; hence it is a land in the symbol of wings, and in this respect no other part of the globe will answer this description of the prophet.

We then have found the land the prophet spoke of, where this gospel-ensign was to be raised to all the inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth; and we have seen that the time when the angel was to bring the everlasting gospel to earth to be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; and the time when the gospel-ensign was to be raised to all the inhabitants of the earth, was the same, being prior to the harvest or end of the world, or when the Son of man should come to destroy the wicked, and reign on the earth in righteousness.

The Savior himself, gave us to understand how we might know when that time would be near at hand, even as we know that summer is nigh by the budding of the leaves of the trees; even by the various signs that should be seen at that time. He says:—

And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.— Luke 21: 25-27.

There have been signs seen in the sun, and in the moon, and also in the stars, in this age of the world; and if there is not now upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, when shall we look for it? The distress caused by the contention between capital and labor, by strikes, by communism or socialism, by anarchism, and by every other ism is not confined to our country alone, but all nations upon the face of the earth are perplexed and distressed by these things. Wars and rumors of wars are imminent. Europe stands on the verge, as it were, of a volcano of war, on a great magazine of powder or dynamite, waiting for the application of the match, each nation vying with each other to see which shall invent the readiest and greatest death-dealing instruments. Men's hearts are "failing them for fear" of what is coming on the earth. Anarchy, riot, and bloodshed are rampant upon the earth. Fires, earthquakes, and pestilential diseases, cyclones, and tornadoes, are spreading death and destruction on land; while on the water the "sea and the waves" are "roaring," as made manifest in tidal waves, storms, and tempests, producing shipwrecks, death, and disaster on every sea.

Much more might be said concerning the manifestations of the signs spoken of by our Lord, indicating the near approach of his second advent; but we think we have said enough to prove that we now are living in those times—the latter times—when the gospel, according to the predictions of the Savior, of the Prophet Isaiah, and of John the Revelator, was to be restored from heaven by angelic ministration, to be preached in "all the world," among "all nations," for "a witness," before the end come.

Having found that we are living in the age when the gospel was to be restored by angelic ministration, and the land upon which it was to be restored, the question very naturally arises, Has it been restored in the manner indicated? We answer in the affirmative. There is no other man upon the land of America nor upon any other land, to our knowledge, who claimed that the authority to preach a restored gospel and to administer in its ordinances in this age of the world was first given to him by angelic ministrations, than Joseph Smith, the latter-day seer. He claimed that that authority was placed upon his head by angelic hands, also the authority to ordain others whom the Spirit of the Lord should designate to preach the gospel, who should first have yielded obedience to its requirements.

He was authorized by the same authority, even that of God, to organize the Church of God after the original pattern as established by Christ and his disciples, with all its officers and ordinances; which church was organized on April 6, 1830; and from that time men have been preaching, as Jesus said they should, the same gospel of the kingdom, and have been authorized to tell all that obey—as Jesus did in his day—that if any man will do his (God's) will (by yielding obedience to the gospel), he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether they speak of themselves; and thousands, by so yielding the required obedience, have been adopted into the family of God, and have been enabled to cry "Abba Father;" and can testify with uplifted hands to heaven that they know the work is true.

We think, then, in view of what has been said in this article, of the apostasy from the faith once delivered to the saints, as taught in the gospel by the Savior and his disciples; in view of the idolatry of the world, as manifested in the worship of other gods than the true and living God, by the vast numbers of Hindoos, Musselmen, Buddhists, Jains, Sikhs, Parsees, etc., and even professing Christians, that the angel's message was a necessity, to command the inhabitants of the earth in every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, to "fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

And we think also, that the admonition, at the head of this article, to the servants of God, to "say nothing but repentance to this generation," was highly necessary, that repentance be preached to this generation, to turn them from the service of Satan to the service of God that they may be prepared in this the hour of his judgment for his coming.

LUNG GYMNASTICS.

MAN does not live by bread alone. The food we eat would not afford nourishment if we did not breathe. Air is free to us all, but it were better if the over-civilized people of our age had to pay for it, then they would value it. Air is one of our principal nourishments; it is to the lungs what food is to the stomach. Its importance may be judged from the fact that a healthy human being requires 300 litres of air per hour. The lungs consist of eighteen hundred million lung cells, which, if they were spread out, would cover 200 square metres. This proves the usefulness of the lungs. We must breathe, and if we do not instinctively understand how to do it properly, we should learn. Hence, lung gymnastics.

But few breathe properly. Look at the children over their lessons, or the accountant over his books. Can you hear them breathe? Can you see them breathe? Nay, they do it so feebly that it does not affect their position or countenance. To breathe correctly is an art, and must be learned, though Nature ought to have given everybody the faculty.

In the first place it is wrong to draw the breath through the mouth. The nose is the natural avenue to the lungs. In the nose are provided cavities in which the air is warmed before it comes to the lungs. The nose also contains excretions which absorb the impurities of the air. We all commit a great fault by not breathing with force. To understand what a true, forceful breath is, bare the breast and look into your glass. The ordinary breathing scarcely moves the chest; but hold the breath for an instant before it is blown out, and you will see the chest move. This is right. We must breathe so forcefully that the chest moves up and down, or visibly expands and contracts. "Artificial" breathing consists in forcing the air in and out of the lungs so strongly that the chest visibly expands and contracts. To learn to practice that, it is well in the beginning to stand up straight, against a wall, for instance, placing the heels together, resting the arms (which ought to be bent) upon the hips; the push the chest forward, while the abdomen is retracted so much that the weight of the person falls upon the foremost part of the feet. After having come into this position, close the mouth and draw in the air slowly and blow it out as slowly. After a long or deep breath one ought to hold that breath for an instant before it is blown out again. This is lung gymnastics and the rationale of it is that only thus are gases fully controlled. By holding the breath the air comes to act on the whole surface of the blood, nourishing it, and removing the impure gases. The lungs must be perfectly emptied before being refilled, and that can only be done by forceful breathing.

When we make these experiments, the body must not be tied down by close-fitting garments, bonds, or an overloaded stomach. The best time is in the morning and before meals. The exercises should always be taken in free, fresh, and pure air or at least before an open window. Five minutes' exercise every day will do wonders for a healthy person. We must not expect miracles for unhealthy persons from lung gymnastics. We ought to practice before we get sick. Sometimes the practice would prevent the sickness. At any rate, it will prolong life.—Selected.

Reunion of the Southern Missouri district will be held at Mountain Grove, commencing August 23, and continue ten days. Election of officers: C. M. Bootman president, A. M. D. Bootman, and A. M. D. McGuire. The following resolutions were adopted: Resolved that we petition the committee on the new hymn book that they make copies of the shaped note as well as the round note, for the following reasons: 1. Because the shaped note is almost universally used in this part; 2. Because there are very few teachers teach any other kind; 3. Because it can be learned in much less time; 4. Because enough more copies will be sold of the shaped note to meet the extra expense. We also invite the coöperation of all others interested in this move. Resolved that we very much appreciate the kindness of Bro. and Sr. Pickering, of Springfield, Missouri, in furnishing the tent for gospel use, and we pray our heavenly Father to abundantly bless them for their deed of kindness, and ever keep them faithful to the great covenant (which by their works they have proven they love so well) and when they have finished their labor of love upon this earth, may they arise in the resurrection of the just with the many which they may be the instruments in the hands of God of leading into the truth.

Voted that the president, missionary in charge, secretary, and Bishop's agent of the district have the care of the tent when it is purchased. The General Conference missionaries to the district were sustained. A question was asked, What shall be done with a member who teaches publicly and privately that tithing is not a law of the church and should not be observed by the members of the church? Answer, He should be dealt with for unchristianlike conduct. T. T. Hinderks, T. W. Chatburn, and J. M. Terry were appointed a committee to associate elders, priests, and teachers to labor together. Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Southern Illinois district Sunday school association will convene at Fairfield, Illinois, Friday, September 13, during the time of reunion. All superintendents and delegates will please bring or send their reports on blanks furnished by the General Association for that purpose at ten cents per dozen at the Herald Office. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. We hope to see a full delegation present from each school. The officers will be elected by delegate vote as constitution and by laws provide. (See Article 5 for government of district associations.) The superintendents and teachers please see that their schools are prepared for children's exercises. We are expecting an entertainment by them something after the same that we had at our last reunion. Don't forget the children. We will try and spend at least one hour each day of the reunion in work especially adapted for the officers and teachers. We will there have the assistance of the elders and hope to make this feature of the reunion educational to all present. Come one, come all.

J. D. STEAD, Pres.

Convention of Eastern Iowa district will be held at Fairbank, in Grove Hill branch, August 30, 1895, beginning with the morning session. Please be on hand so that business may be transacted promptly. We look for a full attendance of those on the program, and also all others that can be there. We expect all to take part, as there is room on the program. Bring all the Winnowed Songs, as there are only a few in this branch. Any Sunday school failing to receive a blank report, please notify me in due time. Don't fail to send in reports early, and elect delegates according to Constitution and By-Laws, as officers are to be elected.

SHALL WE BE SUCCESSFUL?

"A famine in the land, not a famine of bread nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord."

We have one of the best fields in the world for tent work. A tent for the Indian Territory! Ninety dollars will get one that can be used almost constantly the year round to advantage in this climate. There is no country in the world that needs one worse nor in which one can be worked to better advantage.

There is already one of the best organs for the purpose that can be found. We find the schoolhouses to be small, poor, and far between, very scarce, and what is worse, the majority of those you find are owned by private persons who are prejudiced members of some sect or other. It is not like the States, where there are good schoolhouses every few miles and they free.

Let three persons each put in as much as those who furnish the organ and it would be more than enough; but that is not necessary. Let two or three put in twenty dollars and four to six put in ten dollars each; or, let four to six put in ten, and six to nine put in five dollars.

Do not be afraid of donating liberally, remembering that Saints are few in the Indian Territory. For that reason you will need to give freely, and our fellow men will receive the benefits in a gospel way. We will not slight any, but give the invitation to all who can and will help this strange historic people in their laudable and praiseworthy undertaking.

Do we really love the great work? Can we sacrifice to see it roll on, and gladden the hearts and save the souls of a starving people? Let us hear from all in the Territory and every other one that can help. Write at once the amount you will give and the earliest possible time you can send it.

I might add that we are using a dilapidated schoolhouse here at Miami (a town of three churches) which costs the Saints fifty cents a night or day. It belongs to one or two persons, as usual, here.

Address me at Vinita, Indian Territory.

Your brother,

A. C. HART.

PASTORAL.

Having been appointed in immediate charge of St. Louis district, and temporarily in that of Southern Illinois, I take this method of informing all properly interested that my permanent address is 2,504 Slattery Street, St. Louis, Missouri.

I am as much of a stranger, geographically speaking, to this new field, as I would be in almost any part of the world. Matters requiring our attention, either by letter or presence, will be attended to so far as circumstances will allow; "circumstances" meaning time, expenses, distance, importance, or urgency in regard to call, etc; Bro. Jones and myself being the only General Conference missionary force, we shall be liable of failure to reach everything and everybody that may demand our presence and attention, but will do the best we can to cover all needs.

Of St. Louis and vicinity we expect something of local laborers, and are certain we shall not be disappointed.

Tent work in St. Louis, together with assistance to adjacent missions, promise full occupation of our time; but we want, if health permits, to get farther out than that, and would like to hear report of the situation as it actually is everywhere in these districts from those properly authorized to report the situation.

We are not urgent to force out into the world those whom God, and the law, and the church have not commissioned as its representatives. Every man that has been warned, let him at all seasonable opportunities "warn his neighbor." "Let him that heareth say, Come;" but this is not to be construed into a call or authority to run faster or farther than is indicated in the counsels of God.

The advice given to one of the first elders of this church, Hyrum Smith, in Doctrine and Covenants, section 10, paragraph 11, also paragraph 8, and indeed the whole revelation, may be studied with profit perhaps, to many of us. Also section 42:4 and section 120:4 and 5, etc.

A careful perusal, understanding, and application of the law governing may save misunderstanding, possible conflict, and consequent hindrance to gospel progress. Our heavenly Father, who has so wondrously called us from darkness into his marvelous light, is the One whom we alone should fear and serve. To properly love and fear is to "keep his commandments," and not to push our volition in ignorance of, or contrary to his counsel.

Branch officers should remember that an award by the Master for a faithful and wise stewardship enjoins an active and courageous yet careful administration of the law against persistent and flagrant offenders of the same, and in this work will receive our support. "And ye shall see that my law is kept." "He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you; for it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom, should be given to them that are not worthy," etc. (D. C. 41:1, 2.) Officers whose duty it is to deal with offenders, after a kind and loving spirit has performed duty necessary, should not hesitate to apply the law that severs connection from the member whose conduct becomes a festering stench and wound to the body that is suffering. Officers' or elders' courts who in mistaken kindness add 15th or other amendments to the law of God by placing lawfully tried and legally proved and unrepentant violators upon a six months' or year's probation become, in my personal judgment, themselves offenders against the law, and lend encouragement to evil doers.

If we may not be permitted to build high nor wide nor mighty to the superficial gaze; let us, brethren, endeavor to build permanently in the little we may build for the Master, so that his final "well done" may give us final and permanent joy and forgetfulness of present trial that may come to us, whether in the church or out, because of misconception or misjudgment through failure to apprehend or appreciate the value of our motive or the legality of our work.

In hope of the final reward,
Your fellow laborer,
M. H. BOND.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints and Friends of Southern Illinois;
Greeting:—The Southern Illinois reunion committee has located the next reunion at Fairfield, Wayne county, Illinois, to commence on Friday, September 6, and end Sunday evening, September 16. The location is a beautiful one. This reunion bids fair to be the best ever held in the district. The best of speakers will be sought for and everything in reason will be done to make it a spiritual feast to all that may attend. Fairfield has courteously invited us to come, tendering us the use of the grounds and all that pertains to them free of charge. There is an abundance of water for man and beast on the ground. However, there is one thing lacking—a large tent; and to make the reunion a success we will have to purchase one; and to fail in this will be good-bye to our reunion. There was a committee appointed at our last reunion to raise money and purchase a tent for the district. The members of this committee are at work in their respective branches. As yet they have failed to raise a sufficient amount to make the purchase, and in this notice we appeal to every Saint in Southern Illinois. There are many scattered Saints throughout this district who would gladly help if called on. It is almost impossible for the committee to see you all. Those of you who read this notice will observe the committee is not willing anyone shall be slighted. Just inclose in an envelope the amount you wish to contribute and send to W. A. Kelley, Tunnel Hill, Illinois, treasurer of committee. Every dollar of this money will be accounted for and an itemized account kept and read at the reunion. The ministry throughout the district will be interested in the success of our reunion. Call the attention of the Saints to this fund so as to give all an opportunity to donate, and prevent a failure in our coming reunion. There should be in addition to this a fund raised to defray the expenses of the traveling ministers. The people of Fairfield will expect to hear something, and we do not want to disappoint them. This will be an opportune time for us to tell the gospel story to many who have never heard our people. Dear Saints, do you want the gospel carried to others outside of the fold? If you do, and pray that way, come, help answer your own prayers by making use of the means God has placed in your hands. If you can't preach the gospel you can administer to the wants of those who can. Come to the meeting and help to care for those who will do the preaching, and give of your substance to bring them to and from, and in this way work together in the building up of Zion. This is our object in locating the reunion outside of any branch, believing that we can reach more people who never heard the gospel preached by us than we could possibly in some branch. Now most all of us will have to go, and when we go, let's go to stay and go prepared to care for ourselves while we are there. There will be no Saints living there to care for you. Begin now to make preparations, and when the time comes, and before, you will be ready and waiting to go. And in this way, having the meeting on your mind, you will be in a condition to enter into the meeting heartily and with a view to make a success of it, and will do everything you can to get everybody else to go and stay. Those of you who may want to rent tents, if you will write to me I will try and secure the lowest possible prices. Trusting the Saints will respond to this appeal I subscribe myself, your brother and laborer in the Master's cause,

All persons wishing accommodations provided for them can write to Walter Scott, Santa Cruz, who will have place secured for them. Clarksdale reunion will be held from the 31st of August to the 10th of September. Grounds are near the depot, and within the city incorporation, and in a splendid grove for the meeting. Wood and water free. Tents from $1.50 to $2 during the term. Boarding at the best hotel in the city for $3 per week, or 15 cents per meal. The best of pasturage for horses 3½ cents per day, with abundance of water.

Able and prominent speakers will be in attendance. This reunion is located within a few miles of four branches, the members of which will spare no pains to make all as welcome as possible. The little city of Clarksdale is all astir in anticipation, and feels to fully appreciate the committee's location. The new district tent, 31 x 45, manufactured by John May, of Independence, Missouri, and fully warranted against any rainstorm, will be pitched upon the grounds. Brethren contemplating purchase of tents should make a close inspection of this tent before purchasing.

We hereby appeal to all the Saints and friends of Northern Missouri and Southern Iowa to come and spend a week with us and assist in making this our third effort the grandest of all. It is also requested that all those wishing tents provided on the grounds will advise A. W. Head or C. P. Faul, of Clarksdale, Missouri, or for any other information thereto.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Southern Illinois district will meet in conference September 14, during the time of reunion at Fairfield, Illinois. Ministers will please remember to come and bring your reports or send them that we may have a full report from all of the ministry. Please prepare written reports as per resolution. Clerks of branches will please forward their branch reports to J. D. Stead, clerk, Fairfield, Illinois, one week ahead. Remember your reports must be made out on blanks and in due form or they will not be received. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place at this time.

J. D. STEAD, Clerk.

Texas Central district meets in conference at Elmwood, Bell county, on July 28. Sunday school convention on evening of 27th. Let all branches and Sunday schools be represented, and everybody come that can. We aim to continue meetings some days.

E. W. NUNLEY, Pres.

NOTICES.

Saints who will attend reunion at Limerick, Ohio, August 29 to September 8, will you each work that it may be a success? If so, cover your wagon, get your tent ready, and camp on the ground. I am now living in your district tent and shall be till then. Can you live in a tent one week? No other way is a success, for it does not admit of time for going to and from services, and many at a place to be served takes up the time and defeats the purpose. You have asked for President Smith; make it an occasion worthy of his help in every sense. Will you rouse up and have such a time as they have in the West? It can only be by tenting on the ground. Read Galatians 6:5. Let Sunday school workers bring Quarterlies and song books. Not of the committee, but yours for success,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

BORN.

FLANDERS.—Cecil Pearl, daughter of Bro. O. E. and Sr. Emma Flanders, was born in Stewartville, Missouri, and blessed at the conference July 7, 1895, by Elders J. M. Terry and William Lewis. These jewels are subjects of God's best care.

ALLBRIGHT.—To Mr. Wiley and Sr. Ellie Allbright, March 12, 1895, a daughter, and name Ola Allbright, and blessed by L. L. Wight. May she become an honor to her parents and a bright and shining light in the house of God.

MARRIED.

YOUNG—STANDFIELD.—At the home of the bride's mother, at Foster, Missouri, July

2, 1895, Bro. Edward Young and Miss Etta Standfield, in the presence of a few Saints and friends. Prayer and remarks by Priest J. I. Young, after which the words which made them one were spoken by Elder S. T. Maylock.

"May their minds in future blending,
Know the purest of earth's peace;
May no evil cloud descending,
Cause their perfect trust to cease.
With the other each forbearing,
When the time of trials come,
Every joy and sorrow sharing,
Fill with light the halls of home."

SCHAFFER—WOOD.—At "high noon" of July 10, 1895, Professor Martin J. Schaffer to Miss Lizzie Gertrude Wood. The blessed rite that united this happy pair was administered by Elder Mark H. Forscutt. At the home of the bride, in the suburbs of Lorton, Nebraska, and in the presence of a large gathering of friends, whose beautiful presents attested their regards for them, our brother and sister were made doubly one, and, we trust, indissolubly so. Although not like Saul, "head and shoulders above all," the king of this new empire of love was as much distinguished by his manly form and superior physique as was its queen by the sweet, womanly grace with which she entered upon their joint reign. The bridegroom, late principal of the high school at York, is our district superintendent of Sunday schools; the bride also is acknowledged as a superior teacher. One full column of the Nebraska City News voices the general sentiment of their sterling worth. Entering life together with intellectual and moral forces so strong as to command such high encomiums as they receive, and guided by the Spirit of divine truth, we hope for them the increase that shall perpetuate their names and memories in honor to generations yet unborn.

DIED.

ANDERSON.—At Lebeck, Missouri, July 4, 1895, Elder Buckley B. Anderson, aged 76 years, 5 months, and 20 days. Deceased was born in Huron county, Ohio. Was married to Sallie M. Cutler in 1838. He became identified with the Saints in an early day and resided in Clay county, Missouri, when the exterminating order was issued by Gov. Boggs. He went with the church to Nauvoo and was one of the mechanics who built the Nauvoo Temple. At the death of Joseph Smith he followed the branch of the church under Alpheus Cutler, and in due time united with the Reorganization. Seven children mourn his loss, as well as several grandchildren. His companion had preceded him to the other bright shore. Thus one by one pass away, the old veterans who endured faithful through the "dark and cloudy day." Funeral sermon by Elder C. R. Duncan.

EVANS.—Sister Mary Evans was born September 25, 1835, at Merthyr Tydvil, Glamorganshire, Wales; was baptized into the Reorganized Church in April, 1866; died July 8, 1895. Sister Evans had been a great sufferer for a number of years with several chronic diseases. She has lived a faithful life and had great faith in God, and her testimony was like the Saints of God gone on before,—"the work is true." Her remains were conveyed to the Saints' Church, where the funeral discourse was delivered by J. A. Tanner to a large congregation. Two sons, three daughters, one brother, and one sister mourn.

GRAY.—At El Dorado Springs, Missouri, June 20, 1895, Bro. Solomon Gray, aged 66 years, 3 months, and 27 days. Funeral sermon by Elder C. R. Duncan.

JETT.—Near Zim, Texas, June 9, 1895, Mattie Ruth, infant daughter of Bro. Thomas and Sr. L. Jett, aged 14 months and 11 days. Little Ruthie was born near San Antonio, Texas, and was blessed by Brn. T. J. Sheppard and O. D. Johnson. Funeral services by A. B. Kuykendall at Eagle Point cemetery.

LILLY.—Merietta Violet, infant daughter of Bro. Joseph and Sr. Mary E. Lilly, died at Des Moines, Iowa, June 15, 1895, aged 3 months and 8 days. She was blessed by Bro. Cook, two days before her death. Funeral sermon was preached by Bro. M. H. Cook, June 16, at the family residence.

BRAY.—At his home in Syracuse, Nebraska, on July 6, 1895, Brother Charles Worden Bray. Deceased was born April 15, 1832. Married to Miss Caroline Trafton, July 2, 1855, he had become the father of three daughters, all of whom had preceded him to the next world, one fifteen, another thirteen, and the last seven years previously. Born at Bristol, Ontario county, New York, our brother entered this life on historic ground. Adventism arrested his attention, and falsehoods by the enemies of the church led him to entertain strong prejudices against it; but his wife's acceptance of it and her earnest devotion to it were means that influenced him to finally accept it, and to live and die in the triumphs of its power. A sufferer for fifteen years, voiceless except to whisper, a condition resulting from ulceration of the bronchial tubes, he bore with patience while still yearning for the greater patience, what his Father permitted, and proved himself worthy the simple motto on his coffin, "At rest." He was buried in the Syracuse cemetery, and the universal testimony of the very large number attending his funeral was highly commendatory of him and his. The burial services were conducted, and the obituary sermon delivered by Elder Mark H. Forscutt, assisted by Elder J. W. Waldsmith and the pastors of the Baptist and Congregational Churches of Syracuse, on July 8, 1895. Our noble young brother, Charles Woods, his grandson, remains to cheer the widowed heart.

WRIGHT.—At Whitebreast, Iowa, July 12, 1895, of inflammation of the brain, Roy Wright, who was in the keeping of his grandparents, Bro. Alfred and Sr. Amanda J. Wright. The little fellow was 1 year and 26 days old. Funeral services in charge of Elder Isaac Phillips, the sermon by Robert M. Elvin, from Matthew 19:14.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Reicks, one containing the statement of D. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.
Paper covers 10c.

BY LUCY SMITH.
This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

SUMMER STUDY FOR CITY CHILDREN.

IN this hurrying last decade of the century, when everybody is "trying to get time," the problem of where the young may get it has been partly solved by shortening the hours spent in the schoolroom. The daily session closes in popular city schools at one o'clock. Thus time is found for riding, . . . for fairs, parties, . . . for ball games and gymnasium practice; for private theatricals, candy pulls, and the other amusements which somewhat relieve the monotony of school life.

In private schools, the year begins late in September, or, as in New York, the first or second week of October, and closes early in June. The summer vacation is, therefore, from three to four months long. During nearly all of this time, a considerable number of families are settled in the country to lead fairly regular lives.

It is thus that the children can best recruit for another winter of study and amusement. To parents who make this rational provision for their children, and who have thus, also, time for reflection, must sometimes come the questions: "When are my children to get an education?" "Is the best preparation for study in the winter, total suspension of directed mental activity in the summer?" "Is it wise to allow the vacation to be spent in carrying out programs for each day in the week of diversions such as tennis, driving, dancing, rowing, sailing, wheeling, riding, shooting?"

Would not all this exercise be just as beneficial and enjoyed with even more zest if say two morning hours, five days in the week, were devoted to regular study?

It is for boys and girls who have no taste for books, who never turn to one for companionship, that regular mental work is most desirable.

How necessary for usefulness in life is the equipment of a well-disciplined mind.

Summer study can easily be adapted to the needs of the pupil, and the proper teacher will see that it is made attractive. If, during the school year the pupil has from any cause lost progress, the time cannot be so well spent as in making good these losses, so that he may start in the autumn on an equal footing with his classmates. If, from lack of capacity, poor teaching, or overcrowding in classes, there are subjects in mathematics, where they are most likely to be found, in grammar or any other study which have not been understood, this is an opportunity to review them and have the rough places made smooth.

A good beginning in a language may be made in a summer; or the foundations having been previously laid, a book of Cæsar or Virgil may be read, or two or three plays of Schiller or Moliere. But for the study of science it is the very best time of year, and offers in every respect the best conditions ever to be had by pupils who live in the city. Many a stone wall is not only picturesque, but the burial place of fossils which are a clew to the geologic history of the ground whence they were gathered. What a pity not to learn it, when one may so easily! Even to children under twelve, elementary lessons in botany and zoölogy may be delightful. Tracing the life of a dandelion from its early leaves to its winged seeds, and learning the oyster's place in the animal kingdom and the delicacy of its organs amounts to discovering two new worlds to a child who has never known what the dissecting knife and microscope may reveal. The fact is that Earth's everyday wonders are as if they were not to thousands of grown people for lack of early eye opening.

The actual knowledge to be gained in a summer of the classification and peculiarities of plants and animals is not half so valuable as are the incidental lessons in observation sure to be gained. — Scientific American.

HOW TO REMAKE BAD BOYS.

FRANKLIN H. BRIGGS, Chief of Department of Mental and Manual Instruction in the State Industrial School, Rochester, New York, has just published, in pamphlet form, a paper he recently read before the Unity Club of Rochester, on "Boys as they are made, and how to remake them." It is an earnest appeal for manual training, and it is peculiarly interesting to see the author start with drawing as the foundation principle for right moral training. In so doing, he acknowledges the correctness of the Greek idea, and admits that modern education has not advanced much beyond it. He says:—

"The story is that a philosopher, in ancient times, viewed a procession marching by. The head, composed of gray-haired heroes, bore a banner with the inscription: 'We have defended the State!' 'Ah!' said the old man, 'if we had such men always! Where shall their successors be found?' As he meditated, the center of the line came in view. Here were men in the strength and vigor of manhood. They bore a banner with this declaration: 'We are the defenders of the State.' For a moment the sage's face lit up with a glow of satisfaction and he said: 'What state can be in danger of disruption and subjugation while her honor and integrity are upheld and defended by such warriors?' Then he grew sad, and after awhile he exclaimed: 'But what shall happen when these pass away?' While he thus sorrowed, the left of the procession approached the spot where he stood. There marched the boys with springing step and smiling faces. They carried high their banner, and upon it the wise man saw these words: 'We will defend the State.' 'The gods be praised!' he shouted;

"the perpetuity of the State is assured."

The writer here asks the question, "What makes the alley-boy what he is? What makes your boy what he is? Three things that neither of these boys could nor can control: their birth, their surroundings, and their education."

He next shows the effects of the environment, of vice, drunkenness, etc., and finally comes to the question: "How shall boys of this class be re-made?" and his answer is,

"Substitute the kindergarten for the home and street during the day; establish one in every locality where the poor abound. The kindergarten gives the child the mental, physical, and moral exercise that it needs. It develops the child in a natural way. How much longer will our churches go on trying to save a few hardened sinners of mature years, who do not want to be saved, and ignore the innocent children? Like the ancients who left the crippled and infirm children exposed upon the mountains to perish, so we leave these children of misfortune to moral and intellectual starvation. It is not enough to plant the kindergartens. The public school kindergarten does not reach the class that most needs it.

"What about the boys who are beyond the kindergarten age now? Put them into manual training schools. Our public schools are all right in their place, but they have in too many cases reached the point where the pupils are for the schools, not the schools for the pupils. In the manual training school we want men and women with a purpose, and a will, and a heart. They strike blows at ignorance and falsehood where lukewarm instructors cannot strike. The workshop should form an inseparable concomitant of every school. Children delight in doing; this is why the kindergarten is so effective as an educational agent.

"Our school for the boy should have drawing for its corner stone. Drawing, that his hand may express the beauty of flower, landscape, figure, and face that delights his soul; that he may transmute into tangible form the idea of shape and figure of the object he desires to describe. And modeling, drawing's twin sister, should accompany it. In my experience, many a boy who had been considered a dunce dates his awakening from the hour when he found out that the formless clay could take on shapes of beauty beneath his touch.

"And then the other members of this same family, the use of wood-working tools. It helps a boy to find out what square means. When he can saw to the line every time he has a greater respect for truth. When he habitually becomes exact in the use of tools the great battle is won. Your skilled mechanic is not usually a liar. His respect for exactness makes him hew to the line in his speech.

"These three then, drawing, modeling, and wood working in its various forms, should lie at the foundation upon which our remaking structure should rest. They enable one trained in them to see things in new ways; in fact, for training the perceptive and conceptive faculties they stand without a rival."

The writer next advocates music, and demands that natural history and science be introduced into the common school so that the great mass of people may learn. "Nature has a warm place in every child's heart. Nature has too long been a closed book to the masses." He then speaks at length about several of the industrial reform schools of the country, and remarks:—

"No greater folly was ever perpetrated than to hold a habitual criminal in prison for three or four years, and then turn him loose upon the community to rob, plunder, and to slay. Let the criminal be instructed and trained to steadiness in obeying the commandments, and that can be done by manual training."—Literary Digest.

AID DEVELOPMENT OF CENTRAL AFRICA.

A RAILROAD is in progress of construction around the cataract of the Congo. It is expected that the road will cost $5,000,000, including rolling stock and the interest on the capital during the seven years which the building of the road will require. The line is to be 268 miles, and it is said that only twenty-five or thirty miles present any great engineering difficulties. It starts at Matadi, the present base of railroad and steamboat operations, and terminates near the station at Kinchassa, and on Stanley Pool, where the steamers for the upper river have their landing.

This railroad will contribute largely to the development of Central Africa by cheapening the cost of transportation of goods bound to and from the Upper Congo. The extent of this cheapening may be estimated from a comparison of the cost of carrying goods from England to the Congo with that of the portage around the cataract. The freight from England to the Congo is $10 a ton, while the cost of carrying a ton of freight around the cataract from Matadi to Stanley Pool is $250 a ton.

The completion of the Congo railroad will mark the opening of a new field of travel for the tourist. The center of the African continent will then be only a few weeks distant from the capitals of Europe, and winter trips to the heart of Ethiopia will become fashionable. The influx of tourists will help business along the Congo. It will also increase the danger of the extermination of the large wild animals of Africa, and if the elephant is not rigidly protected he will soon be only a memory. The tourists might with profit be limited in their shooting to the tiger, which sometimes varies the sport by hunting the tourist.—Ec.

B. O. Flower has a stirring paper in the August Arena called "The August Present." He deals in a view of hopefulness and enthusiasm with the present and the future which so many find so gloomy for civilization and finds in religion and science, the unrest in society, in the new impulse to the study of economics, and in the modern interest in the science of sociology, evidences of a greater renaissance of human thought than the Age of Pericles or the Reformation and Renaissance of the fifteenth century. A new and profound spirit of the identity of humanity is added to the intellectual activity that alone distinguished other great eras, and this is the result of modern scientific investigation into the phenomena of nature. The world can now be better if men will only hold fast to knowledge and not let themselves retrograde through passion, greed, and prejudice and the brute instincts. It is a striking review of the forces in modern life that leads us to take hopeful views.

In Stuttgart there is a rosebush that covers a space of 230 square feet.

The average annual municipal expenditures of American cities is four or five times that of English cities.

The banner natural gas year for the United States was 1888, when its product reached the value of $22,000,000. Last year the product was worth less than $15,000,000.

SOWING TO THE WIND.

THE following is a pointer. T. H. B. Stenhouse staid with the polygamic Utah Church until President Young had no longer use for him. In the meantime during his stay, he became a polygamist, as his own and Mrs. T. H. B. Stenhouse's works both state. Then, when no longer useful to President Young, Mr. Stenhouse turned antagonist and exposor, writing against Mormonism extensively himself, and encouraging his wife to do so, also. If the father might indulge in unlawful loves, why not the son?

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—Lorenzo Stenhouse, son of T. H. B. Stenhouse, well-known in early days as an author, lecturer, and reformer, is in jail on a charge of grand larceny. He came hither recently from Salt Lake. His mother, Mrs. Fannie Stenhouse, has some reputation as a lecturer on the evils of Mormonism and kindred topics. The complainant is Lorenzo's son, Garner Stenhouse, who says his father left the family, sold without authority furniture and jewelry belonging to his wife, stored in a warehouse, and then eloped with a Monterey widow, Mrs. Virginia Escobar, with whom he went to Los Angeles, San Diego, and Riverside.

WISER IN THEIR GENERATION.

THE children of this world are in their generation, wiser than the children of light.—Luke 16: 8.

This saying of the Savior has always seemed, more or less, to be a contradiction; for the common conclusion of the ordinary man is that the children of the light walking in the light should be the wisest of the world's inhabitants; but we are more and more impressed with the correctness of the statement from our observation of how men are conducting themselves, and from the consideration which man ought to give in contemplation upon what he sees.

The Lord commanded that the members of the church, or the church should by purchase acquire so much of the lands lying west of the courthouse in Independence, as could be bought. A few men only responded to the call and the command. The conditions now show that the children of this world, without a commandment bought the land, and a mighty city has risen where the children of light might have had an inheritance.

The church in conference declared that the time was favorable, and conditions demanded that steps be taken to establish a business headquarters and a gathering place for the church; and a committee was appointed to secure a location which they did. A few men having confidence in divine direction put their moneys and their personal efforts into the movement; less than fifty thousand dollars was raised, and the effort to establish a business headquarters was made. Instead of meeting the response due to the men who engaged in it, and commensurate with the importance of the work itself, the cry of speculation was raised by the "children of light;" and the movement was only partially successful in accomplishing what was intended. A business headquarters was secured, but was done at the expense of the publishing department, rather than from the rallying support which the members of the church should have given it.

The church in conference decided that there was a necessity for an institution of learning to be established and located at some one of the branches of the church, where those children of the Saints, "children of light," who might desire to attend a school of the kind, might do so and be reasonably sure that the moral conditions surrounding them would be good, and favorable to a proper development of moral principle and conduct. To secure this end a committee was appointed, who at once went to work to secure the object sought. Three of the good and progress-loving Saints at Lamoni, a brother and two sisters, one of the last-named a widow, gave respectively 20, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$, and 6 $\frac{2}{3}$ acres of land, on a very eligible and beautiful site on which to build a college, if it would be decided to build at that place. No other eligible offer was made. To make the matter further secure, the committee secured 26 $\frac{2}{3}$ acres immediately adjoining the forty donated to be used as a sort of endowment upon which to rely in case of necessity, or exigency. A subscription of a little rising of six thousand dollars was raised, the most of which was donated by dwellers at Lamoni, many of whom are, in relation to the Saints, the "children of this world." Only a small portion of this small amount for necessary building expenses, has been subscribed by members of the church abroad, notwithstanding the institution is to be the work and property of the church as a whole; and the saying of the Savior is having another illustration. One man, not a member, gives \$500, and will put in his effort and time to make the matter a success, to whom but little if any benefit can possibly result. He believes it will be a good thing for the town, the county, the people, and has confidence enough in the men of the church that they will act in good faith with all.

The first installment of the subscription has been paid in and exhausted in the necessary preliminary survey, platting, setting out of trees, grading of the roadways, and the putting on the ground of some rock and sand, and paying for the twenty-six acres purchased. The plan of the building has been decided on, the architect selected; and now, the committee are anxious to push the work along.

There ought to be zeal and enthusiasm enough in the church, and among its membership to strengthen the hands of the committee, that this work shall not languish and falter.

Money cannot be put to better use than in making possible such an institution. There is plenty in the hands of men and women in the church, if they would only use it to that end; and to allow it to be built by the means donated by those not of the church, notwithstanding it is written that the "Gentiles shall assist in building Zion," ought to be a humiliating thought to those who are children of the light.

If any who read this have of this world's riches in store, so that they can use them for this most laudable object, and they neglect the opportunity, it must not be afterwards a matter of surprise to them if in ways hardly perceivable to them these riches canker and rust their souls, or take wings and fly away. The hastening time has come, and those of us who are not ready in mind and purse to keep step to the music of God's grand march, must not blame the Lord, or his chosen leaders if we suffer loss here and hereafter. What will we do in the matter?

If you cannot help the enterprise by donation, and can by loan to the committee, subject to return in due time, let them know.

As President of the church, as editor of HERALD, as a member of the committee, we anxiously desire and work for this college enterprise.

WORK ALONG THE LINE.

BRO. JAMES CAFFALL reports the work in some parts of his field as being rather at a standstill; others improving and others in quite good condition. His force of laborers is small but is doing well, so far as known.

Bro. Gomer Griffiths and his helpers, few in number, are trying to fan the coals of gospel fire and keep them alight in Wales. He reports hard times, but local men doing well as a rule in gospel work.

Bro. Heman C. Smith reports that the force in the Rocky Mountain mission is doing nobly under the circumstances. R. J. Anthony and S. D. Condit, in Idaho; J. H. Wells and Gomer Reese, in Montana; himself and Hyrum O. Smith, in Utah. Bro. Heman closes with "I never had freer, fuller liberty than I have universally had since I came to this field."

Bro. William H. Kelley, of the Eastern mission, reports encouragingly of the work in the East, with the exception of Brooklyn, Providence, and Fall River, where there is room for much improvement;—lack of laborers chief cause for lack of improvement, of his corps of laborers he reports favorably. Brn. F. Ebeling and J. S. Parrish were to labor in Virginia; but for reasons, Bro. Parrish could not go. This failing Bro. Ebeling would join Bro. Parsons in the Philadelphia district. Brn. U. W. Greene and Holmes J. Davison are in the tent work in Maine, with some success; Brn. Blanchard and Sheehy, in Massachusetts; Brn. James Moler, R. Etzenhouser, and associates, in Southern Ohio, are doing excellently; and West Virginia picking up. The Kirtland district, with Brn. W. H. Garrett and others is moving. Bro. Joseph Luff, is, also, by agreement, at work East doing good service, in the conferences and reunions. The work in Western New York is improving and prospects good. But, Bro. Kelley remarks, "The right man can do well anywhere in these sections. But the men! So hard to get men that will go right out among strangers and plant the work, stick to it, and make it a success."

This is a suggestion that rising, coming men will do well to take into consideration.

John C. and S. O. Foss, are associated in Eastern Maine district, and are trying for success.

Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, reports from Blandinsville, Illinois. His field has been depleted in laborers, for several causes; but the Des Moines district is in fair condition. Brn. C. Scott, Wm. Thompson, W. H. Kephart, and D. M. Rudd, are associated. Bro. Wight has been kept from his field, in the Little Sioux district, but Bro. Mintun was at work, having baptized fifteen.

Bro. H. N. Hansen has his force at work in Pottawattamie district, things going well, outlook good. Brn. C. Derry, T. W. Williams, and S. Butler are all at work.

Bro. Henry Kemp, Fremont and Nodaway districts, with Brn. O. B. Thomas, E. B. Morgan, and M. P. Madison, keep things in motion and breezy; Bro. Morgan going from house to house, talking and discussing on the gospel theme.

Bro. J. S. Roth, of the Eastern Iowa and Nauvoo districts, with Brn. J. R. Evans, Bro. Hand, J. R. Sutton, as coworkers in tent and other work are doing well. Brn. Heide and Weld not yet in the fields.

In the Galland's Grove district Brn. C. E. Butterworth, J. F. McDowell, C. J. Hunt, and W. W. Whiting, are also keeping the field and doing well.

Bro. A. H. Smith reports the work in Minnesota and Wisconsin as in fair condition. Brn. I. N. Roberts, Curtis, Swensen, W. A. McDowell, Peterson, Wildermuth, Burr, and others pushing the preaching of the word "sowing by all waters." He had just concluded a two weeks' effort at Porcupine, Wisconsin, says he never enjoyed better liberty in gospel work than this season.

BIBLES FOR SCHOLARS.

SUNDAY school workers, parents, and scholars are requested to notice the very low-priced Bibles kept on sale for school work. (See list as advertised in catalogue and HERALD.) Now that Senior and Intermediate Quarterly lessons are in the Old Testament, no scholar or teacher should be without a Bible. Our people, old and young, should become familiar with the Bible, both Old Testament and New. To learn the truth, to know the word of God, one must study it for himself. One may read all the works written by theologians and yet know not the word for himself. It does not do to think only the thoughts of others; all learners must consult and think upon the word for themselves. This process is the true one, for thinking, examining, studying, comparing, analyzing, is personal work—mental training, individual development of intellectual, mental power that not only causes one to absorb the knowledge studied out in work then done, but also strengthens and disciplines the mind in acquiring and using general knowledge. For this cause, among others, the Quarterlies are so arranged as to require personal study by teachers and learners.

One brother writes, requesting that the lesson text and other items should be given entire, also that lessons should be given from the New Testament alone, because some scholars do not have Bibles. No doubt some new schools that have not gone over the New Testament lessons of past Quar- terlies may prefer lessons in the New Testament, but the Old Testament cannot be separated from the New, nor the New from the Old. Bibles are now so cheap that none need be without them, and there can be no better investment for a child, or man, or anyone than a Bible. No one is educated without knowledge of the Bible; knowledge of its past history, its paramount importance to men and women now. The moral principles of life that enter into the education and preservation of society, also the spiritual precepts that perfect man and bring him to God, are revealed in the Bible. Children, youth, and matured men and women ought to be well acquainted with the Scriptures; ought to understand them, be able to explain them readily. Buy the Bible for the children and the investment will pay more than a thousand per cent, in morals, spirituality, industry, intelligence,—if they are encouraged and induced to read it.

HIS COMING IS NEAR.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 15.—The meeting of prominent ministers and lay churchmen in the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association to-day, to arrange for a prophetic conference in the fall, revealed that the subject has been agitated in widely separated cities, and brought out some interesting expressions as to why the advent of Christ is to be expected soon. The conference will be held in Allegheny City from October 29 to November 1, inclusive. Half a dozen of the most advanced students of the Bible will make addresses. All those who are participating in the present movement are premillennialists—that is, they believe the Christ-coming will precede the millennium, and not occur after or during its continuance. Those who entertain a different view are known as postmillennialists. The difference of opinion is not a subject of denominational division, but adherents of both doctrines are to be found in nearly all denominations.

The gentlemen at the meeting to-day, or included on the committee appointed to have charge of the matter, represent the Presbyterian, United Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist denominations. . . .

The arrangement of a program for the conference will be in the hands of Prof. W. G. Morehead of Xenia College and the Rev. Dr. W. J. Erdman, of Philadelphia. Both will be among the speakers, and the Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, of Philadelphia, F. H. M. Parsons, of Toronto, Prof. A. J. Stiffler, of Crozier Seminary, the Rev. Dr. James H. Brooks, of St. Louis, and Prof. E. F. Streator, of New York.

Mr. Miller in speaking of the opinions held by the men who will be here to discuss the prophecies relating to the coming of the Savior said they did not pretend to fix the time of the event. They, however, hold the opinion it will be a literal coming and that it will precede the beginning of the millennium. The Savior will appear out of the clouds just as he disappeared into them. The opinion is based largely upon the eleventh verse of the first chapter of Acts, which reads as follows:—

“Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.”

The place of the appearance of the Savior, it is maintained, will be the Mount of Olives, in Palestine, and the proof for it is found in Zechariah 14:4, which says:—

“And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.”

The advocates of a premillennial coming do not pretend to say they can fix the time of the advent. They maintain it is impossible for anybody to do that because it is expressly said that no man knows which is the day nor the hour, but they are convinced that it will be in a year or two.

REASONS FOR THIS BELIEF.

Elder S. P. Kennedy, who was at the meeting, advanced the following reasons for this belief:—

“We know from the signs which are pointed out in the Scriptures that the Lord will appear in the midst of great events in the world's history, and that it will be a time of great excitement and great wickedness. We are evidently approaching such a time. There never was so much education or so many churches as there are now, and yet the world is worse than it ever was before. Those who hold the theory that the millennium will come gradually and that Christ will appear during its continuance, deny this, but the Bible and the facts are against them. The churches are full of apostates, scoundrels, and thieves. The inspiration of the Bible is openly denied by so-called Christians, and men who pray Sunday do not scruple to cheat their neighbors every other day of the week. The Briggs business is only one example of the unbelief which prevails among church members.

“The universal unrest which prevails, the great military preparations, and the recent conquest of China and Japan assure the universal spread of the gospel. Another sign is the return of the Jews to Palestine. There are more of them there now than there were after the return from the Babylonian captivity. A short time ago the Mohammedans would not permit any of them there, and now it is probable the land will soon again be entirely in their hands. A sign which is undeniably miraculous, too, is that Palestine is again becoming fruitful, after years of desolation, during which scarcely anything would grow. It was under a curse and the curse is being lifted.”

The conference is exciting great interest among ministers and church workers who do not subscribe to the views held by those interested in it. The weekly meetings of ministers of the various denominations have been suspended for the summer, but as soon as they are resumed there is promise of the conference being brought up as a subject for discussion. It is anticipated considerable opposition will be evinced on the part of some of the conservative old clergymen, but as those directly interested are themselves, many of them, old in years and in gospel work, it is believed the cry of crankism will not have much weight. Anyway a pulpit controversy is looked forward to to cast greater light on the subject, and that is what the projectors of the conference most desire.—Chicago Tribune, July 16.

A prominent minister who is committed to the doctrine that will be under consideration said to-day. “We are not classed as cranks, but hold a doctrine which is gaining rapidly. It is asserted by one of the leading ministers of the Presbyterian Church that there are at present five ministers committed to this interpretation of the prophecies where there was one ten years ago. Some of the greatest minds in the country are in line on this subject, and we show this in the convention which will doubtless be held.

“What we believe is simply this: A thousand years before the final judgment Christ will come personally to the earth and inaugurate his kingdom of righteousness. At that time there will be a resurrection of all the righteous dead. The resurrection of the wicked will not take place until the end of the thousand years, and then the final judgment will be held. Whether the Lord will remain on the earth during the millennial period we do not pretend to say.”—Inter Ocean, July 17.

To Latter Day Saints who are familiar with the well-known teachings of the church from 1830 to the present concerning the second advent, the resurrection, the thousand years reign on the earth, the resurrection of the just and of the unjust, the judgment, etc., this awakening interest in and belief of such principles of the gospel are hopeful signs. With them the only wonder is that theologians and other Bible believers have been so slow in learning those plainly-stated truths of the Scriptures.

The fact is, men with their scholastic set training have been so busily engaged preaching the doctrines prescribed by their creeds that they have failed to discern the plain truths referred to. That they have not understood those clearly taught doctrines, so often repeated and emphasized by the sacred writers, is another strong point in evidence of their lack of spiritual light. It shows plainly that men have not been in possession of the same gift of the Holy Spirit by which Moses, Isaiah, Christ, the apostles, and other ancient worthies spoke as they were moved upon by the Spirit of truth.

The ministry of the Reorganized Church will gladly hail all evidences of clearer or added light. However, they probably will not content themselves in the thought that a great task and much work in efforts to convert the Christian world is not yet required. If it has taken sixty-five years to do what has been done, some idea of the probable time required to induce modern church organizations to accept other features of the gospel economy—the principles of authority, church organization, continued revelation, etc., etc., may be estimated. However, we do not expect to convert the world, but to bear witness to the truth,—to do all we can to persuade men and women to obey it, and leave the result with God. The truth of the gospel—the message borne by the servants of God past and present—is being vindicated. The Gentiles are confessing that their fathers have made grave mistakes in their theological formulas. Elder Kennedy's statement is significant upon this point. Extended comment is unnecessary. Our readers will make the comparison between the word of God and the general popular ideas on the doctrines mentioned. The reference to the restoration of Palestine will not be lost sight of.

OFFICIAL REPORT ON ROAD MAKING.

AGITATION of the road making question has resulted in an official inquiry into the matter by the government, a report of which we give herewith:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16.—The reports of several investigations conducted by experts of the Agricultural Department have been submitted to Secretary Morton. The inquiry as to the best roads for farming and farmers was conducted by General Royston, who pictures the road that best meets the farmers' needs as a solid, well-bedded stone road, so narrow as to be only a single track, but having an earth track alongside. "A fine, dry, smooth dirt track," the report says, "is the perfection of roads, easy on the horses' feet and legs and free from noise and jar. The stone roads, on the other hand, wear more in warm weather than in wet. Practical experience shows that the junction of the stones and earth sections of the roads can be kept even, and there is no difficulty in the meeting and passing of loaded teams, two points which have been raised in the discussion of construction methods. No rutting of the earth roads results."

QUESTION.

IS IT right for our ministry to use rubber suits when baptizing to prevent them from getting wet?

Ans.—Whether right, or wrong, if we desired baptism we should decline to accept the ceremony at the hands of an elder who would use such means to keep from getting wet. It would be about as right as for the candidate to be so enveloped that water did not touch the body. The command is, they shall both go down into the water, then shall the elder or priest baptize by immersing the person to be baptized.

We should dislike to see such practice become established among the elders.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

OF the opposition to the work at Laurens, Iowa, referred to in Bro. Butterworth's letter, Bro. J. F. McDowell's letter states as follows, under date of July 11:—

Saw Elder Hunter this afternoon. He had not heard from his Illinois friend, but, if did not, would send propositions himself soon. Went to Bro. Lincoln's on Tuesday. Heard Mr. H. Bro. L. thought he was milder because of our presence. I also had a full house in replying; good liberty, good feeling present, outsiders wished Mr. H. could have heard the reply. One gentleman present from Sioux Rapids shook hands saying he was much interested and anxious to hear more. Mr. H. left no appointments.

Bro. C. W. Dillen, an appointee of the late conference, out in the field, seems to have a touch of the old-fashioned missionary spirit in his method of working. Writing to Bro. E. L. Kelley from Chetek, Wisconsin, July 15, he states:—

I arrived here a week ago to-day from Porcupine. I found some good Saints here, also a good interest among many of the world's people. I have spoken five times and the interest is good. Expect Bro. Whitaker to-morrow. I have been assisted by the priest and deacon of the branch. I came overland from Porcupine, and did not want for food to eat or a bed to rest in at night. The first night out I talked with the family I stayed with until eleven o'clock, and they became so much interested that they invited me to stop over a day and talk to them on the principles of the gospel. Of course I stayed. They were so well pleased with the doctrine that they wished us to come and hold meeting in their neighborhood; besides that they hitched up a team and brought me twelve miles on my way. I felt to rejoice in the gospel. They said they were well paid for their trouble. I sent them some Heralds, Ensigns, and tracts. May the good Master lead them into the fold. The next night I stopped with an infidel, and had an interesting visit with him. I read several revelations to him from the Doctrine and Covenants; also the one on the late Rebellion, and then asked him what he thought of them. Said he, "That is the most reasonable of anything I've heard on religion yet. When you are passing this way stop and you will be welcome and cared for." I left him with a spark of light, and several tracts to read. My next stop was for dinner, which proved to be with Christians of the M. E. Church. After dinner I gave them some tracts to read, and told them I would rest while they read, and then if they wished to ask any questions, I would try and answer them. This led to an explanation of our faith. They too became interested and invited me to stay all night and talk with them. I was glad to do so. They, Christianlike, carried me sixteen miles on my way the next day; and invited me to come and preach for them, or send some one; "For," said they, "that is more like the gospel of the Bible than anything we have ever heard." I gave them the Voice of Warning and some tracts, and went on my way rejoicing. I gave tracts to everyone I met, and felt that I was blessed in so doing. Truly the Lord has been with me, and I desire to be humble and faithful.

Sr. Ann Webster forwards her regular contribution to aid church interests. She says, writing from New Castle, New South Wales, June 15:—

I send you this offering for the work's sake, to use as wisdom directs. I feel a growing attachment to all things connected with the work. My desire is to help roll it on. We want a live ministry to tell the Saints their duty to the church.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Lebanon, Oregon, July 16:—

I am going to try to run the tent here awhile. We have a large field with but one weak instrument to work it. I wish we could have two good elders here, for the calls are so numerous I don't know which way to turn first.

Sr. Ella Miller, Little Sioux, Iowa, July 22:—

The two days' meeting at Moorhead, July 20, 21, was another spiritual feast. Brn. Alma Fyrande, J. C. Crabb, and David Chambers being the speakers; a number of Saints from Little Sioux and Magnolia in attendance. Bro. Chambers baptized four at the close of the Sunday afternoon service; a husband and wife, a young girl, and a young lady—Miss Anna Eades, whom the Woodbine Saints will undoubtedly remember, as she attended school at that place. She has read the Book of Mormon and many of the church publications, and comes into the work with a good understanding of it. Bro. Mark Jensen baptized four boys at the close of Bro. Hilliard's meetings, two of them being the writer's sons.

Bro. J. S. Roth, Independence, Iowa, July 22:—

Bro. C. E. Hand and I are holding tent meetings here. We have the city stirred from the very bottom, and for eight or ten miles around. One man came twelve miles to see if the rumors were true. The preachers are alarmed, and somebody has reported some big stories. Some said we were not orthodox because we didn't take up collections; some are investigating our claims and are deeply interested; the leaven is working. Prejudice ran so high here that we could hardly get room for the tent, but last night some were heard to say, "It is a shame that this tent isn't up on Main Street. I am going to get a place there, and have Elder Roth move it. These men preach more Bible in one sermon than Williams in a year." Williams is the evangelist who was here the week before we came. He converted over four hundred to his faith. We have appointments out till next week. Bro. Sutton has gone home.

Referred to Dakota missionaries; letter from Mrs. Ellenor McCulloch, Milton, North Dakota, July 20:—

I would like missionaries to come this way. This is a good little town, and good surroundings. Please send my letter to those concerned, and please write me about this.

Bro. W. H. Kelley writes July 17:—

On June 15 I preached in Auburn, Ohio, with good effect, and made friends. This is in about ten miles of where Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were tarred and feathered. I was signally aided and put in some grape and canister in a telling way on sectarian intolerance and bigotry. Am to continue by and by. This led to an invitation to Mantua, possibly to Chagrin Falls later on.

Bro. T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, writes:—

Our tent meetings continue every evening; good interest and attendance, save in extreme hot weather. Brn. H. N. Hansen, Peter Anderson, Charles Derry, and Fred Smith have given us excellent sermons; also Brn. Strain, Dodson, and Daugherty of the local ministry have spoken for us. I am planning to devote my entire time this fall to mission work. Since I have been here I have not been able to open many missions; but prospects are encouraging for three or four city missions and several country appointments. This will occupy all my time. I think the local brethren can look after local work.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, Dow City, Iowa, July 24:—

I am now preaching here; just came from Galland's Grove, and go to Deloit, Iowa, next Friday, to remain over next Sunday. Am preaching every night and on Sundays. Prospects for crops good, but rain is needed. Praying God to bless all his people, and working to this end, I am, yours in the faith.

A brother writing from Peoria, Illinois, says:—

We are moving along slowly but steadily here. Elder A. J. Keck baptized Eugene, son of Sr. Mary Hegwood, on last Sunday; and on Monday Elder M. T. Short baptized Mr. and Mrs. Willey, two excellent persons who have been investigating for some time and finally determined to cast their lot with us. Brn. Keck, Short, and J. W. Terry are holding forth at Canton to good audiences, but Bro. Keck returns to Peoria regularly to conduct Sunday services. The Wednesday evening prayer services are in charge of Bro. Alex. Young, a very earnest young brother.

Bro. B. J. Scott, Kansas City, Missouri, July 21:—

I believe the work is onward here since the church was dedicated. Bro. Allen has baptized seven, Bro. Geo. Edwards five; and I two.

Bro. Henry C. Smith, writing from Milton, Florida, says:—

Brn. S. D. Allen, Seburn Jones, and others are making an effort to build a church house at this point. These brethren deserve credit for their faithfulness and diligence in the work, caring for the missionaries included. Heaven bless them and their families for what they have done for us already. By invitation we preached in the colored M. E. church Sunday evening; have another appointment at that place on Thursday night. I think the population of this town is more than half colored. The hottest weather here, as yet, is ninety-six degrees.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE committee on American archeology requests aid in preparing a map of Book of Mormon locations. Can you assist them? See special notice in the miscellaneous department.

Bro. William Taylor, of Drain, Oregon, asks prayer in behalf of Sr. Hannah Tracy, that she be entirely restored to health; also for Bro. J. C. Clapp, that he be strengthened for labor, which he is now but partly able to perform, and that the cause there may prosper. Bro. Clapp had organized a branch with Bro. Taylor in charge, as priest.

Brn. William Anderson, E. L. Kelley, F. Criley, T. J. Bell, S. V. Bailey, and D. W. Wight held grove meetings from Saturday night to Sunday night inclusive, near Blythedale, Missouri, on the 20th and 21st of July; attendance large; interest good.

Brn. H. R. Harder, H. A. Stebbins, and E. L. Page held grove meetings at Wirt, Iowa, on Sunday, the 21st, three were baptized and other good accomplished.

Recently in most of the Catholic churches of Chicago announcements of the decision of the church condemning the orders of Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Sons of Temperance, and Freemasons have been read. The church objects to these societies, it is said, on the ground that they "differ from most other benevolent secret societies in being oath-bound and having a ritual with religious features which they refuse to submit to examination by the church." As the church members in these societies have large amounts invested in insurance which would be forfeited by withdrawal the situation is the more complicated.

Sr. Effie Adams Benedict, and her husband, are living at 501 North 8th Street, Terre Haute, Indiana, and will be pleased to receive a visit from any elder or Saint who might happen to be passing, or have occasion to visit their city. They are within two blocks of the Union depot and may be easily found.

Bro. Isaac M. Smith has located his family at Kirtland, Ohio, among the other good people that comprise the colony of Saints and friends of that historic place. His postoffice address is Temple, Lake county, Ohio.

Good employment for a young man who can do the work required. See advertisement of Ordway & Co., this issue.

Bro. J. C. Chrestensen has been laboring at Blendsville, Missouri, also at Galesburg. He commends the Saints at Blendsville in no uncertain terms. The work, though planted there quite recently, is flourishing because of the zeal and energy of the brethren and sisters. A new chapel has been built and Saints and friends are now working to paint it and furnish it with a good bell. Some want it to ring so loud that sectarian summons will not be heard; however, we suppose our people will not have that end in view. Bro. F. L. English, branch president, Bro. J. Calkins, superintendent of the Sunday school, and the sisters of the aid society are specially commended. Bro. Chrestensen writes also of the recent death of his aged father, recounting the sacrifices and sufferings and disappointments he endured after leaving his home in Denmark, selling out and practically surrendering all he had to go to Zion (?) on the representations of Utah missionaries, from which, like many others, neither he nor his children ever recovered religiously or financially. This Bro. C. regrets, but feels to rest all with the Lord and make every effort in his power to do good. He expects soon to give his entire time to the ministry.

Bro. Richard Farmer, writing from Herriman, Utah, recounts his labors at various points visited in the Territory. He has visited and talked with many friends, some of whom hear while others do not. The gospel, he believes, is the power of God unto salvation to that people as others, on condition that it be received and obeyed, otherwise their condition remains that of bondage and oppression.

Saints at Runnells, Iowa, are doing well with a new church building and expect ere long to have it paid for, ready for dedication. The sisters, as usual, have acted well their part and with them as well as the brethren the honor lies. Bro. I. N. White introduced the work at Runnells about twenty years ago, with much opposition to combat; now openings for preaching cannot all be filled;—letter from Sr. Emma Park, July 21.

Bro. John Pottorff, of Floris, Iowa, eighteen miles south of Ottumwa, asks that an elder visit and preach at Floris, before he leaves in September. Write him and he will meet and care for the coming man.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser was "on new ground" at Wellston, Ohio, on the 22d, where he baptized four; was to go to McArthur, with his tent, on the 26th.

Services held of late at Appledore, Ontario, by Brn. Brown, St. John, Green, and Blakely resulted in the baptism of two. Sr. Mary M. Green, who writes, desires letters from the branches of Chatham district in aid of its Sunday school association.

Sr. Mary Elliott, Richmondale, Ohio, requests that prayer be made on her behalf. She is afflicted, also separated from the Saints and thus denied the encouragement of their association.

Letters are received from Sr. C. E. Barstow, Coal Gate, Ohio, Bro. D. A. Hutchings, Little Sioux, Iowa. Sr. Barstow writes of her love for the work; Bro. H. of the condition of work in the Little Sioux district, where missionary work was now moving forward more rapidly, though hindered by the sickness of Bro. J. C. Crabb and the enforced absence of Bro. J. W. Wight.

We must again remind the brethren not to fill their letters with unnecessary and lengthy details. If they do we shall be obliged to omit their own or others' correspondence, or merely make notes of it. Conversations with church trustees, particulars of ministers' opposition, names of persons called on, and many other items may be omitted and letters be all the better for the omissions. Please help the HERALD on its space and its readers to economize their time. Boil it down to main facts, concentrate it to main points, and our readers will have the main points without wearisome details. All can then have a better chance to be heard.

Bro. W. H. Garrett baptized three at Wheeling, West Virginia, of late; is making openings near by.

Bro. H. A. McCoy, Haven, Iowa, reports Bro. Columbus Scott as in the thick of the fray, in discussion with Elder W. P. Gray. All is going well.

Bro. J. C. Clapp now writes that he is greatly improved in health and feels happy in his work.

Mrs. William Wheaton, an aged sister, living at Breesport, Chemung County, New York, would be pleased to receive a call from any of our people, resident or passing through. She loves the faith and desires to see and enjoy the fellowship of others in it.

Late receipts of letters from Brn. J. F. Mintun and G. W. Robley, will appear next week, nothing preventing.

Pres. Joseph Smith and his son Fred M., also Brn. A. H. Smith and F. M. Weld, departed for Nauvoo and adjacent points on the 26th.

Brn. J. W. Wight and E. L. Kelley addressed the Saints at Lamoni, on Sunday, the 28th inst.

Brn. A. S. Cochran and S. V. Bailey held services at Grand River, Iowa, near Lamoni, on Sunday, the 28th. Bro. H. A. Stebbins was at Allendale, Missouri, the same day.

Bro. T. J. Bell, M. Shaw, and others held Sunday services at local points.

FORGIVENESS.

My heart was heavy, for its trust had been Abused, its kindness answered with foul wrong;
So, turning gloomily from my fellow men,
One summer Sabbath day I strolled among
The green mounds of the village burial place;
Where, pondering how all human love and hate,
Find one sad level; and how, soon or late,
Wronged and wrong-doer each with meekened face,
And cold hands folded over a still heart,
Pass the green threshold of our common grave,
Whither all footsteps tend, whence none depart.
Awe'd for myself, and pitying my race,
Our common sorrow, like a mighty wave,
Swept all my pride away, and trembling,
I forgave.

—Whittier.

WE regret that we are requested to withhold the name of the writer from the following lines. There is in them much food for thought and a sermon which many of us would be the better for its abiding.

WORDS.

Among the bright ranks of an army,
Whose soldiers are valiant and brave,
Are those who are noble and steadfast,
And seek souls of many to save.
But noting the files of this army,
We see, here and there, is a loss,
Though nothing without has assailed them,
This army whose flag is the cross.

A noble old soldier in battle
Striving on in the work of his Lord
Though secure 'mid the throng of the foemen,
Is wounded to death by a word.
A word from the ranks of his comrades,
Whose duty to aid him were plain,
Alas! that such guilt should be harbored
'Mong those who God's kingdom would gain.

Another—a younger and stronger—
Whom kind words and counsel would lead
To give his whole life to the service
A soldier for Jesus indeed,
Is driven by fault-finding spirits,
(Though all are within the one fold,)
Because of small follies and errors,
From shelter, to storm—wind and cold.

The light of the past years forgotten,
For gloom shades the present, withal,
And for the harsh words of his brethren
Shall this soldier falter and fall?
O friends, comrades, sisters, and brothers!
Who knoweth the weight of a word?
Who counteth the cost of a sentence,
Or the distance its echo is heard?

It may reach afar o'er the ocean
To those, who, their burden to bear,
Are striving and praying for patience;
Would you add to the weight of their care?
Or, to one who is marching beside you,
You may deem that you fathom his heart;
And you judge of his deeds in your blindness,
Little recking the tears and the smart.

Let us, then, enrolled in God's army,
A watch set, each hour of the day,
At the door of our lips, lest we utter
One thought to send some one astray.
Remember, 'tis greater and nobler
The spirit within to subdue,

Than to conquer and take a walled city.
May we all overcome, and be true.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

THE faith and prayers of the Union are earnestly requested in behalf of Sr. Bertha E. Johnson, of the Mission branch, Illinois. The circumstances of the case are peculiarly touching and such as to awaken your sympathy most deeply if known. May God be pleased to hear your prayers.

Sister Myrtle Harvey, of Green, Iowa, asks your prayers in behalf of Sr. Hurd, of the Powersville branch, who recently fell and fractured her shoulder.

Bro. William Taylor, of Drain, Oregon, desires your prayers in behalf of his mother, Sr. Hannah Tracy, that God may add to other blessings a restoration of her physical strength.

Bro. M. F. Derby, of Selkirk, Ontario, requests your prayers in behalf of his mother that God may be pleased to restore her to health.

Bro. J. O. Booth, of Harlan, Iowa, desires your prayers in behalf of his wife, feeling certain that only the power of God can help her.

Sr. J. Armstrong, of Lee's Summit, Missouri, asks your faith and prayers in behalf of her little son Elmer, who is now very low with fever, that he may be restored to health.

FULLNESS OF THE GOSPEL.

BY F. A. CLOUGH.

Air, "I want to be an angel."

The fullness of the gospel
Is again restored to earth;
And Gentile nations hostile
Now seek to know its worth;
And people long enshrouded
In sin's dark gloomy night,
With hearts and minds unclouded
Are basking in its light.

The Saints of God with gladness
Proclaim the truth abroad;
And hiring priests in madness
Oppose the work of God;
But Jesus in his own time,
In his appointed way,
Will hasten on his kingdom
In this the latter day.

Go speak the word in boldness
Nor in your weakness trust;
Reprove the world of coldness,—
Show them that God is just;
His justice and his mercy
Surely go hand in hand—
If we'll obey the gospel
And follow his command.

Humble and deep contrition,
From you he will require;
To be baptized with water;
Also baptized by fire;
Thus you'll receive the knowledge
Of Jesus, the true way;
And you'll go on rejoicing
In this the latter day.

Ye Saints of God, take courage,
And push the work along;

Relying upon Jesus,
The mighty and the strong;
And, if you lack for knowledge,
Or wisdom from on high,
In prayer ask God to help you—
You'll surely find him nigh.

And when this life is ended,
And all our trials o'er,
In those bright courts of glory
We'll reign for evermore
With Saints of gone-by ages;
For from the great I Am,
We have an invitation
To the marriage of the Lamb.

Letter Department.

MORRISTON, Wales, July.

Editors Herald:—My last communication to the Herald was from Manchester, England. I left there on the 17th of June, and arrived on the evening of the same day at Llanelly, Wales.

I found that the work in the Western district was not in so flourishing a condition as when Bro. Evans and myself left here. It is evident that the enemy of all souls has been at work here as well as elsewhere, sowing seeds of discord and contention among the people; however, I am pleased to report that by the help of the good Spirit we have been enabled to adjust some of the difficulties satisfactorily to those who were concerned. There are still a few more of the kind to be settled, then there will be a clear sky. The brethren have all promised to redouble their diligence and do all in their power to cooperate with us to make this mission a success. There is a little prospect of a few being added to the church by baptism.

The work is looking up in the Eastern district, judging from reports received from there. Brn. A. N. Bishop, T. Gould, T. Griffiths, A. D. Edwards, Cope Jenkins, and others seem to be alive to the interest of the work. May God help them to continue their good efforts.

I am holding forth at present in Morryston, occupying a little "iron chapel." Bro. Gibbs and family and D. Lewis are doing all in their power to get the people interested, but it seems that their efforts so far have been fruitless. I never was in a country where people are so prejudiced and bigoted. It is impossible to prevail upon them to come out to hear. Their intention seems to be to leave us "politely alone." The Welsh people boast of being a religious people, and indeed this statement is very true so far as the form is concerned, judging by the number of chapels they have erected in the land and the number of people that attend them on the Sabbath day, therefore I do not anticipate that we will be able to gather them into the church by great numbers; but it is possible, by persistent effort on the part of the people and ministry, to gather in a few from the many. The ministry who labor here have to be very patient, as our audiences are very small as a rule. Last Sunday night my congregation numbered seven Saints and two outsiders.

At the latter end of this month and the commencement of the next there will be a "National Eisteddfod" held at Llanelly, when some of the chief Welsh singers from Wales and America will contest. A good time is expected.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TEMPLE, Ohio, July 15.

Editors Herald:—Our meetings were quite well attended here yesterday and seemingly enjoyed. The Saints and friends of the neighborhood are well. A fine shower of rain fell this morning, which is cheering to every one, as it was greatly needed to help growing crops, replenish cisterns, allay dust, and thus render existence more enjoyable. A long dry spell is wonderfully suggestive of how dependent we poor, proud, vain, and shortsighted mortals be after all.

For the last few weeks I have been in York State, endeavoring to test the opportunities for preaching in some localities, blaze out the way for others, and note the time to work the most effectually.

At East Pharsalia I met with a Saints' welcome from Brn. George L. Rathbun and Edmund W. Griswold and families, and Sr. Mary Lewis, the few who are standing for the right in that part of the vineyard, who, by the way, are excellent Saints, though with a strong opposition confronting them. Bro. Henry C. Smith introduced the work here and was followed by Bro. H. H. Robinson last winter in meeting that "lion (?) out of his lair." His opponent, I learned, subsided for awhile. What he will finally determine upon remains to be seen. Anyway, the meetinghouse, a tolerant (?) Congregationalist, is considered a very sacred place just now; so we were ruled out. The congregation is mainly Baptist; that kind that never persecutes anybody (according to Ray), but always do as they wish to be done by. If poor old Roger Williams was alive, under such liberal sentiments he would have to strike out again for a new Providence in order to enjoy freedom of speech. A little imported Methodist preacher occupies the stand, and from appearances one would conclude that they "are rich and stand in need of nothing," except to be protected from Latter Day Saint elders. I preached a few times in Bro. Rathbun's house to the few who came. There is an open door here and the heaven is working.

On June 27, in company with Bro. Rathbun, I went to Smithville, some fourteen miles away, and was made welcome at the house of Mr. Paris Wilcox. Young Mr. Wilcox, a promising young man, took me in his buggy and we soon made a circuit of the neighborhood, and made announcement for preaching. At evening we met a fair audience in the schoolhouse, who listened attentively to the word spoken. Next evening a much larger audience was present and a cheerful, good feeling prevailed. The pebble was dropped in the water and the waves will keep circling around. We were treated very nicely at Mr. Wilcox's. He is an American of that type that no one would divine what is in him from his appearance; thinks for himself, and is looking for light. His wife is a long-time church member, but is not quite sure she has just the thing needful.

At Preston, five miles from East Pharsalia, in another direction, we occupied the Baptist church two Sabbath evenings with a nice audience in attendance each time, especially so the last evening. The best of attention was paid and the house was cheerfully tendered by influential parties whose names are not remembered. From this it appears that all Baptists are not of the same intolerant school. Some are "more noble" than others. There is some wheat hereabouts.

There is a good base of operations here for a good elder to put in a year's work for the cause to advantage, and not be building on another's foundation either. A little later on is the time to begin. Thanks to the Saints for kind usage and their manifest interest in the work.

Bro. Griswold conveyed me by team to Oxford, where I was entertained over night at Mr. Mauzer's, a good Methodist brother and sister, who made me very welcome and extended an invitation to call on them at any time. From here I went to Vermillion and tarried a few days at Bro. G. A. Whitehead's, including the glorious Fourth of July. Here is another place to build according to Democratic doctrine, out of "free raw material." Bro. Whitehead is fixed in the faith, and his bright better half is revolving it in her mind. A good work can be done here, but a little later on. A call at Savannah found the aged Sr. Seelye, a long-time member of the faith, still rejoicing in the same, devouring each week the Herald, Ensign, Hope, etc., with as much avidity as the vigilant elders in the field.

Cheering reports come in from the active ministry in the main. Though the sky is not always bright, the gospel is being preached and numbers added, such as should be saved. So we are hopeful.

In the faith,
W. H. KELLEY.

LUCAS, Iowa, July 19.

Editors Herald:—When last I wrote you I was leaving Olmitz for Hiteman. Mr. S. P. Smith left his labor and took me to my appointment. Such acts of kindness I greatly appreciate, and thank both the individual and my heavenly Father. The next day I was permitted to lead Mrs. Caroline Town, of Flagler, into the Cedar, and bury her with Christ in baptism. The day was delightful, the surroundings were enchanting, while the good order was all we could desire. I preached in the schoolhouse for a week. The attendance was fair, attention and order good, but I was not satisfied, and thought we should be able to reach more of the people; so the brethren procured lumber and prepared seats near the center of town, and the congregation was increased more than tenfold, and for outdoor meetings had good order; and a number gave evidence of interest in the cause we represent.

On June 3 I assisted the brethren to set the "chief corner" post for a house of worship; closed meetings the evening of June 7. Both Saints and friends urged return in the near future. I gave a conditional promise, for past experience has taught me that we cannot always do as we desire.

June 8, went to Davis City and took part in the business of the district conference. Bro. D. W. Wight gave the first sermon. It was of interest, and if this young man continues faithful, advances in knowledge of the divine law, having the Holy Spirit as a guide, he will become a useful man in the church. The sermon by Apostle Joseph R. Lambert, on the office work of the Spirit in the church, was the ablest effort I ever heard him make. The Saints' meeting was good, but rather short, considering that it was raining and we could not leave the building. The undersigned preached at night to the few that came out; for it was hot, dark, muddy, and rainy. The only "lost man" was Elder Joseph S. Snively, and a searching party brought him in "right side up with care." I went home to spend a few days, and found plenty to do to keep me out of mischief.

June 11; attended the funeral of Sr. Angeline Loach, preaching the sermon. The next evening attended the Scott-Whittier wedding. We were stormstayed till midnight. June 15 I came here. Bro. David Daniels and others had been preaching some ten miles in the country, and awakened quite an interest. Sunday, after a hard ride of fourteen miles, I preached in the Sipe schoolhouse on baptism. Only about half the people could get into the house. We went directly from meeting to Nyswanger's pond and baptized a Miss E. B. Curtis. This was the first fruit of Bro. Daniel's labor. Preached again in the afternoon to a crowded house, and returning here spoke to a few in the evening; continued during the week. The farmers were too busy and the nights too short to continue week-night meetings in the country.

June 20 came a Holiness band with their tent. Oliver Fluke, a self-constituted evangelist, was in charge of the singing, which is by far the best part of their exercises. Fluke advertised their coming in the following words:—

"Let every saint of God pray for a mighty smashing among dry bones. Lucas is a very wicked town, given up to idolatry, whisky, and beer drinking."—Christian Witness, June 20, 1895.

W. E. Stevenson, of Dallas, Iowa, another self-constituted evangelist, who by his own testimony was once a drunkard and gambler, was in charge of the tent. I was credibly informed that he was an exhorter for one year in the Methodist Church, when they called in his license. The chief speaker was B. H. Irwin, of Lincoln, Nebraska. According to his own statement he was deposed from the pastorate of a Baptist church for preaching holiness. If his preaching here was a fair sample of what he was deposed for preaching, I take off my hat, and say to that Baptist church: "Well done." These men seemed to be void of care or regard as to whom they abused or insulted. Without provocation they made an attack upon the Saints, and kept it up for nine days. The following will indicate my willingness to defend our cause:—

"LUCAS, Iowa, June 23, 1895.

"REV. IRWIN; Dear Sir:—I have been informed, that you charged in your sermon last evening that Latter Day Saints were teaching false doctrine and leading the people to hell. If this statement be true, I respectfully request you to retract before the people or meet it in public debate.

"For saving truth,

"ROBT. M. ELVIN."

I sent the foregoing note by the hand of a friend. The only notice Rev. Irwin took of it, was to publicly say, "I have received a challenge from the Devil." He then proceeded to tongue-lash the Saints for all that was mean and disgraceful. At the close of his meeting and after the benediction I went to him quietly and peaceably in a meek and calm spirit, and wanted to talk the difference over. In a loud and insulting voice he said: "I don't want to talk with you; leave the tent." I went and sat down in a seat and after he had spent some of his wrath we had a short conversation. I soon discovered that it was useless, as he did not propose to grant any opportunity to refute his falsehoods. The next day I wrote him as follows:—

"LUCAS, Iowa, June 25, 1895.

"REV. IRWIN; Dear Sir:—I have been disappointed at your unfair, ungentlemanly, and unchristlike manner toward those who differ from you. Please be kind enough to answer the following questions: Who did you refer to, when you said the 'leading Mormon lived for many years in open adultery, with many wives'?

"Did you ever read the Book of Mormon?

"Can you point out one immoral or one indecent statement in the Book of Mormon?

"Do you know the difference between the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the Utah Mormon Church?

"Do you positively deny that baptism is essential to salvation?

"Do you teach that the first thing in obtaining a full salvation is the reception of the Holy Spirit?

"Awaiting an early reply, am yours for gospel truth,

"ROBT. M. ELVIN."

I sent in connection with the foregoing letter a marked copy of the "Epitome of Faith." My reason for submitting the questions was because Mr. Irwin sought to impress the people of Lucas that the Saints in some way sanctioned polygamy. He stated that the Book of Mormon was unfit to read; that it was trash, deceptive, and immoral. He did not hint that there was any difference in those bearing the name of Mormons. He was bitter in his denunciation against the doctrine of baptism; said it was a doctrine of the Devil, and came from hell, and would damn all those that believe or practiced it. "Baptism will save no one." "You baptize a goat, and he will come out a goat; and if you baptize a devil, he will come out a devil." While the envelope had the appearance of being opened, Mr. Irwin took my letter to the post office with the statement: "I do not want a letter from the Devil!" The postmaster wrote on the envelope, "Refused to lift it." I never like for an opponent to lay it over me in that way; I wrote the following:—

LUCAS, Iowa, June 26, 1895.

REV. IRWIN; Dear Sir:—Your failure to reply to my letter of the 23d and your refusal to take out of the post office my letter of the 25th, prompts me to write this additional note to you. Had I not been present and heard you boast of being so very "courageous," I should not have been surprised at your manifest cowardice. There was no occasion for your attacking, abusing, and misrepresenting the "Mormons" as you called us in your sermon of last Saturday evening. It was both unmanly and unchristlike for you to refer to my note of the 23d, as "a challenge from the Devil." Your sermon of last Monday evening from Isaiah 28: 17, was nothing but "a gospel of wrath"—a tirade of abuse from opening to finish. Put in contrast your harsh, bitter statements with the angel message, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."—Luke 2: 10. You seemed to have been surcharged with hate and vituperation, spewing forth your spleen against everyone. The measure of the man of God, the follower of Christ is, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again," 1 Peter 2: 23, with, "Judge not, that ye be not judged, for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."—Matthew 7: 1, 2. The Savior said: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12: 32. This drawing was and is by love and the power of the Holy Spirit, and not by "a gospel of wrath." When he was "lifted up," he said: "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do."—Luke 23: 34. But Rev. (?) Irwin says: "All will be damned and sent to hell, there to burn forever, and never to come out." You seem to exactly fulfill Genesis 16: 12. I wish to testify in conclusion, that I know that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the true church, for it is in harmony with the word of God, in organization, ordinances, and spiritual gifts.

"For truth,

"ROBT. M. ELVIN."

The above, together with the former letter, I put in an envelope, had it addressed by the hand of another, and mailed at Norwood, and it went directly into the tender care of the vilemouthed traducer of the innocent.

After the departure of the Holyites, the brethren procured the use of the Presbyterian church, because it is larger and more centrally located than our own. I spoke plainly and with power for four evenings, using freely the Book of Covenants and the Book of Mormon. The people gave me a good hearing, and it was evident that considerable prejudice was laid and friends to the cause made. I also spoke four times in Knott's Opera Hall. The Saints seemed quite cheered by the efforts. I preached a number of times in R. C. Crooks' grove, and on the 30th baptized Mary E. and Catharine Cackler. I was the orator for the Fourth, and made the oration educational instead of a display of rhetoric. From the expressions of those in charge it was a happy hit.

On the evening of July 6, by the advice of the district president and under the direction of the branch president I ordained Bro. Isaac Phillips to the office of an elder. I preached a funeral sermon some five miles north of Chariton. The surroundings and circumstances gave distress to my soul, and I could not help feeling thankful that the little one was removed from shame and a world of folly and wickedness. I have been hindered in my work some little by ill health, and considerable by the frequent rains. Crops are looking fine. I have yet much that I might include in this, but for fear that it might be thought long, I will wind up with, on duty,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

MCKILLOP TOWNSHIP,

Huron Co., Ont., July 10.

Editors Herald:—This morning I feel to rejoice in this latter-day message, that my privileges are so many and so great; so much so, that if I could only live up to them I would truly bear the image of Christ. The work in this part is not progressing very rapidly on account, no doubt, of the settlement being chiefly Catholics, and Germans who cannot comprehend the English language very clearly. There are a few Saints here striving for the mastery, and it is to be sincerely hoped they will succeed ere the time appointed for Christ to come and take unto himself the faithful ones. There are other parts of my field where the work is also at a standstill, but thanks be to God not every part, for I am made glad to know the gospel seed has been sown to advantage in some places.

Last fall I made an opening in the town of Mitchell, preaching three sermons, and this spring I returned and preached a number of times, the result of which has been the initiating of four into the sheepfold of Christ, while others are apparently satisfied with our position, and will, I think, soon conclude to follow Christ in the way appointed and dictated by God himself.

The establishing of the work in this place has been the outcome of a joke. Some time ago, an aged brother living in London, named Brown, while visiting a short distance had occasion to go into town. When passing a hotel he was noticed by two men conversing together in the sitting room. One remarked, "There goes old 'Mormon Brown,'" which created strange feelings in the mind of the other and who soon decided to see this "old Mormon." In a short time he overtook Bro. Brown and introduced himself as being one of those peculiar articles—a Mormon.

Bro. Brown made known his find to his son-in-law, Bro. Gray, a priest, and when it was my privilege to labor in Bro. Gray's vicinity we set out in search of this man whose name we had learned to be George Blazey. Without great difficulty we found his place, and after making known that we were Latter Day Saints, he gave us a hearty welcome to his house for all time. Upon inquiry we found him a member of the Utah Church, though he did not know of the church splitting up into so many factions at the time of Joseph's death. He was baptized, together with his worthy wife, in England at Norwich, May 18, 1855, by elders lately from Utah, I understand. In a year or a little better he and his family left the old sod for Canada, being urged to do so by a brother of his then living in Toronto. He says he came across in a Utah immigrant boat conveying some seven hundred or more souls to the supposed site for the holy city, and that had he not promised to go to Canada he certainly would have gone to Utah. However, he now rejoices with his wife and two children in the Reorganization, glad in their souls that they have found again the people of their choice. They heard nothing of polygamy at the time of their leaving England, and when I pointed out to them the abominations caused by such a doctrine and other doctrines of like stamp, they were satisfied all had worked for good. The remaining two of the family are near entering the church. This with other interested ones encourages and bids favorable to a further reception of the word.

Some are on the verge of coming into the church in this part. They are investigators of long standing. May all such people be given courage and a determination to serve God irrespective of what it may cost.

Praying for the church's success,

FREDERICK GREGORY.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, July 15.

Editors Herald:—On the 25th ult. I made it my business to go to Mud Lake schoolhouse to hear "Dempsey A. Hunter, Pastor Church of Christ," Laurens, Iowa, deliver a lecture against the "Mormons," in which he was to show from the Bible that the Latter Day Saints were mistaken in their religious views. Before he commenced his lecture proper he made the following statement:—

"... I am well acquainted with the people called Latter Day Saints, and they are a good-meaning people; they are as good as anybody else. When you preach against their views they take it good-naturedly. I knew this people before I was a member of the church. They do not get mad if you talk about their views, but rather court it. But I expect to read some things not in the Scriptures. The Reorganized Church has no connection with the Utah people. Do not think for a moment that they indorse the teachings of Brigham Young; but they are deceived, as I shall show that many things taught by Brigham Young were introduced by Joe Smith."

He read from 1 Corinthians 13 and 14 and made an argument that when that which is perfect is come and the church was able to stand on her feet there was no more need of apostles, prophets, or miracles; though the most of his lecture was read from Lamb's "Golden Bible" and Ford's "History of Illinois." At the close of his speech he said: "Now, do you want me to talk to you again on this subject? I know a heap about this people; I just know lots about them." Nobody called for more. In the fore part of his lecture he said: "These people are always challenging people for a discussion. I was challenged by Elder Hunt, but as usual they are trying to back out. They are always the first ones to back out."

After the benediction I called the people to order and announced that I would reply on the following night and invited the elder to be present. He seemed taken by surprise, though he let on that he thought all the time that I was Elder Butterworth. I spent two evenings in replying and the elder and some of his church folks were present. I explained how it happened that Elder Hunt challenged him, it was the Christian minister, Dempsey A. Hunter, who tried to back out. I asked him to correct me if my statement was not correct, but he said nothing. Elder Hunter announced that he would continue his subject July 9. I requested either Bro. J. F. McDowell or C. J. Hunt to attend and reply if necessary. I inclose Bro. McDowell's letter to me explaining the results which I think he would not object to you quoting from if you think best.

I came to the Pilot Rock branch on the 2d instant, conducted services in the schoolhouse for some days, and then made an effort to secure the Wesleyan Methodist church and hold services to counteract the untrue statements of one Elder Waldron, of the Christian Church who had held forth in said church abusing the people who were kind enough to let him use their house, not forgetting to give the Saints a snub occasionally.

Last Monday, in company with the president of this branch, Bro. N. V. Sheldon, I went to see the trustees and gained their consent to use the church except Wednesday evening. On Wednesday evening we attended their prayer meeting, and to our surprise I was requested to take charge, as their class leader was not present. Well, I did the best I could and we had a fairly good prayer and testimony meeting, though out of perhaps twenty who testified not one said, "I am sanctified." I was not a Methodist, and they knew it, but I had charge of the meeting, so I took the liberty to ask them if they would be kind enough to give way and let me occupy their church on Sunday, and I put it to vote and obtained their consent. However, I told them as their class leader was not present, I would take no advantage of him but would call and see him, and if he objected I would not occupy on Sunday. Bro. Sheldon and I called on their class leader and readily secured his consent. I have occupied their church now almost a week and it has cost us nothing, only for contingent expenses, and we are very thankful for the kindness shown. While occupying I have preached plain, gospel truths, though I tried to do it in kindness and love. I think no one was offended, as one of their trustees told some of the Saints that I could use their church whenever I wanted to, providing it was not in use by them.

Since coming here I have baptized four. The conversion of these members is due largely to teachings of the Saints of the Pilot Rock branch as manifest in their faithfulness in everyday life and the zeal manifest and truths taught in their prayer and testimony services and Sunday school work and the excellent flow of the good Spirit which they enjoy.

Bro. Joseph Carlson baptized two and Bro. McDowell one near Mud Lake since I wrote you last, and I learn that two were baptized at the two-days' meeting conducted at Galland's Grove by Elders W. W. Whiting and J. M. Baker. One of these was a widowed sister, a daughter of Washington Roundy.

In bonds,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

GRAWN, Mich., July 15.

Editors Herald:—I am now holding forth here in the Methodist church. I tried to get the schoolhouse, but they did not want to give me that, so, I tried for the church. Some of the committee were willing and some were not, so I could not get it, and then I gave up getting a place to speak in; so I concluded to speak in the open air and arranged seats in front of Mrs. Johnson's home, now occupied by Elmer Bowman's people, gave out meeting, and I had quite a good congregation in sight, and I guess as many in the road and yard. I gave out meeting for the next night, and in the morning before breakfast down came a man and told me if I would preach in the church he would open it for me if he had to kick open the door. I told him I would, so he opened the door, gave me the key, and I am preaching the word as best I can, to good congregations. What the result will be is yet to be learned.

I am working hard to advance the cause, but it seems to move very slowly just now. I have preached in different places and it seems hard to get the people waked up. I am glad to hear of the progress of the Master's work if I am not doing much. But as you see God is on our side, and the word is being published throughout the world. In bonds,

F. C. SMITH.

HEBRON, Neb., July 16.

Editors Herald:—Three or four years ago the writer, in company with Bro. James Caffall, assisted in organizing a branch of thirteen members, at the home of Bro. Ezra T. Bryant, about five miles northeast of Hebron. Bro. Ezra was chosen president, and almost unassisted, so far as official help is concerned, he has carried on the work. He has been nobly assisted by Sr. Bryant and others of the members, but his work at times has been of a discouraging nature. The writer has preached occasionally in the branch and surrounding country, and quite a harvest has been gleaned in the few years of its existence.

I came here eight days ago and commenced a series of meetings assisted by Bro. Bryant, and our efforts have been well sustained by all the members. On Sunday Bro. Bryant baptized two young people, and the interest in the preaching is increasing. We have all been blessed. I feel greatly encouraged to find the Saints doing so well, under what would naturally be considered adverse circumstances. The Saints here are all poor in worldly goods, but they feel that "God is good, and his mercies endure forever."

The drought has stricken this section of the State two years in succession, and seems in a fair way to repeat itself this year also. The pastures are barren of feed. The oat crop is a total failure. They plowed their wheat fields in the spring, and their corn is now tasseling and is almost, if not quite, barren of shoots. Some of it is firing and all of it looks very sickly, and their hopes are being blasted day by day, and still the drought remains unbroken. A few more days of dry weather will tell the story, and then the question will be, What next? A man said to me yesterday, "Three years now I have farmed my own land without a harvest. I have a large family depending on my efforts. I have managed to get along so far and have not found fault or asked help, but I have got to the end. I must have some corn, receive help, or leave the country. To get corn the rain must come in copious showers in a few days. I will not stop here and ask for help, so of necessity if the rains do not come I must leave here."

The Saints are poor but are standing the perilous times well. I expect to remain here as long as the interest justifies.

Your brother in Christ,
C. H. PORTER.

SERMON BY ELDER ALEXANDER HALE SMITH,

At Lamoni, Iowa, May 13, 1894.

FOR we are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building.—1 Cor. 3: 9.

There comes to my mind in connection with this verse an exhortation to the Saints found in the Doctrine and Covenants:—

Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works.—D. C. 102: 7.

I have allowed my mind to contemplate the nature of the work in which we are engaged and the promises held out therein, and in looking around me for evidences of the progress that ought to have been made, it is discouraging. Sometimes I have been discouraged at the thought that people who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, to the extent of testifying that they have received of the Holy Spirit, that God hath given them a knowledge of the work; to see that these who so love the work have made such little progress toward the culmination of their hopes and the accomplishment of that which is presented in the gospel of Jesus Christ. There are times when this injunction, "Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works," seems to me out of place, as applicable to the present generation.

I will give some of my reasons why, at times, this precept seems to me out of place. I believe it is conceded by every Latter Day Saint, who has studied well the lesson of life which is taught in the gospel, that the object to be attained in the presentation of the gospel, is the preparation of a people to dwell with Christ when he shall come to live on the earth; and that this lesson is of a character, that if truly learned and honestly put into execution, it will prepare the people so that when Christ does come he will find them occupying and ready looking for his coming.

As I look into the record which has been made of the history of the world, I discover these lines of thought running through it. The revelation is made, that the hopes, aspirations, and anticipations of ultimately dwelling in the presence of God and Christ, have been cherished in the hearts of those who lived away back in ancient days, as well as by those of the present time.

We call this latter-day work the dispensation of the gathering in of all things God has promised; we believe it to be the very beginning of the end, when all that God has promised and declared through the prophets, will be fulfilled; and the people who shall be so fortunate as to dwell on the earth at the time of this gathering together of all things and shall have builded wisely upon the foundation that has been laid, will be the people that shall receive the reward for obeying the gospel of Christ. If we expect because we have heard the preaching of the word, because we have believed upon the word, obeyed it so far as baptism and compliance with the rite of the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Spirit is concerned; that this is all that is required of us, we are deceiving ourselves, and need not expect to receive the reward promised, and have builded unwisely in the structure we have made an effort to erect.

One of the most beautiful thoughts taught in the gospel, in every age in which it has been preached, has been the idea that Jesus will make his appearance to men, that God will come to dwell with men on the earth, and that men are privileged to so live that if they sleep in Christ their sleep shall be sweet and their rest secure, and their awakening shall be in the presence of God and his Christ to dwell with them. And yet the thought has been advanced, and the declaration made all along, that the work to be accomplished to entitle the people to all the joys presented in the gospel of Christ, is that each individual must work to the end to be worthy of the joys promised.

In the chapter preceding the one from which we have read our text, there is a statement in regard to what God has in store for those who love and serve him. It is recorded that it has not entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath laid up in store for those who love and serve him. Notwithstanding all the bright things that have been revealed; all the gems of thought which have been presented; all that has been held up to encourage us to seek them, we have made little progress. And yet the glory, the brightness, the grandeur which the mind of man has not been able to receive and comprehend, are being held in reserve as gifts of God and will be given to all who labor faithfully to attain them. And the laboring to attain them must be done with a fixed belief in the mind of the individual that God is true and will reward those who serve him. There must, also be fixed in the mind of the individual the principle of faith, which prompts him to move forward in the proper direction to obtain these blessings.

Now I have sometimes thought that these hopes and aspirations have been stimulated; and the representation of the joys to be given to man,—which has been held just beyond his reach, somewhere up yonder, where he can be told of its existence, has been made in order that he might understand that it may be, that it is possible, that it is there; but he has not been able to see it, has not been able to attain to it; it has been of a character to make the choice of the life of the individual an ideal life and not a real one.

It is true that the Savior has only promised the full receipt of all these blessings in the life to come; but in this life it is guaranteed, that we may receive the earnest of the life which is to come, but that is based upon the assumption that we labor to be worthy of it, that we build wisely. In building wisely we should comprehend that which we are building and the purpose for which the building is to be used when perfected; and we should remember the thought in the text, "Ye are God's building," because it brings to us such a chain of thought connected with it, that it helps us to understand the glory presented to our view of those who are permitted to surround the throne of God, in the presence of God and his Christ. The thought of buildings we can understand, because we are accustomed to see them erected, because we are accustomed to use them. There is another statement in the record, which says:—

Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house.—1 Pet. 2:5.

If we are that, the stones should be of that character that they should be fit to be put in any place which the Master Builder thinks they should occupy. If we were going to erect a stone building, we would be very careful to select the very best of material; but unfortunately for the spiritual body in process of erection, many of the contractors don't do that. Care should be used to have sound and clean material that is calculated to make the building very solid and clean; but the builders sometimes use stones which are marred by reason of some blemish. Many of the stones have spots of iron in them producing rust, which being exposed to the elements dissolves and runs down the outside disfiguring not only the stone itself, but others that may be connected with it also; and thus the whole building suffers loss.

Are we building in the great structure known as the kingdom of God? The apostle, when he said, "Ye are God's building," was talking to the church, to the ministry; he was talking to those who were constructing a building for the Master; he was talking to the end that there should be no spot in it.

In one place the kingdom of God is represented as being without "spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing" when it shall be presented to the Master. (Eph. 5:27.) In the lesson of to-day the apostle makes the statement, "Ye are the temple of God," and whether you apply it to the church or to the individual, it matters not to me, the effect is the same. If you permit the temple to become defiled or in any way blemished, if there is a blemish in the building, the Master Builder will reject that which is builded. That which is taught in the third chapter of 1 Corinthians, is in fact taught all along the line of the revealments of God; that men should be correct in their lives and become perfect men, fitted to dwell in the presence of a perfect God and his Christ, and among perfect beings in a perfect dwelling-place.

Perfection is represented as the grand result of the culmination of the gospel of Christ. There should not be a spot or blemish in the completed work of God known as the church. Can we not profit by the failures of others? Can we not profit by the errors of others? Is it not better to profit by the errors that others have made? Is it not better to profit by the failures that others have made, than to fail ourselves on account of errors we have made? We ought to think of these things, if they are of a character to mar the work in which we are engaged. Do you recollect the Master teaching his disciples how to pray? He taught them to pray:—

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Matt. 6:11.

You remember reading this. You have appreciated the application in the thought of the establishment of the kingdom of God. Have you divided it from the present life, placing the coming of the kingdom of God in the life to come? and have you had it in view, that when that kingdom should be established, you are to become an integral part of it, as a member thereof, doing the will of God as it is done in heaven? If you couple your thought with this prayer, you must have reasoned, and asked yourself the question, Am I sufficiently ready and prepared to be recognized as a member of that kingdom? If the Master should come to-morrow, will he find me ready and fit to be counted worthy to dwell with him? You remember I called your attention to the injunction:—

Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works.—D. C. 102:7.

When I read the history of Christ's teaching among the children of men, when he taught them the things of life, I find that men were much the same then, as now. The Master had frequently to reprove his disciples and say,

O ye of little faith!

They were like men are now in this great latter-day work; who have need of a similar reproof, after having seen and heard those things which ought to have established in their minds, faith in God, in Jesus Christ, and in his work; and should have enabled them to live above rebuke and reproach as being those who bear the vessels of the Lord secure in mighty faith. These should be clean, clean in every respect, that they should represent the kingdom of God in fact, as being members of the Church of God, officers in his kingdom.

To-day we hear the statement, Boast not of mighty faith. Where is your faith? How strong is your faith? Have you more faith than they had then? I frequently hear it said, "If I had lived in the days of the apostles, how good I would have been." That is the thought expressed. Are these, in their lives, worthy of the faith coming to them? Coming to them by the record that has been made by the apostles, and by that which the prophets have spoken, and also by reason of a belief in the statement of God through his servant.

It is true that the faith of the apostles was peculiar to themselves because of the fact that they saw one who was living clean and pure; pure in thought, pure in word, and pure in action; pure in all that he did, representing the character of God and his divinity in his life. Their faith was peculiar by reason of seeing this, as well as having been personally taught by him. And we, by reason of circumstances, being removed hundreds of years from that period of time, why should we boast of mighty faith?

I am constrained to admit, as compared with the faith that has been made manifest in the world for hundreds of years, the people known as Latter Day Saints, to whom I am talking and among whom I am laboring, have faith, mighty faith; but none to boast of, else why so many sick among you, why so many afflicted?

But how strong is your faith? If you let your mind rest upon it you have no need to seek outside of your own households, look to them for example, your own life's history, and let your mind run it over and see how mighty has been your faith, in comparison to that spoken of by the great Teacher, to make a man fit to be in the presence of God.

I frequently hear it said by members in relating their past experiences, "I have made crooked paths and am sorry for it." But do they need to make crooked paths? We must walk by faith and not by sight; but need we for this cause make crooked paths? In this we differ from those who were with Jesus; they saw him and witnessed his power.

We find that those who were the nearest to him, and those who esteemed him the highest, stood in positions by which their faith in him, the great Master, was sorely tried and shaken. I have tried to think of those men on the mountainside, when he stood talking with them upon the things of the kingdom, instructing them; and when in the act of blessing them was taken away from them. I have, in thought, tried to stand by his side—the side of that Being in whom I have placed all my hopes of this life, and the life which is to come—and have tried to imagine him leaving me alone on the mountain side with all my faith centered in him for the life which is before me, and see him, my beloved Master, he whom I had leaned upon, to whom I had entrusted all that I had hoped for in the life to come, taken away from me and I left alone. I have tried to stand in the place of those men and see him go in the cloud yonder; I have tried to think how my faith would stand such a test. And when I have tried to think thus, I have been bewildered and awestruck. I have looked around and have seen those who wore the garb of men, laboring in the work of the Master; I have loved them, but when I have placed my hope in them, their actions often prove I have not placed it wisely, I should not build my hope and faith in them, but trust in God and labor with them to educate the people that they might be accounted worthy to stand in the presence of God.

I seem to hear that loving Master chiding his disciples; chiding them not for boasting of mighty faith, but chiding them because they had not faith; and telling them that if they had faith as a grain of mustard seed—O how small that is as compared to the things around us—faith as a grain of mustard seed! It seems to me that some of us might boast of having faith sufficient to represent as much as a grain of mustard seed. If we had faith as a grain of mustard seed, we might say to this tree, Be thou removed and planted in the sea, and it should obey us.

What kind of faith have we? We have no occasion to boast of mighty faith; we have no grounds on which to build any boasting of this character. We may rejoice, we ought to rejoice in the thought that God is blessing us; that God pours out of his Spirit, that we have his Spirit from time to time, confirming us in the faith that we have espoused, in this faith, enabling us to open the doors and see in the future that which is in store for those who love him.

But we should sorrow when we think how many are suffering, sick, and afflicted. I seem to see again the Master talking with these loved ones around him in regard to the sufferings of those with whom he came in contact, and saying to them:—

This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

They could not accomplish all that they desired. We talk of faith being the fundamental principle of this great work. It is by faith we look forward to the time when Jesus, the Son of God, shall come, and we look into the infinite space, and are assured that he is going to return and gather together those who are believing in him. It is by the eye of faith that we labor for this. If we have faith we are sure it will be attained.

There is a kind of faith that ought to be with us to prompt us to always do that which is right. We do not always have that faith, that is, that strength that should be with us; the principle of faith that will enable us to do right under all circumstances. We should have that faith that will lead us to believe in God, and that which requires us to be pure; that kind of faith which will enable us to make our lives pure and bright that others seeing it may know that we are living with God, because we are keeping ourselves unspotted, we are accomplishing successfully that which God intended us to do, in order that he may fit us in that great and grand building that he is building somewhere.

Let us be careful that we do not build of any material that is not right in the sight of God. This earth is to be sometime cleansed from all its impurities, with the curse removed from it; the curse of thorns, and thistles, and noxious weeds, and bitter fruits, and be clothed upon with the fruits and the grain that were intended of God for the support of the human family; and all that is good, noble, and true, will be represented upon it. The city of God that cometh down from heaven, that shall be the dwelling place of God, shall be on the earth; and in the revealments of God we are made to see the gates of the city, and by faith we behold that the walls of the city are of beautiful stones, the most beautiful the earth affords.

The thought comes to me right here, that a perfect God is building a house to dwell in. If a perfect God is building a city, he will build a perfect city. A perfect God will seek for the best materials of the earth, the best that is found in the world, of which to build such a city. And what would he build it for? For himself and his family.

Men build houses for themselves and for their families, and they build, as their means will let them build, the finest and the best. God is like unto this, in some sense, and if we recognize him as being better and superior in every way, we must represent him as building like as is stated in his revelations to St. John, the revelations of Jesus Christ given for our benefit, as a representation of the material to be used in that great building which is much more beautiful and grand than any of the conceptions of men. And much more beautiful would be the representation of that kingdom or nation of men and women who should be lively stones, pure, noble, and grand, cleansed from all the wickedness that is found in men; those individuals who are ready, and willing, who are anxious to do the will of the Master as it is done in heaven.

This world is a good world to live in, if we make it good, but if we make it otherwise, it is a miserable place. I sometimes think that men make nine tenths of their own trouble in this world, while they might make their portion of happiness complete and surround themselves with it, if they would but keep the commandments of God. These pictures are not overdrawn, the word portrays exceeding beauty in the culmination of this grand work. But are we growing toward it, Saints? don't answer hastily. Are we growing into it? What advances are we making?

I find that men's characters are twisted, and blurred, and marred by their acts in this life, their surroundings, their everyday walk, and conversation. We don't expect to enter in and walk the streets of the perfect city, among the pure and the blessed and the perfect, unless we make a strong effort to cleanse ourselves, and make ourselves fit to enter in. And when I think of this, and that the intent of the gospel is a cleansing process; I think also of how willingly we ought to enter in to tread the way; and having entered in, we should continue in it. There are some things that are humiliating, or rather, that seem to be humiliating, but really are such that they elevate and bring us nearer to the character of Jesus who is the author of the work.

Now don't be lifted up, in the thought that you have mighty faith; that you are especially blessed with peculiar faith, unless you can see, in your own lives such evidence in work, as will entitle you to the rights and privileges of the gospel, by reason of faithful work done. Boast not of mighty faith, neither talk judgment. Judgment scores to the line and the plummet, and I am afraid if the line and the plummet were laid to our lives, there are not many of us but what would be found wanting. The object of my talk is that you may hold this up before you; that you may exercise faith; that it will be accomplished; that it will be brought about; that the culmination will be perfect; that the tabernacle of God will dwell among men.

Men and women will be perfect in this city that God is building, and our object now should be to fit ourselves to enter in and enjoy the blessings promised at the culmination of this great work. If we cannot live in peace with each other in small communities, how can we expect to enter into that life to dwell in the presence of God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

We look for his coming, we anticipate his coming, and pray for the time of his coming; but are we ready for his coming? I once thought I was ready; I once thought I would love to see the walls of the beautiful city; I once thought I would love to see the angels of God coming shouting the praises of God and the Lamb, of the coming Son of God. I once thought I would love to see these things, and I was permitted to see the beautiful gates of the city, and I saw an arch over one of them, and in that arch was seen in rainbow colors,—“None but the pure in heart enter here,” and I asked myself if I was pure in heart, and examined myself closely, and I found something that clung to earth and that I was not yet prepared, and there yet remained a work for me to do. There still remains a work, and I hope I will make some advancement. I hope that you that are here this morning have a work or will have worked so that you are coming nearer; that you are cleansing yourselves from the things that are unseemly in the presence of God and his Christ or in the presence of his Saints.

May your faith in God and his work be of such quality that it shall operate upon your souls to such an extent that you will never do a thing that you will be ashamed to have him see you do, that you will be ashamed to confess before him. If you do this the Spirit of God will dwell with you; do this and you will make the building pure and cleanse it thoroughly. There will be no rusty spots on the figure of the building you have in charge, and the Spirit of God will dwell with you; you will have communion with God, and you will rejoice in him; and the happiness of this world will be as nothing compared with the joy the Spirit of God brings.

May the few words that I have spoken this morning lead you to open the book of life and read it carefully, and so observe its teaching from day to day that it may be said of you, This people belongs to God; this people have the things of God with them; this people love to do that which is good, and hate wickedness and error to the extent that the evildoer is not at rest in their midst; the evildoer finds no place with them; he cannot dwell in the presence of God on account of his evil deeds. Do this, and it will be said that here, in Lamoni, there is a people content to live with God, rather than to enjoy the world; showing that the work has been established, the kingdom of God set up, and men of earnest purpose in the things of God going out from this nucleus into all the world, to preach the kingdom of Christ and his righteousness.

WHITE-SEWELL DEBATE.

Editors Herald.—The White-Sewell debate ended Saturday, the 20th, near 6:30 p.m. I judge the average attendance was from three to five hundred. However, the last two days may have far exceeded that number.

My opponent was very gentlemanly in some respects. He never called us Mormons but once, and, when some one called his attention to it, made public acknowledgment the next day. At no time did he charge us with polygamy or any of the kindred heresies that have followed that doctrine. Never once did we hear that slough of tirade, "thieves," "robbers," etc., that is so frequently indulged in by our opponents. But, once or twice he dropped below common manhood level and said our books taught murder. However, he did not dare to attempt to cite the passage.

On the first proposition—our church—he dwelt extensively upon supposed errors in the geography of the Book of Mormon. He read into the Book of Mormon many conflicting statements regarding plates and divisions of lands. Finally the whole controversy over that book settled down to the twenty-four gold plates that Limhi found. Elder Sewell thought he had found one of the "biggest inspired 'fullness of the gospel'" feats of travel ever placed upon record. He had the land that was covered with "bones of men" and "ruins of buildings" (B. M. page 158) where King Limhi's men found the twenty-four gold plates of Ether, located away up in North America where Mormon hid up the records unto the Lord in the hill Ramah. (B. M., p. 531.) "This," said Elder Sewell, "was from three to five thousand miles from where Limhi's men started from [Zarahemla], who wandered around many days in the wilderness and then returned with the twenty-four plates." Thus he had King Limhi's forty-three men wandering around and around in the wilderness away down by the narrow neck of land between North and South America, and yet in these few days of wandering they had been three or five thousand miles away up to the hill Cumorah or Ramah and found these twenty-four plates in the land of Desolation which was a land of men's bones, etc., where the big battle was fought and Ether came forth and hid his plates in the same hill where Mormon had hid his. I asked Elder Sewell to please read the statement from the book itself, where Limhi's men got the twenty-four plates in the hill Cumorah. This he never did. But he continued to assert that the statement was true.

I incidentally referred to his assertion during the second proposition, and Mr. Sewell occupied one whole half hour upon that subject again. It ended by him challenging me to furnish one of our church papers and he would "show it up." I agreed readily to this and offered to give him two columns in one of our papers and I would occupy the same space in answer to it, both articles to appear side by side in the same issue. This he agreed to, but wanted time, as he was very busy. I granted this. His article when prepared is to be sent to me and then it and my answer sent to the press together.

The fight became so hot upon the Book of Mormon that it cut no small figure in the debate. I maintained its truthfulness with such logic and force that my opponent publicly accused me of attempting to advertise the book simply for the profit I would make from its sale at the debate. I gave him to understand that ten per cent was the best figure offered, even to traveling agents, for our church books; but that this people might know that I was not working for the filthy lucre coming from the sale of the book I would furnish from one to one hundred Books of Mormon to the crowd at 75 cents each; that the same book would cost any man one dollar at the publishing house. I took a few orders and almost a score more wanted the book, but through the bustle and excitement I failed to get names and money for them. I believe a whole armful could have been sold had they been on the ground.

Mr. Sewell took the position that my church started in fraud because Joseph Smith said he saw two personages and one said, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." "Thus," he said, "the very corner stone and basic principle of the starting of your church was based upon a fraudulent statement that gave the lie to God's holy word." He rested his argument upon 1 John 4: 12 and 1 Tim. 6: 16 as found in King James' translation of the Bible. I showed how Joseph was humbly seeking for light when this vision was presented to him and that it perfectly harmonized with God's dealings with his people in former ages as recorded in the Bible; that we dare not ignore God's statement of facts against Elder Sewell's interpretation of his pet theory that God never was nor can be seen; that we have had somewhere near one hundred and eighty-eight different translations of the Bible and all did not agree with King James' that "no man hath seen God at any time," nor again "can see." I was ready to admit that no man had or could see God unless he was a humble believer in him.

All of this I showed is verified by King James' translation itself. In Matthew 5: 8 Jesus says in his memorable sermon upon the Mount: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Here I arrayed the statement of the Son of God against Mr. Sewell's pet theory and interpretation. I also quoted Genesis 32: 30: "And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel; for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved." And in Judges 13: 22: "And Manoah said unto his wife, We shall surely die, because we have seen God." We have also the great prophets Isaiah, in Isaiah 6: 1-5, saying: "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the seraphim. . . . And one cried unto another, and said, Holy . . . is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. . . . Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts." Now my question reads that we are in harmony with the New Testament church as it is described in the Holy Scriptures. Joseph said he saw two personages, and one was the Lord of hosts. Isaiah declares the same. Now if Joseph's work is based upon a fraudulent statement, Isaiah, Moses, Aaron, Jacob, and others stand shoulder to shoulder with him.

I also arrayed the following against Elder Sewell's statement of fraud: "Then went up Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; . . . And they saw the God of Israel . . . And the Lord said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there; and I will give thee tables of stone," etc.—Ex. 24: 9-12.

Every inch of ground was hotly contested. I hardly ever felt better in my life, and went at my work as trustful and confident of God's aid as at any time during my many debates.

The debate was held in a large arbor purposely arranged for the occasion, in the edge of Durango, in Falls county, Texas. One night while sleeping in a draught I caught a little cold and the next morning was quite hoarse during my first speech. I took my seat after my half-hour speech and my mind quickly flashed back to Blendsville, Missouri, where Brn. Chatburn and Davis' voices gave way under a severe test of outdoor speaking. I silently lifted my heart to God—not knowing at the time that any of the Saints were doing the same, which I learned afterwards they were. I arose for my second speech and my voice was clear, and remained so to the last.

On Saturday, the last day of the debate, by urgent request of many I spoke at night to a large crowd. On Sunday I spoke at eleven and three o'clock and drove twelve or fifteen miles in cart with Bro. Currie so I could be ready to take the train at Troy next morning to reach appointment I had at night in Geneva.

I could write enough upon the second proposition of pith and points to fill one Herald, but I am reminded that debates are getting numerous in the church and I do not care to burden the Herald columns with my own work for fear of being thought egotistical. The Saints who attended the debate were simply carried away with our success. A little move among the outsiders may not be amiss. Our victory was so apparent that the outsiders arranged a blue ribbon badge and were hardly prevented by some of our leading brethren from rushing upon the platform and pinning it upon me the moment the debate closed. They had also made some arrangements to fire anvils in honor of our victory. This was prevented because I was announced to preach at night. Elder Sewell said in his closing speech: "The Baptists' and Methodists' sympathy has been sought by White and he has got them deceived. I want to tell you when I am down you are not a drop in the pail for him." My opponent's church had ministers and professors of schools from Tennessee and Kentucky and they swarmed around like bees. There was an attempt to break me down in my closing speech.

Elder Sewell and his moderator and another one of their ministers were either on their feet all at once or clammering at me. I learned afterwards that it was a made up job on purpose to break the force of my closing remarks; but it was amusing to the crowd to see how easily they were dispatched. Alexander's church was on trial for all it was worth; and my thorough knowledge of their origin and doctrine, and understanding their tricks and dodges, bluffs and bluster to down everybody else with the old cry that "Where the Bible speaks we speak, and where it is silent we are silent"—was more than they were willing to stand, when seeing that their true position was being shown up in its true light. Surely none of them can stand to be tested with the "Bible alone."

I do not believe that in all of my debates I ever got the Saints' doctrine so thoroughly before the people as I did at this debate. Our people should profit by it and the work should not be neglected there by those in charge.

Bro. (Elder) E. Bates lives there, and his name is phenomenal for "good deeds." He is a man that tries to let his light shine.

Methodists, Baptists, and outsiders, almost by the score, asked me to remain and preach for them. Quite a number of the Disciples were much interested too. The Missionary Baptists held Sunday school at three, and after opening the house they dismissed on purpose to go and hear me at that hour. I took dinner with one of their leading and wealthy members and he ordered one of the large Books of Mormon. They have become so interested in the debate and our doctrine that he urged me to correspond with him. I distributed at my eleven o'clock services about one hundred Heralds and Ensigns.

I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of many of the Texas brethren and sisters. Bro. E. W. Nunley was my moderator and he did a good work; did not agree upon a chairman, hence we went through the debate without one. I feel thankful to God that I did not experience a dark hour through the debate. I remain preaching at Geneva till the 25th, when I go north to look after necessary work. In bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

GENEVA, Texas, July 22, 1895.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The following resolution was passed at the April Conference of 1894: "Whereas we feel the great need of a map locating the cities and travels in Book of Mormon times to aid in studying said book, therefore be it resolved that we, the members of the Third Quorum of Elders, ask General Conference now in session to appoint a committee to make and have such a map printed at as early a day as practicable." The above resolution was referred to the committee on archaeology. The committee have been at work on the subject, and expect to have something ready ere long. We request assistance from all who may be interested. There are many now who are using charts and maps in various places. Will they be kind enough to send us copies or suggestions to aid the committee in their work. The necessity for uniformity in regard to this map is seen in the fact that different ones locate the same rivers and cities differently. If the committee can have all of these different points presented to them, with the reasons assigned in cases why they locate certain rivers and cities and lands as they do, they will be able to draw from the whole a better average. We are anxious to have the matter attended to as speedily as possible. Will those who are interested please take notice, and act accordingly. The addresses of the committee are, William H. Kelley, Temple, Ohio; William Woodhead, Barnard, Missouri; F. M. Sheehy, No. 2,948 Washington Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

Respectfully yours,

F. M. SHEEHY.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Philadelphia district will convene at Baldwin, Maryland, September 28, in the gospel tent at six p. m. for business. Sabbath, the 29th, prayer and preaching. We anticipate one of the best times ever had in these parts. Let everybody come. As there are those who hold the priesthood in the district that have ignored the conferences for the past three years, making no report by letter or in person, it's about time we knew something about your desires. So many elders and priests reported by the conference every year, yet the conference has had no report from many of them. What think you, brethren? Send your report to Thomas Lester, East New York Avenue, near Powell Street, Brooklyn, New York. A. H. PARSONS, Pres.

Conference for the Eastern Iowa district will meet with the Grove Hill branch at Fairbank, Iowa, at ten a. m., August 31, 1895. Fairbank is on the Chicago and Great Western railroad, seventeen miles east of Waterloo and six miles west of Oelwein. Those coming by team from the east or northeast will go due west seven miles from the north end of Oelwein and inquire for Milt Dawold or Ben Shippy, and they will pilot you four miles farther to Fairbank. Those coming from the northwest will inquire for Charles Shippy, at Grove Hill, seven miles from town. All who possibly can, come in time to be at the Sunday school exercises to begin at ten a. m., Friday, August 30. Branch clerks, send all your reports to J. S. Roth, in care of John McRea, Fairbank, Iowa. Bro. J. R. Lambert is expected to be with us to help us along. Come one, come all. Come filled with the love of God, and for the work, and we will have a spiritual feast long to be remembered. J. S. ROTH, Pres.

W. Blair is included.

It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE RELIABILITY OF THE GOSPELS.

WHILE the complaint is loud that modern biblical criticism is giving us chiefly negative and destructive views, it is still true that many of the results of this criticism are positive contradictions in defense of the reliability of the Scriptures. Just at present this fact is more noticeable in New Testament research than in Old Testament investigations. A fair representative of this school of critics is Professor Jülicher, of Morburg, Prussia. In "Einleitung in das Neue Testament" (Introduction to the New Testament), he writes as follows:—

"The Synoptic Gospels—Matthew, Mark, and Luke—possess an invaluable worth not only as books of edification, but also as sources of the history of Jesus. Altho some of the statements they make may be of questionable correctness historically considered, yet the picture they give of the founder of the Gospel is correct throughout. Many and many of his words the gospel writers have never heard or have forgotten; others they have transmitted in modified shapes; but the modern efforts to make the sayings of Jesus, because some of them can be outwardly paralleled in the Jewish Mishna and Talmud, appear as only from contemporary literature made from the standpoint of a special party spirit, is just as unreasonable as is the opinion of the rabid and radical extreme criticism of the day, which finds in this language only the reflection and reproduction of the philosophical ideas of the first three centuries. The one fact alone that in the Gospels we have so large a selection of unique parables show that these are the production of one and the same person. In a word, in the language of Christ as found in the Gospels there is a kernel of most marked individuality, a uniqueness that cannot be imitated, which raises their authenticity above any and every doubt.

"The reports given in the Gospels of the doings and sufferings of Christ must be accorded an equally high estimate on historic sources of information. Even should it sound rather paradoxical, it is nevertheless the fact that these synoptic traditions go back to the very days of Christ himself. It is incorrect to claim that the Gospels are late productions because they contain elements of a legendary character. The substance in the career and teachings of Christ remains notwithstanding the literary history of these books."

In a few lines Jülicher sketches in a most suggestive way the gradual development of Gospel traditions and Gospel writing in the early Church. He distinguishes (1) the time of oral tradition, about 30 to 60 A. D., when those who were acquainted with the gospel story transmitted it and used it without any special reference to the needs of coming generations; (2) the period of Synoptic compilation of the Gospels, about 60 to 100 A. D., when, after one of the Apostles, Matthew, had, as the Church Father Papias reports, by his compilation of the "sayings (logia) of the Lord," made the beginning of a gospel literature, by a selection from oral and written sources, in which he was followed by "many" as St. Luke says in his introduction to the third Gospel; (3) after the year 100 began the period of pseudo-gospel compilation in the interests of sects and heresies. It was then that the duty devolved upon the church to select the most reliable and authentic of this class of literature as an inheritance to the church. How this was done, and what confidence can be placed in the Gospels now in our Canon, Jülicher, as the result of his criticism, says in these words:—

"The church has exhibited marked skill in declining to have anything to do with these later pseudo-gospels. We have the best of reasons for believing that in the synoptic Gospels of the New Testament we have the very best and most reliable that the entire gospel literature of the early church produced, and that we will nowhere find a simpler, more complete, and more faithful record of the fundamental truths of Christianity than in Matthew, Mark, and Luke."

In conservative circles also vigorous defense is made of the historical correctness of the Gospel records. The latest article of value from this side of the house is in the Evangel. Luth. Kirchenzeitung, of Leipzig, No. 13, in a discussion headed "The A. B. C. of Gospel Criticism." The discussion is mainly intended to show the fallacy of the favorite argumentum ex silentio, or conclusions drawn from the fact that certain things are not mentioned in a book to show what the literary origin or history of the book must have been. A feature of this discussion is the opinions quoted from men like Humboldt and others to show how little such an argument is really worth. Thus he says: "In the Archives at Barcelona there is not a syllable found in reference to the triumphal entry of Columbus into that city after the discovery of America; in Marco Polo not a word is found concerning the Chinese wall; in the Archives of Portugal not a word is found concerning the journeys of Amerigo Vespucci." The application of these facts to either Old Testament or Gospel criticism is easily made. The Gospels were written for persons already acquainted with the deeds and saying of Christ; accordingly many things are omitted which would have been stated in a book written for persons not at all familiar with these facts. This fact, so fundamental to an understanding of the origin and contents of the gospel, can fairly be regarded as belonging to the elements of fair gospel criticism.—Literary Digest.

FROM A TRAINED NURSE.

AS FAR as circumstances will admit, it should be made the duty of one person only to care for the sick, receive instructions from the doctor, and give him an account of such symptoms and changes as occur during his absence. Two or more persons taking orders, reporting symptoms, and giving medicine and food, will create confusion. As women are usually more sympathetic, exact, and observant, and are also quicker and easier in their movements, they make better nurses than men. A good nurse will endeavor to be cool and collected, avoiding excessive anxiety and an excitability of temperament, and will maintain in conversation and deportment, a bright, cheerful disposition, thus inspiring the patient with hope and materially aiding in a recovery. It is better to avoid talking much to sick persons, especially of their illness, and keep from them all depressing news. Loud talking should not be permitted in the room, nor whispering unless the patient is asleep. Necessary conversation, in low and distinct tones, will not usually, annoy the sick. In walking about the room, step lightly, and avoid creaking shoes. Persons should not be allowed to stand outside the room door and talk, as the patient will oftentimes imagine they are discussing his case; nor should heavy walking in the room overhead be permitted, as it disturbs the sick greatly. A sick person is frequently irritable, and sometimes obstinate, yet ought to be kindly and firmly dealt with. If very ill, he should not be permitted to get out of bed for any purpose. The nurse must assist him in all necessary movements. Turning the pillows often will add greatly to the comfort of the patient. The hands and face should be sponged several times a day with warm water, teeth cleaned by means of a soft linen rag. The hair should be carefully combed and brushed each day. In severe illness the patient will be weaker in the early morning hours than any other time in the day. He will require special attention from the nurse at such time.—Sel.

BRAIN WORK AND VITALITY.

AS A factor in longevity, the London Speaker calls attention to the fact that those people who have been accustomed to the continued disciplinary use of their brains daily, and who have thus placed their nerve-power under a highly-developed condition of constitutional training, are enabled by these very means to escape the so-called early decay, and to avoid those alarming accidents to health, from which so many apparently healthy men succumb. People who use their brains and observe ordinary hygienic care of their bodies resist diseases in the first place, and when they are actually ill, prolong their lives or recuperate sooner than do those who have lived less intellectual lives. Thus there is given a new force to the assertion "that you may kill a man with anxiety very quickly, but it is difficult to kill him with work."

"Whether the brain can actually give power to the muscles is not certain, though the enormous strength sometimes developed in a last rally looks very like it. That it can materially affect vitality is quite certain, and has been acknowledged by the experienced in all ages."

THAT keen-sighted observer, Dr. Benjamin Franklin, had a saying that, "It is the eyes of others that ruin us." It was a shrewd observation, and never more true than to-day. The desire for display is at the bottom of most of the dishonesty of men in positions of responsibility, who, in nine cases out of ten, betray their trust, not through the mere love of money, but because they want to equal or surpass their neighbors in luxurious living. It is hard to understand how anyone can find satisfaction in finery bought with stolen money, and with discovery and disgrace an ever present possibility, yet men take the awful risk simply in order to appear well in the eyes of others. Nothing can excuse dishonesty. And yet society is much at fault in setting so high a value on the outward appearance. A fine house, rich apparel, a handsome equipage, make entrance into "society" easy, and so if they do not go to the length of dishonor, men sacrifice health, comfort, domestic happiness, intellectual culture, to the acquisition of means to secure them. It is "a vain show;" but how much is lost to win it.—Presbyterian.

LACK OF EASE IN CONVERSATION.

There is one great reason for this lack of conversational power: in too many cases the art is never practiced inside the home circle, writes Louise Royle in the August Ladies' Home Journal. No attempt at pleasant converse is ever made save when visitors are present; the various members of the family may gossip a little, or discuss purely personal affairs, but they make no attempt at entertaining talk. In point of fact, the art of conversation is like a game of battledore and shuttlecock, one needs the quickness and dexterity of constant practice. In many busy households the only general gathering of the family is at meal time—a time above all others when worry should be banished, if only for the sake of physical comfort. Yet this is the very time when the mother will complain of domestic worry, the father of business cares, and the daughters of shabby frocks.

All this should be changed; it ought to be a rule in all households that disagreeables are to be banished at meal time. If complaints must be made let them come at a proper time, but do not imperil your digestion by eating while you are in an irritated and discontented frame of mind. Pleasant talk relieved by an occasional laugh will be more beneficial than pounds of pills. In the household there should not only be an avoidance of unpleasant topics, but an attempt to find agreeable ones. Each member of the family should come to the table prepared to say something pleasant. Any bright little story or merry joke, or any bit of world's news that will loosen the tongues and cause animated talk—how it will increase the brightness of the working day. There need be no profound discussion—it should be just lively touch and go talk.

THE REST DAY.

WE are in receipt of a small tract, evidently issued by the Saturday Sabbath keeping, soul-sleeping Adventists. The first page is a purported quotation from a lecture delivered by Father Enright, of the Catholic Church, at Harlan, Iowa, December 15, 1889, in which the reverend father is made to state that the Protestants have no right to observe Sunday; that Sunday is not the Sabbath; that Saturday is the seventh day and the Sabbath, according to the Bible and the record of time; and that the "holy Catholic Church changed the day of rest from Saturday to Sunday, the first day of the week."

This tract is sent to us by a sister who asks that we offer some aid to enable her to maintain her faith in keeping Sunday, the Lord's day, as the rest day.

To us the following reasons are quite sufficient.

1. It is the gospel dispensation, not the dispensation of the law of Moses that is to contain the elements of salvation of man.

2. The seventh day of the week, was the Jewish Sabbath, and was to be observed very strictly; it was not made a Sabbath to the Christian.

3. The keeping of the Sabbath, was not made a part of the gospel dispensation under Christ.

4. Neither the Catholic Church, nor any other can show by competent evidence that Saturday, Saturn's Day, is in point of fact, the seventh day of the week, the Sabbath of the Jew, to be observed on the land of America, whose record of time is twenty-four hours later than the Jerusalem time.

5. The church has been told by revelation to observe the Lord's Day, as the day of rest, not as the Sabbath, the Jewish Sabbath, but as a day of rest, assembling for worship, and paying our devotion to God.

Believing in divine revelation we cannot ignore so plain a revelation, so much in harmony with the action of the apostles and disciples after Christ, or accept an institution of the Old Testament, against such revelation.

6. The disciples observed Sunday, long before the Catholic Church sanctioned it, or attempted to enforce the keeping of it as the Sabbath, Father Enright to the contrary, notwithstanding.

7. Those who accept the gospel of Christ, and who through obedience receive the Holy Spirit need have no sort of fear or hesitation about the keeping of the Lord's day, as commanded in the revelation of 1887, which clearly designates that as the day we are to observe as the rest day.

Our soul-sleeping, Advent brethren attempt to enforce the dogma of the Sabbath, and stumble over far more important things commanded in the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Many a man that keeps the Sabbath, and makes others offenders who do not, is a whited sepulcher of hypocrisy, touching the law of regeneration, in Christ, and the life in him.

If our sister shall keep her gospel hope bright by keeping the New Testament doctrines and teaching, she will have the Spirit and be able to keep the rest day unblamed of God, for not being Jewish either in descent or tradition.

WHY DIFFER?

THERE occurs here and there among the elders discussion as to what is meant by the word Rock as used by Jesus in Matthew 16: 18, "Upon this rock I will build my church."

By examining the passage and its context it will be seen that Jesus did not intend to say that he would build his church upon himself. Nor does he propose to build it upon Peter. "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock," not upon thee, referring to the man Peter, does he propose to build.

There was revealed to Peter and the rest, Peter speaking for all of them, one great and important fact, a dominant and all-pervading and triumphant truth. This truth was Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God. The whole story of the transaction goes to show this. The scene, the men, the question, all trend in the one direction, and that was to make manifest the fact that Jesus was the Christ. If there is any truth to be deduced from the sentence and its connection it is this one important one above all others, that Jesus is the Christ. The varying opinions of men, the doubts of the apostles themselves, the baffling suggestions of the jeering multitude and the adversary of souls, all settled and vanish in the one absorbing conviction that Jesus is the Christ. Even the manner in which this knowledge reached them, and the Spirit through which the truth had been conveyed to them, were lost sight of and swallowed up in the one great fact.

Why then should the Saints, or the elders differ and contend about what the rock was. There was concerned in the occurrence, the Father, the Son, the Holy Spirit, the fact that Jesus was the Christ, and the disciples represented by Peter. The disciples needed the knowledge who Jesus was. He had been among them, called them, wrought miracles in their presence, and yet they did not know him; it was necessary that they should know him. He had told them that no man could know him except the Father should reveal him. The Father, taking cognizance of the condition of things, saw the necessity and fitness of the occasion, and using the Holy Ghost as the means revealed through it, the fact that Jesus was the Christ. Which of the two is the greater, the thing revealed, or the means of communication? Is the telegraph of more importance than the messages it is used to transmit? Was Jesus proposing to build his church on means of revelation, or on the thing revealed? As we see it there can be but one answer given to these queries, and that is, a great truth was to be laid down on which the church could in all its multiplied membership be safely grounded and builded, that truth was that Jesus was the Christ. Revelation, the means through which that truth was made known, was a secondary consideration; important, it is true, but used only as an instrument to an end, that the stability of the church.

From these considerations we conclude that the revelation by which the truth that Jesus is the Christ, and that truth are so intimately blended that they should not, and indeed cannot be separated, and the one be made the rock to the exclusion of the other; both are necessary to the upbuilding of the church, and neither can be safely ignored, or dispensed with. Let contentions over it cease, if there be any.

BECOMING A NUISANCE.

SPEAKING of "boy preachers," who are prevalent in the South, the Memphis Commercial Appeal says: "They are becoming a nuisance, and causing men of thought to become very tired; for they and those who encourage them are making a travesty of the most sacred of human concerns. We have been having them for quite awhile, the first one naturally creating a sensation. But the crop has been increasing every year, until now, as is the case with the English sparrows, there must be found a way to abate them or the cause of Christianity will suffer."

It is the business and office work of the newspaper man to give the public a statement of things as he finds them, not simply as they seem to be. In the performance of the task imposed upon him he becomes, as a rule, a critical observer of the methods and happenings incident to the general trend of life, among which the various incidents peculiar to religious events do not escape his notice. The news man therefore sees the practical phases of life and is strongly inclined by the very nature of his profession to view things in the light of their practical worth. Because of this he is in position to render valuable service to humanity, especially if disposed to warn the public against what his broader general experiences with human nature and events enable him to discern as impracticable, false, or designed to deceive or defraud.

In the paragraph quoted from the Appeal we think the writer has done credit to himself and much service to the public; we notice that the statement has already been quite extensively reprinted. He has concentrated in few words that which if heeded would do much to aid many religious organizations in their efforts to do good and guard them against sensationalism and fitful, momentary impulses and methods.

It ought to be apparent to church workers in general that they and their organizations stand before the people as advocates and exemplars of principles of truth; of truths in moral principles included in the spiritual profession of what they accept as the gospel of Jesus Christ. It must also be apparent that steady-going hard common sense must be manifest in all the methods adopted to bring men and women into a condition of true citizenship in this world and lead them onward to the high plane of life that shall fit them for the world to come; and, that if other methods are resorted to, people who deal with the hard, practical problems of life in the struggle for existence will naturally be shrewd enough to see that sensationalism in religion is without value to them and unworthy of their time and attention.

It is said that manual training of a child which requires him to measure material before cutting, to fit before joining, etc., not only makes him exact in ordinary work, but also develops his sense of trueness—makes him truthful in statement, careful in what he says and does;—causes him to be exact, right, correct. That there is truth in the statement is apparent, hence it is also apparent that the practical affairs of life and the precepts and methods of religion should go hand in hand, in entire harmony in the growth of men and women for good, inasmuch as true religion comprehends all good and harmonizes with all phases of truth.

It is our opinion that sensationalism in religion is both a failure and a wrong; also that those indulging in such directly or indirectly—as active participants in it or as abettors or employers of sensationalists—are wrong-doers; that they do nothing to establish true religion but very much to retard it. The work of Sam Jones, of Harrison, the boy preacher so-called, and others of like spirit, has been temporary, passing, fitful, un-substantial; it has left persons unconverted, dazed, or confused concerning their conceptions of religion and dissatisfied with their experiences in it; worse off than they were before, if not discouraged, and entirely indifferent to religious influences.

Then, too, large sums of money have been paid these sensational revivalists. They are not to be had for the mere asking, nor for ordinary compensation. A successful modern revivalist grows rich out of it as a rule; and, invariably, when such fail to attract sufficient attention to make a financial success, they quit the field. We once heard a business man criticize a professional revivalist as "a religious mountebank," and we confessed the aptness and correctness of the appellation.

Persons who are fed on sensationalism are converted to sensationalism, and are partakers by nature of what they imbibe. They are or become sensational by nature; unstable, transient, unreliable, and require unlimited and continuous sensations to keep them going. They need to be turned about, to be remade, unconverted from fanciful notions to soundness of mind and soberness of judgment.

Infidelity, unbelief in general, is feeding and growing upon these religious follies peculiar to the present age. Modern Christianity, based largely upon misconceptions of the Bible, has been turning in almost every direction and striving by many means to find something to hold the people and attract others to the churches. Being void of the spiritual power peculiar to the church as endowed and blessed by the Master, modern church organizations have acted according to the conceptions of those directing them, hence modern methods, "business enterprise," "variety," etc., according to the ordinary sense in which such methods are in vogue are resorted to; hence the advent of the modern boy preacher with his supposed precocity, and the noisy evangelist with his pulpit jokes and slang, and the general bad taste displayed in revival methods.

We agree with the Memphis Appeal man, only we think he should have said that the travesties who pose as revival ministers who leave communities farther away from the sober truths of religion than where they found them, are nuisances; pronounced, unmistakable nuisances, and should be abated as such by disposing of their services and resorting to other and true methods of reaching and benefiting the masses.

The recommendation that they be abated in the interests of Christianity and the comparison with the English sparrows is not too strong. Correct statements of the matter are needed to discourage and do away with a class who would not be at work without there was plenty of money and a general good time in it. The English sparrow as a nuisance is outdistanced and outdone by the class with which he is compared. It is a reflection upon our civilization that such men receive so much encouragement.

Religion ought to represent permanency. To secure permanency, sound principles must be adopted and true methods be used in teaching and presenting them.

"UTAH STAKE OF ZION CONFERENCE."

ON Sunday, July 21, we attended the forenoon services at this conference in the Stake Tabernacle in Provo, Utah. Apostles A. H. Cannon and John Henry Smith were the speakers. Mr. Cannon introduced the subject of politics, which by the way is the absorbing theme in Utah just now. If Mr. Cannon's arraignments of the people were just Utah Mormons are playing with edged tools when they essay to handle politics. As we listened we were tempted to ask, "Is this people capable of self-government"? The speaker viewed coming statehood with some apprehension lest politics would result in a neglect of more weighty matters. One young man told him a few days ago that when it came to a question between his religion and his politics his religion would have to stand aside. The speaker said the Saints were becoming so partisan on this question that some who were afflicted with disease would send for elders of their own political party to administer. Teachers in their official visits would choose only those of their own political party as associate laborers. In one instance not far from Salt Lake, teachers while on an official visit got into a political quarrel and came to blows. The local press was often a disgrace and shame to the community. He had yet to see one "partisan paper which did not indulge in discourteous and even vulgar allusions to political opponents." He said even women who were to be granted the political franchise behaved improperly but he left us to conjecture as to what their conduct was. We were anxious to know, but yet admired the gallantry of the speaker in passing it by so lightly.

The speaker feared that statehood would result in the revival of the old Mormon and Anti Mormon parties, he had already heard hints in that direction. He condemned this tendency in unmeasured terms, and ably plead for a division of church and state. He deprecated all the evils mentioned, and upon the whole his advice was sound and practical. He plead with the members of the church to elevate politics to the standard of their religion, and not drag their religion to the level of partisan politics. It will be well for Utah if the people heed the advice of Mr. Cannon; but the tendency seems to be to adopt a lower standard. We shall see.

Mr. Smith followed with an indorsement of Mr. Cannon in part, but was noncommittal upon some points. He especially emphasized the position of Mr. Cannon on church and state. The expressed views of these speakers plainly indicated that they did not think Mormons had a monopoly on loyalty, honesty, or ability. There was nothing little, narrow, or illiberal in the expressed sentiments of these gentlemen.

Mr. Smith then branched off into a strong exhortation to the Saints to read and become acquainted with the teachings of the sacred books. This was in such strong contrast to the reputed teachings of Utah leaders in the past that we were interested. Mr. Smith thought in many things they had been too exclusive, that they could adopt some of the practices of others with profit. He had visited Christian families of other denominations and observed a practice of reading the Scriptures by father or mother before family prayer and the expounding of the same to their offspring. On the other hand he had visited the homes of Latter Day Saints perhaps as much as any of his brethren and had not seen this practice observed except in one instance. He urged the adoption of it, and thought the result would be a greater love of home and a more intelligent reverence for the word of God. May God grant that this people may heed this admonition of Mr. Smith. It will heal some of the breaches existing in modern Israel. "Let there be a class for the teaching of gospel principles established in every family circle," said Mr. Smith.

That this admonition was timely appears from the reports of the Stake Presidency given the day before as reported in the local press. President John said:—

One Sunday evening the Stake presidency drove from Payson between ten p. m. and 12:30 a. m. and in all the settlements passed through scores of young people were on the streets. While no harm was perhaps done, that practice could not be continued without harm resulting therefrom. Parents cannot too rigidly guard virtue. Their first step is to discontinue late hours that are now indulged in by the young.

President Smoot said:—

There is an organization of young people, so speaker had been told, extending through the entire Stake, and they have a place of rendezvous for each Sunday, sometimes in one settlement and sometimes in another. Parents and teachers should break up that organization, if it exists.

Apostle Young:—

Felt that the advice given was most timely, The principle of properly rearing the youth should touch the hearts of all parents. Today there is an enemy at work seeking to destroy the very hope of Israel. If the enemy cannot get the old it will work to get the young. Speaker regretted to see what he had seen at the resorts which the people so freely patronize. . . . The purity of the home and of the community was urged to be protected even with force if necessary.

Is this the "righteous seed" specially provided for in the institution of celestial marriage, eh?

DEPARTMENT AT CAMP MEETING.

LAKE BLUFF, hitherto a popular camp meeting ground of Chicagoans and largely attended by leading church people, is, as many camp grounds of lesser note have been, considerably disturbed of late and its attractiveness and usefulness as a place of religious devotion greatly impaired by the presence of recreation seekers who are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," hence so indifferent to the spiritual comfort of attenders of camp meetings as to practically nullify their efforts by disturbing services.

The tendency of certain elements to mar the peace of those attending camp meetings, reunions, etc., has become so general that we note some of the difficulties experienced by these Lake Bluff campers. Two factions had sprung up there, religious and pleasure seeking bodies. In regard to the gradual transformation from a place of camp meeting solely to a full-fledged summer resort, Rev. William E. McLennon, pastor of the Berwyn Methodist church said:—

It is impossible to hold a successful camp-meeting in a place where there is so much gayety. I am sure the pleasure seekers are driving away the people who come here solely for worship. The summer-resort people are out for a good time and their sole object is to enjoy themselves. They do not even observe the Sabbath, and on that day many of them go in bathing and engage in other sports which are entirely out of place at a place of worship.

The tendency to make the camp ground a place of convenient flirtation, if not of open abandon and drunkenness, is well known. We join in this protest from Lake Bluff, and believe with those making it that the purposes for which places are set apart should be recognized and respected. Two or three or a dozen careless young people, or an equally small number of older careless or vicious ones, can easily kill the spirit of any religious gathering; can disturb the meetings, annoy those assembled, and divert the attention of the most sober and staid by their godless disregard of propriety and their reckless irreverence.

Our tent workers and other campers know what this careless element is and how those composing it misbehave, and will join in sympathy with the harassed worshipers at Lake Bluff. A proper love of recreation and due preparation for it is all right, but when individuals show disrespect to religion and worship they are down in the scale, and need educating, if not suppressing, as disturbers of the peace and interferers with the privileges and rights of others.

The boy or girl, or man or woman, who is heedless of the claims of religious worshipers to enjoy their devotions undisturbed by rude conduct or silly chattering of light brained persons who have no seriousness or solidity in their composition, belongs evidently to the class named.

There are rights due both worshipers and pleasure seekers, also a legitimate time to enjoy both; but pleasure seeking in the ordinary sense of the term is as objectionable and out of place as laughter at a funeral or business transactions at church service.

Children or young people who do not observe the proprieties due religious services reflect not only upon themselves, but upon the parents responsible for their education and training. Older ones who do not, show woful lack of character. The laws of the land protect worshipers from intrusion and disorder, and, when necessary, should be enforced as a last resort and to teach a moral lesson in common behavior.

Individuals who do not innately possess a sense of the respect due such assemblings need some vigorous action to teach them a lesson, or a punishment that will suppress them and discourage such unlawful misbehavior.

A BIT OF BYPLAY.

ONE sister writing to another, her letter fell into the editor's hand, by accident, and as the sentiment is excellent, no confidence is violated by the sister receiving it if an extract or two is taken from it by the editor. Writing of the trouble some of the Saints in her locality are in, she says:—

It seems as though when some great trouble comes upon our people they hardly know what to do; and here in — some of the Saints have a great deal to make them regretful and downcast. . . . I think, —, it pays best always to look on the bright side, and I am trying to keep quiescent under that kind of regime; but with all my optimism I find myself under a thick, dark cloud sometimes, and to my vision there is no brightness on any side. This kind of experience, however, is not without its uses, and if we have formed the habit of trusting in God, he will bring comfort and peace when we most need them, and is near when no one else can help us. Sister — is not going to bother anyone with her troubles, because he will turn and overturn for our good, and whom "the Lord loveth, he chasteneth;" and if we strive to walk uprightly "he will withhold no good thing."

Blessed gospel! How fortunate for us that it has been restored! How much we are indebted to those who after living true to the principles of such a glorious message have by their words bequeathed to us in this generation an increase of faith in their power to uplift and save. . . .

I wrote to Sr. — a day or two ago, but have not quite finished my letter; I was trying to tell her what was the matter with married folks and how to get out of their dilemmas, and my brain got tangled up on the "momentous question" as Sr. — says; so I left it. Some of the old grannies say "the gospel covers all;" and I believe it. The fact is, if we follow the instructions of the Savior and the apostles, we have got the solution of all these problems that interest virtuous, honest, truth-loving men and women, in a nutshell. But we see the necessity of helping one another, and that's what we are trying to do; and, —, we know these helps are good.

This letter is only from a woman to a woman, sisters in the church relationship, but an "able elder" could not have more correctly stated the sentiment expressed than she has done. The gospel was intended to fit people for grave emergencies, for trials great and trials small, for grievance serious and trivial; yet when troubles come some are so unprepared that they are distressed and "downcast." May it not be that these are of those represented as having lamps, but neither oil nor light?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. DAVID CHAMBERS, Mondamin, Iowa, July 29:—

We trust for success in the coming reunion, in every way. The work up this way is in fair condition; the tent work seems successful; large turnout last night, about five hundred present; one baptized yesterday, four baptized at Moorhead at two days' meeting July 21.

Bro. E. B. Morgan, Stanberry, Missouri, July 30:—

Bro. Ford and I raised our tent and commenced meetings here the 27th. The attendance is only moderate; some interest manifested by a few; one lady, Sr. Burke, was baptized to-day, Bro. A. W. Head performing the sacred rite. She made a very thorough investigation before leaving the Christian Church. I am satisfied there are more to come in this town in the future; how soon I know not.

Bro. W. W. Blair, writing from Downey, California, July 22, says:—

Our ten days' reunion closed at nine last night. It was harmonious, attractive, and joyful from first to last, and is said to be the largest gathering of Saints and investigators ever had by our people in Southern California. There were nine baptisms. More than as many others were "almost persuaded." The Saints return home (as also many inquirers) feeling well repaid for their coming. Prospects for church progress throughout this region are very good. Elders Burton, Baly, Holt, Gilbert, Gibson, Earl, Van Fleet, Carmichael, Patterson, Pickering, Walker, and other ministers, rendered excellent service, as did also the lay members including the sisters. Unity and Christian fellowship prevailed, and the Spirit of the Lord ruled over all.

Of the general work Bro. Blair says:—

The interested, animated condition of the Saints is quite refreshing now.

Bro. J. C. Crabb, Modale, Iowa, August 1:—

Brn. Chambers, Fyrando, and the writer are holding forth in tent work at Mote's grove near this place. We have had good interest so far. Will begin here the 22d. All is well.

Bro. Thomas Daley, Englenook, California, July 26:—

I arrived here on the 12th and have spoken twelve times. It is a new field; I understand I am the first elder to preach here. I have a good, fair turnout and good attention. I believe that the seed sown will bear fruit after while. I had just enough means to reach here, and on last Sunday night, of their own free will they took up a collection for me, amounting to ten dollars. God will provide.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp, writing from Lebanon, Oregon, July 28:—

Will you tell the dear Saints that have offered prayers in my behalf that their prayers have been heard in a most remarkable manner, and that I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I will certainly try and devote my strength to the cause I love. I feel grateful to the Saints for their prayers and sympathy. May the Lord bless them and roll on the work of redemption.

Bro. B. J. Scott, of Kansas City, writes:—

Also the college presses its claim for a moment of my time to consider its future. And as I believe it to be a step in the right direction, I wish the committee God speed in their work. This thought presents itself, Why not sell life scholarships? Some could and would help in this way that could not afford to in any other.

Bro. Henry Sparling, Ozark, Missouri, August 3:—

Tent full, much interest, all the talk now. Many just near the water; trust they will obey.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THOSE who love "solid reading" will find it in Bro. Charles Derry's letter in this issue. The purpose of a teacher being moved upon to teach is evidently that those taught shall be furnished unto, prepared for, and do, good works. If the truths presented are understood and received in the heart, the manifestation of them will appear in the actual application, the doing of them. In proportion as such results follow we move forward; otherwise we do not, but fail to occupy higher ground and thus fail to come "nearer to God" as he designed, and lose an opportunity. Whenever man has believed and obeyed God he has succeeded; whenever he has not he has failed. All past successes are traceable to observance of law, all failures to disobedience. We sow what we reap, and shall continue to be what obedience or disobedience makes us.

Bro. R. M. Maloney secured insertion of a lengthy article written in explanation of the faith, in the Norman, Oklahoma, People's Voice, of July 26. It causes the people to think of the church in more friendly and reasonable spirit when they know the high moral grounds upon which the church stands. Such articles do much good in preparing the way for greater work. Thanks to the press for its work as a public educator.

Sr. M. E. Hobart, El Reno, Oklahoma, requests prayer for restoration of health.

Pres. Joseph Smith reached home from Nauvoo on the 29th.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard came to Lamoni on the 1st inst., for a few days stop-over on church business, etc.

Two baptized of late at Burtville, Missouri; letter from Bro. S. J. Madden, who is doing what he can for the cause. Brn. Sawley and Mannering were preaching there and in the neighborhood.

From letters crowded out: Bro. W. C. Cather writes from Ozark, Missouri, July 26. Tent meetings at Springfield closed on the 23d. Thirty-eight sermons were preached, one baptized, much prejudice removed. Other ministers visited from house to house warning the people against the work, but some were disposed to investigate. At Ozark prospects good, though opposition was active.

The preaching of Brn. G. W. Robley and A. H. Parsons at South Norwalk, Connecticut, caused the publication of an interview with those brethren; an excellent statement, almost a full column in length, which appeared in the News of the 22d. This brought forth a criticism, "Broad River Mormons," which appeared in the Sentinel of the 23d, but the brethren were there to see the faith presented in its true light and vindicated, hence Bro. Robley replied to the criticism, in good form, in the Sentinel of the 25th. One man remarked that there was power enough in the preaching to turn the city of Providence upside down "if they would only change their name." There may be very little in a name but in this case there is a great deal in the thing itself.

Bro. J. W. Simmons, of Bell, Iowa, commends the recent work of Bro. G. H. Hilliard in the district, also the general labors of Brn. Butterworth and Baker.

Bro. J. J. Cornish sends us a leaflet, "Rev. J. Musser vs. the Saints," being a letter in praise of Musser, published in the Boyne, Michigan, Citizen of July 4, also a reply by Bro. Cornish. From what we read and what we hear from Musser's efforts, it appears that the brethren have a cinch on Mr. Musser.

Bro. J. G. Vickery writes in praise of the efforts of Bro. J. D. Erwin at Garland, Alabama, and other points in that field; Sunday School work was also looking up.

A letter from a sister—"Linda"—at Vincennes, Iowa, reports the few Saints there alive, working that additions may be made to their number. We are asked a question by the writer but cannot reply to the address given.

Brn. J. S. Roth and C. E. Hand have been tenting and preaching at Independence, Iowa, of which Bro. G. W. Rogers writes commendably. Some heard the word and were examining the faith, others opposed, as usual. Bro. Hand was continuing the effort, on the 30th; Bro. Roth had gone to Illinois.

Sr. M. Burlison, of Akin, Illinois, writes that she has a good house at Benton, the county seat of Franklin county, Southern Illinois, which she would allow free use of by an elder and wife without children, if the elder would locate there and do ministerial work. Any brother who is worthy and competent desiring to locate in that portion of the State should write the sister, as above.

Bro. A. J. Shores, residing at Rich Mountain, Arkansas, would be pleased if an elder could come in there and labor. It is a good opening, and Bro. Shores thinks it could be occupied to advantage. He will gladly meet an elder at the nearest railway point and take him home to where he could find place to preach.

Bro. E. E. David, of Sacramento, California, writes of his love for the work and earnest wishes for its progress. Removed from church privileges for a time, he realized the indefinite and unsatisfactory condition of mind of one without communion with the Lord and his people. He recounts a marked case of healing in his family, by which he feels under renewed obligations to God.

Bro. J. P. Benson, of Palmetto, Missouri, has been laboring at numerous points in Southern Missouri, where he finds a deep interest awakened among the people with urgent invitations to visit among them and preach the word. He is encouraged by blessings of the Master and hopes to continue for good in the field.

Letter from Bro. F. C. Smith dated Inland, Michigan, July 30. He had baptized one at Port Oneida and three at Burdickville "last week."

A DREAM.

I dreamed a wonderful dream one night,
And I'd like to tell it to you;
I seemed to be in a beautiful place.
What joy! when it all comes true.

I saw an army of boys and girls
Go marching along so free,
I looked at the first and I followed the line,
But the end I could not see.

They carried a banner of white and gold,
And their dress was pure and white;
As they passed me by they sweetly sang,
"We are working for the right."

As I looked I wondered, "Who can they be,
And what, O what does this mean?"
The banner was turned, and on it so plain,
"The Children of Zion," was seen.

I woke. And I thought as I pondered it o'er,
May our Father himself speed the day
When the children of Zion united shall be
In working for right in this way.

And I see, too, quite plainly a lesson to all,
Let the mothers and fathers take heed!
Then, Zion will have her confines within,
Sons, daughters, and children indeed.

"HE WHO CANNOT PAINT MUST GRIND THE COLORS."

IN the world we find, as our subject suggests, different classes of people—those who paint, and those who prepare the material for their use. The world has been only too ready to heap laurels upon the head of the artist, quite forgetful of the patient, humble class whose only glory is in doing well the work life has brought to their hands. But the thought arises, "Is not the artist less praiseworthy than his color grinder?" for in many cases he is helpless to do more than simply apply what is prepared for him, and if the colors are improperly prepared, no amount of ingenuity on his part can repair the damage to the picture.

We can easily see in this artist a man as he appears before the world, and in his color grinder we find the agency that is supplying the materials he uses,—or in other words,—his character. As with the artist, so it is with this man—the world will honor him for what he appears, losing sight of the source of all his success,—real or only apparent,—his character.

Like the house built upon the sand, such artificial structures cannot stand forever; for the character man builds for himself is the foundation of his life, and if this foundation is weak in any place, a corresponding weakness will be discernible in his life's work. How necessary, then, that man should heed the wise counsel, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," and make his beginning perfect, that the end may be peace. This universal unrest that whole nations are seeking to escape, could find an easy remedy here: "Make peace with yourself, and you will be at peace with humanity." This advice has been easier to give than to practice, for we find an echo of disquietude in every heart, and many are asking of the others, "What can I do—wherein does my duty lie?" O that some wise power would but turn the attention of all to the inner man, for only there lies the field of action. Many hearts are awaking to the sense of having work to do, many a joyful song is hushed because of the thought of some duty neglected and unknown; many are sitting with folded hands but restless hearts waiting for the Lord to show them the duty they feel he has for them to do; but where is the inspiration that is to teach all these restless multitudes that self is their battle ground? Let no one imagine this is too limited a field for his or her ability for it is not limited, and the more that is accomplished here the greater the blessing and tranquility of the one engaged.

This restless striving for wealth and social position has been found unsatisfactory; fame has not yielded the promised returns; the endless competition with the ambitions of the world is as the apples of Sodom, but here, in the inmost heart, can man engage in the most glorious battle, and reap the most bountiful harvest, far from the restless throbbing of the tide of humanity. Even though the entire years of mortality shall be consumed in uprooting the evil and planting the good seed, the reaping time will surely come, for in eternity will the spiritual seed break forth into sweetest bloom and the harvest be truly great.

In this warfare with self there is no resting place, for while there lurks in the heart an impure thought; a suspicion against a brother; a selfish desire, or the lack of love for our fellow man, the work with self is not finished.

The work of perfecting the character might be likened to a great architect who has placed certain materials and ability within the reach of the stones he is to use, and commanded them to prepare themselves for his use in building his great structure. Then those stones that were unprepared at his building time, he would surely cast away, but those that had obeyed his command would each fit into his building and form a glorious work.

It is hardly possible that the stones to be used can all be the corner stone or all be used to ornament the structure, but it is sufficient to know that each occupies its place, and each is perfect in its sphere, and found bright enough for the Master's use. This is all the human heart desires. It desires no reward greater than the approval of its Creator and the knowledge that it is preparing itself to fill the place appointed by him, be the position high or low. Each heart will find its fullest happiness, and know the deepest peace in the place assigned to it.

"He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." No earthly pleasure equals the supreme consciousness that we are masters of ourselves and can do what is right. Happy indeed is the man who at the closing of the day can truly say, "I have done the best I could, and at the closing of his mortal day will receive from his Master's lips the blessed words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

TO EACH HIS WORK.

EACH has some appointed work to perform, some little niche in the spiritual temple to occupy. Yours may be no flaming or brilliant actions to blaze and dazzle in the eye of man. It may be the quiet, unobtrusive inner work, the secret prayer, the mortified sin, the forgiven injury, the trifling act of self-sacrifice for God's glory and the good of others, of which no eye but the Eye which seeth in secret is cognizant. It matters not how small. Remember, with him motive dignifies action. It is not what we do, but how we do it. He can be glorified in little things as well as in great things, and by nothing more than the daily walk, the daily life.—J. R. Macduff, D. D.

Letter Department.

OMAHA, Neb., July 25.

Editors Herald:—Since my last writing to the Herald for your perusal, I have visited and done some labor at Bee, Lincoln, Palmyra branch, Bennett, and Wilber. From the latter place I was called home on the 24th of June on account of the illness of wife and death of child. I remained home until the 23d when I came here, where I now am assisting in tent services for a few days. I find the work in this mission in great need of labor both in the Sunday school department and general missionary service. Whether I shall be able to assist to any extent or not remains to be seen. I am very desirous of seeing a better state of things exist and pray that I shall be sufficiently qualified to help in this direction.

The work in Omaha appears to be advancing under the management and efficient care of officials appointed over its interests. Considerable interest manifest in the tent services, and prospects for some good resulting therefrom.

I have never been received by any people with greater kindness than by the Saints in this mission everywhere I have been, although they are struggling to meet their obligations and present necessities financially. Prospects for supplies this year are good, and I expect to see their obligations to the Lord's storehouse met more fully and cheerfully than ever before, judging from the expressions I have heard from several. The truth shall make men and women free that they may be free indeed. Zion is yet in bondage to the adverse conditions of the world, and under that condemnation under which they will remain until by complying with the truth they are made free.

Hopefully, your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

DENVER, Col., July 30.

Editors Herald:—Sickness compelled a cessation of labor during the latter half of the previous conference year, but I am glad to be able to renew the conflict. I never felt so much the necessity or desire to put forth every effort for the spread of the gospel as at present. Without any special fitness for such work having been developed, I find myself in the midst of one of our large cities to "sink or swim, survive or perish," apparently, and solve the problem of how best to attack and reach the people.

It is evident that a few sermons semi-occasionally delivered by even one of our very "ablest elders," will not suffice to "take a city." Nothing but wise, patient, well-directed, continuous effort can. Truth travels slowly, even if well advertised. The din and confusion must be undermined rather than overpowered. I believe that study, thought, and work will surmount the obstacles, not only here but elsewhere in the centers of population, so am hopeful.

By the help of the Literary Society we are about to inaugurate a system of house-to-house tract distribution, adapted from ideas given us by Bro. T. W. Williams and the Seventh-Day Adventists, which we hope for good results from. The Adventists set us a good example in zeal and persistent effort. They are good financiers, too. Here in Denver they have, besides a large church building, a tent constantly in operation. Colporteurs and canvassers for the sale and distribution of tracts gain opportunities for Bible readings, and contribute success. In my opinion they are better equipped in the way of publications adapted to their evangelizing or proselyting work, than we are for ours; this not by way of complaint, but look for a better development of our resources for a more aggressive paper warfare in due time.

I feel myself a weak instrument, but purpose to make a diligent effort, and ask the prayers of the Saints for physical and spiritual strength requisite. May the time soon come when things that are wanting in the organization and discipline of the church will be set in order, that greater impetus all around may be given to the work. However, I cannot help feeling that through patience and toil there are glorious victories coming and near at hand. Let us all then, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and members be of good courage, double our previous diligence, love, sustain, and pray for one another to the end.
M. F. GOWELL.

SPARTA, Ill., July 21.

Editors Herald:—I wish to bear my testimony in behalf of the Book of Mormon being the word of God. In the fall of 1861 my mind was held spellbound for three weeks upon 1 Corinthians 13: 8-12; being then a member of the Christian Church. At the end of three weeks the Spirit of the Lord came upon me giving me a clear interpretation of the above Scripture. I at once ceased holding fellowship with the Christian brethren not knowing where the true Church of Christ was, neither did I hunt for it, but kept my mind secret to myself. I prayed and waited patiently until my faith was sufficiently strong to go before God and ask him the true and living way to eternal life.

At this time I was greatly opposed to the latter-day work. I had never seen the Book of Mormon; but it was not long until I felt at liberty to go before my God in prayer, and even at this writing my soul is filled with exceeding great joy while thinking about these things, for it lives in me like a living fire. I did not ask God to make it known to me who were the true church, but I called upon him to bless me by the power of his Holy Spirit and make known unto me the true way that leadeth unto eternal life. When I rose from prayer I was filled with the Spirit of the Lord in such power as I had never witnessed before, staying with me long and sure, speaking within my soul these very words: "The Book of Mormon is the word of God and Joseph Smith was a prophet of the Lord." O, how I shouted and gave God the glory! I cannot praise and adore my heavenly Father too much for these great and glorious blessings.

I have never doubted the revelations of Jesus Christ. When I was eight years old I was blessed with a wonderful vision upon the Holy Scriptures. When I was twenty years old, in the year 1859, I was warned by the Lord through a little girl four years old to beware of certain coming evils. She spoke to me with all the eloquence that a lawyer could have spoken to me. Thank God, I have heeded and obeyed his voice to this day!

Early in the spring of 1860 the Lord made it known to me that there would be war between the North and South, so I predicted that if Lincoln was elected there would be a war; but the people told me no. At this time I knew nothing of the revelation given to Joseph Smith on the rebellion between the North and South. In the two years I was in the Christian Church I know I kept the faith, but six months before I left that church I dreamed once every two weeks that I was bowed to the earth close by a stream of water praying God to forgive me my sins.

Twenty years ago I was admonished through the Spirit to commit myself to prayer and fasting from one to three days at a time as often as the Spirit directed. These special fastings ceased about two years ago. During the time of these fastings I was wonderfully and miraculously blessed many times. I have been filled with the Spirit of God so much that I could hardly contain myself with the joy I was laboring under until I would cry out, "Glory, glory to God! hosannah, hosannah in the highest to God and the Lamb!" Thus my soul was filled from time to time with God's loving-kindness and goodness.

These gracious and holy blessings brought me down into the very depth of humility. I could not praise and adore my heavenly Father too much. Many times I have bowed and humbled myself in praise to God and kissed the earth in sweet token of God's revealments to me of his great and mighty power and loving-kindness towards the children of men. His love and mercy endureth forever.

Yours in Christ,
JAMES HOUSTON.

WOODBINE, Iowa, July 23.

Editors Herald.—Having had so little to communicate to your pages, and not thinking it worth while to trouble your readers to read commonplace statements as to where I am, and the unimportant notices of my moving from place to place, just to let them know that I am in the field, my pen has been silent, believing that unless I can say something that will gladden the heart and inform the mind it is best not to intrude on your pages, or the time and patience of your readers. But I none the less rejoice in reading the good news that drops from the pens of other laborers in the field, and it is a joy to learn of the real progress of the work in all parts of the vineyard.

At my request, because of increasing years and decreasing strength, the boundaries of my labors have been more limited than in former years; but I am trying to do what I can, and hope through God's aid to accomplish some good. Our worthy missionary in charge of the Pottawattamie district has kindly permitted me to labor in the western part of the district, and since the General Conference I have labored in the vicinity of Boomer and Loveland townships, assisted by Elder C. McIntosh. I believe there is a good interest in those places, not aroused alone by my efforts, but others have labored very acceptably there; Bro. H. N. Hansen and the Carlile brothers, all earnest workers for the cause of truth. I shall be greatly disappointed if there is not a goodly ingathering into the fold ere the summer closes. It is always a pleasure to see the people take out their pencils and notebooks and jot down the passages of scripture quoted, and others come forward and ask to be put in possession of those references. It evidences attention and a desire to learn.

Our numbers have not greatly increased of late, but there must be seedtime before harvest, and between these seasons there must be proper cultivation and nourishing of the budding plant; uprooting of the weeds of error and a general, kindly, and wise watch-care, lest the enemy sow tares and they choke the good seed. The sower may not always reap, nor may the cultivator see the fruits of his toil, though their task may be the most arduous; but it matters not if a "Paul plants and Apollos waters" so long as God gives the increase, and the wheat is gathered into the garner. It is not well for me to take praise to myself because I have had the honor of entering into other men's labors and watering the seed already sown and cultivated; but I may rejoice that God has counted me worthy to do the watering; and to God I should give the glory, but never seek to detract from the honor of my predecessors and coworkers. It is good to know that there is an unimpeachable record kept of every one's labors and that none shall lose their reward.

It does me good to know that after nearly fifty years of arduous toil and earnest solicitude for the spread of this glorious gospel many noble, earnest, self-sacrificing young men have taken and are taking up the work and ably sounding the gospel trumpet East, West, North, and South, and are successfully extending the boundaries of the kingdom of God and pressing back the adversaries of truth on every hand. It is good to see the numbers from every quarter gathering into that kingdom and "putting their hands to the gospel plow." May they never look back! But numbers are by no means the only test of progress. Our individual growth in the "divine life" is the true test of solid, enduring progress. If we are growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ individually, we shall collectively be adorned with all those virtues and excellences that shall render the church fit to be received by the great Bridegroom, as "the bride, the Lamb's wife." Then while we labor with all our might to gather people into the kingdom, let us as assiduously labor that we, individually, ministers and lay members, may be clothed upon with the "divine nature," possessing every excellence essential to the child of God; in fact, that we may become "like him," that we may be permitted to "see him as he is."

It was my privilege to assist Elder George Hilliard, of the Bishopric, during the past week, while he was unfolding what we sometimes call the "temporal law," but God says his laws are all spiritual, and I judge from what I could discern of the measure of the Holy Spirit given him while teaching that law, that it is indeed a "spiritual law." And as I contemplate the vastness of the work to be done by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, I realize the absolute necessity of compliance with that law by all classes, rich and poor, as God hath blessed us. How can "this gospel of the kingdom be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations" if we disregard this God-given law? Shall we expect the ministry and their families to bear all the burden alone? Have we not all alike to bear an equal part according to our means? Can we expect to reap an equal reward if we neglect our duty? Is not every one commanded to "warn his neighbor"? Is not that duty devolving upon all who have been partakers of the joys the gospel brings? Since we all cannot go, we can send the warning voice, and by this means we can warn the world, at least as effectively as if we went ourselves into all nations. God has called and qualified men for the work, they are gone and going, and others are being called and qualified by the operation of God's Spirit; but means are needed to send them and to sustain the families they leave behind. We talk of the service of God and claim we are enlisted therein, but that service means something more than singing and praying. It means work; the performance of every duty, the consecration of our bodies and spirits and of our means to the purpose for which God has called us; and nothing less than this entire consecration and devotion will bring the great reward—eternal life. Brethren and sisters, the work is vast, the spreading of the gospel to all nations; the time is short, the signs of the times declare the nearness of the end; when "night cometh and no man can work." The laborers are few, because we withhold our substance and shirk from the task of consecrating our efforts and our substance to the Lord. Soon the voice will be heard, "Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Shall we be with them, or shall we be left behind as mere rubbish to be burned? "The wise man seeth the evil and avoideth it, but the wicked pass on and are punished."

C. DERRY.

STERLING, Col., July 31.

Editors Herald.—I have just read a letter in last issue of the Herald from O. J. G. Preston, finding fault with the Herald editors for their views concerning "strikes with violence unlawful." I want to inform the Herald readers that the editors' opinion in regard to this matter was right and in accordance with law. The case cited by Bro. Preston is not in point with his idea of the meaning of our constitution. The courts of our land exist for the purpose of causing law to be enforced and its meaning carried out between all litigants without fear or favor, and where anyone disobeys an order of court, he has thereby placed under his feet the law; and as provision is made for his immediate arrest and apprehension the law of our land, based upon the constitution, provides that for contempt of court no trial by jury shall be allowed, as justice would not nor could not be meted out, if parties could leave the matter in the hands of a jury. A jury is to try a matter of fact, while a court is to try a matter of law; and no jury can try matters of law.

Courts must be obeyed and are clothed with all the necessary power to carry out their orders, and are very careful to only make such orders that, when put to test, will prove to be in line of the law. I speak this from experience, having had a few contempt cases to deal with.

The brother states that "the next time a strike comes they will jail the leaders for contempt and suppress the indignation of the poor laborer with force." The courts will never jail anyone for contempt until after they have disobeyed their orders and then in a majority of cases until after a trial of the cause is had, and these same leaders have their case pleaded before a jury; then the court orders in accordance with their findings.

I am a friend of the poor man, but he as well as the rich must obey the law; and when the Prince of Peace shall come, then will their hearts rejoice if they have obeyed the gospel.

MACHIAS, Maine, July 29.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote you, I have put in good time in preaching the gospel at Hadley's Lake and Little Kennebec. At the latter place I baptized four; others are near the kingdom. Last evening the chapel was filled with attentive listeners. The people of Kennebec are just going for the Baptist minister because he has been making considerable talk about J. C. The people say, "We have known Mr. Foss from a child, and he has always borne a good name; and as for the doctrine he preaches it is found in the Bible and if the Bible is true, Foss is right." The young men have invited the minister to come and hear me. I sent word to him that he could speak in our church every other evening if he would; or, if he thought I was wrong and preaching a false doctrine, he could appear before my congregation where he would have two hundred people to address, and could point out my false position. But I have been here and spoken twenty-four times and the Baptist preacher has not put in his appearance yet.

I hear Bro. Joseph Luff has arrived in Jonesport, and is expected the latter part of this week to speak in Machias, as Bro. U. W. Greene is there with the tent. I will be there to help him some this week. The work is moving along very well in Maine at present.

As ever,

RHODES, Iowa, July 17.

Editors Herald:—I came here on the 8th inst. to assist in putting up our new district tent that came on the 9th, and by the way it is a good one, 30x40, round corners, from Murray & Co., Chicago. We are well pleased with it. I preached in Bro. Nirk's house on the evening of the 9th, as we didn't have the tent seated. On the 10th we opened up in the tent with a fair attendance that increased nightly until Sunday night, when the tent was full, and it is said nearly as many were on the outside listening. Before the sermon was half through the wind began blowing and almost at the same instant about one half the congregation left the tent fearing a bad storm; "men's hearts failing them for fear," etc.

One thing about tent work is that we never can tell how many are listening to the sermons. People who wouldn't go to church will gather on their own or neighbor's porch and there listen to the speaking as attentively as though they were in a meeting-house.

The good Lord has blessed me abundantly, sometimes wonderfully, while laboring here. To him be all the praise. I have spoken here ten times beginning on the 9th. The last I heard from the missionary in charge it was expected that our tent would go to near Chelsea, Tama county, in which the debate between Elder Gray of the Christian Church and Bro. C. Scott was to begin on the 22d inst. So we will be required to close here to-morrow night. Saints here have purchased the old district tent for their own use here and in neighboring places.

NORWALK, Conn., July 24.

Editors Herald:—I wrote you in May from Philadelphia where I was waiting for Bro. Parsons and the tent. On the 24th Bro. P. came up from Baldwin, Maryland, and we set about making necessary arrangements to get the tent in operation. On Sunday we met with the Saints in their hall, Bro. Parsons preaching in the morning and the writer in the evening. On Wednesday night I went with Bro. Christy and family out to a quiet place some miles from town where we remained over night, and the next day we spent the time boating, eating, etc.

On Sunday, June 2, we opened up the tent services not exactly amid the booming of cannon, but amid the hum of human voices, the treble notes of the children predominating. It was necessary to have police protection during evening services, otherwise it would have taxed the powers of the preachers to make noise enough to be heard above the din outside. On the 15th by request of Bro. Parsons I went to Baldwin. Bro. Willie Atkinson and Bro. Harry Hargan met me at the train and made me feel at home. In the evening we attended a kind of lawn party or picnic held by the Methodist Church to help pay the debt on their church building. They had ice cream, cake, cigars, etc., for sale. I indulged in the ice cream but drew a line at the cigars. After a little while the young people gathered on one side of the grounds and forming a circle began to sing,

Two in the center, O how fair,

Bright blue eyes and curly hair.—

then the "two in the center" would choose two kindred spirits and—well, you can guess the rest. As we walked slowly down the winding road toward our stopping place the soft breeze of the summer night laden with the sweet perfume of many flowers came to us blended with the sound of youthful voices as we heard them in the distance, "They love, they do," etc.—the old, old story ever new. Next day I met with the Sunday school and enjoyed the session very much. Preached at 10:30 and again in the evening, also held sacrament meeting in the afternoon. Monday evening spoke again with good liberty.

On Tuesday went back to the city and remained in the tent until July 2 then went to Baldwin again held meetings for eight nights with small attendance but good interest. Some are very near the door in that place. I enjoyed my stay in Baldwin very much and reluctantly bade the Saints good-bye with the hope of seeing them again, if not in this life in the world to come.

News from Bro. Parsons came that the tent was packed and shipped to Norwalk, Connecticut, so I made arrangements to follow it. I came to Philadelphia on Thursday, attended prayer meeting at Bro. Lewis'; very good one. On Saturday evening held elders' court, preached to the Saints on Sunday morning and evening. On Monday night I had the pleasure of leading four precious souls into the waters of baptism, Bro. Fred Watez and wife being among the number. On Tuesday we bade farewell to the Saints in Philadelphia. May the Lord bless them for their kindness. We were soon moving along at a lively rate toward New York City. Arriving there, we took the elevated for the "Grand Central" and then off again on the rumbling, cracking, sliding, come-up-sudden sort of a thing—called a railroad train. We found Bro. Parsons all right (the "we" here mentioned was Bro. A. N. Watez and myself). Preached Tuesday night and have been at it off and on since. The people here seem to be interested and we trust that some may see the light before we depart. I am feeling well and hopeful.

Yours as ever,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

CHELSEA, Iowa, July 29.

Editors Herald:—Thinking your readers would be glad to hear how the debate is progressing, I write. The discussion began on the 22d of this month in the northeast corner of Poweshiek county, five miles south of Chelsea.

I shall not attempt to give even a synopsis of the debate. The first proposition, "Are the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants in harmony with the Old and New Testaments and entitled to respect and belief of all Christians?" was affirmed by Bro. C. Scott. This question has been discussed for six nights with two more to be held yet. Elder Gray will then affirm his church to be in harmony, etc., with the Bible for five sessions, then Bro. Scott will take the affirmative for the Reorganized Church for the same length of time.

Elder Gray depended on the Spalding story for his support in fighting the Book of Mormon, and when that was taken from him he tried the Rigdon authorship story and Tucker's "mysterious stranger;" but now he has passed on to the work of showing up where the two books contradict the Bible. The first one he found was in 1 Nephi 3:13, where it says Mary was "carried away in the Spirit." He said: "Joe got it mixed;" that "it was Elizabeth that was in the wilderness." This will serve to show about his manner of construing all the way through his twelve speeches. If we never have any stronger opposition than that presented here we will have no fear of the work being overthrown by trickery of man.

Having been chosen as moderator for Bro. Scott I shall have to stay here until the last of next week. The farmers are very busy now, yet we have a very good attendance. It was estimated that there were four hundred out Saturday night. That perhaps was the largest crowd we have had. Elder Gray occupied our tent at eleven yesterday and the writer in the afternoon, speaking to apparently appreciative audiences.

Brn. Thompson and Kephart spent a part of last week with us, but on Friday went to Montour to do some preaching. Bro. Scott's health has improved since entering the debate.

LOUELLA, Mo., July 28.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. E. Summerfield and the writer have just finished up a week's meetings at this place, baptizing five to-day in the "raging Wakenda." These additions are all adults save one. They are Bro. Hutchens and wife, Brn. Lafayette Bailey, Chas. Gentry, and Frederick Bailey; others almost persuaded. This is an old historical place and has a history as old as the Reorganization. Once a flourishing branch with some of the leading minds of the church here; notably W. C. Kinyon, E. W. Cato, Joseph Cravens, Father Woods, W. E. Summerfield, W. L. Booker, and others. Old Sister Cato, trembling under the burden of eighty years, is still here, bearing an undying and a faithful testimony to the great work, and surrounded by a score or more of children and grandchildren whom she has seen buried with Christ in baptism and over which she tearfully rejoices and considers it as flowers strewing her pathway to the grave.

Some four years ago we found this branch in a very dilapidated condition indeed, with one Bro. Morris Stone, a deacon, as its presiding head, with three or four members and only an occasional meeting; downed, discouraged, and disheartened, with a bane of a prophecy hanging over it that the Lord was displeased, and that its members should be "scattered and peeled;" that after many days, Phoenix-like "it should arise out of its burnings and again be blessed of the Lord." Catching up the inspiration of the thought we ventured the thought that possibly the time had come and that I was merely the forerunner to assist in driving the dark clouds away. We called a meeting; less than a half dozen attended. Bro. James Cato, who had just returned from the West, covered with laurels of the "cow boy" order, an expert with the "lasso and revolver" was in the room. We had a season of prayer and after some appropriate remarks I asked for expressions concerning a reorganization and a strong pull all together to revive the smoldering embers and rebuild the branch, with an assurance that the promised time had come and that the Lord would bless every effort.

Bro. James arose with the Spirit beaming from his face, declared his willingness to quit sowing wild oats, and turn to the work of the Lord to which he had been called years ago, and which call had been a brake in a great measure upon his actions in all the wicked days of the past. He had sinned against God and high heaven and now asked forgiveness of God and the church. Of course it was tearfully granted and he was chosen as president of the branch and a new impetus was given that has raised it to its present conditions and a membership of eighty-four; and while the clouds of despondency have rested upon the brother at times, yet by a persistent effort and under his wise and fostering care the branch is now in fair spiritual condition with bright prospects for the future.

Good and efficient work has been done here by my brethren, notably W. E. Summerfield, John Rounds, and Louney Booker, the latter having returned from Alabama and repurchased his old farm with the intention of making this his future home. At the confirmation meeting to-day the melting influence of the Spirit was wonderfully manifest and a real feast was enjoyed. Bro. W. E. Summerfield, one of the old pioneers of the district, is with me, and is yet full of zeal and ambition for the work. He presided over this district in its palmiest days, when it reached from St. Louis on the east to the "line between Jew and Gentile" on the west, and the mode of travel was ox teams and on foot, over the wild and boundless prairies of the West, and no doubt those long tramps in early days gave the old "warrior" a love for the wandering "byes," Ephraim and Manasseh, of which he loves to tell the story.

We shall make our way east into the Northeastern district with a hope of cheering some loitering one by the wayside and encourage the stronger ones the best we can.

T. W. CHATBURN.

PORCUPINE, Wis., July 16.

Editors Herald:—The grove meetings at Ono, Wisconsin, closed last Sunday night and were in every respect a perfect success. Bro. A. H. Smith made many friends to the church and helped to clear away prejudice from the public mind. We held over two Sundays and during the week in the evening. Bro. Smith and the writer feel grateful to the many friends for aid and help.

The interest will be kept up there at Liberty Hall, which came into existence so like magic last winter, when other religious denominations closed us out of public places. Now, the matter of a new hall being built is strongly talked of there, also a new Sunday school organization wanted. We hope to see both accomplished soon.

From Ono we came to Porcupine, where Bro. Smith will hold meetings in the new church this week and over Sunday, July 21. We hope to push the new church to completion this fall, and have it dedicated before I leave for the South. I am sorry to have to leave my work here to go South; it is so grand. I hate to leave this people; everybody seems to be my friend, and the church is gaining so many friends; yet wise heads and the Spirit indicate and advise me to go, and I believe I will be fully healed and made strong. This is a hard test on the lungs, in this north country; none but the strongest can stand it.

Bro. Smith is like a father to me; kind, good, and generous, and looks after my good in a way that none but we missionary orphans know how to appreciate. I expect Bro. Closson to take my place here in the branch and work in general.

I wish to say to the Saints of Texas that they can look for me by November 1, to be there for business, not for pleasure. While I go for my health, it is intended to mean to labor in a more congenial climate. Those in authority there, please take notice. I have learned to be a soldier and obey orders. Wherever I be sent I go to serve the great kingdom of God and not to be served.

Ever your fellow laborer in Christ,

H. P. CURTIS.

BANDERA, Tex., July 23.

Editors Herald:—I have been a subscriber and a reader of your columns for about twenty years. Bro. O. D. Johnson and I have been trying in our weak way to keep the gospel banner waving. We have not been able to do much preaching on account of the way we are situated. We have appointments at four different places in the county; Dug Spring, Saints' church, East Verde, and Pipe Creek. Elder L. L. Wight has been with us lately; he filled the appointments at Dug Spring on the first Sunday, at Saints' church on the second, and at East Verde on the third Sunday. We have a Sunday school organized and hold alternately at three of the above-named places; no Sunday school yet at the Saints' church. The church was dedicated on the second Sunday by Elder L. L. Wight.

The Saints in this district have not been able to do much in the way of tithing; the district is not self-supporting. Our district conference met June 6; all was harmony, but the rain caused us to break up a little sooner than we would otherwise have done. Our worthy brother, A. B. Moore, has failed so far to put in an appearance.

Hoping for the success of Zion's cause, in the liberty of the gospel,

W. H. DAVENPORT.

KINDER THAN A BROTHER.

The summer rain
Beats on the window pane;
Refreshed and green
The waving trees are seen
The splashing drops between,
That falling slow
Upon the roof and walk,
Appear to talk
In liquid accents
Soft and low.

Within the church a solemn hush,
Deeper in contrast
To the water's rush,
Broken alone by prayer
Or testimony of some Saint,
Half darkness in the air,
And in my soul complaint;
But now from out my sight
Fades each familiar face,
The people of the Lord.
No more I hear the spoken word,
But see a light fill all the place,
That widens to illimitable space.
A wondrous light,
And in the light an eminence,
And by the eminence a man
Dear to my heart
And prominent in God's plan.
Around him stand
Of Saints a multitude
On either hand,
With dazed sight,
And some unconscious of the light.
Leaders of men and eminent Arise by mutual consent
And come to him as friends,
With smile and kiss and words of grace,
To smite him in the face.
Pale are his cheeks and fair,
And white is his hair,
But not with time,
Nor weight of years;
And in his eyes sublime
Are tears;
And on his forehead care,
With sorrow stirred,
Yet answers not a word,
And only looks with sad reproof
Till his strong soul stands plainly forth.
And then appears to me
What others do not see,—
That Christ stands by him there,
Tall and divinely fair,
And smooths his servant's hair,
And wipes his tears away,
And leads him up the eminence
From out our midst.
But now the light
Fades slowly from my sight;
The scene no more
Is visible to me,
But rather see
What I had seen before.
The clock points to
The hour of four,
And in the twilight dim,
Before the meeting close,
They sing a hymn:—
"We thank thee, O God,

For a prophet."
(I wonder if they do.)
But this I know, that God
Is kinder than a brother
And more true.

LET YOUR YEA BE YEA.

EDITORS SAINTS' HERALD:—For some time past I have seen frequent notices in the Herald, Autumn Leaves, and Zions' Ensign calling the attention of many of their readers to the fact that they were in arrears in their payments for said periodicals, and I have often wondered why it is that those who style themselves "Latter Day Saints" have to be constantly reminded that they are in debt. It must be very trying and discouraging to those who have been so kind as to trust them to be under the necessity of pleading and almost coaxing them to pay their just dues.

We are told by the great Lawgiver himself that our yea should be yea and our nay should be nay; but it seems from our experience with a great many who have taken upon them the name of Christ that they are not very particular, as to whether they keep their word or not. To my mind the word of a true Latter Day Saint ought to be as good as his dollar. For an individual to make a positive promise that he will do a certain thing at a specified time and then neglect to keep his promise, is unworthy of the confidence of good, honest men.

I am acquainted with a great number of persons both in America and Europe who have been taking the publications of the church for some time, and as yet they have not made an effort to pay one cent, notwithstanding the continual appeal through said publications for those in arrears to pay up. However, many of those feign to be good members in the church; but the writer has come to the conclusion, from the experience he has gained during the last eighteen years, that the maxim is but too true which says,

All that glitters is not gold.

There is another class of people who make it a point to get the traveling ministry to order papers and books for them with the promise that they will "pay up" within a few weeks, but alas, the weeks run up into months and in some cases into years with the result that the poor elder has to pay up the bill himself in order to keep up his reputation with the publishing house.

The argument is oftentimes advanced by the persons who are guilty of the above offense that they are desirous of paying their debts but are unable to do so because of their intense poverty. This argument may be justifiable in very few instances. In case this be true they should have the manhood to write to their debtor, explaining their circumstances; but, Mr. Editor, I am in position to vouch for the statement that a great number who are in arrears are amply able to pay for the papers and books in question. Some of those people can afford to take daily and weekly newspapers and other periodicals that are to be found out of the church circle, and can spend money for luxuries and other things; and it seems queer that they cannot find money to pay for the church papers and books.

There is a third class of people who give the church officials considerable annoyance and bring reproach upon the fair name of the church. This class has a weakness for borrowing money from their brethren and sisters and giving no security aside from their word. At the same time they promise to pay it back within a certain date, but never keep their word, and when the parties who have so generously assisted them, speak to them about the matter, they are given to understand that they had better attend to their own business and that when they get ready to pay it they will do so.

Now, Mr. Editor, if it were not for the fact that there are a great number who keep up this evil practice I should not take the trouble to write concerning this matter.

It seems to me that something rigid should be done with the characters herein referred to, for the reason that when the officers of branches are asked to deal with such people the answer invariably is that there is no law in the church bearing upon the point. Thus it is they are allowed to go on repeating their evil practices. It is not dishonorable to be in debt providing that good and satisfactory security is given; but it is dishonorable to contract debts and not give good security nor make an effort to cancel them.

If a person should repeatedly get drunk, lie, or steal, he would be very quickly brought face to face with the law of the church. Now is it not lying when an individual repeatedly promises to do a certain thing at a certain time and willfully fails to keep his promise? Is it not stealing when a person borrows money from other parties and never pays it back? If not stealing, pray tell me what it is.

I sincerely trust that the time is not far distant when the managers of the church periodicals will not be under the necessity of appealing so oft to the delinquent to pay up their arrears, but that every one will watch the labels which indicate the time when the money is due.

Honesty is better than riches, and only such as are honest with themselves, with men, and with God, will be considered worthy to pass in through the pearly gates into the presence of the King of kings.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

A VISION.

AS I LAY on a bed of affliction, at Bro. and Sr. J. W. Moxon's, I called for the elders of the church to administer to me, after which I felt better and took a sleep. I awoke and saw the following vision:—

I saw a street reaching from earth to heaven and at the end of the street the most beautiful city I ever saw. The buildings were as white as marble, and this street was leading up to this city, and before entering, just above the door was a bright star. The end of the street seemed near to me; it was built up on each side, and it seemed as though that star shone as bright as the sun and made the street shine as bright as gold.

The end of the street near me seemed about wide enough for two to walk, and I saw an angel coming towards me, beckoning for me to come; and as she came nearer I saw she had a message in her hand. After a short time, she gave it to me. It read as follows:—

“I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you.” She stood there until I read it, and then she departed.

As she went away she told me to pray; I prayed and sang the following hymns: Saints' Harp, Nos. 168 and 720, and then she appeared again, and held in her hand another message, and after a short time she handed it to me, and it read as follows:—

“I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.” She told me to pray again, and departed; and I sang again, Nos. 685 and 1,013, when she came back the third time and there were more with her. She came ahead and came up and stood at the right hand side of the street. After a short time one of these that was with her came up to me. As she came she was beckoning to me, and when she came near me she took me by the hand and I looked at her, and it was Sr. Sarah Pontius; and then the second one came and took me by the hand that I saw was Bro. Gordon Blasdell; then the third one, and she greeted me the same; that was Sr. Rebecca Smith; and then still a fourth, who was my grandma. She grasped me by the hand and they all wanted me to go back with them. I asked the angel and she said, “No; not yet.” Back of these were little children running along the street hand in hand. Their little faces were as bright as could be, and then these four started, one by one, Sarah came and bade me good-bye and told me to be faithful, and then Sr. Smith came and bade me good-bye and told me to be faithful, and then Grandma came and bade me good bye and told me the same—to be faithful; and Bro. Blasdell told me he wanted to speak to me, and he asked if his family was there. I told him they were, and he said, “Now be faithful;” and as they all started away they sang hymn No. 600, and the singing was beautiful beyond any earthly thing I ever heard; then all departed and entered the door, and the angel said to me: “They will all come to meet you when I come after you.” Then she said: “Be faithful, and you will gain a crown at the end;” and then it all disappeared. These four persons died strong in the faith of the latter-day work.

It seemed as though this was given to me to strengthen me, and it has, and I hope it will strengthen you the same. My desire is from this time on to be more faithful and live as a Saint should live, whatever be my lot. I feel to thank God for these blessings he has bestowed upon me, and I know that if I am faithful he will continue to bless me, and I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be faithful, that whatever trials I may have I may bear them with patience and run with patience this race that is set before me.

Your sister,

EMMA VAN VOLTENBURG.

ANCIENT AMERICAN LANGUAGES.

THE article in the Herald of the 17th inst., from the Review of Reviews, is made up, without doubt, from the best information obtainable from the sources of Dr. Le Plongeon in respect to the interpretation of the Troano manuscript; also as to who the Maya and Quiche people were. According to Mr. H. H. Bancroft's work, which is considered one of the most important we have on native traditional history, it shows that the Quiche natives belong to the Nahuatl and Toltec tribes who invaded the Maya country at an early day in their history. Hence it is apparent that “the Maya people of Yucatan” were not of the same tribe as “The Quiches of Guatemala.”

Again, so far as I have gone by my studies in regard to the Maya natives, I find by comparing the account of the Nephite records with the Gemelli manuscript, a native work, and also by the native traditional name of “Maya and Mayax,” that the name is, apparently, derived from “Mulek” who led a company of Jews from Jerusalem to America (B. M., Helaman 2: 27) after his father, King Zedekiah, was taken captive by the Chaldeans in the eleventh year of his reign in Jerusalem and taken to Babylon. The records show also that Mulek landed in America from the Gulf of Mexico and located the first city in Chiapas, which is also shown by the Gemelli, native chart. It shows also that when the Nahuatl (Nephites) entered the Maya country it was about four hundred years after their settlement in the land; also that the Nahuatl entered it from the southern country, and not from the north, as alleged by some of the writers.

That the Nahuatl were from the south when they settled with the Mayas is plainly shown by the Gemelli chart, and also by the Boturini document, another native work; for it shows that the Nahuas landed from their native land from the Pacific Ocean into Peru; they therefore must have traveled northward to get to Yucatan.

The cause for the language of the Mayas being similar to or like the Quiches is apparently from the following account:—

Their language had become corrupted; . . . and Mosiah, nor the people of Mosiah, could understand them. But it came to pass that Mosiah caused that they should be taught in his language.—Omni 1: 7, 8.

Mosiah was a Nephite chief or leader. It is seen, too, by the text that the people whom Mosiah taught his language to were Zarahemlites, Zarahemla being their king, hence the name. The record shows that Zarahemla was a descendant of Mulek. (Mosiah 11: 8.) It is seen, then, that Zarahemla and his people and their country were identically the same as Mulek and his people and their country. The language of those people which their ancestors had brought with them from Jerusalem, being corrupted to that degree that the Nephites who were also from Jerusalem—could not understand their speech nor who they were until Mosiah had taught them his language, which according to their history (the Nephite) they spoke and wrote what they called the Reformed Egyptian, and also the Hebrew (Mormon 4: 8), which their ancestors had taught from the time of their arrival in America; the record of the Jews, which they had brought with them, being written in the Egyptian language. (Mosiah 1: 1.) Hence it is seen that the Mayas, who according to the account had brought no records with them, relearned their mother tongue from the Nahuas, who were descendants of Lehi, who was “a descendant of Joseph; . . . the son of Jacob, who was sold into Egypt.” (1 Nephi 1: 47.)

This account bears out that of Dr. Le Plongeon's discovery, that the people who settled Yucatan at a remote date had a knowledge of “Egyptian hieroglyphics.” It is seen, therefore, that the Nahuas taught the Mayas the art of writing which had been handed down from time to time by their fathers from the time they left Jerusalem; whose ancestors had taken the art with them from Egypt to Jerusalem, from the account that the record of the Jews, which Lehi brought with him to America, was written in the Egyptian language, he having left Jerusalem six hundred years B. C. (1 Nephi 3: 3.)

Of the native manuscripts saved from destruction at the hands of Bishop Landa, the Doctor thinks that the Troano is the most important; but I consider that the Boturini is the most valuable of native history of the origin of the Nahuas; for it shows clearly their route from Jerusalem to Peru or in other words, the route taken by Lehi and Nephi from Jerusalem to Peru.

The ancient empire of the Mayas, according to the Gemelli chart, extended from the Tehuantepec Isthmus southward to the boundary line between Gautemala and Honduras only; which is also shown by the Nephite account in the Book of Mormon, Alma 13: 11; 22: 2.

Now it is evident that most of the learned writers of native history have confounded the most ancient history of the Mayas with that of their descendants of the time of the Spanish conquest; as also of the ancient Nahuas with the history of their descendants of modern history, partly, through a wrong interpretation of some of the native records and also of their unbelief in the written account of those peoples in the Book of Mormon.

It is evident, too, that those writers have given that credit which is due principally to the Nahua people to the Maya in Yucatan, in respect to the art of sculpture found among the ruins of their cities; as also the Aztecs of Mexico for being the authors of those most ancient picture and hieroglyphic records, whereas they are the works of the Nahuas—Nephites. (See Heleman 2: 27.) For the Mayas, as quoted, had degenerated and lost their native language when found by the Nahuas. The Nahuas too were the ruling power of the Mayas for a long period (Mosiah 11: 10), which was called in the tradition the Votanic Empire. But in the fourth century A. D. a civil war broke out, (Mormon 1: 3,) and subsequent to it the tribes separated themselves into separate governments again after long and bloody wars and established a new order of things in the land as found by the Europeans in the fifteenth century.

Yours very truly,

ANOTHER VIEW.

In the Home Column of your interesting issue for June 19, appeared an article under the title, “The pure in heart,” which I enjoyed very much, and am in the fullest sympathy with the touching appeal to the Saints to become pure in heart. But there was one thought expressed that was so different from what I have gleaned from the Bible concerning God's manifestation of himself to Moses and others that I cannot refrain from briefly and tenderly expressing a few thoughts and citing a few passages of scripture on the subject, which I offer with all due deference to the opinion and feelings of the writer of the article referred to. It was concerning Moses seeing God “through a glass darkly.” A careful reading of the thirty-third chapter of Exodus, in the Inspired Translation, reveals the fact that at the time when God talked with Moses face to face as a man speaketh with his friend, Israel was in favor with God, and power was given Moses to stand in his presence, evidently without a veil, “as a man speaketh with his friend;” not through a glass darkly. The latter is a saying of Paul, recorded in 1 Corinthians 13: 12, and has no reference to Moses. At this time Moses was evidently pure in heart and could be permitted to see God.

The account given in the latter part of the chapter is of a subsequent time, when Israel had murmured and Moses had distrusted God; as the foregoing communication between God and Moses shows. The twentieth verse says:—

Thou canst not see my face at this time lest mine anger be kindled against thee also, and I destroy thee and thy people; for there shall no man among them see me at this time and live.

The twenty-third verse says:—

But my face shall not be seen, as at other times, for I am angry with Israel,

God here gives his own reason for hiding Moses in the cleft of the rock and putting his hand over him, at this time, while his glory passed by. Turning to the thirty-fourth chapter and reading from the twenty-seventh to the thirty-fifth verses inclusive, we see that when Moses went into the presence of God he was unveiled, putting the veil over his face each time he came before the people; for they could not endure the glory of Moses' face. If indeed Moses was pure in heart when God talked with him "face to face," and then only saw him "through a glass darkly," what assurance have we that our vision of God will be any clearer at the time of which Paul speaks? Surely the words "face to face" must have the same significance uttered by Paul or Moses.

In Exodus 24:1, 2, 9, 10 is revealed the fact that Moses, Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu and seventy elders of Israel saw God at one time; but only Moses was permitted to come near to him. It seems that they beheld the body of heaven in his clearness.

They must have seen his glorious appearance, as expressed in the term "clearness." I trust I shall not have wounded the feelings of the sister writing the former article, nor yet any of the brethren or sisters who may read both articles; if indeed this should be published.

Yours for the truth in love,

O. B. THOMAS.

PLEASANT GROVE CHAPEL RECEIPTS.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, July 17.

Editors Herald.—Below I give a list of those not living here (except one, and he is not a member of the church) who have contributed very generously to help us build a church, to all of whom we extend our heartfelt and sincere thanks for their generosity; and we pray the Giver of all good to bless them, each one abundantly for the same. We have our church finished, except the molding around the doors and windows inside and the painting and seating, which we expect to do as soon as we are able, which we hope won't be very long, as we would like to have it dedicated when Bro. and Sr. Blair reach here. Ever praying for the spread and prosperity of the gospel, I am,

Yours for the spread of truth,

NOTES FROM THE DOWNEY REUNION.

According to previous arrangements, a few of the Saints of Southern California assembled from various points and had their tents up on the camp grounds early in the morning of July 12 at the quiet little town of Downey, which is about fifteen miles southeast of Los Angeles. Among the first arrivals were Bro. and Sr. Blair from Lamoni, having come by way of San Francisco, where they spent a few days visiting with Saints and preaching the good word, and Bro. H. L. Holt of the Seventy, and missionary in charge of Southern California. (Pardon the scribe for saying that Bro. Holt's countenance was very bright because of the recent arrival of a pair of twin girls in his household.) Bro. Joseph F. Burton of the general missionary force and president of the California mission, and J. W. Gilbert missionary to the South Sea Islands, lately returned, were also among the early arrivals.

The first meeting was opened at 10:30 a.m. by Bro. J. F. Burton. Pres. W. W. Blair was called upon to give counsel and instruction to the Saints, which he did, cheering and encouraging all. Then followed short talks by many of the brethren and sisters, and a splendid feeling obtained.

In the afternoon the reunion convened for business, and proceeded to organization. J. F. Burton was chosen president of the reunion, W. W. Blair and Bro. Gibson were chosen as his assistants; Bro. J. W. Gilbert and Sr. Twaddle as secretaries; Srs. Ollie Ames, Cora Van Fleet, and Sr. Patterson as organists and choristers. Janitors and policemen, Brn. Pickering, Carter, and Reynolds.

It was decided by motion that the bell should be rung at ten in the evening for retiring, and that there should be no talking after that until 5:30 in the morning. This was pretty well regarded, and it secured to all a sufficient time for sleep, so that generally all were fresh and bright to enjoy the meetings.

J. W. Gilbert was the speaker the first evening. His text was: "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." We cannot do anything in this world without first knowing how. We may have the material, the strength, and the time to build a house, an airship, a locomotive, yet without knowledge we are powerless. So it is in regard to being saved in the kingdom of God. Knowledge is power. We must learn how. We must know God, for this is life eternal. "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." That is the way Peter found it out. If one knows for himself, the Devil or anyone else cannot deceive him. Therefore it is a rock to him; he will stand firm and not waver. God knew his business when he gave the gospel. He gave it as a means to a certain end; viz., the salvation of fallen man. So long as man is in a fallen condition, the same means will remain to bring him out of it. God in all his infinite wisdom could not have given another gospel that would have brought about the desired effect, simply because the very first principle that caused the fall of man in the garden of Eden was unbelief; the only principle God could find to offset unbelief, was faith. The second step in the process of the fall was disobedience. Repentance is the only principle that will offset disobedience. The third step was death of a twofold nature, which caused the complete fall of man from his perfect state. Nothing but a birth of a twofold nature could possibly offset the effects of a death of a twofold nature, so Jesus said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." There was quite a number of outsiders present, and they gave good attention.

July 13.—The prayer and testimony meeting was good, the Saints being comforted by a considerable degree of the Holy Spirit.

At the morning preaching hour, Pres. W. W. Blair was the speaker. "Blessed are the pure in heart." "Blessed are the peacemakers." "Blessed are ye, when men shall . . . persecute you, . . . for my sake." He showed how necessary it is for us to be peacemakers at all times and under all circumstances, and to endure persecution for Jesus' sake. That we should pray for them and forgive them. He related instances of how the Lord had greatly blessed him in bearing calmly and patiently persecution from others. He spoke at length concerning the teaching of the children in the church so that they may be prepared to be baptized when eight years old. He said that if a child is instructed and wants to be baptized, and lacks a few days of being eight years old, "let him be baptized." He cited instances where children were remarkably blessed who were baptized when young. Although sometimes some seem to wander away for a time in youth, and grow cold, yet God's hand is over them and they generally of a sudden turn and make the best of men and women. His sermon was attended by the Holy Spirit, full of wisdom and instruction.

At 2:30 Bro. Pickering was the speaker. Text: "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me." "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." "If ye continue in my word, . . . ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." This is the key which unlocks the mystery.

At 7:50 p. m. Bro. H. L. Holt was the speaker. "We are invited in these days to come to Jesus. Many preachers are saying this. But the question is, how to come to Jesus. We must come to Jesus through faith, but it must be accompanied by works." The speaker discoursed upon the principles of the gospel in a comprehensive and logical way that was very interesting. A large crowd was in attendance, and the tent was well filled. A great many outsiders were present, and gave good attention.

Sunday, the 14th.—More Saints came in from various points on the railroads, and some in buggies, and the meetings were well attended. Brn. Blair, Burton, and Holt were the speakers for the day.

Monday, the 15th, was one of the best prayer and testimony meetings during the reunion. The Spirit was present in a goodly degree, melting to tears of joy, inspiring testimony, and manifesting the gifts of prophecy, tongues, and interpretation of tongues. On several days the gifts of tongues and prophecy were manifested. The prayer services were good throughout the entire reunion. Many wonderful testimonies were borne by the Saints, which were cheering and encouraging, confirming all in the most holy faith, and reminding us of the great love and mercy the Father has for his children.

During the week, many more Saints came in from the surrounding country in wagons, bringing their tents and enlarging the little white village, until quite a number had gathered together by the second Sunday.

On Saturday, the 21st, at two p. m., there was baptizing in the river about a mile from the camp grounds. Three or four had desired baptism, but when the time came, lo there were nine. Bro. Joseph F. Burton did the baptizing.

Sunday, the 22d, and last day of the reunion quite a number of Saints came in from Los Angeles and other points by train, and some by carriage, swelling the crowd. Brn. Blair, Burton, and Holt were the speakers for the day, and all preached splendid sermons. The audience gave good attention, though the tent was full to overflowing. The young Saints were asked several times during the reunion to stand up outside the tent to give room for outsiders. There was considerable interest manifested among the outsiders, many being in attendance at all the evening meetings, and toward the last, in the day meetings also. The preaching was good throughout, being such as to confirm the Saints, and convince those of the outside world of the truth of the gospel and of the validity of the claims of the church concerning the restoration of the gospel in these last days. Even the poets of Downey were moved to express the impressions of their minds in verse. Here is a scrap from one of their sages, found on the grounds on Monday morning after the close of the meetings:—

The Mormons are a curious sect,
Some people call them queer,
Because they say that they believe In Joseph Smith the Seer.

The time and place for the next reunion was left in the hands of a competent committee to decide. Brn. Patterson, Van Fleet, and Carmichael were chosen as a reunion committee for the next year. They were the committee last year, and did the work so well that they were reelected. A vote of thanks was tendered the committee for their work and diligent care for the comfort of the campers, and the success of the reunion.

A vote of thanks was tendered the people of Downey for their kindness in ordering the street sprinkled contiguous to the camp grounds. A resolution obtained that all branches assist in the tent work, and the reunion closed.

MARRIED.

PRICE—LEABO.—At the residence of the bride's parents in Salem, Oregon, Bro. Guy A. Price to Sr. Ella Leabo, of Salem, Oregon. Service by Bro. J. C. Clapp. A goodly number of Saints and friends were present to witness the solemnities of the ceremony, after which all partook of a bounteous feast that had been prepared for the occasion. Bro. and Sr. Jaspersen, from Independence, Oregon, and Bro. and Sr. Barzee, of Turner, were present, and a pleasant day was passed, winding up with a gospel discourse by the writer.

J. C. C.

FORSCUTT—HUNGATE.—Married; during the noon hour of July 24, 1895, at the residence of the father of the bride, E. Hungate, Esq., of Omaha, Nebraska, Mr. Mark Zenas Forscutt and Miss Bertha Hungate. But few outside of the relatives of the contracting parties were witnesses of the simple but admirable ceremony of the Saints' Church by which, as administered by Elder M. H. Forscutt, this union of hearts and hands was legally affirmed. Two lovely little girls, dressed with becoming taste, each carrying a large and choice bouquet of fragrant flowers that spoke the unwritten language of love and trust, preceded the bridal party as they entered the spacious parlors where awaited the anxious guests who, delighting in the old, old story that is yet forever fresh and new, showered their congratulations and expressed their hopes of peace, and prayers for blessings on the happy pair, in which we affectionately and heartily join.

Blushing in beauty's charms, adorned with grace, stood she
And upward glances stole of his beloved form, While tall and strong, with manly pride looked he
Upon his lovely bride; each heart pulsating warm
With such pure and strong affection as doth justify
Our fervent hope that love like theirs shall never die.

DIED.

TERRY.—Sr. Loretta Terry was born March 6, 1855, in Canton, Michigan. United with the Church of Jesus Christ February 6, 1892. Died July 20, 1895. Her husband, two sons, and two daughters mourn. She has been a sufferer for years, but since uniting with the church has been faithful unto death, and according to the word will come forth in the resurrection of the just. Funeral was held July 23 in Gilmore Baptist church. Elder John Bailey, of Coleman, delivered the sermon from 1 Thessalonians 4: 18.

LILLY.—At Higbee, Missouri, July 18, 1895, Sr. Maggie, daughter of Bro. Thomas and Sr. C. Lilly, aged 12 years, 11 months, and 14 days. She was born at Braidwood, Illinois; was baptized November 13, 1892, at Higbee, Missouri. Her remains were conveyed to the Saints' chapel, where the funeral discourse was delivered by W. H. Vincent.

"She sleeps! Her troubles here are o'er;
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumberer's rest;
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God,
To mingle with the blest."

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of D. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

CENTRAL POSITION OF CHRIST IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

TO SEE clearly the relation of the Christian religion to the preceding history of mankind, and to appreciate its vast influence upon all future ages, we must first glance at the preparation which existed in the political, moral, and religious condition of the world for the advent of our Savior.

As religion is the deepest and holiest concern of man, the entrance of the Christian religion into history is the most momentous of all events. It is the end of the old world and the beginning of the new. It was a great idea of Dionysius "the Little" to date our era from the birth of our Savior. Jesus Christ, the God-Man, the prophet, priest, and king of mankind, is, in fact, the centre and turning-point not only of chronology, but of all history, and the key to all its mysteries. Around him, as the sun of the moral universe, revolve at their several distances, all nations and all important events, in the religious life of the world; and all must, directly or indirectly, consciously or unconsciously, contribute to glorify his name and advance his cause. The history of mankind before his birth must be viewed as a preparation for his coming, and the history after his birth as a gradual diffusion of his spirit and progress of his kingdom. "All things were created by him, and for him." He is "the desire of all nations." He appeared in the "fulness of time," (Mark 1: 15; Gal. 4: 4,) when the process of preparation was finished, and the world's need of redemption fully disclosed.

This preparation for Christianity began properly with the very creation of man, who was made in the image of God, and destined for communion with him through the eternal Son; and with the promise of salvation which God gave to our first parents as a star of hope to guide them through the darkness of sin and error. (Gen. 3:15.) Vague memories of a primitive paradise and subsequent fall, and hopes of a future redemption, survive even in the heathen religions.

With Abraham, about nineteen hundred years before Christ, the religious development of humanity separates into the two independent, and, in their compass, very unequal branches of Judaism and heathenism. These meet and unite at last in Christ as the common Savior, the fulfiller of the types and prophecies, desires and hopes of the ancient world; while at the same time the ungodly elements of both league in deadly hostility against him, and thus draw forth the full revelation of his all-conquering power of truth and love.

As Christianity is the reconciliation and union of God and man in and through Jesus Christ, the God-man, it must have been preceded by a twofold process of preparation, an approach of God to man, and an approach of man to God. In Judaism the preparation is direct and positive, proceeding from above downwards, and ending with the birth of the Messiah. In heathenism it is indirect and mainly, though not entirely, negative, proceeding from below upwards, and ending with a helpless cry of mankind for redemption. There we have a special revelation or self-communication of the only true God by word and deed, ever growing clearer and plainer, till at last the divine Logos appears in human nature, to raise it to communion with himself; here men, guided indeed by the general providence of God, and lighted by the glimmer of the Logos shining in the darkness, (John 1: 5; Rom. 1: 19, 20; 2: 14, 15,) yet unaided by direct revelation, and left to "walk in their own ways," (Acts 14: 16,) "that they should seek God, if haply they might feel after him, and find him." (Acts 17: 26, 27.) In Judaism the true religion is prepared for man; in heathenism man is prepared for the true religion. There the divine substance is begotten; here the human forms are moulded to receive it. The former is like the elder son in the parable, who abode in his father's house; the latter like the prodigal, who squandered his portion, yet at last shuddered before the gaping abyss of perdition, and penitently returned to the bosom of his father's compassionate love. (Luke 15: 11-32.) Heathenism is the starry night, full of darkness and fear, but of mysterious presage also, and of anxious waiting for the light of day; Judaism, the dawn, full of the fresh hope and promise of the rising sun; both lose themselves in the sunlight of Christianity, and attest its claim to be the only true and the perfect religion for mankind.

The heathen preparation again was partly intellectual and literary, partly political and social. The former is represented by the Greeks, the latter by the Romans.

Jerusalem, the holy city, Athens, the city of culture, and Rome, the city of power, may stand for the three factors in that preparatory history which ended in the birth of Christianity.

This process of preparation for redemption in the history of the world, the groping of heathenism after the "unknown God" (Acts 17: 23) and inward peace, and the legal struggle and comforting hope of Judaism, repeat themselves in every individual believer; for man is made for Christ, and "his heart is restless, till it rests in Christ."—Schaff's History Christian Church.

Use wood ashes for trees, especially pear. Don't pile the ashes close against the trees, but broadcast over the ground, as the feeding roots extend even further than the limbs.

To Every Member of the Church.

By action of the Board of Publication during the last General Conference Bro. Frank Criley was appointed Business Manager of the Herald Office. This action was taken that the business interests of the publishing department of the church might receive the supervision and special attention their importance demands as the property of the church and an active arm of its service.

Upon examination of subscription lists and book accounts we find a large number of overdue accounts, for HERALD, HOPE, AUTUMN LEAVES, and books. Some of these accounts have run for a year, many of them for a longer time, and are mostly made up of small accounts, from twenty-five cents to ten dollars.

It will be seen by this brief statement that many of the Saints have not been prompt in meeting their obligations to the church in this respect, and that because of this the Office has been hindered where it should have been more prosperous and more useful to the body.

It is the desire of the management to place the Herald Office on a true business footing and to keep it there, that it may be in condition always to meet the growing needs of the church as the work spreads. To do this it will be necessary to conduct its affairs upon strict business principles, hence in the interests of the work we hereby appeal to all the Saints to manifest their love for the cause by coöperating with those in charge in their efforts to make it a success. They cannot do it alone; our people must help them.

We desire that all outstanding accounts be settled at once. It will be necessary to do this that obligations may be met. Our patrons are therefore asked to take note of their subscription labels and other accounts, and if they find themselves in debt to the Office to remit at once.

Do not pass it by because it is a small amount; it is just such small accounts that make up the large amount due and which are a burden and expense to carry.

Make an effort and send us the money, and you will feel better because your duty has been done and the Office is helped by your action.

Latter Day Saints, above all people, should be prompt and faithful in meeting their obligations. They should not need to be reminded of the principle that should prompt them in this respect. It will not do to pass by such matters indifferently; they ought to receive attention and at once.

The work of the Office is rapidly increasing. This demands closer management and careful coöperation that the highest good result to the church.

The publications are placed in the hands of the Saints at very little or no profit, while a great number are distributed free.

The circulation of the HERALD is about two thousand less than it ought to be according to the number of members in the church. Are you one of those who fail to grow in spirituality because you do not take the church paper, hence do not get the good news of the progress of the work and the blessing of God upon his people? It ought to be in every family.

Send $2.00 for the HERALD one year, $1.00 for six months subscription, or 50 cents for three. Try it and see what you have lost by not taking it. To make progress and keep in touch with the great latter-day work one must read the church publications.

Your active coöperation is asked for, that the work may progress and every member be alive in it. Members of the church would find it to their advantage and to the welfare of the work to pay promptly as they go. It would be in harmony with the admonition, "Owe no man anything," and also develop faithfulness in meeting all other obligations.

You are asked to work with us,—to do your own part. Will you do it and not longer leave it undone?

We expect the ministry to do their part, we know the Lord will do his, and the laity must do theirs.

This change of management makes it necessary that all outstanding accounts due August 1, 1895, be settled within the next sixty days, that the books may be balanced. Please remit at once, without further request.

For the cause, yours,

DAVID DANCER, Retiring Business Manager.

FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager.

The Board has seen fit to place me in this position to attend to this portion of the business of the church. My duty can only be done by a plain statement of facts and by your hearty coöperation in its interests. This I sincerely ask.

Please address remittances and orders to the undersigned.

In bonds, yours for success,

LAMONI, IOWA, AUGUST 14, 1895.

NEW BUSINESS MANAGER.

THE Saints who so long have addressed business letters connected with the Herald Office to Bro. David Dancer, will please hereafter address such matters to Bro. Frank Criley, who succeeds Bro. Dancer as Business Manager, and is duly installed. Address him at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, making all orders for money payable to him.

Bro. Dancer has served the office for years without compensation. Though his name disappears from the church publication in the capacity in which he has served, he will not be forgotten by our people, who have known him to respect and esteem him for his worth. He still remains a member of the Board of Publication, where he will continue to lend the aid of his counsel in the interests of the publishing department.

Bro. Criley takes up the business management with the intention of pushing and extending its interests. See his card addressed to the members of the church. We hope he will be promptly, practically sustained in his endeavors to place the Herald Office on a firmer financial footing. He will devote his entire time in its interests and will thus be able to add to its usefulness—if sustained by the Saints, otherwise he can do but little.

There is such a thing as passing by such appeals made to the Saints with but a passive notice; however, this should not be; for such matters ought to be heeded and, where it is at all possible, be responded to. Our church is made up of individuals here and there and small gatherings or branches of people, and it is by the united action of each member that success is to be realized. One is apt to be negligent and wait for others, supposing that they will act and keep things moving. This is "bad policy" and very damaging both to the one pursuing it and to the church. We repeat it, "bad policy," for the reason that individuals who pursue such a course are in a measure asleep, not awake and responsive to the demands of the work, as they ought to be.

It is time for Latter Day Saints to be alive, alert, to be fully aware of the fact that to profess to follow the teaching and example of Jesus Christ requires more than the ordinary methods of life followed by "the world." It means promptness, care, business-like methods of life at home, everywhere. We are nowhere told that it comprehends a mere attention to church forms and ceremonies, even though the customary "bearing of testimony," etc. be included. Such customs are all good in their place, but must be made good in fact by substantial action.

If an individual is careless in meeting his obligations, in paying his debts, he has become guilty of a very damaging practice,—damaging to others and dangerous to himself, a serious wrong; for his example creates distrust and causes lack of confidence in himself and in God's people. As a people we cannot be too careful about these things. An individual is in an unfortunate condition who can pass by his obligations, his debts, without an earnest, sincere effort to meet them.

All over the land, all over the world, Saints look forward to a day to come when they shall receive and occupy an inheritance in Zion; some entertaining ideas more or less visionary or impracticable, forgetting that Zion can only be established upon sound, economic principles; those that require industry, frugality, good management, energetic application of individuals to the problems of life and the solution of them by hard work. Personally, we never expect to receive an inheritance upon any other theory or basis; and, as we understand it, people are to become prepared to abide in Zion by an application of the laws of the true order of things in their present conditions.

We believe the Saints should strive to pay as they go; or if unable to do so, to try to reach a condition where they can. For years the Herald Office, and we suppose the general finances, have not been by any means among the first considerations with a great many, as they ought to have been. Persons should pay what they owe the Lord, and purely from a desire to be helpers, workers together with him, in the work "intrusted to all;" this should be the primary cause of their action. It is poor policy, "bad policy" to do anything not in entire harmony with the Lord. What the people of God want to do is, in all things they undertake to do them by God's blessing; to live in such close touch with the Lord that they shall have success because they seek to do his will with a view to be workers together for good. We want to take the Lord into our partnerships; to refuse to undertake anything in which we cannot sincerely receive his sanction, and when blessed, to not become so in love with the means acquired as to forget the Giver.

Our religion is a system of education intensely practical. Emanating from God, it must be perfect itself and must have as an object the perfect development of his children. Anything less than this fixes the standard too low.

Let us constantly step up and occupy higher ground, in theory, in practice—in business, in everything. Then the work will move faster and be more firmly established.

A GOOD REPORT.

A NEW book called The Memorial Story of America, edited by Hamilton W. Mabie, and published by John C. Winston and Company, 1895, contains a notice of the Reorganized Church, citing the Bulletin of Church Statistics, United States Census of 1890, as the authority from which they draw information. It is more than fair, it is a very correct and impartial statement of the facts, as we of the church understand them.

In the paragraph immediately preceding the notice, however, occurs the inevitable "clergyman origin" for the Book of Mormon, though this time it is given thus:—

It is confidently asserted that the "Book of Mormon," the basis of "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," in the Territory of Utah, where the Mormons settled in 1847, is, in its authorship, the production of some divine of the "Disciple" persuasion—an adherent of Mr. Alexander Campbell, founder of the "Campbellites" who was born in Ireland in 1778 and died in West Virginia (U. S. A.), in 1866.

This is the usual formula, "it is confidently asserted." No matter how incomplete the assertion as to the men, or man who is thus asserted to be the originator, or how shaky the evidence on which the assertion rests, it is always the same and such is the making of history.

The next assertion is correct.

But all authorities agree that Joseph Smith, of New York, the Mormon founder and prophet, obtained possession of the book September 22, 1827.

It may be that in a few years we will be able by persistent effort and unyielding watchfulness in getting the "clergyman," Disciple, Presbyterian, Baptist, or other denomination in name, eliminated from the story as it may appear in the encyclopedias and histories.

This chapter, occurring on pages 412, 413, of the Story of America, is with the exception noted above the clearest and best statement found in print in popular works of the period. We congratulate the editor on his fairness.

JOSEPH SMITH'S CHARGE TO THE TWELVE.

ACCORDING to testimony Joseph gave some parting charge to the Quorum of Twelve. This charge is made the basis of defence in justification of the Twelve in assuming to lead the church. In respectful consideration for their claims we were led to inquire, What was this specific charge? Surely if so much depends upon it we should know precisely what it is, that special consideration may be given. His exact words should be preserved, or if lost, no pretense should be made to having them. Before us are four statements, two from Pres. Wilford

Woodruff, one from Orson Hyde, and one from President Brigham Young purporting to be Joseph's language verbatim, as each is inclosed in quotation marks. Then there is one from P. P. Pratt which may not be intended as verbatim, but only the substance of what he said, as quotation marks are not used. No two of them agree in regard to this most important and vital language. Even President Woodruff does not agree with himself, neither of his statements agrees with Hyde's or President Young's, Hyde's does not agree with either of President Woodruff's or President Young's; President Young's does not agree with Hyde's or President Woodruff's, though all four are evidently intended as verbatim quotations of Joseph's words. Here they are:—

Upon your shoulders the kingdom rests, and you must round up your shoulders and bear it, for I have had to do it until now. But now the responsibility rests upon you. It mattereth not what becomes of me.—Pres. Woodruff's address, Mill. Star, Vol. 5, p. 109.

I tell you the burden of this kingdom now rests upon your shoulders; you have got to bear it off in all the world, and if you don't do it you will be damned.—President Woodruff; see Roberts on Succession, p. 119.

If I am taken away, upon you, the Twelve, will rest the responsibility of leading this people, and do not be bluffed off by any man. Go forward in the path of duty though you walk into death. If you will be bold and maintain your ground, the great God will sustain you.—Orson Hyde, Millennial Star, vol. 5, p. 103.

I have laid the foundation and you must build thereon, for upon your shoulders the kingdom rests.—President Young; Roberts, p. 95.

The Lord is about to lay the burden on your shoulders and let me rest awhile; and if they kill me, continued he, the kingdom of God will roll on, as I have now finished the work which was laid upon me, by committing to you all things for the building up of the kingdom according to the heavenly vision, and the pattern shown me from heaven.—Pratt, Millennial Star, vol. 5, p. 151.

Upon some points these witnesses agree as to the intention of Joseph, but we would like to know what he said, so we may form our own conclusions regarding his meaning; but we can never determine what he really did say through such testimony as this. But allowing the people in Utah to select either of these statements they choose to rely upon, as the words of Joseph, we ask, What of it? We have no objection to the idea that Joseph charged the Twelve that the burden of the church would rest upon them. We are of the opinion that if the Twelve, as such, had continued in their place, discharging their legitimate duties as provided for in the law, God would have acknowledged them and their ministrations. But even Joseph, had he been inclined to do so, had no authority to confer upon the Twelve powers, prerogatives, or rights not provided for in their calling and ordination. Neither is there any evidence that he attempted to do so. Nor does either of these statements as made by their own witnesses contain the least shadow of an inference that Joseph anticipated that any three of the quorum should be elevated to a higher position than other members of the quorum, as they afterwards were, but rather there is a strong inference that Joseph by this charge, if given, intended to warn them against any attempt to step out of their place, and to admonish them to bear off the kingdom by strictly adhering to the duties of their legitimate calling; and, according to Woodruff, damnation was the penalty for deviation. Let it be understood that the issue is upon the question of successorship in the First Presidency, and the nature of the work done by the Twelve.

There is no question as to whether the Twelve were authorized to bear off the burden of the kingdom, as the duties of their calling required.

Roberts, after giving his production the title of "Succession in the Presidency of the church," dodges the issue implied by his subject, by but vaguely referring to the creation of a First Presidency by them, and avoiding even in the most remote sense, to defend their order of "succession in the Presidency of the church." His production is therefore a misnomer and in this regard a lamentable failure.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION, ETC.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16.—The status of agricultural education in the United States is given an extended review in the forthcoming year book of the Agricultural Department. It shows there are sixty five institutions in operation under the provisions of the acts of July 2, 1862, and August 30, 1890. Sixty of these maintain courses in agriculture. In fourteen States separate institutions are provided for white and colored students. Special courses in dairying and other agriculture industries have been recently established at a few of the colleges.

The United States Census report shows that more persons are engaged in agricultural pursuits than any other. The importance of agriculture and the number engaged in it has been recognized by the addition of a new or later department to the government service, with a Secretary of Agriculture added to the cabinet.

Although this modern age is far in advance of any preceding one in mechanical contrivances for plowing, sowing, harvesting, and threshing of crops, we are doubtless far behind many ancient tillers of the soil in knowledge and application of irrigation and other methods of crop cultivation. Uncle Sam's vast domain and comparatively small population have not required economical, close farming as a general rule. However, as immigration continues and the population otherwise grows, closer and more scientific attention to the question of crop raising is becoming necessary, hence the growth of agricultural institutions and agricultural education.

Special courses in law, medicine, engineering, etc., are no new things; but "special education in agriculture" and "dairying" are terms not so familiar to us. They sound well, however, and indicate more complete recognition of and compliance with the principles necessary to the intelligent advancement and permanent welfare of the people; the establishment of the still further and higher civilization which the spirit of the times demands.

Much has been spoken and written in praise of the wonderful social, political, moral, mechanical, agricultural, and general development of our country and people; and that development cannot be too truly appreciated; but an ordinary observer ought to be able to note that we are far, very far, from what our condition ought to be. So long as intemperance abounds and social evils remain; so long as ignorance continues and vice flourishes; so long as poverty prevails because of the idleness, thriftlessness, improvidence, or oppression of the poor, or the selfishness of the rich; so long as the great majority or a numerous minority of the masses fails to discern the evils of our present civilization and does not rise to a study and observance of the laws by which the people can be emancipated;—so long will such evils prevail and men and women live far beneath their privileges; below the standard in intelligence, morals, health, happiness, and general welfare.

There are successive, progressive steps in all advancement. Primary and intermediate steps must first be taken before higher conditions are possible. As well try to read without knowledge of letters as to hope for political, industrial, moral, or religious emancipation without comprehending and doing the work necessary to be done. Our gospel means and requires all this; it includes it all. We are therefore interested in every indication of better things, of truer methods, of higher life in any field of effort.

There are two methods of treatment, of calling attention to such subjects; one consists in specific, detailed statement of some special movement; the other of calling attention to the general underlying principles that govern the movements and determine the character of all things. Both are useful and necessary. By the first much detailed and general information concerning special matters is presented, without so much thoughtful attention being required by the reader, or to an extent, much thought and time are thus saved him. By the other method, however, the general principles that make manifest the real character of movements and conditions are so set forth that the reader is enabled to grow in power to individually determine the character not only of one but of all movements or principles that affect him and his fellows, that he may act independently and yet in harmony with the interests of all.

The advantages and the necessity of both lines of thought and presentation are obvious. One cannot take time to investigate and bring out the details of every special line of knowledge. However, one should be sufficiently advanced in knowledge of the truth to discern the true or false character of any movement; sufficiently so to appreciate and aid the good, and to discover and help suppress, to root out evil and error.

Society is a unit, when truly or ganized and at work. The race is codependent. Citizenship means opportunity to advance and to aid advance movements, or responsibility of failure, and the resulting unhappiness and evils of such failure, visited upon ourselves and others affected by the course pursued.

Latter Day Saints are called by the gospel to stand in the forefront on all important questions; of moral and economic and social reform, social purity, temperance, etc. We represent the faith when we do so. If ignorant and heedless of such matters we cannot honor the cause nor do the good we are called to do "as lights in the world,"—to the world. "The glory of God is intelligence." "Truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come." "The kingdom of God" is to "come" in the sense that men are to go on to perfection; a gradually advancing, natural process that should begin at baptism—if not begun before—and continue to the end. In this sense the Son of man said, that men and women should know the truth and be made free in it:—

Disobedience is sin; ignorance is reprehensible; perversity is criminal. The disciple is called to be as his Lord, to rise above them all, to be seeing higher ground and to be striving to walk in a high plane of life.

We are interested in agricultural education, also in everything that will tend to more fully develop and rightly use the forces for good that exist all about us and within us. We comprehend true religion to require this of every intelligent creature, that he act perfectly in his sphere. There should be no waste, no loss, no misdirection, no failures; at least no very great mistakes nor serious errors, but if mistakes occur, a prompt and unreserved correction of them. To the bringing about of such an order of things—such citizenship and such conditions—every man must pledge himself and so act, or in time be relegated to the sphere for which he is adapted, if truth is to finally prevail.

To honor and work for the maintenance of these principles we have pledged ourselves in baptism.

IN A FRENZY.

TABOR, Iowa, August 4.—The Holiness people have been holding meetings in this city the last week. They claim to have had a divine presentment that the world will come to an end within ten days. In support of this claim they quote a scriptural promise as follows:—

“For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of an archangel, and with the trumpet of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air.”

The Holiness adherents have worked themselves into a frenzy and their meetings are attended by hundreds of people. Some of their leaders announce positively the early destruction of the world and many of their followers are making preparations for the exit.

We note the above with other similar accounts of “date fixing” that those making them may be placed on record and their prophetic powers tested. This press clipping scarcely overstates it in reference to the “frenzy” of some of these “Holiness” people. From what we have seen of them we think it is stated mildly.

Why is it that many who manifest good common sense in the ordinary affairs of life will be caught by such chaff and vagaries in the guise of religion? It is astonishing that in matters involving eternal interests, excitement and almost entire abandon of sober judgment becomes the rule, and about anything bearing the name or making the claim passes as “religion.”

It will be well for many good and well-meaning people when they put away childish things and assert the manly and womanly nature within them and more carefully examine the principles upon which true religion is based—intelligence, knowledge, sobriety of spirit, etc., and thus possess a firm foundation for their own faith and that of their children, and save themselves from disappointment and unbelief.

DEATH OF BRO. G. W. SHUTE.

WE learn indirectly that Bro. G. W. Shute, who labored as missionary in charge of Oklahoma, is dead; that he died away from home, and suddenly, while at his post of duty, and was buried there; we have not learned the particulars. We sympathize with his family and extend them our sincere wishes for their comfort and resignation in this hour of trial. It is a touching instance, this passing away of one of our fellow soldiers, alone and at the post of duty; faithfully engaged in the service, giving the years of his life and leaving the endearments of home and family in love for Christ and fellow man. It ought not to pass unheeded nor be forgotten. The Lord is not indifferent concerning such service and “the death of his Saints,” and the church ought not to be. The faithful life of a missionary is one of noblest consecration—a giving of life for the world; a manifestation of a portion of the same Spirit that prompted the Master to give his life for his brethren. The hope of reward may be the last consideration in the mind of one rendering such service, but it cannot fail; the law of compensation is as sure and as broad as the principle of sacrifice, and abounds the more as the sacrifice is unreserved. God himself is the pledge of it.

BRO. HENRY HOOLE sends us a clipping from the Sheffield, England, Telegraph, in which while eulogizing the Church of England, one Mr. Plunket, grandson of Lord Plunket, while debating the Welsh Church bill, said:—

The Church of England is no foreign, no exotic, institution. Long ago its form was fashioned by Englishmen for themselves. Its wealth, its endowments, were given to it and accumulated by Englishmen for the teaching and the administration of their own religion from generation to generation, etc.

We can appreciate the devoted religious and patriotic spirit which binds Englishmen to the Church of England because of the close connection it bears to their national and local life and history. Nevertheless the statement of Mr. Plunket that “long ago” the form of the Church of England “was fashioned by Englishmen for themselves” remains and is known to be historically true. It is a fact true beyond historical contradiction that the Church of England was formed in the days of Henry VIII. and can in no sense be shown to have claim to apostolic succession.

While admitting the superior character of the service it has rendered to the political-religious wants of the English people in raising them above what Roman Catholicism imposed upon other peoples, its outgrowth from the latter church cannot successfully be denied. Mr. Plunket is strictly correct. Many other religious institutions have also come into existence in a national sense and have been the outgrowth of some local or national crisis. The Church of Jesus Christ came into existence based on the universality of man's nature and needs and his relationship to God. Because of these underlying truths God has in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, restored the gospel in its fullness, and committed to man universal the dispensation of the fullness of times.

THE following from the pen of Bro. Morris Short, in the Cantonian, Canton, Illinois, for August 1, is good.

The Lord's ways and thoughts are above the schemes of mankind. His doings are ever wonderful, marvelous, supernatural, and divine, or perfect. Man experiments, improves, and even surprises himself. The achievements of man are always open to be questioned, while the designs of the Supreme Being ought to be acquiesced to without cavil, or carping criticism. To find fault with the one that gave you an existence and perpetuates your life, is monumental presumption with a vehemence indeed. As touching this “Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints” the Almighty said he would bring it forth as follows: “The Lord shall do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.” “I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder.” “They that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine.” The Scriptures abundantly teach that Christ had a church duly organized and set in motion, all during his brief earthly sojourn or pilgrimage. The Bible, ecclesiastical history, and the divided condition of Christendom, are threefold evidences of a great apostasy from the primitive faith and worship, as well as the doctrine and practice of the true church and kingdom of God's dear Son. This universal heresy was the outgrowth and result of the “falling away” from the faith once delivered to the saints.

The long, dark time of error, covering more than a thousand years, had the tenth century for the midnight of the world's history. During those unhallowed ages poverty and vice, indolence and crime, ignorance and superstition and every evil thing was enthroned in high carnival. The reformation of the sixteenth century was the sure harbinger of the rising dawn. Dissenters organized factions, consummated the union of church and state, had national religions, till the great wheel of progress overtook and crushed out church and state. Friction between the mother church and insubordinate children paved the way for political freedom and religious liberty. In the providence of God this nation came up so that the church of Christ and the gospel of peace and good will could have footing. The perfect law, that brings peace and pardon—yea, happiness and eternal life—hath been restored to earth in fulfillment of prophecy. "The everlasting gospel," having been recommitted to earth by angel hands, as saith the sacred word, is being proclaimed by divine authority and power. This restoration reproduces the New Testament church with all the inspired officers, gifts and blessings appertaining thereto. Where there are no living holy-inspired apostles, prophets, etc., there the church is not, and where there are no "spiritual gifts," "manifestations," "signs," etc., there are no believers, in a gospel sense, but the rather infidels, although their skepticism may be screened with the fig-leaf covering of a creed. To be destitute of the Holy Spirit is a deadly condition, and to claim it, and then deny its office work and gifts, is equally reprehensible. Unreserved obedience to the restored gospel, supplemented with an upright, humble, faithful life, is the way to obtain that very desirable guest. The new birth, creating a life in Christ Jesus, is all we ask and desire.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. LIZZIE WEISE, Malheur, Oregon, July 30:—

I am still at work, doing all I can in my weak way, trying to make friends to the cause. A gentleman gave me two dollars, one for the Herald, the other for Bro. J. C. Clapp, of this mission: so little by little we gain friends for this glorious cause. It is just a year since this friend began to read and hear the old, old story from me, and I rejoice that he is near the kingdom.

Bro. E. M. Wildermuth, Oregon, Wisconsin, August 5:—

We had a large attendance last night, and although we have been here four weeks, when we called a vote to know whether the people wished us to stay longer the expression was unanimous for us to remain; so we shall hold forth another week. Yesterday I had the pleasure of baptizing three more; others will follow in a few days. Truth will prevail; the doctrines of men will fail; God's work will triumph.

Bro. J. A. Saxe, San Francisco, July 29:—

We are striving to build up the latter-day work in this city, but our efforts seem feeble indeed when compared with the amount of wickedness found in a large city like this.

Bro. S. D. Condit, Emmett, Oregon, August 1:—

Bro. Jacob Klengback, eighty-three years of age, sends to renew on the Herald, and desires to say that he is very feeble in body. For sixteen years he has not been able to leave his home and for a number of years back has been confined to his room. He and his aged wife are anxiously waiting the summons home from this world of suffering. They have held fast the faith, though their only preachers have been the books and church papers, and their hope a part in the first resurrection. The Saints should pray for them.

Bro. J. C. Foss, Machias, Maine, July 31:—

I baptized two more last Sunday, at Kennebeck, making four at that place. We look for others soon. Brn. Luff and Bullard are with us, having good meetings.

Bro. H. E. Moler, McArthur, Ohio, August 6:—

Bro. Etzenhouser and I began tent meetings at this place some twelve days ago, and interest and attendance have been excellent from the beginning till now. The best people of the town come to hear and the best of order and attention prevails. Many are pleased with the doctrine; think some will obey. We will continue as long as interest and time justify.

Bro. Henry Kemp, Shenandoah, Iowa, August 8:—

The Saints of this branch are rejoicing in the work; working for its interest, endeavoring to stem the oppositions of the adversary, trusting in God, striving to attain to the unity of the Spirit that they live in bonds of peace.

Bro. J. F. McDowell, Bradgate, Iowa, August 8; Bro. C. J. Hunt with him in tent work:—

Our meetings here are fairly well attended; very busy season. Crops of small grain simply wonderful throughout Northwestern Iowa. Feeling well in spirit, joyous in the gospel. Friends are kind to us. Bro. Hunt and writer are "batching;" get along nicely, friends send us articles of food occasionally, which are gratefully accepted. There is a debate in prospect between Elder D. Logan, of Illinois, and the writer; we are in correspondence upon propositions—Book of Mormon, Joseph Smith, and the Disciple and Latter Day Saint Churches. He wrote in a letter to Rev. Hunter, of Laurens: "If I am to be the man I want plenty time to prepare, for I propose to clean out the whole matter."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints of the Northwestern Kansas district will hold their annual reunion in Mill Grove, Blue Rapids, Kansas, beginning August 15, to hold over ten days or more; Bro. Alma Kent in charge. Their handbill announces that Brn. H. A. Stebbins, E. L. Kelley, J. T. Davis, and many others are expected as speakers; also that the grove will be well seated and amply lighted. The district tent will also be on hand. They want a large attendance; "everybody" invited.

Sr. W. H. Lawrence, Florence, Michigan, renews for the HERALD. She writes bearing testimony to the divine origin of the Book of Mormon and the successorship of President Joseph Smith in the prophetic office, the Lord having so borne witness to her by manifestations of his Spirit.

Bro. Henry Sparling requests us to state that Bro. G. H. Hilliard will attend and be one of the speakers at the South Missouri district reunion to be held at Mountain Grove, Wright County, August 23 to September 1. Three gave their names for baptism at Ozark, Missouri, where Bro. S. is preaching, August 5.

Sr. Susan Matthews, of Shullsburg, Wisconsin, eighty years old, come Christmas next, sends the College Committee one dollar "to help build the college," she says. Sr. Geo. A. Staples, Woonsocket, Rhode Island sends five dollars.

Reunion at Bluff Park, Montrose, Lee County, Iowa, will be held from the 6th to the 16th of September; and will afford an excellent opportunity for those desirous of seeing the old town of Nauvoo, as Bluff Park is directly opposite the city on the Iowa side of the river, affording a magnificent view of the historic beautiful city, almost looking down on it as from a passing cloud. Bro. McKiernan writes encouragingly of the venture, and invites all to attend.

Brn. "Ordway and Co.," who advertise for "a young man," in this issue of HERALD, wish to obtain the services of an elder, that while employed by them he may also help the work. See ad on third page of cover; a chance for the right man to help himself and the cause.

On Monday, August 12, ground was broken for the college at Lamoni—Graceland College. Rock, sand, and brick are on the ground. We understand that work will soon begin on the Saints' Home; probably this week. We might remark in this connection, for the benefit of those whom it may concern, that workmen are abundant, the supply of labor already here being greater than the demand for it. We say this that there be no rush to Lamoni for work.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, will meet with the Southern Saints as follows: At Milton, Florida, August 31; at Bay Minette, Alabama, September 7 and 8; and during the month of October will labor in Mississippi and States adjoining. The brethren and sisters will be strengthened by the labors of Bro. Hilliard at their reunions and other gatherings.

BE KIND.

Kind hearts are the gardens, kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms, kind deeds are the fruits;
Love is sweetest sunshine, that warms into life;
For only in darkness grow hatred and strife.—Selected.

TOO LATE.

What silences we keep year after year
With those who are most near to us and dear!
We live beside each other day by day,
And speak of myriad things, but seldom say
The full, sweet word that lies just in our reach,
Beneath the commonplace of common speech
Then out of sight and out of reach they go—
Those close, familiar friends who loved us so;
And sitting in the shadows they have left,
Alone with loneliness, and sore bereft,
We think with vain regret of some fond word
That once we might have said, and they have heard.

For weak and poor the love that we expressed
Now seems besides the sad, sweet unexpressed,
And slight the deeds we did to those undone,
And small the service spent, to treasure won,
And undeserved the praise for word or deed,
That should have overflowed the simple need.

This is the cruel fault of life—to be Full visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some dear presence is but empty space.
What recollected services can then Give consolation for the "might have been?"

IRVINGTON, California.

Sister Walker:—Perhaps a little sketch of whereabouts and doings may not be amiss. About four weeks ago we again locked up our house and started forth for the summer. The morning was beautiful and the hour early, six a. m. We were sad on one account only, that of leaving Bro. Eugene Holt in very poor health, scarcely able to leave his bed. Bro. Albert Page took us to Hollister, a pleasant drive of thirty-seven miles, which was made in less than six hours. The day was Thursday, so I had the privilege of meeting with the sisters in their Prayer Union. Though only a few in number, we had an enjoyable season of prayer. I hope the sisters of Hollister will continue to do their part in this great work, just as faithfully as if their number were very much greater. The "Well done, good and faithful," will be individual, so our work must be individual also.

Next day we went to San Jose. Spent a week there profitably among the Saints; a very pleasant week to me. They have a flourishing little Sunday school in that branch, a credit to them, truly. During the week they have prayer meeting and teachers' meeting, and the sisters have Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion. I do pray that the Lord will bless their every effort in behalf of his cause, and to gain individual knowledge, faith, and righteousness. We were joined while there by Bro. Gilbert. It was like being wafted back to the Islands again, to see him, and hear directly from and of the people there. We felt a degree of sadness on leaving San Jose, also on account of Bro. J. C. Clapp, who had started a day or so before for his field in Oregon in such ill health that it cast a gloom over us all, both for his sake and that of his wife and family who remain at home to "watch and wait."

Our next stopping place was here at Irvington, where Mr. Burton left me—at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Simeon Stivers, he going on to the city to greet Bro. and Sr. Blair and thence on to Napa county. Later I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. and Sr. Blair and also of attending the reception given them at the home of Bro. and Sr. Saxe, of San Francisco. They, Bro. and Sr. Blair, together with Brn. Gilbert and Burton, are at the Downey reunion, from which we have had most pleasing reports.

Last Sunday, through the kindness of Sr. Lizzie Driver and her brother, I attended a little family Sunday school twelve miles from here, where there are a half dozen or more of Saints. The school is held in the house of Bro. John and Sr. Mattie Driver, near Haywards. Sr. Mattie is one among the willing workers in the church. When there are church services held at Irvington, which occurs once a month, the Hayward Saints attend, so on that day they cannot hold their Sunday school, therefore on each following Sunday they have two lessons; and last Sunday was the day for two lessons; and I must say I gained more knowledge in that little school than in any one day's Sunday school in my life. There were four little tots who had their exercises first, then were dismissed and enjoyed themselves well, sitting in a double-seated buggy 'neath the shadowing branches of a big tree, fancying, no doubt, that they were having a lovely drive, while we adults, a class of nine, had our lesson undisturbed. I have wondered if ever there was a work written up that would yield such fruits for good in this life and the life to come as those Gospel Quarterlies. Happy are those Bible students who have thus generously and discreetly placed the treasures of knowledge they possessed within the reach of all Saints for their reward will surely be great.

SISTER EMMA.

HUBBARD, Ohio.

Dear Sisters:—As there are no Saints in this place besides our family I feel impressed to write you a few lines. We are still contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints. I am often cheered by the letters from the sisters, also the instructions received through our dear Home Column in regard to the training of our children. Would that every sister could realize the benefit it has been to me.

I loan my papers and books to the people here. They seem pleased to read them. I gave "With the Church in an Early Day" to the Baptist preacher of this place, but have not had opportunity of talking with him since.

We attended the Sunday school picnic at Youngstown last Saturday and had a joyous happy time, also had the pleasure of meeting two sisters of the household of faith. Enjoyed Sabbath school and preaching service on Sabbath and our hearts were thrilled with gratitude for the blessed, comforting assurance of God's Holy Spirit. Trusting my feeble effort may cheer any of our dear sisters who may be isolated from the Saints I am,

Your sister in bonds,

FANNIE E. RICHARDSON.

DR. PARKHURST ON CHILD TRAINING.

HE CLAIMS THAT IT IS ETHICAL RATHER THAN INTELLECTUAL.

CHILD training is, in the first instance, ethical rather than intellectual, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in the August Ladies' Home Journal. No one will ask to have this point argued who considers that the child is to be educated for the purpose of his own personal enhancement and not for the purpose of making him an expert or a sharper. It is a great deal easier to make people bright than it is to make them sound. Mentality is an easy art as compared with morality. There is a good deal to be said about intellectual discipline when we get to that point; but it is still true that the issues of life are out of the heart and not out of the brain. The brain can be taught from books, but morality is not a thing that can be printed. There are, it is true, books that are published on ethics, but few read them and probably nobody practices them. The old Hebrews were deluged with moral precepts, some of them written by God's own hand; but even the first generation that had the Ten Commandments had to be killed off before the Promised Land could be entered.

I am not going to underrate the value and importance of mental schooling for the children; but it needs to be said that unless a man has a pure and honest heart, the less he knows the better it will be for him and for all concerned. And it needs, also, to be said that even trustworthiness of intellectual action waits on personal soundness. Sound brain and an unsound life are incompatible. Even if our object were only to secure the finest and fullest intellectual development, we should still aim, first of all, to secure a foundation of personal integrity for the scions of wisdom to root and vegetate in. It is something as it is with the planting of an astronomical observatory; however fine its equipment and whatever the power of its lenses, we depend, first of all, upon the solidity with which the observatory is planted.

Letter Department.

TEMPLE, Ohio, Aug. 5.

Editors Herald:—In your last issue you say that "Bro. Isaac M. Smith has located his family in Kirtland, Ohio." This is incorrect; Kirtland is my present headquarters, and "Temple, Lake County, Ohio," is my permanent field address all right enough, so far as the present is concerned, but that is all.

On July 26 the last good-bye to Saints and friends of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district was said, and, with feelings of sadness, I took the train for my new field of labor, to meet with new faces, form new associations, see new sights, but to tell the same old, old story of the cross. The past three years I have labored in the above-named district. How faithfully, how well, or how effectively is not for me to say; but I can say this: the Saints, in that district by their many acts of kindness have endeared themselves to me in such manner as to make thoughts of a long separation, thoughts of sadness indeed. Many times I have been disheartened, had the blues, and felt that I was doing comparatively nothing to advance the cause of the Master; but when my children in the gospel, some of whom are quite old and their hair graying fast, came to me with tears in their eyes and thanked me for bringing them the gospel saying, at the same time, they were better satisfied and happier than ever before in their lives, I felt to thank God that I had been the means, in his hands, of making even a few happy in the hope of life.

I feel an anxiety for the work there even if my labors are to be elsewhere. Many of the older branches are able to stand alone, and take care of themselves; but not so with the younger members of the household. At South Scott I baptized two (Bro. Charley Kissinger and his faithful companion) not quite one year ago. These two with Bro. Jacob Petre, who was baptized in Oregon by Bro. Hiram Holt, were the only Saints there when the great (?) debater, Clark Braden, undertook to demolish "Mormonism" but was so completely defeated by Bro. Scott. Since then I have baptized eighteen more there, making twenty-one in all. They are noble Saints, too, and, although they are not organized into a branch, they hold their prayer meetings and, I suppose, they now have a Bible class organized too and are moving right along in the work. May God bless them, and send some one to feed them the true "bread of life."

Chester, Michigan, is another place that needs labor in the near future. Two ladies told me when I left there four weeks ago that they aim to be baptized the next time one of our elders goes there. But it is useless to mention places that need work, for they are too numerous. Bro. Scott is well liked by Saints and friends, but he has more work on hand than four men could do, even if they were all strong and healthy. He needs help, and needs it badly. But where is it to come from?

My present field is all new to me, but I fancy I shall like it quite well when I get acquainted. I find the same drawback here—lack of laborers—that exists everywhere I have been. What a change in the last few years! No trouble now to get places to preach—places, too, where the gospel has never been preached. True we are not, as a rule permitted to occupy the popular churches, but the Lord seems to be opening up the minds and hearts of the people to that extent that they consider they have a right to hear and think for themselves.

I expect to leave here this week and make my way towards Goose Creek, West Virginia, with the intention of attending the reunion there, beginning August 22. After that I hope to be able to attend the reunion at Limerick, Ohio, beginning August 29. And then—I know not where.

With kindest regards and best wishes I remain as ever,

Yours in hope,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

CASE OF HEALING.

This is to certify that I, Charles Cline, was for over a year sorely afflicted and suffered great inconvenience from hernia or rupture, and for eight months preceding the twenty-second day of October, 1894, I was entirely prostrate, forced to lie upon my back continually. On the date above given I was administered to, by an elder in the Latter Day Saints Church, in harmony with James 5:15 and was immediately healed, and arose from my bed the next morning and have been well ever since. I certainly can say, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

CHARLES CLINE.

VIRGIL CITY, Missouri, February 23, 1895.

I, Mrs. Polly Cline, mother of said Charles Cline, attest the above statement of my son as being true. I had despaired of his life because I could find no relief for my boy either from medical skill or from the usual trusses used in such cases. In the eight months he was lying in bed he became very much emaciated indeed, hence I was alarmed as to his ever walking again, but I am now rejoicing in the goodness of God to me and mine in this miraculous healing. Praise his holy name.

POLLY A. CLINE.

February 23, 1895.

To all whom this may concern:—I do this day certify that I was employed to treat Charles Cline of this town and found him suffering from rupture of both right and left groin, known as inguinal hernia, and that he was confined to his bed for eight months, lying on his back with legs flexed or drawn up, and every attempt to sit up or walk on his part caused the bowels to protrude, or drop down, causing great pain; and that I was employed to furnish truss for him, and that I ordered two separate trusses from Woodard and Faxon, druggists, at Kansas City, Missouri, for him, and they did him no good, and I considered his case very bad indeed and hard to keep the bowel back with trusses, as they produced great pain.

And furthermore, he is now to all appearance well, hearty, and at work, and got up very suddenly without the use of medicine or trusses. As to the means employed by the Latter Day Saints, I confess I know nothing, but that the cure was sudden is a fact and also a marvel to me.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 4.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you last have continued in this metropolis with some interest. Several are convinced, but it being winter they don't seem to enjoy the thought of so cold a burial, and as they approach their remissional grave, they shrink back. Though this is quite appropriate to the figure, yet they are surely not made of the stuff martyrs are composed of; and besides, they don't know what really "cold" water is. Not to be too hard, will allow that probably the Australian winter is just as cold to an acclimatized Australian, as the North American winter is to an American. When mention is made of baptisms in Canada where a door must be cut in several feet of ice, they point out that the water under ice in Canada is not so cold as the weather. Perhaps our Canadian baptizers can tell.

Besides missionary work, have been engaged in local matters, in branch and school, which under the functions of district president seems unavoidable. Prayer meetings are too large for private houses, and another hall is being sought where all meetings can be held. The Austral school is getting on its feet with an attendance of forty. It has joined the association and adopted the Quarterlies.

Catholics and Protestants are having a passage at arms. As the battle proceeds from pulpit and press, one can sniff the burnt powder of denominational pride. Cardinal Moran, the Australian head of the Catholic Church, lately delivered a lecture (a report of which was forwarded to you) and the next Sunday fifteen pulpits in Sydney answered, while correspondence pours into the newspapers. The Church of Rome claimed to be the only truly "catholic" body. The Anglican pulpit says no, "we are catholic;" while many-voiced sectarians expose such "exclusiveness," and claim that the great invisible body (believers in Christ in all churches) is the only true "catholic" church. The Cardinal asserts that Protest-ant's foreign missions are a failure; while the latter deny it and bring up "statistics" to prove Catholic missions a failure. The Cardinal replies with more "statistics," and adds to it the allegation that the self-sacrificing (?) missionary of Protestantism in the Pacific Island mission often engages in commercial pursuits, thereby piling up a fortune ("not always honestly") and returning to spend the autumn of life among admiring and sympathizing friends at home. The Cardinal had read that the missionary bark, John Williams, working under the London Missionary Society, sailed from Sydney some years ago (1880) with a "spiritual cargo" consisting of one hundred and ninety casks of alcoholic liquor. This latter turns out to be a mistake, as the statement was due to a printer's error, corrected in a later issue; but which the Cardinal, in his zeal to get damaging testimony, overlooked. This would not be worth mentioning only for the fact that it gave opportunity for pot to call kettle black. Coming with the correction are statements of those who "know" that as far as engaging in commercial pursuits in connection with missionary labor is concerned, the priests of Rome in those same fields are not a whit behind; that on several islands Roman Catholic missionaries own lucrative plantations and obtain their labor at very cheap rates.

As to the "spiritual" aspect of these missions, an "Island Trader" declares in to-day's paper as follows: "If the Cardinal wishes it, I can obtain him particulars of spiritual comfort delivered to the order of his church missions, and to prove my assertion I do not need to go back to 1880, neither do I include sacramental wine. It is a well-established fact in the South Seas that the reverend fathers keep the best choice of liquors, both as regards quantity and quality. I do not blame them, as I have on more than one occasion had the opportunity, at their invitation, of judging as to their epicurean tastes."

It is said that often one has to go away from home to hear the news. It is possible our own missionaries in the South Seas do not get this news, as the avenues of such facts may open up more favorably in this, one of their trade and supply ports. As they are on the ground, perhaps they can give better testimony than this, or perhaps they have been so occupied in their own work that they had no time for observation. If so, we will not worry over the lost opportunity for corroborating the above. Be that as it may, it can be hoped without hesitation that our missions will so labor that these charges and disclosures will never fall on us and our mission bark, the Evanelia.

Through the kindness of Sr. Nakuina, while at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, our Australian party was treated to a trip on horseback up to the "Pali," a historical mountain pass some four to six miles above the city. Standing here where cold winds blew a gale we could see the blue ocean on either side of the island. On the opposite side from Honolulu a plantation was pointed out to us, the property of the Utah Mormon mission in that island. We were informed that the missionaries of that church spent more time in the business connected with this plantation than in preaching the gospel.

I am well aware that the divinity of a religious institution does not depend on the conduct of individuals in it, only so far as that conduct is the legitimate fruit of the principles held by it. The superior test is in a comparison with the standard of truth and organization given us from the Founder; and while other religious bodies of the world are seeking to disprove each other's claim by exposing private conduct, or exulting in the fact of superior numbers, wealth, and learning, making it the supreme test, we can afford to be an exception and preach the word, "the law of the Spirit of life," applying to them (and ourselves too) the proper test aforesaid; hence the above items are given only as incidentals.

I shall be off for New Castle within a fortnight, where my active vice president resides, and where the district conference will convene in December—28 and 29.

AMERICAN ARCHÆOLOGY, ETC.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., August 2.

Editors Herald:—In answer to your question in your issue of 31st ult., "Can you assist them?" I believe as one of the many who are interested in the work of the committee on archæology of America that I can; but as to what means the committee already has on hand, I know nothing outside of the Book of Mormon account. Nevertheless, I will here suggest to the committee through the Herald that it adopt for the first part on its map of the travels of Lehi from Jerusalem to America, the route represented on a native picture record, called the Boturini chart; and, second or next, adopt the Gemelli chart, another native picture record for the route traveled by Nephi and his people from the land of Lehi to the land of Nephi; which also shows the route traveled by Mosiah and his people from the land of Nephi to the land of Zarahemla. And by the means of those two charts the committee can then locate the Jaredite country, provided it can read said charts.

Now those charts being in harmony in their outlines of travel with the Nephite record account of the travels of the people of Lehi and Nephi, of the Nephite record, by them can the city of Lehi, of Nephi, and the city of Zarahemla be located.

I suggest further that if it is convenient, for the committee to meet in person with those who have different views of the route and locations of cities, etc., of the Book of Mormon account of the ancestors of the American natives, as suggested in the notice of Elder F. M. Sheehy, and investigate the matter, it would be far more expedient and be also more satisfactory in results than by a correspondence, as it will be necessary to use several maps of modern date to help out the showing of those native ancient maps, in order to prove up the correctness of the Book of Mormon account of travels of those ancestors to America. Respectfully,

SIMON SMITH.

BLUE JACKET, I. T., Aug. 3.

Editors Herald:—We must have a tent. To the Saints in this Territory, Arouse, and don't stand by to see a few do it all, but take hold and help, thus making the burden lighter in that way, answering the urgent demands of your own country. The world must have the gospel, and unless we send it to them God will reject us and raise up a people who will sacrifice for the spread of his work. We must be up and doing while it is called "to-day," lest night overtake us and we have no oil in our lamps.

We have just received a letter from two missionaries here; one Bro. Montague, missionary in charge of the Southwest, saying they had utterly failed in getting a place to preach in, and to push the tent work; for without one the work in this part of the district is a failure. We want to have the tent ready for work by the 1st of September, so when you promise to give prepare at once to be ready to pay so there will be no delay. We will then have it to work with three months yet this fall.

We have about forty-five dollars subscribed now and if we could get about seventy dollars in money we could get it and be at work, for one brother promises to stand good for the rest until such time as it can be raised.

We would like to hear from Bro. John May and any others in regard to price, terms, etc., of tents.

Send all moneys, etc., to my address.

Your brother in the conflict,

A. C. HART,
Vinita, Indian Territory.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 5.

Editors Herald:—If those who write such doleful news about Fall River for the Herald would take advice of the apostle "to come and see," they would tell a different story next time. If the missionaries have forsaken Fall River the Spirit of the Lord has not. Three were baptized on Sunday, July 28, and others are near the door.

I will say in connection with Bro. Strain, that an observance of the law of tithing is a benefit and a blessing to all who observe it. I know whereof I testify.

Yours in the faith,

JOHN SMITH.

WEST CONCORD, Minn., Aug. 5.

Editors Herald:—The work is onward in this part of our mission. I baptized five here yesterday, making seven in all since the 30th of June; six of them heads of families, and four of them husbands and wives; and they are the very best citizens of this section of country and will give prestige to the work here. There was a good gathering at the water yesterday to witness the baptism—I should think about eighty, and a good feeling both at the water and at the confirmation. In fact, there is the best feeling that I have ever seen here. They have had two ice cream socials the last month and have given me eight dollars of the money raised, and I think that I can appreciate it from the fact that when I first came here several years ago a good old Presbyterian lady (I presume from the goodness of her heart) said I ought to be driven out of town because of that which she thought was "heresy." But I find that the world "do move" and that from the force of circumstances men are compelled to believe that which sixty-five years ago they thought was heresy.

It seems to me the more I defend the work the more I love it and the better it seems. I realize more than ever that it (the gospel) is being preached for a witness; for at times when the Spirit is resting upon me I feel to warn the people against rejecting the message we bear because it may be true and they will meet it at the day of judgment and will then know they have rejected the truth.

This is a busy time of the year in this State, as it is harvest time and everybody is at work, so we can't do much night preaching for a time yet, but will try and make up for lost time (if we have lost any) when harvest is over. Bro. John Gibbons is rejoicing because of those baptized yesterday; one was his sister and another her husband. He has reason to be glad, for he has stood alone here for years, with the exception of his own family, himself going seventy-five miles to be baptized; he being baptized by Bro. J. R. Lambert in 1875, I think, at Lake Crystal, Minnesota. I am feeling well in the work and expect to continue as long as strength is given me.

Yours for the right,

E. A. STEDMAN.

CROSWELL, Mich., August 5.

Editors Herald:—I rejoice in the great work of our Father, as restored by the hand of an angel in these last days; I feel my insufficiency at many times, but hope to so live that I may more nearly approximate the life and character of our blessed Master that when he shall appear I may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing; but in order for us to attain to this I feel it is needful to make some sacrifice in this life, and that we should always remember that the Savior has said the reward is at the end of the race. So press on, fellow laborers, in the work of the Master; for methinks if we are so faithful as to meet on the shores of sweet deliverance our little trials while here will look so small we will not care to mention them.

I arrived in the city of Detroit, May 31, by request of W. J. Smith. On June 7 we drew our new gospel tent from the depot to the corner of Scotton Avenue and Baker Street and raised and had it ready for conference the next day. On Sunday, the 9th, it was dedicated. The conference placed the writer in charge of tent, therefore I remained in the city several weeks in the interest of the Master's cause, in company with Brn. E. C. Briggs and W. J. Smith. I shall ever feel grateful to the Saints of Detroit for their hospitality and kindness to me, and above all for the new suit of clothes they bought me. May the good Lord bless them both in spiritual and in temporal things, is my earnest prayer.

On July 18 I took leave of the city to attend the two days' meetings as previously appointed. The first one, at Frenchtown, was hindered somewhat by rain. At Bell River the meeting was well attended and a good interest manifest. The one at Amadore on Saturday and Sunday last was a complete success. We were blessed in telling the gospel story. It was thought there was a thousand in attendance yesterday. Two were baptized and so the good work moves on. Elders Barr, Davis, Delong, and the writer have been the speakers thus far. After an absence of three and one half months I expect to arrive home in about one week.

The work is moving along fairly well in this district. Many calls for preaching come from north, south, east, and west. We are hopeful of the final triumph of our Father's work.

J. A. GRANT.

BAY MINETTE, Ala., Aug. 5.

Editors Herald:—I left home on June 25 to attend the Alabama district conference at Lone Star branch, Monroe County, Alabama, one hundred miles distant by private conveyance—horse and road cart. About forty miles from home in Escambia County, Alabama, I fell in with some families I had formerly known in Butler County, and among them two sisters in the church. They had removed here on account of so much open level government land that can be gotten very cheaply, they like the land much better than where they came from.

I began meetings on the 28th ult. at private houses, as there was no other we could get, and gave out meetings for Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. Our meetings were broken up Saturday night and Sunday on account of rain. On Sunday night some came through the rain. Quite an interest here; I left appointment for Sunday before fourth Sunday in August, and moved on.

Arrived at Mr. Frank Edeker's, on Brewer Creek, Conecuh County on July 2, and began preaching the 3d, was to have held meetings twice on the 4th, but rain prevented. On the 5th baptized Bro. Frank Edeker and Sr. Grace Dean. Prejudice runs very high in this neighborhood. I preached here upwards of eighteen years ago; Bro. Heman C. Smith organized a branch here about sixteen years ago; all moved away that lived here then.

Feeling that my work was done, at least for the present, I moved on to the conference which convened on the 6th. Bro. W. J. Booker, president of district, was on hand; others of the ministry were unable to get here on account of recent heavy rains. We had a very large turnout at the preaching services. The week following began meetings six miles below at a small church west of Wells' Mill, Conecuh County. Had full houses with good interest; many are believing. I preached here years ago, and Bro. Turpen held a debate here with Elder Love of the Christian Church, but little fruit of that and previous work has been seen as yet, although the church achieved a grand success. Bro. M. K. Harp has regular appointments here. We hope the wheat will be garnered in due time. It takes some people a long time to make up their minds what to do after they believe.

I moved on to a new point in Escambia County that Bro. Booker had arranged for. The first two days' meetings were poorly attended on account of rain and other meetings, and on Monday Bro. Booker was taken sick, and left for home on Tuesday. My meetings continued to increase in number and on Friday I baptized two, Brn. Joseph Odom and Lewis Morris and left others believing. I shall return here the fourth Saturday in August. I left here Saturday to meet my appointment at Hadley, the place I first visited on my way out; but within about eight miles of my destination my horse took fright and began running and kicking when I fell out unhurt and she went scot free through the open pine timber. Presently the cart struck a tree and tore all to pieces, one shaft hanging to the breeching. She kept it flying in the air with her heels. She took the road back about eight miles and I did not find her until a little before night, my harness scattered; some of it I could not find. She had on bridle and collar when found. So I failed to meet my appointment; but I met a young man from that settlement, sent word to them the reason I could not be there. I made my way home, about forty miles, for repairs and found all well. Will be out again in a few days.

We have our church about completed at Bay Minette. It would have cost about six hundred dollars if we had hired all the work done. We want to have it dedicated at conference which convenes here September 6. Expect Bishop Kelley or Hilliard to be with us.

I met with the Saints Saturday, August 3, at the new church and organized the Saints into a branch to be known as Bay Minette branch; also on Sunday morning, the 4th, organized a Sunday school. Have sent order to Herald Office for Sunday school supplies; have also ordered an organ for school. We have met with great opposition and persecution. We trust the Lord has a people here to be gathered out. Some persons are to meet me next Sunday to confer in relation to a discussion—Christians.

G. T. CHUTE.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—"Wiser in their generation," is the heading of an editorial in the Herald of July 31, written by the President of the Church, which I think should receive the approval of the church. The President is trying to carry out the will of the body. And he has always advocated a wise, intelligent obedience of the members of the church (and not a blind following); and as the church has said in conference assembled that we needed a college, and decided where it should be located, and appointed this committee, let not this appeal be in vain, but let those who can, respond in a substantial way, and put the necessary means in the hands of the committee, so the building can be erected and the school started in September, as contemplated by the board elected last spring.

It is for the general good of the whole church. Our young people need it, and let no one try to retard its progress, on account of the place of its location, or any other cause, but come forward and help in this good and much needed work. The Lord says:—

"It is not meet that I should command in all things, for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward. Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good, they shall in no wise lose their reward."—D. C 58: 6.

Now is the time to move in this enterprise, and start the college, and supply this want. It will be no great benefit to the people of Lamoni, more than others, for they will have to furnish cheap board and hold out every inducement possible, to make it a success. And while those out of the church are willing to help, let not those in the church withhold their means, and thereby defeat the work.

I do not want this to lessen the tithe and offering fund, but want those that can to help, for it is surely a good work.

The prospect for crops is good, and as stated in the article, "the hastening time has come;" and, let us move forward in every good work, as fast as we can, and let it not continue to be said, that the children of this world are wiser than the children of light. Working and praying for the advancement of the cause of truth, and the prosperity of Zion,

I am, as ever, hopeful,
G. H. HILLIARD.

HARP, Ala., August 2.

Editors Herald:—Bro. J. D. Erwin came here on the 22d and commenced meetings with good results; he preached eight times, baptized nine. He then went to a place called Lizard Lope, in Conecuh County, and preached twice and baptized four,—thirteen in all. We had a good meeting.

He left on the 30th to meet a Baptist preacher at Moss Point, Mississippi, to hold a debate with him. I pray that he may gain the victory and the honest in heart be added to the church. Bro. Erwin preaches the gospel so all can understand. He made many friends to the cause while he was with us.

In bonds,

MANCHESTER, Texas, Aug. 4.

Editors Herald:—We had a fine meeting, large attendance; everybody seemed to enjoy it. Prejudice is about gone in this country; I think everything bids fair to build up a fine branch here. Brn. John and A. B. Moore went from this place to Lydia, forty miles east, and held a meeting; baptized nine and organized a branch of about twenty-four. Those brethren are fine men and did some fine preaching while in this country. Pray for us.

THE WORD OF WISDOM.

ELDER G. H. HULMES.

I HEREBY present some thoughts relative to the "Word of Wisdom." In presenting them to your readers I do not wish to be understood as insisting upon others accepting them, but present that which I conceive to be true. Where the Lord has clearly defined his meaning, I believe in following it closely; where there is room for a difference of opinion, I believe in giving equal deference to the opinions of others, which we expect them to show to ours, where neither the law of God nor physical, moral, or statutory law intervenes. Where any of these oppose though an individual has the privilege, he has no real right so to teach or practice; therefore if I state anything contrary to any well-defined law, I hope to be corrected.

I do not think it advisable to add anything by way of restriction where the Lord has spoken. If it had been necessary to add more restrictions in advice or commandment he would have done or will do so. If the young ministry attempt to do so, being more or less inexperienced, they will likely err. If the middle aged or old do so, they are liable to be narrow or prejudiced and therefore unsafe to formulate laws to govern the lives of other people who have given up their own ways, not to be governed by other men's wills, but by God's law and advice, esteeming that greater liberty in fact than their own wills in government of their lives.

Because a man may be wise and blessed in his spiritual work is no reason why he may not be unwise outside of what the Lord has called him to do. Being blessed in one's ministry would not necessarily fit one to advise as to how to build a house or steer a ship; yet sometimes our members feel sadly worried if any of the ministry fail to perfectly accomplish something as far from what he is sent to do as those things would be. Some of our ablest ministers have been men who in practical affairs of life have made total failures. Peter was possibly a man of that kind. If he had not been, it is probable instead of making a poor living by fishing out of a little boat in the Sea of Galilee he would have been running a large fish market at Jerusalem or engaged in something equally profitable; but for all that God gave him the gospel to preach, and when he kept close to his mission he made a success of it, but aside from the work he had been given to do he was quite liable to err as Paul plainly proves he did.

The first paragraph of the "Word of Wisdom," to my mind, teaches total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors and tobacco in language so plain that there can be no two opinions regarding its meaning.

By the first part of paragraph second I understand all wholesome herbs and fruits are to be used with prudence and thanksgiving.

I don't understand the term "prudence" here to indicate that we should not eat what we deem necessary for our sustenance. According to our dictionaries the term "prudence" means "being careful of consequences." For instance, some herbs and fruits which are wholesome to some are injurious to others; or some can use them in certain forms but not in others; some can use them plentifully, while others find it necessary to eat them sparingly. All should study their own needs, using care and prudence.

The term, "every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof," is a further application of the necessity for prudence in seeing that they are developed and ripe enough to use without evil consequences. For instance, we often know of people being sick and dying through eating fruit before it is ripe enough to eat, having "cholera morbus" and other ailments from this cause. Again, we find, and especially of late has it been published that much of the sickness of our large cities results from eating decayed fruit.

I decline to accept the theory that preserved fruits should not be used because out of season. Such a construction, to my mind, involves an absurdity; and I decline accepting any interpretation of Scripture or anything else that involves absurdities. By such a view we would throw back into the face of Providence a large part of his precious gifts unused. The preserves, jellies, and jams that cheer the homes of civilization and make more endurable the long hours of many an invalid would have to be left on the ground in the shape of decaying fruit instead of being used for the good of man in their preserved forms. By insisting upon such an application we could not use raisins, currants, winter apples, peaches, or dried fruit of any kind; in fact some extremists may insist upon the non-use of vegetables such as potatoes, turnips, and cabbage, out of their growing season.

It seems to me that the beautiful gospel of Christ is too precious to be handicapped or marred in its progress with any human fallacies or fancies being attached to it. The more the enemy of our progress can get us to add of human invention to God's requirements, the more he can hinder the progress of the work of redemption for which Christ died; indeed, being a skillful strategist, the enemy will often accomplish more in that way from within than he can from without by other means. It is our duty to zealously see to it that no man add to or take from that which God has given to govern our lives, by insisting upon strictures that God has not placed there.

Men even in the ministry in the days of Paul were constantly tempted to add here a restriction and there a burden born purely of their own notions, until at last Paul arose in his indignation and said,

For why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?—1 Cor. 10: 29.

Again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly.

Some insist that this means tea and coffee, I have no objections to anyone assuming such a belief who wants to, but I do object to anyone trying to force it upon others, or in any manner throwing discredit upon those who use these things as being weak in the faith or in some way being morally lacking. I understand that when the "Word of Wisdom" was given tea and coffee were in general use among the Saints and of course were included in the reference to "hot drinks," tea and coffee therefore being generally drunk hot were of course referred to, not as tea and coffee, however, but as to temperature. The Lord knew that other drinks had and would be invented; for instance, hot chocolate, hot cocoa, hot milk, hot water, and many other hot drinks, and instructed accordingly that hot drinks are not good. Do we think the Lord made a mistake or an oversight in not mentioning tea and coffee? Is it not more reasonable to assume that he said what he meant and meant what he said? Personally, I do not think tea is fit to be used as an article of food or drink; and, pure coffee is hard to get, and most people will lose nothing by avoiding both, and will likely gain much.

Some one may say of these things, both or one of them, "Why did the Lord not explicitly warn by naming them?" I don't know, neither do I know why he did not mention opium and other increasing evils, as the Lord intended the work to continue and become universal. I presume he will if he deems it necessary. Another reason, perhaps, is because he leaves man in many things to the exercise of his own judgment.

It would seem from all I can learn that it was only after earnest solicitation upon the part of the Saints for the Lord to reveal that which multitudes of other people before and since have learned by a simple application of good common sense that the Word of Wisdom was given. I am glad indeed it was given, because instead of being left to the slower methods of individual application of wisdom learned by experience, it will lead to the growing Church of Christ in its gathering hosts becoming a unit in following its beneficent teachings, leading thereby to more rapid results in the church's great mission; yet God in his infinite wisdom did not give it by command or by constraint, but as advice and, adapted [it] to the capacity of the weak and the weakest of all Saints, who are or can be called Saints.

This statement in the preface to the "Word of Wisdom" to me seems another good reason why the Lord did not add more than is written there. It is evident that he did not deem more necessary at the time, or it would be there. There have been and doubtless will be thousands of good people who have observed the "Word of Wisdom" as it reads, to whom the words "tea and coffee" would have been the obstacle that might, added to other obstacles, have prevented the good seed from taking root in their hearts and have helped to prevent their enlistment under the banner of Christ, which they happily have successfully followed to a great reward.

It will be that when God speaks, even in advice, true loyalty will obey as willingly as if by command.

When I notice some of the attempted additions to the "Word of Wisdom" I fear that even yet there are some who almost require that a code of carnal commandments shall be added to the gospel as a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ.

Let us here consider the following:—

Yea, flesh, also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving.

I refuse to accept the idea of some that its use makes men ignoble and lascivious, or has such tendencies. If there were nothing else written but this "Word of Wisdom" it alone would cause me to decline to accept the idea that God would ordain that which is degrading and of a lascivious tendency upon those who use that which he has ordained for their use. Has God made such a mistake as that? Never!

Another reason I have for not so believing is that those nations who by nature and environments recognize and practice if not in belief the fact that the "beasts of the field" are "ordained for the use of man," stand at the head of the nations of the earth to-day mentally and physically, while those nations whose teeming millions either by compulsion or choice live principally upon a vegetable diet, as in the principal parts of Italy, Persia, China, India, and many other countries where the food nature has ordained for their use is largely denied them, instead of higher development, at least morally and mentally, are much lower, and in some instances where they have the advantages of modern civilization their animal tendencies are, if any different, of a lower rather than a higher order.

In Romans 14: 1-4, 12 we read as follows:—

Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations. For one believeth that he may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs. Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him which eateth not, judge him that eateth: for God hath received him. Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way. I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, that there is nothing unclean of itself: but to him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean. But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died. Let not then your good be evil spoken of: for the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men. Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another.

I have no fault to find with anything God has advised or commanded; I am willing to abide by it; but I decline to accept and abide by every construction men may place upon it.

We will here consider the next phrase in the second paragraph of the "Word of Wisdom":—

Nevertheless [not less true and to be observed, dictionary], they are to be used sparingly.

From the facts stated in the forepart of this paragraph that these things are "ordained for the use of man," I prefer to accept the definition of this word, given by Webster, as follows:—

Not abundantly, abstinently, moderately.

I am informed that many of the people of the church at the time this was given were great meat eaters, many of them making it almost their exclusive diet, and in view of this and other things they asked for instruction and because they desired it this "Word of Wisdom" was given them by way of advice from the Lord.

The advice continues in the second paragraph,

And it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter, or of cold or famine.

Why in winter? Because the human system needs it and it was "ordained for the use of man." Why in times of cold? For the same reason as in winter; the system needs it.

There often is raw, cold weather in summer and we are carefully instructed as to its moderate use under those conditions. Why in times of famine? Evidently because of the scarcity of other food. Later in the second paragraph we find wild fowl and animals referred to with this statement,

These hath God made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger.

Of hunger, the dictionary thus states:—

That which is beyond the common measure.

It is evidently distinct from conditions of famine, and it seems to me may safely be a time when any other meat proper to eat at all may safely be eaten.

There may be times and circumstances, even in warm weather, when individuals may be in a condition of excessive or unusual hunger and craving for meat. Nature is asserting itself and demands that which God has ordained for the use of man when required by his system. The meat is taken and the general avoidance of the use thereof only under the conditions stated continues until the cold weather comes, when nature again asserts its demands.

We often knew instances where for reasons unnecessary to here explain persons through loss of appetite or other reasons craved meat in summer and had it been withheld the results would have been disastrous. More than one case of this kind has come under my own limited experience. This is only one phase of what may be termed excessive or unusual hunger.

Why, it may be asked, is it advised not to use meat in summer when God has ordained it for the use of man? I would think, among other possible reasons, because it is heating to the blood, and in summer the system requires less heat instead of more. Also because the blood of animals is liable to be overheated and filled with distempers to which all animal life is more susceptible in hot weather; also to avoid the unnecessary slaying of animals when all nature is so pleasant to them and is providing food so plentifully for man and beast. Conditions of famine do not apply only to countries, cities, and communities; they often exist in families when abundance surrounds them. Sometimes it is from lack of money to obtain the necessaries of life in their varied forms. Sometimes it is from inability on the part of those doing the buying and cooking to utilize different methods of preparing vegetables without meat. I often think that some daughter or daughters of Zion will do a grand work for the church and its fast increasing membership who will begin the publishing in book form or in the Herald of every possible way of preparing soups and broths, and palatable and satisfying foods prepared without the use of meats.

Some one will say, Why make so much ado about the stomach and its wants? For similar reasons that we satisfy the ear with music and beautiful sounds, and the eyes with pleasing colors and scenes, because they are all a part of God's arrangement for man; and a failure on the part of man to follow where God in nature has indicated he ought to follow is a transgression against the wise arrangements of God in nature, against which nature in some form rebels sooner or later.

With most of people it is so easy to prepare a palatable meal with meat, also broths, soups, and varieties of dishes and is so hard without meat, that in carrying out more fully the "Word of Wisdom" every advantage in preparation of vegetable foods ought to be placed in possession of our people. We are advised indirectly to excel in all right things, and directly advised to seek knowledge from every source whence it may be obtained. The true way in everything is evidently the best way.

Consider the efficient housekeeper; with a little in her possession a table is soon spread fit for a king. She knows just what to buy, how much of each, and just what to do with it. When she has it her food is prepared with skill; the bread is light and wholesome, and not one particle of God's food gifts to man has been spoiled, but, on the contrary, has been utilized to the best advantage; and, strange to relate, she who has prepared this pleasant meal is bright and cheerful, clean and fresh, with her tasks well done, with infinitely less labor than another who did not know how and who has expended upon a meal plenty of inefficient labor that has produced soggy potatoes, heavy bread, and everything the most commonplace and poorly prepared. What worry and waste! She knows it is not right, and knows every one else knows it. She becomes heated and fretful and wearied with her task.

A good workman or workwoman takes pride in his or her work. The moment we take pride in anything it becomes comparatively a pleasure to us, hence we become cheerful and efficient and are able with pleasure and profit to follow the words of holy writ, Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.

To return to the "Word of Wisdom" and the point of view from which I have been able to look at it for many years, it has been of inestimable value to me—a pearl of great price indeed, for which I expect ever to be grateful.

"DID THEY SPEAK IN TONGUES?"

THE record of that wonderful event and the manifestation of the power of God made on the day of Pentecost as found recorded in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, does good service to Bible students in that it not only gives a history of what took place on that memorable day, but furnishes a key by which we may be better able to understand other very important scripture. Were the term proper we would call the history given in Acts a very meager one; but there being no other, we receive it with gratitude and feel thankful that it contains so much that helps to make the chain of evidence such that by taking it in connection with other passages of the New Testament we are better able to judge what was intended by our Savior in the commission he gave to his apostles as found in Mark 16: 15-18.

In verse 17 he says:—

And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues, etc.—(See Acts 2: 6-8.)

The modern method of interpretation furnished by many of our popular preachers as a sedative for inquiring minds is that speaking with new tongues is simply turning from cursing, swearing, lying, and blasphemy to praising God by prayer, etc. The ancients did not so understand it; neither did the Reformers. If we are to accept the Bible as the standard of evidence let it be its own interpreter so far as possible.

The words of our Lord referred to above were among the last utterances just before his ascension into heaven. He had forbidden their going into all the world until they should be endowed with power from on high. He had made promises of the Holy Ghost, "another Comforter," "The Spirit of truth," "The promise of the Father," etc., etc., as found in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth chapters of St. John. All have reference to the same thing. It was but natural that the apostles should expect some super-human power, something extraordinary, from the very nature of the promise made; for in Acts 1: 8 we read,

But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

They had seen the blind made to see, the lame to walk, the leprosy removed, the dead raised to life again. They had seen that even devils were made subject to them (the apostles) by virtue of the authority they had received from him. They had declared their allegiance to him; they had communed with him from time to time for forty days after his resurrection; yet all this experience is insufficient for the work intrusted to them. In the fourth verse of this same chapter we read:—

And being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which saith he, ye have heard of me.

In this same chapter we are told that after our Lord was taken into heaven the apostles returned to Jerusalem and continued with one accord in prayer and supplication with a number of other brethren and sisters, making an aggregate of one hundred and twenty brethren. In anticipation of the fulfillment of this extraordinary promise they waited until the day of Pentecost, the very day that must have been in view by the prophetic eye of their ascending Messiah. The time was propitious—the coming together of so many "devout men out every nation under heaven." There never was a time better calculated for an infallible demonstration of the power of God with results calculated to make rapid growth in the apostolic church. There being devout (God-fearing) men from or out of every nation under heaven, their conversion would be the means of the gospel story being carried widespread in a few weeks that the true Messiah had come and been rejected of the Jews, crucified by the Gentiles (or Roman soldiers), had been resurrected by the power of God, and ascended to heaven invested with all power in heaven and on earth.

The historian further says:—

And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.—Acts 2: 2-4.

Are we to understand that these apostles and all of these assembled in solemn conclave with them simply changed their manner of conversation with one another, or are we to accept the word as written?

The following verse of this same chapter says:—

Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. And they were all amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

I have given these quotations in full for the benefit of those who may not have a Bible near or whom some other cause may prevent reading these verses. Now I think it quite obvious why it was "noised abroad," and why they were "all amazed and marveled," why they said, "Are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born." It was the miraculous power of God; it was the fulfillment of the glorious promise that Christ had made to them as recorded in Mark 16:17: "They shall speak with new tongues." The devout Jews out of every nation under heaven could now testify of a truth that the Galileans were possessed of a superhuman power, not only superhuman, but "the power of God unto salvation;" for they were converted and baptized into Christ's kingdom.

Some may think this the only time the Lord ever condescended to bless with the extraordinary gift—the gift of tongues. To disabuse your mind of this error and to show you that it was had among the Christians right along during Paul's ministry, you will please turn to Acts 8: 46. Here Luke tells us that the Holy Ghost fell upon those that heard Peter (although they were Gentiles) and they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God. Again in Acts 19:6, narrating Paul's labors among the Ephesians and of their baptism, it says that when Paul had "laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied."

Other citations could be given and considerable history to defend the position, as John Wesley puts it in his sermon on "the more excellent way":—

When in the preceding verses St. Paul had been speaking of the extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost, such as healing the sick, prophesying in the proper sense of the term—that is, foretelling things to come; speaking with strange tongues, such as the speaker had never learned, and the miraculous interpretation of tongues, etc.

We trust, dear reader, that you will appreciate every promise made by Christ whether you be saint or sinner. This gift of tongues has been tested to the satisfaction of the writer that it does exist to-day. While this may be classed as the least of gifts unless an interpretation be given, yet it is God's doings.

Sunday School Associations.

FAR WEST.

Association convened at Stewartville, Missouri, July 5, 1895, at ten a. m.; Superintendent, D. J. Krahl, in the chair, L. Niedorp secretary. Nine schools reported for the past four months. Scholars enrolled 465. Average attendance 330. Superintendents of different schools reported. Committee on program expended $1. Treasurer's report: On hand $4.40. Address by J. M. Terry was very instructive. Best method of teaching: Senior grade by G. J. Whitehead. The remainder of questions from the question box from the previous convention were taken up, which were very interesting. On Saturday evening the Stewartville Sabbath school gave a very interesting entertainment. It was the best one ever witnessed in the district; a tableau, entitled, "The angel of light," was enjoyed. The Kinnaman quartet gave us some choice pieces. The church was crowded. Adjourned to meet with the Kingston Sunday school on October 4.

NAUVOO, DECATUR, EASTERN IOWA, AND DES MOINES DISTRICTS, AND NORTHERN ILLINOIS REUNION.

The reunion of these districts will be held across the river from Nauvoo at Montrose, Iowa, September 6 to 16, 1895. The beautiful Bluff Park, dotted over with handsome rustic cottages, almost hidden in the dense shade of trees of nature's own planting, has been secured for this reunion. A large shingle-covered tabernacle, well seated with regular church seats with capacity of 500 persons, will be used. Cisterns near at hand, an artesian well, and a living spring will supply the water. A grand view of the city of Nauvoo on the opposite side of the Mississippi River, and a beautiful scene of twelve miles up the river and half that distance down stream is to be had from the bluff.

Furnished cottages on the ground to rent at from $1.50 to $4.00 per week, according to size and furnishing. These are nicely painted and commodious, safe in rain or storm. So no tents are needed; but if any prefer to bring tents and use them there is ample room, free of charge. Pine wood delivered at the rate of $1.25 per cord.

The Montrose grocers are gentlemen and will sell to campers at usual retail rates and deliver goods at the cottages. Mr. James Cassidy has the exclusive right and will transfer passengers to the grounds for fifteen cents and baggage at proportionate rates. Where ten or more in number at one time wish to go over to Nauvoo, he will pay ferrage and convey them to the various points of interest and return to the park for thirty-five cents, or will leave you in the city in the morning and return for you in the evening, thus giving you a whole day in the "city of beauty"—if you wish to use that much time.

Now is your time to visit this historic spot. And at no time in the past would you have been so heartily welcomed as now. The reunion would have been held there but the offer came too late after we had accepted the Montrose offer. Come and see how the Lord has fulfilled his promise, "I will get them honor where they have been put to shame." You can see from the park over to the spot where lie buried the patriarch and the prophet and his sainted consort in unmarked but not forgotten graves. The old Mansion, Nauvoo House, and Temple site are also in plain view. This reunion presents an opportunity to visit these historic places, enjoy the society of brethren and sisters, the preaching of the word, and the blessings of the Spirit of God, seldom equaled and never excelled.

Montrose is on the bank of the Mississippi River and is a station on the St. L., K. & N. W. Railroad,—a branch of the C. B. & Q., and may be reached via Burlington, Ft. Madison, or Keokuk. Efforts are in motion for reduced rates. Trains will stop at the entrance to the park if the conductor is notified in time. Checked baggage must go the depot.

The usual program of daily and nightly meetings will be held. Good speakers will be in attendance and Sunday school work will receive due attention. So bring along the children and give them an outing and a season of instruction.

Those intending to come will please write Bro. D. Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, at once, and state what time you will start and what kind of a furnished cottage you want and he will see that you get the best to be had for the money. (Don't forget stamp for reply.) All are cordially invited. No admission fee is charged. Don't miss the reunion.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICE.

To Saints of the St. Louis, Missouri, District; Greeting:—Whereas, the finances are in a low condition, it is enjoined upon the Saints to do their duty in paying their tithes and offerings. That the poor may be supplied with the necessaries of life, the gospel preached, and the traveling ministry have their families taken care of, let the Saints observe the law of God as found in Doctrine and Covenants 42: 8: "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which can not be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me."

Again, Doctrine and Covenants 102: 2: "Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer."

Doctrine and Covenants 106: 2: "Verily I say unto you, it shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen."

Malachi 3:7, 8: "Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings."

Tenth verse: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Eleventh verse (now comes the blessing): "And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts."

Now, beloved Saints, let us keep the law of God, that when we shall stand before the great judge as recorded in Revelation 20:12 we may be able to say we have done our duty. May the blessings of God attend his people and assist them to observe (keep) God's law is the prayer of your humble brother in Christ.

Post office orders will reach me.

REUNION NOTICE.

The Spring River district reunion will be held in Camp Logan, Baxter Springs, Cherokee County, Kansas, commencing on Saturday, September 7, 1895, continuing over two Sundays, and closing on Monday, September 16, 1895. This location is central, high, clean, and healthy, and a place of great renown; first, historically, because of the inhuman butchery of one hundred and fifty odd Union men, by a gang of border outlaws; second, it being a health resort on account of the mineral spring; third, Camp Logan being the annual reunion grounds of the old soldiers and Sons of Veterans; and, fourth, the place of devastation by a furious cyclone Friday evening, July 5, 1895, wherein a number of people were killed and wounded, while four churches and other buildings were leveled to the ground. Camp Logan is located in a fine grove (under fence), and in the center stands a large and commodious amphitheatre. This has been secured for our reunion services, and is capable of seating all that will or may attend. We will also have access to a good well of water and a fine spring. No hitching of horses to the trees will be allowed. Saints, do not fail to come with your whole frame and mind filled with the Spirit of God to this reunion. Bring your neighbors and friends with you in well-covered wagons, together with tents, bedding (bring some extra bed supplies), stoves, eatables, etc., and let us have a time long to be remembered. (Elders who come will be provided for by the Saints.) Water, wood, and straw for beds, will be free. Pasture for stock three and one third cents a day per head, while hay and grain will be furnished at very reasonable rates, and day and week board the same, if wanted. Able and prominent speakers will be in attendance, hence we your committee make an appeal to all the Saints and friends of the Spring River district (all others are invited to attend) to be present on the first day of the reunion, and spend ten days with us and assist in making this our first effort (in said district) a grand and glorious success, that will give us prestige and power in a new field in years to follow. All those wishing tents provided on the grounds, will please advise the secretary, Elder J. C. Chrestensen, of Jasper City, Missouri, or for any other information regarding the reunion.

PITTSBURG AND KIRTLAND DISTRICT.

Circumstances having arisen which make it impracticable to hold the conference at Blake's Mills, Ohio, September 7 and 8, as appointed by conference last March, and on account of the absence of some of the ministry who are in attendance at reunions, it has been decided, upon consultation with the missionary in charge, Bro. W. H. Kelley, to postpone said conference until October 5 and 6, at which time it will be held at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. The choice of some one for recommendation to the Bishop to fill the office of Bishop's agent for this district, made vacant by the removal to Lamoni, Iowa, of our esteemed brother, Frank Criley, will have to be made, and it is greatly desired that each branch in the district shall be represented at this conference, so that a selection satisfactory so far as may be possible may be had. Send all reports, branch and ministerial, to the district secretary, Bro. E. S. Fairley, care Henry Sproull & Co., 78 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. W. H. GARRETT, Pres.

WHEELING, West Virginia, August 3, 1895.

REUNION MUSIC.

By request of the committee I have prepared a partial list of the hymns to be used at the Southwestern Iowa reunion to be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, September 12-22. We have omitted from the list the old and most familiar hymns, since they are all very generally sung. They will, however, be used at the meeting. All are aware that good music is one of the important factors that go to make up a good meeting; and to secure this all must be somewhat familiar with the same hymns. This is our reason for publishing a list of hymns to be used. Will not all examine the list and learn all the strange tunes? Bring your wind or string instruments to the meeting; all are needed. The first tune on the page and first number of words indicated with each tune is the one intended unless otherwise indicated. Page of Harmony: 397, 482 second, 179 H. 272, 242, 488, 306, 482 second, 208, 202 second, 239, 207, 450, 339, 483, 412, 231, 282 second, 522, 542, 415 H. 380, 338, 194, 372, 92 second, H. 137, 3, 16, 525, 462, 531, 117, 216, 396 second, 360, 6, 448, 102, 120, 165, 192, 222, 232 second, 294, H. 190, 295 second, H. 94, 402 second, 484, 488, 502, 62.

Yours for the good of the work,
T. A. HOUGAS.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Southern Indiana district will convene with Plainville branch in Daviess County, September 23. Will branch clerks please take note of this and make out reports according to previous resolution on blanks, and have date of approval to agree with the date for which reports are made out. There are branches named on the record which have not reported for some time. What is the matter, brethren? Why not report according to the law of the church? A motion prevailed at the June conference that branches send delegates to the September conference. Send your branch report to the undersigned in care of D. O. Stites, Plainville, Indiana. The ministry who do not expect to attend may send their reports accordingly. I think it would be well for our general missionary in charge to be present, as also Brother I. P. Baggerly.

M. R. SCOTT, JR., Dist. Sec.

Conference of the Nevada district will convene in the Fairview schoolhouse, October 6, at eleven a. m. Visiting brethren on the coast, try to give us a call on the occasion, together with all friends. All heartily welcomed.

T. R. HAWKINS, Pres.

NOTICES.

Will the Saints of the Fremont and Nodaway districts please take notice that our reunion, will be held in Council Bluffs, as published in the Herald and Ensign by Bro. T. W. Williams and the Committee. I wish to mention this, as there are some still inquiring where our reunion is to be held, this year. We hope all Saints and friends will take particular notice and attend as usual. Every preparation will be made for the comfort of all. Come all that can, and let us have a time not soon to be forgotten.

Yours in bonds,
HENRY KEMP.

The time for our mission reunion will soon be at hand. Our tabernacle tent for the occasion is ordered made, and will be ready early in September. The subscription is not yet sufficient, but we are trusting that a number more of "good hearts" will respond right away, and make up the deficiency. Who will it be? Those who have subscribed will please take notice and forward the amount subscribed not later than September 1, if possible. Don't fail in this! Make all remittances by post office or express orders.

Address, I. N. WHITE.

DIED.

YOUNG.—July 26, 1895, at the home of her son David, Sr. Martha Young, at the ripe age of 82 years, 8 months, and 22 days. She was born in Herkimer, New York, where she resided till after her marriage with D. P. Young in 1831. Joining the church in 1844, she passed through the trying vicissitudes incident to a nine years' sojourn in Utah, and eleven in California. She joined the Reorganization in the latter State and "was never too tired to wait on the elders who came that way." The last year or more of her life she suffered from a broken leg, it having never healed. That she was a good mother is attested by the six of the twelve children born unto her, yet alive; that she was a good Christian and esteemed neighbor was demonstrated by the large concourse of people both in and out of the church, who listened to the funeral sermon from Revelation 14: 13, by Elder J. W. Wight. Of her it may well be said: A "mother in Israel" has gone to her "rest."

COOK.—At Lamoni, Iowa, August 4, 1895, Bro. William Cook, aged 55 years, 2 months, and 25 days. He suffered severely for eleven days and then passed away quietly and as peacefully as one who simply goes to sleep, his last sleep, that which the Savior gives to his "beloved." He was born at Raleigh, Kent County, Ontario, Canada; married to Ellen Kelley, April 30, 1861; was baptized by Elder George Cleveland, September 15, 1862. He was the father of nine children; six sons and three daughters. Two of the sons preceded their father to the beyond. Funeral service at the Brick church, August 5, to a large audience; sermon by Elder R. M. Elvin, from John 11: 25, assisted by Elder James Whitehead. Interment in Rose Hill cemetery.

NEWMAN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, July 30, 1895, Sister Lovina Newman, aged 78 years, 1 month, and 3 days. She was born in Chautauqua County, New York, and married Stephen Newman in 1839. He died in Lamoni in 1883, since then her home has been with or near her daughter, Sr. Minnie Wickes. She was the mother of five daughters all of whom are living, and four were with her at the last, including Sr. Nellie Kennedy, of Logan, Iowa. Also three of her sisters were present at the funeral, one of them Sr. B. F. Wickes, of Deloit, Iowa. Sister Newman and the two daughters named accepted the gospel, and she was baptized August 23, 1868, by Elder Eli Clothier.

She remained faithful until death. Her life is also a happy memory to her daughters, as one who walked devotedly along the path of duty and who did her life work well. By her request Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached the funeral sermon, and her mortal form was laid to rest at Rose Hill. Bro. R. M. Elvin assisted in the services.

SNYDER.—Mrs. Carrie A. Snyder passed away on the 23d day of July, 1895, at St. Joseph, Missouri, aged 36 years, 8 months, 16 days. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn the loss of a dear wife and mother. She had heard the gospel and was favorably impressed but had not obeyed. A just God will do right by her. Elder J. T. Kinnaman, of Stewartville, Missouri, preached funeral sermon, assisted by R. Archibald and R. A. Marchant.

RICHARDS.—At Higbee, Missouri, July 21, 1895, Kate Eunice, daughter of Bro. W. J. and Mary A. Richards, aged 2 years, 7 months, and 21 days. She was born at Higbee, Missouri, and was blessed January 22, 1893, by D. F. Winn and W. H. Vincent at Higbee, Missouri. Funeral discourse was delivered by W. H. Vincent.

My little Eunice,—sweet and gay
As the birds that soar away,
Sweet was that little curly head
That death has snatched away.

PETERS.—At Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 19, 1895, Sr. Maggie Peters. She was born November 3, 1842, in Scotland; united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1865 in Utah, being baptized by Elder George Ross. She had gone to Council Bluffs to receive medical treatment, where she suddenly and unexpectedly passed away. She was buried from the family residence in Boomer and was followed by a large concourse of people to her last restingplace. She leaves a husband and eleven children to mourn her departure. Funeral sermon by Elder H. N. Hansen.

CAPEL.—Grace Leota, infant daughter of Thomas and Nellie Capel, was born June 28, 1895, and died July 20, 1895. Funeral services by T. W. Williams at the residence, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

SKANK.—At Henderson, Iowa, July 31, 1895, Henry Glenn, infant son of Bro. Robert, and Belle Skank, aged 9 months and 23 days. He was such a bright, intellectual little fellow, it was hard to give him up and say, "Thy will, O God, be done." May we all be prepared to meet him in the sweet by and by. Interment in the Henderson cemetery. Funeral sermon by Henry Kemp.

BLOD.—At Tacoma, Washington, July 31, 1895, the child of Bro. and Sr. Joseph Blod. Deceased was born October 5, 1892. Interment in the city cemetery. Funeral services by Brn. John Davis and N. C. Enge.

BAILEY.—Sr. Melvina Bailey was born May 13, 1861; baptized in 1881 at Goodland, Lapeer County, Michigan, by Elder John J. Bailey; died August 1, 1895. She leaves a mother and two children.

EDWARDS.—At Marion, Michigan, July 28, 1895, Bro. John Edwards, aged 86 years, 9 months, and 13 days. The funeral discourse was delivered by Elder A. Barr to a large congregation in the Methodist church.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

IN THE AWFUL DEPTHS OF SPACE.
LET us suppose that telegraph lines, instead of being merely confined to the earth, were extended throughout the length and depth of space. Let one wire stretch from the earth to the moon, another from the earth to the sun, another from the earth to the nearest bright star, another from the earth to a faint telescopic star, and finally let a wire be stretched all the way from the earth to one of the more distant stars. Let us now see what the very shortest time would be in which a message might be transmitted to each of these several destinations. First, with respect to the moon. Our satellite is, comparatively speaking, so near to us that but little more than a second would be required for a signal to travel thither from the earth. The sun is, however, many times farther away than the moon, and the time required for sending a message to the sun would be correspondingly longer. The sun is, indeed, so far that when the key had been pressed down and the electric wave had shot forth along the solar wire to pursue its route at that stupendous speed which would permit it to place a girdle seven times round this earth in a second, yet eight minutes would have to elapse ere the electric wave had passed from the earth to the sun. An answer sent back from the sun would require another eight minutes for the return journey, so that if there were no undue delay in the solar postoffice we might expect a reply within half an hour or so after the original message had been dispatched.

Telegraphing to the stars would, however, be a much more tedious matter. Take first the case of the very nearest of those twinkling points of light—namely: Alpha Centauri. The transmission of a telegraphic message to this distant sun would indeed tax the patience. The key is pressed down, the message bounds off on its journey; it wings its way along the wire with that velocity sufficient to carry it 180,000 miles in a single second of time. Even the nearest of the stars is, however, sunk into space to a distance so overwhelming that the time required for the journey is not a question of seconds, or of minutes, not of hours, not of days, not of weeks, nor even of months, for no less than four years would have to pass by before the electricity had accomplished this stupendous journey.

Alpha Centauri is, however, merely the nearest of these stars. We have yet to indicate the distance of those which are more remote. Look up tonight toward the heavens, and among the thousands of twinkling points which delight our eyes, there is many a one up there so far off that if, after the battle of Waterloo had been won in 1815, the Duke of Wellington had telegraphed the news to these stellar depths, the message would not yet have been received there, notwithstanding the fact that for eighty years it has been flashing along with that lightning velocity which would carry it seven times round the earth in the interval between two ticks of a clock.

There are stars farther still. Fortify your eyes with a telescope and direct it toward the sky. Over our heads there are thousands of stars so remote that if the news of the discovery of America by Columbus had been circulated far and wide through the universe, by the instrumentality of the telegraph, those thousands of stars to which I now refer are elevated into boundless space to altitudes so stupendous that the announcement would not yet have reached them.

And we have still one more step to take. Let us think of the telegraph wire that is supposed to run from the earth to one of those stars which are only known to us by the impressions they make on a photographic plate. It seems certain that many of these stars are so remote that if the glad tidings of the first Christmas at Bethlehem, 1894 years ago, had been disseminated through the universe by the swiftest electrical current ever known, yet these stars are so inconceivably remote that all the seconds which have elapsed in the 1894 years of our present era would not have sufficed for the journey.

But if any reader of these lines should entertain any misgivings as to the reality of these stellar distances, then there is one consideration which I specially commend to his notice.

Remember that space seems to us to be boundless, for our imagination can conceive no limits. There must, it would seem, be depths of space thousands of times, or indeed millions of times, greater than those of which I have spoken. We can conceive of no boundary; for even if that celestial vault of crystal existed which the ancients supposed, our imagination could pierce through it to the other side, and then in thought we could start afresh, and on and on indefinitely. And seeing that space seems to us to be indefinite, what wonder is it if the stars should lie at the distances I have named, or at distances millions of times greater still.—Sir Robert Ball, Astronomer.

ECONOMY IN FUNERALS.

WEALTHY people in the East are setting the example of inexpensive funerals. They are doing this in the interest of poor families who are really unable to meet the extraordinary expense involved in what has come to be the conventional interment. It costs a great deal to die and be buried these days. The undertakers are not responsible for the sentiment or "fashion" that prevails. Many people are reluctant to bury their dead simply and unostentatiously lest they be charged by their neighbors with showing lack of respect for the deceased. Hence, they go to all sorts of extravagance which they cannot afford, and incur obligations which they are able to meet only at considerable personal sacrifice. The reform inaugurated should become general. A plain coffin and a simple, private ceremonial should be sufficient, except, perhaps, in cases where the dead man or woman was a person of such public eminence as to make a demonstration fitting. As it is, families having loved ones to lay away in the earth are put to a charge of from $150 to $500 under the notion that such expenditure is required by some social rule. Nothing could be wider of the mark. Society asks nothing of the kind. The simpler the ceremonial the better. It is supposed that in the burial the body is to resolve into the original elements, and hence it is folly to incase it in a costly casket, which merely interrupts the process of nature. It is for the rich to change the order. If they will take the lead in the matter of cheap interments the poor will follow, and many a family will be saved the suffering consequent upon the absurd effort to bury their dead in the expensive style of their more affluent neighbors — Memphis Commercial Appeal.

A MONK PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO SCIENTISTS.

THE banquet given to M. Berthelot in Paris, and the speeches made thereat, one of which—that of M. Zola—we recently quoted in THE LITERARY DIGEST, have stirred the French religious world deeply, and its members are hastening to the defense of religion, against what they regard as the attacks made upon it by irreligious scientists, as ages ago the chivalry of Europe flocked to the defense of the Holy Sepulcher. In the journal La Croix [The Cross], a contributor who signs himself Le Moine [The Monk] comments on the affair as follows:—

“Science is good just as language is a useful gift; but it does not follow that science, like speech, may not often be employed badly.

“The two thieves saw the sufferings of Jesus and knew his divine patience; the penitent one made good use of this knowledge, prayed, and was saved that very hour; the bad thief made bad use of his lesson, blasphemed, and was damned with his knowledge and his speech.

“We have therefore the best right to repeat that science, even that acquired by a Berthelot, who cannot see beyond his crucibles, is a benefit to humanity, and to affirm that even the discovery of explosives is a boon, although those who are wise in their own conceit find in crucibles the secret of damnation, and in explosives a means of shattering this poor world.

“Science leads true savants to the Creator; for, according to the words of Pasteur, ‘An invincible force impels the human mind to ask what is beyond the starry vault;’ the more one advances the more one thirsts to know and the more one admires the divine Architect.

“Increase of knowledge in the human intellect elevates it instead of lowering it and holding it down, as happens to those who fall into the muck of materialism. A ladder remains a useful implement, although many people, in place of using it to climb to the summit, make of it the means of a lamentable fall.

“Every discovery accorded to our researches has its useful side, it is a good in itself, and if we do not know how to find this good side, that is our disadvantage. Let us keep on studying; we shall find it, as we have already found it for dynamite and for divers poisons that are in use as remedies.

“M. Berthelot and his crowd pretend that science ought to pull the chariot backward; now this manner of harnessing up progress proves nothing against progress but against the coachmen.

“We do not complain, then, of the ‘evils, of progress,’ but of the stupidities of the materialists.

“For the Church, iron is a valuable thing so long as poniards are not made of it.

“Let us leave M. Berthelot and some other great savants to roo; and search under the oaks; what matter if they do grovel so long as the poor world, by their aid, gets good truffles to eat!” — Translated for Literary Digest.

RECENT DISCOVERIES.

It was only the other day, in a rock-hewn tomb down in Southern Mexico, that there was found a bronze and hammered iron sword, bearing on its blade and handle—in rich inlaying of silver—characters of record and representations of life distinctively Assyrian and Grecian. The roughly hammered iron blade showed the crudity of the early days of the iron age, but the exquisite inlaying of silver on the bronze bore testimony to the cunning of the silversmiths who wrought the weapon. To all appearances, and according to the inscriptions, it was a royal arm, for on its ample hilt it bore in horizontal lines the crowned head of its wearer, while below, in cuneiform characters on the blade, were apparently the title and name of the sovereign. The sword and scabbard weighed twelve pounds, of which the sword alone represented two thirds of the total. How a Chaldean sword could find its way into the tomb in Mexico is more than anyone has been able to conjecture.

All over Central and Southern Mexico there are relics of a departed race whose annals antedate even those of the Aztecs. Antiquarians have endeavored to read their history in the stones of Tula, which was the old Tolttec capital, now a place of ruins. Old Tula is now overgrown and half hidden from sight. San Juan Teotihuacan is also famous for its two great earthen pyramids, which stand out on the plain a half-mile apart. One of them was dedicated to the sun, the other to the moon. The earth for miles around is filled with small images—caritas—insomuch that it seems as if these ancient people spent most of their time in making them.—Atlanta Constitution, June 17, 1895.

MEATS OF THE FUTURE.

A practical chemist of Philadelphia looks to the speedy solution of a problem upon which men of his profession are engaged the world over—the reproduction of meats for the table from their chemical constituents. “Within this century,” he says, “I expect to see synthetic steaks, roasts, and chops entered upon the bills of fare at our leading hotels and restaurants, and they will be prepared so artistically as to appeal to the sense of beauty as well as to the appetite. At first, of course, in order to appease the natural prejudices against anything so novel, a choice will be afforded between the real and artificial; but eventually the killing of animals for food will be regarded in all civilized countries as barbarous. That this is not an absurd prediction is well assured to those who have observed what synthetic chemistry has already done in exactly reproducing mustard, sugar, butter, ice, lemon juice and flavoring essences; besides madder, turpentine, and many other compounds used extensively in commerce.”—Philadelphia Record.

IN THE NAME OF CHRIST.

THE testimony of the books as to the name of the Son of God.

For according to the words of the prophets, the Messiah cometh in six hundred years from the time that my father left Jerusalem; and according to the words of the prophets, and also the word of the angel of God, his name shall be Jesus Christ, the Son of God.—2 Nephi 11:4.

And as the Lord God liveth, there is none other name given under heaven, save it be this Jesus Christ of which I have spoken, whereby men can be saved.—2 Nephi 11:5.

And he shall be called Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, the Creator of all things, from the beginning; and his mother shall be called Mary.—Mosiah 1:14.

And it came to pass that he stretched forth his hand, and spake unto the people, saying, Behold I am Jesus Christ, whom the prophets testified shall come into the world.—Nephi 5:4.

Having authority given me of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.—Nephi 5:8.

Know ye that ye must come to the knowledge of your fathers, and repent of all your sins and iniquities, and believe in Jesus Christ, that he is the Son of God. . . . Therefore repent, and be baptized in the name of Jesus, and lay hold upon the gospel of Christ.—Mormon 3:4.

O then despise not, and wonder not, but hearken unto the words of the Lord, and ask the Father in the name of Jesus for what things soever ye shall stand in need. . . . But see that ye do all things in worthiness, and do it in the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God: and if ye do this, and endure to the end, ye will in no wise be cast out.—Mormon 4:7.

And may the Lord Jesus Christ grant that their prayers may be answered according to their faith; and may God the Father remember the covenant which he hath made with the house of Israel; and may he bless them forever, through faith on the name of Jesus Christ.—Mormon 4:8.

Behold, this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ, who hath been manifested by the things which we have written.—Ether 1:4.

Behold, I am he who was prepared from the foundation of the world to redeem my people. Behold, I am Jesus Christ.—Ether 1:8.

In the name of Jesus Christ I ordain you to be a priest.—Moroni 3.

O God, the Eternal Father, we ask thee in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ.—Moroni 4.

O God, the Eternal Father, we ask thee, in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ.—Moroni 5.

And they who were baptized in the name of Jesus, were called the church of Christ.—Nephi 12:2.

Have they not read the scriptures, which say, Ye must take upon you the name of Christ, which is my name? for by this name shall ye be called at the last day.—Nephi 12:3.

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise. . . . And thou shalt call his name Jesus. . . . And he called his name Jesus.—Matt. 1:18-25.

What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou son of God?—Matt. 8:29.

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matt. 16:16.

Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.—Matt. 16:20.

And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.—Matt. 21:11.

What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?—Matt. 27:22.

This is Jesus the King of the Jews.—Matt. 27:37.

The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.—Mark 1:1.

Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am.—Mark 14:61, 62.

And the writing was, Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews.—John 19:19.

But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.—John 20:31.

And there are also many other things which Jesus did.—John 21:25.

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ.—Acts 2:38.

In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.—Acts 3:6.

I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.—Acts 9:5.

Of this man's seed hath God, according to his promise, raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus.—Acts 13:23.

There can be but one conclusion drawn from the consideration of the foregoing texts, and that is that the name of the Son of God, the Messiah, was and is Jesus Christ. All other appellations are figurative, prophetic, or descriptive, such as the Counselor, the Man of sorrows, and of Galilee.

These texts are from the Book of Mormon and the Bible, to which we shall add a few from the Doctrine and Covenants, because they are so strongly corroborative.

The number from both the Book of Mormon and the Bible might be enlarged to a great extent, but it is not needed. The narrative in the four evangels is a history of what Jesus, the Christ did; and runs in the name of Jesus did this and said that, until the fitting close by John, that many things Jesus did both say and do that are not written.

Paul calls him Jesus Christ, in Romans 1:1; 1 Corinthians 1:1, 2; 2 Corinthians 1:1; Galatians 1:1; 5:6; Ephesians 1:1, 2; Philippians 1:1, 2, 6; Colossians 1:1, 2; 1 Thessalonians 1:1; 5:28; 2 Thessalonians 1:1, 2. He does the same in both epistles to Timothy, to Titus, Philemon, Hebrews, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever."

James calls him Jesus Christ 1:1.

Peter, in both epistles, calls him Jesus Christ. John, in first and second epistles, calls him Jesus Christ, and so does Jude in his single testimony; and he is called Jesus Christ in the Book of Revelation.

In the revelation given in June, 1829, is this command:—

Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness, and as many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved. Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved; wherefore, all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day; wherefore, if they know not the name by which they are called, they can not have place in the kingdom of my Father.—D. C. 16:4.

Behold I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God.—D. C. Sec. 5:10. April, 1829. See also D. C. Sec. 10:12

The law is,

There is none other name [than Jesus Christ] under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.—Acts 4:12.

We have appealed in connection to the testimony of the writers of the Book of Mormon, the New Testament, and to the revelations to the church in these last days, and the testimony agrees that the name is Jesus Christ; the descriptive title of whom is "of Nazareth, the Son of the living God."

Those who may choose to ignore all this long array of testimony may do so; but we prefer to abide the conclusion; "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." We have found what the law is, and that the testimony agrees therewith, hence are satisfied to be called in the name of Jesus Christ.

REUNION AT COUNCIL BLUFFS.

WITH this issue of the HERALD will be found a supplement announcing the Reunion of the Southwestern Iowa Saints at Council Bluffs, beginning Thursday, September 12, and lasting until the 22d.

The circular shows that the Council Bluffs brethren have manifested commendable energy in making arrangements for their meeting. We congratulate them on their good, businesslike work. Their diligence deserves to be rewarded with abundant success, and we trust they will have it.

Their announcement includes; first, the excellent grounds of the Council Bluffs Driving Park Association, centrally located, with plenty of grass, shade, water, good accommodations for teams, with feed at low prices; food, fuel, and lodging obtainable at reasonable rates; reduced railroad rates; the opportunity to visit the Nebraska State Fair at Omaha; the opportunity to secure tents;—and, by no means last, the promised attendance of leading ministers of the church. These features make up a list of substantial attractions that seem to insure a good time all around; a profitable and pleasurable visit among the Saints of Council Bluffs and others from Iowa, Nebraska, the Dakotas, and elsewhere who may gather with them.

The brethren in endeavoring to build up the work strongly and permanently in the cities of Council Bluffs and Omaha are doing work that will promote its extension into many other places. The invitation of the mayor and city council with the promise of police protection indicates the estimation in which our people are held in that important locality.

Saints interested in this meeting—in having a profitable time themselves as well as in helping the cause as indicated, will find all necessary information in the circular and in further announcements that may appear from the committee in charge.

BRO. GEORGE MONTAGUE reports from Fairland, Indian Territory, under date of August 2, that Bro. G. W. Shute was doing a good work in Oklahoma. (Since this report was written we are informed that Bro. Shute has been called from his mission by the pale reaper.)

Bro. Joseph Ward was at work in Sharp County, Arkansas; Brn. Shepard and Simmons in Arkansas and Indian Territory, with some additions. Bro. A. C. Hart and himself were at work together; hindered as Bro. Montague thinks by the want of a tent, which they were trying to obtain by subscription, having half enough at date.

THE population of Utah by the late census is 247,295, as against 207,905 in 1890. Of this number 126,763 are males and 120,532 females, 6,231 more men than women.

How carefully God provides the numbers of the respective sexes, to emphasize the policy of marriage as instituted at the beginning. If all the inhabitants were of a marriageable age and all the women were to marry one man each there would be over six thousand men without wives. The men have been in excess in the Territory since the first census taken in 1850.

BY request of Superintendent Rothert we publish the circular that follows, for the benefit of the school and of such as may wish to patronize it.

IOWA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

(Free to all deaf persons of school age in Iowa.)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, August 15, 1895.

To Parents, Friends, Guardians, and Pupils:—Notice is hereby given that the next term of school will commence Wednesday morning, September 11, 1895, and it is expected that all pupils be present on that day or the day prior; viz., September 10, 1895.

Conveyances with officers of the Institution in charge will meet all trains on arrival, September 10 and 11.

Parents need have no fear as to care of, and attention to their children after they reach the railroad depots at Council Bluffs.

There have been many betterments and improvements made during the past vacation, tending to the comfort, health, advancement, and contentment of the children.

A postal card notifying each parent or friend of the safe arrival of the child, will be issued immediately after registry of name.

All trunks or baggage should be checked to local depot, Council Bluffs. This is imperative to avoid trouble and delay. Please bear this in mind.

Promptness as to date of attendance is urgently necessary. Our classes are organized September 12. Do not think it will be as well to send the child a day, a week, or a month later. It is an injustice to the school, unfair to prompt scholars, and detrimental to the tardy pupil. Sickness can only be considered a legitimate excuse for delay.

We will not guarantee to meet trains after above date. Parents must secure conveyance, should our teams not be in waiting.

Every parent or friend, interested in one of our children, should be interested in all the Deaf of school age in the State and are therefore requested to give this notice the widest circulation and greatest publicity possible.

Hoping for a prosperous year, and ready at all times to answer any and all communications, I remain, truly yours,

HENRY W. ROTHERT, Supt.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. DAVID CHAMBERS writes from Persia, Iowa, August 9:—

I came home on Monday from tent work to attend to reunion work. I return to-morrow to tent work near River Sioux, on the Missouri bottom. The interest is just splendid and prospects good for quite an ingathering of souls. This is a very promising field of labor along the Missouri Valley bottoms; and if energetically worked will give large returns. Bro. Crabb is a congenial and able defender of the truth. I will do all I can and trust for strength of body.

Bro. Joseph Ward, Pomona, Missouri, August 10:—

I closed a ten days' meeting at Center, Arkansas, on the 8th. I had a crowded house each night notwithstanding the rainy weather. Two were baptized and many more very much interested. I am at home for a few days rest, then I will respond to other calls.

Bro. C. E. Butterworth, Dow City, Iowa, August 11:—

We had a real spiritual meeting here this morning, for which we thank God. After services three were baptized by Bro. J. M. Baker; an aged sister and two boys. Three were baptized at Deloit not long since, by Bro. J. T. Turner, I think, and one was watered at Harlan by Bro. J. W. Chatburn. Sr. Butterworth has been quite ill, but is improving. All moves fairly well in spiritual matters.

Bro. Henry C. Smith, Milton, Florida, August 9:—

For the benefit of my correspondents please say that my permanent address is Lamoni, Iowa. Our friends in this part counsel a change in altitude and temperature on account of poor health, as I am not able to continue missionary labor. Will probably stop in Southern Missouri, on the Ozark Mountains, for a time.

Card from Bro. J. R. Lambert, from Burnside to the Patriot states:—

We have been here over two weeks. Expect to continue another week. Baptized four yesterday. Are getting along well.

Bro. H. F. Durfee, Thurman, Iowa, August 12:—

The work here is moving along steadily; many calls for preaching in the surrounding country and neighboring towns, which are being looked after by some of the local ministry. Bro. J. C. Moore and the writer held two services in McPaul on the 11th; good interest manifest and a desire to hear more. The writer has been holding regular services every two weeks near Farragut, with good interest.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THROUGH the kindness of Mr. A. S. Patterson, of 401, East 64th Street, Chicago, we are able to give a chapter on the events of the week culminating in the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, fifty-one years ago last June. We are sure our readers will be interested in this relation of what happened in those few eventful days.

Press telegrams of the 12th state that two men lost their reason and another died of heart disease induced by religious excitement at a Holiness camp meeting at Pitman Grove, New Jersey. Near Ramsey, Illinois, some of the Holiness converts go into a trance and remain twelve hours in that condition.

Bro. T. C. Kelley, in charge, and D. E. Tucker, J. D. Erwin, G. W. Chute, Henry C. Smith, and James M. Baggerly are doing excellent work in the Southeastern field, and the work is reviving somewhat, though not in good condition in places. It is likely Bro. Smith will not be able to stand the Southern climate.

Mr. George A. Smith, of Jerome, Arizona, and a friend for whom he speaks, desire to unite with the church and write asking that some elder in that field visit and wait upon them and labor there. Who can respond to this call?

Sr. Lillie Bonner, Scandia, Kansas, reports a small branch at that point, with Saints striving to live worthy of the work.

Some one sends us the parable of the tobacco seed. This we published not a great while ago.

We renew request of the ministry for names of persons baptized, that we may send them sample copies of the HERALD. We shall be pleased to also receive addresses of friends to whom any may wish a copy of the HERALD sent. Please help to get the church paper before the people.

Bishop E. L. Kelley started for Blue Rapids, Kansas, on Saturday, August 17, to be present at part of the sessions of the Northwestern Kansas reunion.

Brn. William Anderson and A. H. Smith were the speakers at Lamoni, on Sunday, the 18th inst. Brn. A. S. Cochran, S. V. Bailey, T. J. Bell, and others held services at local points.

Brethren are doing good work at local points near Lamoni. Bro. S. V. Bailey baptized two of late at Lone Rock, Missouri.

A SHORT CHAPTER OF INTERESTING HISTORY.

By a piece of good fortune we have been permitted access to a copy of the Nauvoo Neighbor, a weekly newspaper published at Nauvoo at the time of the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith and edited by John Taylor, the man who was in the Carthage Jail and was wounded at the same time the imprisoned men were killed; the issue being the one for July 3, 1844.

We have secured a verified type-written copy, of so much of the issue as is connected with the principal event of the murder and such coincidents as were at the time deemed of sufficient importance to make current record of. The copy was made by Frank Cochran, of the Herald force, and verified by him, Elder Duncan Campbell, and the Editor.

We publish in supplemental form for the better preservation and use of the document among the elders.

We append an editorial comment, from the same issue of the Neighbor, the only reference to the murder other than the statements of Messrs. Richards, Reid, Woods, and Governor Ford.

NAUVOO NEIGHBOR—EXTRA:

Sunday, 3 o'clock, p. m. June 30, 1844.

AWFUL ASSASSINATION! THE PLEDGED FAITH OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS STAINED WITH INNOCENT BLOOD BY A MOB!

On Monday the 24th inst., after Gov. Ford had sent word, that those eighteen persons demanded on a warrant, among whom were Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith, should be protected, by the militia of the State, they in company with some ten or twelve others, started for Carthage. Four miles from that place, they were met by Capt. Dunn, with a company of cavalry, who had an order from the Governor for the "State arms." Gen. Smith endorsed his acceptance of the same, and both parties returned to Nauvoo to obtain said arms. After the arms were obtained, both parties took up the line of march for Carthage, where they arrived about five minutes before twelve o'clock at night.—Capt. Dunn nobly acquitting himself, landed us safely at Hamilton's Hotel.

In the morning we saw the Governor, and he pledged the faith of the State, that we should be protected. Gen. Smith and his brother Hyrum were arrested by a warrant founded upon the oaths of H. O. Norton and Augustine Spencer, for treason. Knowing the threats from several persons, that the two Smiths should never leave Carthage alive, we all began to be alarmed for their personal safety. The Gov. and Gen. Deming conducted them before the McDonough troops and introduced them as Gen. Joseph Smith and Gen. Hyrum Smith. This maneuver came near raising a mutiny among the "Carthage Greys," but the Governor quelled it.

In the afternoon, after great exertions on the part of our counsel, we dispensed with an investigation, and voluntarily gave bail for our appearance to the Circuit Court, to answer in the case of abating the Nauvoo Expositor, as a nuisance.

At evening the Justice made out a mittimus, without an investigation, and committed the two Gen. Smiths to prison until discharged by due course of law, and they were safely guarded to jail. In the morning the Governor went to the jail and had an interview with these men, and to every appearance all things were explained on both sides.

The constable then went to take these men from the jail, before the Justice for examination, but the jailor refused to let them go, as they were under his direction "till discharged by due course of law;" but the Governor's troops, to the amount of one or two hundred, took them to the Court House, when the hearing was continued till Saturday the 29th, and they were remanded to jail. Several of our citizens had permits from the Governor to lodge with them, and visit them in jail. It now began to be rumored by several men, whose names will be forthcoming in time, that there was nothing against these men, the law could not reach them, but powder and ball would! The Governor was made acquainted with these facts, but on the morning of the 27th, he disbanded the McDonough Troops, and sent them home: took Capt Dunn's company of Cavalry and proceeded to Nauvoo, leaving these two men and three or four friends, to be guarded by eight men at the jail; and a company in town of 60 men, 80 or 100 rods from the jail, as a corps in reserve.

About six o'clock in the afternoon the guard was surprised by an armed Mob of from 150 to 250, painted red and black and yellow, which surrounded the jail, forced in—poured a shower of bullets into the room where these unfortunate men were held, "in durance vile," to answer to the laws of Illinois; under the solemn pledge of the faith of the State, by Governor Ford, that they should be protected! but the mob ruled!! They fell as Martyrs amid this tornado of lead, each receiving four bullets! John Taylor was wounded by four bullets in his limbs but not seriously. Thus perishes the hope of law; thus vanishes the plighted faith of the State; thus the blood of innocence stains the constituted authorities of the United States, and thus have two among the most noble martyrs since the slaughter of Abel, sealed the truth of their divine mission, by being shot, by a Mob for their religion!

Messengers were dispatched to Nauvoo, but did not reach there till morning. The following was one of the letters:

Twelve o'clock at night, 27th June, }
 CARTHAGE, Hamilton's Tavern. }
 To Mrs. Emma Smith, and Maj. Gen. }
 Dunham, &c—The Governor has just arrived; says all things shall be inquired into, and all right measures taken.

I say to all the citizens of Nauvoo, my brethren, be still, and know that God reigns. Don't rush out of the city—don't rush to Carthage; stay at home, and be prepared for an attack from Missouri mobbers. The Governor will render every assistance possible—has sent out orders for troops—Joseph and Hyrum are dead, but not by the Carthage people—the guards were true as I believe.

We will prepare to move the bodies as soon as possible.

The people of the county are greatly excited, and fear the Mormons will come out and take vengeance—I have pledged my word the Mormons will stay at home as soon as they can be informed, and no violence will be on their part, and say to my brethren in Nauvoo, in the name of the Lord—be still—be patient—only let such friends as choose come here to see the bodies—Mr. Taylor's wounds are dressed & not serious—I am sound.

WILLARD RICHARDS,
 JOHN TAYLOR,
 SAMUEL H. SMITH.

Defend yourselves until protection can be furnished necessary, June 27th, 1844.

THOMAS FORD, Governor and Commander in Chief.

MR. ORSON SPENCER,

Dear Sir:—Please deliberate on this matter; prudence may obviate material destruction. I was at my residence when this horrible crime was committed. It will be condemned by three fourths of the citizens of the county—be quiet or you will be attacked from Missouri.

M. R. DEMING.

The Governor, as well as the citizens of Carthage, was thunder struck! and fled.

The Legion in Nauvoo, was called out at 10 a. m. and addressed by Judge Phelps, Col. Buckmaster, of Alton, the Governor's aid, and others, and all excitement and fury allayed and preparations were made to receive the bodies of the noble martyrs. About 3 o'clock, they were met by a great assemblage of people, east of the Temple on Mulholland street, under the direction of the City Marshall, followed by Samuel H. Smith, the brother of the deceased, Dr. Richards and Mr. Hamilton, of Carthage. The wagons were guarded by 8 men. The procession that followed in Nauvoo, was the City Council, the Lieut. Gen's Staff, the Major Gen. and staff, the brigadier and staff, commanders and officers of the Legion and citizens generally, which numbered several thousands, amid the most solemn lamentations and wailings that ever ascended into the ears of the Lord of Hosts to be avenged of our enemies!

When the procession arrived the bodies were both taken into the 'Nauvoo Mansion'; the scene at the Mansion cannot be described: the audience was addressed by Dr. Richards, Judge Phelps, Woods and Reed Esqs. of Iowa, and Col. Markham. It was a vast assemblage of some 8 or 10,000 persons, and with one united voice resolved to trust to the law for a remedy of such a high handed assassination, and when that failed to call upon God to avenge us of our wrongs! Oh, widows and orphans! Oh, Americans, weep for the glory of freedom has departed!

STATEMENT OF FACTS!

At the request of many persons who wish that the truth may go forth to the world in relation to the late murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, by a band of lawless assassins, I have consented to make a statement of the facts so far as they have come to my knowledge, in an authentic shape, as one of the attorneys employed to defend the said Smiths against the charges brought against them, and other persons at Carthage, in the State of Illinois.

On Monday the 24th inst., at the request of Gen. Joseph Smith I left Fort Madison in the Territory of Iowa and arrived at Carthage where I expected to meet the General, his brother Hyrum and the other persons implicated with them; they arrived at Carthage late at night and next morning voluntarily surrendered themselves to the constable, Mr. Betterworth, * who held the writ against them on a charge of riot for destroying the press, type and fixtures of the Nauvoo Expositor, the property of William and Wilson Law, and other dissenters, charged to have been destroyed on the 10th inst.

Great excitement prevailed in the county of Hancock, and had extended to many of the surrounding counties. A large number of the militia of several counties were under arms at Carthage, the Head Quarters of the commanding Gen. Deming; and many other troops were under arms at Warsaw and other places in the neighborhood. The Governor was at Head Quarters in person, for the purpose of seeing that the laws of the land were executed and had pledged his own faith and the faith of the State of Illinois that the Smiths and the other persons concerned with them should be protected from personal violence, if they would surrender themselves to be dealt with according to law. During the two succeeding days his Excellency repeatedly expressed to the legal counsellors of the Smiths his determination to protect the prisoners and to see that they should have a fair and impartial examination so far as depended on the Executive of the State. On Tuesday morning soon after the surrender of the prisoners on the charge of riot, Gen. Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum were both arrested on a charge of treason against the State of Illinois. The affidavits upon which the writs issued were made by Henry Norton and Augustine Spencer.

On Tuesday afternoon the two Smiths and other persons on the charge of riot appeared before R. F. Smith, a justice of the peace residing at Carthage, and by advice of counsel, in order to prevent if possible, any increase of excitement, voluntarily entered into recognizance in the sum of five hundred dollars each with unexceptionable security, for their appearance at the next term of the Circuit Court for said county. The whole number of persons recognized is fifteen, most if not all of them leading men in the Mormon church.

Making out the bonds and justifying bail necessarily consumed considerable time, and when this was done it was near night and the Justice adjourned his court over without calling on the Smiths to answer to the charge of treason or even intimating to their counsel or the prisoners that they were expected to enter into the examination that night. In less than an hour after the adjournment of the court, constable Betterworth [Bettisworth.—Ed. SAINTS' HERALD] who had arrested the prisoners in the morning appeared at Hamilton's Hotel, at the lodgings of the prisoners and their counsel and insisted that the Smiths should go to jail, Mr. Woods of Burlington, Iowa, and myself, as counsel for the prisoners, insisted that they were entitled to be brought before the justice for examination before they could be sent to jail. The constable to our surprise, thereupon exhibited a mittimus from said justice as follows:

STATE OF ILLINOIS, }
 Hancock County. }

The people of the State of Illinois, to the keeper of the jail of the said county greeting:

Whereas Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith of the county aforesaid have been arrested upon the oath of Augustine Spencer and Henry O. Norton, for the crime of treason, and has been brought before me as a Justice of the Peace in and for said county, for trial at the seat of justice thereof, which trial has been necessarily postponed by reason of the absence of material witnesses, to wit; Francis M. Higbee and others; therefore I command you in the name of the people to receive the said Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith into your custody in the jail of the county aforesaid, there to remain until discharged by due course of law.

Given under my hand and seal this 25th day of June, A. D. 1844. (Signed,)

R. F. SMITH, J. P. [L. S.]

His Excellency did not think it within the sphere of his duty to interfere, and the prisoners were removed from their lodgings to jail. The recital of the mittimus so far as they relate to the prisoners having been brought before the justice for trial, and it there appearing that the necessary witnesses of the prosecution were absent, is wholly untrue, unless the prisoners could have appeared before the justice without being present in person or by counsel; nor is there any law of Illinois within my knowledge which permits a justice to commit persons charged with crimes, to jail without examination as to the probability of their guilt.

On Wednesday forenoon the Governor in company with one of his friends, visited the prisoners at the jail, and again assured them that they should be protected from violence, and told them that if the troops marched the next morning to Nauvoo as his Excellency then expected they should be taken along in order to insure their personal safety.

On the same morning, some one or more of the counsel for the prosecution, expressed their wish to me, that the prisoners should be brought out of jail for examination; they were answered that the prisoners had already been committed, and that the justice and constable had no further control of the prisoners; and that if the prosecutors wished the prisoners brought out of jail, they should bring them out on a writ of Habeas Corpus or some other due course of law.—The constable after this conversation went to the jail with the following order to the jailor:

STATE OF ILLINOIS, }
Hancock county. } ss.

To David Bettersworth, constable of said county:

You are commanded to bring the bodies of Joseph Smith & Hyrum Smith from the jail of said county, forthwith before me at my office for an examination on the charge of treason, they having been committed for safe keeping until trial could be had on such examination and the state now being ready for such examination.

Given under my hand and seal this 26 day of June 1844. (Signed,)

And demanded the prisoners, but as the jailor could find no law authorizing a justice of the peace, to demand prisoners committed to his charge, he refused to give them up, until discharged from his custody by due course of law. Upon the refusal to give up the prisoners, the company of Carthage Greys marched to the jail, by whose orders I know not, and compelled the jailor against his will and conviction of duty, to deliver the prisoners to the constable, who forthwith, took them before Justice Smith, the Captain of the Carthage Greys. The counsel for prisoners then appeared, and asked for subpoenas for witnesses on the part of the prisoners, and expressed their wish to go into the examination, as the witnesses could be brought from Nauvoo to Carthage; the justice thereupon fixed the examination for 12 o'clock, on Thursday the 27th inst.; whereupon, the prisoners were remanded to prison.—Soon after a council of the military officers was called by the Governor, and it was determined to march on the next morning, the 27th inst. to Nauvoo, with all the troops, except one company which was to be selected by the Governor from the troops whose fidelity was more to be relied on to guard the prisoners whom it was determined should be left at Carthage. On Thursday morning, another consultation of officers took place, and the former orders for marching to Nauvoo with the whole army, were countermanded. One company were ordered to accompany the Governor, to Nauvoo; the Carthage Greys, who had but two days before, been under arrest for insulting the commanding General, and whose conduct had been more hostile to the prisoners, than that of any other company, were selected to guard the prisoners, and the other troops including those rendezvoused at Golden's Point, from Warsaw, and who had been promised that they should be marched to Nauvoo, were disbanded. A guard of only eight men was stationed at the jail, whilst the rest of the Greys were in camp at a quarter of a mile's distance, and whilst his excellency was haranguing the peaceable citizens of Nauvoo, and asking them to give up all their own arms, the assassins were murdering the prisoners in jail, whom the Governor had pledged himself and the faith of the State to protect.

H. T. REID.

At the request of the friends of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, I have consented to give a statement of such matters as I had a knowledge of in relation to their murder at Carthage, and what occurred under my observation. I arrived in Nauvoo from Burlington, Iowa, on Friday, June 21st, inst., about 9 o'clock, p. m., found all things quiet, had an interview on Saturday morning the 22d, with Joseph and Hyrum Smith, who was in consultation with some of their friends in relation to a communication from Gov. Ford, during interview heard Gen. Joseph Smith give orders to disband the Legion, and withdraw the guards and sentinels, who were co-operating with the police to preserve the peace of the city, as he said by order of Gov. Ford; that I went from Nauvoo to Carthage, on the evening of the 22d, when I had an interview with Gov. Ford, assuring him as to the quiet of Nauvoo, and that Smith and his friends were ready to obey the laws. I was told that the Constable with a posse had that evening gone to Nauvoo with a writ for Smith and others, and that nothing short of an unconditional surrender to the laws would allay the excitement. I was then informed by Gov. Ford he was pledged to protect all such persons as might be arrested and that they should have an impartial examination, and that if Smiths and the rest against whom warrants had been issued, would come to Carthage by Monday the 24th inst., it would be a compliance on their part, and on Sunday morning the 23d, Gov. Ford pledged his word that if Gen. Smith, would come to Carthage, he should by him be protected, with such of his friends as might accompany him, and that I as his counsel should have protection, in defending Smith, that I returned to Nauvoo, on Sunday evening the 23d, and I found Gen. J. Smith and Hyrum Smith, making preparation to go to Carthage on Monday, and on Monday morning the 24th I left the city of Nauvoo in company with Jos. and Hyrum Smith, and some fifteen other persons, parties and witnesses for Carthage, that about four miles west from Carthage, we were met by a company of about sixty men under Capt. Dunn, that at the request of Gen. Joseph Smith, I advanced and communicated with the Commander of the company and was informed he was on his way to Nauvoo, with an order from Gov. Ford, for the State Arms at that place, that it was agreed by myself on behalf of Gen. Smith, that the order for the arms should be endorsed by Gen. Smith, and that he should place himself under the protection of Captain Dunn, to return to Nauvoo and see the Governor's order promptly obeyed and return with Capt. Dunn to Carthage; Captain Dunn, pledging his word as a military man, that Smith and his friends should be protected, that the order was endorsed by Gen. Smith, which was communicated by Captain Dunn to Gov. Ford, with a letter from Gen. Smith informing the Gov., that he would accompany Captain Dunn to Carthage. I left the company and proceeded to Carthage, that about 12 o'clock at night of the 24th Capt. Dunn returned with the State Arms from Nauvoo accompanied by Joseph and Hyrum, with some thirteen others, who were charged with a riot in destroying the Printing Press of the Nauvoo Expositor, that on the morning of the 25th, Joseph and Hyrum Smith with the others charged, surrendered themselves to the constable and at the same time Joseph and Hyrum Smith were arrested on a charge of treason against the State of Illinois; that about 3 o'clock p. m. on the 25th the Justice, proceeded to the examination in relation to the riot and after a good deal of resistance on the part of the prosecution, we were permitted to enter into a recognizance; to answer at the next term of the Circuit Court; that we were engaged, until dark, in making out and giving our recognizances, that in consequence of the rumors as to the excitement at Warsaw and other points and to allay the fears of the citizens of Nauvoo, I requested Governor Ford to detail a company to Nauvoo, to protect the city, which request was promptly complied with, and that night Captain Singleton, with a company of men from McDonough county marched to Nauvoo and took possession of the city and remained until the evening of the 27th, when they took up their line of march for Carthage.

After the matter of the riot was disposed of, the Justice left, without saying any thing in relation to the examination for treason, and in about an hour the constable returned with a mittimus, a copy of which accompanies the statement of my colleague, H. T. Reid, a copy of which was demanded and refused; that I requested the officer to wait until I could see Gov. Ford, and was told he would wait five minutes, and as I went to the door I met Capt. Dunn, with some twenty men to guard the prisoners to jail; that I accompanied Gov. Ford to the Justice, R. F. Smith, who gave as a cause for issuing the warrant of committal; that the prisoners were not personally safe at the hotel.

I then requested the Governor to have a company detailed to guard the jail, which was done, and they arrived at the jail about the same time as the prisoners. On the morning of the 26th, the Governor visited the jail in company with a friend, at which interview the Governor again pledged himself for their personal safety, and said if the troops went to Nauvoo, as was then contemplated, that they should go along to insure their protection, that after the interview at the jail, the counsel for the prosecution wanted the prisoners brought before the justice for an examination, to which the counsel for the prisoners replied, that they were committed until discharged by due course of law, and that we could do nothing until the prisoners were legally before the court, where we would appear and defend; that the justice, R. F. Smith, gave the constable an order (a copy of which accompanies the statement of H. T. Reid, Esq.) for the jailor to deliver up the prisoners, which the jailor refused to do;—that the constable then repaired to the jail with a company called "Carthage Greys," of whom the justice, R. F. Smith, was the captain, but not then in command; and by intimidation and threats, forced the jailor to give up the prisoners to the constable, who took them before the justice, R. F. Smith, at the Court House; that on the motion of the counsel for the prisoners, the examination was postponed until the 27th, 12 o'clock, and subpoenas issued for witnesses on the defence. The two Smiths were then remanded to jail and orders were issued for a consultation of the officers, with the commander-in-chief, and it was determined that the troops should take up a line of march at 8 o'clock, on the morning of the 27th, for Nauvoo, and after the consultation, the justice, who was one of the officers in command, altered the returns of the subpoenas until the 29th, and continued the hearing until that time, without consulting either their prisoners or the counsel; that on the morning of the 27th, the order for marching to Nauvoo, was countermanded, and all the troops disbanded but the company under Capt. Singleton at Nauvoo, Capt. Dunn's company of horse, and the Carthage Greys, that the Governor determined to visit Nauvoo, escorted by Capt. Dunn's company; and the Carthage Grey's were left as a guard for the prisoners at the jail, that after the troops were disbanded, I requested Gov. Ford to detail some men to guard the route to Warsaw, as I apprehended much danger from that place, but I do not know whether it was done or not, as I left Carthage about 11 o'clock, A. M., and came to Nauvoo; that Gov. Ford and his aid, Col. Buckmaster, escorted by Capt. Dunn's company, arrived in Nauvoo about 5 o'clock, P. M., where he addressed the citizens, and promised them protection, and a just execution of the laws, and immediately left the city for Carthage.

JAMES W. WOODS,
Attorney at Law, of Burlington, Iowa.

BY EXPRESS!

Sunday morning 9 o'clock.

The following proclamation has just reached us from head quarters. We assure the governor, if he can manage human butchers, he has nothing to fear from armless, timid, and law abiding Latter day Saints:

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

I desire to make a brief but true statement of the recent disgraceful affair at Carthage, in regard to the Smiths, so far as circumstances have come to my knowledge. The Smiths Joseph and Hyrum, have been assassinated in jail, by whom is not known, but will be ascertained.—I pledged myself for their safety, and upon the assurance of that pledge, they surrendered as prisoners. The Mormons surrendered the public arms in their possession, and the Nauvoo Legion submitted to the command of Capt. Singleton, of Brown County, deputed for that purpose by me. All these things were required to satisfy the old citizens of Hancock, that the Mormons were peaceably disposed; and to allay jealousy and excitement in their minds. It appears however that the compliance of the Mormons with every requisition made upon them, failed of that purpose. The pledge of security to the Smiths, was not given upon my individual responsibility. Before I gave it, I obtained a pledge of honor by an unanimous vote from the officers and men under my command, to sustain me in performing it. If the assassination of the Smiths was committed by any portion of these they have added treachery to murder and have done all they could to disgrace the State, and sully the public honor.

On the morning of the day the deed was committed, we had proposed to march the army under my command into Nauvoo. I however discovered on the evening before, that nothing but utter destruction of the city would satisfy a portion of the troops; and that if we marched into the city, pretexts would not be wanting for commencing hostilities. The Mormons had done every thing required or which ought to have been required of them. Offensive operations on our part would have been as unjust and disgraceful as they would have been impolitic, in the present critical season of the year, the harvest and the crops. For these reasons I decided, in a council of officers, to disband the army, except three companies, two of which were retained as a guard for the jail. With the other company I marched into Nauvoo, to address the inhabitants there, and tell them what they might expect in case they designedly or imprudently provoked a war. I performed this duty, as I think plainly and emphatically, and then set out to return to Carthage. When I had marched about three miles a messenger informed me of the occurrences at Carthage. I hastened on to that place. The guard it is said, did their duty but were overpowered. Many of the inhabitants of Carthage had fled with their families. Others were prepared to go. I apprehended danger to the settlements from the sudden fury and passion of the Mormons and sanctioned their movements in this respect.

General Deming volunteered to remain with a few troops, to observe the progress of events, to defend property against small numbers, and with orders to retreat if menaced by a superior force. I decided to proceed immediately to Quincy, to prepare a force, sufficient to suppress disorders, in case it should ensue for the foregoing transactions or from any other cause. I have hopes that the Mormons will make no further difficulties. In this I may be mistaken. The other party may not be satisfied. They may recommence aggressions. I am determined to preserve the peace against all breakers of the same, at all hazards. I think, present circumstances warrant the precaution, of having competent force at my disposal, in readiness to march at a moment's warning. My position at Quincy will enable me to get the earliest intelligence, and to communicate orders with greater celerity.

I have decided to issue the following general orders:

Head Quarters, }
QUINCY, June 29, 1844. }

It is ordered that the commanders of regiments in the counties of Adams, Marquette, Pike, Brown, Schuyler, Morgan, Scott, Cass, Fulton, and McDonough, and the Regiments composing General Stapps' Brigade, will call their respective Regiments and Battalions together immediately upon the receipt of this order, and proceed by voluntary enlistment to enrol as many men, as can be armed in their respective regiments. They will make arrangements for a campaign of twelve days, and will provide themselves with arms, ammunition, and provisions accordingly, and hold themselves in readiness immediately to march upon the receipt of further orders.

The independent companies of Riflemen, Infantry, Cavalry, and Artillery in the above named counties and in the county of Sangamon will hold themselves in readiness in like manner.

THOMAS FORD,
Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

PROCLAMATION.

HEAD QUARTERS, June 28, 1844,
Four o'clock, a. m.

To the citizens of Carthage and Hancock county:—In pursuance of an order from Gov. Ford, instructing me to the exercise of such discretionary powers as I may deem necessary for the preservation of the public safety, and the lives and property of our citizens; I hereby invite all citizens to remain at their several homes in Hancock county and co-operate with me in establishing tranquility and safety throughout the county. The most efficient means have been put in requisition for concentrating the military force of the neighboring counties at Carthage, and in 12 hours there will be a sufficient force for the protection of every citizen in the country.

I confidently believe there is no just apprehension of an attack upon any place by the Mormon citizens of our county. And I hereby strictly command all citizens of Hancock county to abstain from violence towards the Mormon population, under penalty of the severest inflictions of military law, and act in no case, only on the defensive.

The corpses of the murdered men will be forthwith removed to Nauvoo, under an escort from Head Quarters.

Given under my hand this 28th June 1844, 4 o'clock a. m.

M. R. DEMING, Brig. Gen.,
4th Brigade and 5th Division.

It is hoped and expected that the Governor will be at Head Quarters in a few hours.

Head Quarters, CARTHAGE, }
June 29th, 4 o'clock a. m. }

Fellow citizens of Hancock county:—Every prospect of danger from the Mormon population of this county is removed and those who have retired from their homes in its apprehension, are requested forthwith to aid in allaying public excitement by a speedy return. A communication, this a. m. received from the authorities of Nauvoo, brings the most satisfactory assurances that no retaliation or aggression will be resorted to by their citizens upon any part of the county. The butchery of the prisoners at Carthage has the execrations of the great mass of our citizens. The Humane and patriotic of Adams county are gathering at Carthage for the maintenance of our laws against the violators of law of any party. The command of Col. Flood consisting of 224 well armed and efficient men will be at Carthage this a. m. for the preservation of order. The Governor's return from Adams is hourly expected. It is believed that no other forces will be necessary for the public safety.

M. R. DEMING, Brig. Gen.

CARTHAGE June 29th, 1844. }

Dr. Willard Richards.—Your note by the return of the escort has been received with the request for Mr. Taylor and lady; considerations of prudence, should I think delay Mr. Taylor's return. I fear it would prove fatal to his recovery. He will receive every attention that my power or the sympathies of many kind persons can furnish. I send you this communication with my last order by the hands of Messrs. Wood and Conyers who are highly respectable citizens of Quincy—Mr. Woods is the Mayor of that City and a decided friend of law. Mr. Conyers was formerly the Mayor of the City. A safe conduct of troops that can be relied upon—In great haste,

Very respectfully yours,
M. R. DEMING, Brig. Gen.

SIGNS OF PEACE!

Colonel Fellowes and Captain Jonas are requested to proceed by the first boat to Nauvoo and ascertain what is the feeling, disposition, and determination of the people there, in reference to the late disturbances, ascertain whether any of them propose in any manner to avenge themselves, whether any threats have been used, and what is proposed generally, to be done by them. They are also requested to return to Warsaw and make similar inquiries there; ascertain how far false rumors have been put afloat for the purpose of raising forces; what is the purpose of the Militia assembled, whether any attack is intended on Nauvoo. Ascertain also, whether any persons from Missouri or Iowa intend to take part in the matter, and in my name forbid any such interference, without my request, on pain of being demanded for punishment.

(Signed) THOMAS FORD.

June 30th, 1844.

NAUVOO, July 1, 1844.

TO THE CITY COUNCIL OF NAUVOO:

Gentlemen:—With this you will receive a copy of instructions, from Gov. Ford to us. You will understand by them, what we desire from you in action on your part, —as the only authorities of your city now known to the country, of such a character as will pacify the public mind, and satisfy the Governor of your determination to sustain the supremacy of the laws, will, we are sure, be gratifying to him, and as much so to

Yours respectfully,

HART FELLOWES,
A. JONAS.

At a meeting of the City Council, held in the Council Room, in the city of Nauvoo, on the First day of July, 1844, having received instructions from Gov. Ford, through the agency of A. Jonas, Esq. and Col. Fellowes, it was unanimously, Resolved, For the purpose of ensuring peace, and promoting the welfare of the county of Hancock, and surrounding country, that we will rigidly, sustain the laws, and the Governor of the state, so long as they, and he, sustain us in all our constitutional rights.

Resolved, secondly, That to carry the foregoing resolutions into complete effect, that inasmuch as the Governor has taken from us the public arms, that we solicit of him to do the same with all the rest of the public arms of the state.

Resolved, thirdly, To further secure the peace, friendship and happiness of the people, and allay the excitement that now exists we will reprobate private revenge on the assassins of General Joseph Smith, and General Hyrum Smith, by any of the Latter day Saints. That instead of "an appeal of arms," we appeal to the majesty of the law, and will be content with whatever judgment it shall award; and should the law fail, we leave the matter with God.

Resolved, unanimously, That this City Council, pledge themselves for the city of Nauvoo, that no aggressions by the citizens of said city, shall be made on the citizens of the surrounding country, but we invite them, as friends and neighbors to use the Savior's golden rule, and "do unto others as they would have others do unto them," and we will do likewise.

Resolved, lastly, That we highly approve of the present public pacific course of the Governor to allay excitement, and restore peace among the citizens of the country, and while he does so, and will use his influence to stop all vexatious proceedings in law, until confidence is restored, so that the citizens of Nauvoo, can go to Carthage, or any other place for trial, without exposing themselves to the violence of assassins, we will uphold him, and the law by all honorable means.

GEO. W. HARRIS,
Pres't. pro tem.

WILLARD RICHARDS, Recorder.

A. JONES ESQ., AND COL. FELLOWS:

Messrs:—In reply to your communication to the City Council of the city of Nauvoo, on behalf of his Excellency Gov. Ford, I have been instructed by the council to communicate the foregoing resolutions for which I respectfully solicit your consideration, and at the same time would inform you that a public meeting of our citizens will take place at the stand east of the Temple, at 4 p. m. and solicit your attendance.

Most respectfully, your ob't serv't,
W. RICHARDS.

PUBLIC MEETING.

At a meeting of a large portion of citizens of Nauvoo, convened at the stand, in the afternoon of July 1, 1844, after hearing the above instructions, and resolutions of the City Council, read, and being addressed by A. Jonas, Esq., and others, the meeting responded to the same, with a hearty AMEN! The citizens then passed a vote of thanks to the Governor's agents for their kindly interference in favor of peace among the citizens of Hancock county, and elsewhere around us. They also passed a vote of thanks to Messrs. Wood and Reid, the counsel of the Gen's. Smiths for their great exertions to have even-handed justice meted to the Latter Day Saints: and they also passed a vote of thanks to Messrs. Chambers and Field, the former, one of the editors of the "Missouri Republican," and the latter, one of the editors of the "Reveille," of St. Louis, for their honorable course of coming to Nauvoo for facts, instead of spreading rumors, concerning the Latter Day Saints. Mr. Chambers made a very appropriate speech containing innuendoes for the benefit of our citizens, that appeared as the wise man said: "LIKE APPLES OF GOLD IN PICTURES OF SILVER." They also passed a vote of thanks to Messrs. Wood and Conyers, Mayor and ex-Mayor of Quincy, for their friendly disposition in establishing peace in this region, and we are happy to say that all appears to be PEACE at Nauvoo.

Head Quarters
QUINCY June, 30th 1844.

Sir,—It is my present opinion, that the Mormons will not commit any further outbreak, * and that no further alarm * need be apprehended. I regret to learn that the party in Hancock who are in favor of violent measures, have circulated a thousand false rumors of danger, for the purpose of getting men together, without my authority, hoping that when assembled, they may be ready to join in their violent councils; this is a fraud upon the country and must not be endured.

I am afraid the people of Hancock are fast depriving themselves of the sympathy of their fellow citizens, and of the world. I strictly order and enjoin on you that you permit no attack on Nauvoo, or any of the people without my authority. I think it would be best to disband your forces, unless it should be necessary to retain them to suppress violence on either side, of this you must be the judge at present.

I direct that you immediately order all persons, from Missouri and Iowa to leave the camp and return to their respective houses without delay.

I direct also that you cause all mutinous persons and all persons who advise tumultuous proceedings to be arrested; and that you take energetic measures to stop the practice of spreading false reports put in circulation to inflame the public mind.

(Signed) THOMAS FORD,
Commander in Chief.

To BRIG. GEN. DEMING, Carthage, Ill.

* "Any further out break," "no further alarm." A military mystery—there has been no outbreak, or alarm among the Mormons; the "out breaks and alarms," and further out breaks and alarms, were at Warsaw and Carthage. The Mormons are for peace and will be, if God and the Governor are willing. Wisdom wins the wise, and honor will clothe the just men of this region with an impenetrable Ægis. Soft words and wise hints unjealously with future intimations and unpleasant surmises, "Will light up a smile in the aspect of woe."

WILFUL MURDER:

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Smith, and Major Gen. Hyrum Smith, of the Nauvoo Legion, were shot dead, (receiving four balls each,) in the County Jail at Carthage, on Thursday afternoon, about half past five o'clock, June 27th, 1844; by an armed mob of from 150 to 200 men, while under the solemn pledge of the faith of the State by Gov. Ford, for the protection of their lives! A more violent outrage upon law, life, and liberty, was never known on the globe. Better blood was never shed, and nobler souls never escaped in blood to bliss, to supplicate God to come out of his hiding place and curse this wicked generation! O, God, thy will be done.

WELLS OF SALVATION.

"With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation."—Isaiah 12: 3.

Yes, draw ye this water so pure and refreshing,

And drink ye, ye thirsty, and thirst nevermore;

This water of life from the wells of salvation—
Drink freely and deeply as never before.

And now let obedience be the cup to convey it,
So fill it entirely, wholly, complete;

Then with joy shall ye draw and with happiness drink it;

This water from wells of salvation so sweet.

For love, joy, and peace, is what it will bring us,

While here as a mortal we're suffered to dwell;

But life everlasting in regions eternal!

O, draw this pure water from salvation's well.

THE LITTLE COTTAGE.

THOUGHT at times becomes wearisome and the tired brain asks for rest. The August day had been unusually warm and oppressive. Clear and bright the sun had pursued his course through the cloudless heavens, and his beams seemed to multiply their intensity reflected back from the village pavements. But at last his course run he had sunk to rest, and throwing aside our work we went forth for a walk. It was almost dusk when we reached our destination—a little vine covered cottage—and knocked at the door. Our summons was not answered—all was silent. Tired with our walk we looked about for a resting place thinking that perhaps our friend might soon return. A chair was invitingly near on the little porch and we sat down grateful for the rest, and thought which a short time before had been only weariness became active again as memories awoke and reflection joined them. The air was laden with the fragrance of flowers and just beyond lay the little garden plot which all the season had been so carefully cultivated, and which was now filled with choice vegetables, and closer by the bed of mint and herbs yielded their odors. But the busy, toiling hands, where were they? A silent messenger had drawn near and stilled them. Loving hearts and tender hands had folded them on the cold breast—folded them never to labor—never to toil on earth again. "A rest remaineth," and our aged friend was resting. "Asleep in Jesus." The evening air was loaded with the fragrance of flowers her hands had planted, and in the garden of life tender hearts embalmed her memory, and the fragrance of good deeds done will pass down the years. As we wended our way home, rested and refreshed, this familiar text came to our mind, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," and we wished that when our earthly pilgrimage should be ended, memories as tender and sweet might cluster around the home in which we had sojourned, as came to us that evening hour on the vine-covered porch of "the little cottage."

HELPING HAND.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER XXVIII, HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

ALLOWING PLAY TO A CHILD'S IMAGINATION.

A CHILD'S mind is full of images which he knows to be unreal; and it is often right to allow play to his imagination, when it would be wrong to permit him to tell an untruth or to say to him that which is false.

A very small child can perceive the difference between fact and fancy, and can understand that to "make believe" is not to try to deceive him. A baby will pull at a string tied to a chair and play that he is driving a horse. Growing older he will straddle a stick and call that a horse, and perhaps tell of the good ride he is taking. It is not the parent's duty, nor would it be kind, to tell the child that his playthings are not what he imagines them to be. In this the child is not deceived, hence does not need to be undeceived. But it would be wrong for him to tell that he had been out to ride with his father, when such was not the case. The child as well as the parent can easily recognize the difference between the false statement and the mere stretch of fancy.

A little girl setting her table with buttons for cups and plates, will be greatly pleased when she passes a cup to her mother, to have her speak in praise of the tea. It would be cruel to tell the child that it is only a dry button and not a cup of tea at all. In this fancy there is no deception. It is an ideal reality. In right child-training the dolls and other playthings of childhood are the means of developing some of the truest instincts of manhood and womanhood.

The story of Santa Claus and Christmas Eve may be made a false one, always to be deprecated, or may be told as a pleasant fancy from which can come no harm. A child may be told that the gifts which children receive on the birthnight of the Holy Child Jesus come to them as if brought by a messenger from him and we call that messenger Santa Claus. To tell the story of Santa Claus and his reindeers as an absolute fact is wrong. Children have been frightened lest they should be awake at his coming, and thus incurring his displeasure, he would leave them no presents. On the other hand, to take a child and show him all the Christmas presents before putting them in the stockings would rob him of much enjoyment which the indulging of fancy would give. Teach the child the truth as truth and indulge him in the fancy as fancy.

To call Jesus the Good Shepherd is to present truth in the guise of fancy. Children have suffered from thinking that they were to be real "lambs" in the Savior's fold. They need to be shown the measure of truth in this Bible figure and also helped to perceive the fancy. In child-training a distinction must always be made between the fanciful and the false, the false never tolerated, but the fanciful allowed a large place.

There is less danger in a child's reading choice fairy tales, understanding them to be fancy, than in reading a falsely colored religious story book. In the latter case he may be misled by thinking that what he reads, though fictitious and false, may have been real. In reading moral fiction a child needs help to define the line between the real and the false. He knows the difference between the fanciful and the false as well as do older people. C. B. S.

Dear Sisters:—I would like to ask my brethren and sisters to-night how many of them keep the word of wisdom? Do we not want all the blessings that God has promised to us, or do we think the sacrifice too great? Let us strive to "come up higher." I have been blessed far above my expectations since I have endeavored to keep the Word of Wisdom. I feel that I would not have been here to write these words if I had not listened to a sister who showed me the Word of Wisdom and told me how she had been blessed in keeping the same. God is not slack in keeping his promises.

It is my desire to live by the whole law. I feel my weakness, but I am striving to do the best I can that I may set a good example before my children. I feel to thank God that he ever drew me to the light of his gospel and that he gave me strength to obey the same. Will you pray that my husband and children may obey the gospel.

Your sister,

N. J. WALSH.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Aug. 8.

Editors Herald.—Last Sabbath, the 4th, was a busy day for Saints at Nebraska City. At eight o'clock a. m. we went to the church and from there quite a company drove to the Missouri River where five precious souls, three young ladies and two young men, were baptized, Elders Forscutt and Waldsmith officiating. Quite a congregation but an orderly one from the city to witness the very impressive ceremony as conducted by Bro. Forscutt. The scene was beautiful. Upon the bank of the river stood a larger portion of the congregation while a good many came and took position on the river in boats while the ordinance of baptism was performed between the two crowds. At nine o'clock a. m. Sunday school at the church; and at eleven o'clock a. m. Bro. Forscutt delivered a very impressive sermon on confirmation, after which the five candidates were confirmed under the hands of Elders R. C. Elvin, Forscutt, Waldsmith, Thompson, and Peterson.

At two thirty we were to have met for regular sacrament service, but was prevented by about the hardest rain of the season, which was a great blessing to every one. At eight p. m. we met for preaching service, but as Bro. Forscutt was feeling so poorly, Bro. Waldsmith preached to a pretty full house. He had fair liberty and the best of order by the congregation.

There has been a very marked improvement in the spiritual condition of the branch here since Uncle Mark has taken charge, and we all believe that the old Nebraska City branch is going to again be what it once was, if not to far exceed that. There is still room for improvement. We are all thankful that we have a man like Bro. Mark to preside here, and our prayer to God is that he may be liberated from his sickness, that he may do more for the work than he is even now doing.

This district is having a tent made and Brn. Forscutt and J. F. Mintun are expected to take charge of it after the fifteenth, and it is to be hoped that they may be able to operate it most successfully. The initial point is Lincoln—the capital city, and we pray that God will enable us to effect an opening there for his work. All is well in this particular part of Nebraska; plenty of rain and good crops of vegetation and fruit. That gospel work may continue to improve here and elsewhere is my fervent prayer.

J. W. WALDSMITH.

ST. CLAIR, Mo., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald.—June 19 found us bidding good-bye to our pleasant home and the pleasant friends in Willoughby and with sad heart and uncertain spirit facing our new change. The Cleveland brethren had planned a preaching service, which gave to us relief only in the thought of a reunion where parting and unpleasant changes do not come.

It was hard for us to sever the ties that bound us to the Saints of New England, and the old fond memories still press their companionship upon us and we seemed to be separate from that order of social communion that made or could alone make life worth the living. But we found in the Ohio field new friends, appreciative and sympathetic companionship that we shall not soon nor easily forget, and we send back greeting to those whose courtesy and kindly sympathy, brotherly and sisterly affection in memory lingers like the perfume of roses along the new pathway that fate seemed to have decreed for us in which to tread. The disinterested and unselfish care and kindness manifested by the little band at Cleveland made our final leave taking still a little harder, Bro. Miller's family especially burdening themselves without our knowledge to try and make us comfortable. The following morning at three found us facing our long journey to the new field on the special "Knickerbocker Express" for St. Louis, where we arrived the same evening after fifteen hours fast running, and were met by the always-on-hand Bro. Hitchcock and kindly cared for at his pleasant home until a place was rented and our household effects set up and we were face to face with the problems involved in our calling in the new field. The evening following our arrival a festival was held by the branch to raise a fund for our tent work.

Saturday the 22d found us on our way to the district conference at Belleville, Illinois; small attendance, no special enthusiasm or spiritual encouragement, we thought, when we considered the time, expense, and labor that had been wrought in the past. The Sunday school showing Sunday forenoon with a good sermon by Bro. Archibald in the afternoon were the favorable features of our meeting. The Sunday school picnic in the beautiful Forest Park, July 4, was, barring the afternoon showers, a pleasant time for the little folks and others.

In the evening of July 9 thirty or forty of the Saints surprised and took possession of our household and with song and music and speech of welcome to our new home by Bro. Crawford, left us in a more contented and happier frame of mind, and with some substantial tokens of fellowship and good will.

Excessive and frequent rains made the starting of our tent work impracticable until July 19, since which we have been fortunate, only one bad storm hindering service one night. The tent meeting at St. Louis is a success, at least things are pointing strongly that way, the tent being too small frequently for the attendance, and Sunday evening last people could not get near enough to hear. Benches have been made outside the tent, and we hope for practical results; in fact, we think we have them already in the widespread notice of our faith, the number already seriously interested in our claims, the liberty enjoyed in presenting the word, prejudice allayed, the excellent order furnished us by the city police, etc. We have good music—an organ and four instruments—cornets and clarinet. Regular service of the branch together with tent work, with aid afforded Oak Hill, Cheltenham, etc., visiting sick, and other ministerial service makes the time to fly as on wings. Since coming to St. Louis we believe there is seen a visible improvement, but with lots of room yet ahead. We have found kind friends and some good helpers, our immediate associate in branch affairs, Bro. Russell Archibald, proving an efficient helper and comfort in the warfare. Bro. Jones, with Bro. Archibald's assistance, is now conducting the tent service in the city. I expect to be there next Sunday. Am looking up matters in the district. Am now at the home of Dr. Davison, kindly cared for. Preaching in Congregational church; poor interest as yet.

M. H. BOND.

WEST CONCORD, Minn., August 9.

Editors Herald.—I was baptized in 1877, and my wife in 1878; Bro. J. R. Lambert baptized us. We were the only Saints in this place for a long time, the Herald being all the preacher we had; but the Lord was with us. Bro. W. Peak came in here and did some preaching six years ago this fall; then four years ago Brn. J. Arthur Davis and I. N. Roberts came and held a series of meetings; also Bro. E. E. Wheeler, Swen Swenson, and E. A. Stedman. These all labored at different times. The result is that there are now fourteen members here. My oldest daughter was baptized six years ago by Bro. Stedman. Two years ago Bro. C. Chapman and his two sisters were baptized. Sr. Stroll was baptized three years ago. About the 1st of June, this year, Bro. Stedman came here and held a series of meetings. About five weeks ago he baptized Bro. C. Chapman's mother and my youngest daughter, and on last Sunday, August 4, he baptized Mr. Oscar Proll and wife, my sister, Mr. Proll's father, an old man seventy years old, and Mr. Hicks and wife.

I think I have reason to rejoice that the Lord has raised up a people here. I lived here a long time alone; but not alone, as the Lord was with me; but there were no other Saints in this county except my wife, and prejudice was strong and my father's family was very bitter against us and my sister that united with us was very much prejudiced against us until last fall, when she began to investigate. To the Lord belongs all the honor.

Yours in bonds,

JOHN F. GIBBONS.

OZARK, MO., August 14.

Editors Herald:—We have just concluded a two weeks' tent meeting at this place, and while there was no addition to the church, there was manifested the best of interest and good order. We had good attendance every night, and as there is always more or less prejudice in every place our doctrine is preached, we are glad to know that from this time forward there will be people with warm hearts to welcome us again; for we find that where we once get people to investigate the gospel for themselves the fetters of prejudice become broken and the shackles of mental and moral bondage fall to the ground. There are many here who say they never heard the gospel of Christ explained to their satisfaction, and we think they are just about ready to accept it; but it may take some time. It has taken them by surprise and they don't know what to make of it; but when asked their opinions they say there is no doubt of the truth of the matter; and so it goes. But I think in the near future we will be able to make a better report.

We have a nice little branch of twenty members. The first start towards it was made in March of this year; so you see we are all beginners in the work and need the prayers and faith of the entire church. However, we feel strengthened in the knowledge that we have the support of the church and, what is more, we can have the Spirit of God to help us if we only live humble and faithful. Pray for us.

Elders Sparling and Cather are the ones who had the meeting in charge. They are worthy brethren.

Yours in the work for life,

PETER CARROW.

WILBER, Neb., Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Omaha where I was called on a matter of business connected with the work, and am on my way to the southwestern portion of the Eastern Nebraska mission field. While at Omaha I met with Brn. Smith, Mintun, Peak, and Whitman. Bro. Smith is busily engaged holding tent meetings in the city with good interest. Bro. Mintun is to be at Lincoln with the tent for Southern Nebraska by the 14th inst., where he expects to meet Brn. Forscutt and Waldsmith. We hope these brethren will meet with favor in their labors in the capital city, and cannot but regret to learn that both Brn. Forscutt and Mintun will be called to attend the Logan reunion, thus necessarily interfering with their labors and having no one that can fill their place.

Bro. Peak has found it necessary to leave this mission field for two or three months; this arrangement being necessary, received the indorsements of the missionaries in charge at the commencement of the present conference year. We are sorry to lose his labor, but our loss will be to the advantage of the good people of Eastern Kansas. Bro. Mintun truly said, "This field is in great need of labor." I wish it was possible to work it more thoroughly.

Bro. Whitman will have to prosecute the work, for the present, in Northern Nebraska unaided so far as the general missionaries are concerned; but we trust he will rally to his support all the local help he can and push the work forward as efficiently as possible; and we hope to arrange matters so as to render him more help later in the season.

We are working at a great disadvantage in this part of the field this year owing to the drought, which is badly demoralizing all business interests and which greatly discourages all classes of people.

Your brother in Christ,

C. H. PORTER.

SOUTH WEST CITY, Mo., Aug. 10.

Editors Herald:—The work in this part of the field is progressing notwithstanding the opposition; the ministry are at their posts and pushing the work forward all along the line. Bro. Ward is in Northeastern Arkansas; Bro. Sheppard and the writer are preaching in a Christian church here with fair interest.

I preached four times in the union church at Maysville last week. Was told we had the largest audience on Sunday night that had ever been present at our meetings. Bro. Simmons is to commence a debate next Wednesday about twelve miles from here, and Bro. Ward has one for September 15; others are talked of. Bro. Hart is in Indian Territory, Bro. Jackson in the southern part of the State. All the elders are working in unity, with bright prospects of success, with the exception of finances.

I hope the Saints will remember their tithing, sending it either to the Bishop or one of his agents, thus assisting the elders to get from one point to another, etc.

It is being talked of raising a tent for the Spring River district. It is met with approval by all and hopes are cherished that it may be raised in time for the reunion at Baxter Springs, September 6. I hear that Bro. Montague is engaged in this in connection with the work at Fairland and other places.

I am still in the faith. Have engagements ahead until the last of next month. There are numbers of places I cannot reach as yet; may be able to do so later on. My permanent address is Independence, Jackson County, Missouri. In bonds,

H. H. ROBINSON.

KINGSTON, Mo., August 12.

Editors Herald:—This is to inform you that I am again able to be on my mission of love. I left home July 27 for Kingston, at which place I have preached five times in the Saints' church. Met with old acquaintances and Saints. I met with Bro. Chatburn at Kingston; we took in the soldier's reunion held at Kingston. From that place Bro. Chatburn and I went six miles east of Kingston, where Bro. McFee procured a Christian church. Bro. Chatburn preached twice and I four times. We left a good impression we think, and with the promise of the use of their church when not occupied by them.

I shall go to Kidder, in this county, to see if I can make an opening there. Will try to be at the reunion at Clarksdale, if keep well.

Before I left home I had the pleasure of hearing Elders Hall and Young, of the Utah Church. They spoke two nights in our schoolhouse. Hall praised Brigham for his acts and work. I told the people the difference between us at the close of their first evening. They left no good impression on the minds of their hearers. They left after the two nights. Yours for truth,

R. L. WARE.

HAVEN, Iowa, Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—The stories often told against this latter-day work have been repeated here by Elder Gray of the so-called Church of Christ; the Spalding story, walking on the water, and polygamy; the latter talked of more than the other points. It is strange that men will try to maintain the Spalding manuscript story to be identical with the Book of Mormon in anything.

Bro. C. Scott presented a strong argument in favor of the two books, showing from the Bible that God divided the nations, giving to them their inheritances, and it was the privilege of all to seek and find the Lord, for so the Lord designed it. The Bible evidences presented by Bro. Scott were not refuted, but Elder Gray sought to traduce the character of Joseph Smith, claiming if he could prove him to be a false prophet, the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants are false. Elder Gray read considerable from Clark Braden; he also presented several objections to the teachings found in the two books; but upon careful examination they were found to be in harmony. He wanted a miracle to demonstrate whether we had the truth; if such things could be done now, he would believe the apostles worked miracles to make people believe. It was no trouble for them to do so, and wanted to know if Joseph Smith ever worked a miracle. Bro. Scott wanted to know if Noah and John the Baptist worked miracles. Yet the Bible spoke of them as great prophets. If miracles were to convert people to the truth, why were not the Jews converted by the miracles which Jesus did? The Devil wanted miracles, so did the Pharisees, and Jesus told them they were of the Devil, who was their father, and that they did the works of the Devil; but Jesus told Satan in the wilderness that man shall live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God, which implies that God will continue to reveal his will to man.

Elder Gray made considerable sport about Joseph receiving a revelation about building the Nauvoo House; thought the Lord was in very small business when he had to direct in such matters; but when Bro. Scott read Deuteronomy 22:6-12, showing how the Lord spoke of dressing, farming, and care of birds' nests, also of banisters to be put around the tops of houses to keep people from falling off, the people saw the point. If such things had been recorded in Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants it would have been very small business according to Elder Gray. When Mr. Gray referred to this again, he said this was the way the Mormons always belittled the Bible in order to bring it down to a level with the blasphemous stuff gotten up by Joe Smith.

I believe good will result from this discussion. There seemed to be considerable prejudice on the start, but it is fast giving way, and invitations are extended to the brethren to visit with the people. Though there are no Saints at Chelsea, some interested ones have perfected arrangements for us to take the tent there and do some labor after the debate.

I wish we had more such men as Bro. Scott. It has been a feast to me to listen to him defending the work. The Saints feel comforted and strengthened. The meetings have been very well attended all along during this discussion, considering time and place; and while the Saints live from eight to twelve miles away from where the debate is going on, they are well represented. Bro. Lyke has not missed a session and he lives eleven miles away. People are very busy threshing and stacking; prospects are flattering here for a good crop of everything.

When I last wrote you I was at Flagler with appointments out at Knoxville, at the Seventh-day Advent church, but no one but the janitor came to hear, so I returned to Flagler in time to hear Rev. Wulliver give a lecture against the Saints, at which I took notes and replied the next evening; but the Reverend was too holy to sit and listen to me or was afraid or ashamed. I continued a week longer, when I left there, calling at Newton and speaking twice to a few Saints in their hall. No outsiders were present. I then came here to the debate, and while they were discussing the first proposition visited Montour with Bro. W. H. Kephart, where we held three services in the Kellogg school-house. We were unable to get a place in town to preach.

May we all be able to see the need of keeping pace with the church in every department. We cannot know too much of God's truth. We should study well the three books so we can tell when our enemies misrepresent them and not be thrown into confusion by them. Praise God for the great restoration. In bonds of love,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

THOUGHTS OF THE SAVIOR.

WHILE reading the Savior's parting words, found in St. Luke 24: 44-51, I thought of the words of the Apostle Paul, found in Hebrews 12: 2:—

Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

Now that we have the life of Jesus before us, who can form a picture of his wonderful character? But if we cannot paint his portrait, we may point out traits which combine to make him the fairest among ten thousand.

In the first view we are attracted by his wisdom. Sitting with the doctors in the temple, all that heard him were astonished at his understanding. There is not a picture of him in the Gospels in which he is not seen standing in a position requiring the highest wisdom; and one cannot say that he managed this or that unwisely or showed want of judgment in dealing with his enemies or planning his work.

In the same picture he sank himself in the thought of his Father's business to the work he was devoted; and he was a complete sacrifice. Whoever read of him being too weary to answer a call? Whoever read of him being interested in side issues? There is a common notion that there is severity about great purity, but there was nothing hard or angular about Jesus. He attracted all whom goodness had any attraction for. The children came to him, recognizing in him the children's friend. Alas for the man whose piety makes children shy of him!

He was faithful as a physician; he told men their real condition; he could not deceive them. He could not tell the rich young ruler, as some would have done, that he was doing well enough, but told him wherein he was wrong; and his disciples could not say he was too much absorbed in other things to think of them, for when the storm came he came and was moved with compassion. He was prayerful, and praying was as natural as breathing.

We sometimes wonder how Jesus could toil all day, then go on the mountain and pray all night; but that is because praying with us is as working, while to Jesus it was resting. He was meek and lowly in heart. Some would say he did not stand up for his rights. He never took revenge, he never struck back. But can you understand when a child strikes you with all its might—even when it is angry—do you feel insulted? Think of this, that meek man; could he hate anything? Ask the money changers in the temple, ask the scribes, Pharisees, and lawyers. In meekness and manliness, not in the lack of it, is the man who walks conscientiously by the Father's side, who is not disturbed by the little men having their way.

These are some of the features which stand in the most wonderful portrait the world ever looked upon. There are others, but by putting these together do we need to be told that one of the features is love and that love is the very essence in forming his character? God is love.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

Yours in love,

PAUL AYERS.

THE UNITY OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.—No. 1.

BY ELDER E. E. WHEELER.

AS THOU, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one.—Jesus.

The divided and subdivided condition of modern Christianity with its opposing factions and conflicting creeds, all claiming to be equally inspired, yet no two alike, has given rise to serious thought in the minds of many searchers after truth. We shall show that this condition actually exists, by an appeal to known facts, without any false painting or coloring.

According to Appleton's encyclopedia, I think, there are one thousand two hundred and twenty-three denominations in the world. Not all of these accept Christ as their founder and head, but many of them do. Those that do accept him differ widely, however, in the manner in which they so accept him, also in church organization, faith, theory, principle, and ordinances. In every system of theology, there must be fundamental, or basic principles, serving as a foundation upon which to build the superstructure. Every one of these principles is essential; as much so as the foundation stones under a building.

Do the sects of Christendom differ in regard to these fundamental principles, those things which are absolutely essential? We are told by many learned divines that they do not; that all their differences are unimportant, and relate to non-essentials; that in all things necessary to the salvation of the soul, and the promulgation of God's work on earth they are one. If this be true then there is no cause for doubt or discouragement. The church will move forward on those lines ordained of God, and ultimately accomplish the work for which it was instituted.

We shall take exception to this popular position, and in the light of God's word and current history show how weak, delusive, and deceptive it is. It is a miserable blind, a subterfuge of hypocrites, a last resort of the lying priests of Babylon to keep their votaries in spiritual bondage and perpetuate the general religious stagnation that has been characteristic of Protestantism since the formation of the creeds.

In the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation, there are no non-essentials. Every principle of the gospel is necessary, one as much so as the other.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Divine legislation is perfect, therefore James says,

Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, . . . this man shall be blessed in his deed.—James 1: 25.

Every provision ordained of God in a gospel dispensation, is an eternal provision. To illustrate: Provision was made for the sacrifice of Christ, that all the obedient "might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." That provision is eternal and will stand in our favor, until the object for which it was made is accomplished. Provision was made for the organization of the church, for the mutual blessing and edification of God's people, and the evangelization of the world. This is an eternal provision, and will continue until the world is Christianized and the people of God are perfected.

Provision was made by the institution of the sacrament, whereby we are enabled to obtain spiritual life, and ever keep fresh in memory the sacrifice upon the cross; and also look forward to the glorious second advent of our Lord. Provision was made that men might receive a remission of sins through baptism, by immersion, administered by one duly authorized of God, if faith and repentance preceded. As long as men need remission of sins this provision stands in their favor; and so with all others made in a gospel dispensation. If the nominal Christian world differs as regards anything God has revealed for the salvation of the race, any command of God, any fundamental principle of the gospel, any provision made for the benefit of man, it differs in regard to essential things.

We shall now affirm that there is hardly a principle in the plan of salvation as revealed in the Bible, upon which this modern Babel of religions does not materially differ, or that is not accepted by some one denomination and rejected by another. Some of the more ancient Protestant Churches worship a God without body, parts, or passions; "a God that has a being and yet fills the immensity of space." Others hold that no such a God has any existence only in the minds of creed makers, and those who ignorantly accept them; that God has a form like that of man created in his image and likeness, like the personage of his Son, while upon earth before and after the resurrection; that he has a body and parts and, by virtue of his being, cannot be in two places at the same time.

Some teach that there is a literal personal devil, others declare there is not. Some believe that Jesus was the only begotten Son of God, born of woman, conceived by the Holy Ghost. Others pronounce this a vain superstition, but believe that Jesus was one of the sons of God, and that he came into the world as the result of natural law. It is accepted by some that there is a hell wherein is the lake of fire and burning sulphur and brimstone. But this is utterly rejected by many. With them hell is the grave, or the punishment that overtakes the wicked in this life, is all the hell there is.

Election, foreordination, predestination, damnation, eternal anguish and burning in the lake of fire, are comforting doctrines taught by some of the older daughters of the Mother of Harlots, but disputed by others. Apostolic succession is claimed by a few, denied by many. Justification by faith only, is a cardinal principle with most of the popular Protestant denominations, but denied by others who teach justification by faith and obedience to the commands of God. Is baptism essential to salvation? Is it to be administered by immersion and immersion only? Is it for or unto the remission of sins? Must the administrator have authority from God? Are infants proper subjects of baptism? All these questions are answered both in the affirmative and negative.

Is the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Spirit and the healing of the sick necessary now? Do we need the direct operation of the Spirit of God upon the heart? Is God as near unto his faithful people now, as he was in ages past? Are signs, miracles, gifts, and manifestations of the Holy Spirit, such as were enjoyed by the people of God for over four thousand years; yea even revelation, inspiration, prophecy, miracles, ministrations of angels, visions, dreams, tongues, interpretation of tongues, gifts of healing, to be expected now? Is the mourner's bench and six months probation scripturally provided for? Is the soul immortal? Does the Bible teach the literal resurrection of the body? Will Christ come the second time literally in power and great glory? Will the earth be the final abode of the people of God? To all these burning questions of the hour, questions upon which the destiny of the world hangs, modern Christianity raises her weak, palsied, discordant voice, and answers in a thousand different ways.

Can all of these conflicting theories be of God? Is he the author of all this spiritual jargon and confusion? Are the representatives of all these conflicting systems authorized of God? No wonder that Jesus when referring to our day said:—

For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.—Matt. 24: 24.

The Apostle Paul speaking prophetically by the Spirit of God said:—

Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.—2 Tim. 4: 2-4.

One more quotation will serve to show the condition of the professed Christian world as foreshadowed in prophecy:

And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication: and upon her forehead a name was written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS, AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.—Rev. 17: 4, 5.

How can language better describe the confused, drunken, staggering, mystified condition of Christianity today? The "Mother" refers to Rome the apostate church that superseded and supplanted apostolic Christianity; and lo she was to sit upon many waters, or "peoples, and multitudes, and nations and tongues." "All nations" were to drink "of the wine of the wrath of her fornication;" she was to be prolific and give birth to a numerous brood of harlot daughters. Thus the world was bowed down by priestcraft, spiritual drunkenness, or confusion, and will finally be deceived and damned. Yet this hydra headed monstrosity, full of pride, arrogance, tyranny, the rank enemy of humility and meekness, lifts her head innocently and says, "We differ only in nonessentials."

THE SCOTT-GRAY DISCUSSION.

The debate held in Jefferson Township, Poweshiek County, between Elder W. P. Gray of the Church of Christ, so-called, and myself, beginning July 22, was concluded the evening of August 10, eight sessions of two hours each were devoted to the first proposition—the claims of the Book of Mormon, and five sessions each to the other two—the scripturalness of the church he represented, and the claims of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to divinity and its agreement with the Bible in "faith, teaching, practice, and organization." Elder Gray is not an apt debater, but did exceedingly well considering the length of the debate—eighteen sessions. I am not aware that any of our elders have held a lengthier debate than this.

After arriving here to begin I had some doubts as to the wisdom or propriety of my undertaking the work, and consulted Bro. Rendel about taking the debate off my hands; but he declined. We entered upon the work, and as the discussion progressed my health signally improved, and after the first session I suffered no inconvenience physically. The debate was held in the new district tent and was quite well attended most of the time, notwithstanding the very busy season of the year, and was held in a farming community. The rule agreed to by us; that all evidence presented by disputants should be subject to the rules governing evidence in civil courts, rendered Bro. Gray's task very arduous on the first and third propositions; and as to the second—his church, as we viewed it, bore no resemblance whatever to the church established by Christ and the olden Apostles, either in faith, teaching, practice, or organization.

He tried to stand by the Spalding-Rigdon Romance theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon; but the statements of some of his own witnesses were against him, especially those of Mrs. Spalding and daughter, and of Historian Hayden, of the Disciples. The County Recorder's statements relating to Rigdon's whereabouts, and showing him to have been connected with the Baptist and Campbellite churches as a minister, and engaged as such in the State of Ohio during the time of the translation and publication of the Book of Mormon by Joseph Smith, who was in the States of New York and Pennsylvania during those years—1823 to 1830—swept his supposed stronghold away and left him in the open field and entirely defenseless. Thanks to Bro. Kelley for these county records' items.

Elder Gray then tried twelve of the sixteen, whom Braden said that Howe said that Hurlbut said testified to the identity of "names," and, "And it came to pass" of the Romance and the Book of Mormon; but here our rule that evidence must be evidence cornered him completely; and sight of the Romance (for here we showed him Bro. Rudd's copy of it), just dazed him; no names alike, no similar subject, no "And it came to pass" in the Romance! Our "position" was to him unapproachable. He then tried to show us that the book translated and published to the world in 1830 by Joseph Smith was false because Joseph taught the doctrine of polygamy in 1843 or 1844! And he proved (?) this by David Whitmer, because David says in his "Address" that he, toward the latter part of his life, "believed" that Joseph so taught. David does not claim to be a witness, or to know any such thing! Our rule said "evidence;" not what somebody "believed" or said.

This enraged him, and like the young and inexperienced bull that squared himself across the track as the railroad engine approached with a full head of steam, my opponent braced himself and lunged into the Book of Mormon itself; but here as before he made no stand. The Book, like the engine, was "too many" for him; not a real contradiction, not an unbiblical item of teaching could he produce; the record stood clear. I did not have to use the eleven witnesses to the Book, as he had tried to use David Whitmer; this was all the better for us.

As to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, he tried hard to make section 6, where it says to John the Apostle, "Thou shalt tarry" contradict St. John 21: 19-22, but we were enabled to show to the people that unless the Bible stated plainly that John "should not tarry" till the Savior comes in glory there was no contradiction. This the Bible does not say. On the contrary, Jesus left the impression on the minds of the church that "that disciple should not die," and up to the year 98 of the Christian era, when John wrote his gospel, it never had been corrected; nor did John, writing at that late date, correct the impression, which he would have done had it been false. The Book of Mormon represents the promise to John to have been made prior to the crucifixion; and this is a reasonable explanation of the reason why the statement of Christ (Matt. 16: 27, 28) is made, where Jesus promises most positively, "There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom."

Elder Gray tried hard to impress the hearers with the idea that we teach that the two books are a "new covenant," ratified by the blood of the Martyrs. "The testators are now dead, and their testament is of force."—D. C. p. 335.

In the first place this statement is not revelation, but is a statement by the writer of the account there found, of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum, and written after their death. The church had never avowed its approval of the statement or in any way as a church indorsed it, so far as I know. It was the faith of the church in the two books he was striking at. And yet there is a sense in which the statement of the writer is true, as follows: Testament, Latin, Testamentum, comes from the word testari, which means "to be a witness." Second, "To make one's will," and this from the word testis, "to be a witness." (A probated "will" is usually the first witness in court, in the case.) The word "witness" in Greek means "martyr," "martyrs." "One who testifies to the truth at the expense of his life." (See Cruden.) In this sense all the martyred witnesses to divine truth were "testators," and their "testament" is their "witness"—their "testimony."

Like other martyrs, these had sealed their testimony with their blood. "To him [Christ] give all the prophets witness."—Acts 10: 43. See also Heb. 12: 1. And in this light we can see how Jesus, who shed his blood to ratify "the everlasting covenant" of eternal salvation, calls himself "the faithful witness."—Rev. 1: 5. See also John 18: 37.

As to the two books being a new covenant; it did not follow any more than it would to assert that all the revelations given, from Exodus chapter twenty-five to the end of Malachi chapter four were a part of the covenant that was made, ratified, and sealed before they were given. (Ex. chap. 24); or that all the books and letters beginning with Acts and ending with Revelation, were the "new covenant," which was made and ratified and sealed before they were given. I then read the testimony of Joseph, borne to the crucifixion, atonement, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, for all men (D. C. 17: 5; 38: 1; 76: 4) to illustrate what his testimony was that he sealed or confirmed by his death, but to this Bro. Gray made no reply. He stoutly maintained that we were false prophets, they were to come and show "great signs," to deceive! We went right along, without showing any, and it became apparent that we did not possess the qualifications of the false prophets. He raged again and *demand*ed a sign; here he made a stand. We showed that not even Jesus nor others of God's servants worked miracles of their "own power" or at their "will," (Acts 2: 22; Acts 15: 12,) but that by God's will and by his attendant power, "These signs shall follow them that believe." He thereupon charged me with denying that miracles were done now.

He read a portion of section 107 of Doctrine and Covenants and wanted to know if the Lord was not in "little business" to give revelations regarding a "boarding house"—"a hotel." "Look out for the Nauvoo House when you go to Nauvoo!" After suffering such unfair reproaches for a time I turned and read Deuteronomy 22: 6-12 and applied his kind of argument (?) and requested him to do so, and see what "little business" the Lord was in giving revelations to Israel about "bird's nests," and birds in the nests, about building "private houses," their garments should all be cotton, or all wool, but no mixed garments, "free raw material," I supposed. And then to crown the whole the Lord took up the subject of the "fashions," and gave orders by revelations, not to "make thee fringes upon the quarters of thy vestures!" He saw the point, and "O my!" he exclaimed, "he don't believe the Bible." "Infidelity!" The people saw the point, too, so we were all right. It was not infidelity to the Bible, but to his kind of argument, that exhibited itself. I told the audience that all that understood me to be arguing infidelity to the Bible to hold up their right hand. Not a hand was raised, not even Bro. Gray would vote his stated assertion.

He said if I would just read in the Bible that Barnabas was an apostle, he would get right up and own "like a little man" that we were right on apostolic succession. I read Acts 14: 14, but he would not keep his word. He looked somewhat dazed, as though awaking from sleep, as a clear, keen voice from the audience shouted, "Now get up like a man!" But not he.

The foregoing is illustrative of the course pursued by Mr. Gray. When challenging so earnestly for a sign I classified him by reference to the Savior's experience on the mount of temptation, the rich man in hell, and quoted Matthew 16: 4 and told him if he would confess to the audience to the qualifications therein ascribed by Christ to the sign seeker, I would give him a sign. He was silent here.

Elder Gray is not a representative of the Christian Church, or Disciples, but represents a division of that church who have been for some years separating from them; and the end of the division is not yet. This dividing sect styles itself "The Church of Christ," or "Apostolical Disciples." By a number of the Octographic Review, for April 9, 1895, page 8, in a correspondence between the editor and Clark Braden, we learn that there are seven leading points wherein this rebellious daughter differs from her mother.

1. It does not believe in locating a minister over a given number of congregations at a stated salary per annum, but sends out evangelists.

2. "That local overseership and deaconship constitute Christ's complete arrangement for the care of the membership of the church."

3. "Singing of psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs is Christ's complete arrangement for the music in public worship."

No organ or other instruments of music for them in "meeting." The musical instrument that used to banish the Devil from King Saul has with them become "possessed."

4. "The weekly contribution is Christ's complete arrangement for raising money for church purposes."

No tithing like Abraham (Gen. 14), like Jacob (Gen. 28: 22), or Christ (Matt. 23: 23), who classes tithing right along with justice, judgment, mercy, and the love of God. If these are parts of the gospel, tithing is also.

5. "The Church of Christ is a monarchy controlled by the King of kings, and not a democratic or republican form of government controlled by a majority vote of its membership."

6. The name of the church is "Church of Christ," "Church of our Lord," or "Church of God."

7. "The church when set in order according to the New Testament, is complete for the care, instruction, and development of the young." No Sunday school you see! Evangelists, but no "helps or governments." (1 Cor. 12: 28.)

The order or arrangement of the ancient church, designed for the care of the worthy poor, and aged "widows indeed," referred to in 1 Timothy 5: 9, is to this so-called Church of Christ a stranger and would by it be rejected.

That this organization is a division from the "Christian Church" (Campbellite) I quote from an editorial in the Octographic Review for July 30, 1895, and signed J. D. Jesse, Browning, Missouri. The statement is: "In fact the practice of things in the Christian Church, for which we have neither precept nor example in the new covenant Scriptures is the cause of all our troubles and divisions."

About the time the Christian Church arranges to sever these heretics from their midst they all "withdrew" from the church, because it is all wrong, and is walking "disorderly." The Octographic Review, Indiana, Primitive Christian, Missouri, and the Sure Foundation, Texas, are its leading church papers.

The war is on between them, and their church property is getting into the courts, in some places; such is the case here at Tama City now.

I give these statements that the brethren may understand the situation of things with these people.

The debate concluded with a splendid feeling among the people.

Some three or four schoolhouses in the surrounding communities are now open to us, with invitations to come and occupy. Bro. Geo. Shimel promises to look after these calls as the way opens. Bro. D. M. Rendel did the work of moderator in good style. A Mr. Noble, Methodist, acted as chairman for us.

Brn. Rudd and Thompson have the tent work fairly in hand; are at work in Chelsea.

Bro. Kephart brought me through from Runnells to the debate in his buggy, attended part of the debate; but feeling that the work needed him, he left us and returned to the work. May success attend his efforts, with those of all the faithful ministry.

Yours for truth,

C. SCOTT.

S. O. FOSS, Pres.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints in the Eastern Michigan District:—I feel impressed to draw your attention to the financial state of the district. For the past three months I have had very little means come into my hands to care for the missionaries' families, and they begin to be in close circumstances. I thought I would stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance, so that you would bring your tithes and offerings into the house of the Lord that there might be means to sustain the cause we love and the work continue to prosper. True, we have a few good workers in the district. The Lord has only promised to reward the workers. The idler shall not have place in Zion. And when the Lord comes, as we read, he will bring his reward with him to give everyone according as his work shall be. We also read just as we keep our record here it will be kept above. So I conclude if our names remain in the books here with nothing to our credit that when the books shall be opened it will still be a blank, and we will have nothing to our credit to be rewarded for. Dear Saints, I feel it is better to live by every word, so that we will have manifold blessings here in this life and in the end everlasting life, and have an inheritance with the Lord in the holy city. Then, as good stewards, let us impart unto the Lord his portion and be workers with the Father and the Son. In doing this our prayers will be answered and the gospel go forth unto all nations, and Zion be redeemed and her people become a joy and a praise in all the earth.

I am sorry to say that some of the Saints in this district are assuming the Bishop's chair and issuing orders through some parts of our district to raise money and becoming a law unto themselves. In Moses' day there were some that wished to assume Moses' seat, but the Lord was displeased with them and punished them. I hope these parties will take warning and vacate the Bishop's chair, and learn to stand in their own spheres where God has placed them. When the Saints will honor the law and put their tithes and offerings into the storehouse of the Lord, then the cause will prosper and everyone get according to his wants and needs through those whom God had chosen and clothed with authority to take charge of the financial department of the church. I hope every Saint in the district will honor the law. In this way you will honor God, and his peace will abide with you. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am,

Yours for truth and right,

ANDREW BARR.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints in the Pittsburg and Kirtland District:—You will please take notice, that owing to removal of Bro. Frank Criley, Bishop's agent, from the district, to engage in other duties in church work, that Bro. Lorenzo W. Powell, of Kirtland, Ohio, has been appointed Bishop's agent for said district.

The Bishopric regret to lose the services of Bro. Frank Criley in the district, for they have been very efficient and entirely satisfactory; but duties demand his time and attention elsewhere, and it is but proper that he perform such. We take pleasure in recommending to the Saints, Bro. L. W. Powell, of Kirtland, who will be strictly attentive to the duties of the office, a safe agent, and doubtless will give entire satisfaction to those who are desirous of forwarding the work of the Lord onward in the Pittsburg and Kirtland district.

Please address Bro. L. W. Powell, at Temple, Ohio, Lake County, and send tithes and offerings to him there. Post office orders forwarded to him should be made payable at Willoughby, Ohio.

I trust that the Saints will work with the same zeal and earnestness in sustaining the new agent and aiding the work thereby, as the former, and that the blessings of the Lord may attend each in his or her efforts in behalf of the Master's cause.

Very respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, IOWA, 17th August, 1895.

DIED.

DAVIDSON.—Bro. Allen F. Davidson was born in Pulaski County, Arkansas, January 31, 1865; died August 29, 1895. Bro. Davidson joined the Church of Jesus Christ July 29, 1893. He was baptized by Bro. A. J. Moore and lived a noble Christian life, and we believe died happy in the Lord. Funeral services by E. A. Erwin.

GREEN.—Myrtle May Green, of Fife Lake, Michigan, departed this life August 20, 1894. Sr. May was born August 3, 1877, at Willett, New York; baptized May 15, 1894, by Elder F. C. Smith. She was a great sufferer, but very patient in her affliction. With firm faith she continued to trust in her God, hoping to recover until the last. Many times she was relieved through the ordinance given to us in the word of God. She was her mother's only daughter, and a great comfort to her. The funeral was on the 22d; sermon by Elder J. J. Cornish in the Methodist church, to a large congregation of friends who had assembled to pay their last respects to one loved by all. Father, mother, and one brother mourn. But the mother, who feels the loss the most of all, mourns not as those without hope.

A MEMORIAL POEM.

Written by Mrs. Adda Shepard Myers; arranged by Mrs. F. C. Smith.

Father allwise, eternal, love divine;
Refuge for weary souls who seek relief;
O thou wilt make the star of hope to shine
Mid all these earthly scenes of woe and grief!
These many trials are blessings in disguise,
How blind our weeping eyes!

Each sorrow has its purpose though unknown;
God's plans go on as best for you and me.
Let's then be brave and trust his love alone.
Our strength, our shield, and comfort he will be.
O would he cause his child one needless tear?
Must not all suffer here?

Hope points us to a better world above—
It is a place where beauty never dies;
Sweet Summer Land, O happy home of love;
Brighter far than poet dreams thy skies.
Radiant are thy shores where loved ones dwell;
In heaven all is well.

God's hand will guide us to yon heavenly place;
He knoweth best the path our feet should go.
Then let us follow with obedient grace,
Nor turn aside for aught there is below.
Each day will bring our journey's end more near,
Sweet star of faith, appear;

Shine clear and bright, for the dear one we sadly miss
Shall wait and watch upon that shining shore
To welcome to our Father's home of bliss,
Region of glory where parting is no more.
E'en Jesus wept and a heavy cross has borne.
Ah! blessed they that mourn.

My heart is sad, I long for her to-night;
Earth had not a truer child I know.
Those eyes so full of meaning pure and bright,
Have long been closed; 'twas hard to let thee go;
Give comfort, Lord, in this our heartfelt loss;
O help us bear the cross!

Dear, noble girl, so patient and so pure
In heart; so full of charity for all;
So much of suffering did she endure
Without complaint, dear ones will oft recall,
I know, that day she bade you all good-bye
So peacefully to die.

Dear, trusting heart, farewell; the precious light
Of home has fled ne'er to return again.
Mother's darling gone with angels bright,
Gone from this world of trouble, sin, and pain.
Our Father called, and they who knew her worth Deemed her too pure for earth!

'Tis well, Thy will be done, O God!
Surely all these tears are not in vain.
Life is but short and soon beneath the sod
Our bodies will be laid, and then again
Voices of our loved ones we shall hear;
Eternity is near.

GRAHAM.—William M. Graham died August 4, 1895, at Leon, Iowa, aged 67 years, 4 months, and 18 days. Born in Newark, Ohio, he married Maria Jane Young in 1850. Of this union five children were born, three of whom, with their mother have preceded him in death. He served as a volunteer in the war of the Rebellion, and from exposure contracted a diseased foot which finally resulted in gangrene. Two months before death the foot was amputated, but failing to stop the disease a second amputation was necessary, and from this he never rallied. He suffered sorely but patiently, and repeatedly prayed for death. In 1881 he married Martha J. Smith, who, with a son and daughter of his first marriage, remains to mourn her loss. Baptized into the Latter Day Saints Church October 18, 1893, he remained a faithful and consistent member. The sermon was delivered in the Saints' church, Leon, to a crowded house, by J. W. Wight, the text (by request) being John 14: 1-3.

ROBINSON.—Sister Sarah Robinson was born March 27, 1811, at Worsley, Lancashire, England, and died at Lamoni, Iowa, August 14, 1895, aged 84 years, 4 months, and 17 days. She married James Atkinson in 1830, and they were companions nearly forty years, until his death. Ten children were born to them, five of whom yet live, Levi, at present in Montana, John in Kewanee, Illinois, James in England, Kate in Nevada, and Sarah near Lamoni. She and her husband received the gospel while in England, and in 1869 they accepted the Reorganized Church and were baptized at Kewanee by Bro. J. S. Patterson. In 1871 she married Bro. James Robinson, Sen., who died in 1877. Since then she has chiefly lived with her daughter, Sr. Sarah Martin, and her son Levi and family. Her posterity consists of forty grandchildren and twenty-five great-grandchildren. She was noted for her cheerfulness of spirit and contentment of heart. She also enjoyed life and never complained because her days were many. Her last illness was but twenty-four hours long, and thus, without prolonged suffering, she passed to her rest among the just. Her funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. R. M. Elvin.

MITCHELL.—At her sister's home in Shendoah, August 5, 1895, Sr. Lucy J. Mitchell. She was born February 7, 1858, in Utah. Her husband passed on before her some seventeen months. She was a daughter of Bro. M. D. Ledingham. Sr. Lucy was a model member of the church, known and read by all as a living epistle for Christ. She was greatly beloved by all the Saints, and highly respected by all the citizens of the town. Funeral sermon and services conducted by Elder Henry Kemp, by her own request. The church was packed full of interested and attentive listeners, who had learned to love her for her real, genuine, intrinsic worth. She was lovingly laid away to rest by the side of her beloved husband to await the resurrection of the just. She was a loving daughter and sister, a very affectionate and true wife. Father, sister, brothers, and a host of friends mourn their loss. May God help us all to live to meet her in the happy beyond.

WHITEHOUSE.—At Brighton, Massachusetts, August 4, 1895, daughter of Edwin and Lovina Whitehouse, aged 10 months and 15 days. Funeral services at the residence by Elder A. N. Hoxie.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities; and Hebrew Revis, one containing the statement of D. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

CELLS.

THE spectacle of energy and vigorous growth which the garden and field afford at the present time should fill every thoughtful mind with reverent wonder. Man, when he projects some complicated building filled with apparatus and conveniences for varied purposes, plans it all out with skillful care, and then by the aid of innumerable workmen, all skilled in their various departments, fashions and shapes the needful materials, and by building the fabric up piece by piece, finally triumphs in his completed work. If, however, he wants to duplicate or enlarge it, precisely the same process has to be gone through again, and the first work only aids him as a pattern.

In Nature, however, we find the most complicated fabrics apparently making themselves; and having one of these in our possession, we may, as it were, pull a brick out of the factory wall, stick it in the middle of a suitable site, and lo! it will begin splitting itself up and spreading around until we begin to see the plan of another factory developing; everything be adjusted to a nicety as the performance goes on, until finally all is complete and in full working order. Can anything be more marvelous than this? and yet it is going on all the time, and if any reader fails to grasp the fact, let him get a mirror and see such a factory in himself. These wonderful bricks are the cells; and of course in man himself the marvel is the greater that some of the cells which contribute to build him up, i. e., his brain cells, are the fathers of the inorganic fabrics which dot the world with cities and towns, and seam it all over with the beneficent mycelium of rail and road which at once engenders and fosters their extension.

In the vegetable kingdom this power of self-construction in the cell is easily studied in some of its lower forms by means of a microscope; some of the translucent water weeds especially display very clearly the delicate network of cells which constitute their comparatively simple structure. Valisneria spiralis does so to perfection, and the circulation of the sap from cell to cell is shown very clearly. A very simple object, showing not only how the cells multiply, but also in a small degree that inscrutable wonder of building to plan, is the prothallus of a fern, the little green scale produced by the spore. A periodical examination of one of these from the time it is a tiny dot up to that of the full-size scale, will show distinctly all the stages of self-shaping, and also the differentiation into root hairs, and the reproductive organs, which may be regarded as the machinery above alluded to. A few spores scattered on a piece of damp clay are easily handled and examined from time to time without detriment. From such a simple manifestation it becomes easier to carry the mind to the more complex cases where plants not merely build themselves up into stems, leaves, and charming flowers, but more marvelous yet, constitute themselves subtile chemical laboratories in addition, in which the deadliest poisons, beneficent medicines, or nutritious food and stimulants are all alike formed from the same soil constituents by Nature's own alchemy. The selfsame family, indeed, may embrace both extremes, the deadly nightshade and the tomato to wit, or, more wonderful yet, one and the same fruit, such as a peach, may yield a store of delicious food in its flesh, while hiding the deadliest of poisons, prussic acid itself, in the kernel. Truly, when we consider these things the spectacle of a plant in full growth is one of overwhelming interest, as active evidence of the creative power of which we know so little though we see so much.—The Gardeners' Magazine.

WHY OUR BOYS SHOULD BE TAUGHT SPANISH.

IT is the manifest destiny of this country, sooner or later, to monopolize the great bulk of trade with South America, and one of the prime essentials to this desired result is a thorough knowledge of the language spoken by her people, which, to a very great extent, is Spanish. But very little attention is paid in our institutions of learning to teaching this language, and its need will be most seriously felt in commercial circles within the next generation. Our able contemporary, the Boston Journal of Commerce, quotes from the Philadelphia Record upon the subject of acquiring a knowledge of Spanish, in which the editor says:—

“Our commerce with the Central and South American republics is largely increasing every year. Even slow-going Mexico is becoming alive to this fact, and is accordingly making an effort to capture some of the commerce flitting hitherward and thitherward. She is actually going so far as to listen to the scheme which is being advocated for the formation of a United States of the Latin-American republics of the central portion of the continent—a confederation which, with Mexico as a part, would very largely increase commerce between this country and the new United States to the southward. The commercial possibilities of these Latin republics are exceedingly vast. Our present commerce with those countries is as nothing to what it will be twenty-five years hence, when a knowledge of the Spanish language will be absolutely essential to all young men engaged in the counting houses of the firms engaged in business with that part of the globe. Let parents and pedagogues, therefore, cease their bickerings as to the respective merits of Greek and French, and put into the boys' heads a practical knowledge of Spanish, which they will find it not difficult to build upon a tolerably fair foundation of Latin. French may be the language of refinement, and as such its acquisition is more or less desirable. But the great language of commerce not many years hence will be our own language, the German language, and that charming tongue for which this plea is made—the tongue of Cervantes and of Cortez.”—Scientific American.

THE "BOOK OF THE DEAD."

WHILE it is true that among the many texts which have come to light in Egypt none is more widely known than the so-called "Book of the Dead," the fact remains that the latest English translation of this papyrus was made twenty-eight years ago. We are told by Sara Y. Stevenson, of the University of Pennsylvania, in The New World, that our lack of knowledge of this book lies in the extreme difficulty of the task of interpretation; that most scholars have realized that in order to produce an intelligent translation, more than an ordinary philological knowledge of the language is requisite, and that the scientific equipment of the translator must include not only an intimate acquaintance with the myths, rites, and religious technicalities of the Egyptians, but also a "broader knowledge of the science of religion than is usually possessed by Egyptologists." We briefly present facts and comment by this writer, as follows:—

"The 'book of the dead' was known to the Egyptians as the book of 'Going out by Day' (Per-m-Hru), a title explained by their firm and consistent belief in the possibility of obtaining for the spirit, through material and magical means, a renewed and eternal life. It is not 'a book' in the ordinary sense, but, as handed down in the Turin papyrus, a series of compositions written at different epochs, and more or less disconnected, containing magic formulæ or prayers intended to insure the defunct against annihilation by especially protecting each part of his personality, and by arming him against the perils of his dreary journey in the under-world. Some of the chapters lay claim to the highest antiquity and even to a divine origin.

"It is beyond doubt that the religious instinct is present in a more or less developed form in mankind, from the Eskimo to the Hottentot, and that its more simple expression offers but slight variations among different peoples living in a similar stage of culture, such variations being obviously induced and governed by the differences in the condition of their material existence. A careful consideration of the subject has led modern scholars to regard the animistic stage as lying at the base of religious development. At this stage man regards all nature as participating more or less in the phenomena to which he himself is the subject, and as animated by life-spirits—intangible, perhaps, as a shadow in the sunlight, a reflection in the water, or the visions that haunt his own dreams, but, nevertheless, as real as each object itself. Coincident with this form of faith, the belief in the survival of the human spirit after death exists, and is found in different stages of development according to man's capacity for dealing with the abstract. Hence the cultus of the manes and ancestral worship. Men in a low stage of culture dread evil spirits and make offering to their dead, not only in order to perform a filial duty, since the departed spirits are believed to depend upon such material comforts, but to secure for themselves powerful protectors against the evil influences with which they believe themselves to be surrounded. . . .

"There is no ancient religious literature more worthy of serious study than the Sacred Books of Egypt, for in them we find the germs of many ideas which have made their way in the world. But if we would reap the full benefits of those hoary records of human thought, which a kind fate has preserved and revealed to our investigation, we should approach them with a mind divested of the intellectual accumulation which not only the classic philosophers, but the Hebrew prophets also have bequeathed to us, and which European thinkers assimilated and have developed into modern thought. In these ancient intellectual remains, the primitive mind betrays itself in the various stages of its evolution. Let us deal with them as the modern archeologist deals with a mound of ruins. Let us carefully cut trenches and examine the various strata, to locate and identify each idea, instead of recklessly planting our spade haphazard into the heap of débris, thus running the risk of hopelessly mixing what is primeval with what is of later growth, and of presenting to those who seek information an entirely incongruous and confused mass of incomprehensible results."—Literary Digest.

THE WANT OF SLEEP.

WE concur in the following from the Family Doctor, London: "Whoever has suffered for any length of time from want of sleep and inability to obtain it, knows what it is to suffer absolute physical misery. Nothing is worse than insomnia, nothing so wearing, and if continued nothing more likely to lead to insanity and death. The brain expends its nerves and itself during the hours of wakefulness, and these are recuperated during sleep. If, therefore, sleep does not come the recuperation does not equal the expenditure, and the result is not difficult to guess. The loss of a single night's sleep is frequently enough to upset the strongest man and unfit him for his next day's duties. Many persons unable to sleep resort to narcotics, but the habit is not only injurious, but often unnecessary, as there are other remedies which act equally well, and are not harmful. It frequently happens that change of air and scene are all that is needed. Sometimes a stomach and liver compress, in cold or hot water, laid over these parts, acts at once and induces sleep, and if the sleep is not continuous it may be re-wet on awakening. Fomenting the upper part of the back on going to bed with pads at 110 and 120 degrees will encourage sleep. Wet sheet packing is also an unerring soporific agent and anodyne, and will lull to sleep those in the most agitated and nervous condition. Even cold sponging and ablution only, and then at once retiring to bed, often induces most tranquilizing sleep. Taking tea and other hot liquids at supper will often cause wakefulness. These should be avoided. In cases of exhaustion a light, digestible meal frequently has the desired effect. If the habits are sedentary some open-air exercise often promotes sleep.

THE BIRTH OF THE SPIRIT.

DOES the true believer receive the birth of the Spirit, in conjunction with water baptism and as a result following the baptism? Or, is the reception of the Spirit dependent upon and a result following the laying on of hands? It is clear from the Scriptures that laying on of hands is as much for the reception of the Holy Spirit, as baptism is for the remission of sins.

There is a promise in Acts 2:38, that those who were baptized should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; but the history of the work of the disciples shows that the Spirit was not conferred, as a rule, until the baptized person had received the laying on of hands as a rite. Of this, Acts 8th and 19th are in direct proof, and it is found agreeing with the Savior's injunction;

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

It may be objected that as no direct command to lay on hands given of Jesus is found on record, in so many words, that the rite is of doubtful origin; but a sufficient answer to this objection is, that immediately after the command to go and teach and baptize, the apostles were engaged in baptizing and after baptizing did lay on hands and the Holy Spirit was received as a result. This was the case, as stated in Acts 8, where Peter and John ministered together; and in Acts 19th where Paul administered alone. Both instances are related so clearly that the reader is not left in doubt as to the fact that the reception of the Spirit followed the laying on of hands, and not the baptism of water.

Our friends who believe in the baptism of the Spirit, but not the baptism of water, would long since have availed themselves of any support to their theory that such scripture would have given them, had there been any by which a warrant was found for ignoring the laying on of hands direct. The fact that none is found, other than the one referred to in Acts 2, is sufficient to prove the rule.

Paul was a miraculously converted man; and if there was ever an instance in which the giving of the Spirit as a token of divine acceptance was needed as a confirmation and as a precedent, this was one; but in this as in the after procedure of the apostle himself, the giving of the Spirit followed the laying on of hands:—

And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.—Acts 9: 17.

The act of conversion and acceptance with Jesus was not complete until this Saul of Tarsus was baptized; then he was indeed a true disciple born of the water, in baptism; and of the Holy Ghost, in the laying on of hands.

We are not aware of a single instance in the Scripture where a believer received the Spirit as the result of water baptism alone; unless we accept the one of the baptism of Jesus by John; and we are in doubt whether this should be used in this way; for the reason that the whole transaction was out of the ordinary. There was no one there who held the authority to lay on hands, only the invisible hosts attendant upon the scene, among whom was the One who said: "This is my beloved Son," and it would not be strange if he then and there received the laying on of the Divine hands, the Spirit following as a result.

We cannot see why any one should believe that baptism of the Spirit, or the birth of the Spirit, or the gift of the Holy Ghost, should follow the administration of the rite of water baptism, as a result of such baptism. The baptism of water relates to and affects the body, the baptism of the Holy Spirit affects the spirit.

That there is more or less of mystery connected with the birth of the Spirit is true; but, because we may not fully comprehend it in all its details is surely no reason why we should not accept the positions clearly deducible from the Scriptures in this, the same as we do in regard to the baptism of water. How the latter affects the body, or the personal responsibility of the one baptized we do not, and probably never will know while remaining in the flesh. We accept the facts of the command and the promise, and are contented to abide the issue on them. Why should we not be as consistent in the one case as in the other?

BUSINESS CALCULATIONS.

THE Latter Day Saint—member or minister—who is deeply interested in the progress of the work of God is constantly giving it thought, studying the condition of the church and the world, scanning the general horizon that he may the better understand the trend and development of events and discern what is to be done, what can be done, to further the work of building up the kingdom of God among men.

It is certain that the work moves more rapidly when this is done; for as the Lord by his Spirit succeeds in reaching the hearts of the people to that extent that they become willing workers, "anxiously engaged" in the good cause, the forces for good employed to build up the church and extend the proclamation of the gospel are augmented, increased. Men and women so acted upon by the Spirit of truth as to become responsive to its promptings thereby furnish sure evidence that God is working in them and by them and using them as means to assist in bringing about the establishment of his work and the redemption of man.

In this connection we offer a word in "season," a suggestion. From all over the land, almost without exception we have a general report of "good crops." Farmers and business men are to have the benefits of a more prosperous season to follow, and, no doubt, calculations concerning the use of incoming funds are being made. We suggest that the Lord's storehouse be remembered; that the Giver of all benefits be not forgotten.

If we reflect but for a moment it must be apparent that if we fail to render unto the Lord his portion, after so many reminders, we certainly prove to him that we are very heedless and indifferent to his admonitions, and fail to manifest that we love him or his work.

All along the line of human experience from Adam to Noah, from Noah to Moses, and through all the dispensations to the present, the fact is emphasized that God's people walked "by faith." They were children of God, hence looked to him, trusted in him, sought his counsel,—walked by faith. No one can receive of God a full salvation who does otherwise. However enterprising and successful a man may be, if in the work of God as he ought to be, he walks by faith; he is prayerful and careful, seeking for the Spirit that shall sanctify his energies and give them right direction and by which he shall be known as a man of integrity, to the welfare and honor of the church.

We plead for the combination of energy, intelligence, and faith in all the affairs of life. Persons seem to succeed in some things, to a degree at least, without giving very much attention to the principles of faith; to the observance of prayer and close communion with God. For the people of God, however, a different line of life is marked out. "Pray always," "watch and pray," are the teachings of the Master by which he admonished a watchful use of our own powers and opportunities by the directing, sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit, that all possessed be consecrated to the highest uses and aims.

If the suggestion is a good one, give it thought, and the thought action. To us the blessing of the Lord in increased fruitage of the ground indicates that he would have us so situated that we may, if we will, sanctify his gifts to highest ends and bless the world with the message of life and peace. Notwithstanding the many hindering elements at work in the world we may prevail if we will and the cause move with power for good. The Lord has said that upon conditions that his law was observed the kingdom of God should prevail and should not cease to prevail until the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our God and his Christ.

Let us at no time lose sight of this object. The spirit of the law written upon the heart and the Spirit within the heart will prompt, if heedful of it, to be always awake, always steadfastly alive to the welfare of the cause. With such an interest we cannot make our personal calculations for worldly necessities and forget the portion due the Lord; and, even though faith be tried by giving when the portion possessed is small, faith confides in the providing supplies of him pledged to support and bless those who remember him and his work.

OHIO NEWS.

THE following correspondence will explain itself:—

MCARTHUR, Ohio, Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—I send you copy of local paper marked. Dr. Taylor not only challenged us, but then attacked in a sermon on the 11th. I responded on the 13th to three times as many people. Never had more rapt attention in my life. The good doctor did not attend my review; said he preferred not to, which I accepted with all my heart,—and most of the people seemed to. The doctor was in the Union forces in the Rebellion. He should have splendid valor in the war he has forced on us, while we stand by our flag.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

A religious discussion has been arranged for between Elder Etzenhouser, of Independence, Missouri, of the Latter Day Saints, and Dr. C. B. Taylor, of McArthur, of the Presbyterian Church. The questions have been agreed upon and are as follows:—

First question: Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the Church of Jesus Christ, the visible kingdom of God on earth; Etzenhouser to affirm and Taylor to deny.

Second question: Resolved that the Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Protestant Episcopal, Disciple, and United Brethren Churches, together with all churches on earth agreeing with these in substance, in faith and practice, compose the Church of Jesus Christ, the visible kingdom of God on earth; Taylor to affirm and Etzenhouser to deny.

The arrangement is that there will be eight sessions of two hours each. The discussion will be in McArthur. Elder Etzenhouser's time is engaged for a season and the debate will not likely take place until the early fall—probably October. Elder Etzenhouser will fix the date. This will be a very interesting discussion, as both the debaters are gentlemen in the highest sense. Due notice of the time and place will be given.

We learn that Dr. Taylor submitted the questions for discussion and that Elder Etzenhouser accepted the challenge.—McArthur, Ohio, Democrat, August 15.

Perhaps we ought not to anticipate the line of argument that Dr. Taylor may take up; but we venture the prediction that if he relies on the "popularity" of the "bundle" of theologies he has undertaken to advocate and defend, he may find that some things that are popular are not true; and, that when submitted to close scrutiny, are seen to be built upon poor foundations. We shall await the result of the discussion, however.

WE get the following from a copy of the Bottineau, North Dakota, Courant, of Saturday, August 10, concerning Bro. I. N. Roberts and his labors in that region:—

Rev. I. N. Roberts, of Lamoni, Iowa, of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints, has been in our midst for some time, and Wednesday evening held services at the residence of Mr. W. H. Harris. He goes from here to Peabody, where he will hold services for four or five evenings, using the schoolhouse there, and will remain in this neighborhood for a week or ten days. He has been accompanied by Rev. Thomas Leitch, of Clifford, North Dakota, in his ministerial travels throughout this section. The church [of] which Mr. Roberts is the exponent, differs from the Adventists, in that his church keeps the first day of the week, Sunday, as Sabbath, and also from the Saints of Utah in that they do not believe in Mormonism; believing, like the Baptists, in immersion as a purification of spirit. We found Mr. Roberts a pleasant and affable gentleman, and one who adorns the profession to which he has devoted his life.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. DAVID CHAMBERS, River Sioux, Iowa, August 19:—

Tent work booming on the Missouri Valley, near River Sioux; interest splendid; many believing; five were baptized August 11, and three on August 18. This makes twelve baptized since tent work commenced. We move tent to Modale on Thursday, August 22, and expect good results. God is with us in good earnest by his promised Spirit. Bro. Crabb last night under the power of the Spirit of God bore his testimony that Joseph Smith, at Lamoni, was a prophet of God. It did my soul good to hear him. There were about four hundred persons present.

Bro. E. W. Nunley, Hearne, Texas, August 17:—

I am near Hearne, holding meetings. Good attendance and interest; am to close Sunday night and go somewhere else to push the work, as a servant of God should who knows he is engaged in his service. Some of the local brethren are holding forth in Milam County this week. Hope they will have success.

Bro. F. C. Smith, Kingsley, Michigan, August 16:—

I baptized three on Sunday, the 11th; a man and wife; also the wife of another man. I have made a new opening now, where I am having good congregations, and some are quite interested. I am pleased to see the work moving along so nicely.

Bro. R. W. Hugill, Boyne City, Michigan, August 17:—

The work moves on nicely in this part of the vineyard; have baptized eight in the last month.

Bro. F. M. Oldham wrote from Clyde Post Office, Callahan County, Texas, August 18, as follows:—

I wish some of the Saints would come to this country and get homes. This is a good healthy country, where plenty of fruit and vegetables can be raised. Land can be had for $3 50 per acre, with ten years to pay for it; plenty of timber and water. Saints will do well to look it up. Address me as above. Would like an elder to preach here. Bro. L. L. Wight has done good work here.

E. W. Nunley, Hearne, Texas, August 19:—

I have just closed a meeting near here; baptized and confirmed four; left a good interest. I leave here to go by way of home to Brazos County to commence a meeting among my Baptist friends. I expect to have a good time. This is the section where I settled that serious church trouble in the Baptist Church some time ago, an account of which was in the Herald.

Sr. A. Place, writing from Niagara Falls, Ontario, the 20th inst., says:—

The work is growing nicely here. We had reunion here this season. Four were added and others are interested.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, writing to our new Business Manager, from Drain, Oregon, the 16th inst., says:—

I have always taken pleasure in trying to extend the circulation of our books and papers; and the many years of dealing with your predecessor (Bro. David Dancer) have been pleasant indeed, for he has always been honorable and very obliging and my blessing goes with him. As I must start in anew will you please send me a statement of my account and will try and square it and keep very nearly so.

We trust all the ministry will remember the church publications and strive to extend the sale of general publications. Some of the brethren have done considerable for the Herald Office in this respect, while others do but little. The coöperation of all is earnestly desired.

Bro. Joseph Ward, writing from West Plains, Missouri, August 23, says:—

I came to Woodside, in Oregon County, Missouri, on the 14th, and held thirteen meetings—three prayer and ten preaching services. I was assisted while there by Bro. McGuire, the branch president of Woodside branch. The result of our meetings was three baptized and many more are interested. We had scores of listeners, while it was a rare chance that we would have a dozen here before. I am on my way to Southern Missouri reunion.

Bro. J. F. Burton, writing from San Jose, California, of the labors of Bro. J. C. Clapp in Oregon, says:—

He is doing very excellent work now in Oregon, and I shall hope he may be spared long to us to continue his labor of love.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

FOR the benefit of ministry and laity who desire to make use of the important matter concerning the martyrdom of the prophet and the patriarch of the church, we republish in supplement form the matter lately republished from the Nauvoo Neighbor of July 3, 1844. See this issue of HERALD. It is our aim to give the Saints and elders everything that will prove helpful to a defense and a better understanding of the work and the experiences through which it has passed.

Mrs. Addie Ramey, of Sarcoxie, Jasper County, Missouri, a sister, writes asking that some of the elders in that region call and administer to her; she is very sick. We have sent her request to Webb City. Any of the brethren who are near might call and see the afflicted sister.

Bishop E. L. Kelley returned from the Northeastern Kansas reunion on the 22d. He reports good people, good crops, good rains, and good prospects for church work among the Saints in that portion of Kansas.

Now that the season of reunions is upon us, we request secretaries of those gatherings to send us brief, clear-cut synopses of the meetings, that we may report all matters of interest for the information of those who cannot attend. Give us the main points of the sermons in few words.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to patrons of the Herald Office that on and after October 1, 1895,—thirty days from date,—all orders for supplies amounting to less than fifty cents must be accompanied by cash. This applies to all except agents of the Herald Office who have open accounts.

The Herald Office management has found it necessary to begin this cash system for small orders for the reason that such a large number of small accounts has been charged upon the Herald Office books in years past that the Office is now burdened and hindered by an outstanding indebtedness of several thousand dollars from these small amounts alone—ranging from three cents, ten cents, fifteen cents, etc., up to fifty cents. This aggregate amount stands on the books, much of it from year to year, simply because many sending such orders fail to square the accounts, leaving them to accumulate into large sums.

It will be seen at once that the practice of sending in small orders to be filled on the credit system has entailed a heavy burden on the publishing department. It has also encouraged a careless, unbusinesslike method of doing business among the Saints that ought not to have been. Thousands of dollars are on the Herald Office books due from long standing accounts which ought to have been in circulation for the benefit of the church. No business can long succeed if run in such a manner. No business man wants a large number of small amounts carried on his ledger from month to month and from year to year. Every good business man avoids such a method with his customers. The work of the Lord cannot succeed unless it also conforms to business principles. It will not do to longer run our accounts with the Saints at such loose ends. It will prove disastrous to the entire body as long as continued. The time has come to stop it if we want to avoid entire bankruptcy and failure.

We shall seek to hereafter look after the financial interests of the Herald Office by this method of doing business, because it is a proper method and the only right one.

The Saints themselves are damaged by the old credit system. It is their interests we are looking after in establishing the rule requiring cash payments for orders in the amounts named. The Herald Office plant belongs to the Saints—to the church. If it succeeds, the work is benefited; if it suffers loss, the church at large suffers. If anything ought to succeed God's work should; if anything requires system and order, the work of God does. It must have that system in all its financial departments in order to succeed—to have the blessing of the Lord.

When accounts are carried on the books the extra work of booking, sending out bills, debiting, crediting, etc., are all added—a considerable item in extra work, extra expense in bookkeeping, postage, correspondence, etc. And, by the time the small amount has been collected the office and the customer have often expended from ten to fifteen cents to get it in, and such amounts soon add up to a large sum in the aggregate. The office and the customer are both losers by it, and the profit if not the main portion of the indebtedness goes to the Government for postage, stationery, etc. Besides this, no businesslike person wants outstanding debts unpaid when such can be avoided.

Hence notice is given that after October 1, 1895, all orders under fifty cents in amount must be accompanied by the money or a remittance for it. Postage stamps, money or express orders, or drafts will be accepted. Registered letters are at the risk of the sender.

The Saints are asked to sustain the management in its efforts to promote the interests of the literary and publishing department. Our success is your success—the success of the cause we love and to which we have pledged our support.

WE RECOMMEND THAT EACH BRANCH APPOINT A BOOK AGENT through whom all orders for church publications can be made, and who can look after the Herald Office interests and the literary wants of Saints. Appoint reliable parties and we will ratify such appointments, allowing such agents a discount of ten per cent on book orders to cover their expenses. Will branch presidents please see that appointments of book agents are made at once. PLEASE AID US. In bonds, Yours for right,

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

THE committee appointed by the General Conference of 1895 to compile a smaller hymn and tune book—with words and music combined—have now completed their work and placed their manuscripts of words and music in the hands of the Board of Publication.

The members of the committee have spent months of hard work in performing the task assigned them and have also consulted others of acknowledged musical talent and scholarship, that the book when completed should be a credit to the church and a decided factor for good in its song service. The committee deserves credit for the good work done and we trust their efforts will receive prompt and manifest appreciation.

The General Conference in providing for the publication of the "Saints' Hymnal" stipulated that it be published when the Board of Publication had orders for one thousand copies, and owing to the low price of the book the Herald Office has found it necessary to require all orders to be accompanied by the money, otherwise the sale of the book on long time credits would be unprofitable and entail financial loss to the office.

We were promised large orders, but so far have received only about five hundred, and of these but half have been accompanied by the money.

In other words, we have received half enough orders and one fourth enough money to go ahead with the book.

The Saints through their representatives in General Conference ordered the publication of the Hymnal. They pledged it their support as they urged their need of the new book. We ask now that they send in their orders and money that the work be completed and put in their hands at once.

The price of the book is very moderate. It will be a credit to the church and a source of satisfaction to all lovers of sacred song, therefore a decided help.

The Saints' Hymnal, 50 cents per copy, cash in advance; bound in cloth, leather backs and corners; all substantial and neat work throughout.

Special styles of higher priced binding furnished as ordered. Address orders to the undersigned,

Business Manager,

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"There is a day of sunny rest
For every dark and troubled night;
And grief may bide an evening guest,
But joy shall come with every light."

"I GIVE unto you to be the light of the world."

Abraham looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God; neither was Abraham alone in this desire, but of his descendants, there were with him, an innumerable multitude who had not received the promises, but who were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth, seeking a country, even an heavenly one; and for this reason God is not ashamed to be called their God. For this reason Abraham when commanded of God hesitated not to take his lonely way to Mount Moriah, with the son of his old age, the son in whose life centered the possibility of the fulfillment of all the promises made to him, and there place willingly upon the altar this pledge of his love to God, knowing that, if necessary, God was able to raise him from the dead. Because of this Isaac blessed his children, and in blessing them revealed unto them by the power of God's Holy Spirit things yet in the future, which should bind their hearts to that country they were seeking. Because of this Jacob endured patiently all the sorrows of his life and in dying gave to the sons of Joseph a blessing reaching down even to the day in which we live.

And before us, as we write, what an army is passing. Their faces are toward the land they seek, and there is no difficulty in telling who they are, because they declare plainly that they are seeking that country. Were there no temptations for them? Was there nothing in life to lure them from the path in which their feet were set? "Truly if they had been mindful of the country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned." They were not without temptations and trials, but we see them forsaking the courts of kings and choosing to suffer affliction with the people of God. We see them put to the sword, tortured, and refusing deliverance, scourged, mocked, bound, imprisoned, stoned, sawn asunder, wandering in deserts and mountains, and finding shelter in dens and caves of the earth; clothed in sheepskins and goatskins, being destitute, afflicted, and tormented; of whom the world was not worthy. Paul tells us that not one of them received the promises, but they were persuaded of them and embraced them by faith, and endured all these things that they might obtain the first resurrection. By this innumerable company we are to-day surrounded—"compassed about by so great a cloud of witnesses;" and we too are desiring a part in the first resurrection; but there comes to our soul this morning the solemn truth that we shall never obtain it if we do not walk worthy of that unto which we are called. When the gospel was restored to the earth by the angel Moroni, it was the same gospel of faith and works which the Apostle James had spoken of. Faithfulness and perseverance—a continuance in well-doing was necessary then, and it is necessary to-day.

"Life seems so little when life is past,
And the memories of sorrow flee so fast,
And the woes which were bitter to you and to me,
Shall vanish as raindrops that fall in the sea;
And all that has hurt us shall be made good,
And the puzzles which hindered be understood,
And the long, hard march through the wilderness bare,
Seems but a day's journey when once we are there."

Dear Sisters:—This I am about to write to you may seem to you to be rather a singular way to instruct sisters, but they are singular people, and I try to teach them as I am led. My course with them for three conferences past—two in the fall and one in the spring—has been to hold a special meeting for the sisters, having them to tell as much as possible how they have been edified during the conference. They all enjoy this very much. At this conference I was led to conduct the meeting in a different way, and for the first time without an interpreter. I desired Sr. Case to sit near me, and at some time during the meeting, if she felt to do so, read a few verses appropriate, and speak the best she could in native. Also requested a native sister to sit with me and lead in the opening prayer. I read Ephesians 5: 1-16. (Sisters, I would like you all to read this,) after which I told them that at this conference we had organized the Sunday school association, and that the elders, priests, teachers, and deacons were organized into quorums; and that now there remained another organization for the sisters, called the "Daughters of Zion;" that they were not yet ready for this organization, and at this meeting I desired them to take upon themselves a new responsibility by each one telling what she thought our work was, as handmaids of the Lord, and what they should teach their children to do, and what to shun, and to pray to the Lord to give his Spirit to lead them.

They felt backward at first to express themselves. One young sister arose and read Titus 2: 3-5; then three elderly sisters arose and said they were in the dark and wished me to teach them. I told them I could but they would soon forget it; that I wanted them to tell it so that it would be stamped upon their minds; that they were mothers of latter-day Israel in this part of the Lord's vineyard and if they would try the Spirit would aid them. A bright young sister arose and stated what I desired them to do, and read Galatians 5, concerning the fruits of the flesh and of the Spirit. That gave them a clue, and I commended her for her statement. From that the elderly sisters one after another expressed their views and presented some of the grandest ideas and proof I ever heard. Few in America could have done better. One young girl about fifteen edified the whole assembly. The good Spirit glowed in my heart, bearing witness to their talk. We had been there then from one o'clock p. m. till four, with no place to stop and no chance as yet for Sr. Case to speak till then. She arose and read Proverbs 22: 6; 29: 15-17; 28: 18, and spoke a few words very correctly. They were elated over it. Then I told them how thankful I felt to have a sister missionary from America to help me; for over four years I had been alone, but now help had come. Some wept for joy.

Then I told them I desired to ask them a few questions and for them to answer: Is it right to teach our children to pray? They answered "Yes." To sing? "Yes." To get angry? "No." To honor the work of God? "Yes." To lie? "No." To steal? "No." To deceive? "No." To commit adultery? "No." To smoke tobacco? "No." To speak evil of one another? "No." To attend the house of worship? "Yes." To come clean in clothing and hair combed? "Yes." To come with dresses torn or ripped? "No." Did you ever see sisters come in such clothing? "No." I then stated that I had. Was it right for their children to be out at night late, and their parents not know where they were? "No." Is it right to teach them to exalt themselves? "No, but to be humble and meek."

Then I stepped to the edge of the platform, and besought them in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord for all those who used tobacco to put it away from them, and every other unclean thing; and try to live pure and to teach their children to live right; and do their best this year, and if they would, we would try next April to organize the "Daughters of Zion" among them.

I read Philippians 4: 8 desiring them to carry that in their minds during the year, then closed; after which together we gave our mites to the amount of $9.40. We may not be able to organize in full, but will go as far as we are directed by the Spirit.

Now another specimen of teaching while on the isle of Niau during the holidays. I asked the sisters if they would agree with me to hold prayer meeting every evening at five o'clock from Christmas till New Years, and try to get all the aged sisters, the young, and little girls to attend who belonged to the church; one sister was blind, they had to lead her there. They joyfully assented, and we truly had a good time. One of the days I had taken a walk and found a large leaf nearly broken off from the stem of the bush. I took it, and found in it a grand lesson to set before the sisters that evening. I felt timid to attempt to set the lesson before them in their language so they could understand it,—but when the time came I took the leaf in my hand and pointed out its beautiful shape and its defects; a hole here, a knot there, a scar here and a small one there; a part smooth and nice; then drew the lesson I intended, comparing our lives with the leaf. The blessed Spirit aided me beyond my expectation, and the lesson went home to every heart. The same young sister whom I referred to as starting the line of thought in our sister's meeting at our late conference arose there and with the same Spirit given me, she talked upon that leaf and the lesson it taught, and brought out far more than I was able to do; for she could in her own tongue do what I desired to do; the good Father used her for that purpose. I praised him in my soul for it. For O, I yearn for them to come out, to see, to learn, to act, to be teachers of the truth among themselves; and my soul rejoices to note the change in them for the better, in the last eighteen months! In many instances I have given them a foundation and have been astonished to see the outcome. May they yet come up to that standard of truth and light that is their privilege, is the earnest prayer of,

Your sister,

ELLA R. DEVORE.

AVATORU CITY, Rairoa Island, Oceania, April 22, 1895.

IOWA, July 9.

Dear Sisters:—With interest have your contributions been read by me. I have thought were I able to add to the many good things it would perhaps aid some other sisters as I have been aided. It is necessary (at least as it comes to my mind) that in the home should be found the children. God has designed it. In a dream I have been shown this was necessary, if we expect to be welcomed by the Savior; so let every mother feel happy in her family, realizing life is short here, and we must meet the great Ruler of the universe and know the time is fast approaching which will reveal the secrets of all hearts.

When the babe enters the home look upon it as a blank book. The babe soon learns our countenance, whether of a pleasing nature or angry; and after the child has been properly cultured until it can talk, and understand. I would like to say with the many good instructions already given, which I have read with interest, one thing should be remembered, to train and teach a child good manners. I have observed children who were never taught the first principle of manners. And those who have grown to young man and womanhood how do they appear? I have seen good-sized children who were kindly favored and in return not a word of thanks. Can anyone easily love and respect a child with this kind of training? Mothers, teach your children to be courteous when at home in childhood, and it will come natural whether at home or abroad.

When teaching these principles remember; first, you are looked to for the example. If Papa and Mamma are polite to each other before their children, does not the child observe it? We would answer, They do. Again; children should be taught not to have any more privileges when we take them to a friend's home than we allow at our own home. Of course many of the surroundings may appear strange to the child, but have it understand before going what is right and what is wrong, and if they survey everything in the house by handling it, it is wrong and illmannerly. Teach your children to be above doing anything that would cause anyone to dislike them. A child can be taught obedience by kindness and love, not by anger.

A great many will say: "I have no time for this foolish training, so I give them all they can wear and eat and send them out on the street or to a neighbor's to do as they please. This is all I have time to bother with them."

Sisters, think of it! Do you love your own children and do you want others to love them? and, above all, do you want Jesus to love them? Who will answer no?

Your sister,

C. T.

The first seagoing vessel of aluminum is being constructed in the dockyards of the Loire. It is a cutter which would weigh, if made of the usual materials, 4,500 tons, instead of its actual weight of 2,500 tons.

Under normal circumstances a man throws off two pounds every day in sensible and insensible perspiration.

West Virginia has 16,000 square miles of coal fields, and produces annually 5,000,000 tons.

Editors Herald:—On the 30th of May, I left all in the west and started to the Red River country; stopped a few days at Bonita, in Montague County, and came on to Manchester; stopped here one week and went forty miles east to what is called Shaney. Here is where I spent a part of last winter. I stopped here until the 7th of July and baptized three.

From here I went to Manchester to assist Bro. A. J. Moore in carrying on a protracted meeting. The meeting commenced on the 13th, but on account of rain I did not arrive until the 14th. Here we found the Saints had their house in shape to hold their meetings. The house is 24 x 40. Our meetings were well attended, and continued so all week. At the close one was baptized. It was thought that those meetings had done more to allay prejudice than any meetings ever held there.

On the 21st Bro. Pollard and family, Brn. Scott, Goodman, and family started; Bro. Pollard to Douglass and Bro. Goodman to make preparation for a week's meetings at Shaney.

On the 26th, in company with Bro. Butler we started for Shaney and arrived on the 27th at noon, and commenced meeting at night, and continued until Wednesday, the 31st. This meeting was a grand success. On Monday, the 29th, I baptized seven, and on the 31st John baptized two more; all but one are heads of families, and of the best citizens in the country. This swells their number to twenty-nine. On August 3, I arrived here, and to say that I met a welcome would not do justice to it. I have been holding forth to full houses with good interest. In bonds, A. B. MOORE.

Editors Herald:—The Nauvoo district tent commenced its second service at Blandinsville, Illinois, on the evening of July 10, Bro. J. L. Evans and myself were present to occupy. It was soon evident that there was a settled and determined effort to freeze us out; but through the grace of God, we held the fort till we were ready to move. Our stay was two weeks and one day. Seventeen discourses were delivered, one of which was presented by Bro. S. J. Salisbury. At several of the meetings the attendance was good, but as a rule, it was rather small. However, we had a few almost constant attendants, and we left several investigating and believing the restored gospel. We labored hard, and against most peculiar and trying opposition. The effort was by no means a failure, and under existing conditions was, perhaps, about all that could have been done.

July 27, at eight p.m., we commenced at Burnside, which is situated between Blandinsville and Nauvoo. We remained there three weeks and one day, delivering twenty-seven discourses in all. The attendance was fair and the interest good throughout, although but four were baptized, and they were largely convinced before the tent meetings began.

However, much good was done, and we feel pleased with results. Brn. A. H. Smith, J. R. Evans, F. M. Weld, and the writer did the preaching.

The tent moved from Burnside to Elvaston last Monday, where, it is presumed, Brn. Evans and Weld are now at work. I shall join them again to-morrow, if the Lord will, and we will remain there till it is time for the tent to be located at Park Bluffs, at Montrose, Iowa.

I am glad I came into the district when I did; but my strong premonitions of trial and suffering, had before leaving home, proved to be no disappointment to me, except (as is often the case) I was disappointed in the character of some of them. May the Lord give us grace in every needful way, to endure to the end.

"We want no cowards in our band
Who will our colors fly," etc.

It is a poor general indeed who will rest on his arms in time of great danger (if at all able to go to battle) when he sees his assistants, one after another, crippled by the enemy's power, and unable to go forth to battle.

WASHINGTON, Ind., Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—I have just arrived here from Ripley County, Indiana, where in company with M. R. Scott, Jr., and W. C. Marshall and James D. Porter, of Jefferson County, we held a two days' meeting in the grove of Bro. Flint; and I was much pleased with the interest taken by the dear Saints of that place in caring for us and all others from a distance. The grounds were well prepared and seated and the seats were all filled, and then all around them carriages were arranged and they were all full, so there was a large concourse of people.

M. R. Scott, Jr., occupied Friday evening and Sunday at three o'clock, William C. Marshall on Saturday evening, and your writer on Sunday morning and evening and on Monday evening. I then came here to attend the Knox County soldier's reunion, after which I will do some work in Sullivan County, then I think of going north into Northern Indiana and Michigan district.

I held a week's meeting with the Union branch in Jefferson County, Indiana, where I had the privilege of baptizing Sr. James Fewell, and left James to rejoice, as he has long looked for his noble wife to come into the church. I left that branch with a good interest, all praying me to stay longer and when I could not asked me to come back again as soon as possible and hold another meeting for them; but I cannot promise now as the work north demands my attention as soon as possible.

I am expecting another little discussion with the Campbellites in Sullivan, Indiana, and as there is where I was born and reared, I mean to hold the fort or die on the walls. The man's name is I. C. Stone.

I am feeling well and at work. I think this year has been better than last year so far with me; the interest has been good and there are many places calling for preaching that I cannot fill, especially in Sullivan County, Indiana. I wish Bro. I. P. Baggerly would send some one into Sullivan County while I am north, if he can and thinks best, as the interest is good there. Anyone going will call on Bro. and Sr. Allsman, eight miles southeast of Carlisle, Indiana, where they will be well cared for and find eight or ten places ready opened up and calling for the gospel.

If any of the Saints of Michigan desire to write me in reference to the work they will address me at Whitestown, Indiana.

Yours as ever,

LEONARD F. DANIEL.

LEEDS, England, Aug. 8.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Western district, South Wales, which was held at Llanelly on the 27th and 28th of July was fairly attended, and a marked degree of the Spirit was present to cheer and bless those in attendance. It is with much sorrow that I chronicle the death of our worthy and faithful brother, David Williams, who departed this life very suddenly Sunday night, July 28. He was talking with two of the sisters at ten o'clock in regard to the gospel, and seemed quite strong and cheerful, and in less than three quarters of an hour after they left his spirit had taken its flight and had wafted away to the paradise of Christ. The Llanelly branch has suffered a great loss in the death of Bro. Williams, as he was an able expounder of the gospel in both the English and Welsh languages, and had written many articles on the faith, which were published in the newspapers of the town. He was about as good a historian as you would generally meet. He had the ability of translating from one language to another at sight. He had passed the seventy-fourth mile post of life.

We feel thankful to the Lord that his end was that of peace. Bro. Adolphus Edwards and the writer officiated at the obsequies. Bro. Edwards spoke splendidly in the Welsh language and the remarks were highly appreciated by the assembly. Bro. John Edwards is president of the branch, and is now the only elder left, as the old ones have all died. Bro. J. Edwards is striving more faithfully than ever to do his duty. May the Lord bless him and his colaborers; namely, L. Bishop and A. Edwards, in their efforts to keep the camp fire blazing.

The Great Welsh eisteddfod which was held at Llanelly the latter part of July was a great success. There were among the gathering the greatest singers of the Welsh nation. I had the pleasure of listening to over fifteen thousand people singing together under the conductorship of Professor Perry. A number of choirs composed of three hundred voices and orchestra competed for prizes. The renowned tenor singer, Mr. Ben Davies, and the great baritone singer, Frankland Davies, with Miss Russell of London, besides hundreds of other famous singers of the world took part in the "eisteddfod." It is beyond my ability to describe the grandeur of the singing that I had the pleasure of listening to. I only wished at the time that all my brethren and sisters could have enjoyed the feast; for to me it was a feast, yes, a time I shall never forget. The most remarkable fact about the Welsh singers is that but very few understand the notes, but sing solely under or by the direction of the conductor, hence it is that singing is a natural gift to them. What a pity that we cannot get those sweet singers into the kingdom of God!

The British Isles mission conference convened on the evening of the 3d of August and continued over the 5th. The conference was a success, as there was a large gathering of elders present, all of whom seemed to feel the responsibility of their calling. The spirit of peace, good will, and harmony characterized the entire proceedings.

The speakers enjoyed much freedom in dispensing the word of life. The testimony meeting was indeed a spiritual feast, as a calm, peaceful spirit pervaded the assembly and many interesting testimonies were borne to the miraculous manifestations of God's power in our day. God be praised.

By the time this letter reaches the Herald Office the writer anticipates to be in Reikiavik, Iceland, as I sail on the steamer "Laura" on Saturday the 10th inst., from Granton, near Edinburg, Scotland, by way of the North Sea. It will take one week to make the journey. I received a letter from that place last week stating that some were waiting baptism. Was also informed that three Salvation Army captains had arrived and were creating quite a sensation among the people there; so we think it about time the Lord's army was encamped there; and by the help of the "Great General" himself we will endeavor to unfurl the banner of King Emmanuel to the inhabitants of that cold and dreary land within the next few weeks. We beg an interest in the prayers of all the Saints in behalf of the missionary who goes, and the people, that their hearts may be prepared to receive the gospel message. We go there at a great disadvantage, for the reason that but very few can speak or understand the English language, and the cold climate will not permit of a long stay. It is said that the sea is rough and the weather generally wild and stormy in that latitude; but we trust that the one who tempers the storm to a shorn lamb, will be with his servants to protect them from all harm and danger both on land and sea.

Yours hopefully,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

SAN JOSE, Cal., August 13.

Editors Herald:—Our Southern reunion passed off with less friction than any other that I have participated in. All seemed to be interested in the meetings and enough felt the responsibility of true Sainthood resting upon them to urge them to the performance of their duties as Saints, to think as little of self as possible, and to seek others' good, and to do all they did do for the glory of God, and the good of his work and the edifying of the Saints; therefore there was an absence of that irritating jealousy and selfishness which causes persons to hang their heads and in whispered innuendoes, grumble at "the way things are going on," etc., etc., all this being absent. A spirit of brotherly love was manifested and the good Spirit of love from our heavenly Father was prevalent and all were made happy. The testimony meetings were very enjoyable and much good exhortation, revelation, prophecy, and counsel were offered to the Saints by the spirit of revelation and tongues. Some quite marked cases of healing also were received, and the preaching was, I think, exceptionally good.

Bro. Blair was called upon quite often, as the Saints were delighted to hear his wise counsels and instruction in all their duties, privileges, and blessings, and clear-cut expositions of the beautiful doctrines of Christ our Lord; while Sr. Blair in her quiet, Saint-like demeanor and most excellent counsel in testimony, and motherly, unassuming manner among the sisters and brethren, won the esteem of all Southern California. May God ever bless them, and may their influence for good ever increase.

I think the influence of that reunion will be felt on through the ages; for testimony and instruction was received by some that will be lasting, either for life unto life or of death unto death.

During the reunion we received word from Bro. Clapp, from Oregon, saying that he was almost unable to work on account of sickness. The Saints remembered him before the throne of grace, and shortly after we heard that he was healed, he writing to us that he had not felt so well for many years. He relates the following experience: "After preaching one evening and having great liberty, while singing the closing hymn, a young lady (a school-teacher) came up to the stand and throwing herself on her knees cried out in a clear voice: 'I cannot resist the power of God any longer, I wish to be baptized and consecrate myself to God and to his service.' Many men and women came up to the stand and shook hands with her and blessed the young lady, one of them saying, 'Praise the Lord, Lucy has found Jesus at last. Praise his holy name.' About four hundred persons were present."

Bro. Clapp writes that he wishes he had a few dozen elders in his part of the mission to help fill the many calls; twenty-eight different places requiring his services at once, and he reports unusual liberty of the Spirit in declaring the word. Thus in this mission are the beautiful words of promise given of God to us in 1894 ratified: "The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work . . . at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past." How beautiful, peaceful, and Christlike the instruction and promise; and all the missionaries are striving to emulate the ideal missionary, to be "kind of heart and of a lowly spirit, that their wisdom may be the wisdom of the Lord, and their strength the strength of the Spirit . . . that as ministers of the gospel they may win souls unto Christ," and God is blessing us.

We expect Bro. and Sr. Blair at our Northern and Central California reunion at Santa Cruz, and Bro. D. L. Harris, who is in charge of the Central California missionary field, and will labor here until next spring; and possibly Bro. Newton, from the Society Islands, and Bro. Daley, and many of our local ministers and Saints of these two districts; not forgetting our worthy district president, Bro. Putney, who with the brethren of the committee have made excellent arrangements for the comfort of all. And so we are laboring on, trying to "be cheerful in our warfare that we may be joyous in our triumph;" for triumph we will if we strive lawfully to conquer evil.

Our friends of the Utah persuasion are making strenuous efforts to establish themselves in the cities of the Pacific States. Their sophistries are unavailing with the Saints, especially with those who are at all acquainted with the books or history of the church or of that people. I think it would be an excellent thing to compile and publish some of the proofs from the books on the true successorship to the Presidency, with such items of history on the question as may be deemed wise, as an answer to Elder Roberts' "Successor." If this could be done at once it would be a benefit to many of the Saints here who have not access to their history nor to the church history of the past sixty years, nor have made themselves especially acquainted with the question. STORY, Wis., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—We moved our tent to this place a week ago. Have had fair interest considering the Catholic element of French type that we have to contend with. After all, I find that Catholics are about as reasonable as Protestants. We baptized eleven persons at Oregon and yesterday they were organized into a branch to be known as the Oregon branch. Several of the Saints from Wilder were over at the time. We had sacrament and testimony meeting. The visible gifts of the Spirit were enjoyed, calling Bro. William Robinson to the office of elder and Bro. Henry Lockwood to the office of teacher. Expect to move from here to Yellowstone.

We are now only seven miles from where we started with the tent the middle of May. One of the parties baptized who had been compelled to use a cane and a crutch to walk with for eleven years, found this morning on going to breakfast that he entirely forgot his crutch and to-day is walking about town and working in the garden with the crutch laid away in the closet. He testified in the meeting yesterday that he "had lived a faithful member of the M. E. Church for fifty years, but had never witnessed such a glorious meeting." God blessed him with what light he had in Methodism but now he had accepted more light and with it came greater blessings.

I am suffering with a felon at present, but hope to be over that soon.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 18.

Editors Herald:—For the first time in my short ministerial experience I feel the result of unceasing labor, in insomnia, induced by over activity and anxiety of mind. Certain nervous weakness (prenatal in its origin) is asserting itself, though I am yet a young man.

During a stay of four months I have been busier, enjoyed greater liberty, and baptized more converts than in all the two years since arriving in this field. Up to the present I have not found a quitting time. Since April 1, I have baptized sixteen, preached on the street, in the hall, and in private houses; organized the "Austral Sunday school" after General Association methods; ordained one teacher; and performed other duties unnecessary to mention. There are thousands of people yet to reach. The above labor has been confined to one suburb only (Balmain). Within a radius of twenty miles from the general post office there is a population of four hundred thousand. Have found a temporary quitting place and will move on to New Castle for a short season, notwithstanding the protests of the local officers, who feel unable to take a new responsibility of caring for thirty-three new converts and twenty-eight old ones, and occupying the pulpit twice each Sunday. I would be sorry if they felt their self-sufficiency; so think it safe to leave them for a season, leaving the result to Him who is at the helm. This branch has now had seven months of special labor, and surely will not murmur if left alone for a while. However, we feel there is yet a work to be done in Sydney and shall bestow more labor in future.

Your correspondent was well remembered in money and presents on the occasion of his twenty-eighth anniversary last week. He now wears a new suit as a result, which supplies him for another year to come. With a reasonable practice of economy, I can say I have not wanted since coming to Australia, notwithstanding the depressed times, for which I feel thankful. The Sydney branch has spent in behalf of the work, during the last six months, about one hundred and sixty-five dollars, and they are nearly all working people too. They expect to purchase an organ soon and rent better quarters, a hall which is being built by one Brother Henrichs. Prayer meetings are too large for capacity of private houses, which necessitates a hall for one extra night. Their running expenses for the coming year will be no less than ten dollars per month.

I hope we will be able to give this part of Sydney a thorough canvassing this coming Australian summer. In my judgment we need tracts of a different construction for city work. I notice the tracts used by other propagandists are short, of large type, (partly displayed), making them easily read. Busy people are not liable to read and digest a large four to eight page tract, of fine print. I would delight to see our tracts revised, or a few "appetizers" issued after the above principle. Have wished for a tract fitted for instilling principles of tolerance and killing prejudice, to prepare the mind for the solid truths contained in our present series. This kind I regard as a positive necessity in city work (at least here) where we have much outdoor work. Such tracts (being small and cheap) could be used more liberally, serving more by awakening a desire to attend the indoor services than by supplying, on the spot, the alpha and omega of the gospel to minds more or less unprepared for it, even though they did wade through the pages of fine print. The "common people" are the ones we reach (as did Jesus), and, as a rule, are not habitual readers; hence, what they read must be short, and suggestive rather than exhaustive. I always aim to make my outdoor services a means of advertising the main services indoors rather than preaching set sermons, often to a moving congregation and amid the noise of the street. I believe in giving out tidbits, "sample packages," with a view to preparing the untaught mind for a quiet hour's teaching in the regular hall. If I could get the people of this city to know these two things: we are the true Latter Day Saints, and the place of our worship, I would feel that much had been accomplished.

Our prayer meeting last night was excellent in spirit and activity, and reminded me of home. With a new teacher (Bro. Joseph Smith by the way) they are in better condition for work. So we are rejoicing in the good work over this way. In hope,

GOMER WELLS.

BANDERA, Texas, August 19.

Editors Herald:—The work in this part is slow, yet we think we can see a spiritual growth. Our meetings are generally well attended. I shall soon go to San Antonio, Flowersville, Falls City, and home to Beeville with the intention of returning at once to attend conference on Pipe Creek, in this county, to convene on the 19th of September. I learn that Bro. A. B. Moore has arrived in San Antonio and hope to meet him at that place. I very much desire too that Bro. H. P. Curtis shall get here in time to attend our conference, also that Bro. George Montague may be able to reach Bandera County by that time, with others of the ministry. Brethren, come over and help us. We need your help, and now is the accepted time.

Brethren of the district, hope and pray for a profitable time. We need a revival and must have it. Bro. Nunley and Bro. Currie, of the Central district, you have been having a good time over there; come now to our conference and help us. We can offer you anything but money. Money we have not got, but such as we have we will give unto you. The membership of our district is small, but if we will make a general turnout and take the Spirit of the Master with us we can have a good time. If we have any malice one toward another, bury it before starting, and bury it so deep that we cannot find it on our return home.

Come one, come all, and come with a determination to serve the Lord. Remember what one of old said, "Choose you this day whom you will serve," and resolve as he did, that "as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Those who choose to come by rail to Boerna, on the A. P. & S. A. road, let us know as soon as possible and we will make arrangements to meet you with conveyance fifteen miles from Pipe Creek. We would like very much if many of the members of Central district could come.

Yours in hope of success,
L. L. WIGHT, Dist. Pres.

BEAVER, Texas, August 18.

Editors Herald:—Our meetings of late have been quite successful, Father doing the baptizing. Should I write of the interest manifested in so many places it would require a letter every week, so many calls for preaching and only four traveling elders in this large State.

Bro. Montague, can you come and help us? I have written you, also sent you July's report, and to my surprise when I came here report and letters were returned. Please inform me where to write you. I wrote you and sent to your address. In bonds,

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—One of the things that is a mystery to me is, how those who have the means at their command can read so many and such urgent calls for assistance and remain silent and inactive so far as responding to the call goes. It seems to me a shame that the fund in the Northern California district is exhausted entirely, and has been for over two months. If we were all poverty-stricken people there might be some excuse for it.

Saints are surely standing in their own light who fail to do their whole duty. We are (if we wish to be the esteemed of God) to do all we can for the furtherance of the gospel. I often think that we are too much for self, that we lack faith. See Acts 5:1-10. O, let us be faithful, dear Saints, let us try to love one another so much that we will send our tithes and offerings to God's storehouse so there may be no lack of those who have not been able to gather for themselves by reason of old age or misfortune, and those families of the ministry who with hearts filled with love for God and his cause leave loved ones and all home comforts and go out to carry the real "bread of life," shall they need while you have abundance and to spare? No, no; God forbid. It is not in harmony with the light you have.

Do let us shake off the love of the things that perish. Let us "lay up treasures in heaven." "I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment."—D. C. page 280.

We are also told, "These are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus; wherefore they obtained not the crown." I have always had an idea that to be "valiant in the testimony of Jesus," is more than simply being baptized, or of even bearing testimony in meeting and offering a prayer in public. To be valiant means to strive in every lawful way to bring the teachings of Jesus to the notice of those who have not as yet done so. And how can it be done if not by sending God-appointed ministers to the world, and we thus (indirectly) bear a valiant testimony to the world of the truth which we have received and show by our actions that we are anxious that others may share the blessings?

If we want to be in harmony with God we must be godlike, or as Peter puts it, "add to your faith . . . godliness." God gave his "only begotten Son" for us. He loves us, and he wants us to love him and each other to the extent that we will give, not only a few dollars, but our life if need be, or so the Savior said. (See Luke 14:26; Matt. 10:37, 38.)

Let us all so live that we may merit his approval, or we may rest assured we will not get it.

CARSON, Iowa, August 17.

Editors Herald:—I closed a series of meetings last night in the Christian church at this place. The attendance was very good on Sunday night, and though not so large during the week, a number besides the few Saints residing here came out and paid very good attention to the word preached. Some expressed regret that I could not remain longer, and invited me to return.

I also tried to preach at Oakland, speaking once in the city hall, and once in a private house. The church people there were not liberal enough to open their houses for me. The M. E. minister told me that he refused the house as a matter of self-defense. The man must have known that his cause was weak.

The few Saints here and in the neighborhood are alive in the work and glad to help the cause along. What a help to the traveling minister when he finds those of the household of faith living their religion and ready to assist him, while, upon the other hand, how discouraging when those who ought to know better bring reproach upon the cause! Would to God that all could realize this, that we might learn to be careful in our dealings with our fellow men, that no act of ours should bring a stain upon the fair name of the church, but in all regards live so as to make the name of Latter Day Saint honorable!

The missionary force in this district are all at work, and though we cannot report many additions, we trust the seed scattered will not all fall on barren ground. We are looking forward to our coming reunion at Council Bluffs, commencing September 12, as a means that shall result in much good to the work in this part of the vineyard, and we trust the Saints in the surrounding country—as many as can—will put forth an effort to be there.

Come at the beginning, prepared to stay till the close. Come to worship, and bring the Spirit of the Lord with you, and we are sure that none will regret the time and means spent to this end. Trusting and willing to labor for the ultimate triumph of Zion's cause,

Yours in bonds,
H. N. HANSEN.

Gospel Tent, six miles north of JANESVILLE, Wis., August 16.

Editors Herald:—We set up our gospel tent July 29 by a country roadside in a quite thickly settled United Brethren neighborhood, as some of said brethren had said last winter when Bro. McDowell and the writer were preaching at the Grange Hall about three miles further south: "We wish they would come over into our neighborhood and preach, as we would like to know just what they do believe." So to gratify their seeming desire to learn of us we asked them for the use of their churchhouse, only to be politely refused; but still some said, "We want to hear." So on the date above mentioned we left Indian Ford, where we had a good interest and many friends, and came here; but with the going up of the tent there seemed to be a falling of the spiritual thermometer of our U. B. friends, and they have demonstrated in what particular sense they are united—that is, to either boycott or turn a deaf ear to everything not branded "U. B.," and so far as visible results are concerned, we have no hopes of seeing any as the fruits of our labors here.

A young man from Janesville came to the tent in company with Bro. Hills, from Afton, and was baptized last Sunday. We go from here next week to a small place on the river about four miles distant called Newville. Some from that place have been our attendants both here and while we were at Indian Ford, and urgently request us to come there and preach for them.

We are all feeling well in the work, and though discouragements sometimes lie along the line of missionary labor, yet we did not expect to always find the paths strewn with roses, and the good news that comes to us from other fields gives us cheer, and so we purpose to press on. In faith,

CHAS. H. BURR.

MOSS POINT, Miss., Aug. 14.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me engaged in the marvelous work. Since last writing I have held meetings at Flat Rock, Pleasant Hill, and Lone Star, Monroe County, Alabama; baptized twenty in all. I closed an eight nights discussion with L. N. Brock, Missionary Baptist, last night, in the Baptist church at Moss Point, Mississippi. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was put to the test the first four nights and the Missionary Baptist Church the last four. The general expression of the people during the debate and at the close was, "Elder Brock is down, never to rise."

We got the gospel before people that never heard it before. The Saints of the Three Rivers branch attended and some from Bayou Casotte and Theodore, Alabama,

They all seemed to be cheered and well pleased with our part of it.

L. N. Brock, of Scranton, Mississippi, my opponent, is a city preacher of considerable note among his people, but unacquainted with the latter-day work. His arguments were the usual tirade of ridicule. He undertook to prove Baptist succession, but failed, and quit the subject; in fact, he failed to prove anything. Everybody I heard say anything about it was in our favor.

The debate was gotten up by Mr. E. B. Smith, a merchant, of Moss Point, Mississippi, who is a friend to our cause. I put up with him during the debate. He seemed to enjoy it very much; I am lucky in getting debates everywhere I go. I am always willing to defend what I teach and glad of the chance. We can reach people at debates that we could never reach otherwise with the gospel. I closed my fourteenth one last night and am ready for the next.

I received a letter from T. W. Smith yesterday at Theodore, Alabama, to come at once and meet two Utah elders. I never had this opportunity before. The Utah elders are quite numerous down here in Mississippi and Alabama. Our local elders are meeting them in places and putting down much prejudice among the people by showing the difference. The people are finding that we are not the same. I will commence meeting to-night at Bluff Creek. In bonds,

SHEFFIELD, England, Aug. 8.

Editors Herald:—This afternoon I have just bidden farewell to the last one attending the British Isles mission conference held in this city August 3-5; which is now a thing of the past in the events of our lives, but in our memory we shall have cause to long remember the good time we were permitted to enjoy. The whole conference was a grand one from beginning to the close, with Presidents Caffall and Griffiths in charge. The former has left here this morning for Staveleytown to do some missionary work. I am sorry to say that while our dear aged brother has strong desires to push the work forward, he has to labor under disadvantages, he having recently taken cold, and it is telling quite a tale. But we pray he will soon be released of his cough and cold.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths left on Monday night for Leeds and thence to Iceland. I trust he may have safe and prosperous journey and do much good amongst that people. The brethren that came from many other places have taken their leave, and we are again left to take up our cross and follow the Master to fight on until that time shall come when we shall hear that welcome voice, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." May it be so is my humble prayer.

The work in this country seems to move only slowly, but I feel to say with President Joseph Smith that there will be a good work done here yet. We can see all round us day by day how tradition and hearsay are fast giving way and truth is triumphant. May the day hasten when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. I love to read the valuable columns of the Herald as it comes laden with good news from far and near. May God speed the cause to its ultimate triumph and victory.

Your brother in bonds,
J. ARBER.

THE UNITED STATES AS A NATION.

DOUBTLESS it was the design of God that the land of America should be reserved for a free people where the rule of kings should not succeed. It is a land blessed above all other lands, and the decree of the Almighty is that the people who dwell thereon should worship him and obey his commands, disobedience to which in the fullness of their wickedness would bring to them utter destruction, as the decrees of God are unchangeable. The history of the land revealed to us in the Book of Mormon tells us that this was the fate of those nations who had lived here in the long ago, and the question is, Shall we not also suffer from the same decree if we do not give heed to the commands that have been revealed to us as a people in these, the latter days.

When America was discovered it was hailed with a shout of joy and a song of gladness by the people of all nations. Kings did try to do as they had done with the old world, divide it among their favorites, but they had no success. With the coming of the Pilgrim Fathers came the vanguard of the army of liberty who fought the kings and triumphed in the declaration of independence. When the Civil War was ended there came a new proclamation that all men were free and equal without distinction of race or color or previous condition of servitude. Since then the nation has made wonderful progress in the arts of manufacturing and land reclamation, towns and cities have been built as if by magic, railroads have been built from sea to sea, and machines for the assistance of labor are almost innumerable, in fact everything for good to man to aid him to happiness; yet with all that has been said and done, we are a most unhappy people.

There is a great army of reformers; they all have a sure cure for the ills that are, yet in spite of it all the discontent continues. We call ourselves a sovereign people having the right to rule through our servants in state and nation, and if we rule in justice and truth, bearing in mind favors to none, equal rights to all, then we will, indeed, be a free people, but if we forget such things we may be a republic only in name. Born Americans are oftentimes offended when told that the people have ceased to be sovereigns and at best are only transplanted Europeans because our laws and customs are but a remodel of European rule in money matters. We use their gold standard, we have the same laws for trespass on our land, the Irish have a much better tenant's right law than we have, our tramp laws are even more severe, aliens own lands, mills, mines, and manufacturing interests.

The President has the right of veto and what king in Europe has ever made such free use of that right as the presidents of the United States. Just think of it, the people through their Congress declare, This we have decreed to be for a law. His Excellency the president says, Not so, here is my veto. If this is not one man rule what is it, for the facts remain that it is seldom that his veto can be set aside.

We have no princes, dukes, or lords, and it is too bad, for it puts many of our rich young ladies to the inconvenience of having to go to Europe to get husbands, but we have the classes, the rich who live in their palaces, ride in their special cars, and dine at the grand hotels; those of the middle class, who pay as they go and are rated among the respectables, because they have the means to do so; then we have the poor, who, when they ride, must do so in the smoking car or among the freight on the steamboat, dine at the cheap restaurants, and sleep in the third class hotels; then we have our army of beggars we call tramps, but it is needless to write more; the facts are everywhere present.

A gift may be of great value to the giver, but if the receiver sees and understands not the gift or the value thereof how can he make a good use of it or feel a loving gratitude to the giver for a thing of priceless worth. Thus it is in regard to the gift of liberty, and self-rule God has given us on this great and bountiful land. How many of those who have come to this land have ever thought of this, or who of those that have been born in this country have ever fully considered the declaration of rights the fathers framed in the constitution and laws of these United States? Have they not forgotten the God of the land and run wild after the god of the world, the almighty dollar? For the last twenty years this has been the main object of a great majority of the people; let us make money, all is fair that pays, is there money in it? if so we are with you. This has been the voice and act of far too many; they have not been content with that which would make them comfortable and well-to-do, they must heap wealth and money by the millions; yes, they must be millionaires. A new country full of every good; fertile fields, mines of coal, iron, copper, lead, silver, gold, and precious gems, with men of inventive ingenuity. Is it a wonder they did get rich? No, when we consider their methods. Here is a sample: a company is formed to mine at one cent a share, one dollar a hundred shares; the mine is opened in working order, the stock is increased. How? By calling each stockholder's one cent share one dollar, or in other words one dollar invested gives the stockholder dividends on one hundred dollars. Look at the craze there has been in land speculations, lots selling for thousands of dollars that were just as wild and unimproved as when they were stolen from the Indians!

Look at the debt and mortgage fever men have gone into; debt on all sorts of concerns. Borrowing money seems to be the rule with many as the way to get rich; their plans often failing they borrow more long as they can, then there is a crash and the bottom falls out of their values. The western mortgages are a fair example; some man with his family settles on a homestead with scant means, he struggles along for five years, then he concludes to mortgage and go back to the home of his childhood, he gets two of his neighbors to testify his land is worth three thousand dollars, he tells the loan agent he is going to spend the money on home improvements, he knows he is lying; but who cares?

Not he; and what does the agent? The bigger the loan the more commission to him; the lender sees big interest for the money lent. The results are, forsaken farms; some rich agents, some money lenders come to grief, for the land that is good for the mortgage would not sell for the money lent thereon.

Thus it has been over all the land, the money is spent now; there are debts and distress everywhere; the workman is poor, he must toil. Being needy we can hire him cheap; he protests against those wages; we tell him this is a free country, he need not toil for such wages unless he pleases. There is a man with something to sell, he is in a pinch, he must sell and we can buy, he asks a fair price; we could hold and sell in a short time at a good profit, but knowing his need offer him much less; he sells and this is called a good trade.

Ask the merchant, Have you any good butter, sugar, molasses, jellies? etc. O, yes, he has them all for sale good and cheap, but he knows scarce anything he has for sale is genuine. He dare not tell the truth about his goods, so he sells all and everything good and cheap; for people nowadays want everything good and cheap and many like to be humbugged.

Much has been said about the ballot box; workmen are in the majority, they can rule; but of what value do they consider this right or have they ever considered this right to rule? I have known a mine full of men vote as Jim, the boss, wanted. I know that whiskey and a few flattering words have bought many. Yes, come vote our ticket, lots of whiskey and after the polls close we are going to have a grand fandango up at the Highfly. Men have said to me, "Vote for us, we will make it as good as a day's wages." A friend says, "Why were you not up at the election?" "Well, I have thought it all a sham." "Yes, so do I; but I was paid for being there."

I have known a county to elect a reform ticket, the men elected were sure to reform things, they took their pay the same as others, taxes were the same; where the reform was no one could tell. I knew a time when a reform party sent seventeen workmen to Congress. Those men could have held the house, as the other parties were so near a tie neither could easily get a majority, but they sold out, part to the Republicans and part to the Democrats.

I have known many men work hard in the prime of life, earn much money, but it was all spent in gambling, drinking, and other like foolishness. I have known the majority of the workmen of a mine out all night because a lewd woman was around. I have seen a train stop on the track and all the crew go to fire up in a saloon, but I won't write more. It makes me sick, sorrowful, and disgusted to even think of all I know of the wickedness of those sovereign workmen, and I mention these things merely to show what we really are as a nation; and I ask the question, What can be expected from such a state of affairs or from such men?

We want reform, we truly need it, but there can be no reform till men reform themselves, cease to quarrel and find fault, and seek to establish peace. We must begin anew to think and to live for good to all, favor to none. The foundation principles must be in men and not in things. Men must learn what is truth, justice, and mercy, they must study for the good of the whole. Take the workman and his neighbors who helped him to mortgage his farm: Was the farm really worth three thousand dollars? Nay, they all knew it was not. Why then did they lie? To get the money. Why did the agent lend? To get money. Why did the lender accept the mortgage? For the high rate of interest. So the rich and poor are alike, they all do it for the money and they feel justified in so doing. Why? Because they work on the principle of, Take advantage of your fellow when you can, he does the same, they all do it. He who succeeds laughs, he who loses curses and trys some new dodge to beat some other fellow.

This land should be a land of refuge, a home for the poor and oppressed of all nations, that all might be free, that the rule of might makes right may give place to the rule of right is might, and truth shall prevail; and for this cause has God revealed anew his plan of salvation and established his covenant that all might receive the Spirit of promise that would lead and guide into all truth; and in so doing we would indeed become a great nation, a free people, a brotherhood of men. God's plan is a perfect plan, his ways are all just, true, and merciful. Observance of his laws would end all confusion, strife, and contention, and hasten the long-expected, happy time when the Prince of Peace shall rule over all the earth, one long day of a thousand years.

WILLIAM CAIRNS.

THE UNITY OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.—No. 2.

BY ELDER E. E. WHEELER.

THERE is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling.—Eph. 4:4.

Having shown in our first article the actual condition of the world at the present time, we shall next inquire as to whether there is any divine warrant or provision for these conditions.

We are told that all the existing sects and denominations are necessary, that every man may be suited, and that all may find some religious body with which they can conscientiously unite. If this is a wise provision, why did not Jesus discover it and apply it in the fulfillment of his mission? The fact that he only laid down one way (see Matt. 7:14) and organized but one church (see Matt. 16:18; 1 Cor. 12:13; Eph. 4:4; 1:22, 23) utterly overthrows this theory.

Ofttimes the different denominations are compared to different roads leading into the same city. It does not matter what road we take, we shall all arrive at the same destination, the celestial city. This is a pleasant theory, if true; but it is not true, because it flatly contradicts Jesus in Matthew 7:14; and because it is not a correct comparison. If four different roads leading into a city are equally good, why do men travel all these different roads? Because they are in different positions from the city. If all lived directly north they would take the direct road leading south; if all lived south they would take the road leading north; and so on. But notice,—they take different roads because they are in different positions from the city. Are we in different positions from the celestial city? We must be if the comparison holds good; but we are not.

As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall be made alive.—1 Cor. 15:22.

All are in the same position before God. All died in Adam.

So death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned.—Rom. 5:12.

All have a heritage of sin and death by the transgression of Adam, and all have a remedy for sin in the gospel of Christ. The means adopted to lift one man out of the bondage of sin, will lead all men out; and hence there is no necessity for more than one way, one means, one gospel, one plan of salvation.

Modern Christianity has nothing in the word of God, to justify itself in its divided and distracted condition. On the contrary, every analogy drawn from nature, every comparison in God's word, every breath of inspiration relative to the subject condemns it and proclaims the unity and oneness of God.

I am the vine, ye are the branches.—John 15:5.

Every branch is governed by the same law, nourished by the same sap, and bears the same fruit.

Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.—1 Cor. 12:27.

But now are they many members, yet but one body.—Verse 20.

What a beautiful comparison is this. The church, the body of Christ compared to the physical body. The human body is composed of many members, so is the church. All the members are necessary in the human body, so also the members in Christ's spiritual body. There is no schism or division among the members composing the human body; so there should be no schism in the church. The members in the physical body are all in subjection to the one spirit, and all act in harmony therewith and with each other, else the body would be divided and destroyed. Every member in the body of Christ is equally honorable and necessary with every other. All should work in perfect unity and harmony, under the direction of the one Spirit, the Spirit of God. Those who believe in many bodies, and many spirits, teaching many opposing and conflicting creeds and doctrines, would do well to read this carefully and prayerfully:—

There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism.—Eph. 4:4, 5.

In the Bible everything is one. One God, one Christ, one church, one body, one head, one spirit, one faith, one way, one gate, one door, one baptism, one gospel universally adapted to the salvation of the race.

Earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.—Jude 3.

Here the oneness, or the unity of the plan of salvation, is manifest. The faith means one faith, or one system of salvation, introduced into the world by the Lord Jesus Christ.

Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you. Now this I say, that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ. Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?—1 Cor. 1:10-13.

O that we had the living Paul to speak to discordant, jarring, confused, distracted, sectarianisms, and ask them if Christ is divided, or if Wesley was crucified for them, or if they were baptized in the name of Alexander Campbell! No such thing was ever dreamed of in New Testament times as the Christian Church divided up into numerous conflicting sects, having different forms of government, diverse creeds and doctrines. Divine wisdom never provided for this condition, but this work of destruction and death was left to be accomplished by "the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth."

As a fitting climax to our scriptural evidence we will introduce Jesus,— "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word," that they all may be divided, as God and the Devil are divided; that a thousand different sects may spring from the Mother of Harlots, and distract, stupefy, and make drunken with spiritual drunkenness the whole world; that they may teach diverse doctrines; that they may steal away the key of knowledge; that they may hedge up the way of life; that faith may decrease in the earth; that revelation and inspiration upon which eternal life depends may cease; that they may be one in nothing but to deny the power of God and the manifestations of the Spirit; such as visions, dreams, ministration of angels, prophecy, tongues, gifts of faith, wisdom, healing; and that they may persecute and shed the blood of the people of God? Did he pray that way? Hardly! Yet if the positions of the sects be true, that is the way he should have prayed. Did he say that it does not matter what a man believes just so he is honest? I guess not! Now listen and hear what he did say:—

That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one.—John 17: 21, 22.

Christ and his Father were one in purpose and object, one in love, one in principle, one in faith. Who ever heard of Christ disagreeing with, or teaching different principles than those taught by his Father. He did his Father's will. He taught his Father's doctrines. (John 7:16.) As he received of the Father, so he delivered it unto the world.

Why is infidelity rapidly increasing? Because popular professed Christianity is not genuine Christianity; because professing Christians are not one as Jesus prayed. A wail goes up from the popular churches that they are losing their hold upon the masses of the people; that the working class is becoming non-church goers and non-church members. Why is this? Because the creeds are getting a little stale; because arrogance, pride, haughtiness have been substituted for the humility, meekness, and simplicity of the ancient gospel.

But little progress is being made in converting the Heathen abroad, because the foreign missionaries teach as many different doctrines, from the same inspired book, as there are different denominations; and the Heathen is smart enough to see it. With all the organizations for good in the land working in connection with the churches, crime is on the increase at an appalling rate over and above the increase in population. Murder, rape, suicide, divorce, marital infidelity, are increasing rapidly. Avarice, selfishness, and dishonesty are ruining the world. The vain pride and avarice of man are fanned into a consuming flame by immense fortunes accumulated in a few years by speculation. Avarice has made men brutes.

The working class, the bone and sinew of the nation, is being ground to powder under the iron heel of avarice. It is also wasting its substance for that which is not bread. And last, but not least, the liquor power raises its foul, serpentine head, and dictates to the political parties of the United States. The Government licenses the traffic for revenue. It is just as legal to sell whisky and damn the souls and bodies of men, as it is to sell flour; and the church stands feebly by and has not the courage nor power to rectify these terrible evils; because these things exist in the church; because many members of churches vote for the saloon; because avaricious despots in too many instances are members of the church; because they are not one as Christ and his Father are one.

What has been the underlying cause that has brought about these terrible conditions? The wisdom of God manifested through humble, unlearned men, has been supplanted by the wisdom of men alone. We are told that we are living in an age of light; that man needs no direct revelation now; that he needs no direct call or inspiration from God to preach the gospel and administer in the ordinances thereof; that an education in a theological school is a sufficient qualification to preach the gospel. What a terrible condition of things the wisdom of man has brought upon the world.

Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?—Paul.

If the world ever needed a direct message from God, delivered by meek, humble, self-sacrificing men, it needs it now. A message of light, of certainty, and authority, one that shall be a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death; that shall pierce to the very center of Babylon, and call out the honest in heart and prepare them for the great day of the Lord, which is near at hand; and leave Mystery Babylon without an excuse in the days of God's fierce judgment upon her.

A COMPLETE VICTORY FOR THE RESTORED GOSPEL.

A debate was held twelve miles west of Maysville, Arkansas, August 13-18, 1895, between S. W. Simmons of the above-named place, elder of the Latter Day Saints' Church and L. Kelly, of Grove, Indian Territory, representative of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church. The propositions provided for each to affirm his church to be identical with the Bible church, in organization and doctrine; the Bible to be the standard of evidence.

The cause of the debate was an agreement by Mr. Kelly to "expose, dig up, and bury Mormonism," for a prize of five dollars.

Bro. Simmons proved the Latter Day Saints' doctrine to be in perfect harmony with the Bible, also the organization of the church. Kelly set up the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church a standard instead of the Bible and the many things found in the book which are not in the M. E. Church were declared to be done away because no longer needed. He opposed John Wesley in that for he declared that it was not because the gifts and blessings were not needed in the church, but because the people had turned heathen again was the reason mankind did not enjoy them, and he and his brother Charles pleaded with God to send forth new apostles, etc., the very thing that this reverend is fighting against.

Kelly did not know even that a succession of apostles was kept up all through New Testament times, but asserted that twelve were all. He was soon taught that there were about twice twelve apostles called by the Almighty (1 Cor. 12: 28) and that apostles remained as long as the church observed all things commanded. (Matt. 28: 19, 20.) With his first and second speeches Kelly was driven from the Bible, the glorious standard of the debate as well as of the world. He lugged in Stenhouse's work to accompany the M. E. Church as standards against the Bible and the restored church. At that turn and dodge some mischievous fellow, unknown to any of us, a good penman, drew on the seat just under where Kelly sat and in constant view of the audience, a skulking mule and named it "Kelly," in big letters, and pictured a bird named "Simmons" under him, soaring after the escaping donkey.

Kelly was shown up before the people to be like a turkey buzzard, its work being to gather up filth and corruption and spew it out when attacked. He fought dead men and an apostate church—Brighamism—and proved himself to be as ignorant in many things as a nine year old boy, in trying to class us with them. He took the same position as an infidel would to bring up the wicked pope and the most horrible deeds of the Roman Catholic Church against the Savior, his apostles, their doctrine and church.

It is a well-attested fact that Mr. Kelly sent a proposal or went and proposed marriage to a widowed sister in the Latter Day Saint Church and was refused. This may explain why he is so bitter against us as a people, as he so persistently fought the members instead of the church. It was told at the debate and the proof offered. He, after failing to become a brother-in-law to the Saints Church, for spite and the money, like many others, tried his hand at "exposing Mormonism."

Near the close of the debate when Mr. Kelly was ruled out of order for turning from his proposition back to vilify the Saints, he called for a sign, offering one thousand dollars for a certain miracle. He was then soon shown where he stood—with an evil and an adulterous generation that is to have no sign, and the Devil that was told to get behind, hence. (Matt. 4: 3-10.) To the amusement of the assembly he was told several times to get hence, that he should have gone the night before, as had been suggested; that it would be the best for him to escape under the cover of night like John Wesley did from America. The M. E.'s were proven to be without God, Christ, and the Bible, from their first article of faith, the lack of doctrine (2 John 9: 10), and their incomplete organization.

The hireling disputed with his rewarders and tried to claim the money without permitting them a chance to vote, but they forced the vote and he lost his prize by a vote of over ten to one; and no wonder, for he had not proved one clause nor sustained a point. Kelly declared it was a "Mormon trick" to cheat him out of his money. Several strangers to any of us spoke up at once and said, "Then we are all Mormons."

Kelly called himself the Samson debater and said he would have to praise himself, that he had no friends there who would do it for him. He tried to impress himself upon their minds as the "Samson debater" by saying he was like him, tumbling the great pillars of the building; the great pillars of Mormonism were in his grasp torn out of place forever. At the same time Bro. Simmons was receiving a fresh bouquet every little while, as the Kelly said himself flowers were in honor of success and victory, but he got nary a flower himself.

He accused Simmons of having an army of helpers, a host of the best elders in his church to help him, and only two, Bro. Sheppard and myself, were there and that only part of the time; none of us when the debate began.

The founder of the M. E. Church was proven to have indirectly got his authority from the Roman Catholic Church and from his own admission to be an unconverted man, a child of wrath, an heir of hell, etc., at the time and after founding the great M. E. Church. (Richard Watson's History pp. 46, 56.)

At the close of the debate Simmons' moderator, an attractive and fluent young speaker, arose and assured us that he was on friendly terms with both debaters and was not prejudiced against any system of religion in the world, although he could not believe with any of them. He came to learn and had done so; none of us know it all. He had arranged to meet in joint discussion this great Mormon question. "I may have got into a hole, and I believe I have, but I am not going to squeal until I get hurt." "I will meet them from a Bible standpoint or not at all." He had challenged the world to meet a new system of religion he advances and arrangements had been made for Bro. T. J. Sheppard to meet him at Southwest City, Missouri, September 20, 1895.

He then urged the necessity of a vote being taken if he got his prize, so did others. It was taken and carried over ten against him to one for him, that he did not prove his proposition or disprove his opponents', much less wiping out Mormonism, as he called it so much. The vote was taken in spite of all the Samson debater could do to prevent it and as all expected from the many favorable remarks for our cause. The moderators, who were unacquainted with us, would have ruled Kelly out of his filthy fables when he started in with it the first day and left the Bible, but Simmons thought it best to give him plenty of rope and let him hang himself, and so he did, figuratively speaking, and also hung the popular Methodist Church.

Notwithstanding all of Kelly's boasting and dodging in the debate I honor him more than those who continue to argue and vilify the truth and at the same time say they do not believe in debating; that they do not like doctrine, etc.

I was sorry to hear of the death of Bro. G.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints Throughout Oregon and Washington; Greeting:—Forasmuch as I have received many letters from Saints in different parts of the mission all seeming anxious for me to visit their localities as soon as possible, I wish to say that I am doing all I can, and feel anxious to visit all points where there is a hope of doing good. But if I should start out to visit each place where I am looked for and spend a week at each place, it would take me nearly a year to get around to all; besides it would take much more means than I have at my command, so I trust the Saints will understand that while I do not desire to slight anyone I must be allowed to exercise my best judgment and go according to my means and as the way opens up.

It is a day of sacrifice and I hope the Saints will not think that it is the duty of the elders to do all the sacrificing.

May the Lord open the eyes and hearts of the Saints to the importance of this great work, is my daily prayer. Address me at Lebanon, Oregon.

Yours in Christ,

J. C. CLAPP.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Resolutions of condolence and respect to Elder G. W. Shute, adopted by the conference held at Blue Rapids, August 17, 1895.

Whereas it has pleased our heavenly Father to bring to a sudden and unexpected close, the earthly labors of Elder G. W. Shute, while successfully prosecuting a mission to Oklahoma; and, whereas, in the death of Bro. Shute this district loses one of the most conspicuous and important characters that has figured in its history from the first, being its first presiding elder and subsequently its Bishop's agent, laboring everywhere with us and for us, and bringing many honest souls to a knowledge of the truth and to repentance, and consecrating all our rivers with their baptisms. Elder Shute was born, according to our church records, December 9, 1832, and would therefore be nearly sixty-three years old. He was ordained March 16, 1861, by Zenos H. Gurley, Sr., laboring for thirty-three years and over in the ministry, often under the most adverse and trying circumstances. It is with inexpressible sorrow that we part with Bro. Shute from the shores of time, and while we thus mourn the loss of a worthy colaborer and brother, we are reminded of the great grief and sorrow indeed which must be felt by those who mourn the loss of a husband and father; therefore be it

Resolved by the Northwestern Kansas district, now in conference assembled, that we tender to the bereaved family of Elder Shute our sympathy in this great bereavement; and may the very God of heaven for whose sake you have sacrificed your association and care of that noble husband and father for so much of the time for the past thirty years, comfort, bless, and sustain you and eventually reunite you an unbroken band on that better and happier land to which you have mutually sacrificed and suffered in this life that others might be led thereunto.

Resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the church records, a copy sent to the family, to each of the local papers of Blue Rapids, and to the Saints' Herald and Ensign.

Respectfully submitted,

THE MASSACHUSETTS REUNION.

In a beautiful pine grove some thirty-four miles from the city of Boston in a quiet village the camp of the Saints is located. The surroundings are conducive to health and restful pleasure. The stately pines bend their heads as the gentle breeze awakens the listless branches into activity, as though they did so in reverence to the Spirit's presence. The business session held at five p. m. on Saturday resulted in choosing Bro. F. M. Sheehy and Bro. Wm. H. Kelley for presidents of the reunion; Brn. George W. Robley and Arthur B. Pierce for secretaries; Bro. Holmes Davison for chorister; Sisters Julia Glover and Livina Ashton as organists; Brethren E. A. Fisher, F. O. Coombs, and C. A. Coombs as a committee to keep order on grounds. At 7:20 the Saints assembled for preaching service, Bro. Geo. W. Robley being the speaker, assisted by Bro. Holmes Davison. The speaker took for a text Isaiah 55:8. Man unaided by God's Spirit will go astray.

On Sunday morning the sun rose in splendor and found its way through the trees, making the dewdrops sparkle like diamonds in their green setting. Saints from Providence, Brockton, and other places came in for the day. Those from Brockton and a delegation from Rakeville, a place where Brn. Sheehy and Davison have been preaching of late to interested audiences. At nine a. m. Bro. Geo. Gates opened the prayer service, followed by a prayer by Bro. Arthur B. Pierce. The Saints caught the spirit of the hour and fervent prayers and heartfelt testimonies came to Jehovah as sweet incense, while they gladdened the hearts of those who heard them here. Twenty-three testimonies, nine prayers, and ten hymns filled up the time that was allotted to this service. At 10:30 Bro. Davison of Nova Scotia was the preacher, assisted by Bro. Arthur Phillips. The subject was interesting and well presented. At 2:30 Bro. Joseph Luff presented the truth assisted by Bro. John Smith. The preacher used three verses of scripture as a groundwork for his discourse; Ecclesiastes 3:14, 15; Romans 1:20; 1 Corinthians 12:28. To attempt a synopsis of the discourse would be useless as the speaker is too well known to make it at all necessary—there is but one Joseph Luff in the church! The evening hour was occupied by Bro. U. W. Greene, of Maine, tall, smiling, and as forceful as ever. Bro. John Gilbert assisted. The speaker took for a text Matthew 16:18. "I will build my church;" subject; what constitutes the Church of Christ. The effort was well received.

On Monday the prayer service was in charge of Bro. G. W. Robley, assisted by Bro. Geo. Smith. A quiet spirit pervaded the assembly and all seemed to enjoy the service. At 2:30 Bro. Geo. Smith, of Providence, was the subject selected though which the divine message was to reach us. He was assisted by Bro. F. O. Coombs; subject, Restoration of the gospel. An intelligent audience greeted Bro. F. M. Sheehy in the evening, who selected the seventh verse of the third chapter of Amos for his text. Bro. Luff occupied the platform with him. Frank is the pride of the East as a preacher, and was in usual form. May his shadow never grow less! I forgot to mention that on Sunday afternoon there were two baptized; a man and woman.

Tuesday. Prayer meeting in charge of Bro. Daniel Shaw. The Spirit of the Master was present to comfort all. The preacher in the afternoon was the writer, assisted by Bro. U. W. Greene. The lamps were lighted and soon the organ in the "big tent" began to send forth sweet strains and human voices catching the sound waves were soon submerged in an element of musical tone to the blessing and satisfaction of those who listened, for they gave voice to their feelings through the organs of the soul as they watched the singers. Bro. Joseph Luff again appeared as the speaker and seemed to be on fire with the Spirit of God and as the servant of Jesus Christ discoursed on the scriptural truth and teachings of Jesus in such plainness that all could if they would understand. We thought it was good to be a Saint in latter days. And when he pictured the loving character of Jesus the Christ in such a masterly manner the tear would start unbidden to the eye of the hearer. O my God! I thank thee that thou hast granted such power unto men!

As I sit writing in the large tent, stretched before me in a quarter circle are the small ones, two deep; not so many as would be found on a western camp ground, for we are few; but the star of the east is arising, and we trust its light will be reflected soon in the hearts and lives of many more in the great Atlantic State.

The morning prayer meeting of Wednesday was in charge of Bro. Davison. At one p. m. the children assembled and were instructed in Bible and church history by Brn. Davison, A. B. Pierce, and Sr. Josey Gerrish. At 2:30 Bro. Will Blanchard, of Maine, was the speaker, assisted by Bro. U. W. Greene. Bro. W. H. Kelley came among us during prayer meeting and preached for us in the evening—one of his characteristic sermons. He was assisted by Bro. Luff. "Rock of Ages" was rendered creditably by a quartet just before the sermon.

Thursday morning the prayer meeting was spiritually intellectual and enjoyed by many, if not all. Children's service again at one, and an illustrated lecture by Bro. Holmes Davison at 2:30. At 7:30 Bro. Luff was the preacher. Baptism by immersion was made very plain.

Friday morning prayer meeting in charge of Bro. Robley, assisted by Bro. Bullard. A very spiritual time was enjoyed. Children's meeting at one p. m. At 2:30 Bro. Wm. Kelley was the speaker, assisted by Bro. Sheehy; prayer offered by Bro. A. B. Pierce. In the evening Bro. U. W. Greene was the speaker.

Saturday morning was devoted to business. At 2:30 Bro. Richard Bullard did the preaching. The subject treated upon was tithing. A synopsis will appear later. The evening hour was given to Bro. F. M. Sheehy, who spoke in an easy manner concerning those things believed among us.

Sunday morning the prayer service was in charge of Bro. Bullard, and was opened in good form amid the sound of pattering rain upon the tent. At 10:30 the rain descended with a sullen roar, and it was under great difficulties that Bro. Luff discoursed to the Saints. All were delighted, however, with the sermon. At 2:30 Bro. Sheehy was the speaker and made his maiden effort with the map, illustrating the journeys of the Nephites and other peoples mentioned by the Book of Mormon, locating their cities by the ruins left as mute evidences of their former grandeur. He was assisted by Bro. John Smith. One was baptized at 5:30. The service at night was in charge of Bro. Kelley. Prayer by Bro. Greene, after which Bro. Luff spoke from the 26th verse of the 16th chapter of Matthew: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" This the speaker applied to the church as well as to the individual.

Monday morning two were baptized by Bro. Blanchard, prayer service was held, also a business session at 2:30, and the last sermon was preached by Bro. Kelley at night. Thus ended the reunion of 1895. I think it can be said truthfully that the reunion was a success and all felt paid for the time spent in "Bacon's Grove."

He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1875 by Elder W. C. Nirk, and from that time has ever lived a consistent Christian life. He died at Runnells, Iowa, August 4, 1895. Funeral services were held on the 5th, conducted by Elder W. H. Kephart.

WILLIAMS.—Thomas Williams was born in South Wales, May 3, 1827, and died July 24, 1895. He joined the church in Wales and came to America in the year 1850, coming directly to Council Bluffs. He became disgusted with Brigham Young and others and almost lost faith in everything. He settled on a farm some seven miles from Council Bluffs and been an honorable, upright citizen, meriting the respect of all. He had been in failing health for over a year, and had not been any worse than usual on the day before his death, but at 10:30 p. m. he was stricken with heart disease and in a few moments was dead. He leaves a large family to mourn. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams at the residence, seven miles northeast of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

KEIGHTLEY.—At his home in Greenbush, Alcona County, Michigan, Bro. Wilson Keightley, aged 36 years, 7 months, and 6 days. He was born in London, Ontario. After his days work was done he and Bro. William Grantham went to the lake to fish; the little boat capsized, and before assistance could lend a helping hand he had gone to the bottom. He was taken from the water in two hours after, but all was too late. His spirit had gone to the paradise of God. Bro. Wilson was the only son of his parents. It seemed to be his delight to care for them, as they are both aged people. Baptized February 18, 1895, by Elder David Smith; he was a faithful Saint, always at the post of duty. Funeral sermon by Elder David Smith, from John 14: 23, to a large attendance of mourners and friends.

CULBERSON.—John, son of Matthew and Laura E. Culberson. He was born August 22, 1890, and died August 15, 1895, aged 4 years, 11 months, and 23 days. He was sick several weeks with brain fever. When the doctor was sent for he said, "No, I want Bro. Williams." Funeral sermon was preached by T. W. Williams at the residence, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE FOUNDER OF CHRISTIANITY.

WHEN "the fulness of the time" was come, God sent forth his only-begotten Son, "the Desire of all nations," to redeem the world from the curse of sin, and to establish an everlasting kingdom of truth, love, and peace for all who should believe on his name.

In Jesus Christ a preparatory history both divine and human comes to its close. In him culminate all the previous revelations of God to Jews and Gentiles; and in him are fulfilled the deepest desires and efforts of both Gentiles and Jews for redemption. In his divine nature, as Logos, he is, according to St. John, the eternal Son of the Father, and the agent in the creation and preservation of the world, and in all those preparatory manifestations of God, which were completed in the incarnation. In his human nature, as Jesus of Nazareth, he is the ripe fruit of the religious growth of humanity, with an earthly ancestry, which St. Matthew (the evangelist of Israel) traces to Abraham, the patriarch of the Jews, and St. Luke (the evangelist of the Gentiles), to Adam, the father of all men. In him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily; and in him also is realized the ideal of human virtue and piety. He is the eternal Truth, and the divine Life itself, personally joined with our nature; he is our Lord and our God; yet at the same time flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone. In him is solved the problem of religion, the reconciliation and fellowship of man with God; and we must expect no clearer revelation of God, nor any higher religious attainment of man, than is already guaranteed and actualized in his person.

But as Jesus Christ thus closes all previous history, so, on the other hand, he begins an endless future. He is the author of a new creation, the second Adam, the father of regenerate humanity, the head of the church, "which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." He is the pure fountain of that stream of light and life, which has since flowed unbroken through nations and ages, and will continue to flow, till the earth shall be full of his praise, and every tongue shall confess that he is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. The universal diffusion and absolute dominion of the spirit and life of Christ will be also the completion of the human race, the end of history, and the beginning of a glorious eternity.

It is the great and difficult task of the biographer of Jesus to show how he, by external and internal development, under the conditions of a particular people, age, and country, came to be in fact what he was in idea and destination, and what he will continue to be for the faith of Christendom, the God-Man and Savior of the world. Being divine from eternity, he could not become God; but as man he was subject to the laws of human life and gradual growth. "He advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." (Luke 2 : 52.) Though he was the Son of God, "yet he learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and having been made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5 : 8, 9.) There is no conflict between the historical Jesus of Nazareth and the ideal Christ of faith. The full understanding of his truly human life, by its very perfection and elevation above all other men before and after him, will necessarily lead to an admission of his own testimony concerning his divinity.

"Deep strike thy roots, O heavenly Vine,
 Within our earthly sod!
 Most human and yet most divine,
 The flower of man and God!"

Jesus Christ came into the world under Cæsar Augustus, the first Roman emperor, before the death of king Herod the Great, four years before the traditional date of our Dionysian æra. He was born at Bethlehem of Judæa, in the royal line of David, from Mary, "the wedded Maid and Virgin Mother." The world was at peace, and the gates of Janus were closed for only the second time in the history of Rome. There is a poetic and moral fitness in this coincidence: it secured a hearing for the gentle message of peace which might have been drowned in the passions of war and the clamor of arms. Angels from heaven proclaimed the good tidings of his birth with songs of praise; Jewish shepherds from the neighboring fields, and heathen sages from the far east greeted the newborn king and Savior with the homage of believing hearts. Heaven and earth gathered in joyful adoration around the Christ-child, and the blessing of this event is renewed from year to year among high and low, rich and poor, old and young, throughout the civilized world.

The idea of a perfect childhood, sinless and holy, yet truly human and natural, had never entered the mind of poet or historian before; and when the legendary fancy of the Apocryphal Gospels attempted to fill out the chaste silence of the Evangelists, it painted an unnatural prodigy of a child to whom wild animals, trees, and dumb idols bowed, and who changed balls of clay into flying birds for the amusement of his playmates.

The youth of Jesus is veiled in mystery. We know only one, but a very significant fact. When a boy of twelve years he astonished the doctors in the temple by his questions and answers, without repelling them by immodesty and premature wisdom, and filled his parents with reverence and awe by his absorption in the things of his heavenly Father, and yet was subject and obedient to them in all things. Here, too, there is a clear line of distinction between the supernatural miracle of history and the unnatural prodigy of apocryphal fiction, which represents Jesus as returning most learned answers to perplexing questions of the doctors about astronomy, medicine, physics, metaphysics, and hyperphysics. (See Cowper, l. c. pp. 212-214.)

The external condition and surroundings of his youth are in sharp contrast with the amazing result of his public life. He grew up quietly and unnoticed in a retired Galilean mountain village of proverbial insignificance, and in a lowly carpenter-shop, far away from the city of Jerusalem, from schools and libraries, with no means of instruction save those which were open to the humblest Jew—the care of godly parents, the beauties of nature, the services of the synagogue, the secret communion of the soul with God, and the Scriptures of the Old Testament, which recorded in type and prophecy his own character and mission. All attempts to derive his doctrine from any of the existing schools and sects have utterly failed. He never referred to the traditions of the elders except to oppose them. From the Pharisees and Sadducees he differed alike, and provoked their deadly hostility. With the Essenes he never came in contact. He was independent of human learning and literature, of schools and parties. He taught the world as one who owed nothing to the world. He came down from heaven and spoke out of the fulness of his personal intercourse with the great Jehovah. He was no scholar, no artist, no orator; yet was he wiser than all sages, he spake as never man spake, and made an impression on his age and all ages after him such as no man ever made or can make. Hence the natural surprise of his countrymen as expressed in the question: "From whence hath this man these things?" "How knoweth this man letters having never learned?" (Mark 6 : 2, 3; Matthew 13 : 54-56; John 7 : 15.)

He began his public ministry in the thirtieth year of his age, after the Messianic inauguration by the baptism of John, and after the Messianic probation in the wilderness—the counterpart of the temptation of the first Adam in Paradise. That ministry lasted only three years—and yet in these three years is condensed the deepest meaning of the history of religion. No great life ever passed so swiftly, so quietly, so humbly, so far removed from the noise and commotion of the world; and no great life after its close excited such universal and lasting interest. He was aware of this contrast: he predicted his deepest humiliation even to the death on the cross, and the subsequent irresistible attraction of this cross, which may be witnessed from day to day wherever his name is known. He who could say, "If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto myself" (John 12 : 32), knew more of the course of history and of the human heart than all the sages and legislators before and after him.

He chose twelve apostles for the Jews and seventy disciples for the Gentiles, not from among the scholars and leaders, but from among the illiterate fishermen of Galilee. He had no home, no earthly possessions, no friends among the mighty and the rich. A few pious women from time to time filled his purse; and this purse was in the hands of a thief and a traitor. He associated with publicans and sinners, to raise them up to a higher and nobler life, and began his reformation among the lower classes, which were despised and neglected by the proud hierarchy of the day. He never courted the favor of the great, but incurred their hatred and persecution. He never flattered the prejudices of the age, but rebuked sin and vice among the high and the low, aiming his severest words at the blind leaders of the blind, the self-righteous hypocrites who sat on Moses' seat. He never encouraged the carnal Messianic hopes of the people, but withdrew when they wished to make him a king, and declared before the representative of the Roman empire that his kingdom was not of this world. He announced to his disciples his own martyrdom, and promised to them in this life only the same baptism of blood. He went about in Palestine, often weary of travel, but never weary of his work of love, doing good to the souls and bodies of men, speaking words of spirit and life, and working miracles of power and mercy.

He taught the purest doctrine, as a direct revelation of his heavenly Father, from his own intuition and experience, and with a power and authority which commanded unconditional trust and obedience. He rose above the prejudices of party and sect, above the superstitions of his age and nation. He addressed the naked heart of man and touched the quick of the conscience. He announced the founding of a spiritual kingdom which should grow from the smallest seed to a mighty tree, and, working like leaven from within, should gradually pervade all nations and countries. This colossal idea, the like of which had never entered the imagination of men, he held fast even in the darkest hour of humiliation, before the tribunal of the Jewish high priest and the Roman governor, and when suspended as a malefactor on the cross; and the truth of this idea is illustrated by every page of church history and in every mission station on earth.

The miracles or signs which accompanied his teaching are supernatural, but not unnatural, exhibitions of his power over man and nature; no violations of law, but manifestations of a higher law, the superiority of mind over matter, the superiority of spirit over mind, the superiority of divine grace over human nature. They are all of the highest moral and of a profoundly symbolical significance, prompted by pure benevolence, and intended for the good of men; in striking contrast with deceptive juggler works and the useless and absurd miracles of apocryphal fiction. They were performed without any ostentation, with such simplicity and ease as to be called simply his "works." They were the practical proof of his doctrine and the natural reflex of his wonderful person. The absence of wonderful works in such a wonderful man would be the greatest wonder.—

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 4, 1895.

GRACELAND COLLEGE, LAMONI.

THE Board of Directors of Graceland College, Lamoni, has issued a circular announcing that the opening of the college work proper will begin with the fall term—on the 17th of September next. The college building proper has not yet been completed, but is being pushed under the energetic oversight of the Building Committee, with an experienced building superintendent and contractor in charge.

The Directors have made arrangements for the accommodations of students and faculty in good, new, and comfortable quarters until the college building proper is fully prepared, so that none need hesitate to begin work on the date fixed.

Competent instructors have been secured. Those contemplating attending or sending students may rest assured that the Board elected by the General Conference will see that the faculty employed is thoroughly first-class and efficient. The college management is aware that the institution is placed in competition with similar institutions of learning throughout the country and is therefore under the necessity of offering similar advantages to parents and students interested in the work of higher education.

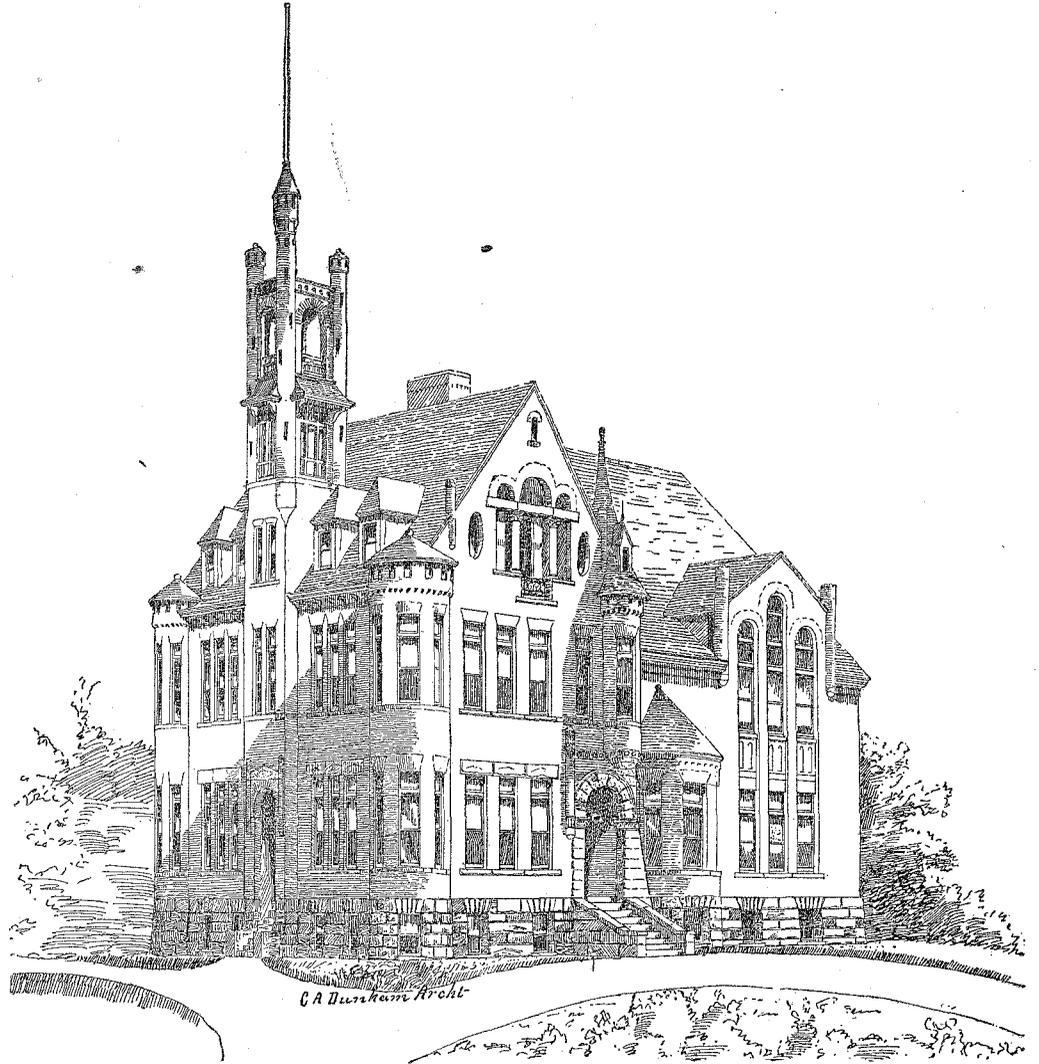

It is a special feature of Graceland College that in addition to the ordinary advantages of first-class academic and collegiate courses of study, students are also so situated as to secure the inestimable advantages of good moral and social surroundings. Lamoni has no saloons, and its population in general is composed of a class of people whose moral tone and aims are excellent. All these things enter deeply into the educational question and are considerations among the first in importance for the welfare of students.

The management is committed to a policy that is educational in the highest and best sense, free from narrowness, intolerance, or sectarian influences.

September 17, 1895, and ends December 20. Winter term begins January 2, 1896, and ends March 27. Spring term begins April 7, 1896, and ends June 12."

The college building proper is strictly modern in style of architec-

GRACELAND COLLEGE, LAMONI, IOWA.

"Thorough instruction and drill will be offered in the following departments: Collegiate; Didactic; Preparatory; Commercial; Music; and Art. This will give the pupil the advantage of a thorough English course as usually taught in high schools and colleges; full instruction in ancient and modern languages and the higher mathematics and physics; and all that can be desired in the way of commercial training in normal work, music, and art. The fall term begins ture and interior arrangements. The building will contain all the latest improvements necessary to furnish students and faculty with necessary facilities for study. The grounds are high, well drained, and ample; the situation healthful and pleasant.

The rate of tuition is "one dollar per week. No extra charges in any of the special branches or courses for the present year, except in the musical and commercial departments, where an additional matriculation fee will be charged, and a minimum fee for those desiring instruments for practice."

There will be abundant opportunity for students to obtain boarding at very reasonable rates, and in private families. Numerous parties are prepared to receive boarders and roomers at rates averaging about $2.50 per week; or to take students who desire to rent rooms and board themselves.

We trust our people will give Graceland College their liberal and prompt patronage. It is in line with the spirit of our work that institutions of learning be provided and fostered that the work of education be promoted and brought to a high standard of excellence. For years a college has been desired and now that one has been provided, it ought to have hearty, unreserved support.

Both the Building Committee and the Board of Directors have labored and are laboring untiringly to insure the success of the college. Appointed and approved by the General Conference they have been promised the support of our people, and we trust they will rally to their support by sending their children to Lamoni hereafter instead of to other and remote colleges among the influences of the world.

It is the announced intention of the Board of Directors to give students that thorough attention that shall reflect credit upon the institution through their scholarship. This will be done from the first, the intention being to make every student, every graduate a recommendation for the college.

Young people attending school at Lamoni will largely be removed from the corrupting influences that endanger so many "at school away from home." The citizens as a rule are moral, upright, progressive, and enterprising. The moral atmosphere of the city is far above that of the average town or city and will impress any for good who make even a permanent residence while in school life.

The pamphlet issued by the directors, "Announcement of Graceland College," may be had by addressing the secretary, Bro. D. F. Lambert, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, who will also furnish further particulars; or applications for scholarships that may be sent through the Herald Office will be handed to Bro. Lambert.

Remember that the college at Lamoni offers special advantages educationally, morally, and in other respects. We trust the Saints and friends will bear it in mind when selecting a school for the youth.

A STRIKING COMMENTARY.

THE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

THE early history of the Church, as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, when "all that believed were together and had all things common," is a striking commentary upon the facts set forth in the last census report of the United States of North America, showing no less than 143 distinct religious denominations, besides a large number of "unassociated churches and independent congregations." Of these 143 denominations, all but 24 are grouped in "ecclesiastical families," where the members are by no means "all of one mind," but on the contrary, appear to have almost as many minds as there are members. The Methodists are subdivided into 17 different bodies, the Lutherans into 16, the Baptists 13, and the Presbyterians 12. The total number of communicants of all bodies is 20,612,806, divided into 165,177 congregations, in 142,521 church edifices, with a seating capacity sufficient to accommodate nearly three-quarters of our entire population. In addition to these, 23,334 halls and schoolhouses are occupied as places of worship, and will seat 2,450,858 more persons. There are 111,036 "regular" ministers, and church property is valued at $679,630,139.

Grouped by ecclesiastical families, six have each over 500,000 communicants, viz.:

Roman Catholic.....	6,257,871
Methodist.....	4,589,284
Baptist.....	3,712,468
Presbyterian.....	1,278,332
Lutheran.....	1,231,072
Episcopalian.....	540,509

The Roman Catholics, however, return as communicants all baptized persons over twelve years of age. This gives them an apparent numerical superiority to which they are not, in fact, entitled.

Church property to the value of $50,000,000 is held as follows:—

Methodists.....	$132,140,179
Roman Catholic.....	118,069,746
Presbyterians.....	94,869,097
Episcopals.....	82,835,418
Baptists.....	82,328,123

—Printer's Ink.

The striking contrast between the primitive Christian Church of the first century and the various so-called Christian denominations of the present age is referred to in no very commendable terms in the preceding article which we take from Printer's Ink, a publication issued by Messrs. G. P. Rowell & Co., New York, who also publish the "American News-per Directory," in which the religious press is advertised and classified with other publications.

per Directory," in which the religious press is advertised and classified with other publications.

The publishers referred to are shrewd, enterprising business men; close observers; and probably as well prepared as any to note the tone and sense the spirit of the religious effusions of church publications, being disinterested, at least so far as being directly interested or concerned in the questions of doctrine, church polity, etc., that divide the various denominations. From their standpoint of view (and the religious press of the country comes to them freighted with church news and religious topics of all kinds) the difference between original Christianity and modern churchism is so marked as to call forth the terms "striking commentary," this striking commentary being based upon the New Testament record of the early church and "the facts set forth in the last census report of the United States of North America."

These collected facts—facts stated by authorized representatives of these various religious societies, to authorized agents of the United States Government; facts filled out on blank forms prescribed for the Census Department or Bureau; facts duly attested, are the stubborn things that reveal the status of and call forth the expression of "striking commentary" on the present condition of the Christian world, so called, which, better named, would be termed Christianized world; for it is in name rather than in fact that the modern churches represent Christianity.

In the list published (and we publish but part of it) we have six leading religious bodies enumerated with their statistical reports; Roman Catholic, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Episcopalian. What are the "facts" concerning their attitude toward, their relationship with one another? Upon some questions of faith there is a measure of harmony between them, but upon other, many other questions, they are as wide apart as the poles and in direct antagonism one to the other. The Roman Catholic is opposed to all the others and they diametrically, strongly opposed to it; while each of the others in turn rejects the creed of each, or some part of it. The Roman Catholic with his claims to authority and dogma of papal infallibility moves in his prescribed theological circle, the Episcopalian with his peculiar ritual and tendency to aristocratic notions in his, the Lutheran with Luther's doctrine of justification by faith and transubstantiation in his; and so on, according to the conceptions of their founders, each opposed to and opposing each at some point.

We have the Roman Catholic with his extreme ideas of church rule, the Episcopalian as a directly seceding body with many of the features of its mother church, the Methodist body as a seceder from Episcopalianism, Lutheranism a direct protest against but also a secession from Catholicism; while Presbyterianism with its Calvinistic doctrines and Baptistism as another are both wide rebounds from the extremes of Catholicism. Then, too, we have various "evangelical bodies" and "reformed" churches in the list.

With due credit to the work done in behalf of more liberal sentiment in the world and the strong contest for civil and religious liberty made by these Protestant bodies, it must be conceded that they represent but the spirit of the times that gave them birth, and not the full light of the gospel; for the religious conceptions of men were not sufficiently enlightened to do more than they did in the various religious movements they inaugurated, the "reforms" they instituted, the churches they organized.

For instance, the Church of England, originating with Henry VIII. in a quarrel between that earthly ruler and the Church of Rome and from a desire to have his own way in a matter in which he differed from the Roman hierarchy, and not because of any change of belief or radical variation in religious sentiment,—the church he organized did not therefore greatly differ from its original only so far as the circumstances governing the separation made the difference.

Viewed in the light of the history of the times every separate church organized in opposition to the Church of Rome, while a great improvement over the mother church, is seen to preserve some of the errors of the system from which they sprang, or to adopt some of the peculiar fancies or convictions of their founders.

They have all done good service, but no one, nor no association of them has proved itself to be more than an earnest human protest against the apostasy of the mother church, even though God has blessed the measure of their work that has been of benefit to the world.

The creed of John Calvin is a wide reaction against Catholicism, and traceable to the spirit of repugnance to Catholic doctrine then prevalent in parts of Europe; but Calvin's creed has been weighed in the balances of modern enlightenment and progress and found wanting; has been rejected by a large body of Presbyterians themselves. John Calvin, too, was the best theologian—that is theologically the best educated man in Europe, and, from a human or purely scholastic standpoint—the standpoint from which the doctrine of the continuity or continuance of divine revelation to man is rejected in the present age—was the most suitable, and prospectively the most likely to prove a successful instrument to organize a church with a system of church government according to the pattern left by Jesus Christ. But John Calvin did not do it, as the errors in and rejection of Calvinistic doctrines plainly prove. The fact that one so capable as Calvin was thought to be, that so experienced and so learned a churchman as he failed to do it, is strong presumptive proof that no man unaided of God, uncalled and unauthorized by the direct personal revelation of his will, could do it.

John Wesley confessed the imperfectness of the work he was doing, stating plainly his expectations of an authorized, specific revelation from God in a later time than his. He saw the faulty character of the Reformation, hence looked for a restoration of Christianity, confessing the inability of any man uninspired and unauthorized of God to build the Church of God.

God rejected the Canaanites when the cup of their iniquity was full. He knew he could not reform them. A new generation in Israel, not the old, rebellious Israel, entered the promised land. Roman Catholicism departed completely from the truth.

Reformation was impossible. The "Dark Ages" revealed the entirety of her apostasy. Streams do not rise higher than their fountains; this is true in both natural and spiritual philosophy. The spirit of the Reformation was the spirit of protest against abuses religious and civil. Influences that caused men to think of both political and spiritual freedom were the well-known forces at work as a reaction against the influences of the Dark Ages. It was not possible for men coming out of the influences of spiritual and religious despotism, in which they had been born and nourished, to conceive of the perfect order of political and religious life that would entirely free them from bondage; unless, indeed, such men were very greatly inspired of God for the work before them. It is not denied that God was moving for the emancipation of man in the Reformation, but it is denied that the Reformation was anything more than a preparatory movement for the greater light that would dawn upon the world in the latter-day glory—the "restoration" of the ancient gospel in word and in power.

The way for the work of Christ was prepared by the supremacy of the Roman government, which guaranteed freedom and protection to its citizens, and civilized countries previously barbarous or semi-civilized. Following this prearrangement, this preparation for it, came Christ and the apostles in the golden age of Roman authority; and the commission to go into all the world was given when the world was then accessible as it had not before been to the gospel message. Thus, too, in "the latter days," after the Reformation had awakened men to establish civil and religious liberty,—in the times following the Reformation when civil and religious liberty is an accomplished fact among the leading nations of the world, the "dispensation of the fullness of times" is revealed, inaugurated by the angelic visitation, and the gospel restored in its fullness as predicted by apostles and prophets of the past.

There is a correspondence, a harmony, a congruence in all the works of God. He moves in the world in its political, social, and general affairs as he moves or when he moves in spiritual things.

The period of the Reformation was not only a time of religious awakening, but also a renaissance in art and science. Learning, hitherto confined mostly to the clergy, began to be patronized by the nobility and even the common people, and the field of art and letters began to be cultivated with such zeal and energy that the people began to rise from intellectual stupor, and thought was universally stimulated. It was not, however, until about the year 1830, the time when the Church of Jesus Christ was re-established, that the greatest intellectual activity was seen; for from that time there has been rapid and remarkable progress in inventions, sciences, pronounced advancement in every field of learning and discovery until now; and as a result we have emerged or are just emerging from the age of iron and steam to that of electricity; and the methods of life and our general civilization are being rapidly transformed, revolutionized, improved;—all this because the "light of men" is more fully illuminating the minds of men; and thus civilization is heightened, and life conditions constantly grow better as sanitary science and general life conditions are more fully comprehended and observed.

Standing therefore as those occupying a vantage ground, an elevation, and a central point of view, because enlightened by the restored gospel, intelligent Latter Day Saints are prepared to view comprehensively the conditions that prevail in the world and the forces at work for and against its welfare. They can understand why modern orthodoxy, so-called, and Roman Catholicism fail to satisfy the wants of the people. Catholicism, with all due charity to the people composing it, represents apostasy, departure from Christ standards; it represents the past, the age of despotism, blood, and conquest. Its headquarters are Rome, with its pre-Christian and medieval civilizations long since obsolete, dead, unequal to the spirit and progress and demands of these enlightened times.

Protestantism represents a beginning, an effort to clear away the encumbrances and hindrances of the past. All right as a preparatory work, it can never in itself be the true, the greater light which it aided to prepare the way for. Nor can it move forward or its adherents receive the fullness of the light of truth if content to remain where its fathers stood years before. It is by accepting all the light that comes with succeeding ages that any people move forward and upward.

The demand of the present age is for light from God; for a message clear, plain, and reliable; for an authoritative "Thus saith the Lord." While the world has needed the blessings of improved inventions and modern discoveries, it has not needed them more than revelation from God. Economic and industrial inventions, etc., have bettered our methods of living, lengthened the life period, and generally elevated our civilization; but those are but part of the supplies man's nature requires. Moral and spiritual guidance and all such implies is demanded by man's constitution and nature; for heart and mind, the greater, the higher in man must rule, and rule as enlightened of God; hence the restoration of the gospel and our claim for the necessity of such restoration are scientific spiritual facts; facts that reach down to the superstructure of society and regulate all its affairs and correct all its evils by bringing men into mental, moral, and spiritual communion with one another and with their Creator in the fellowship and privileges of the kingdom of God, where all are designed to be one in Christ Jesus.

In this kingdom of God we have the solution of the world's problems. No sectarianism, no division, no one of Luther, another of Wesley, nor Swedenborg, nor Calvin, nor Pope Leo; but Christ the Lord—one in him; one in faith, one in all things; one faith, one Lord, one baptism, one God and Father of all.

As a church we stand before the world upon a platform the broadest and grandest ever presented to man. The faith itself is invincible, invulnerable, incapable of defeat when correctly represented. Its life principle necessarily proceeds from God himself. Being a system of divine government, it is consistent in all its claims of and pleas for divine support, its necessities for divine supervision. In its peculiar organization it represents God throughout; in its system of government, its articles of faith, its methods of work; hence its plea for revelation to man to-day, its claim of spiritual gifts and powers, for apostles; prophets, etc.

Christ, the light of the world, the Word, who did all things according to the instructions given him of the Father, could not have instituted a system of church government that afterwards needed to be changed or required improvement, because he was the way, the truth, and the light. When we consider that the churches enumerated prefer the changes made by Romanism, by Calvin, Luther, Wesley, Henry VIII., and those that have followed them, we may justify the statement of this modern press writer that the history of the primitive church presents a striking commentary on the errors of modern popular churchianity.

The remedy for the world, the correction of the spiritual dearth of the times, lies in a return to the old paths; in obedience to the command, "Repent and believe the gospel."

LOGAN REUNION.

THE Logan reunion committee announce their coming Annual Reunion at Logan, Iowa, September 20 to October 1 inclusive. See supplement to this number of HERALD.

Good grounds, reduced railroad rates, prominent elders and lecturers, ample accommodations for all who may attend and at reasonable rates, are among the attractions; and three large tents, also a large choir under direction of Bro. M. H. Forscutt are included.

For particulars see notice of committee, or address them, Bro. David Chambers, Chairman, at Logan, Iowa.

ANOTHER ONE.

WE have received a number of newspapers giving descriptions of the work of one Francis Schlader, the healer and "New Mexico messiah," who has created much of a sensation, whether or not he has done anything of substantial value. This gentleman has arrived in Denver, where after completing a fast and a period of retirement he promises to continue the performance of his "wonders;" see extract from Bro. E. F. Shupe's letter.

We shall await the final results and investigation of this man's work before accepting the idea that there is anything more to him than what the fertile brain of the newspaper reporter and general rumor have made appear. After a review of the long list of so-called healers, wonder performers, and other sacred characters so self-styled, we may be pardoned if distinctly skeptical concerning them, and unchanged in the belief that God who rules over all and for the benefit of all is not committed to such uncertainties, but moves in an eternal round and is to be found, as he has placed himself on record for the guidance of the human family; viz., in the kingdom of God, where the consistent order of things based upon law spiritual and moral is revealed; where truth is the standard; where light and power are made manifest to the pure in heart and humble in mind.

It is surprising that men and women apparently possessed of good judgment and common sense in worldly matters should forget that the spirit of the gospel is the spirit of a "sound mind;" that that which proceeds from or is of God must necessarily be sound, sure, reliable, substantial; must include and confirm all that insures steadfastness to moral intelligence as revealed in Jesus Christ and recorded in his word, and as tested in the universal experiences of the race. Saints have reason to thank God that by obedience to the gospel they have set to their seal that God is true, have received the witness in themselves of the Spirit of truth by which men and women are to be made strong in their hope of life here and hereafter, and so built up in the faith that they are not moved by every wind of doctrine or sensational deception that may appear in human or Satanic form.

Deceptions will doubtless appear in every form and in manifold phases. However, the intelligent, spiritual-minded disciple but finds his faith confirmed when placed in intelligent contrast with error.

Those who live in the spirit of the gospel will have no difficulty in discerning the many-sided lo heres and lo theres that appear on the scene from time to time, if they treasure up the word (study it) and take the Holy Spirit for their guide. Such, the Lord has promised, shall not be deceived.

The presumption that a system of divine government should guarantee all this to man does not to us seem unreasonable, fanciful, untrue. On the contrary, it is evidently rational, hence the promises of the word to that effect are consistent, necessary, sure, and have been amply attested by and confirmed to the prudent, true-hearted men and women who have accepted the gospel and lived by it. The Saint stands unmoved upon the "Rock," "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

THE Los Angeles, California, Times, August 26, contains the following report of a sermon delivered by Bro. W. W. Blair on the Sunday preceding:—

The morning service yesterday at the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints was rendered very interesting by a sermon from Rev. W. W. Blair of Lamoni, Iowa, who is making a tour of the Pacific Coast, in order to ascertain the condition of the church in the West, and to lend it the personal aid and encouragement of one of the highest officers in the Reorganized Church. Dr. Blair is one of the first presidents of the church, and stands next to the highest in authority.

Every seat was filled yesterday in the Knights of Pythias lodge room, where the services of the Reorganized Church are held, and a very attentive and interested congregation listened to the sermon of the president, who spoke at length upon the subject of "divine inspiration," taking his text from the saying of Job: "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."

Dr. Blair asserted it as his belief that there were different degrees of inspiration, even as there are different degrees of light, and that the direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit is not confined to the churches, but goes abroad unto all men. Inspiration is the mighty power of God, by which all things are brought to pass, and it operates in the material as well as in the spiritual world, moving even upon the careless or wicked through the workings of conscience.

The first manifestation of inspiration Dr. Blair asserted to be that of superintendency, or control of the whole nature by the Holy Spirit. This control is manifested in prophecies, dreams, visions, the gift of tongues, etc., and was the form of inspiration under which the law of Moses and the books of the prophets were written.

The next development, said the speaker, is plenary inspiration, the gift of the Holy Spirit in its fullest completeness, as shown in the Christ. His life, work, and teachings, as shown in the Gospels, are a reflection of the perfect mind of God, and hence the model of the perfect human nature for all time to come.

Next comes the inspiration of elevation, the state of ideal exaltation in which all faculties are lifted up to their highest capacity. This degree of inspiration, Dr. Blair declares, is most often seen in ministers of the gospel, and, although not perfect or complete, it leads to great clearness of perception, and often to inestimable spiritual gifts.

The most ordinary form of inspiration is by suggestion, the inward premonitions and convictions that come to nearly every one, and which are but the light of God's Spirit reflected upon the heart in a thousand different ways. This inspiration has directed the energies and emboldened the hearts of all the great religious reformers, teachers, statesmen and discoverers in all ages of the world, and the gift shall increase and be unto all people in the latter days which shall come, when angels shall minister unto the sons of men, and the Spirit of God shall be over every nation upon the earth.

Dr. Blair then dwelt upon the restless spirit of inquiry which distinguishes the age, and upon the danger of being led astray by false prophets and demon inspiration, instead of living in harmony with the will of God, and, in conclusion, asked for the prayers of the people to strengthen the hands of those in authority, who are endeavoring to build up the Reorganized Church out of the fragments of so many elements and opinions.

HERALD OFFICE AGENTS AT RE-UNIONS.

BRO. A. S. COCHRAN, secretary of the Herald Office, will be present at the Clarksdale, Missouri, reunion, and represent the publishing department of the church as its authorized agent, with a full line of books, tracts, and Sunday school supplies. He will also take orders for HERALD, Autumn Leaves, and Hope.

Bro. J. C. Chrestensen will act in a similar capacity at the Spring River district reunion at Baxter Springs, Kansas, beginning September 7.

Bro. F. M. Weld will act for the Herald Office at the Montrose, Iowa, reunion, September 6-16.

Saints in attendance will please note the appointments of these brethren, who will receive orders, and receipt for all moneys paid them for the Herald Office.

THE horrors of war have been often described, but we have never seen so vivid a description as is given in few words in the clipping below.

HORRORS OF A SEA BATTLE.

Few people, even naval men, realize what fighting on an ironclad really means. Capt. McGiffin, who was an officer on board a Chinese man of war at the battle of the Yalu River, gives an English exchange, however, a most vivid description. He tells among other things, that the din made by the impact of heavy projectiles against the metal sides of the vessel is awful beyond description. He wore cotton in his ears, but in spite of that is still deaf from the noise. The engineers in the Chen-Yuen stuck to their work, even when the temperature of the engine room was above 200 degrees F. The skin of their hands and arms was actually roasted off, and every man was blinded for life, "the sight being actually seared out." Late in the action, after his hair had been burnt off, and his eyes so impaired by injected blood that he could only see out of one of them, and then only by lifting the lid with the fingers, he was desirous of seeing how the enemy was delivering his fire. As he groped his way around the protected deck a hundred-pound shell pierced the armor about eighteen inches in front of his hand. In a second his hand touching the steel was so burnt that part of the skin was left on the armor. That shows how intense is the heat engendered by the impact of a shot, and how rapidly the steel conducts that heat.—Boston Journal.

FAITH AND WORKS.

WE are furnished a true case of gospel conversion by Bro. N. C. Enge, of Washington. A lady late from Petea, Sweden, heard and after consideration obeyed the gospel, being baptized and confirmed after the apostolic order. In one hour after this she had entered upon other duties, duties just as incumbent, and had forwarded her tithe offering to the Bishop to aid in carrying the precious gospel, so rich to her, to others, that they might also have part in the better hope.

Therefore wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead and cannot save you?—James 2: 18. I. T.

But whose keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby know we that we are in him.—1 John 2: 5.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. White wrote from the Southern Missouri district reunion, August 26, as follows:—

I am now at Mountain Grove, in Wright County, assisting at the Southwestern Missouri district reunion. We are having a good and profitable time; tent crowded nearly all the time. The preaching so far has been good. It has been raining; commenced almost at the first of the meeting, they having had a dry spell before. This will favor us if it only lets up now.

T. W. Chatburn, Stewartville, Missouri, August 27:—

Have just organized a new branch at Pollock, Sullivan County, Missouri, with J. F. Petre president and elder, F. W. Burch priest, Elmer Petre teacher. A noble little band of Saints have been thus organized on the 20th ult., with cheering prospects for the future.

Bro. F. P. Scarecliff, Scranton, Mississippi, August 25:—

The debate between Bro. J. D. Erwin and Elder L. N. Brock, of the Baptist Church, closed week before last after eight sessions and large congregations. Our side was ably represented by Bro. Erwin and I believe the debate will eventually result in much good. Elder Brock, not being able to meet the arguments advanced, resorted to the telling of vile stories about Joseph the Martyr, etc. The Saints were strengthened and our friends encouraged.

Bro. H. P. Curtis, writing from Ono, Wisconsin, August 26, to Bro. A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, says:—

I baptized six here yesterday, all nice people. Another will be baptized. I preached to a splendid congregation and have had such at every appointment since you left. The Hall affair here is quite likely to turn into another new Latter Day Saints' church. We have baptized seven at Porcupine since you left; fifteen in all in the last few weeks. Surely the Lord is blessing us abundantly; expect to baptize more before I leave. I wish the Lord would touch me and make my body sound so I could preach the gospel as long and as loud as I want to. Well, this is a day of sacrifice; am glad to offer even a life for the great kingdom of God. Bro. A. V. Closson is well. Our Northern Wisconsin district conference was a grand success. I expect to wend my way south by September 9. Will stop in Grant County, Wisconsin; also in Lamoni, Independence, and Kansas.

Bro. E. F. Shupe, Denver, Colorado, August 26:—

The New Mexico Messiah has arrived in Denver. . . There are glowing reports of his work in New Mexico. He has just completed his forty days' fast and has been commanded by the Father (so he says) to rest three weeks before beginning his miraculous work in Denver. He was formerly a shoemaker but has abandoned the bench for a higher calling. We await developments. The Saints are not going wild over him as a great many others are. It is reported that a great many are flocking to see him every day, and that he refuses to see them till the three weeks have expired. Bro. M. F. Gowell has just returned from a two weeks' missionary tour in Weld County. Bro. Frank Chatburn was in the city over Sunday on his way to Southwestern Colorado to do missionary work.

Bro. M. T. Short, writing from Lewiston, Illinois, the 30th ult., says:—

I closed my three week's sojourn in Farmington last Monday, having spoken twenty-two times, and Bro. T. F. Stafford twice. Large audiences greeted us, especially the last week, and very many warm friends were made to the cause. Two were baptized, and many more favorably impressed. Outsiders tendered aid, furnished an organ, and otherwise sympathized with our endeavors. Last night the tent was fairly filled and quite a number on the outside, and this evening we look for a jam.

Bro. Short also sends us clippings—articles written by him in defense of the work, published in the secular press, which we may have space to more fully notice, later on.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, Boston, Massachusetts, August 29:—

Bro. Luff is booked for Fall River next Sunday, after which he will return home via Canada. I will be in Boston next Sunday. Brn. H. J. Davison, U. W. Greene, and George Robley are at Providence with tent. Bro. Greene will be at Plainville next Sunday, and F. M. Sheehy at Brockton. I think some of attending the Maine reunion, but not certain. Bro. Parsons and wife are running tent at Norwalk, Connecticut, successfully.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

LETTERS received and unpublished to date will appear in full or in summarized form in due time, as space permits. Our correspondents are requested to give us happenings of interest as they occur from time to time. We like to hear from all who have news to communicate, and suggest that they give it in terse, concentrated form. Address all matter for publication to the editors.

Bro. C. M. Fulks, at Coal Gate, Indian Territory, writes of his conversational efforts with Methodists, Baptists, Christians, and an occasional Brighamite elder who happens along. Himself and family are blessed of the Lord in the work.

Sr. E. D. Palmer, of Chippewa Station, Michigan, an aged sister who has recently united with the church at Fork, Michigan, wishes to inquire through the columns of the HERALD the address of a sister-in-law, one Kate Smith, who was about a year since a resident of Provo City, Utah, and was also a sister in Christ. Will some one please give the address if she is still among the living.

Bro. H. N. Hansen, of the Pottawattamie district, came to Lamoni on the 28th ult. to look up a location for himself and some family connections.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins went to Kansas to fill appointments, during the week of the 25th. Bishop E. L. Kelley went to Leon, county seat of Decatur County, Iowa, on church business; Bro. A. H. Smith to the Clarksdale, Missouri, reunion; Brn. R. M. Elvin and J. S. Snively to points in the Decatur district during the same week. These items with the local labors of Brn. T. J. Bell, S. V. Bailey, Marcus Shaw, and others include local work for the week in the district.

Press dispatches indicate that Spain, unable to suppress the Cuban revolution, is inclined to grant that island the right of self-government. The dispatches indicate that the Cuban patriots will not long be satisfied with this but will assert and maintain entire independence, and that they are likely to succeed in their efforts. Spain has in the past dominated many peoples, not in this country alone, but also in Europe. Religious fanaticism has been the force that has moved her forces in many of her struggles and successes in both hemispheres. The persecution of Protestants in Holland and her conquests in America have been based upon fanatical principles and love of gold. The day of extreme fanatical rule is past and with it Spain has lost her grasp and ceases to hold human beings in political and religious slavery. The spirit of the times has decreed the downfall of oppressors, and the last vestige of Spanish rule in the western hemisphere seems soon to be a thing of the past. God is ruling and the right prevailing, as it is destined to prevail in everything.

The spirit of the age shows unmistakably that it contemplates the freedom of every man, the good of all.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to patrons of the Herald Office that on and after October 1, 1895,—thirty days from date,—all orders for supplies amounting to less than fifty cents must be accompanied by cash. This applies to all except agents of the Herald Office who have open accounts.

The Herald Office management has found it necessary to begin this cash system for small orders for the reason that such a large number of small accounts has been charged upon the Herald Office books in years past that the Office is now burdened and hindered by an outstanding indebtedness of several thousand dollars from these small amounts alone—ranging from three cents, ten cents, fifteen cents, etc., up to fifty cents. This aggregate amount stands on the books, much of it from year to year, simply because many sending such orders fail to square the accounts, leaving them to accumulate into large sums.

It will be seen at once that the practice of sending in small orders to be filled on the credit system has entailed a heavy burden on the publishing department. It has also encouraged a careless, unbusinesslike method of doing business among the Saints that ought not to have been. Thousands of dollars are on the Herald Office books due from long standing accounts which ought to have been in circulation for the benefit of the church. No business can long succeed if run in such a manner. No business man wants a large number of small amounts carried on his ledger from month to month and from year to year. Every good business man avoids such a method with his customers. The work of the Lord cannot succeed unless it also conforms to business principles. It will not do to longer run our accounts with the Saints at such loose ends. It will prove disastrous to the entire body as long as continued. The time has come to stop it if we want to avoid entire bankruptcy and failure.

We shall seek to hereafter look after the financial interests of the Herald Office by this method of doing business, because it is a proper method and the only right one.

The Saints themselves are damaged by the old credit system. It is their interests we are looking after in establishing the rule requiring cash payments for orders in the amounts named. The Herald Office plant belongs to the Saints—to the church. If it succeeds, the work is benefited; if it suffers loss, the church at large suffers. If anything ought to succeed God's work should; if anything requires system and order, the work of God does. It must have that system in all its financial departments in order to succeed—to have the blessing of the Lord.

ence, etc. And, by the time the small amount has been collected the office and the customer have often expended from ten to fifteen cents to get it in, and such amounts soon add up to a large sum in the aggregate. The office and the customer are both losers by it, and the profit if not the main portion of the indebtedness goes to the Government for postage, stationery, etc. Besides this, no businesslike person wants outstanding debts unpaid when such can be avoided.

Hence notice is given that after October 1, 1895, all orders under fifty cents in amount must be accompanied by the money or a remittance for it. Postage stamps, money or express orders, or drafts will be accepted. Registered letters are at the risk of the sender.

The Saints are asked to sustain the management in its efforts to promote the interests of the literary and publishing department. Our success is your success—the success of the cause we love and to which we have pledged our support.

WE RECOMMEND THAT EACH BRANCH APPOINT A BOOK AGENT through whom all orders for church publications can be made, and who can look after the Herald Office interests and the literary wants of Saints. Appoint reliable parties and we will ratify such appointments, allowing such agents a discount of ten per cent on book orders to cover their expenses. Will branch presidents please see that appointments of book agents are made at once. PLEASE AID US. THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

THE committee appointed by the General Conference of 1895 to compile a smaller hymn and tune book—with words and music combined—have now completed their work and placed their manuscripts of words and music in the hands of the Board of Publication.

The members of the committee have spent months of hard work in performing the task assigned them and have also consulted others of acknowledged musical talent and scholarship, that the book when completed should be a credit to the church and a decided factor for good in its song service. The committee deserves credit for the good work done and we trust their efforts will receive prompt and manifest appreciation.

The General Conference in providing for the publication of the "Saints' Hymnal" stipulated that it be published when the Board of Publication had orders for one thousand copies, and owing to the low price of the book the Herald Office has found it necessary to require all orders to be accompanied by the money, otherwise the sale of the book on long time credits would be unprofitable and entail financial loss to the office.

We were promised large orders, but so far have received only about five hundred, and of these but half have been accompanied by the money.

In other words, we have received half enough orders and one fourth enough money to go ahead with the book.

The Saints through their representatives in General Conference ordered the publication of the Hymnal. They pledged it their support as they urged their need of the new book. We ask now that they send in their orders and money that the work be completed and put in their hands at once.

The price of the book is very moderate. It will be a credit to the church and a source of satisfaction to all lovers of sacred song, therefore a decided help.

The Saints' Hymnal, 50 cents per copy, cash in advance; bound in cloth, leather backs and corners; all substantial and neat work throughout.

Special styles of higher priced binding furnished as ordered. Address orders to the undersigned,

FRANK CRILEY,
Business Manager,
Herald Office.

LAMONI, Decatur Co., Iowa, Aug. 23, 1895.

Robespierre was urbane in manner and courteous, though brief, to those who approached him on business.

Talleyrand owed his success in life to no small extent to the uniform courtesy with which he treated everyone.

Byron was affable to his equals and to those whom he wished to please, but haughty and distant to most others.

The Duke of Marlborough said that he owed his success as much to his elegant deportment as to his talents.

Andrew Jackson was rough in his manners, but could be polite when he pleased. He was always courteous to ladies.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"If the best man's faults were printed on his forehead he would want to draw his hat over his eyes sometimes." I remember of reading once of a man who was noted for his deep piety who said on one occasion that he never heard or knew of any deed done by any, however bad it was, but that he always considered that he might have done the same himself if his nature, training, associations, temptations, surroundings, and enticements were the same.

CUMBERED ABOUT MUCH SERVING.

Christ never asks of us such busy labor
As leaves no time for resting at his feet;
The waiting attitude of expectation,
He oftentimes counts a service most complete.

He sometimes wants our ear—our rapt attention,
That he some sweetest secret may impart;
'Tis always in the time of deepest silence,
That heart finds deepest fellowship with heart.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord doth place us
Within a sphere so narrow, so obscure,
That nothing we call work can find an entrance,
There's only room to suffer—to endure.

Well, God loves patience! Souls that dwell in stillness,

Doing the little things, or resting quite,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight

As they who grapple with some giant evil,
Clearing a path that every eye may see;
Our Savior cares for cheerful acquiescence,
Rather than for a busy ministry.

And yet he does love service, where 'tis given
By grateful love that clothes itself in deed;
But work that's done beneath the scourge of duty,

Be sure to such he gives but little heed.

Then seek to please him, whatso'er he bids thee,

Whether to do—to suffer—to lie still!
'Twill matter little by what path he led us,
If in it all we sought to do his will.—Sel.

IS IT RIGHT?

HUMANITY naturally loves to effect improvements. How great the pleasure of clearing land of forest and stones, of securing crops, and having fruit trees grow and bear abundantly, of progressing in buildings, business, machinery, and whatever we undertake. But how utterly insignificant all this compared with the improvement of intellect and moral nature. How grand to see even one rise from the ashes of sloth and degradation, and like "Trilby" strive to cultivate their finer nature, and while standing on a lawn illuminated in honor of invited guests the thought came to me, How many in this large social gathering are following out the teachings of the gospel in striving to win erring ones back to the fold of Christ? How many of us gathered there were willing to engage in obviating human weaknesses, maladies, and sufferings, and in endeavoring to exterminate those evils and vices which afflict the human family, and help build that magnificent human temple now in slow but sure process of erection, and carry the race onward and upward toward that angelic destiny in store for it? As children of God, dear sisters, this should be the great desire of our souls, the great labor of our lives. How grand to subserve an end thus glorious—to tell those who would know how to curb wayward passions and quench sinful desires, how to cultivate weak faculties and live up to the exalted endowments and capabilities of their natures.

But as long as we women have one code of morals for men and another one for women, just so long will our work be a failure. O society, thou art a tyrant! Why this fish of one and fowl of another? When wilt thou treat erring woman as our great Exemplar treated the sinning Magdalen? When, and as far as, thou followest his precepts and examples.

This proscriptive spirit is not Christianity, is not humanity, is not philosophy. It does not deter others from falling, yet ruins thousands of those whom forgiveness would save. The odium that we as Christians often heap upon those who have made one false step literally drives them on down the broad way to destruction and heads off every attempt to reform. This state of public sentiment is the great peopler of houses of infamy, which the restoring spirit would rob of their tenants. Does God forgive us our trespasses, and shall not we also forgive one another? Shall we pray "Our Father, who art in heaven" to forgive us our trespasses as we forgive others, and yet be relentless toward our fallen sisters and those that may be pure, but the breath of scandal has touched? How dare we invoke from him that vindictiveness touching our own sins, with which we persecute her who has been seduced or slandered? Are we so very pure in heart that we could cast the first stone? Even then shall we not rather say with our great Exemplar, "Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more"? Who berates the fallen most? Those who walk nearest the edge of the same precipice, and are therefore both the most suspicious and sensorious because they judge others by themselves, censorious, because themselves censurable; whereas purity is unsuspecting and virtue tolerant and forgiving. We always find that those in our towns and circles who denounce the moral reform movement as improper are those whose illicit pleasures it abridges, while the "pure in heart" are the most merciful, as well as the most assiduous in their labors of reform.

Perhaps those sisters that the vile tongue of slander has abused, are as good by nature as ourselves, indeed they may be our superiors both mentally and physically. They are our sisters. Is it right for us to work and rescue the drunkard from the gutter, the pest and detestation of all, and reinstate him in society, and at the same time turn from one under a cloud with a glance of contempt? Is not the last one equally worthy and is not her salvation equally desirable? Fathers and mothers in Zion, brothers and sisters of philanthropy and virtue, let us endeavor to consecrate part of our time to the arduous and most needed work of humanity, that of befriending those that need help. But remember, sisters, we can do nothing at arm's length, nor by prayers and preaching alone, but we must make a personal effort, and treat all such tenderly and encourage them. This is a grand work for the Daughters of Zion if they will only do it. Let us hear from all on this subject, for it is a question that confronts all that are working for the latter-day cause.

AUNT FANNIE.

[AS WE finished reading the above we found ourself all unconsciously repeating the words of a hymn familiar to most of our readers,

"Raise the fallen, cheer the faint,
Heal the sick, and lead the blind:
Just and Holy is thy name
Christ, the Lord our Righteousness;
Love for man thou dost proclaim,—
Thou art full of truth and grace.
Plenteous grace with Thee is found—
Grace to pardon all my sin."

All my sin—why then so little grace left to pardon that of my neighbor? Think of it, you who sing this while the Spirit of God burns as a fire in your bosom, think of the sweet assurance which comes to your soul of God's ability and willingness to pardon all your sins and then remembering that he is no respecter of persons, ask yourself why he is not able—why not willing to pardon all—yes all who have gone astray?—ED.]

KEEP BUSY.

If you expect God to choose you for a great work, be busy; he seldom selects idlers. When he wished a deliverer for Israel, he went into the wilderness for Moses, who was watching sheep; when he wanted a man to save his people from the Midianites, he sent for Gideon, who was threshing wheat; when he wanted a man after his own heart to be king of Israel, he sent for David, who was keeping sheep.

Idlers do not suit. The Lord wishes those who are not only willing to work, but who are hard at it. Idlers are too often lazy, and that may be the cause of their idleness. Such seldom have enough ambition to take care of themselves, let alone caring for the Lord's work. But idlers suit Satan exactly. He likes such as have no ambition; they make the best slaves.

The Devil wants slaves for his work, but God wants something better. He wishes men and women who have ambition—who take an interest in their work; he wishes servants who are anxious to rise, for he means to promote them some day. From servants, he adopts them into his family and makes them his children.—Forward.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

"See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean, cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to your bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated; and above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace; pray always, that you may not faint until I come."—Doc. and Cov. 85 : 38.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. CELESTINE RUSH, of Heppner, Oregon, asks your faith and prayers in behalf of a neighbor, Mrs. Tolbert, who has now been sick more than a year. She has a family of small children and hopes she may be spared to raise them.

Letter Department.

REED CITY Mich., Aug. 26.

Editors Herald:—I am still alive, and trying to keep the work moving. We are having good success in some places, in other places not quite so good. Times are a little dull and still the brethren in different places, are trying to erect houses of worship and are moving along the best they can spiritually and temporally.

At South Boardman they are putting up a nice little church, only moving as they can pay. At Fork a neat little church is being erected by the Saints; all done but siding and lath and plastering; all paid for as far as they have gone, and I believe enough raised to pay the plasterer, etc. I built the chimney in each church, and did some carpenter work at the Fork building, making the window frames, fitting the sash, and doing some preaching in the evenings, etc.

At Boyne City the Saints have purchased the M. E. church building on a contract, made a payment down at the time of purchase, and on yearly payments until paid. Some time ago before due they had their next payment ready or thereabouts, and things are moving on nicely in that line.

Boyne City is the place where we had the discussion with Mr. Musser. Mr. Musser does not seem to wear very well. At Boyne City the party who first took him in will have nothing to do with him now. In a letter from Bro. R. W. Hugill, of Boyne City, he says: "I think many feel ashamed of the stand they took in the Musser affair. When he came back the last time he did not find a welcome at his old quarters, at Mrs. Wilk's, she says she don't want him there any more. He left town on top of a box car,—got off at Elmira, but no one to meet him, or ask him home to dinner, so he went to the hotel, registered as Joseph Musser, of Boyne City, got his dinner, and left." Elmira is the place where he said so much against us and where the minds of the people were at first very much poisoned against us, but still those who were willing to hear both sides have had the poison taken out of them. The last time I passed through there Bro. R. W. Hugill baptized three and I baptized two a few days afterwards.

Bro. F. M. Cooper tells me in his letter that he debated with Musser since we had ours at Boyne City, and he also adds that Musser has been taken into the Disciple Church and has an elder's license from it. But if Musser is a sample of their ministers they could all be (by law) placed behind the grates.

When Mr. Spayde, the State Evangelist for Michigan of the Disciple or Christian Church wrote me some time ago about a debate, etc., in reply I asked him to name the propositions, time, place, and the name of the person to debate, etc. In answer I received the name of Ira C. Billman and on looking over the book called "Crimes of Preachers" I find the same name of Ira C. Billman! I suppose now we will have Mr. Musser as a Christian debater against the Latter Day Saints. But he and his like must do much better than he has done with Carpenter, Cornish, and Cooper, or they will play out soon and the Latter Day Saints will convert the people; for as far as we can find 'tis certain we are reaching the ears of the people who, were it not for the debates, would not attend our meetings, and many of whom are either now members or friends of the church. Well, if that is the way the work is to go on always, by preaching, debating, and putting up with all the slander and abuse they do heap upon us falsely for Christ's sake, I am willing to do my best to put up with it all and win souls for Christ.

I often think of the statement of Joseph the Martyr when he was quoting Paul, "We believe all things, we hope all things," and he so fittingly adds, "We have endured many things, and hope to be able to endure all things." So do I hope to endure all things; and yet, what have any of us endured for this work when compared with the two martyrs and the Saints in the early days of this church?

But Musser in his persecution of the work says: "We are not persecuting them for their belief in Christ, neither have they been persecuted for Christ's sake, but for their belief in Joe Smith." Then I ask, When they killed that man why did not persecution cease? Furthermore, I believe in the same gospel that was brought by the angel to that prophet of God, the same as did that prophet himself. If I then am persecuted because of that prophet, for what reason was that prophet persecuted? Answer ye wise whom Paul speaks of, or has your "wisdom perished"?

The work is indeed onward in this district. There have been (as near as I can learn) about eighty added to the church since the last General Conference. The greatest trouble I have is to begin to fill half the calls we have to "come and preach" here and there, etc. May the Lord bless us all, is the prayer of your brother,

J. J. CORNISH.

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 18.

Editors Herald:—The work is advancing slowly here under rather reverse circumstances. We have no regular speaker here and the most of the work devolves on the teacher and deacon, the only officers in the branch at present. The Saints here are alive and awake, trying to do all they can for the cause of the Master. They are all working in harmony and union and aiding the officers all they can. I think it is a splendid branch for the number and its age, which is less than a year. I feel to praise them for their efforts here. May God bless them with choice blessings.

When I read the letters in the Herald and see the calls for help I wish I was able to help to proclaim this glad news, for I know this is the true gospel of Jesus Christ, and I know that the Book of Mormon is the word of God. O that the world could see its beauty and truthfulness; in their blindness they cannot.

When I read the demands for workers I think that if the local workers would only move out and work around in the country surrounding their branches as well as in the branch they would reduce the labors of our missionaries and thus permit them to devote more time to the calls from new fields. If the Saints as a whole could realize the importance of this work and live up to the gospel they would do more towards converting the world than the preachers; for actions speak louder than words, and a few Saints setting a bad example will almost kill the effects of preaching. I do not think the Saints, all of them, realize the grand blessings that are in store for them if they only submit and do the will of God and give him all the glory.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. G. YOUNG.

VIROQUA, Wis., Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—This is a place of about seventeen hundred, an inland town, well improved and up to date. The Disciple or Christian Church has a preacher from Missouri, think it is Marshfield he is from; I heard him when he first came about two months ago. He said the Mormons (didn't make an explanation who they were) had a zeal for God, but not according to knowledge. Said they were a very zealous people.

There are quite a few people here that take stock in John Alexander Dowie of Chicago. I can't understand why there shouldn't somebody come here. At a place called Viola about thirteen miles distant, the Christian Church has just received twenty-five members. The Methodists are having a camp meeting here now. We have two or three places that can be secured, halls

I mean. The people are liberal. I can't see any reason why an elder can't come, but it will have to be the right man. I will do all I can for an elder coming here.

Yours truly,

J. H. TATE, JR.

DEKALB, Ill., Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—We are often made glad when reading from the church papers the reports coming from Zion's children from nearly all parts of the world; of greatly increasing spirituality among those already in the church, and an increasing desire among those not of the church to hear the word of truth preached by God's servants. The indications are plainly outlined by these developments, and it evidently betokens greater prosperity to the church than has hitherto been enjoyed. It does my soul good to see the truth shine so bright, above the many theories of men and societies, and that when attacked it is so grandly victorious.

Zion's Religio-Literary Society is, to the writer's mind, an organization which if rightly appreciated and supported by the church will be a means of the Master bestowing a great blessing—a rich endowment to the church—the influence of which will extend to and be felt by the world. One of the grandest, if not the grandest, features of this society, is the opportunity offered for each one to make use of and improve upon the talent God has given him, and that to the edification of the entire society; in fact, it enables the church to utilize talent which hitherto had remained undeveloped.

We have in DeKalb an organization of the kind, and although not large yet it is doing much good to all those who choose to profit thereby; and nearly all of our branch and Sunday school have become members, also some very excellent people not members of the church. It requires much hard work to make a success of a local society, but if each member performs the part assigned him on the program to the very best of his ability, there is then a very successful society.

The work is moving along nicely with us here, for which we are very thankful to the Master. Five have been baptized since General Conference and all are excellent people. Our branch is composed mostly of young people, and the zeal, wisdom, and love of the Master's cause manifested by them is greatly to be commended. Upon the young falls a great work, and from my observation I am not fearful in the least, for I discover that they have learned of Jesus and God is with them. A peculiar work is being done among the children of the church and a class of young men are coming who I feel confident will be instruments in the Master's hand of making his church not only "clear as the moon and fair as the sun," but also "terrible as an army with banners;" and I hope and pray that God may so prepare them that when going to the world with the gospel of purity, peace, and godliness their lives may be in perfect accord with their words, and as representing the church. Any elder doing less is a traitor to the entire cause of truth and the church builded thereupon, and from which he takes his commission. When he accepts such commission and appointment, a contract is virtually made by which he agrees not to represent himself, but the church; and self therefore should never be thrust upon the people, but the gospel, including such works as are approved of by the church. My faith is in God and my joy in Zion's prosperity.

As ever, in bonds,

C. D. CARTER.

BROUGHTON, Kansas, August, 1895.

Editors Herald:—For some time past I have been desirous of preaching in our sister town of Bala, in Riley County, as I am quite well acquainted there; so one Sunday last spring, accompanied by two of my daughters, I called upon them at their Sunday school services and by request joined with them. At the close of the exercises the superintendent invited me to speak to the school for awhile, which I did for about twenty or thirty minutes. Several of them thanked me kindly for the talk and invited me to come again and preach to them, but to give them a week's notice when I could come and there would be a full house. You may be sure I was well pleased with the outlook, so in a short time I sent them word when I would be there, supposing it would be all right; but in a few days I was notified by one of their trustees, a good friend of mine, that he had to bring the matter before the members of the church (Congregational), and the majority voted that no Mormons could preach in their church. So mote it be.

Another: A short time ago one of the neighbor's children died. The father passed right by me and went to Clay Center for a minister to preach the funeral sermon, and when he came back he called on me and said, "Well, Mr. Hart, I guess we'll have to get you to help us out to-morrow; I suppose there ought to be something done, and we've tried to run down three and could not get them; so I guess we'll have to get you." I did my best to help them out. I am trying to do all I can to advance the cause of Christ.

Your brother,

HENRY HART.

GREGGVILLE, Ala., Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—Our little band of Saints is growing in number slowly. Some few have lately united with us. Bro. G. R. Scogin, our president, has labored very diligently since he located in our neighborhood; he has worked faithfully to help remove the darkness from the minds of the people and bring the true gospel to be understood, and has been the means of many being in this true light to-day. May the Lord still continue to bless him in his labors and with good health, that he may still continue on in this gospel work. He had Bro. J. D. Erwin to assist him in July. He preached for us some and baptized seven on the 11th. Bro. J. D. made many friends to the cause; the people just fell in love with him as did also the Saints of this branch. We feel very glad that he was sent to us. He is sent to labor in a place where he was needed very much. Some will be ready for baptism when he returns, in September I think.

We have organized a Sunday school with thirty members which we hope will prosper. Dear Saints, do not forget our little branch in your prayers. Pray for us that we may live faithful to the covenant. We have some very hard trials in this life to bear though we all ought to look to Him who is able and willing to help us to withstand the storms of this life with patience. If we expect to be instrumental in bringing others into the fold of Christ we must be humble, with love and patience in advocating the doctrine. Hoping for a final triumph of purity and truth,

Your sister in love of the truth,

SADIE J. AMERSON.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—The good people of Runnells are quite busy preparing for the district conference that is to be held here on the 7th and 8th of September. They expect to dedicate the new church on the 8th and as there is a small debt still resting on the church it is hoped all the Saints who desire to do so will come prepared to help pay off the same.

I closed a series of meetings at Vandalia, Jasper County, last week, where we had the largest congregations I have met anywhere in the Des Moines district. I left a good interest with many requests to return soon. Surely the Lord has a people there. But few of them had ever heard the gospel in its fullness, and they became greatly interested and said it was surely the word of God.

I came to Runnells to fill my appointment, and on last Sunday, August 25, between morning and evening service I had the pleasure of burying two precious souls with Christ in baptism. The Saints here are feeling well and their watchword is, "Onward and upward."

Yours in gospel bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

NETAWAKA, Kan., Aug. 23.

Editors Herald:—I entered my mission on the 4th of May and began my labors at Wilber, Nebraska. After holding six meetings I returned to Lincoln where I joined Bro. J. W. Waldsmith and held three services in Bro. L. Diefendorf's house. Bro. Waldsmith and I started from there to Omaha where we were to do some work as a committee in hopes of settling a difficulty, which although small at first has grown to such a proportion as to involve almost the entire missionary force of the mission. We can plainly see the wisdom in the revelation which says, "the authorities of those branches and districts should be authorized and permitted to settle them;" and we will be glad to see the time when the development of the branches and districts is such as to enable them to extricate themselves without calling on the missionaries.

While on the way we stopped at Ashland, South Bend, and Springfield. Our meetings were for the time of the year well attended and the Lord gave needed assistance in our efforts to explain the gospel. On the 29th of May we met to examine the case referred to and after a hard day's work found it was necessary to have a court of elders appointed. This being done all the missionaries excepting Bro. M. H. Forscutt in the two districts became connected with the case. Nevertheless we have moved out in different directions as the way opened and considering the disadvantages under which we have labored I consider we have done well.

There are several points where we have labored where some are talking of following their Savior through the "watery grave," with quite a number who are willing to hear. I was pleased to see the improvement made in the Omaha branch since Bro. F. A. Smith has been laboring there. He and Bro. Mintun were holding tent meetings in South Omaha with good interest and by invitation I spoke on the 9th inst. to a large crowd in their tent. On the 10th there were only a few, as it rained till almost dark; but as some came who were anxious to learn, I tried again to enlighten them on the way of life. I am anxious to see the mission prosper, and expect to be back at my post of duty inside of two months at most.

Yours for Zion's success,

WARREN E. PEAK.

LAMONI, Iowa, August 23.

Editors Herald:—Since my last writing I have observed a few things that may be of interest to your widespread readers, and thought of some things that I might have included in my last letter. Rev. (?) Mr. Irwin said in his last sermon at Lucas: "Thank God the neck of Mormonism is broken, never to be revived." He explained this neck breaking business as follows: Two Holyite evangelists went to Salt Lake City, Utah, with a tabernacle (tent) and held a holiness meeting "right in the heart of the city, under the very nose of Brigham Young." The Mormons were about to break up the meeting with violence, but the miners and roughs of the mountains drew their revolvers and bowie knives to defend the two evangelists, and thus was the downfall of Mormonism never to rise again! Notwithstanding all this bombastic rant he had the brazenness to make the following prognostication to the people of Lucas: "You have rejected the message of the Lord, and the time will come when there will be a Mormon church on that hill, and a Mormon church over on that hill, and another Mormon church on that hill, and a Mormon church on that hill. Your daughters will be made prostitutes and your streets filled with bastards, and every Mormon will have from eight to twelve wives." This gush and rant was to inflame prejudice against our people. But thank God it failed in its purpose.

While refuting the untrue statements made against us, I freely used the Book of Covenants and Book of Mormon, and in using the words of Jacob, "But the word of God burthens me because of your grosser crimes. For behold, thus saith the Lord: This people begin to wax in iniquity; they understand not the Scriptures: for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord. Wherefore, thus saith the Lord: I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch, from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken unto the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: for I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me: thus saith the Lord of hosts. Wherefore, this people shall keep my commandments, saith the Lord of hosts, or cursed be the land for their sakes. For if I will, saith the Lord of hosts, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people: otherwise, they shall hearken unto these things."—Jacob 2:6. (This quotation is made from the Palmyra edition.)

The enemies of the Reorganization have constantly urged and employed the "otherwise" of the foregoing as a provision for the introduction of the crime of polygamy. I confess that that "otherwise" was always opaque to me, but on this occasion I am satisfied that I received a divine revelation, to guide in a proper and truthful teaching of the word. The following was my presentation:—

1. On account of a grosser crime than pride, the "word of God" came to Jacob.
2. The Nephites—"this people begin to wax in iniquity;" that is, to increase in a sin that was worse than pride.
3. The Nephites sought to excuse themselves in the committal of this greater sin on account of what was written relative to David and Solomon committing the sin of having many "wives and concubines."
4. The Nephites misunderstood the Scriptures in that they accepted a historical statement of sin committed to be authority permitting them to do a like sin or abomination.
5. Lehi and his company were led by the power of God from the land of Jerusalem, where David and Solomon "had many wives and concubines," to the land of America, where they, the Nephites, were to live the law of righteousness, which is defined: "for there shall not be any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none."
6. The object of leading Lehi and companions to the land of America was that they should not "do like unto them of old," have "many wives and concubines," and if they committed the abomination of having "many wives and concubines," the very "land" should "be cursed" for their "sakes" (sins).
7. The promise, "I will command my people," should be received in the light of the word of Jesus Christ: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."—Matt. 4:4. All words of God will be in unison, harmony, and in line one with the other. No new revelation will be contrary to any revelation of ancient time. On the subject of marriage, from the time that Adam received Eve to wife, and God "called their name Adam," till the same God said unto Joseph Smith, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else," all the revelations of God are a unit.

8. Now for that "otherwise." It was the will of God that those Nephites be led out of the land of Jerusalem wherein sin and abominations were practiced among the people, "because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously," that the requirement of the Lord was that the Nephites should live righteously that God might raise up unto himself a "righteous seed," and to do this they were not to "do like unto them of old" who committed abominations before God; but here is the righteous rule they were to live: "for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none." The opposite to this is, "otherwise they shall hearken unto these things;" that is, unto the things written concerning David and Solomon, and if they did the things that David and Solomon did, then the "land" would "be cursed . . . for their sakes," or on account of their sins and abominations. The word of the Lord was, "wherefore, this people shall keep my commandments. And the "commandments" was one wife and no concubines. The "otherwise" has reference to a people living in sin and rejected of God. There is no loophole in the wording of the Book of Mormon through which the crime of polygamy can creep into the church.

On June 18 an anxious mother wrote to Bro. D. Daniels to come and heal her daughter, that had been sick for four years, and that she was unable to obtain any medicine that would help her. I wrote and explained the gospel, and urged a careful and prayerful consideration of the same, and suggested that whether death or restoration to health, the proper thing to do was to comply with the law of God and trust in him, let the consequences be what they might. On June 30 both mother and daughter were baptized and were confirmed the same day, and the young lady was administered to, and has been improving in health ever since. Praise should be the fruit of our lips continually unto God for the plenitude of his mercy and loving kindness to needy mortals.

July 14 was an eventful day with us. Brn. E. B. Morgan and D. Daniels, with a number of sisters, went with us out to the Hazel Dell schoolhouse. I spoke in the forenoon, and again in the afternoon, but had only been preaching a little time when a severe storm of wind and rain beat upon the house. I tried to preach till the storm rolled by, but the windows were all shut down to keep the rain out and it was so intensely hot that an hour and twenty minutes suggested that Bro. Morgan talk awhile, and made a good sermon of forty minutes. The storm having subsided we went to a pond near by and he baptized a lady of the neighborhood. I spoke in the Norwood schoolhouse in the evening.

On the 20th, I went to Hiteman and was made both glad and sad; sad because the evil one had entered the ranks and stirred up ill-feeling among the little band of Saints, setting one against the other. I did not discover that anyone had willingly done evil or wrong, but that misunderstanding was the real cause of the trouble, and all will be healed by the exercise of patience and forbearance, doing as the Master directed, "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." I was made glad that this little handful of Saints had so faithfully wrought that in seven weeks from the time they broke ground and set the "chief post," they had a neat little chapel in which to worship. The building is not yet paid for, but is such a triumph over the past trials and rebuffs suffered from professors. The opening was by the Sabbath school, and the children seemed fired with enthusiasm, while some of the older members were too full for utterance, and the silent tear gave proof of their joy. I preached over two Sabbaths and the attendance was good. A few seem interested in our cause.

On the 30th ult. I was called home by telegram on account of sickness, and have been a watcher at the bedside ever since. On account of an accident to Bro. H. A. Stebbins I filled an appointment for him on the 4th., at Davis City, preaching twice. I am still anxious to be about the Master's business. I never saw the people more willing to hear our message than now. The Holy Spirit is richly given, and Satan is active.

In gospel bonds,

R. M. ELVIN.

BOTTINEAU, N. D., Aug. 18.

Editors Herald:—We have a nice little branch here; all are trying to do their duty and let their light shine. We have had our meetings every Sunday for a long time till to-day; our branch president is away in the harvest field to get things for his family this winter. But it will only be for a short time, and the rest of us must do the best we can. We have one another to talk to of this glorious gospel.

I am so thankful for the society of my brethren and sisters. Three years ago I had no one to talk with of this work, and if I commenced to talk with my neighbors they would turn away or go to talking about something else; but since Bro. I. N. Roberts came here he has done a good work, not only in organizing this branch, but in removing much prejudice. I gave some tracts to some and since Bro. Roberts preached they came out and confessed that they burned up the tracts for fear their families would read them.

On the 6th of July Brn. I. N. Roberts and Thomas Leitch came to visit us again. They have done a great deal of good. Bro. Roberts has opened up several new places here. There are a good many investigating. I do hope and pray he can come back here again. He baptized four precious souls while here and there were some others ready, but their friends stood in their way. May God in his wisdom order that all the honest in heart may be permitted to obey the truth.

I have a request to ask of some of the brethren laboring in Wisconsin. I have some relatives and a good many friends near San Prairie, Dane County, Wisconsin, and I wish some of the traveling elders would go there. Write a letter to J. B. Clements, San Prairie, Wisconsin, Box 143, telling him about when you could be there. Hoping and praying that all the honest in heart may have the privilege of obeying the gospel, I am,

Your sister,

MATTHE E. HOWERY.

MOUNTAIN GROVE, Mo., Aug 28.

Editors Herald:—At this time I am at Mountain Grove, Missouri, assisting in the Southern Missouri district reunion. Brn. F. C. Keck, Henry Sparling, Henry C. Smith, Joseph Ward, C. M. Bootman, C. W. Cather, C. J. Spurlock, and self of the eldership are here. Meetings are well attended; at nights the walls of the tent are spread out, and many extra seats put in, but yet we cannot hardly accommodate the people. The interest is simply getting grand; the speaking has been more than ordinary. Either prejudice is giving away, or the people are crowding the tent through curiosity. A number of the sect preachers have attended. The word has now gone out that "the town never had such grand preaching before."

I am well pleased with the surroundings, and believe good will come to the work through this effort.

I go from here to Baxter Springs, Kansas, to assist in their district reunion from September 7 to 16, then to the mission reunion at El Dorado Springs. In bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

ARBAUGH, Ohio, Aug. 22.

Editors Herald:—We closed our tent meetings at McArthur on the evening of the 20th inst., the tent being crowded at the last service. Bro. Etzenhouser and I began work there on the 26th of July, and in all thirty sermons were preached. Good interest was manifested by the people from first to last.

Two were baptized on Sunday the 18th who, we believe, will be an honor unto the work. They were Mrs. Lyman Long and her son Elmer. They were formerly members of the United Brethren Church. The young man at one time opposed this work, but after hearing the gospel as we presented it concluded that he had been in the wrong, and accepted the truth without hesitation. Others who heard are convinced of the divinity of the work, and express their intention of accepting the gospel in the near future. May they not defer it too long.

Bro. Etzenhouser and a C. B. Taylor D. D. (Presbyterian) of McArthur, have signed propositions for a debate which is to take place at McArthur in October or November. Bro. Etzenhouser affirms the Reorganized Church to be the true church, while Dr. Taylor affirms that all the leading churches of the Reformation taken together compose the Church of Jesus Christ. I have not the exact wording of the questions, but the foregoing is the substance of them.

Dr. Taylor in one of his sermons to his people while we were there attacked our position and made reference to the Book of Mormon; Bro. Etzenhouser was present to hear, took notes, and set apart a night especially to review Dr. Taylor. An unusually large audience was present to hear the review, many expressing their satisfaction at the way in which he answered Dr. Taylor. But the reverend D. D. himself was not present to hear although he had been attending very regularly at first. At the conclusion of his remarks Bro. Etzenhouser read a challenge to Dr. Taylor to discuss the question of the divinity of the Book of Mormon, at the conclusion of the debate now pending.

Bro. Etzenhouser waited upon the D. D. the next day and presented to him the challenge, but he refused to sign it, giving as a reason that he expected to bring the Book of Mormon in on the first proposition. The challenge was published in three of the local papers this week.

The time for debate on the propositions agreed upon was left to Bro. Etzenhouser to designate, as for some time he has engagements ahead demanding his attention. All are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the debate. We pray that it may be the cause of others comprehending the truth as it is in the gospel.

We were kindly treated by the people of McArthur, and are satisfied that our effort there will bear fruit in days to come.

In the faith,

H. E. MOLER.

LINCOLN, Neb., August 23.

Editors Herald:—Having just viewed a funeral procession consisting of one hundred and seven teams following the remains of Mrs. G. R. Wolf and little daughter to their last resting place, I was again reminded of the uncertainty of life, and a tender spot within my heart was irritated as I recalled the death of our babe which occurred a few weeks ago while I was about my Master's business, and not receiving word in time was never permitted to behold it. The death of Mrs. Wolf and child occurred at Denver at the explosion of a boiler in a hotel where they were lodging while on a visit to some friends. Her husband was in New Mexico and her children here when the accident happened. Such sudden deaths seem to cause the most intense sadness. Truly with heart overflowing with joy I can sing, "Thou hast redeemed us," when that time shall come that the power of death is destroyed. How I long for the day of deliverance to come to the world, possibly sometimes with too much anxiety; but I can surely say I with patience labor and wait for it.

I came to Omaha on the 23d of July expecting to spend only a night or two assisting Bro. Fred A. Smith, but because of the complexity of the conditions I thought it wise to remain longer. I continued there assisting until the 13th inst., when I came to this place. The effort being conducted in Omaha with the tent has reached more people who had never heard of the gospel than have been reached through services in the church in years; there is nearly a score of people both Jews and Gentiles who have become conscious that we have the truth of God, at least have so expressed themselves, and await obedience until a more thorough investigation is had.

While at Omaha I had a tent made by Wolf Bros. and Co., for the Southern Nebraska district, which we now have pitched on the corner of K. and Eleventh Streets in this city. Failing to be able to secure a tent made by Bro. John May in time for our use, I visited the firm above mentioned and in honesty to the firm I must say I am much pleased with the tent. The Wolf Bros. are former residents of Nauvoo, Illinois, and seemed to take a special interest in making the tent satisfactory, they speaking in great respect of the family of Bro. Joseph Smith.

Since our arrival here we have had some encouragement, but not the interest we yet hope for, but expect to labor on for at least two weeks yet. Hope if any Saints have friends living in Lincoln they would wish visited they would so inform me, directing to No. 442 South Eleventh Street, Lincoln, Nebraska.

I fail not to remember the kindness shown to me by both Saints and nonmembers of the church while at Omaha, and here make mention of it. The Saints here are unable to hold services regularly on account of being so much scattered and no conveyances, besides some being so aged and afflicted they can't very well get away from their homes; but their love for the gospel seems unwavering, although they have much to tempt them and discourage. Uncle Mark, as he is familiarly known, is here doing all he can, and were it not for his present suffering he, for aught I can see, would do as much as of yore; for his enthusiasm for the work of God seems to remain unabated. I don't know but I can safely say it is increasing.

Ever remembering the Saints and friends of the Little Sioux district and elsewhere with the spirit of love and thankfulness, and praying that I may be qualified to so deport myself in this mission that I may be worthy to receive similar kindness as formerly received, seeking the upbuilding of Zion, I am,
Your brother and friend,

J. F. MINTUN.

P. S.—I wish to request all teachers of Sunday schools who will be present at the Logan reunion to prepare themselves for work, as we expect to do more work in this department than before, and this will necessitate willing workers. Watch for notice in week or two of work expected to be done.

CHETEK, Wis., Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—I am pleased to report progress in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Bro. Whiteaker led five precious souls into the waters of baptism Sunday morning, and I baptized one on Monday morning, and I believe others are soon to follow. Bro. Whiteaker was called home on important business, so now I shall have to do the best I can without him. The interest is good; the people are ready to hear the word, but they seem slow to obey.

I preached five times near Grant post office on my return from conference at Porcupine. A good interest was manifest. This is a new opening and I believe good will be done. I was blessed while telling the gospel story, also in visiting from house to house and explaining the Scriptures to the people. I am persuaded that much good may be done in most every neighborhood in visiting the people. I find they are more easily reached in this way than in public preaching.

There were about seventy-five Indians present at the baptism on Sunday. They were delighted with the singing. I am trying to do the best I can, and desire to continue in the work until the victory is won.

Yours in the conflict,

C. W. DILLON.

YOUTH AND AGE

MUCH interest is felt and shown in the growth and culture of the young in all departments of physical and spiritual life. Much of this interest is the fruit of the labors of the older ones who have toiled hard and borne the burdens of life.

In our social life we enjoy the presence of all, both young and old. All have something to do, a mission to fill at all periods of life. Our hearts are often tinged with sadness as we listen to some of the older ones regretting that they have survived their usefulness; that interest in them has ceased; they fail to interest others. Wrinkles and silver hair take the place of youthful beauty; experience has no value; new and brighter lights are in the ascendant and they must consent to subside in obscurity. But such lamentation should not exist. The path of the righteous may be as the bright light shining more and more unto the perfect day.

In our social meetings in the house and in the church we find and enjoy the presence of all ages. In the testimony meeting words of wisdom and edification are spoken by the older as well as the younger, obeying the command, "Be ye my witnesses."

In the Sabbath school there is a large field for the older people to form Bible classes and teaching classes for children, and youth; and in the service of song, whether in choir or in congregation, how delightful to see the radiant faces of the older singing the songs of Zion with the younger and even the children! Our souls are thrilled with emotion whose echoes fall sweetly upon our heart-life.

The sacred desk is filled by older as well as by younger ambassadors of Christ, his Spirit shedding itself abroad in their hearts. The aged brother with faltering step and silver hair, coming to his grave like a shock of corn in his season, a very monument of God's mercy, even such a one is heard with fond interest and profit. And while in the harvest field of light contending with the storms of life, and at the "evening hour" hearing the breakers on the shore, let us congratulate them that they are esteemed and believed; that they may be useful to the very end of life, and when gone from sight their accents shall ring on.

THE EL DORADO SPRINGS REUNION.

Signs and indications are pointing towards a grand success for the Missouri El Dorado Springs' reunion. Those coming by rail via Kansas City must take the Missouri Pacific from Kansas City to Nevada; there change onto the M. K. and T., at the same depot for Harwood, the second station up towards Clinton. Those coming on the Missouri Pacific from the south also change onto the M. K. and T. at Nevada. Covered hacks meet all trains at Harwood, which is about twelve miles from El Dorado Springs. Always ask the hackman to take you to the camp grounds. When landed upon the grounds pay your hack fare, which will be fifty cents for man and his grips. For trunks extra charges. Don't get off down town; if you do the hack charges will be $1. This is according to our last agreement with the hackmen. Everybody should come prepared to enjoy themselves. Bring your tents and covered wagons. Two dollars worth of muslin (which can be used for other purposes) will make you a nice small tent. Tent poles, wood, straw, and water furnished free upon the grounds. Good pasture for horses close at hand. Hay, feed, and provisions right at hand, and cheap as can be raised in this part of Missouri. Those wishing to board can have board and lodging at $2.50 per week.

Remember the time of the reunion is not changed as has been reported by some. It commences on Friday, September 20, and closes on Sunday, October 6, 1895.

Those who have subscribed to pay on the large tabernacle tent, please send in your remittance at once. We are a little short of the amount needed, but a few are still responding. We are hopeful that by September 10, a sufficiency will be subscribed and in hand to meet the present demands. Still hoping, I am your brother and colaborer in Christ,

I. N. WHITE.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, August 28.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Northeastern Illinois district will convene at De Kalb, Illinois, September 28, 1895, at ten a. m. Branch clerks are requested to forward their branch reports to M. Danielson, Danway, Illinois, by September 24. All reports sent after that date should be sent to De Kalb, Illinois, care of C. D. Carter. Presidents of branches will please see that their branches are represented as fully as possible, and that the delegates are furnished proper credentials, which should be forwarded to the district clerk with branch reports. Let all strive to make our conference a grand success.

NOTICES.

The Iowa State Fair to be held at Des Moines September 6-13 promises to be the most successful of any yet held. Exhibits of cattle, horses, hogs, sheep and poultry, from the present indications, both in number and quality, will excel all previous records.

Walter Lloyd was chosen chorister, and Miss Stearns and Miss Chofield organists, and W. C. Cather, Shelby Carrow, and Thomas Hamilton ushers.

At 7:45 p. m., preaching by H. Sparling; subject, What I must do to be saved. This effort was made with good liberty.

August 24.—At the 9:30 a. m. prayer and testimony meeting six prayers were offered and nine testimonies were borne. At eleven a. m., preaching by W. C. Cather; subject, Repentance. A good effort, making points clear. At three p. m., preaching by H. Sparling; subject, The law of tithing. It was shown that if we would keep the whole law of God we must obey the law of tithing also, and if we love our neighbor as ourselves we will be willing to impart of our substance that he may be enabled to hear the gospel also. I have some in my district who say that God requires of them to be honest with their fellow men and that they must pay their debts; but before they get out of debt they go and buy another mule or something else on credit, but do not pay the Lord what they even have promised him. At 7:45, preaching by I. N. White; subject, Present revelation; this was made quite interesting, the speaker proving all points in a clear way, and with demonstration of the Spirit's power, getting quite interesting. Tent full to overflowing every night.

August 25.—At the morning prayer service three prayers were offered and thirteen testimonies borne. The eleven a. m. sermon was delivered by C. J. Spurlock. Effort good, points strong, and another feast for the Saints. I. N. White delivered the afternoon sermon. Another good feast for all. F. C. Keck was the speaker in the evening. Though somewhat wearied from continued labor in the field before coming, he made a noble defense of the faith once delivered to the Saints, bringing out every point clearly.

More later.

J. P. BENSON.

BORN.

BAKER.—At Western, Nebraska, February 19, 1894, to Bro. F. M., and Sr. C. E. Baker, a daughter. Blessed at Lamoni Iowa, August 29, 1895, by Elder R. M. Elvin, and named Edna.

LEWIS.—Carrie Ellen was born to Mr. E. and Mrs. E. Lewis, January 25, 1895. Blessed at St. Joseph, Missouri, August 9, 1895, by R. A. Marchant and J. M. Terry.

FOX.—Leona May, adopted child of Mrs. Ida Fox, was born March 17, 1895. Blessed August 9, 1895, by J. M. Terry and R. A. Marchant at St. Joseph, Missouri.

SHERARD.—Louis Earl and Leona Pearl were born to Bro. and Sr. Charles P. Sherard at Maysville, Missouri, on June 11, 1895. Blessed at Zion's Hill church, three miles east of Maysville, Missouri, August 11, 1895, by J. M. Terry and J. D. Flanders.

KINDER.—Dollie Bernice was born June 8, 1895, to Bro. Hebbert and Sr. Martha A. Kinder. Blessed at the Saints' church, St. Joseph, Missouri, August 18, 1895, by J. M. Terry and Wm. Hawkins.

DIED.

VEDDER.—At Waddington, California, August 5, 1895, Bro. Charles Vedder, aged 66 years, 2 months, and 26 days. Born in St. Lawrence County, New York, he came to California in 1853, and in 1886 he went back and remained until March, 1884, when he came with his family and settled in Humboldt county. He was baptized June 27, 1886, by Elder Thomas Daly. He remained a faithful member until death. He was a faithful husband and kind father. Wife and two daughters mourn. Funeral services from the home, conducted by Elder S. B. Robinson, assisted by Elder B. Robinson, August 6.

CHISNALL.—At Kewanee, Illinois, August 17, 1895, Sr. Ellen Lois Chisnall. Little Nellie was born in Kewanee, April 9, 1885. Her mother died when she was but four years of age, since which time she has lived with her grandparents, Bro. and Sr. John Chisnall. About two years ago she was seized with pneumonia, which developed into consumption, terminating in her death. During her illness she was ever patient and cheerful. Her gentle, loving spirit was endeared to all who knew her. She was remarkably bright both in intellect and in spirituality far beyond her years. Denied the privilege of going to school on account of ill health, excepting a period of about three months, she was nevertheless well versed in the common branches far beyond the majority of children of her age. She could read and write well and took a general interest in the affairs of life as one almost matured in mind. She delighted in reading the Scriptures. The 23d Psalm was her favorite, which she read and reread over and over again. It was her custom to read a chapter every evening before retiring and join with her grandparents in family devotion by repeating her little prayer beginning with, "Now I lay me down to sleep." She was baptized a member of the church about a year ago, thus fitting herself fully for the mansions above. She fell asleep in Christ. Funeral sermon by Elder F. G. Pitt.

LEWIS.—On June 6, 1895, Tommy, infant son of Bro. Evan and Sr. Mary Lewis, aged 1 month. Funeral service by Elder Dan Davies.

We loved him, and no tongue can tell
How much we loved him, and so well,
Christ loved him, too, and thought it best
To take him home with him to rest.

FAUNCE.—At her home in Greggspport, Nebraska City, on August 20, Evalina, the beautiful and beloved daughter of Bro. and Sr. Frank Faunce. Born on December 6, 1872, she grew to womanhood, possessed alike of personal charms and which is of far greater worth, a meek, loving, and lovable spirit. A member of the church, of the choir, and of Zion's Religio-Literary Society, she will be sadly missed by a large circle of admiring friends and associates as well as at the home she so gracefully adorned with her pencils and brushes—for she was an art student—a home she made cheerful by her winsome and happy ways. On the day before her death, she constantly called for Uncle Mark. He was doing tent work at Lincoln, but responded to the telegraphic call to come and administer. Suffering greatly previously, the Lord in mercy heard his servant's cry, and her suffering ceased. About four o'clock on the morning of her death she again suffered, was administered to again by Uncle Mark and Uncle Will (Bro. Waldsmith), and again her body was relieved from pain and she fell asleep. Awakening between nine and ten, her eyes rested on him she had called for whenever he moved. Others thought her unconscious; not he. No answer was given to any question asked her; but he thought there was a gleam of satisfaction as he talked of the joys of paradise, and he said, "If you understand and cannot speak, close your eyes that I may know it." She at once closed them, and then opened them again as he talked of the blessedness of the change about to take place. In a few minutes the eyes closed, the death-sweat gathered on her brow, and each minute the pulsations were fewer until the last gentle breath left her, and a beautiful spirit was set free to join the waiting, ransomed throng. Her funeral sermon was preached in the church that held but about one third the attendants, and the cortege that followed was a close one of over half a mile in length of vehicles, who gathered with dimmed eyes around the grave to hear Uncle Mark's committal of the remains to the keeping of the Divine One and his messengers. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

VANDEVENER.—At her home in Soaperville, near Henderson Grove, Illinois, August 17, 1895, Sr. Deborah Vandevener nee Brown, aged 74 years, 6 months, and 6 days. Deceased was born in the State of New Jersey, February 11, 1821. Two sons, one daughter, and three grandchildren mourn her departure. She was not only a believer in Christ Jesus, but a true, devoted adherer to his gospel. She united with the church August 8, 1875. Her loved ones who had gathered around her before her exit desired to send for a physician, but she meekly replied, "What for? I am not sick. I am only tired, my poor old frame calling for a final rest." And with this she passed quietly away. Elder J. D. Jones, assisted by Elder J. W. Terry, preached the sermon, and with a great number of loving Saints and friends conveyed her to her resting place the 19th.

SCOTT.—At the home of his parents, near Borden, Indiana, August 3, 1895, James Ether, son of James M. and Altheda Scott, departed this life. He was born January 6, 1887; was baptized by M. T. Short October 24, 1894. He leaves father, mother, five sisters, and three brothers to mourn his departure. Funeral service at the home of his parents by Elder M. R. Scott, assisted by W. H. Kelley, from Revelation 14:13; 22:14. Bro. James E. Scott was an exemplary young man, the favorite of the family and of his grandparents, and was beloved by all who knew him. He had an abiding faith in God and his promises, and died with a bright hope of receiving an immortal life at that day when God shall wipe all tears away.

OSLER.—Gladys, daughter of Bro. C. A. and Sr. Minnie Osler, July 26, 1895, aged 1 year, 1 month, and 16 days. The death was the result of a sad accident which occurred a few miles east of Carson, Iowa, on the evening of the day of its death. The mother, with the child in her arms, accompanied by her two other children and sister-in-law, Sr. Belle Wood, and her baby, was driving a team and carriage, when the team became suddenly frightened and, starting with a quick jerk, cleared themselves from the carriage, at the same time jerking both mother and child out over the dashboard. The child struck on its head, slightly crushing the skull, from which death ensued in a few moments. Sr. Osler was badly injured by her fall, but is now recovering from her injuries. The funeral took place in the afternoon of the following day from the home of Bro. Fred Wood, conducted by Elder D. Hougas. A very large crowd of sympathizing friends gathered at the house and followed the little body to its interment at the Christian cemetery north of Wheeler's Grove. The family have the sympathy and prayers of many in this their hour of affliction.

JONES.—At his home in Hastings, Victoria, Australia, Elder Evan G. Jones, aged 63 years. He was born in the West Indies, where he has a mother still living. Part of his early life was spent at sea, but the best part of it in Australia. He came to Victoria when the Colony was young, married, was engaged in business—first at Frankston, and later, on Western Port Bay. When Elder Glaud Rodger appeared in that region he found Bro. Jones a consistent member of the Wesleyan persuasion, and a local preacher. That same consistency constrained him to take in the weary traveler and preacher, and also to give ear to his message. He could do no other than accept more light when it came and was baptized by Elder J. W. Gillen, who followed. A little later he was called and ordained an elder, and since the organization of the Hastings branch has served as its president. This branch and also the district has lost a true servant and friend which it is impossible at present to replace. That fatal weakness—heart failure, and consequent accompaniment—jaundice preyed upon him for some time and at last (in April) robbed the church of a true and tried worker. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder C. A. Butterworth, in the Hastings chapel to a large audience of non-members (mostly) showing the high esteem in which he was held by the community. He served the church as district president for several terms, and his boats were always ready to convey the traveling ministry and conference delegates to and from the Queensferry branch, a distance of twenty miles across Western Port Bay. Now another boatman has called and conveyed him to that port of rest, the paradise of God. He leaves a wife, four daughters, and four sons, with a host of friends to mourn the loss.

MERCHANT.—Bro. Lucius Merchant died August 11, 1895, after a lingering illness. The deceased was born February 26, 1817, at Montague, Massachusetts; was baptized into the church by Samuel Bent in 1841. In the spring of '42 he emigrated to Nauvoo; was married to Hortensia Patrick in April, 1844. Being a stonemason by trade he engaged in work on the temple, working for more than one year. In 1846 with the rest of the church was driven from Nauvoo, went into Winter Quarters, remaining there till spring of 1848, when he came back into Iowa and settled near Council Bluffs, came to Harrison County in 1851, united with the Reorganization, and was ordained an elder. His widow survives him, also five sons and one daughter, three children having passed on before. The brother was firm to the end. His testimony has been borne to many. His noble life was the talk of all who knew him. He bore a strong testimony of the martyred prophet's life and labor of love. A vast concourse of friends attended the funeral services at Saints' chapel, Magnolia, Iowa, August 13; sermon by A. M. Fyrando assisted by C. Derry.

MOORE.—On August 13, 1895, at Dry Creek, Montana, Celia R., daughter of Daniel and Rebecca Moore. She was just past fifteen years of age. She died in full hope of her reward and such faith in the promises of our Father is seldom seen; and the advice that she gave to her nearest relatives would do credit to one of riper years. This was one of the largest funerals ever witnessed outside of our town. Funeral sermon by J. H. Wells assisted by Gomer Reese.

RILEY.—Sister Maria, widow of James Riley, was born in the parish of Bartan, Suffolk, England, August 15, 1820, and died August 8, 1895; thus lacking but one week of being 75 years old. She had been in failing health for several years, but was only confined to her bed about three weeks. Her life was one of much sorrow and disappointment. She embraced the gospel in her native land in 1850 and with others went to Utah in 1853; but becoming disgusted with conditions there she retraced her steps and came back to St. Louis in 1857, where she remained until 1860. In 1863 she removed to Council Bluffs, where she has lived ever since. She has been a widow for twenty-eight years. She leaves two sons and a large number of relatives and friends. Her faith in God never wavered through all her suffering. The funeral was from the Council Bluffs church, August 11, T. W. Williams preaching the funeral sermon, his text being, "When I am old and grayheaded, O God, forsake me not!" The following lines were written by Sr. Eliza Caffall:—

Our sister dear has passed away,
Gone to her home above;
And now is mingling with the just,
Where all is peace and love.
Her sufferings now are at an end,
Her sighs and cares are o'er,
Her tears are now all wiped away,
She'll sorrow nevermore.
The word she gladly did receive,
The gospel she obeyed,
And strove her duty to perform,
While here on earth she staid.
And in the resurrection morn,
She will arise again,
To meet her Savior in the air,
And with him ever reign.

KNIGHT.—Amy, infant daughter of Mr. Henry and Sr. Mary Knight, at Logan, Iowa, August 17, 1895, aged 2 years, 11 months, and days. She suffered since last February. Funeral sermon was preached by J. A. Donaldson in the Saints' Chapel, from 2 Samuel 12: 23.

JOHNSON.—At Miller, Illinois, August 3, 1895, Sister Bertha E. Johnson, daughter of Bro. Henry H. and Sr. Ellen Johnson. Deceased was born in the town of Miller, La-Salle County, Illinois, May 29, 1876. Blessed by Elder Thomas Hougas July 23, 1876, and was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ October 13, 1889, by Elder Thomas Hougas, and continued a faithful member of Mission branch till the time of her death. She was a lady of refinement and education, and served at different times as organist, chorister, and one of the leading singers of the Mission choir. Her illness began last March, at which time she was taken with lagrippe, which terminated in quick consumption. The event of her death was especially sad from the fact that this summer she was to have been the fair bride of Elder J. B. Roush, one of the missionaries of Northern Illinois. And so her wedding suit became her shroud. She leaves behind a widowed mother, three sisters, one brother, one foster brother, and a host of other relatives and friends. Her funeral was very largely attended, and while the tears of sympathy could not be repressed, all were made to rejoice in the fact that a life well spent had gone out, not to die, but to live on under better and higher conditions. Having prepared herself for life, she was prepared to die. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder F. G. Pitt, assisted by Elder Thomas Hougas.

"Soon we shall hear the sound of the waters,
And the dip of the boatman's oar;
Then he will row us over the river
To our loved ones gone before."

DAVIS.—At Bevier, Missouri, of malignant diphtheria, Maggie, daughter of Mr. John and Sr. Ellen Davis. She was born June 13, 1887, died August 18, 1895. The remains were conveyed to the Saints' church where the services were conducted and the discourse delivered to a large congregation of friends by Elder J. A. Tanner, assisted by Elder J. T. Williams. She will be missed greatly by her relatives, and by her Sunday school teacher and class, where she always loved to be.

KEEP ALL FOOD COVERED.

Every article of food should be kept covered until it appears on the table. Milk and butter should be kept in air-tight covered vessels. They take up every odor flying in the air, and are positively harmful to the stomach after standing uncovered for an hour or two. Not only odors, but the animalcule that fill the air are attracted to milk and butter. Uncovered jelly is a menace to family health, yet in two thirds of the pantries in the city will be found half-used dishes of jelly standing uncovered.

CHARACTERISTICS OF GREAT MEN.

Alfred the Great said: "A king can afford to be polite."

Count de Lesseps was the type of the French gentleman.

Justinian inculcated politeness on every official of the empire.

Goldsmith was ill-bred and too much inclined to talk about himself.

Monroe was, even in his own time, called "a gentleman of the old school."

Calhoun was so absent-minded that he often forgot he was in company.

Bancroft was rather reserved than otherwise with most persons whom he met.

Garrick was generally so quiet that he often created the impression of diffidence.

Henry Clay was said to make the most engaging bow of any gentleman of his time.

Milton was quiet and reserved in his conversation, but thoroughly refined and well bred.

Dante was solitary in his habits, and by his austerity chilled most of those whom he met.

Mohammed inculcated politeness in the Koran. He himself was one of the most courteous of men.

Pius IX., both before and after his elevation to the pontifical chair, was a model of studied politeness.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An aided supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.
This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

A book of 200 pages, cloth bound, exhaustively indexed; price 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

THE FOUNDER OF CHRISTIANITY.

(Concluded.)

WHO would not shrink from the attempt to describe the moral character of Jesus, or, having attempted it, be not dissatisfied with the result? Who can empty the ocean into a bucket? Who (we may ask with Lavater) "can paint the glory of the rising sun with a charcoal?" No artist's ideal comes up to the reality in this case, though his ideals may surpass every other reality. The better and holier a man is, the more he feels his need of pardon, and how far he falls short of his own imperfect standard of excellence. But Jesus, with the same nature as ours and tempted as we are, never yielded to temptation; never had cause for regretting any thought, word, or action; he never needed pardon, or conversion, or reform; he never fell out of harmony with his heavenly Father. His whole life was one unbroken act of self-consecration to the glory of God and the eternal welfare of his fellow-men. A catalogue of virtues and graces, however complete, would give us but a mechanical view. It is the spotless purity and sinlessness of Jesus as acknowledged by friend and foe; it is the even harmony and symmetry of all graces, of love to God and love to man, of dignity and humility, of strength and tenderness, of greatness and simplicity, of self-control and submission, of active and passive virtue; it is, in one word, the absolute perfection which raises his character high above the reach of all other men and makes it an exception to a universal rule, a moral miracle in history. It is idle to institute comparisons with saints and sages, ancient or modern. Even the infidel Rousseau was forced to exclaim: "If Socrates lived and died like a sage, Jesus lived and died like a God." Here is more than the starry heaven above us, and the moral law within us, which filled the soul of Kant with ever-growing reverence and awe. Here is the holy of holies of humanity, here is the very gate of heaven.

Going so far in admitting the human perfection of Christ—and how can the historian do otherwise?—we are driven a step farther, to the acknowledgement of his amazing claims, which must either be true, or else destroy all foundation for admiration and reverence in which he is universally held. It is impossible to construct a life of Christ without admitting its supernatural and miraculous character.

The divinity of Christ, and his whole mission as Redeemer, is an article of faith, and, as such, above logical or mathematical demonstration. The incarnation or the union of the infinite divinity and finite humanity in one person is indeed the mystery of mysteries. "What can be more glorious than God? What more vile than flesh? What more wonderful than God in the flesh?"* Yet aside from all dogmatizing which lies outside of the province of the historian, the divinity of Christ has a self-evidencing power which forces itself irresistibly upon the reflecting mind and historical inquirer; while the denial of it makes his person an inexplicable enigma.

It is inseparable from his own express testimony respecting himself, as it appears in every Gospel, with but a slight difference of degree between the Synoptists and St. John. Only ponder over it! He claims to be the long-promised Messiah who fulfilled the law and the prophets, the founder and law-giver of a new and universal kingdom, the light of the world, the teacher of all nations and ages, from whose authority there is no appeal. He claims to have come into this world for the purpose to save the world from sin—which no merely human being can possibly do. He claims the power to forgive sins on earth; he frequently exercised that power, and it was for the sins of mankind, as he foretold, that he shed his own blood. He invites all men to follow him, and promises peace and life eternal to every one that believes in him. He claims pre-existence before Abraham and the world, divine names, attributes, and worship. He disposes from the cross of places in Paradise. In directing his disciples to baptize all nations, he coordinates himself with the eternal Father and the Divine Spirit, and promises to be with them to the consummation of the world and to come again in glory as the Judge of all men. He, the humblest and meekest of men, makes these astounding pretensions in the most easy and natural way; he never falters, never apologizes, never explains; he proclaims them as self-evident truths. We read them again and again, and never feel any incongruity nor think of arrogance and presumption.

And yet this testimony, if not true, must be downright blasphemy or madness. The former hypothesis cannot stand a moment before the moral purity and dignity of Jesus, revealed in his every word and work, and acknowledged by universal consent. Self-deception in a matter so momentous, and with an intellect in all respects so clear and so sound, is equally out of the question. How could He be an enthusiast or a madman who never lost the even balance of his mind, who sailed serenely over all the troubles and persecutions, as the sun above the clouds, who always returned the wisest answer to tempting questions, who calmly and deliberately predicted his death on the cross, his resurrection on the third day, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the founding of his Church, the destruction of Jerusalem—predictions which have been literally fulfilled? A character so original, so complete, so uniformly consistent, so perfect, so human and yet so high above all human greatness, can be neither a fraud nor a fiction. The poet, as has been well said, would in this case be greater than the hero. It would take more than a Jesus to invent a Jesus.

We are shut up then to recognition of the divinity of Christ; and reason itself must bow in silent awe before the tremendous word: "I and the Father are one!" and respond with skeptical Thomas: "My Lord and my God!"

This conclusion is confirmed by the effects of the manifestation of Jesus, which far transcend all merely human capacity and power. The history of Christianity, with its countless fruits of a higher and purer life of truth and love than was ever known before or is now known outside of its influence, is a continuous commentary on the life of Christ, and testifies on every page to the inspiration of his holy example. His power is felt on every Lord's Day from ten thousand pulpits, in the palaces of kings and the huts of beggars, in universities and colleges, in every school where the sermon on the Mount is read, in prisons, in almshouses, in orphan asylums, as well as in happy homes, in learned works and simple tracts in endless succession. If this history of ours has any value at all, it is a new evidence that Christ is the light and life of a fallen world.

And there is no sign that his power is waning. His kingdom is more widely spread than ever before, and has the fairest prospect of final triumph in all the earth. Napoleon at St. Helena is reported to have been struck with the reflection that millions are now ready to die for the crucified Nazarene who founded a spiritual empire by love, while no one would die for Alexander, or Cæsar, or himself, who founded temporal empires by force. He saw in this contrast a convincing argument for the divinity of Christ, saying: "I know men, and I tell you, Christ was not a man. Everything about Christ astonishes me. His spirit overwhelms and confounds me. There is no comparison between him and any other being. He stands single and alone."* And Göthe, another commanding genius, of very different character, but equally above suspicion of partiality for religion, looking in the last years of his life over the vast field of history, was constrained to confess that "if ever the Divine appeared on earth, it was in the Person of Christ," and that "the human mind, no matter how far it may advance in every other department, will never transcend the height and moral culture of Christianity as it shines and glows in the Gospels."

The rationalistic, mythical, and legendary attempts to explain the life of Christ on purely human and natural grounds, and to resolve the miraculous elements either into common events, or into innocent fictions, split on the rock of Christ's character and testimony. The ablest of the infidel biographers of Jesus now profess the profoundest regard for his character, and laud him as the greatest sage and saint that ever appeared on earth. But, by rejecting his testimony concerning his divine origin and mission they turn him into a liar; and, by rejecting the miracle of the resurrection, they make the great fact of Christianity a stream without a source, a house without a foundation, an effort without a cause. Denying the physical miracles, they expect us to believe even greater psychological miracles; yea, they substitute for the supernatural miracle of history an unnatural prodigy and incredible absurdity of their imagination. They moreover refute and supersede each other. The history of error in the nineteenth century is a history of self-destruction. A hypothesis was scarcely matured before another was invented and substituted, to meet the same fate in its turn; while the old truth and faith of Christendom remains unshaken, and marches on in its peaceful conquest against sin and error.

Truly, Jesus Christ, the Christ of

* On the testimony of Napoleon to the divinity of Christ see the letters of Bersier and Lutteroth appended to the London ed. of my book on the Person of Christ (1880), p. 284, and pp. 219 sqq. Napoleon is reported to have asked the poet Wieland at a court-ball in Weimar, during the Congress of Erfurt, whether he doubted that Jesus ever lived; to which Wieland promptly and emphatically replied in the negative, adding that with equal right a thousand years hence men might deny the existence of Napoleon or the battle of Jena. The emperor smiled and said, tres-bien! The question was designed not to express doubt, but to test the poet's faith. So Dr. Hase reports from the mouth of Chancellor Muller, who heard the conversation. Geschichte Jesu, p. 9.

the Gospels, the Christ of history, the crucified and risen Christ, the divine-human Christ, is the most real, the most certain, the most blessed of all facts. And this fact is an ever-present and growing power which pervades the Church and conquers the world, and is its own best evidence, as the sun shining in the heavens. This fact is the only solution of the terrible mystery of sin and death, the only inspiration to a holy life of love to God and man, the only guide to happiness and peace. Systems of human wisdom will come and go, kingdoms and empires will rise and fall, but for all time to come Christ will remain "the Way, the Truth, and the Life."—Schaff's History Christian Church.

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 11, 1895.

WORK OF LOCAL OFFICERS.

THE following preambles and resolutions were adopted by the late conference of the Pottawattamie, Iowa, district, and are taken from its minutes:—

Inasmuch as the various branches of the district have members scattered in different parts of the country, and as the law provides that members unite with the nearest branch where they live, therefore be it

Resolved, that we request the various branch presidents and secretaries to seek to locate the absent members and correspond with them and as far as possible have them take letters of removal and join the branch nearest where they live, and that a copy of this resolution be submitted in writing to the officers of each branch.

Also, Whereas the Lord has specifically stated to the elders, "Ye shall see that my law is kept,"

And, Whereas the law provides that members in transgression shall be dealt with as the law provides; therefore be it resolved, that if there members in the branches of the district who are not living up to their privileges and others living in open transgression; we request the presidents of the various branches to see that the officers under them do their duty; that the Saints be officially visited at stated intervals, and that they seek to enforce the letter and spirit of the law.

This action has evidently been taken with a view to stir up local workers in charge of branches, that the work of laboring among the Saints be not neglected; that scattered Saints be instructed to join branches to which they are nearest that they be in the way to receive spiritual care; that Saints not living up to their privileges be labored with; that such as may be in transgression also be looked after and induced to do better, or if necessary, be dealt with as the law of God directs.

This is as it should be. Men who accept the supervision of branches thereby assume responsibilities of no ordinary character. As shepherds of the sheep they are responsible to God, to the church in general, and to the Saints over whom they preside. Very much depends upon their administrations; for having charge of the local interests of the church, its success not only in their specific localities, but also its influence for good abroad depends largely upon their labors. Men ought not to assume such responsibilities from any other motives than the good of the cause and a consciousness of duty requiring it; but conscious of the duty, should seek prayerfully and carefully to do all in their power that the trust reposed in them be faithfully honored by an intelligent study of the situation and condition of the Saints and the work under their care, and the people be kept alive by such ministrations at their homes and in the public services as the letter and spirit of the law directs and provides for.

If visiting officers are negligent or inexperienced the presiding elder is certainly expected to see that incumbents in office honor the trusts reposed in them by their branches and discharge the duties imposed upon them by ordination.

It is a well-known truth or principle in the latter-day work that the body is edified and built up "according to the effectual working in the measure of every part." Inasmuch as certain functions are to be performed by officers in the body appointed to do specific work, if that work be neglected the whole body suffers and is damaged because a necessary portion of it is impaired, hindered, vitiated; the whole suffers a decided loss. For the Church of Christ while strong and strongly organized for the work before it, is also delicate or sensitive to any degree of impairment, as it should be, and promptly shows the results of damage from neglect, transgression, or any impairment of its functions.

Prominent in the local work of the church, and under the supervision of presiding elders, we find priests and teachers appointed. The duties of the priest, teacher, etc., in the branch are enumerated, as follows:—

The priest's duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties . . . ; and he is to take the lead of all meetings when there is no elder present . . . to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties. In all these duties the priest is to assist the elder if occasion requires.

The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty, and he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest, and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the deacons, if occasion requires; but neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands; they are, however, to warn, expound, exhort and teach, and invite all to come unto Christ.

Every elder, priest, teacher or deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him.—D. C. 17: 11, 12.

It is apparent that the duties enumerated and binding upon the officers named are very important and require active, spiritual men to perform them. In the first place men of very decided faithfulness are essential in these offices, for the positions require the true spirit of fatherly interest in the people and watchcare over them. We understand the work of the priest and teacher to require men of talent, that they do the pastoral work of feeding the flock and keeping them in that condition of spiritual activity that all may become and continue active partakers of spiritual light to that degree that they shall themselves be growing while assisting to forward the interests of the church abroad.

It is almost useless for the general missionaries to bring converts into the fold unless the church through its local ministry and membership is prepared to take charge of and nourish and assimilate the new material and carry it upward and forward in the divine life. The appointment of local organizations, local meetings where coassociation and coassimilation in spirit are provided for, and largely under the ministrations and care of local ministers, shows clearly that the Head of the church provided these features necessary to the perfecting of the Saints. It is therefore apparent, plain, that the same prayerful devotion and energy required of the traveling ministry is also necessary in and required of the local officials; that the design of the Lord in calling all his servants and his people was evidently that every part of the body should do its work faithfully, fully, continuously; that there be no inharmony, no clogging of the wheels, no hindrances, no interruptions in the nicety of arrangement and perfection in service provided by the perfect Designer.

The man who permits his work to drag along half done or not done at all is a failure in the eyes of God and men; because indifference upon his part retards others and prevents the smoothness of operation essential in and peculiar to the workings of a perfect contrivance. Workers at other parts of the machinery realize that something is wrong and are obliged to devote a portion—and sometimes a great portion—of their time to seeing where the trouble is and in correcting it; and at times it is simply incorrigible. In the church it means just this; that local organizations are thrown into disorder, and loss ensues not only to themselves, but the indifference of the people affects their contributions and the ministry are not kept in the field as they should be.

We expect to see the time when, in the greater growth of the people, men who accept ordination will be held to a stricter account of their stewardships. It will contribute to this, hence to the doing of better and effective work, if the Saints more closely study the books and learn more fully the duties of officers.

Teachers and priests have been regarded by some as comparatively unimportant because not constantly out in the field. This is a mistake, for the duties devolving upon them are certainly of such importance as to require very conscientious and capable men. The priest and teacher who visit the homes of the people occupy a field requiring the exercise of much genuine heart-interest in them. Prudence, considerateness, foresight, brotherly kindness, and many similar qualities are essential to the work of seeing that the members attended to "all family duties," and to "watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them," and "see that the church meet together often, and also see that the members do their duty," etc. It is evidently necessary that men engaged in such service be abundant partakers of the love and grace of God. Men who render to God and to his people service of such high character have the promise of rich blessings. As every individual grows, develops, in doing the duties to which he is called, so men who labor in the local offices willingly and constantly become men of power for good among and beloved and esteemed by the people of God for the labors performed in behalf of the work.

As men are called and to be ordained according to the gifts—talents—and callings of God unto them and by the power of the Holy Spirit, so will they be held accountable for the improvement of their talents.

It is the men who can be depended upon to work now, right in the present when work is needed, that are to be of use to God and to his work. Men and women who procrastinate the time of doing, the paying of tithing, and other duties to a future day are not the ones who push the work and gain the crown.

"Moreover it is required of stewards that a man be found faithful," is the word of the Lord to us. "Let no man take thy crown," and the utterance of the Lord of his abhorrence of lukewarmness, are significant admonitions to us "upon whom the ends of the world are come."

We have tried to say a few words in passing concerning the work of local officers. The importance of the subject is sufficient to justify a more carefully prepared statement of it. We have written very hastily. However, it is not eloquently worded statements that are wanted, but the plain facts that point the way and suggest a solution of our difficulties.

Fashionable church people have laughed in derision at some of the plain statements of law which we have quoted from the enumerated list of duties of local officers; but it is the prevention of just such evils as these named that is necessary to correct the evils of the times. The Lord has, therefore, in the fitness of things called servants to supervise the corrective work, to take the lead in the moral and spiritual education of the people he calls into his kingdom.

We are of the opinion that a proper conception of the future demands the correction of the present, if persons are to be prepared to enter upon life in its higher phases in the world to come.

To ignore or neglect any provision God has revealed is to turn our faces from the means and the only means by which he can redeem and exalt the human family. Let us therefore labor together with God in unison, in unity, in local, general, and in family duties that the preaching of the word abroad may be sustained and made effective by compact, perfect working branches in which the world shall see "the righteousness of Saints" manifest in the harmonious progress and and faithful performance of duty of every member of the body. The demands of the work require that each member both learns and does his duty. The law of God contemplates perfectness in obedience to law and salvation by law, as it provides a perfect system of law.

TRIAL.

FOR some wise purpose which we may not fully understand the great Creator has provided that all things must be tried. We see this illustrated in the storm that shakes the towering oak, in the earthquake that rives the granite pile. Indeed this principle is so apparent—so plainly written on the face of nature—that all the elements seem at war with each other. The unlucky creature not sufficiently strong to stand the inexorable test of trial must fall in the great conflict for supremacy.

What is true in regard to visible nature is true in regard to principles. They, too, must be tried. That which is not found to be sound—to be a component part of the great unit of truth—must in the final conflict fall to rise no more.

He who labors to perpetuate such principles labors in vain; he may appear for a time, to succeed, but in the end his work will be lost; while he who labors for the establishment of correct principles must succeed. He may for a time seem borne down by the weight of opposition which comes in upon him like a flood, he may have a very limited conception of the truth,—the vision of all is limited, and necessarily must be, for the finite can never comprehend the infinitude of truth—but if he has discovered one sparkling gem from that boundless unit, and by it he stands with unfaltering rectitude and honor undimmed, the palm of victory will yet rest upon his brow, when he, like his principles, shall have been tried “as by fire,” and it will yet be said of him, “Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.”

Success in wrong, where action is based upon incorrect principles, is merely apparent or temporary, but final failure is certain. Failure in right where action is based upon correct principles, is merely apparent or temporary only, but final success is sure. There is not, cannot be an exception to this rule. To be sure the problem may not be fully solved in this life. (This fact constitutes one of the best evidences of another life. This life is too short and its opportunities too few to continue this fight to a finish.) But the rule itself is an axiom, and its application general. How careful then ought we to be that our successes are the result of honest work and honest thought, based on correct principles. To meet one false position by assuming another may bring temporary success and fleeting honor, we may by so doing demolish the citadel of our enemy, and may stand momentarily triumphant over a fallen foe; but our defense is composed of perishable material, and in the crucible of trial will manifest its imperfection and bring to us an inheritance of shame and confusion.

No one, then, should fear to have his principles made the subject of the most searching criticism, for all the combined evil powers of earth and hell cannot shake one particle of light from its orbit. But if we hold incorrect principles though they may be very dear to us, it should be our desire to have them exposed, and exposed now.

Man is what his principles make him and in the final triumph of truth he who has been faithful to her mandates will rise with her when her banner shall wave triumphantly without a spot upon its folds. Then he who has harbored incorrect principles, and been moved by dishonest and selfish motives will fall into ignominy, shame, and disgrace.

Organizations composed of men must partake largely of the nature of men, and their final success or failure must be governed by the same rules. Hence an organization founded upon false principles, though enjoying temporary prosperity, honored and applauded, is doomed to sink, nor can ignorant sincerity save it; while that organization possessing the real element of strength—truth—though apparently weak and despised, must rise triumphant over all.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again,—
The eternal years of God are hers,
But error wounded writhes in pain,
And dies amid her worshippers.

LAMONI PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

We have received a copy of “Regulations for the government of the Lamoni Public Schools with course of Study,” a pamphlet of forty-four pages, published by order of the Board of Education.

The rules adopted to govern the schools are excellent and arranged by those of wide experience in educational work. The arrangements for the conduct of Primary, Intermediate, Grammar, and High School departments are based upon the latest modern methods of progressive educators, the aim of the management and superintendent being to advance the school work by the employment of competent instructors and well-tested methods essential to the educational spirit of the times.

The High School department course of study is as follows:—

First year, Reading, arithmetic, grammar, United States history, physiology.

Second year, Literature, arithmetic, rhetoric, physiology, algebra, civil government.

Third year, Orthography, zoölogy,

Latin grammar, State government, algebra, physical geography, book-keeping, political geography, English grammar.

Fourth year, Higher arithmetic, physics, Cesar, general history, plane geometry, astronomy, botany, Virgil.

The course of study is superior to any in use in other schools of the County, and parents have reason to be satisfied with the facilities afforded their children at Lamoni.

Students graduating from our High School are prepared to enter Graceland College, in which institution the higher and greater educational course is supplied.

We hope to see Lamoni make constant and decided progress in educational work until its advantages in that high plane line of life are decidedly up to the truest standards in facilities and in execution.

GRACELAND College students, distant and local, will be interested in the following:—

NOTICE TO COLLEGE STUDENTS.

Students of Graceland College will assemble in the upper rooms of the France block, September 17, at nine o'clock a. m., for organization of the school and classification of pupils.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. M. L. WHITMAN, Valley Branch, Nebraska, the 2d inst. :—

I came here August 31 and found Bro. M. Daugherty of the Bluffs doing a fine work. He had baptized six. The people here seem well pleased with his manner of presenting the word. On Sunday the 1st one more was led into the water, and yesterday being sacrament day with us the seven were confirmed before partaking of the emblems. During confirmation and throughout the entire prayer service the influence of the good Spirit prevailed to a marked degree. At last night's meeting the attendance and attention were good. Expect to continue here through the week, all being well.

Bro. J. S. McDonald, writing recently from Missouri Valley, Iowa, says:—

The work is moving on in this district splendidly. Fourteen have been baptized recently. Brn. Chambers and Crabb are pushing the tent work right along.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, Milton, Florida, September 3d:—

Have preached eleven times in four different places since coming to this mission. Six have been baptized, and more believing. I go to Bay Minette, Alabama, to district conference next Saturday. House to be dedicated there next Sunday. Work here in rather poor condition. It needs a good man here a long time to put the work in good shape. Have only seen a little of the work here yet. Hopefully at work.

Bro. Henry Sparling, Mountain Grove, Missouri, September 2:—

South Missouri district reunion closed Sunday night. It was a grand success; all those present enjoyed themselves. The tent was much too small for the large crowd. We shall need the large tabernacle tent next year, so I hope those who can will please help in the purchase of it. Let the Southern Missouri district have some interest in it. Brn. White, Keck, and Henry Smith gave us some good sermons. Much interest manifest; baptized two; others are very near the kingdom. Bro. Keck and I will continue the meetings. The town is stirred up very much.

Bro. W. A. McDowell, Newville, Wisconsin, September 4:—

Bro. Burr and the writer are still here with the tent. Some are interested, but our crowds are not large. However, the work is onward; we are sowing gospel seed in new places.

Bro. H. L. Holt, San Bernardino, California, August 29:—

All goes fairly well. I am holding meetings in a tent at Los Angeles. Have been called home by the death of our babe. Return again to-morrow.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser, Limerick, Ohio, the 2d inst.:—

Our reunion is booming. We may truly say,

Rich dews of grace come o'er us
In many a gentle shower;
And brighter scenes before us
Are opening ev'ry hour.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ALL presidents of branches are requested to send their addresses by postal card, to Bro. Frank Criley, Business Manager of the Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa. Early responses are desired.

Bro. and Sr. W. W. Blair were at Garden Grove, California, August 13, going thence to Los Angeles and remaining over the 25th. From there they would go to Santa Cruz, attending the reunion which closes on the 8th inst.

By letter from Bro. Jacob Kaplinger, Ludington, Michigan, we learn that Bro. George Washburn, of Center Lake, that State, had opened the work in Amber Township, near the Freesoil Saints, and baptized thirteen, also four at Freesoil—seventeen in all. Brn. Kaplinger and Washburn then proceeded to Ludington where they were holding services in a public hall to large congregations. One, an old-time Saint, had asked for baptism.

Bro. John Smith writes us from some point in England that he is holding open air meetings to large gatherings and is blessed and encouraged in his efforts. Opponents threatened, but the people rallied to his support and continue to sustain his efforts. He mails English publications containing items that support the Word of Wisdom.

Sr. M. Lawrence, Lockhartville, Nova Scotia, sends a clipping giving account of a destructive cyclone in that region. She reports but four Saints in that section, but as one of the isolated, feels to do what she can for the cause, in which she realizes a growing interest.

We thank brethren for various newspapers sent us. We have used what we could that seemed worthy of note to the HERALD readers. Among the list we find local Kansas City and Independence papers marked with references to the work of the A. P. A. As the spirit of this movement is, to our minds, harsh and extreme, we make no further mention of it.

Sr. Emma L. Little, of Benton, Scott County, Missouri, formerly of Braidwood, Illinois, requests prayer in behalf of herself and husband and children, who are in sickness and distress. Elders living near are requested to call and administer, and Saints to visit them.

The address of Bro. G. M. L. Whitman, Bishop's Agent Northern Nebraska district, is No. 227 Spruce Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

The present address of Bro. H. R. Harder is Lamoni, Iowa.

Bro. J. M. Brown, of Leon, Iowa, has been doing good work at Knoxville, Hiteman, Flagler, and Leon, Iowa. At Knoxville two were baptized as indicated beforehand in vision to the brother. Saints at the other points named were also alive and actively at work in the cause. Another at Leon, had applied for baptism. Bro. Brown was to start soon for Kansas. Performing the marriage service for two sisters in the church, he expresses the hope that the unbelieving husbands will be sanctified to obedience of the gospel by the believing wives.

Brn. A. H. Smith and A. S. Cochran left Lamoni for the Clarksdale reunion; the former on the 31st ult., the latter on the 4th inst. Bro. J. W. Wight left for his field in Western Iowa on the 3d.

Bro. C. A. Parkin reports continued progress and many spiritual blessings in healings and in other respects in the San Francisco branch. He is greatly encouraged. This is the common report of every faithful man. It is in the doing of the work that blessings are received, as the faithful know.

Bro. Samuel Tomlinson, writing from Walsingham Center, Ontario, August 27, reports the blessings of the Lord upon his labors in that region. He has held twenty-one meetings and baptized seven, all heads of families but one, and others are near. At confirmation outsiders wept under the influence of the Holy Spirit which was present in great power. Though wearied by foot travel, he is laboring right along to meet the many demands for preaching.

Sr. Emily Keeton, Buchtel, Athens County, Ohio, would like some of the traveling ministry to labor there. She will aid in every way she can. Who can go?

Bro. T. R. Allen, of Lucas, Iowa, reports the branch at that place as working together in harmony. They had recently elected officers and all were moving together in unity. This we like to hear, for the church succeeds very largely or fails considerably in its work according as the branches succeed and prosper.

Elsewhere in this issue appears an advertisement of Highland Park Normal College, an institution that has been patronized by quite a number of our people. The management announces that it is now on a solid financial basis and in better condition than ever before for educational work. Seven hundred students were in attendance last year, over fifteen hundred two years ago. For pamphlets, further particulars, etc., address the principal, Prof. O. H. Longwell, Des Moines, Iowa.

Bro. I. L. Rogers and wife, of Sandwich, Illinois, are visiting at Lamoni and friends old and new. They are enroute to the Logan reunion.

Letters from Brn. A. H. Parsons, J. S. Roth, H. P. Curtis, John Kaler, Bro. and Sr. Hubert Case, M. R.

Scott, Jr., and others—in the field—will appear next week as space permits.

The operation of the new liquor law in the State of Indiana is said to be causing refusal of licenses to three out of every four saloons in the small cities and towns. Liquor dealers are preparing to contest the law. It is to be hoped that they will be unsuccessful in evading or violating it. The saloon keeper being wrong and deeply steeped in it, ought to be suppressed as such. There is certainly a way to suppress him could the people be sufficiently aroused to do it.

The Norwalk, Connecticut, Evening Hour of August 26 has an article over a column in length descriptive of the labors of Brn. A. H. Parsons and A. W. Watzel, who have been at work for some time in that region of country. The article is respectful, truthful, and friendly in tone. The brethren named are reaching a good class of people.

Bro. W. W. Blair reports the meetings up to September 3, as number one, and attendance increasing. He wrote from Santa Cruz. Sr. Blair has also done good work among the sisters, and for the Sunday schools. Her influence has been for good.

Bro. J. C. Clapp reports (September 2) work prospering in Oregon as well as could be expected.

Bro. F. G. Pitt (the 4th inst.) was preaching every night at Dahinda, Illinois. Excellent interest and good liberty.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins went to Burlington, Iowa, for Sunday the 8th inst. He goes thence to Kewanee, Mission, Sandwich, Illinois; Janesville, Wisconsin, and other points, remaining about one month.

Six were baptized at Fanning, Kansas, at a recent two days' meeting, by Brn. J. Arthur Davis and H. A. Stebbins.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given to patrons of the Herald Office that on and after October 1, 1895,—thirty days from date,—all orders for supplies amounting to less than fifty cents must be accompanied by cash. This applies to all except agents of the Herald Office who have open accounts.

The Herald Office management has found it necessary to begin this cash system for small orders for the reason that such a large number of small accounts has been charged upon the Herald Office books in years past that the Office is now burdened and hindered by an outstanding indebtedness of several thousand dollars from these small amounts alone—ranging from three cents, ten cents, fifteen cents, etc., up to fifty cents. This aggregate amount stands on the books, much of it from year to year, simply because many sending such orders fail to square the accounts, leaving them to accumulate into large sums.

It will be seen at once that the practice of sending in small orders to be filled on the credit system has entailed a heavy burden on the publishing department. It has also encouraged a careless, unbusinesslike method of doing business among the Saints that ought not to have been. Thousands of dollars are on the Herald Office books due from long standing accounts which ought to have been in circulation for the benefit of the church. No business can long succeed if run in such a manner. No business man wants a large number of small amounts carried on his ledger from month to month and from year to year. Every good business man avoids such a method with his customers. The work of the Lord cannot succeed unless it also conforms to business principles. It will not do to longer run our accounts with the Saints at such loose ends. It will prove disastrous to the entire body as long as continued. The time has come to stop it if we want to avoid entire bankruptcy and failure.

We shall seek to hereafter look after the financial interests of the Herald Office by this method of doing business, because it is a proper method and the only right one.

The Saints themselves are damaged by the old credit system. It is their interests we are looking after in establishing the rule requiring cash payments for orders in the amounts named. The Herald Office plant belongs to the Saints—to the church. If it succeeds, the work is benefited; if it suffers loss, the church at large suffers. If anything ought to succeed God's work should; if anything requires system and order, the work of God does. It must have that system in all its financial departments in order to succeed—to have the blessing of the Lord.

When accounts are carried on the books the extra work of booking, sending out bills, debiting, crediting, etc., are all added—a considerable item in extra work, extra expense in bookkeeping, postage, correspondence, etc. And, by the time the small amount has been collected the office and the customer have often expended from ten to fifteen cents to get it in, and such amounts soon add up to a large sum in the aggregate. The office and the customer are both losers by it, and the profit if not the main portion of the indebtedness goes to the Government for postage, stationery, etc. Besides this, no businesslike person wants outstanding debts unpaid when such can be avoided.

Hence notice is given that after October 1, 1895, all orders under fifty cents in amount must be accompanied by the money or a remittance for it. Postage stamps, money or express orders, or drafts will be accepted. Registered letters are at the risk of the sender.

The Saints are asked to sustain the management in its efforts to promote the interests of the literary and publishing department. Our success is your success—the success of the cause we love and to which we have pledged our support.

WE RECOMMEND THAT EACH BRANCH APPOINT A BOOK AGENT through whom all orders for church publications can be made, and who can look after the Herald Office interests and the literary wants of Saints. Appoint reliable parties and we will ratify such appointments, allowing such agents a discount of ten per cent on book orders to cover their expenses. Will branch presidents please see that appointments of book agents are made at once. PLEASE AID US. In bonds, Yours for right,

FRANK CRILEY,

Business Manager.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

THE committee appointed by the General Conference of 1895 to compile a smaller hymn and tune book—with words and music combined—have now completed their work and placed their manuscripts of words and music in the hands of the Board of Publication.

The members of the committee have spent months of hard work in performing the task assigned them and have also consulted others of acknowledged musical talent and scholarship, that the book when completed should be a credit to the church and a decided factor for good in its song service. The committee deserves credit for the good work done and we trust their efforts will receive prompt and manifest appreciation.

The General Conference in providing for the publication of the "Saints' Hymnal" stipulated that it be published when the Board of Publication had orders for one thousand copies, and owing to the low price of the book the Herald Office has found it necessary to require all orders to be accompanied by the money, otherwise the sale of the book on long time credits would be unprofitable and entail financial loss to the office.

We were promised large orders, but so far have received only about five hundred, and of these but half have been accompanied by the money.

In other words, we have received half enough orders and one fourth enough money to go ahead with the book.

The Saints through their representatives in General Conference ordered the publication of the Hymnal. They pledged it their support as they urged their need of the new book. We ask now that they send in their orders and money that the work be completed and put in their hands at once.

The price of the book is very moderate. It will be a credit to the church and a source of satisfaction to all lovers of sacred song, therefore a decided help.

The Saints' Hymnal, 50 cents per copy, cash in advance; bound in cloth, leather backs and corners; all substantial and neat work throughout.

Special styles of higher priced binding furnished as ordered. Address orders to the undersigned,

FRANK CRILEY,

Business Manager,

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

MANY mean things are done in the family for which moods are put forward as the excuse, when the moods themselves are the most inexcusable things of all. A man or woman in tolerable health has no moral right to indulge in an unpleasant mood.—Holland.

"LET NOT YOUR HEART BE TROUBLED."

"Let not your heart be troubled!"

No sweeter words of cheer
The Master spake for their dear sake,
Whose love was full of fear.

"Lo, I am with you always!"
Glad thought of lonely ones;
Through dreary way, by night and day,
The silvery sentence runs!

"Let not your heart be troubled!"

What troubleth thine, my friend?
Do you not know that Christ can go
No more to painful end?
Do you not feel his Comforter
Amid your trials all?
No bitter loss by cruel cross
Can on your loving fall.

"Let not your heart be troubled!"

The springs of life are sweet,
If you but drink at the fountain's brink
That flows at Jesus' feet.
In him the doubt of being
Its full assurance knows;
In him all fret and fear are met
By full and sweet repose.—Sel.

INFLUENCE AND DUTY.

MANY people excuse themselves from coming out boldly on the side of right by saying, "My vote does not count for much, or my influence will never make much difference one way or another." This is a mistake, for we have no knowledge of how great and far-reaching our influence may be, either for good or evil.

"The smallest bark on life's tumultuous ocean
Will leave a track behind for evermore;
The slightest wave of influence set in motion Extends and widens to the eternal shore."

The sacred writer says, "Blessed are ye that sow beside all waters," and exhorts us thus: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether both shall be alike good." We cannot all have large fields of labor; the lives of some are narrow and restricted to a certain extent, but no man liveth unto himself, and if our power for good is seemingly small, our field of usefulness and range of influence obscure and limited, if we have but one talent, let us be the more zealous to put it to good account, do our humble portion of labor faithfully, and make the tiny wave of our personal influence on the lives of others ever true, pure, and ennobling; make the most of every opportunity to do good to those about us, and to throw the entire weight of our influence on the side of right. Remember that it pays to help a worthy cause by making it our own. The poet Coleridge says:—

"Far is the time remote from human sight,
When war and discord on the earth shall cease;
Yet every prayer for universal peace
Awaits the blessed time to expedite."

Therefore small duties should not be despised, for the patient and conscientious performance of them not only serves as training schools for the heart, mind, and hands, but also opens up ways for the doing of higher, nobler duties. And let us not wait for duties to be thrust upon us, or even pointed out to us, but let us look for them instead. "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver;" yea, he loveth not only the cheerful giver of gold and silver, but also the cheerful giver of a consecrated life, with all its God-given gifts and powers. AGNES MOORE.

JERSEY CITY HEIGHTS.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:—Did you ever think what a great privilege it is to know by the Spirit of God that we are brothers and sisters, heirs with Christ, and that the one God is our Father? I have often heard it remarked that the Saints are the most sensitive people there is. Is it anything strange? We have that feeling for one another that the world has not, therefore when we think one acts coldly we feel hurt, and there seems to be a failing with the human family when this is the case, for it is so much easier for us to go to some one else than to the one who has hurt our feelings. Sometimes we will go to God and ask him to help us to overcome the feeling, and while his Spirit is with us we will feel all right, but the feeling soon returns. You may try again, and it is the same thing over. Now instead of asking God to do that work for you, why not, according to the law, go to that one in the spirit of meekness and talk the matter over with him?

I well remember a conversation a brother and I had. I do not know as I had anything against him or that he had anything against me, but there was a feeling between us that ought not to have existed. He came to my place and said to me, "Sister Phelps, do you think we think as much of one another as a brother and sister ought to?"

I said, "No." We had a long talk. He told his views and I mine. I do not know that I ever had a talk with anyone do me as much good, and when he left he said:—

"I know this talk has done me a great deal of good."

We may think sometimes it would be hard to go to certain ones, but it is generally not the going that is hard, but the thoughts of it. It reminds one of children when a task is given them to do. They often think it over and think it a hard task, and often will make it hard by going about it unwillingly and taking twice the time needed to do it, where if they had gone willingly to work it would have been an easy task. Ought we not to be willing to do what God wants us to do? It is by our works we are to stand or fall, and not by our faith. Suppose we were to attend the Prayer Union and once a month pray for the Sunday school, at the same time making no attempt to help it on, not even by our presence. Think you our prayers would profit us any? No, I do not think they would ascend above our heads. Then suppose we were to wonder why we were not blest more by the Spirit. Our prayers are to be the sincere desire of our hearts, and if it is the desire of our hearts to see the Sunday school advance, we will do all we can to advance it; then when we ask God to bless us in our efforts we will receive his approbation. I would not want a man to labor for me who would come in and sit down every time a cloud passed over for fear it would rain, or to drop all work for fear of a little sprinkle, and I believe God wants those who will stand at their post through clouds as well as sunshine, and not be wishing all the time to give up their work for more congenial fields. God wants willing laborers.

I am interested in the Sunday school. I love the work because I know it is of God, and I am willing to do all I can for its advancement. I think the Prayer Union is a benefit, but if we attend that and then think our duty done we will find different when the day of reckoning comes. If we desire to see the cause of Zion advance we will try to do what we can, not by talking about one another, not by becoming talebearers, neither will it be by searching for iniquity. The Scriptures tell us that those that search for iniquity shall be hewn down, and it has been stated by one writer that when the angels of God went among men they were in search of good, and the Bible speaks of the Devil as the accuser of the brethren. If we desire our children to obey the gospel we will try to teach it to them, talk with them, and try to have them obey it. It is the same with the first subject and the Sunday school. We are to do what we can for those poorer than ourselves, visit the sick and afflicted, then when we have done all we can do and meet in our Prayer Union God will bless us by his Spirit.

Praying that I may ever be able to labor for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

Your sister,

ANNA M. PHELPS.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER XXIX, HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

GIVING ADDED VALUE TO A CHILD'S CHRISTMAS.

CHRISTMAS is the great day to children because of the gifts it brings to them. They are not apt to prize their gifts, as older people may, for the loving labor expended upon them. The gifts, of themselves, are of small value to them compared with their interest in the manner of giving. To excite this interest requires time and work, so that, whether the children realize it or not, their Christmas has added value according to the measure of the giver's self which accompanies their gifts.

The dazzling tree and the bulging stocking give added value to the gifts they hold. And the more the children's curiosity is aroused, the more effort they have to put forth to secure their Christmas portion, the better they like it.

Though it takes time and work and skill, it pays to make the Christmas morning a time of joy for the children, to be counted among the precious memories all their life through. As an agency of child-training it is one which can be used for good.

One good man having no children of his own makes Christmas a delight each year to a number of child-relatives. His Christmas plans are never twice alike and the children are the more eager because of always expecting something new.

One Christmas morning they found their stockings hanging limp and empty except that in each was a little card attached to a thread which came over the edge of the mantel. On each card was a verse calling the child to follow the thread. So they all started off and the threads led them back and forth through many rooms, up to the third story and finally to a door at the end of a hall on the lower floor. Here a placard bid them wait till all were together. When they were allowed to enter they found seven mammoth pasteboard Christmas boots, filled to overflowing. These they were told to carry to the breakfast room.

Then came new surprises. Sitting on the floor together they opened only one package at a time so that all might see. One child would unwrap a package and find directions to pass it to her cousin, then the cousin would come to something intended for a third one of the party.

The children will never have done enjoying that morning; and the older people enjoyed it too, especially the good uncle and aunt who had spent so many evenings for weeks past in preparing the happiness for those children. They had spent much money too but the charm of the day was in that pursuing chase and in the anticipation and wonder.

It matters not whether the home be grand or humble, whether the gifts be costly or inexpensive. He who would make children happy must do for and with them rather than merely to give to them. He must give himself with his gifts, in a degree illustrating the love of Him who gave himself for us.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am, as ever, glad and thankful that I am with God's people and as keenly interested in the gospel as I ever was, and how sweet to me is the sound of the words, "gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ;" in it is all that is good, pure, grand, and lovely; it is forever just as new and glorious as at the beginning. And when was the beginning? It is from everlasting to everlasting, eternal as the source from whence it came. It is the price of the blood of the Son of God. How grateful we who are bought with such a price ought to be putting forth all our might, strength, and efforts to do as much good as possible, trying to be like him, coming near to him, avoiding and shunning all that is evil in its nature and letting our words, thoughts, and deeds be pure and becoming the name we bear, that he may own us before the Father, that we may at last be with him where he is.

Through our faithful friend, The Herald, I learn of the Saints from far and near; and rejoice to see the earnestness and eagerness wherewith the people of God strive to do his will, push onward his work, and trustingly follow in the way of life; also how his servants work and labor to spread abroad the precious light of heaven far and wide that souls may be saved; it is God's own word and promise through his servants in former days as well as in these our days, that this gospel shall be proclaimed to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, before the end of time. This is being done and the prophecies are being fulfilled. Sin and wickedness are blinding the world, but they will soon be ended, for we know the time is close at hand when Christ our Savior shall come, when the earth shall be purified, made free from sin. O what joy! all the world shall bow in worship before the Prince of glory.

My thoughts fly back to the time when I first heard the gospel preached; it was in the year 1861. About seven years before that at the age of ten, when I began to read and be interested in the Bible and church history (of the Lutherans) where in school I read and committed to memory the parables and sayings, the works and ministry of the Lord Jesus, his apostles, and disciples. It is fresh in my mind to-day how I wished, thought, and said in my heart, O, if I had but lived in those days when Jesus wandered on earth preaching and teaching and doing such wonderful works, how sweet it would have been to sit at his feet, to listen and learn of him! But I was consoled and felt thankful that I could yet learn of these events through his holy word which he has left for our information. But when later on, at the time before mentioned, at the age of seventeen I came to attend the Mormon meetings and heard the first principles of the gospel preached, at once I recognized it as the same doctrine which Jesus had taught; it sounded as plain and clear to my understanding as something I had always known. It inspired my heart with new life, with love to God and all the world and everything in it. I was baptized, and my joy was complete, nothing lacking for me to wish; I had all, all in the gospel covenant.

This was in my native land, in Denmark, under the leadership of Brigham Young. When I came to this new country in the year 1866, I was again baptized into the Reorganization. But that love—that Spirit which I at first received, was and is the true Spirit of God, and it has ever since been the joy and peace of my soul, my comfort and strength. I have had many trials, hard ones sometimes, I thank God for them though—I see how wonderful the Lord has blessed me and been near at hand to uphold and sustain me in time of trouble and need.

Our branch here is beginning to blossom anew, the good Spirit is working with, and prompting the Saints to renewed efforts in serving the Lord. They turn out to our meetings (filling the houses) with hearts full of joy, gaining new assurances each time, that the Lord is still willing to own and bless us as his people. This increased interest among the Saints is being felt outside among the people; many meet with us, some have already been baptized, and more will be next Sunday. On the first Sunday of this month, five were baptized, three girls and two boys, Bro. J. W. Waldsmith and Bro. M. H. Forscutt officiating.

My husband and myself are most happy to tell you that three of those baptized are our children, one daughter and two sons, which makes us feel richly blessed. I said to one of these boys about five or six years ago, "Oscar, I wish you would not keep company with those boys; they seem so rough and unmannerly." "Yes, Mamma, but I might help them to be better boys. I tell you, Mamma, I—I preach to them, and they like to listen to me." I hope he will be a preacher some day as well as his brother. The day of their baptism after Bro. Forscutt was through preaching to us, as he was going out, he said to me: "Sr. Thomson, let me shake your hand, you have this day two sons become your brothers!" A great many of you know "Uncle Mark," and I believe we have but one such Uncle. He is our branch president, but he is now with Brn. J. W. Waldsmith and J. F. Mintun, preaching in the gospel tent at Lincoln. We have the promise that he will be here next Sabbath, September 1, to officiate again in baptism.

With earnest prayer to our great and merciful Father above for the Saints of God continually, that they may be faithful and true during their warfare through life and death, I am, Your sister in Christ,

NICOLINE W. THOMSON.

GOOSE CREEK, W. Va., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—The West Virginia reunion and district conference, held at this place from August 22 to 25, is now a thing of the past. That it was a success, was admitted, I believe, by all in attendance. It was a small affair, it is true, when compared with some of the larger reunions; but the Spirit was there, and that is more to be desired than large crowds. The attendance was fair, as was also the liberty given the elders in presenting the word. Some are interested, and may obey in the near future. Others will, no doubt, write up the reunion for publication.

Bro. Ebeling is with me here. We expect to start for Limerick, Ohio, to-morrow, if nothing occurs more than I know of now. Am feeling well in the work, and hope to be successful in bringing souls to Christ.

In bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—By invitation of Sr. J. A. Hamilton, on July 20, I went to New Washington, Ohio, not expecting to meet with any person whom I had ever met before, but was most agreeably disappointed on arriving at the depot to find in waiting with horse and buggy, Bro. Jolly, of Pittsburg, ready to convey me to my new temporary dwelling place, a mile away. We drove up to the attractive summer residence of Sr. Hamilton. She soon appeared and in that hospitable, cheerful, and saintly manner of which she is most capable bid me welcome at her pleasant home, reminding me that she had met me twice before, at Kirtland and Independence conferences. In due time Sisters Marie and Flora appeared, their faces all wreathed in smiles, and in words expressing their pleasure at our meeting.

I soon learned that Bro. and Sr. Jolly were out from the city spending the summer at their new country home. Sr. Bloom also was with them. Thus unexpectedly I found myself in the midst of cheerful and interesting brethren instead of out among strangers. Sr. Jolly chances to be one of our most worthy and zealous workers. Sr. Bloom and Bro. Jolly have not joined the army of the Lord as yet, but they take so much interest in those who do belong, and have such a strong leaning in that direction that we like to class them along with the brethren. Bro. Jolly was enjoying fine sport with his new gun, and was supplying the families with game from the forest, after primitive style.

After awhile Aunt Catherine arrived from Tiffin. A tall, comely, sweet looking old lady, both intelligent and a good conversationalist, now approaching the seventies. She had thought much, been religious, but was not satisfied with what she had found; was still in search of the "pearl of great price." Uncle Edson Powers also arrived. He too was in search of light. We were then soon enveloped in an atmosphere of inquiry and social freedom enjoyable, and so were at home.

But what added greatly to the prospects before us and was of more importance than agreeable associates and pleasant surroundings, arrangements had been completed for the holding of a series of meetings. Sr. Hamilton, following the promptings of the true missionary spirit moving her, had secured the Church of God meetinghouse and had passed through the neighborhood and published the notice of meetings abroad. So we had nothing to do but to enter in and occupy. Thanks to the good offices of those interested in getting the truth before the world. Can women do anything in this line? I should smile! Let their work speak out.

Sunday morning, the 21st, we began meetings with a respectable number in attendance to start with. The Lord met with us and the word was presented with desirable ease and freedom. At evening the numbers had increased and they listened attentively. But as of old when the "sons of God met together," an enemy appeared here. Something struck the preacher square in his talking apparatus and he could not get it up nor down. It is said this is about the only way a person can be certain of anything. From that standpoint this was made a certainty.

With effort the meetings were continued, however, without interruption during the week, and until over the next Sunday, the last meeting bringing out the largest audience. The people seemed just a little surprised—which is not a very unusual thing, by the way—at the amount of thunder and lightning there is shut up in this latter-day message. It starts them to thinking and to sizing up their own accepted views to see if they are within range of the real guide.

Furnishing Uncle Edson with a few pointed scriptural references in proof that the decalogue was part of the Mosaic covenant, his mind was freed from the last vestige of that strange mixture of truth and error, Adventism, and he was ready to declare for the whole truth. So in in company with Bro. Jolly and a neighbor friend, we drove out to a convenient place, three miles distance, and Uncle Edson put on Christ by baptism after the true order. May he be confirmed with increased light and joy until the end of his earthly sojourn.

At the conclusion of the last service I put a half dozen Voice of Warnings on sale, all I had, and they went off in a twinkling, hands being stretched out for more. So we have made a beginning at New Washington. A large percentage of the inhabitants are Roman Catholics, some Protestants, some belong to no creed. So we await results.

Monday, the 29th, I returned home where I found Bro. I. M. Smith, just arrived in his mission field. We remained in Kirtland over the following Sunday, Bro. Smith preaching a very enjoyable discourse in the morning in the Temple, and the writer following in the evening. We joined the Saints in the afternoon in a prayer and sacrament service which was enjoyable.

Looking over the mission field it seemed to be the part of wisdom that Bro. Smith should go into the southern districts and that I should join the brethren in the East. So on Friday morning, August 9, Bro. Smith started for the reunion at Goose Creek, West Virginia, and Limerick, Ohio, via Conneautville, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and Wheeling, West Virginia, and in the evening I started for Plainville, Massachusetts, to be present at the reunion. On my way I baptized two ladies, Srs. Maragret McCarty and Angeline G. Vorce, both past middle age, in Spring Lake, New York. May they take great pleasure in the new life begun, being renewed daily in confidence and hope.

Wednesday, the 14th, I arrived at the reunion to find the Saints fervently engaged in the morning prayer service. There were a number of tents on the ground with pleasant surroundings and a cheerful spirit everywhere pervading. Meetings had begun on the Saturday previous and were reported as creditable to the speakers, each one having acquitted himself well. The evening previous to my arrival Bro. Luff was the speaker and from report he seems to have got upon his tall stilts and thrashed around among the China shops of sectarianism, demolishing creeds and heresies in a manner calculated to remind down easters that western cyclones are as likely to strike New England as in any other quarter. The Saints enjoyed the effort even if some of the sectarians may have gone off limping.

Of the ministry upon the ground both of local and general note, were Charles Coombs, George Gates, Daniel Shaw, Arthur Pierce, George Robley, Holmes J. Davison, George Smith, F. O. Coombs, Richard Bullard, F. M. Sheehy, U. W. Greene, Wm. W. Blanchard, Joseph Luff. Samuel Ashton arrived later in the week. These together with a number of the chief workers in the district both of brethren and sisters most zealous for the cause, were uniting their efforts to make the reunion an intellectual and spiritual success. The meetings were enjoyable and an excellent feeling prevailed during the remainder of the session. On the last Sunday morning, the 18th, it rained heavily, but the Saints and friends who had not been privileged to attend the encampment during the week came in and the big tent was filled to overflowing. Among the arrivals were Brn. John Smith, Wm. Bradbury, Dr. Gilbert, T. H. Moore, Isaiah Ames, John Hoxie, etc.

Bro. Luff was the speaker of the hour and plied that blunt iron of Ecclesiastes in a telling manner as the rain poured upon the roof of the tent. The whetting and grinding process was recommended to the Saints as the best means to bring out a true Christian character. He shook up the brethren with a view to letting them see themselves as others see them, with as much indifference and unconcern as to who might be hit as was manifest when playing with the creeds a few evenings before. Garments were cut out for male and female, and good fits they were too. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. F. M. Sheehy gave an illustrated lecture upon the Book of Mormon that was closely listened to by a large audience.

During the week Bro. Holmes J. Davison seemed to be indispensable in interesting the children. He gave some map exercises before them with which they were delighted as well as older ones. Prominent in this work also were Sisters Josie Gerrish, Lottie Brown, Susie Gilbert, Lovina Ashton, and Brn. Arthur Pearce and Orrin Coombs.

Monday the 19th was the concluding day of the reunion. Business was transacted during the day and at evening the writer was the chief speaker. At close of service the reunion was adjourned being pronounced by all a success.

The following Sunday, the 25th, I preached morning and evening at Brockton, in the hall occupied by the Saints, Bro. Eldridge in charge of meetings. Freedom was given in presenting the word and an enjoyable time had. Brockton has improved since I was there last, and there are some faithful workers standing for the right in that city. Thanks to Bro. and Sr. Isaiah Ames for kind care.

To-day I returned to Boston. The city is in the gayest attire, having been decorated in honor of the Knights Templar who seem to be in possession of the city. The streets are lined with observing thousands. Windows and doorways are thronged and roofs covered with crowded masses of humanity watching the long line of marching hosts as they move down the streets waving flags and banners bearing insignias of the peculiar order here represented. To say the least it is a magnificent display and the actors as fine-looking a class of men as one will see in an age. It is a great day for the Knights and a fine day for Boston.

Fraternally,
WM. H. KELLEY.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 30.

Editors Herald.—We are trying to not only "hold our own" but dissatisfied with present attainment and possession are trying for something more. I think we can safely report progress in some directions, while in other respects we seem to be fearfully slow. The attendance at chapel—in the regular preaching and prayer meetings—has become materially augmented both as to numbers and spiritual power, and we hope to crowd the chapel after our tent service is over. Parties that have been attending tent meetings are coming to the chapel with good prospects of uniting with us, and we sincerely hope and pray that these earnest seekers after truth will not be "knocked in the head" by any nonsense on the part of those called to be Saints.

Careless, worldly, unspiritual lives, and discourteous demeanor, especially before the world, the lookers on, and investigators of our claims, are a poor advertisement for people who make such stupendous claims to the world as we do.

Two weeks ago according to previous notice we talked to a large audience of Saints upon the subject of giving support to the Bishop of the church, and tithing as the practical and Heaven-appointed way of furnishing such support. It seems to be interesting to some if not many—a new thing, something heard of, but not defined.

Great carelessness and indifference seem to prevail in regard to this matter in the St. Louis district, and but little if any attention is paid to the Bishop's agent as one of the most important officers in the church, and who, if not supported, it means to those who reflect or think earnestly upon the necessities of the day and hour, a complete stop to church extension or of doing anything of account toward reaching the world with the gospel witness.

I expect to be at the Southern Illinois reunion which commences September 6, at Fairfield, Illinois. Fairfield is located on the Louisville, Evansville, and St. Louis R. R., or the "air line" as it is called, 116 miles from St. Louis; fare $6.20 for the round trip; for parties of ten or more $4.20 each. Our tent work here will close next week and Bro. Jones will probably attend the reunion. Bro. Stead, of Xenia, Illinois, who was in the city last Tuesday and purchased a tent for the reunion insists upon the presence of both Bro. Jones and myself as a necessity. A scarcity of speakers is feared, and it seems a "sorry pity" that some of those "able elders" who are making things "hum" way down East couldn't be with us; but I don't blame them. Dear old New England! "though lost to sight, to memory dear."

Our presence is requested in Southern Illinois after the reunion, but local matters here require our positive attention at once and we shall have to return although there may be more congenial and pleasant work in carrying on the introductory work of preaching and proselyting in other fields. A serious hindrance to continuous and outdoor preaching seems since last Tuesday night to have threatened us in exactly the same way as with Bro. Bozarth—a throat trouble and hoarseness that does not seem to go away.

The city is full of tent meetings, and sensational features are the means with which the "Evangelist" enters into competition with the theaters, horse races, baseball, and the many public attractions for the crowd, here in St. Louis. Sometimes they succeed, and often they seem to fail and have to quit. It has become very largely a money-making scheme, and a matter outside of all church planning or even indorsement. A thrifty fellow with an eye to business can hire a big tent and a good singer or two, secure Sam Jones, a "boy preacher," some freak or phenomenon as a star attraction, charge ten or twenty-five cents admission, or "corner" the crowd by a system of begging or collections that means about the same thing, and pocket a surplus that makes their "work for the Lord" a consoling as well as an enticing matter that relates to a dividend, which the god of this world puts up in order to obscure "the light of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ," and prevent people from getting around to any place where an eye opener to all this nonsense can be had.

I understand that Sam Jones is under contract to come to St. Louis next week. Sam's entertainment seems to draw a St. Louis crowd notwithstanding the unfavorable comments regarding his "show" from press and pulpit as well.

I have had but little time to personally inspect these latter-day religious sensations, but glean what I can from the press and report by visiting brethren. I did, however, take a run one afternoon out to "The De Hoadimont Full Bible Church Camp Meeting," as they advertise it. This announcement and undercut at churches that are not full Bible ones, was intended to awaken interest in one who had been made less suspicious by his experiences than the writer, and, sad to relate, instead of having my skepticism swept away by this "full Bible" people I found a company of people a little nearer "empty" of Bible or sense than anything I have yet struck.

The crowd that had by liberal and sensational advertising been drawn the Sunday before to hear Miss Glassey "speak in tongues," had dwindled away to a baker's dozen, and the great tent looked lonesome and apparently felt that way even to the evangelists who were conducting affairs. Rev. J. C. Stewart presided and did most of the talking although he said but very little, I thought, and certainly developed mighty little enthusiasm. The other evangelist, whose name is forgotten, was an innocent, harmless looking young man with his hair parted in the middle, who presided at the organ, and whose short talk afterward about his being "healed" justified my expectation and this description. Reverend Stewart then said that as there were generally strangers at their meetings who had heard of Miss Glassey's gift of tongues in order not to disappoint them, she would give an exhibition. A young girl, about eighteen, I think, arose from her seat on the platform and spoke and sung in a "tongue" which neither I nor anyone else present—nor perhaps absent—understood, although Miss G. claims or alleges it to be an African dialect; but as yet has been unable to secure any confirmation save her own statement that it is a gift from the Lord.

Miss G. has a sister who claimed the same "gift" and who was also on exhibition, but had apostatized and gone back to her home somewhere in the country. However, the young "evangelist" whose name I cannot recall, was going after her the next day, to try to reclaim her. I got this from Rev. Stewart and also from Miss Glassey herself after the meeting. There was also another girl who stated that she was working for the gift of tongues, and that the Lord had promised it to her, etc.

I was impressed to say during the testimony service that my experience in Christian warfare had led me to accept the faith that a full Bible gospel guaranteed to the obedient believers something more perhaps than bodily healing or even the gift of tongues. All listened very attentively, some were interested, but the Devil's agencies for barring light are well perfected, and we often have to console ourselves with (save God) the lonely witness to the truth. That, however, we have, and in this great and glorious certainty we rejoice in spite of the great and profound darkness covering the earth, engendered and fostered by Mystery Babylon.

I suppose that Rev. Stewart will keep closer watch when he finds that a "Mormon" has talked to his people, and has had an interview with his principal crowd-drawing attraction, Miss Glassey, as he has taken occasion,—as I learned subsequently, to warn the people against "Old Joe Smith's religion." Would to God they could all have fair opportunity to know what it was and is! How long, O Lord, how long?

M. H. BOND.

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—In reading the Herald my attention is often called to the statement of some dear brother that he "is greatly afflicted in body," or, "is suffering some ailment either acute or chronic," that is a hindrance to his successful ministerial work. Then this question arises in my mind, Are God's people afflicted without cause? Consider this, dear brethren. We so often preach that "God is unchangeable," "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," "his ways are one eternal round," "he acts just like himself in every age of the world." Then comes this reasoning: The laws that control the starry hosts, that govern the sun and planets, preserving all in harmony so that there is no clash, no disturbance, emanated from a perfect Being, therefore perfect; unalterable also, because to alter would be to evince a changeable disposition in him who we preach "changes not." And, again, the same power is said to have created all things on and pertaining to this earth, and did establish the laws of their being inasmuch that like begets like in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms.

God watches over all his creations. (Matt. 10: 29, 30.) He knows when a sparrow falls to the ground. "The very hairs of your head are all numbered." "And not one hair, neither mote shall be lost." (D. C. 28: 6.) Any interference with or breach of law justifies the penalty being visited upon the violator or the subject that is arrayed in opposition to that law. Law itself implies subjects on which to act, order in its action, and penalty for violation as well as reward for observance.

Now by the order which is observed in the unperverted operation of all things we perceive that law controls all creation. This, then, calls our attention to the laws governing our dual nature. As man is conceded to be natural and spiritual, we at once conclude that there are two codes of laws that must be observed to preserve order in his being. These laws will cooperate to preserve the union of these two natures in harmony one with the other; which harmony is peace, and where peace is there can be no conflict. Suffering is the result of conflict; therefore we conclude that where suffering exists one or the other or both of these laws have been violated in some degree.

Since our being is dual, it follows that the violation of law expressly governing the physical part of our being will cause a schism. The physical part cannot suffer alone, but its distress passes over and affects the spiritual and infringes upon its liberties, thus causing spiritual suffering also, which is manifest in the inability of one who is suffering in body to thrill or sway men by the power of the Spirit.

Again, when we are in spiritual transgression, we feel downcast and discouraged with self, and the secretions and excretions of the body are hindered by this dark, dissatisfied, and foreboding feeling; the result of this schism is sickness, or affliction, and chastisement.

Since all who are suffering are commonly desirous of a remedy, I will here offer some truths that are adapted to effect improvement. If your digestion is disordered by too much eating, too little eating, or unwise eating; or by too much drinking, or too little, or unwise drinking, repent. This means to correct the error as far as possible. If you suffer for lack of sleep, or rest, or too much of either repent, correct the error.

If climate is the cause of your suffering, attend carefully to your eating, drinking, sleeping, resting, and exercise; this will modify the evil that is so commonly attributed to the climate. Keep "A word of wisdom."—D. C. 86. It is for temporal salvation; that is, for the preservation of the body. Note the promises to those who observe to do it. "It is pleasing unto me [the Lord]." It is "adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all saints, who are or can be called saints." If you have a friend will you not try to please him? How much more our Friend, the Lord Jesus Christ.

If your lungs are affected, be wise, avoid that which brought on the trouble, or aggravates it. Keep your mouth shut when facing the wind; do not talk then. Take regular exercise in breathing so as to expand the lungs to their utmost, in the early morning, at intervals throughout the day, before retiring at night to sleep, and in your waking intervals in the night. You will rest better, your voice will be stronger, your blood redder, and your muscles firmer and better able to endure. This treatment will clear away those peculiar sensations in the region of the heart that so often trouble those who have weak or diseased lungs, which trouble is caused by the chest contracting upon the heart and lungs because the lungs are not sufficiently inflated to hold the chest out. It is not heart disease but the agonies of a cramped and smothered heart. Expand your lungs by breathing exercises, dumb bells, and Indian clubs. Medicine cannot cure alone if at all.

All these things you can do for yourself. God is an ever present help in time of need, after we have done all we can is the time of need. Do what you can, then ask God and he will answer, for the promise is to all that believe in his name and manifest their faith by their works. So much for health and the restoration of the body when only natural laws have been violated.

Now concerning spiritual transgressions that cause sickness and affliction. In Doctrine and Covenants 90:6-9 the cause of affliction with the remedy is plainly stated. In section 98:1-3 is revealed the cause of afflictions and chastisement, in 64:2 the cause of the afflictions and chastisements of the old disciples, I Corinthians 11:29, 30, the cause of sickness, affliction, and death.

The reasonable conclusion we should reach is that when we are born sound in body and mind, and are afterwards afflicted, sick, or chastened, we are guilty of violating some of the laws governing the welfare of our physical or spiritual nature, and we should search diligently to know wherein we have transgressed, and repent with all our heart. "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." Let us set ourselves right in all things and call on God according to the Scripture, and we shall be healed. Remember there was only one Job and his case was for a test of the power of God as opposed to the power of Satan, and was a lesson for Satan that he might know his prospects for final triumph.

W. E. MCKELVEY.

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 26.

Editors Herald:—In looking back over my past life I find myself in a critical condition, passing over sixty years in life and now on the last stepping stone I ask myself the question, Shall I go free? I see by the word of God that some have made the last step safely. This is peace to me, that it can be done; but my strength is almost gone, seeing I have passed my time as a church member in some way or other about thirty years. And what have I done? Can I say I have done the best I could? No, I cannot, and I fear it is that I knew and did not do that is keeping me from getting my title clear. I have hurt myself in the past, and I now say, O God be merciful to me a sinner!

Shall I say we have no church here? I would that I could speak of one here, but I cannot at present, and it looks very dark if ever I shall see one here. I often say that it is too bad when I am told by some, after conversing with them, that as soon as an elder comes this way to preach they will come to hear. I would like to get a good number of them out to hear, so that those who do come may not have to preach to empty seats as did the missionary in charge when here last. Surely it is too bad in such a great city as this. There are whisperings abroad that some that have been here have gone and left an odium behind them; Saints affected and cast down, when to rise I cannot say. Should I be stretching it to say that such teachers though they should pass the last stepping stone, the wedding garment will be withheld from them?

To you and all true laborers I bid you God speed, and while I am here with one foot up ready to give the last step, I ask the prayers of all.

It was rumored here a few days ago that Apostle Kelley was expected at Dunmore to baptize some that did and do believe, so we hear; but he did not come; the reason we know not. For one I thought I should have a little more gospel joy, although what I heard him say when he was here last has not died out. I would not refuse a little more, but I have to wait a little longer.

From one of the faith,

HILLMAN, Mich., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—About one year since F. H. Brooks and J. Davis began preaching Latter Day Saint doctrine in our peaceable community. All things went reasonably quiet until eight souls were lead into the waters of baptism, then the power of darkness began to despair for his flock and proceeded to hurl forth his venom upon the church from the surrounding pulpits; nevertheless the good work rolled on for two weeks, when eleven others were lead by the Spirit to baptism; and still louder and more hissing became the uproar of those divines whom Paul refers to in Galatians 1:8. However, the good work continued to roll on with baptism at different intervals until our number reached over thirty.

By this time one of the opponents of truth, a barber by trade, who had been doing local service for the M. E.'s heard of one Jos. Musser (whose testimony was published in the Herald of December 12, 1894, but who had since been expelled from the Latter Day Saint Church for bad conduct and was now endeavoring to uproot Latter Day Saintism by any means fair or foul), and believing him to be of the required spirit sent for him as soon as possible, contracting to pay said Musser fifteen dollars for his service. Mr. Musser, ever anxious to earn the mighty dollar, arrived on the scene and to his surprise or not the more respectable class of people gave him a very cool reception. However, his arrival was heralded abroad and many went to hear his tirade of abuse which suited to perfection the lower class of his audience, but completely disgusted the more learned and intelligent, who saw that his motto was "Up with Musser and down with truth." Upon the platform with Mr. Musser were the M. E. and Presbyterian divines, applauding to the last this vile abuser, not even shrinking from duty when Musser delivered a night's foul abuse from which he exonerated the female sex, but allowed boys of all ages to attend and learn from the example set them by their pastors how to applaud filthy language.

At the close of the so-called lecture Mr. Musser offered to debate upon certain points, calling it his platform, but which was in reality a mere network through which he could drop at any point and if not drowned could come up through another hole. But before engaging he wanted fifteen dollars put up to pay his expenses. This the Hillman Saints put up.

Elder F. M. Cooper of West Bay City being in Alpena hastened to Hillman on Saturday night but arrived too late for the lecture; however, he framed certain articles of debate and sent them to Musser, which were at the time rejected; but afterwards terms of debate being agreed upon, F. M. Cooper and J. Musser entered upon a ten nights' discussion, divided as follows: F. M.

Cooper for the first three nights affirmed that the Latter Day Saints Church was in harmony with the Bible in faith and doctrine; Musser denied. The second three nights Joseph Musser affirmed the same for the Disciple Church; Elder Cooper denied. The remaining three nights Bro. C. affirmed that the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and Inspired Translation were of divine origin and Joseph Smith a true prophet of God; J. Musser denied. It was further agreed upon by the disputants that no sectarian preacher would be chosen as moderator or chairman, upon which the postmaster (an unprejudiced man) was chosen as moderator by Elder Cooper and a Jew by Mr. Musser. These two were to choose a third. However, before the debate began Musser's moderator declined and Musser chose, contrary to agreement, Rev. Young, Presbyterian, who at once advocated the appointing of the M. E. preacher—D. E. Birch—as chairman, doubtless supposing him to be a man of intelligence and honesty; but men are sometimes mistaken. The unbiased mind of the chairman may be seen in the statement which he made before the debate began, which was that "the more he knew of the Latter Day Saints, the more he became disgusted with them."

Though an overwhelming majority was against Elder Cooper, he seemed to care not, but boldly launched forth, fully relying upon the divine promise to God's servants who defend the truth, and after a few suitable remarks proceeded to set up the faith and doctrine as affirmed. Time being called Mr. Musser instead of following the affirmative began an assault upon the character of Joseph Smith and the divine authenticity of the afore-named books. The chairman instead of reminding Musser that he was out of line, smiled approvingly at Musser's attack. Time being called, Elder Cooper seeing the sidetrack upon which Rev. Musser had switched, at once reminded the chairman of the lack of duty and showed to the audience the necessity of his following Musser as well as affirming his proposition. This he did, much to the annoyance of Mr. Musser, who saw no means of overthrowing the affirmative argument and therefore resorted to his abuse, but to his sorrow found that he had a man of giant abilities upon his track, who could not be led into any unchristian language but upon every point could nonplus him upon authenticated facts. The chairman now called time which closed the first night's debate, and though the chairman had cut Bro. Cooper's time short and Mr. Musser's long, it was evident to all that Mr. Musser wasn't in it only as a mudthrower.

The next day being Sunday three young men were baptized and confirmed in the Saints' faith. On Monday night the interest was greater than ever, and Musser entirely evaded crossing swords with the affirmative proposition, openly affirming his intention of at once attacking the books. This he did and was closely followed by his opponent, who not only showed the falsity of Musser's assertions but set forth the principles of the faith accompanied by such proofs that it was impossible for any honest mind to gainsay or resist. This of course being in opposition to the doctrine of the presiding divine, he got very angry and when the debate was closed for the night he called one of the Saints a liar because he said the disputants did not get equal time. Upon the third night Elder Cooper closed the affirmative argument after having built a perfect platform, maintaining every point in his proposition. The next night great things were expected of Musser on the affirmative, but he again opened out on Joseph Smith and the books. Mr. Cooper, not willing to leave the Disciple Church in the dark, had to proceed to build it up for Mr. Musser and then tear it down, but to the surprise of all Mr. Musser also began tearing down the church which he represented by saying that the true church never left the earth; that baptism by immersion was not necessary, nor was it for the remission of sins. Such conduct on the part of Mr. Musser appeared to sicken a newly arrived reverend Disciple, Ira Billman by name, who is, I believe, rather strikingly referred to in the book entitled "Crimes of Preachers." At the close of this night's debate Mr. Billman seemed rather wrathful and requested an opportunity of debating his cause with Bro. Cooper, this being granted by Bro. Cooper, who also asked them to bring a car load of preachers and he would meet the whole set of them, seemed to fully satisfy Mr. Billman, and after attending the next night, (during which Elder Cooper was entirely lit up by the Spirit, which not only controlled the speaker, but apparently filled the house,) he was seen no more in the town, no doubt being fully disgusted with the conduct of his church representative. The sixth night closed with Mr. Musser not only having failed to set up a church, but having absolutely denied the faith and doctrine of the Disciple Church, but still claiming to be a preacher in the same. The intelligent part of the audience now seemed to be fully satisfied that Musser had entirely failed to uproot the faith or establish the Disciple faith.

Next came the great tug of war upon the books and prophet. The people seemed now anxious to learn the truth, but Musser again led off with abuse and all manner of garbled statements and misconstrued passages; and so to keep the people's minds from becoming overloaded with falsehoods, Bro. Cooper had to again follow with indisputable documentary evidence. The intelligent part of the audience was now becoming entirely sickened by Mr. Musser's repeated slang and home-spun evidence though some of the lower element still thought him a perfectionist, and to show what side they were on would get outside the door as soon as Bro. Cooper would rise to speak, and return when their man was called, not knowing that they also exhibited a lack of intelligence. However, the debate went on with increased interest on the part of the crowd which was becoming deeply interested in Elder Cooper, who was pronounced by the majority to be the smartest man that ever came into the town, and even those who were the hardest against the truth said that Elder Cooper was a perfect gentleman, scholar, and Christian, none of which qualifications were placed to the name of Musser. Owing to the sidetracking of Mr. Musser and the ungentlemanly way in which our chairman acted it was impossible for Elder Cooper to go into details upon the divine authenticity of the books, as it was necessary to follow Musser in his tirade of abuse upon the character of Joseph Smith, and though such was contrary to the rule of the debate, it suited the chairman and he heartily applauded it; but to the pleasure of the intelligent people Elder Cooper would rise calmly in his turn and with a pleasant smile present authentic documentary evidences to the annulling of Mr. Musser's prejudiced evidences. From the first night to the tenth it was plain to be seen that the M. E. and Presbyterian preachers and Musser were in league and so as to not come down too hard on his colleagues Musser had to deny most all the Disciple doctrine.

During the entire discussion Bro. Cooper was very calm and self-possessed, while his opponent would get angry, fret, and fume, and use very unbecoming language; and as the M. E. and Presbyterian divines had taken such active part in the applauding Mr. Musser, they now got a challenge read to them by Elder Cooper which entirely shocked their nervous systems. It was to the effect that he would debate against the entire set of them upon the faith and doctrine, etc., of the Latter Day Saints Church. This challenge was, however, very politely declined by Mr. Musser and the Presbyterian. But to show to the audience that the Saints' Church was everything filthy and vile the M. E. preacher stepped to the front and mingled with others used the most filthy and blackguarding language possible, till it was called out, "pshaw," and the most hardened drunkard in the house had to drop his head for shame. No wonder his congregation is reported to be dispensing with his services at once, while the great majority of the people now say that Elder Cooper did not get half a chance, and they would wish to see him come back again to hold a series of meetings.

No doubt a good work has been done. Even the barber, who is now feathered out as a Disciple preacher, says he is sorry for bringing Musser here. No doubt he is, for the Disciple faith and doctrine got too much airing to suit him, and his craft is in danger.

Yours in bonds,
R. C. RUSSELL.

THE UNITY OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.—No. 3.

BY ELDER E. E. WHEELER.

CAN THE CONFLICTING ELEMENTS OF CHRISTIANITY BE UNITED?

IN union there is strength.

United, we stand; divided, we fall.—Webster.

If ye are not one, ye are not mine.—D. C. 38:6.

Every city or house divided against itself shall not stand.—Matt. 12:25.

This is literally true, whether applied to spiritual or natural affairs. When applied to National affairs by the immortal Lincoln it was true and served as an unanswerable argument. The lack of, and necessity for religious unity is recognized by many. How can it be accomplished? Union meetings and religious congresses have been held with a view to accomplish that object, but have failed. A few of the most powerful and popular Protestant denominations have styled themselves orthodox, or evangelical, and all the rest heterodox, or not sound in faith; but this is only a human declaration, a human standard set up by uninspired men.

The nearest step towards Christian union is an agreement to disagree, or to look with toleration and charity upon one another in their divided and weakened condition. It is easy to recognize the existence of a widespread evil, but who has the panacea by which to remove it? Rome says that if her erring children would return to the fold from which they have strayed the problem of Christian union would be easily solved. The Baptists tell us that if the rest of the religious world would flock to the Baptist standard, a united Christendom would be the result. The Campbellites would build religious structures on the Bible and Bible alone, and make it morally obligatory upon the rest of the religious world to unite with them upon that platform. All desire unity if it comes their way, otherwise they do not.

Unity in purpose, effort, sentiment, and spirit must be preceded by unity in faith and principle. To illustrate, previous to the great American conflict, the North and South were divided in principle over the question of human slavery. Many efforts were made to compromise, or bridge over, the chasm ever widening between the states, but these were only temporary in their effects for good. As a direct result of division of thought and principle, secession and separation of the States resulted. War and carnage followed fast upon the heels of secession. Another evidence, that when men try to maintain antagonistic principles, separation is the inevitable result. Nothing but the application of harmonious principles can ever unify the race.

All unity and oneness come from God; all that has a tendency to divide and thereby distract and weaken, comes from beneath. The Christian world not only needs to become united, but it needs unity established upon a true foundation.

A great degree of unity characterized the Papacy before the dawn of the Reformation. Nearly the whole Christian world was Catholic at one time. But it was unity established upon a false foundation, to maintain principles that were untrue and unjust. What was the result? The church was the enemy of all human progress. The world was borne down by priestcraft, superstition, and error. Rome, claiming to be the divine building provided for by our Savior (see Matthew 16), was one of the most awful persecuting powers that ever disgraced the world. Between fifty and seventy-five thousand heretics were murdered in France by Catholics in the short space of three days. To preserve the Catholic unity, men were burned at the stake, confined in dungeons, thrown to wild beasts, subjected to the thumb screw and the rack.

What the daughters of the old Mother of Harlots would do, if they had the power, may be guessed at by what they have done. Calvin burned Servetus at the stake. Good Queen Bess persecuted the Catholics in England. John and Charles Wesley were cruelly handled and slandered by the votaries of the Church of England. The Quakers have had their eyes burned out and tongues cut out by their Protestant brethren. The Pilgrim Fathers of New England, left the fatherland for the sake of religious liberty, but as soon as they got the power denied it to others. They banished Roger Williams and hung the witches. Joseph Smith and Hyrum his brother were martyred for their religion, largely instigated by sectarian malice and hate. The Seventh-Day Advents have been thrown into prison because they keep Saturday as the Sabbath of the Lord. In fact, the institution commonly called the church has, in many ways, been the rank enemy of human progress. Every step of progress has been opposed. Luther, Wycliffe, Huss, and Jerome, received their persecution at her hands. The Wesleys were in turn opposed by the Church of England; and to-day if she discovers in her bosom a man of larger hope and broader charity than the creed will justify, he is immediately cast out. Dr. Thomas, Professor Swing, Drs. Briggs and Smith, are worthy examples.

If the sects ever unite upon a false foundation, woe unto the heretic and dissenter. Religious freedom and rights of conscience will be things of the past. Far better to have them divided, that no one denomination secure the balance of power, than to have them united to maintain false principles.

There is no evil so great but some good may, indirectly, result therefrom. Out of this widespread evil of division much good has resulted. We hope never to see a union of the forces of modern Christianity unless it be upon the foundation of truth. Can the conflicting elements of Christianity be united? Certain organizations are the outgrowths of certain principles, therefore no unity of organization can be had without unity of principle. The professed Christian world cannot merge into one grand organization, until it agrees in principle; those who believe in the infallibility of the Pope, and apostolic succession, cannot remain in the same organization with those who do not. Those who accept the doctrines of foreordination, election, and eternal damnation cannot belong to a body of people that accept free will and universal salvation. So the result of diverse principles, has been to create diverse bodies with a view to the maintenance of those principles.

The only foundation principles upon which to build is the gospel of Christ as set forth in the New Testament. Every principle of the gospel, or doctrine of Christ, is necessary and essential to salvation. None can be rejected without loss. It was a perfect law of liberty. (See James 1:25.) If perfect, it is not susceptible of change. The only correct standard of spiritual truth, is the primitive gospel, a record of which we have in the New Testament.

The history of the professed church for a thousand years, or from the middle of the sixth to the sixteenth century is one of departure from God, apostasy, corruption of the ancient faith, superstition, darkness, and death. At the close of this long night of human woe, the Reformation began. The effulgent rays of gospel light had so long ceased to shed their beams upon the dark, benighted world that the Reformers could not comprehend all that had been lost in the dark ages. Their eyes were only partly opened. They saw men as trees walking. They were like blind men groping for the wall. All had their ideas of reformation, but no two agreed. Thus feeling their way out of spiritual night they took different roads, and the sects of modern Christianity is the result.

They all blessed the world with a measure of religious freedom, but not one, nor all of them together, restored the ancient apostolic church, with its New Testament organization of apostles, prophets, bishops, seventies, elders, pastors, teachers, and deacons; with its law of adoption by which aliens might be adopted into the fold and family of God, namely, faith in God, repentance, baptism by immersion, for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment, the baptism of the Holy Spirit with all its ancient manifestations of gifts and blessings,—such as a knowledge of God, inspiration, revelation, ministry of angels, visions, dreams, prophecy, gifts of faith, wisdom, and knowledge, tongues, interpretation, miracles, gifts of healing, discernment of spirits, power to cast out devils. So the gulf between modern and ancient Christianity is still broad and deep.

Although the Reformers did a great work in curtailing the powers of Rome, and preparing the world for the restoration, by divine power, of the primitive faith, in its entirety, not one of them had any authority from God to restore or reform. If Rome had any authority the Reformers lost it when they were anathematized by her. If Rome had none she could not impart what she did not have, either way the Protestants have none. The truth is, divine right, or priesthood authority, to act in the name of God, had long before fled the earth because of apostasy and corruption of the ancient faith; therefore Rome had none; and those coming out of her had none.

In all time God works like himself. The divine building, the church, that became dismembered, and disorganized, and supplanted in the apostasy by papal Rome, the Mother of Harlots, must be restored by divine power. The divine energy necessary to build in the beginning must be manifest in the work of reconstruction and rebuilding. The church which was a perfect and complete institution before the apostasy must be restored in its every part. When this work begins, the discerning ones will see the hand of God in it, because God will be working like himself. The wisdom of man is not equal to the accomplishment of this work, hence provision has been made for a heavenly messenger to come from the courts of glory, at the end of the apostasy, and before the second and glorious advent of our Lord, clothed upon with authority, power, and might, to open up the dispensation of the fullness of times; to restore the priesthood to man, to direct in the reconstruction of the ancient church, to bring back to the world in its entirety the primitive faith, to call God's wandering children out of Babylon, to deliver an authorized message unto the world, preached in the demonstration of the Spirit and power, to restore the powers, privileges, and blessings to man, to prepare a sanctified people to meet Jesus when he comes. (See Isa. 40: 1-5; Mal. 3: 1-4; 4: 5, 6; Matt. 13: 39-41; 24: 14; Rev. 14: 6.) This work Catholicism and Protestantism has not done and cannot do.

On the foundation of the ancient gospel restored in its purity and completeness by divine power through the ministry of angels the Christian world can safely unite; but they will not. The great whore has taught them that there is no ministry of angels now; that the angels are asleep; no power of God now, no inspiration, revelation, prophecy, nothing but a dead church and a dead creed. The priests of Babylon for one hundred and fifty years, have been lying to their votaries, telling that we don't need apostles, prophets, and miracles. Woe unto them if they still continue to lie against God. The honest out of every nation will believe the message of truth and be gathered out and great Babylon will fall to rise no more. (See Rev. 18: 4, 22.)

Whereas the Lord has specifically stated to "the elders," "Ye shall see that my law is kept," and whereas the law provides that members in transgression shall be dealt with as the law provides, therefore be it resolved: If there are members in the branches of the district who are not living up to their privileges and others living in open transgression, that we request the presidents of the various branches to see that the officers under them do their duty; that the Saints be officially visited at stated intervals and that they seek to enforce the letter and spirit of the law. The preaching of the word was in power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. Large audiences and good attention greeted the speakers at the several preaching services.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

By consent of those having charge of the coming reunion to be held at El Dorado Springs, arrangements have been made to set apart Friday, October 4, on which will be held Clinton district Sabbath school convention. Arrangements are being perfected for a good entertainment to be held in the evening of that day. We therefore call upon the superintendents of the different schools to come prepared to have their schools assist in the program.

The committee on program will confer with the delegates from each school and the very best will be selected. We your committee would urge upon the different schools the importance of making a thorough preparation for the evening entertainment. TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a two days' meeting held at Williamston, Michigan, on Saturday and Sunday, September 21 and 22. Elders Willard J. Smith, from Detroit, and Hiram Rathbun, of Lansing, will be with us, and others of the ministry are expected. We expect a good turnout of the Saints from a distance. Come, and let us make this meeting a success.

THOS. HORTON.

OHIO REUNION.

Reunion of the Ohio district convened August 29 in the district tent. Saints in wagons, buggies, and other means of conveyance began to gather early in the week. This is the incipient state of tent reunions in our district, and only a few tents on the ground, but from the interest manifested in the matter your correspondent feels that this is only the beginning of good meetings for us.

Jas. Moler, I. M. Smith, and A. W. Kriebel were chosen presidents; A. B. Kirkendall to represent the Herald, R. Etzenhouser to represent the Ensign; H. E. Moler was chosen chorister. Professor House and his class were invited and requested to assist in the musical portion of the preaching services.

A committee of five, consisting of R. Etzenhouser, Minnie Rhoads, D. J. Hannah, H. E. Moler, and I. M. Smith were appointed to consult and act with the committee on Sunday school celebration to be held here September 4.

Eight p. m., preaching by Elder I. M. Smith, who spoke on the two spiritual forces governing the world, and showed that the natural man could not discern between them. He cited numerous examples from the record where such discernments was not possible from the natural man's power, hence the necessity of the "discerning of spirits" and the absolute necessity of a standard, hence the necessity of sticking strictly to the letter of "what is written."

At the nine a. m. prayer service six prayers were offered and fourteen testimonies borne. At 10:45 preaching by Elder A. Haws; text, 2 Corinthians 13:5: "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith." It is our duty to make an examination of ourselves, like the mariner, who by means of chart and compass, takes his bearings to properly locate his vessel. We should form the character of Jesus in our own being, and that state of perfection we should attain unto will not be reached until we do. This was an able effort, showing how every Christian should closely scrutinize himself to see if he agrees in every particular with the pattern set by Jesus. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by A. W. Kriebel; text, James 1:25 and 2:12. The speaker showed the perfect law by which God would judge the world, and as God does not change, this law is everlasting and reaches every son of Adam in its application. R. Etzenhouser occupied the evening hour. He said: "I am not willing to be judged by your standard, nor you by mine. Hence I am glad that all the Christian world accepts the Bible as the standard. Jesus took the Old Testament—the Jews' standard—for his authority, for he said, Had you believed Moses and the prophets you would have received me, for they spoke of me. Catholics do not come up to the standard, as they have popes and cardinals, instead of apostles and prophets. They believe in papal infallibility, Virgin Mary's power of intercession, etc. Will Protestantism stand the test judged by the same standard?"

August 30.—At the morning social meeting five prayers were offered and twenty-nine testimonies given. A spiritual feast. The forenoon sermon was by I. M. Smith, from John 3:5. "An old text," the speaker said, "but none more important could be used. All truths are important in their place and time." The speaker showed there were two powers or spiritual forces, and by numerous citations from the word showed the rule established by God for being translated from the power of darkness into the kingdom of our God and his Christ. The evening service was by your correspondent from the text, "Preach the word," and was well received.

September 1.—An enjoyable time was had at the morning social service. R. Etzenhouser discoursed at 10:45; text, Isaiah 29. This was a plain presentation of the facts of God doing a marvelous work in our day, the time and surrounding circumstances being so clearly shown. Jewish occupancy of places of honor and emolument in our own and other lands all point to the fact that Jacob's face does not now wax pale. The speaker examined the claims of several who claim to be Messiahs, and showed them to be impostors, as their coming did not agree with Zechariah and Acts, Jude, etc. In the afternoon the text was Psalms 19:13, I. M. Smith being the speaker. This was a clear cut sermon addressed to the Saints and was an exhortation to forsake our sins and "overcome" in order that we might eat of the "hidden manna" and inherit all things. At 7:30 p. m. the choir under Professor House rendered some beautiful music. Sermon by H. E. Moler; text, Acts 17:26, 27. The speaker showed God's nature; that it was not necessarily "unknown" but to know God was in fact a necessity if we inherit eternal life. He showed that God dealt in equity with all nations and had set the bounds of their habitations, and that it was just as reasonable to suppose that he should have people in America as in Asia Minor.

Dr. O. H. Riggs and wife, of Cincinnati, Ohio, were baptized this evening by Elder R. Etzenhouser. The Doctor is a learned gentleman, a specialist, and stands high in his profession. He was at one time a seventy in Utah Mormonism, but on account of corruption in high places dropped out, but his love for the truth has caused him to investigate and this is the result of his investigations. We think he will be an honor to the work and give it prestige in his associations. Bro. Etzenhouser may well be proud of his fish.

Monday, September 2.—Four prayers were offered and twenty-one testimonies were borne at the social service. A good spirit was present, and all were strengthened. Exhortation and comforting words accompanied with promises were given to some who confessed to having been lax in duty and covenanted to labor for the work in their office and calling. At 10:30 a. m., sermon by Elder J. L. Goodrich; text, John first chapter. The speaker stated that he would choose no special subject, our great Christianity being wide enough in its application to have all the time of this reunion occupied, and then by our lives we can preach louder than the sermons preached here. The teaching of God's people has always been antagonistic to the many, and although we have the promise that by wearing the robe of righteousness we should gain "grace and favor in the eyes of the people," yet this is not a statement that all will accept the truth. When Jesus was here he was not accepted by his people, but "his own received him not," although it is stated he grew in stature and wisdom and in favor with God and man. So we can always expect this work to be opposed. The opportunity was given to them exclusively, as in the first commission the ministers were restricted to the house of Israel and forbidden to enter into the cities of Samaria. Commission denotes authority, and inspiration is the authority,—the power,—and no man ever represented God without inspiration in a degree. And as no inspiration is claimed by our coreligionists, we are forced to admit that they have no authority.

The afternoon session was set apart for Sunday school work. H. E. Moler was chosen district superintendent, T. J. Beatty associate, Minnie Rhoads secretary, D. J. Hannah treasurer. H. E. Moler, Minnie Rhoads, Edith Wren, J. L. Goodrich, D. J. Hannah, A. B. Kirkendall, Carrie Barstow, and T. J. Beatty were elected delegates to the General Sunday School Convention at Kirtland, Ohio, in April, 1896. The following subjects were spoken upon by the ones named and discussed by the body: 1. What is the best way of conducting a primary class in Sunday school? Mary Beatty. 2. What would you adopt to secure regular attendance? J. L. Goodrich. 3. How can I succeed in holding the attention of my class? F. J. Ebeling. 4. Give us some of the advantages of using the Quarterlies. D. J. Hannah. 5. Can we have a successful Sunday school when parents take no interest in it? If not, how can we get the parents interested? Charles Cooper. 6. Give us some of the duties of parents touching the Sunday schools. A. B. Kirkendall. 7. Is it essential to the success of the Sunday school that all have their lessons prepared before Sabbath? If so, how can I get my class to prepare their lessons at home? 8. What are some of the necessary qualifications of a Sunday school teacher? W. H. Rhoads. 9. What books to use and how to conduct singing. H. E. Moler. The interest in the Sunday school was awakened and promise of success in this line is good. At eight p. m. Francis Ebeling was the speaker; text, Acts 24:10-16. The "way called heresy" was shown clearly to be the true way, and "orthodoxy" from the modern definition was shown to be heterodoxy in its rankest form. By tracing Paul's life he showed that he (Paul) was in harmony with Jesus' teaching, and that he obeyed all the principles of the doctrine of Christ, hence Paul practiced what he preached. Hence we call Paul an orthodox (sound doctrine) preacher, and we will bury modern orthodoxy and call Paul in to preach its funeral.

LOGAN REUNION—REDUCED RATES.

Saints and friends who contemplate attending the general annual reunion to be held at Logan, Iowa, commencing September 20, 1895, please read this carefully: The Western Passenger Association has granted rates on the following-named lines, of one and one third fare for the round trip on certificate plan, from all points in Iowa and Missouri, this reduction to apply on certificate shown to be issued with ticket sold for going passage on September 18, 19, 20, 21 only. Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha; Hannibal and St. Joseph; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Illinois Central; Minneapolis and St. Louis; Missouri Pacific; Sioux City and Pacific; Wabash.

When the journey is made over more than one line it will be necessary for the passenger to purchase separate local tickets of each road's issue between points traveled thereon, and procure certificate thereof for each of the lines in this territory over which he travels in going to meeting. Passengers should therefore ascertain from the ticket agent what portion of their journey can be covered by the certificate obtainable from him, and procure certificates filled out to correspond with the tickets purchased.

Failure to procure or present certificate invalidates any claim for reduction in return fare. The tickets purchased for going passage may be either limited or unlimited according to the rate paid or the regulations in effect on the line over which it reads, but return tickets sold at reduced fare will in all cases be limited to continuous passage. Certificates will not be honored for return tickets at reduced rates unless presented within two days after date of adjournment of meeting, nor will certificates be honored in cases where going tickets were purchased three days prior to commencement of the meeting nor after date announced as closing date thereof. Parties or clubs traveling in a body, or individuals purchasing round trip tickets or excursion tickets, get a certificate to that effect from selling agent.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints of North Dakota:—Upon special resolution presented from Star of Hope branch, North Dakota, also recommendation of brethren in said State, I have this day appointed to act as agent for the Bishopric for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the State of North Dakota, Bro. Thomas Leitch, who is authorized by virtue of this appointment to receive tithes and offerings in behalf of said church and to represent the Bishopric of said church in the care and protection of church properties in said State that may not otherwise be placed under the care of some special agent.

This appointment does not in anywise interfere with the duties of Bro. McLeod, agent of the Minnesota district, but is made to aid the church in its work in North Dakota.

Trusting that every member of the church within North Dakota may report at the earliest time practicable to the agent and perform the duties required by the law of which the said agent is set apart to administer, and that they may receive the blessings attending the doer of the word, I am,

Very respectfully in bonds,

E. L. KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop Reorganized Church.
September 9, 1895.

BORN.

BARRY.—At St. Louis, Missouri, July 7, 1895, to Bro. Thomas J. and Ruby Barry, a son, and named Robert Lawrence. Blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

LUKE.—At Keb, Iowa, January 1, 1894, to Bro. John W. and Sr. Hannah Luke, a daughter, and named Mary Edna. Blessed at Hite-man, Iowa, September 4, 1895, by Elder R. M. Elvin.

DIED.

WILLIAMS.—At Cheltenham, Missouri, July 3, 1895, Sr. Mary Williams. She was born in South Wales, September 15, 1851; was married February 13, 1868, to Thomas J. Williams. Burial service conducted by Elder Charles Jones; memorial services Sunday, July 14, by Elder M. H. Bond.

GIMMET.—At St. Louis, Missouri, July 12, 1895, Annie Adelia, infant daughter of Bro.

Stephen and Sr. Annie Gimmet. Born at St. Louis, Missouri, June 10, 1895. Funeral service by Elder M. H. Bond.

BEAN.—Near Independence, Missouri, August 13, 1895, Bro. Ole O. Bean. Deceased was born near the city of Dramman, Norway, May 26, 1845. He, in company with his parents, came to America in 1859. He was piously raised, and thus a good foundation was laid for after usefulness in the church. He enlisted in the army in 1864, joining Company I., 53d regiment of Illinois, western infantry, served honorably his now adopted country in her hour of peril, under Captain Stephen Cooper, receiving an honorable discharge July 22, 1865. In 1867 he was united in marriage to Anna Johnson, at Dixon, Illinois. In 1868 he heard and obeyed the gospel in Mission, La Salle County, Illinois, and in time was ordained a priest. He lived a faithful member of the church, frequently deploring his weakness, confessing he was not strong, humbly seeking the source of all light and strength to help him overcome. A pattern of humility, an earnest worker in the church, it can truly be said of him he died with the gospel harness on. Those who attended afternoon meetings on Sundays heard his voice in prayer and testimony. The last Sunday he was permitted to live he offered prayer and bore his testimony to the good the gospel was able to do for man. His last night on earth was spent in the line of his ministerial duty in visiting the families of the Saints, praying with and exhorting them to faithfulness in the discharge of their duties. So has passed away from earth life a loving and kind husband, a tender father, a faithful member and officer of the church. He leaves behind him to mourn his untimely taking off a wife, two sons, and three daughters, his father, mother, five sisters, and four brothers, besides those Saints who love the children of God everywhere. Of him it may be truly said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." Funeral sermon at the Saints' church, August 15, 1895, by Elder J. A. Robinson, assisted by Elders G. E. Harrington and W. T. Bozarth, six of his coworkers, priests of the Independence branch, acting as pallbearers.

Swiftly in the early morning,

Came an angel to the gate;

Whispered softly, "Come, dear Father,

Come with me and do not wait.

"You have filled your earthly mission,

Heaven is ready now for you;

Jesus calls, and now is waiting,

With his blessing kind and true."

Then our father, who was weary

Of the care, and pain, and night,

Placed his hand within the angel's,

And his spirit took its flight.

As we gazed upon his features,

Through our sad and burning tears,

Oh! we felt that we would miss him,

Through the long and silent years.

When we gaze upon his workmen,

And upon his vacant place,

Thoughts of him come crowding o'er us,

And we miss his smiling face,

How we miss him, mother, children,

Brothers, sisters, friends, and all;

But there's comfort, we shall see him,

When death's angel shall us call.

HIGHLAND PARK NORMAL COLLEGE,
DES MOINES, IOWA.

A decision was rendered in the district court of Polk County, Iowa, August 22, 1895, that removes all doubt as to the future of Highland Park Normal College. The school is being reorganized under its old president, O. H. Longwell, and his efficient faculty, and will open this fall as usual, September 3. Those who desire to enter school this fall, need not hesitate to present themselves at the school on that date, as President Longwell says he will guarantee to give all students who come just such classes and accommodations as they want, and at the usual low rate of expense. It should be remembered that in addition to the classes usually found in Normal Schools, that this school maintains departments of Pharmacy, Music, Special Training for Primary Teachers, and the best Business College and Pen Art School in the country. All friends of true education will rejoice that Highland Park Normal College has come out of its trouble a solid and substantial institution.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

BY LUCY SMITH.

This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter-day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE FOUNDER OF CHRISTIANITY.

(Concluded.)

(THE following matter was omitted from the article named, published on the HERALD cover. It should follow the matter in the issue of September 4 and precede that of the 11th. We supply it that the excellent article be given our readers entire.—ED.)

His doctrine and miracles were sealed by the purest and holiest life in private and public. He could challenge his bitterest opponents with the question: "Which of you convicteth me of sin?" well knowing that they could not point to a single spot.

At last he completed his active obedience by the passive obedience of suffering in cheerful resignation to the holy will of God. Hated and persecuted by the Jewish hierarchy, betrayed into their hands by Judas, accused by false witnesses, condemned by the Sanhedrin, rejected by the people, denied by Peter, but declared innocent by the representative of the Roman law and justice, surrounded by his weeping mother and faithful disciples, revealing in those dark hours by word and silence the gentleness of a lamb and the dignity of a God, praying for his murderers, dispensing to the penitent thief a place in paradise, committing his soul to his heavenly Father, he died, with the exclamation:

"It is finished!" He died before he had reached the prime of manhood. The Savior of the world a youth! He died the shameful death of the cross, the just for the unjust, the innocent for the guilty, a free self-sacrifice of infinite love, to reconcile the world unto God. He conquered sin and death on their own ground, and thus redeemed and sanctified all who are willing to accept his benefits and to follow his example. He instituted the Lord's Supper, to perpetuate the memory of his death and the cleansing and atoning power of his blood till the end of time.

The third day he rose from the grave, the conqueror of death and hell, the prince of life and resurrection. He repeatedly appeared to his disciples; he commissioned them to preach the gospel of the resurrection to every creature; he took possession of his heavenly throne, and by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit he established the church, which he has ever since protected, nourished, and comforted, and with which he has promised to abide, till he shall come again in glory to judge the quick and the dead.

This is a meagre outline of the story which the evangelists tell us with childlike simplicity, and yet with more general and lasting effect than could be produced by the highest art of historical composition. They modestly abstained from adding their own impressions to the record of the words and acts of the Master whose "glory they beheld, the glory as of the only-begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth."—Schaff's History Christian Church.

CATHOLIC BAPTISM.

THE present form of administering baptism in the church of Rome is as follows:—

When a child is to be baptized the persons who bring it wait at the door of the church for the priest, who comes thither in his surplice and his purple stole [a narrow ribbon hanging across both shoulders] surrounded by his clerks. He begins by questioning the godfather, whether they promise in the child's name to live and die in the true Catholic and apostolic faith; and what name they would give to the child. Then follows an exhortation to the sponsors, after which the priest, calling the child by its name, asks, "What dost thou demand of the church?" The godfather answers, "Eternal life." The priest proceeds, "If thou art desirous of obtaining eternal life, keep God's commandments, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," etc.; after which he breathes three times in the child's face, saying, "Come out of this child, thou evil spirit, and make room for the Holy Ghost." Then he makes the sign of the cross on the child's forehead and breast, saying, "Receive the sign of the cross on thy forehead and in thy heart;" upon which, taking off his cap, he repeats a short prayer, and, laying his hand gently on the child's head, repeats a second prayer: then he blesses some salt, and putting a little of it into the child's mouth, he says, "Receive the salt of wisdom." All this is performed at the church door. Afterwards, the priest, with the godfathers and godmothers, come into the church, and advancing towards the font repeat the Apostles' Creed and the Lord's Prayer. Arrived at the font, the priest again exorcises the evil spirit, and taking a little of his own spittle, with the thumb of his right hand rubs it on the child's ears and nostrils, repeating as he touches the right ear, the same word, Ephphatha, "be thou opened," which our Savior made use of to the man born deaf and dumb. Lastly they pull off its swaddling clothes or strip it below shoulders, during which the priest prepares the oil. The sponsors then hold the child directly over the font, observing to turn it due east and west; whereupon the priest asks the child whether he renounces the Devil and all his works, and the godfather having answered in the affirmative, the priest anoints the child between the shoulders in the form of a cross; then taking some of the consecrated water, he pours part of it thrice on the child's head, at each perfusion calling on one of the persons of the Holy Trinity. The priest then concludes the ceremony of baptism with an exhortation. It may be added that the Roman church allows midwives in case of danger, to baptize a child before the birth is completed. A still-born child thus baptized may be buried in consecrated ground.—Encyclopedia Britannica.

THE NEWLY DISCOVERED EGYPTIAN RACE.

THE discovery of evidences of a hitherto unknown race in Egyptian history, having a different origin and different civilization from that of the Egyptians proper, has already been alluded to in this department. During the session of the recent geographical congress in London, Professor Petrie, the discoverer of this race, invited the members to view his wonderful collection of antiquities exhibiting their state of civilization. We quote below an account of this collection contributed by Dr. D. G. Brinton to Science, August 23:—

“They [the antiquities in the collection] may well be called ‘extraordinary,’ as they introduce an entirely new element into the history of ancient Egypt, proving the presence on the Nile ‘of a fresh and hitherto unsuspected race, who had nothing of the Egyptian civilization,’ to quote Professor Petrie’s words. Not that they were uncivilized. Far from it. Their culture was in some respects superior to that of the Egyptians of their age; but it was wholly independent of it, developed in another center, under an entirely different inspiration and technique, proving it the product of another ethnic group.

“These intruders overthrew the great civilization of Egypt at the close of the sixth dynasty, and were in turn overthrown by the rise of the eleventh dynasty at Thebes. In the current chronology this would place them from 3300 to 2800 B. C. They completely expelled or destroyed the former inhabitants for more than a hundred miles along the Nile Valley in the district situated between Gebelen and Abydos. How thoroughly they extirpated their predecessors in this region may be judged by the fact that, in opening two thousand of their graves and examining several of their town sites, not a single Egyptian object was found. Nor did they care to learn any Egyptian art; for tho they worked extensively and skillfully in clay, all their vessels are made by hand, and they refused to adopt the potter’s wheel, which was then and long before familiar to the Egyptians. They brought with them a culture belonging to the highest neolithic type. I have never seen in any other collection flint implements of equal finish or so graceful in outline. Beautifully polished beads and small ornaments of cornelian, amethyst, turquoise, garnet, and other hard stones were found in abundance. Stone vases were shown in great variety and of graceful outlines.

“The decorative designs are often elaborate, some in conventional lines, spirals, and network, some representing boats, birds, trees, and human beings. Animal designs in relief are portrayed with artistic consciousness.

“Of metals, copper was the only one in frequent use. Adzes, needles, harpoons, and daggers were manufactured from it.

“Their mode of interment was altogether unknown to the Egyptians. The bodies were buried in the gravel, not in rock tombs. The graves were square pits, and the corpse was laid in a contracted position with the head to the south and the face to the west. The custom of incineration did not prevail; but there are signs of funereal human sacrifices, and apparently of cannibalism.

“It is not likely that they shared the Egyptian’s skill in architecture. Two of their towns which were examined showed remains of structures of mud brick of small size.

“What were the ethnic relations of these mysterious invaders, this ‘new race,’ as Professor Petrie called them?

“In the interesting address which he made to us on the occasion of our visit, he expressed himself cautiously but with a positive conviction. From numerous analogies of culture, of cranial forms, of geographical position, of historic references, he had been led to the conviction that they belonged to the Berber or Libyan groups, that vast ethnic stock which occupied the whole of North Africa, west of the Nile Valley, above the Sudan. His arguments seemed to myself and others quite sufficient, at least in the present stage of the investigation.

“What is especially noteworthy is the fact that civilization was highest on their arrival. Later it degenerated, and finally became absorbed in the Egyptian. Therefore if Professor Petrie is right in his identification, we must credit to the Numidian Libyan tribes of the fourth millennium B. C. a culture of native growth higher in many respects (though inferior in others) to that of the Egyptians who were their contemporaries.

“Of the many and brilliant discoveries we owe to the indefatigable zeal of Professor Petrie, this last, of which I give this cursory account, is perhaps the most important for the history and ethnography of the Nile Valley and Northern Africa.”—Literary Digest.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Do not always live in complete harmony. This is due to imperfect knowledge of themselves and each other. The sensitive nature of one is not appreciated or considered by the other who is stronger and more robust. Pride and independence coming from large Self-esteem are lost sight of, and impossible readiness in yielding is expected. The desire for approval coming from large Approbativeness is not understood, and it is withheld. People think they know each other, but Phrenology will open doors undiscovered and let in new light, thereby producing much more of harmony and perfect love.

Is anything more important than conjugal happiness? Not only are the feelings of husbands and wives involved, but the effects extend to all posterity.

Special Consultations with the examiner at the Phrenological Parlors of the FOWLER & WELLS CO., 27 East 21st Street, have many times resulted in a new and better understanding. 18 Sep. 8t.

AN ITEM OF BUSINESS.

BRO. HENRY SPARLING sends the following from Mountain Grove, Missouri, September 2, to Bro. Criley, the Business Manager:—

Your circular addressed to me at Pomona, Missouri, received. I do see the necessity of being more careful. I have sold many books and trusted the Saints and the hard times coming on have prevented them from paying up, and for that reason I have run behind in my account with the Herald Office; but the prospect for good crops is flattering and I do believe I shall soon be able to settle up with you, and not only settle up back accounts but sell many more books, etc.

I am much interested in our Publishing Department and I shall ever try and do all I can in its behalf. Will you please publish a short notice for me in regard to some I have sold books to and now have moved away from this part and I have no knowledge of their whereabouts. I shall make and I am making a hard struggle to pay up this fall. With success to your noble cause, I remain,

HENRY SPARLING.

It is desired that others of the elders who stand in similar relationship to the Herald Office will do as Bro. Sparling is doing—make an earnest effort to collect and remit amounts due them by the Saints and due the office from them, that old accounts be settled up at an early day, as from necessity they must be. It is also earnestly desired that elders in the field remember the interests of the publishing department and see that the Saints are given ample opportunity to buy the church books and subscribe for the church papers.

IT IS SUGGESTED.

It is difficult for a writer for the Saints to read after to so word his thoughts that some one of the many critical minded will not find a phrase or a sentence which may be construed offensively, or be made the subject of adverse mention.

It will be seen from Bro. H. L. Holt's letter, that the editor penned a phrase regarding the coming men in the missionary field taking ground over which to labor, outside of branches or what may be termed "new fields;" and makes one suggestion that the thought uttered by another, might be taken into consideration by the "rising, coming man" with profit, to be a reflection upon those already up and in the field.

We have no apology to offer for the words we wrote, nor are we responsible for the application others may make of them; as we wrote in all candor, and without a hurtful thought of any.

There are many rising young men engaging in the work here and there, and if they, any of them are to become leaders in their time, it will be profitable for them to carefully weigh the methods of those in the field, and if those methods can be improved upon, let the improvement be made. There is a constant cry from new fields for laborers. Many of the elders are busily engaged in looking after those already in the fold, as they deem it wise to do; this according to their sense of duty. It is no censure on such men to suggest that the rising man shall push his missionary efforts into the new and ripe fields of labor where success almost surely waits for such enterprise. However, Bro. Holt's suggestion that all should alike profit by the command given is good, and may produce good results. We hope so.

TO DEBATERS, PREACHERS, AND CHURCHES.

I HAVE spent several hundred dollars, and months of time, in investigating Mormonism. This is well known to our brotherhood. As a result I am written to nearly every month by some one to post him upon Mormonism, for a debate or course of sermons, and to send to him my books, papers, and documents.

If I had done all that I have been requested to do in this line during two years past, it would have taken my entire time, ten hours each day, for more than a month, and books that have cost me hundreds of dollars would be scattered and most of them lost. To answer even briefly such requests has cost me time, stationery, and postage.

If brethren rush into what they are not qualified to do, or if churches select men unqualified to do such work, I do not see how, nor why it becomes my duty to give such persons my time, knowledge, and books, that have cost me hundreds of dollars, and months of hard labor, nor spend my time and labor in doing it. I ask to be relieved from such requests.—Clark Braden in Christian Evangelist, August 15, '95.

What is true of Mr. Braden is true of others. Brethren who are not posted agree to enter into discussion with champions of heresy, and then expect the editor to furnish them with books and arguments that have required hundreds of dollars of expense and years of study, all free!!!

The foregoing is from the American Baptist Flag, published by "Dr." D. B. Ray, at St. Louis, Missouri.

It appears from Mr. Braden's admonition to his brethren that many who undertake to overthrow the faith of the Saints by meeting the elders in discussion, or by public lectures, rely upon Bro. Braden for their ammunition and adopt his methods of warfare; a practice in which they confess their inability to meet our representatives upon a Bible platform, hence must resort to other and confessedly unprincipled methods; for some of the Campbellite people and thousands of others condemn Clark Braden's work against the Saints.

When Mr. Braden first entered into discussion with Bro. E. L. Kelley he advertised far and wide the approaching demise of Mormonism and proclaimed with a great flourish of trumpets the masterly service he was rendering Christianity in so doing, not failing to advertise the book he was about to publish, hoping to realize a rich financial harvest from the sale of it. The plot of Mr. Braden and the methods resorted to in trying to carry it out are well known. He did spend much money and time, and we must say did prove himself to be the most capable and thorough antagonist the elders have had to meet; but results have always been in favor of the truth, and so markedly in its favor that now we seldom hear of Clark Braden; for committing himself to the work of annihilating Mormonism, and suffering repeated and ignominious defeats, he is practically a man without occupation.

Mr. Braden intimates that his brethren must compensate him for his services to them. Whether his warning against brethren rushing into discussions with the Saints is a testimonial to the strength of their position or an advertisement cunningly arranged to bring him shekels for his hire, the reader must judge. We know that whereas other societies, willing to down the Saints at any cost and by any means, formerly employed Mr. Braden to lecture and debate, they now have evidently seen the futility of so doing, and Mr. Braden's revenue from that source is again cut off.

The closing paragraph of the clipping is from Dr. Ray, editor of the Baptist "Flag,"—formerly known as the American Baptist, but whether changed from financial considerations or not, as we have reason to suspect, we cannot say. However, Dr. Ray was a one-time opponent of the Saints, but after a public discussion with Bro. E. L. Kelley at Lee's Summit, Missouri, and a few feeble efforts afterwards, suddenly subsided, and renewed his attacks upon the Roman Catholics, evidently because there was more money in it. But, it seems, Dr. Ray is also willing to extend his palm against "the champions of heresy" for financial compensation, but only if the fighting is to be done through his paper and by his pen, we believe, or at a safe distance, in the form of "lectures against Mormonism;" for after lecturing near Lamoni he refused to meet any of the elders in open discussion and also failed to keep a promise to lecture before the Saints at Lamoni. Such are some of the leading opponents of the church who pose before the orthodox world as "defenders of the faith" and are urged on, though quietly, by ministers who would not openly employ them.

"Perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds" were what the apostles of old had to meet and what men of God are meeting to-day. The truth is they know nothing of the faith of the Saints, but have collected, classified, and employed every available falsehood written by enemies of the Saints. The fact that defeat has followed their efforts; that nothing could be brought forward in opposition to the work but what has been successfully refuted; stands in evidence in support of the manifest correctness and impregnable character of the faith of the Saints.

There have been compensations to the church from all this opposition invented by and urged on by Satan himself. The truth has been brought out, emphasized, its character made apparent and more widely disseminated among the people. Our representatives have also learned the better to defend it, the more carefully to study it and take positions in its advocacy and defense. So that neither Elder Braden nor Dr. Ray have done more than to make plain the truth of the Savior's statement that one could do nothing against the truth, but "for the truth;" for after all, evil and evil doing are not permanent, but only serve to show the permanency, the stability, the eternal, abiding character of truth. Error and imperfection are not lasting. Only truth remains, and conquers, and abides. It is always strong. It must necessarily surmount all that stands in the way of its progress. He who opposes it must in due time suffer the consequences of standing in a wrong position.

It is to be regretted that men should be anything but vessels of "honor." "Offenses," it seems, "must" come; nevertheless the woe follows upon those "by whom they come."

LAMONI'S RAILROAD PROSPECTS.

LAMONI, situated on a "branch" of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad, and about three miles from Bethany Junction, Iowa, on the line running from Des Moines and Chariton to St. Joseph and Kansas City, has long been criticised by our General Conference delegates and visitors and others because of its lack of sufficient railway facilities and imperfect means of communication with the world in general. However, there now is a good prospect that all this is to be remedied and that our young city will have another railroad; in fact be touched by one of the trunk lines crossing the country from South to North.

The Northern Connecting Line, to extend from the Gulf of Mexico via Kansas City to Des Moines and Minneapolis, has made a proposition to run its line from Plattsburg through Pattonsburg, Bethany, and Eagleville, in Missouri, and Lamoni and Decatur City, Iowa, on condition that those towns and their immediate vicinities raise the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars; and to have the road in operation by January 1, 1897. Committees from each of the towns named have met and conferred and held consultations with the railway people, and at the present time prospects seem very favorable for securing the road.

Public meetings have been held in all the places named from which we learn that the citizens are practically a unit in favor of raising the amount apportioned to each.

Committees are at work and definite results will probably be reached and known within the next thirty days.

IN EVIDENCE.

THE dispassionate testimony that men are sometimes enabled to bear to the latter-day work through the witness of the Spirit to them, though they are not directly and by act connected with the work, is comforting and encouraging to those who have identified themselves with the church. The following is from the pen of one of these; a lawyer, living in one of the towns of Central Illinois, a man evidently in the world but hardly of the world, with whom the Spirit has been dealing, leading him to the knowledge of the gospel. He says:—

After a careful examination of all the evidence I have been able to find, including the sacred Scriptures, and being convinced myself, I fully believe that all intelligent men and women will yet acknowledge that Joseph Smith, Jr., was a true prophet, and that he was led and instructed by the Spirit of God in founding Zion upon this western hemisphere and labored strictly in obedience to and in harmony with the promise made by the Holy One of Israel; and although the progress of this last heavenly dispensation may seem slow to the restless and impatient;—nevertheless, the word of God is sure and all his promises will be fulfilled. In harmony with the teachings of the Prophet Smith, and in fulfillment of the sacred Scriptures, the Spirit of God at an earlier period in the world's history inspired and led Jefferson, Franklin, Washington, and their colaborers to found our great Republic, guaranteeing religious liberty to the end that God might bring forth his strange work at a later period through his chosen prophet. The time is approaching when "I shall set my hand the second time." By reference to 2 Nephi it will be seen that this hemisphere was to be a land of liberty and no kings should be enthroned thereon, etc.; nevertheless it seems that God's people were to be afflicted by the hands of the Gentiles and yet the Gentiles are to be blessed and numbered with the chosen seed of Jacob and united with them in their inheritance in this western world. My own experience for the past fifteen years is to me proof positive that the Spirit of God, or the "Holy Ghost" is abroad in this world, and has taught me and never deceived me—its teachings are always true. I thank God with all my heart and I earnestly pray that it may continue to instruct and lead me, for I seek only the truth. I want to be right and labor with those who seek to establish righteousness. The poor benighted would-be Christian who denies the gifts of the "Holy Ghost" as enumerated by the Apostle Paul, may as well know now that he is yet in his sin and will be lost from the kingdom unless he repents in due time.

I feel that I can testify that man is immortal and if we live in obedience to the teachings of God's Holy Spirit we have an everlasting inheritance in the world beyond with all the endearments and loving companionship and tender relations of this life here intensified there. I feel assured also that if the Holy Spirit in all its supernatural office work of miraculous omnipotence and wisdom does not come and reign on the earth, then the kingdom of God will never come on the earth as it exists in heaven. But the Scriptures assure us that the kingdom of God will break in pieces all other kingdoms and be established on the earth as it is in heaven and the palace of God be in the midst of the human family.

The Holy Spirit is the great witness, and without its testimony we are in utter darkness, and he that hath the testimony of Jesus hath the Spirit of prophecy. We should all labor to build up Zion, for God is with us and we are nearing the rest and time when the pure in heart will say: "Let us go up to the House of the Lord." May God bless you and your colaborers in the great work in which you are engaged, and bring about a speedy union of scattered Israel.

James Caffall, 17 Dawson street, Manchester, England.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. STEPHEN BUTLER, of Kingfisher, Oklahoma, wishes to learn particulars concerning the death of Bro. G. W. Shute. Can some of the brethren give him the information? In a recent letter he says:—

If there is anyone acquainted with the facts relative to Bro. G. W. Shute's sickness and death we are all anxious to learn them. It seems that none of the Saints know anything about it. He left our place intending after preaching at Fairview to visit some relatives in the eastern portion of the Territory. I received a card from him about two weeks before, but have lost it. I saw the notice of his death in the Herald. When he wrote he seemed in good spirits and said he was to commence preaching at Norman the next week. We all supposed Bro. Maloney was with him, but it now appears that he knows nothing about it. It was a surprise.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp, writing from Lebanon, Oregon, to Bro. Burton, July 31:—

I am better than I have been for years. It is marvelous in my eyes, but it is so. I feel well and filled with the spirit of praise. Like David, I could call on the hills and the mountains to praise God, and the trees to clap their hands in gladness. My tongue is not able and my pen is too clumsy to write my feelings. O my heart is melted in the tenderness of love towards the Saints for their confidence and their prayers and I shall ever try to retain their esteem.

Bro. Joseph F. Burton writing from San Jose, California, August 13:—

I have been blessed many times in my ministry during the last twenty years, but never have I been so happy in my warfare, never so joyously inspired with what I imagine the beautiful Spirit of Christ is, in my work as this year; so much light, so much love of the work; so much anxiety for souls, so much peace, and the field is so widening actually; and to my mind also—paragraph 7 of 1894 revelation is fulfilling here, and I am happy.

Bro. J. T. Davis, Fanning, Kansas, September 9:—

Our "two days' meeting" at this place grew to the proportions of a good reunion and was a great success. It commenced on the 30th of August and came to a close on the night of September 8, lasting ten days. The preaching and interest were good; eleven were baptized, with good prospects for more.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. G. H. HILLIARD reports the dedication of a new church at Bay Minette, Alabama; September 8.

Bro. Joseph Chester, of Los Angeles, California, sends us a "public confession" to Saints and the world for publication, with a statement that he has renewed himself in duty and is blessed of the Lord, and exhorts all to faithfulness. We do not publish for the reason that the law requires confession to and reconciliation with offended parties only, and that not before the body in general. We note it that the brother may know his statement is not unnoticed.

Bro. J. A. Silvers reports two baptized of late by Bro. F. L. Sawley, with prospects that others will soon obey at Wheatland, Missouri.

We acknowledge receipt of a letter from Bro. A. McKenzie, Juniata, Michigan, who writes of the goodness of the Lord to him and his family in times of trial.

Bro. S. A. Rogers, residing at Simeon, Nebraska, requests some of the elders to call and preach the funeral sermon of one of his children, lately deceased.

A local society of the Sons of Zion was organized at Lamoni, Iowa, on the tenth inst., with Bro. Duncan Campbell as its presiding officer.

The HERALD readers are given an extra supply of reunion minutes in this issue; we trust, however, not greater than the demand. Brethren sending us reunion minutes would do well to omit unnecessary details, such as the hymns sung, the assisting minister, etc., etc. The officers in charge, the speakers, with a brief synopsis of main points of sermons and matters of general interest include about all our limited space permits us to publish.

Bro. S. W. Tomlinson reports continued success at Walsingham, Ontario, and vicinity. He baptized two more on the 8th inst., ten in all. Prospects good for others following.

Bro. F. A. Severy in reporting minutes of the Northern and Central California districts reunion states the outlook as good, the results of the gathering being very gratifying. Many strangers were in attendance among whom the good seed was sown.

Brn. W. R. Pickering, of Springfield, Missouri, and Ellis Short, of Standley, Indian Territory, each send $100, for college fund. Bro. William Leeka $500; Bro. Thomas Morris, of Wisconsin, $10; Bro. C. C. Nelson, Guilford, Missouri, $5; Sr. A. Walmsley, Dayton, Nevada $10; and Bro. Theodore Gerber, of Hill City, Tennessee, $1. For all these the committee are thankful, and so the fund grows. Work is progressing nicely.

Under date of September 10, Bro. Blair wrote: "Our reunion at Santa Cruz was a decided success for California. It was said to be the largest, most spiritual gathering of our people ever seen in California. Thirteen were baptized and many more near. Congregations were large, generally, and sometimes packed—notably the last Sunday. It will give renewed and decided impetus to church work. I am pressed to remain in California indefinitely."

A letter from Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, dated Leeds, England, August 29, announces his return from Iceland, where he went some time ago in answer to a call for missionary labor, but was prevented from doing anything to start the work now because of the unwise conduct of a brother there through whose representations he had gone. However, good was accomplished by the journey, in obtaining such understanding of the condition of affairs there as will doubtless result in aid of missionary effort in due time. Look out for Bro. Griffiths' letter in next issue.

[THERE is much food for earnest reflection upon the part of parents in the following article, sent us by an aged sister who is deeply interested in all home work.]

THE CHILD AND ITS RIGHTS.

WHAT is the right that you have over your child? You have no personal, no selfish rights at all over your own child. You have invited an immortal to come into your temporary keeping; and you have only the right to treat that as a reverent trust committed to you for awhile, which you are to discharge with the highest and noblest sense of responsibility which you can attain. That is your right over your child. People have had in the past an idea, and many people think still, that they have a right to use the service, the brains, the physical strength, of the child as a mere adjunct of the family, as a source of income. If a father or mother be very poor, and the child comprehends the situation, generally there need be no force to lead the child to do what it can to add to the general support. But the right of the father to compel him is a very limited one indeed, and it stops a long way short of the right to sacrifice the welfare, the future, of that life, to even this exigency.

Even for the sake of appeasing hunger in the home, I say no father, no mother, has a right to sacrifice the future of the child, so that in the years to come the child shall feel, "I have not had half an opportunity to become what was possible to me." What rights have parents in regard to exacting instant, immediate obedience on the part of children, and inflicting punishment? I think all fathers and mothers, if they will carefully look back on their lives, will confess to themselves that more than one half the time when they have quickly said yes or no to a child, it has been a matter of thoughtless impulse, instead of any deliberate judgment as to what was best for the child. Now you have no right, you have not the shadow of the shade of a right, to coerce and compel the child into the shape of your own impulses, your own vagaries, your own fancies, your own whims.

Some years ago I heard a man say, and he said it as though he were praising his father: "My father took no nonsense from his boys. If they didn't mind him at the first word, he would knock them down." I do not consider that very manly for a man; and I should consider it very mean for a brute. What right have father and mother, merely as a matter of impulse, of whim, to exact this or that, and then compel the child, at any extremity, to meet their peculiar notions? That is barbarism, not civilization. It is unworthy of men and women. You have the right only to study the nature of your child; to try to find out what is best for the child's development. And then compel that? Yes, so far as you can without injuring the child. More than that you have no right to do. But always let the child understand that it is not your whim, not your arbitrary wish, but that it is your calm and deliberate judgment as to what is best for the child. Then the child will learn to respect you, even though he may differ from you in judgment.

This matter of punishing children in the past has been carried to the extreme of barbarism; and I think that the saying attributed to Solomon—but that Solomon could never have been the author of, if he was half as wise as he was reputed—"Spare the rod, and spoil the child," has been the cause of no end of child abuse and of unhappy homes. I believe that you should rather reverse the saying. A thousand times more children have been spoiled, ruined, by the rod than have ever been ruined by the lack of it. You have no right to punish a child merely because you feel like it. And here again most fathers and mothers will confess that they have been in the habit of punishing children under the impulse of anger, out of personal spite; not as the result of the calm, deliberate judgment that they were doing the child a service, that they were helping the child to be what he ought to be. The answer of the boy to his father is pertinent here; and the solemnity of the meaning will be none the less if you smile. "Johnny," said the father, "do you know why I am going to whip you?" expecting, of course, a confession on the part of the child of the particular dereliction which he had been guilty of. But the boy replied: "Yes, father, I know; it is because you are bigger than I am." That is generally the reason. You have no rights of this sort. You have only the right to train the child by love, by force if must be, but to train the child into the noblest and highest ideals of right; to let the child feel that you are the servant of that which is highest and noblest in you, and that the one thing you are to do is to cultivate and develop that in him. There is one other right which is often claimed which I wish emphatically to deny. There are young men and women whom fathers and mothers never allow to grow up—whose lives are absorbed by the selfishness of parental love. I know cases where the mother would stand square in the way of her boy's best future out of what she calls love, but which, if you analyze it, is only a clinging, whining kind of selfishness, which could not bear the boy out of sight; a jealousy of any other love which the boy might cherish. There is no love about it. It is the veriest selfishness when it comes to the point of sacrificing the welfare of the boy to this desire to see him forever by his mother's side.

Then, I have known cases of young women. Because the father or mother wanted them in the home, because they wanted their service, these parents would stand in the way of the grandest right that is before the footsteps of any young woman: the right to love, the right to motherhood, the right to a home, the right to the unfolding of that which is divinest and highest in her. Do not dare to claim this sort of selfish absorption of the lives of your children as a parental right. It is not a right, but a wrong. What, then, is the outcome? The one thing for father and mother to do is to make themselves needless just as early as possible. We do not know how long we shall be here. We need to make the boys and girls self-centered, independent, masters of themselves, masters of their surroundings, competent to deal with the practical affairs of the world, competent to choose the right and refuse the wrong, competent to walk alone or to choose their companions. We need not to get rid of them. If we bind them by the bands of love, they will stay by as long as they can; but if you bind them by any other bonds, they will snap them as soon as they are able. A healthy body, a sane mind, ability to earn one's own living, a knowledge of right and wrong, possession of a key to unlock the storehouse of the inherited wealth of the world, love for father and mother, that shall be deathless, a happy memory of a happy childhood, the ideal of a manhood that makes service of one's age the noblest thing to be dreamed of, a consecration to the highest ideal of God, trust in him, a faith that can walk serenely out into the dark, a manhood, a womanhood self-poised, independent, able to walk alone—is not that the ideal? That is the right of every child; and the only right that you have over the child is the right of bestowing this.—The Arena.

Letter Department.

NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 31.

Editors Herald:—We concluded the effort in the tent in Philadelphia, July 7. We were assisted by Bro. George Robley and local brethren with Bro. Wattez as watchman. We delivered thirty-three sermons and held six prayer meetings with fair interest. Some of the good people took such a liking to us they thought we ought to stay all summer not recognizing the fact that there were others who had a claim upon our time and talent. However, with due respect to those who thought otherwise the tent was packed and shipped to Broad River, Connecticut, necessitating the borrowing of ten dollars to meet the expense of the move. Yet we pray, "Lord send more laborers into the vineyard." It seems to the writer that ere more are sent there ought to be an adherence to the revelation which says, "It is my will that ye more fully honor and pay heed to the voice and counsel of the traveling ministry in spiritual things; which if ye do not, the office which they hold is not honored in my service, and the good they should do is made void."—D. C. 118: 3.

It is generally conceded that those whom the powers that be appoint in charge ought to know best as to what move would best serve the interest of the cause we have in hand, hence if we live in harmony with the above we should "pay heed to the voice and counsel," unless we find they are departing from the truth in doctrine; then there is a proper way to reach the case according to law. However these experiences come, if we can only make them beneficial to all concerned, it is good.

I began work in tent at Broad River, Connecticut, July 14, assisted by Bro. Squires, of Brooklyn, New York. Brn. Robley and Wattez came on the 16th and rendered valuable assistance. The Saints of Brooklyn spent the 28th and 29th with us; the afternoon of the 29th was enjoyed by all in a Sunday school picnic with the Saints' school of that place. Those who ought to know say it was the best time ever had in these parts. The meetings continued; Brn. Robley and Wattez leaving, the first for home, the latter for the city of brotherly love. Hence Bro. George Potts was installed as second mate for a season.

After delivering twenty-five discourses with the assistance of these brethren and one sermon in the Methodist church of West Norwalk, we moved to New Canaan where I was left alone again so far as ministerial help was concerned. Here I enjoyed the quietest time ever had with the tent, I was not disturbed during my stay. Quite an interest was created, and after delivering eighteen sermons, I moved the tent to its present location, city of Norwalk. Sunday, the 25th inst., I led five adults, all from New Canaan, into Silver Lake and buried them in the waters of baptism, about one hundred witnessing the baptism. The following Friday I baptized a young lady of Broad River in the same lake; I had baptized her father on my arrival here with tent, making seven in all baptized since coming here. Others are near and it is only a question of time when they too will come. A better class I have never met than the people in these parts, many who are yet outside manifesting the spirit of genuine gospel believers. "By this you may know my disciples." By what? "The same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money."—D. C. 83: 16. These people at Broad River asked as to my expense getting there and what was lacking was made up, hence let the Lord be praised. No preventing providence we move, the first of the week, to Brooklyn, New York, by request of the Saints there.

September 28, the tent is booked for Baldwin, Maryland, where the district conference will convene Monday night. I was called by telegram to Baldwin to administer to Sr. Katie Seth, upon whom the good Father above smiled and blessed, hence she is getting around; so they write. While there I baptized Miss Sallie Moore at 9:30 p. m.; rather a late hour, yet witnessed by about twenty. While absent Bro. Wattez occupied the pulpit, feeling that his heavenly Father remembered him in his weakness and gave strength for the hour. So the good work moves along.

I should have said ere this, that on the 16th I was discharged as cook and Mrs. A. H. Parsons, of Philadelphia, was installed instead; no bachelor's camp around these parts nowadays. It was wisdom in him who doeth all things well to thus give a helpmate, one who can give the tender touches to the daily toils of the weary yet stronger confraternity.

May their true worth ever be appreciated as the gospel work breaks the clouds of ignorance and reveals the true merit of the weaker vessels. I feel like saying to the sisterhood who are taking such an interest in building up character and all that appertains to morality and virtue, God speed you in the good work.

Hopefully,
A. H. PARSONS.

HITEMAN, Iowa, Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—I came here on the 31st, and closed meetings last evening. The attendance was only fair; order and attention excellent. I made two trips to the Cedar and baptized five.

The Saints without my knowledge or consent gathered at the home of Bro. J. W. Loach, immediately after the close of the meeting. Refreshments were served. Talk upon gospel work was sandwiched with the sweet songs of Zion. Order was called and J. W. Loach, president of the Hiteman branch, in a neat little speech presented the undersigned with a beautiful Oxford Bible as a token of respect, also a copy of Orson Spencer's Letters. These acts of kindness toward a gospeler fix in memory a green spot in the wilderness of trial and travel. Two years ago four weak Saints held their weekly prayer meeting, now forty happy Saints rejoice in their own new chapel.

In bonds,
ROBT. M. ELVIN.

AVARUA, Rarctonga, July 7.

Editors Herald:—We—myself and wife—came here from Papeete, arriving June 12. This island is one of the Friendly group and is about six hundred miles from Tahiti. This is not a large group, but is quite densely populated, much more so in proportion to the area than the Society Isles. The natives are friendly, as the name of the islands would indicate. Almost all of them were Christianized by the Episcopal Church of England, some eighty years ago. Now they are still members of that church, which is represented here, by one white missionary only. Many of the natives are preachers also. The foreign missionary has things arranged nicely for himself. The mission made the laws which govern the islands, imposing a system of fines for different offenses, which, as they all slip into the missionary's pocket, net him a good yearly income of several thousand dollars.

Up to last September they had no opposition from any other church. Then the Adventists came, but as yet have made no converts. Three months ago the Catholics arrived, and have now sixty proselytes. The last arrivals were ourselves, and we are now busily engaged in trying to present the true gospel to the people, who seem anxious to hear. I think there is a prospect of good being done. Most of the natives understand the Tahitian language quite well, and many of them can talk quite a little English. I have preached several times, using the Tahitian language, and rejoice to say that the Lord blessed me with his Spirit in my attempts.

At our service last evening our house and veranda were crowded with people, and the chief native of the island was present. He is in reality the Governor, the English resident being simply a figurehead. This native speaks English quite freely, and at the close of the service began asking questions concerning the church. When told that we had heard people speak in tongues, the sick healed, etc., he grew very much excited and interested, and eagerly interpreted to those around him who had not understood the English. For several minutes we talked rapidly, telling him the story of the founding of the church, all of which he interpreted to the others. We were glad of this little opportunity, as we cannot use the Tahitian freely enough to explain as we would wish, and no interpreter is to be had here.

Our health is rather better than when we were in Papeete as this climate is much cooler. My wife is a very poor sailor and suffers much when on the sea. Earnestly desiring an interest in your prayers,

Your brother,
HUBERT CASE.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—In Herald of July 31, Bro Kelley is quoted as saying: "So hard to get men that will go right out among strangers and plant the work, stick to it, and make it a success." Your comment is, "This is a suggestion that rising, coming men will do well to take into consideration." Why make this special reference to coming men, to rising ones? Is the editor afraid to counsel those already up, or is there no need to counsel them?

The Lord seemed to think there was, for in the revelation of 1894 he commands all the missionaries to go out, outside of branches, and that would take them among strangers, which it is supposed would be such an excellent place for coming, rising men to go to. Men will follow their leaders usually; if the present leaders are leading out into new fields as commanded, the editor need have little fear but that the rising men will follow; and if they are not, then make the suggestion read, this is a suggestion that all the missionary force will do well to take into consideration, and then we will take courage, believing that the editor thinks all should bear their part in this work.

Yours desiring the good of all,
HIRAM L. HOLT.

MOORHEAD, Iowa, Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—In answer to Bro. A. J. Moore and others of the Texas mission, I wish to say that I was on my way there when I was taken sick and came home instead. As soon as I feel strong enough to endure the fatigue of field duty I expect to resume active work. In the meantime any communication addressed to me at Moorhead, Iowa, will find prompt attention. Should have made this answer sooner, but have not been strong enough to write. With a desire for an interest in your prayers and a kindly greeting for all, I remain, in hope of final triumph,

Your brother,
GEORGE MONTAGUE.

NEW SOUTH WALES, Aus., Aug. 1.

Editors Herald:—With reference to Bro. C. S. McLaren's letter in your issue of May 29, I desire to say that if my letter of January 10 in any way conveyed the idea that the "two branches" were in collusion, in binding their delegates, I kindly ask their forgiveness, as no such charge was intended. By reading my letter I see that I charge them with "mistakes" only (in binding delegates), which would hardly imply "collusion," so I think.

That the branches acted "in good faith and with pure motives," as the brother says, I never doubted, neither was I referring to "good faith and motives," etc., but to actions involving a principle of the law of the church. Here is my advice: "Branches should not bind delegates to vote for or against, only in matters of grave importance affecting the faith of the church."—Book of Rules, page 161.

If my advice was out of harmony with the letter and spirit of the law, I would have been pleased if it had been pointed out by reference to the law. Since the conference I have learned that the district president wrote the various branches, prior to the convening of conference, pointing out this very thing: "not to bind delegates, but to give them discretionary power;" but it seems that the advice was "accounted as a light thing," and hence the trouble at conference.

With reference to choosing the place of next conference the brother says, "It was considered that according to the usual method of rotation the Nambucca branch was entitled to first consideration in the matter." This is a mistake, for "according to rotation" the Hamilton branch should have had first consideration. Nambucca branch has had conference and the Hamilton branch has not. However I am not an advocate of the "usual method of rotation," but believe that the conference should be held where it will best serve the interests of the work.

Again, the brother says, "A resolution was passed on the show of hands, deciding to settle the much vexed question by the individual vote of those present, and it was accordingly disposed of." Now I positively deny that there was any such resolution passed at the conference. Evidently the resolution that the brother refers to was one made by the writer, "that the matter be settled by ordinary vote of the delegates and officers present."

Before this resolution was voted on the writer read and explained repeatedly from Book of Rules, that the yeas and nays, or full delegate vote, could not be taken unless three members of conference would arise and call for them. Also that none could vote but delegates and officers, at any time, for so I understood the Book of Rules and so I explained, being called upon to do so by the chairman. But the explanation seemed to be considered irregular in both cases, for no one called for the yeas and nays as the law provides, and when the vote was taken instead of delegates and officers only voting (as I then supposed), some who were neither delegates nor officers voted. So I have been informed since. This of course was wrong.

Now the conference has been charged in the Herald with "prohibiting the delegate vote," etc., and that repeatedly, when the facts in the case are that they (the delegates) prohibited it themselves by not calling for the yeas and nays, as the law provides, and as was explained to them before from Book of Rules.

When there are irregularities in the government of Christ's church on earth there must be a cause for it. Now, can we locate the cause of the trouble at the last conference? Let us see! First, the instruction of the district president to "not bind delegates but give them discretionary power" was ignored by some branches in the district, which caused the first discord at the conference at Sydney. Second, the explanation that three must call for the yeas and nays before they can be taken was passed by unheeded. Third, the instruction that none but delegates and officers could vote was ignored.

What did the Lord mean by this: "It is my will that ye more fully honor and pay heed to the voice and counsel of the traveling ministry in spiritual things; which if ye do not, the office which they hold is not honored in my service, and the good they should do is made void."—D. C. 117: 3? If the brethren had proceeded in the light of this instruction there would have been no irregularities at the Sydney district conference last December.

I have no enmity against any of the brethren for I love them all, and it is only with the desire to honor and maintain the dignity of the law of the church that I pen these lines, and if I am wrong I shall be pleased to be corrected, for I desire to be in harmony with the letter and spirit of the law as commonly accepted by the church.

Had the conference denied the delegates their representative vote, after three of them demanded the yeas and nays by such a resolution as the brother mentions, there might be some justice in charging the conference with "enacting inconsistencies" and "strange procedures," etc. But in the light of facts as they really occurred, the brother's letter is very unfortunately worded indeed, in many places.

Bro. Gomer Wells and I have been laboring separately this year, he in Sydney, and I from Sydney to Nambucca. Our labors have not been altogether fruitless as we have baptized thirty-eight since February 9. May our loving Father in heaven richly bless all his people so they may see the great necessity of laboring unitedly to bring the gospel to all the honest in every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. In hope,

JOHN KALER.

PORCUPINE, Wis., August, 27.

Editors Herald:—Sunday last was another day of victory in these parts, this time at Ono, Pierce County. Quite a number of Saints from Porcupine and friends of Ono, went to the beautiful Rush River where I buried six beneath the crystal waves, in the name of the Lord; the foundation work, I hope, of a splendid branch in the near future, also of another new church.

This is the place, you remember, where old Liberty Hall came into existence so like magic, because of the tyranny of sectarians. This has been a hard battle ground. The power of darkness has yielded slowly. It is in the very heart of Northwest Wisconsin Methodists. I was here at their camp meeting last June; got into a chat with their presiding elder; was told, I was a hypocrite and all our people; that Joseph Smith was a lawless, bad man; that I was breaking up the Methodist Church in these parts; had done so in Pepin County and would do so here; wished I would go away and let Methodists alone. He said he had been requested to lecture against us in different places. I extended the invitation, thanked him for his civil treatment, and hoped some day he might get into the kingdom of God and make a good citizen.

The Lord is surely with us up here; we have baptized fifteen in the last month, all uniting with the Frankfort branch at Porcupine. My health is on the improve. I preach every Sunday in good orthodox style; am glad I can do even that much.

Your brother,
H. P. CURTIS.

WHY I AM A "JOSEPHITE."—No. 1.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

SANCTIFY the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear.—1 Peter 3: 15.

Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves.—2 Corinthians 13: 5.

In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.—1 Corinthians 13: 1.

In giving reasons for our faith, especially for our religious faith, we must have a standard of evidence; and inasmuch as these pages are for those who style themselves Latter Day Saints, we are peculiarly blessed with standards, having the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, all claiming to be divine, and all believed in by every true Latter Day Saint as being equal in authority in matters of religious faith. But as there seems to be some difference of opinion as to what extent they are to be used in evidence, I shall let the books themselves decide. God himself seems to have laid down the rule as quoted.

In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.—Matt. 18. 16.

(See also Deuteronomy 17: 6; 19: 15.)

I shall quote from the three books, believing them to have been given for that especial purpose; viz., to be three witnesses for God. I shall also, so far as practicable, quote from two to three or more passages from each witness upon the question before us.

First, then, as to our foundation; I quote this:—

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.—Isaiah 8: 20.

This is a familiar quotation to all Latter Day Saints, and has been, especially to the ministry, from 1830 to the present time, let them be of whatever faction; and many have been the challenges thrown out to prove what we have to say from "the law" and "the testimony." Let us still make it the basis of our argument.

The next evidence I shall give is in Christ's own words; and surely if he adhered so tenaciously to "that which is written," we will not be led very far astray by following his example.

And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread. But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matt. 4: 3.

Here Christ set us a good example by resisting temptation with the statement, "It is written." The tempter, seeing Christ's strict adherence to "that which is written," began to quote scripture himself.

If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.—Matthew 4: 6.

Again Christ sets us a good example by showing that all scripture must be used in connection, or connectedly, when he replied:—

It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.—Matt. 4: 7.

And still the third temptation was rendered unavailing by that ever ready and unfailing source of wisdom and strength. He quoted again:—

It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.—Matt. 4: 10.

Christ also taught us that the written word was useful as a guide to salvation.

And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life? He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?—Luke 10: 25, 26.

Turning to Revelation 20: 12, I read:—

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books according to their works.

"And the books were opened." To every Latter Day Saint that means the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; and when the book of their life shall be opened and its contents compare favorably with what is written in the "books," they will stand approved; and if not, condemnation will be the verdict.

I now turn to the second witness, the Book of Mormon, and there I read:—

Wherefore, for this cause hath the Lord God promised unto me that these things which I write, shall be kept and preserved, and handed down unto my seed, from generation to generation, that the promise may be fulfilled unto Joseph, that his seed should never perish as long as the earth should stand. Wherefore; these things shall go from generation to generation as long as the earth shall stand; and they shall go according to the will and pleasure of God: and the nations who shall possess them, shall be judged of them according to the words which are written.—2 Nephi 11: 6.

I have emphasized some of the words in the above in order to call the reader's attention to the duration of the words of the book as a guide.

And I, Mormon, pray to God that they may be preserved from this time henceforth. And I know that they will be preserved: for there are great things written upon them, out of which my people and their brethren, shall be judged at the great and last day, according to the word of God which is written.—Words of Mormon, verse 4.

"For behold, out of the books which have been written, and which shall be written, shall this people be judged, for by them shall their works be known unto men.—Book of Nephi 13: 1.

I now examine the third witness, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:—

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.—Section 1: 7; Utah edition of 1891, section 1: 37.

Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things, shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues.—Section 42: 16; Utah edition, section 42: 59, 60.

And all they who receive the oracles of God, let them beware how they hold them, lest they are accounted as a light thing, and are brought under condemnation thereby; and stumble and fall, when the storms descend and the winds blow, and the rains descend, and beat upon their house.—Section 87: 2; Utah edition section 90: 5.

Again:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.—Section 83: 8; Utah edition section 84: 54-57.

Language could not be plainer than these passages quoted from the three books showing the necessity of abiding by what is written. And such words as, "shall be judged by them at the last day;" "they shall go forth as long as the earth shall stand;" show that we shall not outgrow them, but that they shall be a perpetual source of knowledge and wisdom, and that by them he who claims to be the servant of God, and even the spirits, and those that exhort us to seek the living to hear from the dead, shall be judged, and that "if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

Having, then, established our standard of evidence, let us briefly examine into the character of God, as to one of his attributes at least, for upon his character for unchangeableness depends our faith in him.

In the third lecture on faith in the Doctrine and Covenants this argument is used, and I think no one will deny the soundness of the reasoning:—

But it is equally as necessary that men should have the idea that he is a God who changes not, in order to have faith in him, as it is to have the idea that he is gracious and longsuffering, for without the idea of unchangeableness in the character of the Deity, doubt would take the place of faith. But with the idea that he changes not, faith lays hold upon the excellencies in his character with unshaken confidence, believing he is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and that his course is one eternal round.

Let us examine the testimony of the three records upon this vital point. The Bible.

I am the Lord, I change not.—Mal. 3: 6.

Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever.—Heb. 13: 8.

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1: 17.

Book of Mormon.

And I do this that I may prove unto many, that I am the same yesterday, to-day, and forever.—2 Nephi 12: 7.

I perceive that ye are making his paths straight, I perceive that it has been made known unto you by the testimony of his word, that he cannot walk in crooked paths; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; neither hath he a shadow of turning from the right to the left, or from that which is right to that which is wrong; therefore, his course is one eternal round.—Alma 5: 3.

For I know that God is not a partial God, neither a changeable being; but he is unchangeable from all eternity to all eternity.—Moroni 8: 3.

Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

For God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.—Section 2: 1; Utah edition 3: 2.

Listen to the voice of the Lord your God, even Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, whose course is one eternal round, the same to-day as yesterday and forever.—Section 34: 1; Utah Edition 35: 1.

Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, and rejoice ye inhabitants thereof, for the Lord is God, and besides him there is no Savior; great is his wisdom; marvelous are his ways; and the extent of his doings, none can find out; his purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand; from eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail.—Section 76: 1; Utah Edition 76: 1-4.

We have learned so far that the written word can be relied upon, for it gives no uncertain sound, speaking the same, whether it was written in the hills and vales of Judea by Christ and his apostles, or whether by the Nephites on this continent, or by him whom we as Latter Day Saints have been taught to revere as a prophet of God to usher in this the last dispensation of the gospel. We have proven, too, that God can be relied upon; that he is not changeable, neither a respecter of persons. Let us then continue our investigations; taking this for our text:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

The word of God is replete with evidences of the truthfulness of the above quotation. Almost every event of importance in God's work among the children of men is outlined in prophecy years (and in many instances thousands of years) before it transpires.

The captivity and bondage of Israel in Egypt was made known to God's prophet and foretold by him over two hundred years before they went into that land. (Genesis 15: 13.) Moses and his work in their deliverance and their being reinstated in the land of Palestine is prophesied of in Genesis 50: 26-29, Inspired Translation.

Christ, his work, sufferings, and death began to be prophesied of early. (Gen. 49: 10; Deut. 18: 18; Isa. 9: 6; 7: 14; 53: 1-12; Mic. 5: 2.)

The Book of Mormon was spoken of and the fact that a portion of Joseph's tribe should "run over the wall"—go over the sea, are all outlined in prophecy until it has been marvelous how these facts have been so long unknown. (Gen. 49: 22-26; Deut. 33: 13-17; Ps. 85: 10-13; Isa. 29: 9-24; Ezek. 37: 15-22.)

The restoration of the land of Palestine and the gospel in conjunction have their places in the sayings of the seers. (Ps. 85: 10-13; Isa. 29: 13-17; 32: 13-15; Ezek. 36: 25-28; Joel 2: 21-32; Mal. 3: 1-6; Rev. 14: 6, 7.)

The Book of Mormon speaks of various prophecies concerning Christ, of Joseph Smith, and this work. (1 Nephi 3: 3-5; 2 Nephi 2: 2; Helaman 5.)

It would weary the reader and exhaust the writer to mention all the instances where God has sustained his reputation as to making known his intentions to his servants the prophets, even to the minutest details. Suffice it to say, God has not left us without witnesses; and

We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the daystar arise in your hearts.—2 Peter 1: 19.

Now let us examine the record of God's dealings with his people in the nineteenth century, as found in the book of Doctrine and Covenants. In 1830, April 6, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized. Joseph Smith, the man who was instrumental in God's hands in establishing it, was chosen as its president and was God's mouthpiece to that church, and for fourteen years he held sway; but a calamity little dreamed of by the church suddenly came in the death of its noble leader and his brother and the church was thrown into confusion. Leaders sprang up here and there and thousands turned away entirely from the faith, just as they did in the time of Christ's crucifixion. Men began to say, Lo, here! and, lo, there! and few there were who availed themselves of that which was written. Had they done so, they would have found that as early as September, 1830, God had begun to prepare the Saints—had they understood—for the event of their leader's death. In a revelation given to Oliver Cowdery bearing the above date he says:—

But, behold, verily, verily I say unto thee, no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., for he receiveth them even as Moses; and thou shalt be obedient unto the things which I shall give unto him, even as Aaron, to declare faithfully the commandments and revelations, with power and authority unto the church. And if thou art led at any time by the Comforter to speak or teach, or at all times by the way of commandment unto the church, thou mayest do it. But thou shalt not write by way of commandment, but by wisdom; and thou shalt not command him who is at thy head, and at the head of the church, for I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations, which are sealed until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead.—D. C. section 27:2; Utah edition section 28:2-7.

Not content with this warning, the Lord did not let five months elapse before he again speaks, but more explicitly this time, and he leaves no doubt in the mind of the careful observer that he intends to appoint a successor to the prophet; and the manner and through whom he shall be appointed is clearly given.

O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand. And this ye shall know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if ye abide in me.

But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach these revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.—Section 43:1, 2; Utah edition section 43:1-7.

It does not seem possible for language to be plainer than this. The Saints are given to understand that the one who shall succeed their prophet shall be appointed by him; that although he might by transgression lose the power and gift of revelation and of giving commandments to the church, yet the power to appoint another in his stead should not be taken away; and the Lord here gives them to understand that they are not to be deceived in this matter, and that they must not receive any that come to them unless they have been so appointed. And had the Saints not treated lightly the things they had received, to that extent that they did not study them carefully, there would have been no cause for deception.

So confident had they become that the kingdom had been set up for the last time that they could not think even for a moment that it could even receive a check in its progress; and yet when we read the solemn warnings given constantly by the Lord we cannot see why they could not see the impending evil and prepare for it by a careful study of God's word.

In a letter written to William W. Phelps, dated November 27, 1832, the prophet writes that God will send "one mighty and strong" to lead the people, while he who has been chosen and appointed, while he puts forth his hand to steady the ark of God, "shall fall by the shaft of death, like as a tree that is smitten by the vivid shaft of lightning." (Mill. Star, vol. 14, page 284; Utah edition D. C. page 301.)

Again the Lord says:—

Behold I say unto you, the redemption of Zion must needs come by power; therefore I will raise up unto my people a man who shall lead them like as Moses led the children of Israel, for ye are the children of Israel, and of the seed of Abraham; and ye must needs be led out of bondage by power, and with a stretched out arm; and as your fathers were led at the first, even so shall the redemption of Zion be.—D. C. 100:3; Utah Ed. Sec. 103:15-18.

Nothing can be clearer than that one should be appointed to succeed Joseph the Seer, but if God had stopped here we would be in the dark; but, praise be to his holy name, he continues to sustain his character as One who reveals his secrets to his servants the prophets, giving us the manner in which this future president and all other presidents of the church shall be chosen. He says:—

The president of the church, who is also the president of the council, is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church; and it is according to the dignity of his office, that he should preside over the council of the church; and it is his privilege to be assisted by two other presidents, appointed after the same manner that he himself was appointed.—D. C. 99:6; Utah Ed. 102:9, 10.

This is a very important question. Come with the matter fully matured in your minds and be prepared to vote intelligently. Do not come with selfish motives, but come with the one thought in mind, that of advancing the Sunday school work. May the blessing of peace prevail at our next assembling, is the prayer of your coworker,

ALLIE THORBURN, Sec.

Stinson Jarvis in a paper called "How Evolution Evolves," contributed to the September Arena, tells some strange things about the influences of heredity, and of ideal suggestion, in determining the form and character of the unborn—in changing the type. The instances he recites of evolution in intelligence, form, etc., of individual families that have come under the observation of reputable physicians, are peculiar and suggestive, and will create considerable discussion. He vouches for their authenticity.

A STATEMENT.

BOSTON, Mass., August 21, 1895.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH; Dear Brother:—Believing in the divinity and having hope in the final triumph of the gospel we preach and the church wherein its excellencies should be revealed, I feel, as one of its leading representatives, aggrieved when aught occurs to mar the harmony of its procedure. I know of no condition within its realm that can justify (though it may provoke) impatience, or harshness of speech in its assemblies. Indulgence in these and similar unseemly things is beneath the dignity of a true Saint, or one who aspires to become one. His influence is hurt and indirectly the cause of Christ is injured thereby. The higher the official standing of the transgressor, the more extensive his influence for evil when his mistake is made. Independence of spirit and loyalty to conviction may always be admirable qualities, but they are never dependent for their exhibition upon boisterous utterance. He who believes this to be true is less excusable than others when he drops from the standard of sainthood thus confessed and preached by him.

My mortification is only intensified when I find in myself a consciousness of having offended in any of the above ways, and herein lies the reason for these lines being penned. During the last General Conference, while the subject of administering the sacrament was under discussion, in seeking to maintain a position which I then believed and now believe to be right, instead of confining my remarks within the bounds of essential argument and quiet utterance, I gave vent to impatience and a boisterous denunciation of the position I understood had been taken by another, also made an assertion of independence that had no essential bearing upon the question before us. This I deeply regret, and without any reference to provoking causes, offer to the body and to you, as its president, this expression. It is a matter of conscience with me, and I desire to keep always "a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men." Let no brother take license from my example on the occasion referred to; but learn with me the greater need to rule the human spirit and be always temperate of speech.

I had thought to reserve this announcement till our next General Conference; but impressions within me have led me to decide otherwise, and I ask that you kindly insert this in the Herald, that the entire ground of offense may be amply covered by my apology.

For six weeks past I have been laboring in this Eastern Mission, and have visited some half dozen places in Maine and a few places in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Have had quite good liberty in preaching, and the interest in most places has been good. The few laborers in these parts are active and devoted, but are not sufficient for the many demands. This field needs more workers. The reunion at Plainville, Massachusetts, was a success. The Saints were encouraged and the message of life was delivered in plainness and power. Five were baptized and confirmed, and we felt it was good to be there. I expect to put in a couple of weeks more near here, then spend a week in Toronto, Canada, on my way westward, and hope to see you at the "World's Reunion" at Logan, Iowa, if the Lord wills.

In truth's bonds,
JOSEPH LUFF.

OHIO DISTRICT REUNION.

Bro. A. B. Kirkendall having left the camp ground on the 2d, H. E. Moler was chosen secretary in his stead.

September 3.—Prayer meeting at nine a. m., in charge of C. Cooper and F. Ward. Preaching at 10:30 by A. Haws; subject, The Lord's care for the righteous. The Lord never brings a destruction upon the earth, but that he also makes provision for the safety of the righteous. The day is near at hand when the Lord will come in the clouds of heaven and we should make preparations to be among the righteous in that day. Isaiah says, "The inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left." Malachi says, "Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven," etc. Paul said, "The fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." In order to escape this destruction, we must do more than simply obey the first principles of the gospel. The first principles alone will no more give us the required education, than simply getting into the school-room and making a beginning will insure a boy an education. Everyone, in the days of Noah had the privilege of being saved from the flood. There were others besides Noah and his family that had obeyed the gospel, but they did not make preparations to avoid the flood of water. At the destruction of Sodom, the righteous were provided for in the city of Zoar. I had a vision once in which I was shown who they were that should weep and wail; they were those who had not obeyed the gospel, the foolish virgins. Not return to take our coat. How many of us, if we had a gold watch or a good suit of clothes would be willing to leave them behind and ascend to meet the Lord? How many of us could leave everything behind as did Lot? Not many, I am afraid, Haws not excepted. The places of escape provided for in the last days are Zion and Jerusalem. At 2:30, Sunday school work was conducted by Sr. Minnie Rhoads.

At eight preaching by R. Etzenhouser; subject, Bible translations compared, illustrated by a chart showing the difficulties attending translations. The old Hebrew having been written in consonants only, there being no vowels; vowels were added by translators. Sometimes it could not be told what the vowels should be, therefore the reader could not tell what was meant by the writer. By supplying different vowels different words and meanings can be made from one word.

September 4.—This day was spent in Sunday school celebration and temperance work. T. J. Beatty was in charge. I. M. Smith, R. Etzenhouser, J. L. Goodrich, F. J. Ebeling, and H. E. Moler were the speakers. Quite a crowd of people were present all day, and an enjoyable time was had. At eight p. m., Bro. I. M. Smith preached from Phil. 4:9.

September 6.—Many of the Saints left for their homes on Monday, and many more are going to-day. Social meeting at nine a. m. in charge of S. J. Jeffers. During the meeting Bro. Beatty spoke of his past experience; had seen the suffering of the ungodly, and it was more terrible than he had ever thought. He had desired to see many of these things, but after he saw them, would rather he had not seen them. All this was shown by the power of God. Preaching at 10:30 by James Moler; text, 1 John 3:3, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." The gospel is the means prepared for purifying the human soul. Man was pure in the beginning, but by transgression fell. Jesus came as the Savior and Redeemer. The atonement brings to all men the promise of salvation through the gospel. The gospel is unchangeable. Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Some claim he is the son of Joseph; but if he was he would have been under the penalty of death just the same as other men; he could not have died to save men, but as he was the Son of God he laid down his life that he might have power over death. The leading thought of the sermon was the necessity of, and how we can be pure as Christ is pure. That we must be pure before we can see God. This purifying will go on during the millennium. 2:30 p. m., preaching by W. H. Rhodes; text, 1 Peter 1:25. The word cannot be preached without the gospel. The word, or the gospel, may be divided into three parts: 1. Faith and repentance; 2. Baptism and laying on of hands; 3. Resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment. The law of Moses was typical of the law of Christ. Baptism should be applied by handling the candidate and not the water. John the Baptist's work was the baptism of water; Christ's work was the baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire. I have been asked if this fire was literal. We must remember that there are different kinds of fire. I understand that it is the fire of love. F. J. Ebeling followed with a talk on the necessity of courage, and referred to the things accomplished by Napoleon, Gallileo, Newton, and others, as examples. "Fail," "can't," and "impossible" are words that stand wonderfully in our way. The men I have mentioned knew no such words as these. No standing still in this work. Like the apple on the tree, it develops until it becomes perfectly ripe, and then it immediately begins to decay. So with us in this work. At eight p. m., preaching by R. Etzenhouser, assisted by T. J. Beatty. The speaker read Hebrews 11. Looking into the future. It is not always best to see the future. There are two reasons why we should not; one is, if we could see the good and the glory that await us we would be too anxious to arrive at that period. Another is, if we could see the sorrow and trials that await us, we would become discouraged. Each day brings enough joy or sorrow for that particular day. I do not object to a brother or sister telling of their sorrows and trials in social meetings if it is not done in a complaining or whining way. I started to climb a mountain once; at the base it seemed to be a small feat. I climbed and worked my way along, holding to roots, shrubs, and rocks for support, till I was tired out. Sitting down to rest, and looking upward, the mountain still seemed so high as to cause my contemplated task to be abandoned. It is well that we cannot see all that is before us. It is unreasonable for men to say there is no God. If they do not know, it would be more reasonable for them to say so. There are many things that exist which we know nothing of. What do we know of this world or of other worlds? Take the oak; it came from an acorn; the acorn was produced by another oak, and thus we might trace back till we must confess that there must have been a beginning. The man who does not know, should just gracefully keep still.

September 6.—Social meeting at nine a. m., in charge of I. M. Smith. Preaching at 10:30 by I. M. Smith; subject, Administration of angels. An angel appeared to Zachariah foretelling the birth of John the Baptist, and later to Mary foretelling the birth of Christ. When Christ was born numerous angels appeared to the shepherds announcing the joyful news. Angels appeared to the women at the sepulchre of Christ, and to the apostles at the ascension of Christ. An angel directed Philip where to preach, an angel appeared to Cornelius bringing a message to him, and one appeared to Peter and delivered him from prison; thus we see the angel of the Lord not only encampeth round about them that fear him, but actually deliver them from harm. An angel smote Herod because he gave not God the glory, and an angel appeared to Paul on board ship, telling him what would occur. People say there is no such thing as the visitation of angels now, but we read in Revelation 14 that an angel was to come with the gospel. They are also to gather the righteous from among the wicked, the wheat from among the tares. Thus we see that the day of visitation of angels is not past, but they shall yet minister for men and those who shall be heirs of salvation. Eight p. m., preaching by I. M. Smith; text; Matthew 16:18, "Upon this rock I will build my church." There are only two ways that a church can be builded; one would be for the builder to go among the people, present the law of the church, select officers, and build it in person. The other way would be to call and authorize men to go out and perform the work. If a firm employs an individual to represent its interests, that which he does, is as binding as though done by a member of the firm. Many parables put forth by the Savior regarding the kingdom of heaven, the sower, wheat and tares, etc., refer to the church or body of Christ. Foolish virgins. Do you think there are five foolish virgins with no oil in their vessels in heaven where God is? Then it must refer to the kingdom on earth. Some claim the kingdom is in the heart, and refer to Luke 17:21 as proof. Who was the Savior addressing? Pharisees. John called them a generation of vipers. The Savior said they were inwardly corrupt. They said Christ cast out devils by Beelzebub; but Christ said, "If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God then the kingdom of God is come unto you." Then, in the kingdom of God, only, is power found to cast out devils. Many strive to enter but shall not be able. Why? Because they do not strive lawfully. We must have some idea of God's kingdom before we can seek for it intelligently. If I go to work without God's command and build up a church, it is not the church of Christ. On the other hand, if God sends me to do this work, it would be the church of Christ, because he is builder, and I would only be an instrument in his hands. Paul says, "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." Now, when two men contradict each other, both of them cannot have the Spirit of God. "God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him." "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." God's way of building the house (church) was with inspired apostles, prophets, etc. So if men are not building in that way to-day, they labor in vain. Men say certain officers and gifts are done away. A heathen man once said, "If so much of the Bible is done away, take it; I do not want it." If we take away the officers the Lord has given, then the Lord does not "build the house." This was one of the ablest sermons of our reunion; but my notes do not give it justice.

THE REUNION NEAR NAUVOO.

The Nauvoo, Eastern Iowa, Decatur, and Des Moines districts and Northern Illinois reunion met at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, September 6, at 7:30 p. m., S. J. Salisbury occupying the hour. large degree of the Spirit was present and much encouragement given by its manifestations. 10:45 a. m.: By this time a great number of people by team and train from the surrounding country in Iowa and Illinois were coming in. Bro. A. H. Smith took charge. Bro. J. R. Lambert preached, using as texts, John 17: 17; Luke 8: 21. At 2:30 Bro. J. S. Roth preached on the apostasy, using as text, Matthew 11: 22. A collection was taken up, $12.65 was donated. At 7:30 p. m. Bro. A. H. Smith delivered the sermon; text, John 8: 12.

CLARKSDALE REUNION.

Organized by placing Bro. T. W. Chatburn and A. H. Smith in charge, C. P. Faul as financier, A. W. Head chief police, C. P. Faul chorister, J. M. Terry secretary. Bro. A. H. Smith was the alpha in the preaching service on Saturday night assisted by Bro. T. W. Chatburn. On Sunday the audience was quite large and orderly. At eleven a. m. Bro. J. A. Robinson was the preacher, also at eight p. m. His efforts were highly commended, especially the latter, for its force and points. In the language of one who should know, "He covered himself with glory." Business called him away on Monday. Bro. A. H. Smith occupied in the afternoon in his forceful manner to the delight of all. Bro. Smith preached five sermons, all of which were marked with the spirit of liberty and the force of logic and scriptural evidence. His efforts removed prejudice, enlightened the ignorant, encouraged the Saints, and in all were timely and wise. On Friday evening he started for Park Bluff, being substituted by Bro. J. W. Wight, who took hold on Friday evening on the text at Daniel 2: 44, laying as a premise the unchangeable character of God, hence the similarity of his dealings with the children of men. The effort was very interesting and pointed, the arguments being driven through and clinched. At a very interesting point he suddenly stopped. Some thought he had lost the Spirit, others thought other strange things, but the explanation was, "the hour is up." On Saturday evening he continued the same subject, showing from Scripture the peculiar construction of the kingdom and from profane history that its "setting up" could not have occurred in Christ's day nor until at least A. D. 483, at which point the ten toes (kingdoms) came into existence. He used Isaiah 29 to show approximately the time of this event as marked by the restoration of Palestine to fertility. The story was well told, the arguments fair and logical, and well received by the people. On Sunday morning his theme was, The Book of Mormon, and on Sunday evening, "Rewards and punishments" was treated.

Bro. John Hawley, who for the last fifty-eight years has been acquainted with the work in its various phases, was present and occupied on Tuesday and Wednesday to the edifying of the Saints, as the hearers during the day were principally Saints. He has a mind filled with historical remembrances of interest to the church student.

Bro. W. Summerfield in two efforts made plain the gospel truths as to the "restoration of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets;" spoke of Israel, their captivity, commended Joseph very highly, spoke of dispersion and restoration through obedience in which Ephraim is to be the first-born. In conclusion said he had cut down the logs, and expected his brethren would build the house and chink it up, which they did, finding plenty of material to build with.

Bro. Lormie Booker gave us some good advice on temporal support to the gospel.

Bro. A. S. Cochran in his calm way produced some beautiful thoughts on the perfect law and antiquity of the gospel, which we enjoyed very much.

Bro. Charles Householder gave us a good discourse, intermixing his experience and testimonies relating to the gospel.

Not hearing Bro. Chatburn's effort we can say nothing from knowledge, but feel safe in saying it was logical and o. k.

The voice of the Spirit was, Be faithful, come up higher. Trials are coming but the Lord will protect and soon the end will come when the warriors can lay aside the armor and rest.

The Prayer Unions of the various branches held a season of prayer on Saturday from four to five p. m.

Thursday was children's day and a success it was. Over two hundred little ones gathered in and were in charge of Bro. D. J. Krahl, of St. Joseph, the district superintendent. A nice program was improvised, containing pleasing features, a dialogue between a Methodist, a Baptist, and an infidel being one of them. The reunion throughout was characterized by a spirit of peace and unity, the social meetings being spiritual and instructive in the main.

Brn. F. M. Mauzey, J. D. Flanders, C. P. Faul, A. W. Head, W. H. Soule, and others did good work in conducting social services and aiding the preachers in prayer and song. It was unanimously resolved to hold a reunion next year and a committee was appointed to have the matter in charge.

There were about thirteen tents and from sixty to seventy-five campers with some who boarded at the hotels. Baptism was administered on Sunday; the number we do not know.

NORTHERN AND CENTRAL CALIFORNIA REUNION.

At Santa Cruz, California, August 31.—J. F. Burton chairman, W. W. Blair, J. M. Putney assistants, F. A. Severy secretary, Sr. W. O. Skinner assistant. Short speeches by J. F. Burton, J. M. Putney, William Newton, D. L. Harris, Thomas Daly, Sr. Nightengale, C. W. Earl, T. Cook, J. Askew, Daniel Brown, Walter Scott. At 2:30 organization perfected by choosing chorister, organist, janitors, watchmen for grounds, ushers, locating committee for rooms, and receiving committee.

Then Elder William Newton spoke from Isaiah 8: 20. "What we require is light; if we have the light of the gospel we must observe and obey the law in order to have favor with God." We must know the law then it is easy to be complied with. The brother handled his subject well and was blessed with liberty. Evening meeting; sermon by Elder D. L. Harris, from Matthew 24: 4, 5. The speaker expressed himself as not in sympathy with those who believe that all is well just as long as they are sincere in their belief. He pointed out the way by which anyone could ascertain whether the speaker was a deceiver or not, also showing that God is impartial and no respecter of persons, those who work righteousness are acceptable to him. The person who hears and is not a forgetful hearer but a doer of the work, he it is who is blessed in his deeds. Not all that say "Lord, Lord" shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. He explained why we should attach ourselves to a particular church organization, showing from the Scriptures that there were added to the church daily such as should be saved, not added to the churches but added to the "church." He clearly pointed out that one principle of the gospel of Christ is just as essential as the others. The teaching of the doctrine is shunned by the popular churches because it would cause division among them; they would have to accept primitive Christianity. Those who strive to enter in at the straight gate and are not able are those who do not keep the law of God. Paul warned the people that in the last days deceivers would arise and deceive many, and the speaker admonished the Saints to so live that with Paul they could say, they had fought a good fight, kept the faith, and that for them there is laid up a crown of righteousness. The sermon was a beautiful picture of words, our brother delivering it in a meek, humble, and Christlike manner, and it was much enjoyed.

Sunday, the 1st.—Prayer and testimony meeting in charge of J. M. Putney and Daniel Brown; three prayers offered, twenty-nine testimonies borne. This meeting was truly a time of rejoicing. The brethren and sisters who bore testimonies spoke words of encouragement and great thankfulness for the blessings received. Many who had had great trials hard to bear, were resigned to God's will. A very peaceable spirit prevailed throughout. At 10:45 preaching by Elder J. F. Burton; the speaker selected Zechariah 11:10, Hebrews 8, showing the power of God in beautiful words, being blessed with a goodly portion of the Holy Spirit, and clearly made plain why and for what purpose one covenant was broken, and showed how the other covenant was still in force and effect, the second or better one; for the first had become old and ready to vanish away, but the latter would hold unto the end; that the latter or everlasting covenant is the power of God unto salvation; that God sent his only begotten Son into the world with this covenant for the salvation of men; that our part of this covenant is easily kept if we only obey his laws and bring ourselves into subjection to his will. Our brother showed that Christ was slain from before the foundation of the world. Sunday, 2:30; preaching by Thomas Daley; text, Ephesians 2:19, 20. The speaker wished to show his hearers the foundation upon which to build our faith and quoted Matthew 16:13-17 plainly proving that the rock was immediate revelation, and we must build upon that. It is life eternal to know God, and no man knoweth the Son except the Father and to whomsoever the Father revealeth him. The brother said the building of Solomon's temple was typical of building of Christ's Church. There was 153,303 men employed in building the temple and all the different stones were so nicely cut before being put in place, having been fashioned after the plan that God had furnished, that they fitted in their places so perfectly that no sound of a hammer or an edged tool was heard in the erection of the building. But there was a peculiar odd-shaped stone that the workmen could find no place for and it was cast aside among the rubbish, but had to be hunted up when the temple was about completed; for it was found that it went at the head of the corner, being the chief corner stone, this stone being a type of Christ whom the Jews rejected, and the stone which held the whole building together. At 7:45 preaching by President W. W. Blair. Isaiah 29:9. The brother delivered a powerful sermon, being filled with the Spirit of God and the Saints were highly edified and strengthened. He told his hearers very nicely how the restored gospel in its fullness comes in conflict with the wisdom of the wise. Spoke of God's wonderful power and how the Jews were becoming powerful among the people of the earth. Reasons for our peculiar belief, what we believe and why we believe it. How Paul persecuted the early Saints and afterwards accepted and suffered for the cause, upheld it against all opposition. Told his hearers always to go to the friends of a cause and not its enemies when investigating it. "Do us the justice," said he, "to listen to what we have to say. We believe in primitive Christianity as taught and practiced by Jesus Christ." And so many good things that if the secretary could have taken all his sermon down in shorthand he would have done so. The Saints love and honor him, for truly he is a man of God and has a Christlike bearing.

Monday, the 2d. — Prayer and testimony meeting, conducted by Brn. Orin Smith and Jacob Smith; fifteen testimonies borne and three prayers offered; a very enjoyable and edifying meeting.

Monday, 10:45; preaching by C. W. Earle. Isaiah 51 and St. Luke 18:8. By faith men enter upon every avocation in life; the merchant, the grain raiser, the orchardist, all act upon this principle of faith in following their different avocations. But what was the character of the faith of those Christians in the land of Judea? What was its character? The sick were healed, the blind made to see, miracles wrought, and many other things beyond the power of man to do were done by our Savior and his apostles. Our fathers taught us we could not receive these blessings at this day. But why not? Are not God and Christ unchangeable? Is not his word sure? We cannot this nor the fact that our fathers were sincere and honest, and they will receive their reward; but God by angelic ministration has restored the everlasting gospel and the requisite authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel in healing and the blessings; therefore if Christ should come he would find faith on the earth. A splendid sermon delivered with good liberty.

Monday, Sept. 2.—At 2:30 p.m., sermon by W. W. Blair, "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith," etc. Bro. Blair asked his congregation: How could anyone depart from the faith unless he had first been in the faith? He proved by the Scriptures that the true faith had once been delivered to the saints previous to the present century, and if it had been faithfully practiced and observed it would have continued on the earth until the present time. Bro. Blair spoke many words of encouragement to the Latter Day Saints; exhorting them to learn to be wise, prudent, and cast not pearls before swine. "If you give your testimony to one whose heart is not ready to receive it, be careful how you do it, that his heart may be touched as the rays of the sun melt the iceberg. Always choose a suitable time and suitable person, and be careful in bearing your testimony to others. Do not be alarmed if you are persecuted and misunderstood, all God's people were persecuted in former times and are likely to be to some extent in the latter times." Bro. Blair's remarks were very beneficial to the Saints and they learn much from his teaching as he uses the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants as witnesses.

Tuesday, September 3.—At nine a. m. prayer and testimony meeting. Twenty-five testimonies were borne, two prayers, one tongue, one interpretation, and one prophecy. The Spirit was present to bless and comfort the Saints. The testimonies were full of hope and encouragement. At 10:45, preaching by J. F. Burton; "For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him." John 3:34. The brother said: When God sends his messengers into the world they are to be called and ordained by revelation as at the beginning, for things of God are always in harmony with the ways of God, and men should receive honor from God and not from man. Christ said, "I will build my church," etc. He called men and chose them; they did not choose him. They were chosen by him and given the authority by him to carry on his work and it was done in his way, that people might not be deceived. No one has been able to prove that this latter-day work is wrong, but we have been able to prove by the Scriptures that we are in harmony with the Bible in all our teachings. Great, and wise, and good men with the Bible in their hands are deceived, for they seek honor one from the other and not from God, not being sent of God they speak not the words of God. Bro. Burton delivered a number of powerful sermons and was greatly blessed with liberty. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by J. M. Putney; text, Malachi 4: 5, 6. The brother said the thought presented is that there is to be a great and notable day coming before which the Lord will send Elijah, the prophet; the heart of the fathers will be turned to the children and vice versa. Many of the people of the world are believing in the near approach of the coming of the Son of God. God is inspiring many men that the end is near. Saints are sacrificing in order to enjoy it. Few will be prepared for it. People will be in the same condition they were in the days of Noah. Jesus has declared it; the holy prophets have called attention to it. God has designed to prepare a people for that time. Men have given their lives to establish this latter-day work. There is unrest everywhere among the Christian sects. Prophets and seers were always necessary anciently, why not now? God doeth nothing until he revealeth it to his servants the prophets, so that they, the prophets, the mouthpiece of God can warn the people. The children of Israel were delivered out of bondage by the Prophet Moses. John came to prepare the way for Jesus, and a greater Prophet than John the Baptist was never born of woman. So it has been all along the line when God has had an accepted people on the earth, prophets have been God's instruments for revealing his will to his people.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI REUNION.

August 26.—Prayer service at 9:30 a. m. in charge of Bro. Walter Lloyd. Seven prayers were offered, and eight testimonies were borne. At 11 a. m. preaching by Joseph Ward. He referred to Hebrew 6 and Matthew 24, talking on repentance and showing that repentance was a turning away from our sinful habits. Three p. m., Elder Henry C. Smith, speaker, read a part of the 13th Psalm and said, If you are hungry and wish to be fed, ask the Father; don't think about your speaker, for if God is not disposed to feed you, I could not. This effort was a good one and appreciated by all who listened attentively. 7:45 p. m. Bro. I. N. White was the speaker. This was a sermon on the various dispensations, illustrated by references to the road overseer with his sign boards showing the right way. From this time there was an interest awakened among the aliens. He showed that Jesus said, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," proving clearly that the little flock was the bride, the Lamb's wife.

August 27.—9:30 a. m., prayer services in charge of Brn. I. N. White and Joseph Ward. There were seven prayers and twelve testimonies. Eleven a. m., preaching by Elder C. J. Spurlock. The speaker read from the Psalms and 2 Timothy 4, showing that it is one thing to belong to the church and quite another thing to live in harmony with all of the requirements of God's laws, for there is something for all to do when we enter the church or kingdom. He illustrated our growth in the kingdom to be like the child growing by the use and exercise of the mind and body. This effort was a good one and the Saints received food and had their spiritual strength renewed. At 1:45 p. m., moved that we have another reunion next year. Carried unanimously. Brn. Pickering of Springfield, Schofield of Mountain Grove, and Sparling of Pomona were chosen reunion committee. Three p. m., Elder F. C. Keck, the speaker, said he hardly knew what might be the words spoken; but referred to Luke 2 and then said, To the mind of your speaker it is no wonder that there are infidels to-day. In our ministerial work we come to towns like this one, and one in his mind, Rich Hill, of sixteen different churches and all the Christians could get into one of the houses. This effort was highly appreciated by the Saints.

At 7:45 p. m. the speaker, Henry Sparling, read for his text, Daniel 2: 2, 44. This effort was a good one with many Scriptural quotations and references showing the position of the church on the kingdom, and was listened to with marked attention.

August 28.—Prayer and testimony meeting 9:30 was well attended, and was one of joy and gladness. There were about ten prayers and as many testimonies. Eleven a. m. Elder Cather, the speaker, called attention to the simple subject, Teach. He referred to Matthew who says, "Go teach," showing that it is needful that we have help that we be able to stand in the church, let alone standing up to teach, we therefore need help. When one teaches he should be sent of God, for we read that in these last days they shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. He showed the necessity of being taught. This sermon was belivered with good liberty and pleased the Saints because of his being a young man and but a short time in the ministry. Three p. m. preaching services; speaker, Elder C. M. Bootman. I wish to read from Matthew 23: 24 and call your attention to the statement that this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached to all nations and then shall the end come. It's the same unchangeable gospel. Our president acquitted himself well. Eight p. m., Bro. I. N. White, speaker, took for his starting point Acts 3: 18-21. This sermon is a continuation of the "hour dispensations" and was listened to by all with eagerness, the tent being crowded to its fullest capacity with many, I am told, outside under the trees. The people of Mountain Grove are being awakened, at least a great many of them, and some of the very best men and women of the town. The speaker gave the scriptures for all he said all along in his earnest, persuasive manner.

August 29.—Prayer and testimony this morning was well attended with several prayers and testimonies which were good. The Saints are beginning to become interested in the blessings for them and may God open their understandings that they might understand them is my prayer in Jesus' name, amen. Eleven a. m.; Joseph Ward, speaker, called attention to the fact that the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. This was a very good effort. Three p. m., Bro. I. N. White, speaker. This was simply a feast for the Saints. At 7:45 p. m. Bro. Henry C. Smith, speaker, took the subject, Baptism. He said, We have no intention of using anything but Bible terms, for we shall endeavor to show you that baptism is essential to salvation, a saving ordinance, and a command of God. The Savior said, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Pure as he was he had to comply with this ordinance. How many of you are there in the world now that are better than Jesus, who needed to be baptized? This was another of his interesting sermons.

August 30.—Morning services in charge of W. C. Cather who gave a good talk showing the necessity of bringing our children along with us, that we cannot make a success and leave the children behind us; then gave some of his own experience in the bringing of his life into this work. There were twelve prayers and thirteen or more testimonies. The Saints seemed to catch the spirit of prayer and praise, faithfully bearing their testimonies; the Spirit seemed so abundantly shed forth that outsiders felt its warm influence. Eleven a. m. Bro. Walter Lloyd, speaker, said, "There is one thing I have noticed since I have been here, and that is, the children of the Southwestern district have not had any meeting." He then gave the Saints of this district a good lesson in regard to Sunday school and admonished them to their duties toward their children in Sunday school work, showing clearly that we in this district are very far behind in Sunday school as well as branch work. May God help us that we may come up higher. At 7:45 p. m., I. N. White's theme was Matthew 20 and Acts 3: 19, using his chart, and showing that Jesus said, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," and that the little flock was the Church of God, the Lamb's wife. This was listened to with deep interest by all present.

August 31.—Prayer service at 9:30 in charge of Bro. H. Sparling. There were thirteen prayers and thirteen testimonies. Eleven a. m. The speaker was C. M. Bootman. Text, Hebrews 8: 5, reading, "See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount," and then referred to Noah building the ark. This was one of his characteristic sermons. Three p. m. Speaker, Henry C. Smith; text, Romans-20-25. This was another one of Bro. Smith's good lessons; clear and easy to be understood by all, giving Scriptural references. At 7:45 p. m. Elder I. N. White said, "We stand before the people to defend what we believe to be the truth. I see one of the church papers of St. Louis says that the angel that John saw in the Isle of Patmos was the evangelical churches. How does it sound to say, I saw the evangelical churches flying in the air? Narrow is the gate, and straight is the way, and few there be that find it. Now, what few was it that found? Why the few despised; those whose names were cast out as evil or the offscouring of the earth. He showed the references on his chart.

September 1.—Prayer services in charge of Bro. Henry C. Smith. Sixteen prayers were offered and fifteen testimonies borne. This meeting was one of the best the Saints in this district ever experienced. Eleven a. m., speaker, Bro. H. Sparling, subject, Remove not the ancient land marks. We intend to show the necessity for maintaining them and not removing them. He showed what landmarks are as given by the old government surveys. The speaker made his points clear and plain, basing his arguments on scriptural references, also by reference to Philip at Samaria and the grafting in of the bud into the vine, that in order for it to live it must partake of the sap of the vine it is grafted into, and that the Holy Ghost is to us in the kingdom what the sap is to the young buds. Two p. m., sacrament meeting in charge of Brn. C. M. Bootman, H. Sparling, and C. J. Spurlock. Three p. m., the speaker, F. C. Keck, said he had a subject upon his mind ever since he got up and since partaking of the sacrament it came to him more forcibly than ever and that is, the resurrection of the dead. We believe in two resurrections yet; one has already passed, and we believe in a literal resurrection of the body, and that every individual that God ever created will in the Lord's own due time be resurrected and brought back to dwell on this earth again. Now when Jesus was in the garden of Gethsemane praying, he was tried so that he sweat like unto great drops of blood, and if we Latter Day Saints realized the glory that Jesus had with the Father before he came into the flesh and would strive to come up higher we would realize that glory much more. After the sermon we repaired to where there was much water to witness the baptism of an old man who had not only been a bitter enemy but a very hard persecutor of the Saints, Elder C. M. Bootman being the administrator. Confirmation took place just before preaching at night, by Elders J. Ward and F. C. Keck, the last named being speaker. At 7: 45 p. m. Bro. I. N. White was the speaker and speaking of the vine showed who are the branches, stating that it is thought by some that the different orthodox churches are the branches, but he showed clearly that that idea is an erroneous one, and that Jesus says, "I am the vine, and ye [his followers] are the branches." He knew when he was called to the ministry that he was not ordained to go around and make apologies for God's gospel, and if there are any apologies to be made God himself can come down and make them. How did this gospel of the Son of God come? It came in word, and in power, and much assurance of the Holy Ghost. He could not tell what kind of a preacher a man was by his dress, but when he got him up in the stand and gave him the Bible and put him to preaching he could then tell what he was. Now, just what was told Paul to do must be told to people in like condition. Ananias did not tell Paul to do something he had already done. Ananias baptized him and laid hands on him that he might receive the Holy Ghost. Well, says one, I can't go all that. Then you will have to get another Bible. If I want my boy to be a preacher and I send him to a Baptist theological seminary he will come out a Baptist preacher, will he not? Well, then, if I send him to either one of the Methodist theological seminaries he will come out a Methodist preacher, and the same if sent to any other kind of a denominational seminary. Now, these boys are every one of them working for the dollar, and God had just as much hand in making a lawyer out of the one as he did in making a preacher out of the other. Now Jesus says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches; James was one branch, Peter another, and John another and they were grafted into Jesus the vine." I read in Isaiah, "To the law and to the testimony." Paul says, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."—1 Cor. 12: 3. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."—Gal. 3: 27. "One Lord, one faith, one baptism."—Eph. 4: 5. What faith is the faith you are to contend for? One says it's Joseph Smith's baptism. No, sir, it is God's baptism. Now, Bro. White, what is God's baptism? "Born of water and of the Spirit."—John 3: 5, and these are joined together by the copulative conjunction and are one. If you have come in this way you have been baptized by the one Spirit into the one body and been made to drink into the one Spirit.

On motion a vote of thanks was extended to the people of Mountain Grove for the kindness shown us during our reunion, to Mrs. Schofield and Miss Stearns the organists, to those who kindly cared for the ministry, and to Bro. Walter Lloyd, our chorister, for the untiring efforts he made to teach us vocal music. Thus ended the first reunion held in the Southwestern Missouri district. We separated feeling that we had had our spiritual strength renewed, and had become more firmly united as the children of God.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints in the West Virginia District:—Our district conference of August 24 has come and gone and is now a thing of the past. But it was the pleasure of that body to sustain me as Bishop's agent for this district, and you will see in the conference minutes, as reported by the secretary, that the financial condition of the district is not what it should be, there being but a few dollars paid into the treasury in the last six months. Now, dear Saints, will we not come forward with our mites and cast them into the treasury of the Lord, and set his work to rolling from one end of the district to the other before another six months roll around? We have good elders at our command, ready and willing if the necessities of this life are provided for their families. So, dear Saints, you see the success of the work depends on our actions. Will we rob God, or will we bring our tithes and place them in the storehouse of the Lord that there may be meat in his house?

Now, dear Saints, do not wait until you think you can spare five dollars before sending it to the Bishop's agent or to the Bishop himself, but when you have ten cents, twenty-five cents, or whatever it may be, pay it over to those whom I have appointed in your respective branches to receive it, and it will be forwarded to me without any extra expense to you. Remember; dear Saints, that on the first day of March of each year I make my report to the Bishop. Do you not want to see your name on that list? I am sure you do, so now let every Saint in this district be sure his name is on my next report. There is not one of you in the district but what can pay something if you only think so. If each one will pay a little there is enough of us to support two or three families and keep the elders in the field constantly, and the work will not prosper as we desire to see it unless we do. And if we fail to do our part who will come under condemnation? Surely not those whom the Lord has called and ordained, and who are waiting on us. Trusting all may become interested and do their duty and receive the reward of the righteous, I am,

Yours in bonds,

MARRIED.

FIELDS—KLAUS.—Bro. William Fields and Miss Elizabeth Klaus were married at the residence of the bride's parents, in Otoe County, Nebraska, W. M. Self officiating. Bro. William Fields is an excellent young man of pure life and good reputation; Miss

Klaus is worthy of our highest esteem, being kind, gentle, and loving. May peace, happiness, and prosperity flow like a river into their lives, bringing forth the fruits of eternal life, to the honor and glory of God.

"Quench no flame of pure affection,
Place a guard around its urn;
Give to it a right direction,
Bid its sacred incense burn.

"God the sacred rite expounded
Ere the earth by sin was stained,
When with purity surrounded,
Man a loving wife obtained."

DIED.

WIGHT.—Lyman Lehi Wight was born December 27, 1833, on the banks of the Missouri River in Clay County, Missouri, when the Saints were driven out, and was in Liberty jail with his father at eight years of age. Joined the first organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints when young. The church being reorganized in 1860, he soon renewed his faith and was baptized at Bandera, Texas, September 14, 1865, and for nearly thirty years has, both in life and words, borne a faithful testimony to the divinity of the work. Died September 8, 1895, near Ridgeway, Harrison County, Missouri.

SCOTT.—Near Borden, Indiana, August 3, 1895, after an illness of four weeks, James Ether, son of James M. and Altheda E. Scott, aged 14 years, 6 months, and 28 days. He was faithful in all life's duties. He was baptized October 24, 1894, by Elder M. T. Short. He leaves a father, mother, five sisters, and three brothers, who deeply feel the loss of an obedient and loving child. We mourn, but not as those without hope. Funeral services at the residence by Elder M. R. Scott; interment in Pleasant Ridge cemetery.

Call not back the dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er;
On the border land we left him,
Soon to meet and part no more.
Far beyond this world of changes,
Far beyond this world of care,
We shall see our darling loved one,
In our Father's mansion fair.

GRAYBILL.—Sr. Patience Graybill was born November 26, 1825, at New Castle, Indiana, and died August 14, 1895, near Persia, Iowa, at her son-in-law's, Sidney Pitt. She was the daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Massa Smith. At the age of twelve she moved with her parents to Missouri, and was there during the Missouri trouble; then went to Adams County, Illinois, and in the year of 1840 she was baptized. She was married June 21, 1841, to Bro. Levi Graybill, who has been in the church for sixty-three years. Many of the Saints know the dear old brother, who was faithful during the dark days of the church. Sister Graybill was the mother of twelve children, five of whom, with her companion, live to mourn the loss of mother and wife. The funeral sermon was preached at the Latter Day Saints' church, at Wheeler's Grove by Elder Wm. A. Smith, assisted by Elder H. N. Hansen. Interment in the cemetery at Wheeler's Grove, many relatives and friends being present.

HENDERSON.—Of malarial fever, at the residence of Elder James McDiffet, Davis City, Iowa, September 4, 1895, William H., son of William and Julia Henderson. The deceased was born in Cleveland, Iowa, April 19, 1884. Funeral services at the Saints' chapel in Davis City; funeral sermon by Elder John Shippy.

MCGARY.—At her home, near Garden Grove, California, August 9, 1895, after a brief illness, Sr. Ellen S. Pratt-McGary, beloved wife of Bro. Wm. H. McGary, aged 63 years, 6 months, and 3 days. She was born in the town of Ripley, Chautauqua County, New York; was baptized in the Mississippi River, at Nauvoo, by Joseph Smith the Seer, when eight years old; migrated with her parents in 1846 to near Council Bluffs, Iowa, and afterwards to Utah; in 1850 went with her parents, Elder Addison Pratt and wife, on their missionary tour to Society Islands; returned with them to San Francisco in 1852 and settled in San Bernardino in 1853; was there married to Mr. Wm. McGary in 1856; in 1857 located in Utah, and in 1882 they established their residence in Orange County, California, where her eventful life terminated in the midst of relatives and friends, sustained and comforted by a firm, unflinching faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord. Elder W. W. Blair conducted the funeral services at the late residence of the deceased, also at the cemetery; and on Sunday, the 11th inst., preached a memorial sermon to an overflowing and sympathizing congregation of relatives and friends on the divinely appointed means of progression from infancy to old age, also in the intermediate state, and until perfection of soul and spirit and body is attained in celestial glory provided of God in the new heaven and new earth of Revelation 21: 1.

ROUSH.—Bro. James E. Roush was born December 18, 1865; died August 18, 1895, at his home near Fulton, Iowa. Brother Roush had been ailing all summer, but had no serious illness until seized by a fever about a week before his demise which confined him to his bed; he however seemed to rally and was considered by his friends on a fair way to recovery. On the morning of the 18th of August he suddenly grew worse until 1:50 p.m., when he passed to his heavenly home beyond. He was conscious to the last. It was not more than ten minutes before his death, when he extended his hand to his wife and bade her "good-bye." Then with a "good-bye to all" he sank away. He leaves a wife and three children, besides his parents and two brothers, to mourn his death. Bro. Roush was a consistent member of our church and superintendent of our Sunday school. He died firm in the faith of his Redeemer. He was a loving husband, a kind parent, and highly respected neighbor. The funeral sermon was preached at the home by Bro. Samuel D. Heide.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG MEN.

Edward Bok, the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, has written a book for young men called "Successward: A Young Man's Book for Young Men," which the Revells will publish in a fortnight. The book aims to cover all the important phases of a young man's life: his business life, social life, his amusements, religious life, dress, his attitude toward women and the question of his marriage. This is Mr. Bok's first book.

The Review of Reviews for September calls attention to the change in European sentiment on the liquor question, as shown especially in the establishment of the French monopoly of the manufacture and wholesale supply of strong liquors, in the work of the Belgian commission, and in the still more important action taken by Russia in setting up a government monopoly of the entire wholesale and retail traffic in liquors throughout the empire. "Everywhere in Europe," says the editor of the Review, "the fact is becoming recognized that liquor selling is not only an unbecoming business, but one that is socially and politically dangerous—requiring new and rigid regulation or else total suppression."

THE AUTUMN LEAF.

TEXT: "We all do fade as a leaf."—Isaiah 64: 6.

The leaf in fading simply ripens. The bright color of the maple is not the hectic flush of consumption, but the ruddy glow of maturity. Mother earth blossoms and ripens the fruit for man, while she ripens the leaves for herself. She will eat the pear and the orange that may fall upon the ground, but she prefers to give them to men, while she keeps the ripe leaves for her table alone.

The leaf in ripening also beautifies the world. An autumn forest in this country looks as if all the rainbows had fallen out of the clouds, and broken to pieces on the trees. Every leaf is a raindrop dividing the white light into prismatic colors. The year, like the day, has its morning, its noon, its evening, and its night. Spring-time is the morning of the year. The sun of life is rising; plants and birds and animals are waking from a long sleep. Summer is the noon of the year, in which the growing fields are maturing in the genial heat. Autumn is the evening of the year, when every forest is a sunset, and every tree a burning bush. Winter is the night of the year, in which all nature falls asleep, and the glittering stars of snow crystals and icicles beam out upon the cold darkness.

And the autumn is the storehouse into which all the other seasons bring their treasures. It is the Exposition of Spring and Summer and Winter. Just as the nations of the earth brought the fruits of their brain and industry to Chicago, and there spread them out for our enjoyment, so winter and spring and summer bring to autumn the results of their toil.

The leaf in fading also fulfills its mission. Autumn is the Commencement Week of the forest, the graduating season of the leaves, the time when they get their diplomas from the God of nature for the work that has been done.

The mission of the leaf is to build up the forest. It is the laboratory in which the plant fiber is made. The rough, coarse substances are taken up by the roots and carried up into the trunk, but they must go into the finer laboratory of the leaf before they can be transformed into fiber that abides. Leaves are the lungs of the tree, and a man can get along without lungs just as easily as a tree without leaves. And every leaf is up and at it, doing its part from the time it first began to be rocked by the winds in its winter cradle, wrapped in warm garments, until it matures in the beauty of autumn.

Every leaf works with its brother leaf, and if there should be a conspiracy between the leaves of the forest to quit work, it would mean the destruction of all the trees. Are we like leaves on the tree of life? Do we perform our little part, gathering up the sunlight of truth, and the warmth of love, and making them into moral and spiritual tree fiber? Or are we doing nothing? If you are busy in your sphere you are performing the mission God gave you, and when like the leaf you begin to fade in the maturity of age, it is only an indication that your mission is about fulfilled.

Again, the mission of the leaf is to cleanse. There is a literal sense in which "the leaves of the trees are for the healing of the nations." The leaf takes up the poisonous substances which would destroy life and thus destroys the destroyer. Ten per cent of carbonic acid gas in the atmosphere would destroy all animal life. Every animal and decaying substance at the bottom of the lake, the river, or on the earth, is manufacturing this poison. During one geological era there was fifty per cent of this poisonous gas in the atmosphere. No reptile crawled, no bird flew. There was no man or beast upon the earth, until the leaves came out, and purified the atmosphere and built the great forests that were afterwards buried beneath the earth, making the coal-deposits from which we now get our heat and light. Without the leaves this world would not be habitable. The leaf takes up the carbon, and sets free the oxygen that you and I and the flowers need. The flowers do not breathe carbon. They have as good taste as human beings, and depend as much upon oxygen as a child in the cradle. The leaf stands as protector over the flowers as well as over the health of your home. The combination that makes for death is destroyed, the oxygen that makes for life is let loose in the air, and we live upon it. Is it your mission, friend, as a little leaf on the tree of life, to destroy combinations of evil? Are you set for righteousness? Are you doing what you can for the dissolution of the evil forces in this country, that fill our moral atmosphere? It is in the power of the humblest Christian by prayer and effort and influence to do much toward the destruction of these forces.

The third mission of the leaf is to make fruitful. The leaves make fruit for men and sacrifice themselves in the effort. The flower is but a glorified leaf. "Plants," says Ruskin, "are composed essentially of leaf and root, the one loving the light, the other the darkness; the one liking to be clean, the other dirty; the one liking to grow for the most part up, the other for the most part down, and each one having faculties and purposes of its own. But the pure one, which loves the light, has above all things, the purpose of being married to another leaf, and having child leaves, and children's children of leaves, to make the earth fair forever. And when the leaves marry, they put on wedding robes, and are more glorious than Solomon in all his glory, and they have feasts of honey, and we call them flowers."

But there is a broader sense in which the leaf makes the earth fruitful. The cloud could not exist but for the leaf. The spring in the valley could not exist but for the leaf. That brook dashing down the mountain-side would disappear but for the leaf. The river flowing majestically toward the ocean could not continue to flow but for the leaf. That lake nestling among the hills would dry up but for the leaf. Just as soon as the forests are denuded, and the trees cut down, the springs dry up, the clouds do not descend, the rivers cease to flow. It is the forest that gives us the difference between the desert of Sahara, and the tropical climate, between the barren moon and this beautiful earth. Take the leaf out of the world, and in twenty-five years it would be one great desert of Sahara. What is your mission, my friend? Are you making the atmosphere in which you live pure? Is that the purpose of your life? If so, there will be a maturity of your life by and by, as beautiful as the glory of an autumn forest.

The leaf in maturing provides for the future. It multiplies itself by self-sacrifice. Look into the little bud on the stem from which the leaf has dropped, and you will find another leaf in embryo. Jesus said: "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." And unless the Christian lives a life of self-sacrifice for the good of others, depend upon it, nobody else will be made a Christian to take his place when he is gone. I beg of you, try to save somebody else, so as to have a spiritual successor when the time comes for you to fade and fall.

Though the leaf decays and becomes a part of the earth, there is in it the promise of resurrection. Next spring a vital force will touch it, and take up its particles into tree or plant, weaving those particles into the tapestry of stem and leaf and flower and fruit. That vital force, which has taken hold of the dead leaf, has brought about a resurrection, not of the same particles, it may be, but of the same species.

To the Christian death is the autumn of time. Ripe leaves and fruit are falling. But there is a life of God which will touch the body and bring it forth in fresh vigor and new beauty in the resurrection—that springtime of eternity.—Rev. A. C. Dixon, D. D. In Everywhere.

THE DANGER OF HAPHAZARDNESS.

EVERY successful worker maps out carefully beforehand what he proposes to do. Chance, the possibility of circumstances; the expectation that the genius of the moment will be sufficient, are not to be relied upon by the man looking for success. The cool brain, the determinate purpose, the intelligent planning are essential in the field of triumph. Minutely-prepared outlines of work are necessary in the pastor's career as well as in that of the politician, merchant, or a professor. Haphazardness is destructive. Inspiration of the hour is courted too much. The best work is accomplished when weeks of earnest preparation have been spent. No man is safe in life's great fight who proceeds upon the dangerous method of shiftlessness, letting problems come to the front without previous calculation and shaping of a plan of procedure how to meet, deal with, and solve such problems. Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, in a sermon preached years ago, said the following: "As I look through Scripture I discover that the men who did the best work and the most of it, first wrought out in thought what they were afterwards going to work out in act and words. . . . Men do better things and work at a higher level when they coolly determine what they are going to do, than when they let daily circumstances determine it for them piece-meal. It is safer to work by calculation than by caprice, and if it is not one it will be the other. . . . Plan intensifies. Assurance of a purpose makes our work solid and consecutive. Plan concentrates energies as a burning glass does sunbeams. Shiftlessness is only another name for aimlessness. Purpose directs energy, and purpose makes energy. When we see the target we stretch the bow. Light in the eye is tension in the arm. We can because we think we can. Power is with a good deal of accuracy measured by purpose. A man may draw inspiration from the grandeur of his aim, as a fire-fly shapes its flight by night.—Baltimore Methodist.

THE FALL ELECTION

Will, beyond a doubt, be the greatest event in the history of Utah, because for the first time in the lives of even the oldest inhabitant, the privilege of voting for Governor and all the State officials will be given to all males over twenty-one years of age. While it is true the women cannot cast their ballots at the coming election, they can unquestionably cast their powerful influence, and even at this early day anxious candidates are seeking for help from the "coming woman." You ought to be familiar with the true situation—but you can't unless you get reliable news. It's furnished in The Tribune daily or semi. One dollar a month for the daily and 75 cents for three months for the semi.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Do not always live in complete harmony. This is due to imperfect knowledge of themselves and each other. The sensitive nature of one is not appreciated or considered by the other who is stronger and more robust. Pride and independence coming from large Self-esteem are lost sight of, and impossible readiness in yielding is expected. The desire for approval coming from large Approbativeness is not understood, and it is withheld. People think they know each other, but Phrenology will open doors undiscovered and let in new light, thereby producing much more of harmony and perfect love.
Is anything more important than conjugal happiness? Not only are the feelings of husbands and wives involved, but the effects extend to all posterity.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

HOUSES OF WORSHIP.

We fear that there is an excess of zeal in the efforts of the Saints, at times, in building houses of worship, or meetinghouses.

It is a good thing to be able to feel that we are in a measure sitting under our own vine and fig tree, able to gather in places owned and controlled, so far as ownership is acknowledged among men, by ourselves, where none may legally disturb or make us afraid, but when the numbers are few, the tax great, the effort to sustain the expense incident to occupation heavy in comparison, wisdom would indicate the "making haste to go slow."

In the building of such houses of worship as necessity, or wisdom makes essential to the work, the utmost care should be exercised, and debt avoided. Whatever is done, the house when finished ready to be dedicated to the service of God and the good of the people in and out of the pales of the church, it should be free from incumbrance and legal claim of men for either material or labor.

We learned several years ago from an object lesson, how mortifying and humiliating a condition might be imposed on Saints. A little colony of Saints in a good-sized town were troubled about a place in which to hold services. It was determined to build a house. Subscription lists were issued and circulated, the Saints, figuratively and in reality, strained every nerve to make it a success; the house was begun, the means collected exhausted, the committee to whom the duty of building was intrusted borrowed money to complete the work, giving a mortgage on the house, the result being that the Saints were unable to meet the running expenses incident to the occupation and to make the payments on the mortgage; so the building, after dedication and use, was sold to pay the debt. All regretted, but none could help the result.

Personally, the editor of the HERALD has resolved not to dedicate, or aid to dedicate a house of worship unless it is assured to be free from debt. The idea of dedicating to the Lord a house which some man has the power to sell for a debt incurred in its erection is a very repugnant one to the right thinking mind.

HYPOCRISY.

THIS vice is one of the most contemptible that mortals can be guilty of. We are generally disposed to have charity for the erring who are sincerely in error, but when it is manifest that one is insincere, he is condemned by all; and he should be.

He who tries to gain influence, advantage, or wealth by representing himself to be what he is not, and thus procuring favors which his real self could not secure, is false and no better than a thief. He deserves the most unqualified disapproval. He who seems to be a friend while he is secretly your foe, who assumes to love while he hates, who fawningly flatters while he holds the knife to the silken cord of character, and expresses a wish for success while he steals the purse of his victim, is fiendish.

The criminal aspect of this vice we call forgery—where one represents himself on paper to be some one else, and seeks to obtain by the use of another's name what his own name would not command. In common, every-day affairs these things are condemned by all, and in law severe punishment is provided for the offender.

Will not, or should not this rule hold good in matters of religion? Is not he who, for the sake of trade, or social influence, appears to be what he is not, gives assent to doctrines which he does not indorse, and assumes a piety and humble mien which he does not feel, a culprit to be condemned by all honest men? Is he any less a criminal because it is done under the guise of religion? Yet ministers (we dare not say ministers of Christ) are constantly urging social advantage and financial gain as inducements for men and woman to become members of their respective societies. Thousands have only these advantages in view when making a choice of a church, or when making a profession of religion.

No wonder the life, vitality, strength, and spirit of the church is waning, and her glory is departed. May God preserve latter-day Israel from the influence of the hypocrite within the pulpit and the pew. For if ever this spirit prevails she will sink into the vortex of hell.

That which is honorable in the natural realm is also honorable in the realm of spirit. The angel or spirit who dares to violate the principle of honesty should be as freely condemned as is man when guilty of the same offense. Yet in the church's extremity, in the most critical hour of her history, this spirit of hypocrisy vaunted itself on high, and assumed the reins of government. Because it went unrebuked Israel has suffered, and is to-day plunged in moral and spiritual degradation.

In regard to that critical juncture President Wilford Woodruff says:—

When Brigham Young arose and commenced speaking, if I had not seen him with my own eyes, there is no one that could have convinced me that it was not Joseph Smith; speaking. It was as the voice and face of Joseph Smith; as anyone can testify who was there and acquainted with these two men.—Roberts on Succession, pp. 119, 120.

President Geo. Q. Cannon says:—

If Joseph had risen from the dead and again spoken in their hearing, the effect could not have been more startling than it was to many present at that meeting; it was the voice of Joseph himself; and not only was it the voice of Joseph which was heard, but it seemed in the eyes of the people as if it were the very person of Joseph which stood before them.—Ibid. p. 6.

Elder Wm. C. Staines says:—

This was with a voice like the voice of the prophet Joseph. I thought it was he, and so did thousands who heard it.—Ibid. p. 7.

We are not disposed to question the testimony of these men, but we are astounded when we think that they attribute this deception to God!

Upon what principle can this misrepresentation and deception be justified? If it were conceded that Brigham Young assumed to represent the person and voice of Joseph, all would agree that he was guilty of treachery and hypocrisy. But this he could not have done. He might have imitated the voice, but it would have taken such a wonderful transformation, as he was not capable of, to make him look like Joseph. Conceding this testimony to be true, there must have been a spiritual power connected with and responsible for these phenomena. If this manifestation, which not only purposed to deceive, but actually did deceive "thousands who heard it," had been produced solely through the agency of man, it would have been called a deception and a fraud. Was the act any less a crime, or can we call it by any softer name, because spiritual influences were responsible for its production? A parallel for this is sought in the case of the mantle of Elijah falling upon Elisha, but there is no evidence that he ever assumed the face or voice of Elijah. God had chosen Elisha, but he worked through him as Elisha, but never deceived the people into the belief that it was Elijah.

So, had God chosen Brigham Young as the leader of Israel, in the special sense which Brigham afterwards assumed, he would have developed and qualified him; but he never would have deceived the people by representing him as Joseph Smith, thus making a false representation. In this transaction we can but see the cunning of the evil one, and the cloven foot of him who sought to lead Israel astray is plainly discernible.

Brigham Young and other participants in this affair may not have discerned this spirit. They may have been honest and sincere. It was an hour that tried men's souls and Satan may have taken advantage of their extremity. This is not a question as to the honesty of these men, but aside from all personality we cannot accept the theory of the case which makes God responsible for duplicity, fraud, deception, and hypocrisy. It will avail us nothing to call these men hard names. They may or they may not have been willful deceivers. To God they must answer for their acts in that dark and trying hour. But it is our duty to take warning from the mistakes of others, and guard sacredly our manhood and our honor, lest the spirit of hypocrisy with its desolating scourge and withering blight come in again like a flood. The servant of God should dare to do right because it is right, fearless of consequences.

Be honest, brave, and true, and accept no spirit which represents God as being otherwise.

God stands upon the principles of honor and truth.

Angels, men, and devils must be tested by these principles, and stand or fall upon their application, as indicated by the following words of Jesus the Christ:—

Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.—Matt. 15:13.

BUSINESS RULES OF HERALD OFFICE. TO FURTHER carry out the work of "reform" in the methods of doing business with the Herald Office, the editorial and business departments have arranged the following set of rules to govern all concerned in the transaction of business with the publishing department of the church.

For a year or two past we have been making appeals in one form or another to our patrons, calling attention to the necessity of promptness in meeting financial obligations due the church—the same promptness recognized as due the business man of the world. We trust our readers will recognize that the same principles essential to the success of any business enterprise are necessary to the success of the church, and by which alone its success can be assured, its work be executed.

It is evident that the spirit of the work comprehends every true principle—the maintenance of all, the neglect of none; hence the observance, the doing of "all things that pertain to life and godliness."

It is further evident that one who pledges his adherence to truth by entering the waters of baptism does not release himself from obligation to principle, but very greatly increases the demands made upon him in that regard; for he thereby covenants to "live godly in Christ Jesus," and that means to honor law in all its phases. In so doing an individual—by God's help and by self-help is placed on higher ground; is corrected and educated out of the low standards of the world and placed in closer touch with the forces that are seeking to redeem and exalt the human family.

It is also evident that right in the things that daily touch us in the habits of life we are to find the opportunities to advance; not in some fanciful, future thing or condition; not in some far-fetched imaginary state. It is the man or woman who meets the difficulties right around him and by his energy and application conquers his difficulties that moves himself and society for good. It is with this end in view that we have so frequently called the attention of our people to the importance of the present; to the meeting of the issues now before us, the answering of the demands now made upon us. We are interested in the future, but our interest in it must be manifest by concentrating our energies upon the situations of the present. We are here to do the work of the present that thereby the success of the future may be assured.

The spirit of the gospel comes to us as a body of people called out of the incorrect, the faulty, the untrue habits of present life into the higher life of the gospel, into which we must rise, but which we can only reach by correcting what is faulty in our life methods.

One of these methods has been a carelessness in meeting obligations, because of which this department of church work and care has suffered. With this carelessness naturally comes a sense of ease concerning all similar matters, that ought not be. We speak kindly, but none the less positively when we tell the Saints—all whom it may concern—that such conditions are wrong; and that if there is one thing that Saints ought to be careful to meet, it is a financial obligation.

We have been trying for some time past to get our people into better habits of doing business with us. We mean to keep on trying until we have done our part. Success we are assured of, because we have confidence in the good intentions of the Saints; that they mean well and will make an effort to do their duty. When that is done everything will move as it ought to move, the work prosper more fully, and the blessings of God be more abundantly given to his people.

Here are the rules referred to. Please note them and aid us by cooperating with us:—

TO BOOK AGENTS AND BRANCH PRESIDENTS.

The following instructions are issued in order to promote the circulation of the church publications and facilitate the transaction of business with the Herald Office.

1. Branches are requested to appoint competent agents, either the president or another, through whom all orders and remittances should be sent. Such agents are requested to make an active canvass for subscriptions for the SAINTS' HERALD, Autumn Leaves, and Zion's Hope, the publications of the church; to make sales of books, tracts, pamphlets, Sunday school supplies, etc.; and to collect accounts promptly.

2. Agents will not be furnished stocks of books to carry, but will be given sixty days on all orders. A discount of ten per cent will be allowed on all books sold. No discount on HERALD, Leaves, Hope, Gospel Quarterlies, or tracts.

Ten per cent will also be allowed on all old accounts—due July 1, 1895. (Collections requested.)

3. Delinquents will in all cases be stricken from the mailing lists when their subscriptions are one year overdue.

4. Those who receive the HERALD free must be vouched for as entitled to it, by some of the ministry acquainted with their circumstances.

5. The Saints are requested to order through their local book agents in branches; or scattered Saints through the traveling ministry. If impossible, order direct.

6. The traveling ministry are allowed ten per cent on book orders, and the cost of money orders and postage on remittances for the church papers. Those sending orders are looked to for settlement.

7. Orders amounting to less than fifty cents must in all cases be accompanied by the amount.

8. Remit by post office or express order, or draft. Do not send checks on local banks. Registered letters are at the risk of senders.

9. Write all addresses in full, giving town, county, and State.

Send addresses in the names of parties to whom papers or other matters are sent.

When changing address, give post office to which papers have been going.

Dates on yellow labels tell when subscriptions expire.

10. Agents or branch presidents are requested to keep the Herald Office card (sent herewith) posted in a conspicuous place, with the name of agent attached.

Descriptive catalogues sent free on application.

Your active cooperation is asked for the success of the cause.

In bonds, yours,

FRANK CRILEY,
Business Manager.

LAMONI, Iowa, September 20, 1895.

The request for names and addresses of branch presidents is renewed. Brethren in charge of local branches will please send name and address to Bro. Frank Criley, Business Manager. Quite a number have responded which shows an awakening interest in our work.

GOSPEL QUARTERLY SUBSCRIBERS.

THERE are two thousand nine hundred and forty-three (2,943) delinquent subscribers to the Gospel Quarterlies on our mailing lists!

This means, counting each one for a year, that those in arrears are two thousand nine hundred and forty-three (2,943) years behind time!!

Putting it in another form, eleven thousand seven hundred and seventy-three (11,773) Quarterlies are unpaid for!!!

Just think of it, Sunday school workers, 11,773 Quarterlies have been printed, folded, and mailed to your addresses during the past three years for which not one cent has been paid in return!!!!

The office cannot longer do business in that way. Hereafter delinquents will be cut off from the list when their subscriptions are one year overdue.

We look to the Sunday school workers, young, vigorous, and, we suppose, enterprising and full of zeal, to pay up these overdue accounts at once.

A further request should not be necessary to those interested in the work. Let us hear from you promptly. The subscription price is a small amount for each of you to pay, but to us the total makes a large sum and a financial burden to carry.

EVEN during the hard times and distress in Kansas because of the drouth the last year or two, the following is a good showing:—

Mr. M. L. White, of Garnett, Kansas, has been studying the mortgage indebtedness of Anderson County, that State. He finds that 31 per cent of the farm land is mortgaged and that the mortgages amount to $6.56 per acre for the whole number of acres mortgaged, and $2.12 per acre on the entire acreage of the county. Seven years ago he made a similar examination and found that 45 per cent of the lands were mortgaged at an average of $8.50 per acre on the land actually mortgaged, and $3.50 per acre on the entire acreage of the county. Here is a reduction of $2 per acre on the land mortgaged and $1.38 per cent on the entire acreage of the county. It shows that the Kansas farmers have been paying their debts during the last seven years instead of borrowing and speculating.

NOT PROPHETIC.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH said during the consideration of the college business at the last April conference, and regarding his own service on the committee, that, "whatever active work he did for the church must be done within the next ten years, as he had already passed the threescore limit, and could not count on more than the threescore and ten years allotted to man, with any degree of certainty, in which to labor."

This declaration was made as a plain business proposition, without any reference to how long he expected to live, what he might do, or when or how the second coming of Jesus would occur.

Some have magnified this saying into a prophecy, and coupled it with the Savior's second coming, and are doing themselves and the cause harm by enlarging on it in that sense; it is better to use common sense about it and quit doing mischief with an innocent saying.

UNITY IN ZION.

ON Saturday, September 7, we attended the stake conference of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion, held in the Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, Utah, President Angus Cannon presiding. Though there was nothing of special importance said or done, it might be of some interest to HERALD readers to know the manner of doing business among this people. Not a motion nor a second was made during the day, nor was any opportunity given for discussion, nor for objections, only in the negative vote, and no negative vote was cast. There were twenty-nine young men passed upon as being worthy of ordination to the office of elder. The routine in each case was exactly the same, the words used verbatim except names.

Here it is. The president said: "Bishop—of—ward recommends—Evans to be worthy to be ordained to the office of an elder. Is Bro. Evans present?" Bro. Evans arose and was addressed by the chair as follows: "Bro. Evans, you are recommended to be ordained an elder. If ordained to that office will you faithfully fill that calling and attend your quorum meetings?" The answer was in the affirmative. Then the president said: "All who are in favor of recommending Bro. Evans, raise the right hand. Contrary by the same sign." Thus unity is preserved in Zion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Can a teacher preside over a branch, in which there are elders, if he is duly elected by the branch?

Ans.—The Book of Rules formally accepted by the church, page 140, section 164, provides that:—

The officers of the church who will be recognized by these meetings, as having a right to preside, are:—A presiding elder who has been regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a priest, or priests, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a teacher, or teachers, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a deacon, or deacons, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch; a secretary or clerk of the branch, also regularly chosen by vote of the branch.

In the absence of the presiding elder of the branch the priest or priests chosen by the branch or either of them shall have the right to preside, whatever other elders or priests may be present in such meeting; in the absence of the presiding elder and the priest or priests, the teacher or teachers, or either of them shall have the right to preside; in the absence of the presiding elder, the priest or priests, and the teacher or teachers, the deacon or deacons, or either of them, shall have the right to preside; the priority of right of associate priests, teachers and deacons to be determined by seniority of office in the branch should question arise in regard to presidency; the right to act for the branch as its officers having been previously determined by the vote of the branch.

There ought to be no question as to the right, or propriety of a teacher to act as a presiding officer in a branch organization properly effected by the vote of the branch, the common consent of the members having been so formally obtained.

In all general, unorganized, or promiscuous assemblies of the church, the highest in authority presides; in organized bodies, branches, or districts, those who are designated by the action of the members take precedence in the matter of presiding.

We have answered this question so often that it is slightly discouraging to think that there is any need to ask it again.

Q.—If a teacher can preside under said conditions is it necessary that he be acting teacher to so preside?

A.—Certainly; he is not the teacher of the branch unless he is the acting teacher.

Q.—Did Joseph Smith use the Urim and Thummim in translating the Holy Scriptures?

A.—The history of Joseph Smith does not state further than that Sidney Rigdon wrote for him—acted as his "scribe"—during the time of translating.

THE charge made that the Rev. W. W. Brown, head of the "True Reformers," at Richmond, Virginia, has made fifty thousand dollars out of the order has created a scandal. The organization has thirty thousand members among the negroes—Press dispatch.

Things like the foregoing are the things that hurt. We know nothing of the guilt or innocence of "Rev. Brown," but use the item as showing how ministerial influence designed to be for good should be kept clean and true. The man who uses his clerical place to defraud or deceive the people has a day of reckoning to meet either in this world or in the world to come; perhaps in both.

CARDINAL GIBBONS has issued a circular letter to all American Archbishops, Bishops, and priests, desiring faithful children of the church to unite in prayer, September 20, for the independence of the Pope. The day is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the annexation of the Roman provinces to the kingdom of Italy.—Press dispatch.

The foregoing shows that the Church of Rome remains unchanged in her policy concerning the restoration of the Pope's temporal power. The circular letter is not well received by many American Catholics.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. E. BUTTERWORTH, Dow City, Iowa, September 18:—

The Saints at Auburn, Sac County, Iowa, are erecting a neat chapel 24x30 and are progressing with the work very nicely all things considered. As I understand the carpenter's profession to some extent I have been with them for the last three weeks preaching in Auburn and vicinity Sundays and evenings and working on the church during the day. The church is located on the business street where lots are small, but the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company were kind enough to give us two lots. The deed has been received and sent to the recorder's office and will be forwarded to the Bishop in due time. The reason for building was sufficient to justify the undertaking, as there was an effort made last spring to shut our people out of the schoolhouse, which was at least partially successful.

Bro. J. A. Grant, Bay Port, Michigan, September 12:—

Since I left the tent in Detroit, July 18, I have conducted eight two days' meetings, all of which were well attended both by Saints and outsiders. The meetings have been in various parts of the district. A good interest has been manifest throughout; twelve baptized during these meetings. We were pleased to meet at the Five Lakes meeting Elders Kier, Cooper, Goodenough, and Phelps, all of whom rendered us excellent assistance. Come again brethren. So the good work moves on.

Bro. C. J. Spurlock, writing from Relfe, Missouri, September 14, says:—

I am now in Phelps County, holding meeting in the neighborhood of a few Saints from Nebraska. There are fourteen Saints here and two more are expected to arrive soon. The families of Brn. Godfrey, Tibbles, and Hwey are here. Bro. Tibbles is an elder. I have the use of the Baptist church and expect to remain one week.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, Heppner, Oregon, the 13th inst.:—

On Sunday evening at Condon five adults arose for baptism. I baptized three of them and Bro. John Davis will baptize the others next Sunday.

Bro. S. B. Robinson, writing from Ferndale, California, the 11th, reports a good time at a two days' meeting at Waddington, held by Saints in that corner of the State. He says:—

We have been laboring in this county for two years as circumstances permit, with no visible mark of fruit; yet the Spirit says, "Press on, and come up higher," which with the help of the Lord we are striving to do. Some say, "We believe every word you preach;" others, "The doctrine is all right, but the name."

Bro. D. E. Tucker, Morris chapel, Tennessee, September 12:—

Bro. W. R. Smith and I came here with the intention of doing some work in the way of preaching, but so many protracted meetings are going on it seems there is no chance for us at present. We held a series of meetings in the little chapel east of Lexington, where we baptized four of Bro. Reed's family—three daughters and son, which was in fulfillment of a prophecy delivered by Bro. W. W. Blair, on Bro. Reed's head while confirming him in Colorado: "You shall see many of your posterity come into the church." I did most of the preaching, using a chart, Bro. S. doing the baptizing. We also labored in three other places but with little success. Have also been trying to encourage the Saints. Bro. T. C. is near the gulf.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, Maysville, Missouri, September 16:—

Bro. J. W. Wight and the writer came here last Tuesday and erected our new district tent almost in the heart of the city. Congregations growing daily until last night; like Paddy's tent, it was full inside and out. J. W. is a strong man and wins the confidence of his hearers. He has captured laurels that heretofore belonged to others, and has fully earned the warm spot he now holds in the estimation of many friends here. Yesterday we troubled the waters again, baptizing four noble souls and there are others to follow. Bro. Wight leaves for Council Bluffs this morning.

Bro. T. F. Stafford, Lewiston, Illinois, the 18th:—

Bro. M. T. Short was here with us two weeks and preached some splendid sermons and gained the good will of many people. He went from here to the reunion at Park Bluffs, Iowa.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BOTH the Omaha Bee and the Council Bluffs Nonpareil of the 17th pronounce the Council Bluffs reunion an entire success. The notices of both papers are quite friendly and give all important features, the former giving the Epitome of Faith in full. Over twenty-five hundred people are reported to have been present on Sunday the 15th.

The Wayne County Press, published at Fairfield, Illinois, devotes half a column to the Southern Illinois district reunion in its issue of the 12th; good advertising for the work.

Bro. G. M. L. Whitman reports the baptism of some "good folks" at Valley, Nebraska, branch, where he and others have labored of late. Brn. Daugherty and Whitman have baptized twelve since August 25.

A copy of the Honolulu, Hawaii, Commercial Advertiser of September 5, reports a total of thirty-four cases of Asiatic cholera and twenty-eight deaths. The disease, with the exception of one case, has been confined to the native population. We trust our people there will be remembered. Paper sent us by Bro. G. J. Waller.

The Lake Superior coast was visited by a tidal wave four feet high on the 14th of September, which did much damage. No cause is known for the phenomenon.

Bro. A. H. Smith was called home from the Council Bluffs reunion because of the sickness of Sr. Smith; and Bro. F. A. Smith because of sickness in his family.

Bishop E. L. Kelley went to Bevier, Missouri, on the 17th to conduct a funeral service.

Graceland College, Lamoni, opened its regular work of instruction on the 17th inst. with three instructors and a class of about twenty in number. The work begins modestly, but earnestly, and is destined to become an established fixture for good, we believe. Work progresses on the college building.

Bro. E. W. Nunley has been laboring in Brazos County, Texas, among old acquaintances of the Baptist Church in which he once was a minister. He found them glad to see him, but not friendly to the gospel he preaches. He expected to discuss with some of them if they were willing. Letter dated the 14th inst.

Bro. James Thomson, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, reports additions to the branch that encourage the Saints, who have worked unceasingly to get the gospel before the people. Bro. M. H. Forscutt's labors in that city were productive of much good.

The ancient Hammond house in Marblehead, Mass., is being torn down, and some of its spruce timbers, which have been protected from rain and wind for more than two hundred years, are being eagerly sought after by violinmakers for use in the manufacture of their instruments.

William Brooks, an employe in a Baltimore iron-working shop, has recently turned from a lathe a steel shaving 60 feet 1 inch long. As the shaving, or turn, as it is called, comes from the lathe it curls up like a spiral spring and forms a tiny tube about one-eighth of an inch in diameter. The turn made by Mr. Brooks had 7,550 circumferences. It is said that a turn 106 feet long was once made in a Cleveland shop.

A ten-foot "windwheel" in Nebraska raises a thousand gallons of water daily to a height of seventy feet. These windwheels are coming more and more into use in the West, and it is thought that they will have a very important bearing on the industries of the future.

Crime is more common in single life than in married. In the former thirty-three in 100,000 are guilty, while only eleven married men of the same number have gravely broken the laws.

EXAMPLE.

Careless I climbed that path, and just behind
My weaker brother came with halting tread,
And yet with confidence that where I led
He would be safe to follow; but I, blind,
Leading the blind, strayed from the way and fell,
And bore him with me in my swift descent.
"O Justice! sometimes kind, thou knowest well
The fault was mine,—mine be the punishment."
"Nay," spake her awful voice. "Alone, alone,
Without thine aid, he shall be called to stand
Before my bar: but thou, who dragged'st him down,
Upon thy brow, shalt wear a double brand,
And thy weak soul, trembling beneath my frown, Shall answer for his sins, and for thine own."—Set.

"AS WE HAVE OPPORTUNITY."

ACCORDING to St. Paul, one of God's children cannot fail in any effort to do good to men. That we may never see the fruit of our labors does not affect the law laid down by the apostle. In that wonderful conclusion in his letter to the Galatians, he makes it plain that he who tries to serve God in seeking the good of men cannot fail. For the relation between honest effort and success is as certain as the relation between sowing and reaping.

It is not an accidental relation; it is bound up in law. The general principle is: "Whosoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Nature makes this plain. Just as surely and as truly in God's moral government, "he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Because this is true, the great thinker and Christian worker exhorts us against weariness through waiting and longing to see the harvest. "For in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." We are not to be as impatient children who scratch up the grain to see why it has not yielded fruit.

Some harvests come soon; others, after many years. Close by me are Chinese gardeners, who furnish our city with vegetables. Three crops a year they will raise on some land. They plant a bean called "the six weeks' bean;" English peas and Irish potatoes come soon after planting. Adjoining one of their truck patches is a walnut grove recently set out. In six or seven years there may be a score of nuts to the tree; next year after, more. But a crop worth gathering for market will appear in ten or twelve years, and it should be fuller after twenty. We must not grow "weary in well doing;" between our seed-planting and our crop-gathering we must sometimes wait a long time,—wait often till we have gone away from our labors to the rest of God's children.

But the time element—whether it be a day or a century between "doing good" and the resulting reward—does not affect the law. A Christian seeking the good of his fellow men cannot fail. One of the very few certain things in this world is this: "In due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

Opportunities do not come to us by chance; God sends them. They do not leave us to capricious choice; because God sends them, we are bound to him to embrace them, and do our best with them. To willfully neglect an opportunity to do good is to trifle with the most sacred relations. Opportunities employed make us coworkers with God.

We can do, when opportunity comes, what without it would be impossible. Take the case of food and hunger. If A has plenty of food, and there is no hungry man accessible, his abundance does not make an opportunity. If B is hungry, and A cannot reach him, the starving man's need does not make an opportunity. But if A with food can reach B with his hunger, the case is changed, and, out of the relations between these two, opportunity comes for "doing good" to the body and soul of a man. Last year Russia had hunger and America had bread; out of these conditions opportunity for a great Christian deed arose.

One of our saddest mistakes grows out of our disposition to think of our opportunity as great or small. If it seem to us to be great, we are roused to effort; if it seem to us small, we are tempted to pass it by as of little moment. But the truth is, no man knows what, in this work of doing good, is great or small. In Georgia, at a camp meeting once, I preached on a Sunday morning to two thousand people. In that country place it seemed to be a large opportunity, but no one can tell. What resulted was not made manifest. In the same county once I met an old negro man at work in the woods. An impulse came to me to talk to him about religion. We two sat on a log together. I found him as Philip found Candace's grand treasurer,—longing for some one to guide him and to help him to the Savior. There on a log I talked "to him Jesus and the resurrection." I am sure he was converted right there, while we talked and cried and prayed together in the silent forest, with the old log for pulpit and altar and inquiry room. That was a great opportunity for me.

The books tell us of a young girl who once, in London, spoke kindly to a little boy in rags, playing in the gutter. She won his confidence, and by and by won him for Christ, who made a great pioneer missionary out of him. Yet most people would have thought that girl's opportunity, when she spoke to the ragged child, was very small, and that the Archbishop of Canterbury that day had the great opportunity afforded in all London. It is sad to think of it, yet it is very probable that many people, overlooking what seem to be very small occasions, miss utterly the greatest opportunities that God sends them in a whole lifetime. He does not give us any gauge by which to measure opportunities, because we are to work by faith as well as walk by faith.

To measure an opportunity in itself and in its final outcome, we need to know the value of three unknown quantities; and we cannot know either one. If x represents what we can do when we do our best; if y represents the receptivity and possible spiritual development of even a little boy; if z represents what it may please God to do through us for the child and for the world, after a time, through the child become a man,—we have an equation whose solution will never appear in figures like those we use in accounts and census tables. What to our nearsightedness may seem to be smallest, may well be, in a world God governs in the interests of Christ's kingdom, the greatest of all the opportunities he intrusts to us while we live upon the earth. If we would make sure of not losing our greatest, we must do our best with what appear our smallest opportunities, slighting none.

In yonder cabin a poor widow works from morning till late bedtime, to earn food for her children. Although not counted as a person of consequence in the great city, she is one of God's "elect ladies." In him she "lives, and moves, and has her being." She lives religion, and teaches her children to fear and love the Lord. What an opportunity may be hers as she toils for bread, yet happy in God, trusting him in all things, and loving him with all her heart,—how great, God only knows!—Selected.

TEACH THE CHILDREN.

Tell them, teach them gospel truths,
Help to make them noble youths;
The young mind is fertile ground;
Plant the seed of truth around;
Watch each tender bud and shoot,
Help it bear the best of fruit,
Such as kindness, patience, love,
Richest fruits from heaven above.
Duty done, your lives will show
Benefits where'er you go;
Children taught the gospel plan
Of salvation given for man!
God is with you! don't delay!
He will open up the way.

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY.

WHAT person who has the care of little children but has been delighted with the first, almost unconscious baby effort to imitate the movements of those about it. The child learns to take its first steps and to form its first imperfect syllables all by imitation. Later the little girl delights in trailing a shawl behind her and managing it in the way she has seen her mother manage her skirts, and talking to her dolly in the way she has seen her mother coo to her flesh and blood baby. This is beautiful, and it is only natural that those who love the tiny creatures should admire every dainty action, should watch lovingly the increase in knowledge of different kinds day by day, and should delight in each new and cunning baby way.

But, dear sisters, there is a deeper meaning than the surface one of pretty baby ways and of premature quickness of mind of which we are so proud. It means that the quicker and brighter the child, the more sure it is to grow into a miniature copy of the parents, especially the mother, who is with it constantly; and are any of us such perfect patterns that we would like to have our little ones who are dear to us grow to be just such as we are? Does it not rather fill us with sorrow and regret when we see some long forgotten habit, or perchance sin, making its appearance again in our children?

It is often remarked of husband and wife that they have even grown to look like each other as the years have passed by. Then think how much more impressionable are the minds of the children. Think, too, how more than natural it is that they should try to become like those whom they love most. If humanly speaking a child's character is formed by the time it is ten years old, formed for time and eternity, what shall we do, those of us who have thoughtlessly let the time pass by without doing our utmost, until all of those years have gone past our recall? Thank God that nothing is impossible with him! Pray with all our hearts to be forgiven for our sins and rest neither day nor night until God has changed the hearts that we have molded.

Dear sisters, let us who have little children thank God too for that. Thank him that the time is not gone by for us to train our children aright, and never let the day begin without putting ourselves in his hands to be kept from sin, not only on our own account, but because of the lives we live before the eyes of our little ones.

Do you remember the story of the two Scotchmen who, for love of their native land, brought to this country the one a Scotch thistle, the other a swarm of bees? One brought a pest which has not been eradicated to this day: the other a blessing which still fills the land with sweetness. Which are we bringing to our children's hearts by the silent force of our daily living, a blessing or a curse?

MEMORY TEXTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

"See that ye love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean, cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to your bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated; and above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace; pray always, that you may not faint until I come."—Doc. and Cov. 85: 38.

LEEDS, England, Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—I left Leeds on the morning of the 9th inst., and arrived in Granton, Scotland, three miles from Edinburg, at about five o'clock p. m., same date, and by six o'clock had embarked on board the steamer Laura of the United Danish Steamship Line. The Laura is only 229 feet long, tonnage 689, horse power 800, average speed 10 knots per hour. However, she is solidly built and well fitted for rough seas. The fact of her being so light makes her an uncomfortable boat to sail on and causes her to ride lightly on the waves; hence she rolls and tumbles about considerably and as a consequence of such rocking the majority of the passengers were kept prisoners within their narrow bunks with seasickness. We sailed from port late Saturday night with about twenty-two saloon passengers and a few second class, the majority of whom were tourists, consisting of professors, barristers, and doctors, who presumably were out for a grand time; and if gambling, swearing, smoking, drinking wine, rum, and beer make a good time, surely they had it; and, just think of one lone preacher being associated with this class of characters for the space of two weeks! When the writer called for hot water at the table, and refused to take a little wine and join in a friendly smoking bout with the jolly good fellows, he was considered as one out of his element. The most amusing thing of all was that some of those ungodly characters feigned to be Christians, and if such is the deportment of those professed Christians, no wonder the ranks of infidelity are filling up by the thousands. I truly felt grateful in my heart to our heavenly Father when I was permitted to set my feet on terra firma and get away from such a sinful set of men.

Early on Sunday morning we experienced a very rough sea, which continued a day and a half. I was one of the first to get sick and was confined to my narrow bed for two days, and indeed, I was very sick and did not altogether recover until we reached Iceland, and then had another siege of it on our return voyage. We called at four points at the Färöe Islands and Westmanna Islands. I will give a description of the sights we saw at said islands later on. We arrived at Reikiavik, Iceland, on the 17th. The first thing I did on my arrival was to hunt up Bro. Eirik Olafsson who has been writing to some of the leading officials of the church for over a period of two years to send an elder to that land to baptize fifteen or twenty people who were anxiously waiting to unite with the church. I was kept quite busy for some time after my arrival searching for the brother in question. I had his address, but I discovered to my amusement and to the astonishment of the Icelanders who lived in the house of which I had the address and of those adjoining who had turned out to see the strange foreigner, that we could not understand each other; and what made the task more difficult, there were several families living in the same house. At last I had to turn away from the house in despair, but on the way to the hotel I met a little boy who could talk a little English who took an interest in my forlorn condition and directed me down to the dock, and here I found the long sought man busy at work with a number of other men, loading ponies into a vessel. I soon learned that he was a poor man, and I was therefore necessitated to take up my abode at the hotel at the rate of five shillings and sixpence or one dollar and twenty cents in American money per day.

I had been in town but a short time when I began to hear rumors reflecting on the character of Bro. Olafsson, and upon investigation I found them to be true, and which are as follows: Bro. Olafsson has been a widower for some years, but a few months ago he got the idea into his head that he should take unto himself a wife. He finally persuaded a very young woman who is somewhat deformed and of rather dull intellect, to be his wife. Now there are laws governing marriage in Iceland as in other countries. The majority of the natives are Lutherans, it being the state church; but they have a proviso in their constitution by which they who are not Lutherans can marry outside of the church; such have to make application to the sheriff and get married by the magistrates. Bro. O. went to the sheriff and was informed by said officer as to the course he should pursue to get married, and was also told that it would cost about one dollar and eight cents; but Bro. O. concluded that that was too much money to pay to get married, hence in opposition to the laws of the country and of the church he assumed the right to perform the ceremony himself, and the following was the formula he used, which he himself gave me: "Hereby we declare, I, Eirik Olafsson and Gutfmine Semundsa, that we intend here to-day in the presence of witnesses to promise and give each other our marriage pledge with the words and conditions following: I, Eirik, have consulted myself, and God in heaven to take this girl that stands by me, as my wife. Gutfmine Semundsa! hast thou consulted yourself and God in heaven to take me as thy husband? (She said yes.) Then we will give each other our hand in confirmation thereof. Now we have given each other promise and hand to be together and love each other in the name of God, Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost." Then he pronounced them husband and wife.

Well, this outrageous and ridiculous conduct on the part of Bro. O. has aroused the indignation of the people and has brought upon himself and the church a bad name. The affair created such a sensation that it was brought to the notice of the governor, the bishop, the sheriff, and before the House of Parliament. The people there know that he has no connection with the Utah Mormons for the reason that he published a small pamphlet in which he showed the difference between the two organizations, and has also informed the people that he is a member of the Reorganization, or, as he calls them, Josephites; hence it is that the Reorganization has been placed in a very bad light in Iceland, because the people are inclined to charge the church with his unwise and cranky action. Therefore I did not baptize any, for the reason that I did not see anyone who desired to be baptized; and from what I could glean those who at one time wished to be have gone back on Bro. Eirik since his pseudo-marriage.

I summoned him to the hotel along with an interpreter and told him plainly that I did not recognize his so-called marriage, and neither would the church countenance his conduct in the matter, and requested him to go immediately and be married legally by the proper authorities. To this he objected, saying that he considered he was legally married. I then proceeded to show him the error of his way by calling his attention to the fact that Jesus Christ was subject to the powers that governed in his day when he paid tribute to Cesar; also referred to St. Paul's statement that we are to be subject to the powers that be, and to the statement in Doctrine and Covenants that "he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land;" and I had the interpreter read the following clause in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, page 330, paragraph 2: "He shall pronounce them husband and wife in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country and authority vested in him." I then called his attention to the fact that he had no authority vested in him by the laws governing marriage in his country nor from the church of which he is a member, and therefore his marriage was invalid. On his way home he told the interpreter that I had come to dissolve that which God had put together. He also wrote me before I left that I did not believe the Bible because I would not sanction his marriage. Now my opinion of the man is that he is a stubborn, cranky old man, and that we can never build up the work in that country by paying any attention to him. The interpreter went to the bishop and the sheriff and informed them of the nature of the interview between Bro. O. and myself, and those high dignitaries told him that if I had so instructed Bro. O. that I was welcome to the island. Iceland is under the Danish Government and no doubt this affair has been reported to the head officials at Denmark, and as a matter of course it will make it difficult for us to prosecute the work in Denmark, Norway, and Iceland unless we as a church can prove to them that Bro. O. has violated the church laws; hence it is that I am of the opinion that you as the President of the Church should write to those head officials in Iceland informing them of our attitude toward the matrimonial laws. The interpreter who is an intelligent man and quite influential with the prominent officials told me that a declaration from you regarding the above matter would be highly appreciated by said authorities.

I herewith give you the names: Magnus Stephensen, Governor of Iceland; Hallgriman Svoinessen, Bishop of Iceland; Halldon Danielson, Sheriff, Reikiavik. Address, Reikiavik, Iceland.

I was agreeably surprised at the appearance of the people, as they have an honest-looking countenance and are very neat and clean both in person and in their homes; also very industrious. Of course there are exceptions among them as with all other nations. They are also a very sociable and friendly people. In my opinion Iceland is a good field to operate in, providing we had men adapted for the mission. The men who are best fitted for the mission are the Danish, as I was informed by men who are familiar with the Icelandic and the Danish languages that the person who can speak the latter can soon learn the former; and moreover the Danish language is extensively spoken throughout the island. I sincerely believe that if the church would send a capable young Danish brother with his wife to Iceland that a good work could be done and many people be gathered into the church; but it would require considerable patience and a persistent effort on the part of the minister and his wife to bring about the desired results.

I very much regret that Bro. Olafsson permitted himself to commit such a folly, as I feel confident that I could have effected a considerable amount of good while there had it not have been for his unwise action. However, I am sure that some good was done, as the church was materially benefited by my visit there as I was enabled to remove much of the stigma and disgrace that had been brought upon the fair name of the church by the folly of this man. We cannot afford to have the church placed in a false light before the authorities and people of that land, and I believe that I have been instrumental in removing much prejudice and placing the position of the church before the leading authorities of that country. I arranged while there with one of the leading printers of Reikiavik to have tracts or any declaration that we might desire to have published printed in their own language, and he agreed to distribute them among the people and the cost would be but trifling.

I regret also that Bro. O. did not inform me of the sensation that his act had created in the last letter that he wrote me, which was in the latter part of July, as he informed me in said letter that the prospects were very bright and that a number were waiting for baptism. Had it not have been for the encouraging letters that we received from this brother and a dream I had soon after my arrival in England, which indicated that I would go there, I should not have gone. In this dream I saw myself on the steamer that I in reality did sail on, and other things connected with the dream were fulfilled. It is consoling to me to know that I have done my uttermost in the interests of the church and that at a sacrifice on my part, as I suffered considerable inconvenience both in going and returning, and I wish it distinctly understood that if there is anything in this world that the writer dislikes it is a sea voyage, as it produces very unpleasant effects on me both on the sea and for many days after; therefore every time I go on a mission that necessitates a sea voyage it is with considerable dread of the anticipated torture that I undertake it.

I am operating at present in the city of Leeds and will be here for some eight or ten days yet, as there are matters pending that require my attention. From here I go to Birmingham, Lydney, and South Wales. I learn by a recent letter from Bro. Joseph Dewsnap that Bro. Caffall is in Manchester busy at work and enjoying good health.

Yours hopefully,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

REGO, Ind., Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—I returned to my field, Orange and Washington Counties, Indiana, May 16, and commenced holding meeting at the No. 5 schoolhouse, Orange County, and on the 26th I baptized Bro. John M. May a noble-hearted man, and he broke the ice—the first one baptized in Orange County by us.

May 27 I opened the work at another point and continued one week. Returned here June 30. I held a grove meeting at Rego. There was a large crowd and plenty of provisions, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. I spoke twice; had splendid liberty. Bro. and Sr. Wheeler of Galena came to our help. We returned to No. 5 schoolhouse; Bro. T. F. Wheeler occupied.

July 1 I returned home and the 9th my son, James E. took sick, and on August 3 he departed this life. This was a very trying time to me, but he had the assurance during the first of his sickness that he was going where the good go, and that it would not be long before he could return. He was a faithful, obedient son.

August 24 I returned to my field of labor, and on Sunday, September 1, I had the pleasure of baptizing twelve in the silvery waters of Blue River. There were four or five hundred people on the banks to witness the rite. Elder James G. Scott, my father, came to our assistance and staid until Tuesday and I opened up a new place north of here on the 3d and held four meetings with marked interest. On Saturday, the 7th, I returned here and yesterday I baptized two others, and to-day one more; making sixteen in all, and they are all heads of families except one; and the best part, I have got some of the very best people here and several others are near the kingdom. The Lord is moving the work in this part of the field. I have plenty of preaching—more calls than I can fill. I have two other calls in new places, but can't fill until later on.

We have been threatened by a Campbellite to swallow up Mormonism, as they call it, but he wants fifty dollars to start on. He wanted fifty dollars, but at last advised the people to read histories against the Saints and find out themselves; so I apprehend no fears.

JAMES M. SCOTT.

THEODORE, Ala., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—I came to this mission August 22 and attended the Florida district conference, held at Coldwater, about twelve miles from Milton. I preached ten times in that vicinity and six were baptized while I was there, and the Saints seemed encouraged. The work is in rather a low condition in that district, but with a little effort can be revived. Bro. L. F. West, living at Coldwater, is an able man and I expect to hear of him doing some good work in the future.

Bro. S. D. Allen is a man of good natural ability, full of zeal, and when placed in condition, will do some good work in the church. Others in that district would do good work as helps. Bro. Powell district president is doing what he can, but is not in condition to do very much.

From there I went to Bay Minette, Alabama, to attend the conference of that district. We had a fairly good time. Bro. G. T. Chute is the president of that district and gives satisfaction as far as I could see. The Saints at Bay Minette have built a good, frame church house 26 x 38 feet, 17 feet to the ceiling. The enemies of the truth tried hard to prevent the Saints from building the house, but by courage, perseverance, sacrifice, and the blessing of God they succeeded in building a very good house. I met Bro. T. C. Kelley, president of the mission, at this point. The house was dedicated on Sunday the 8th, Bro. Kelley and the writer officiating. Bro. J. D. Erwin and J. M. Baggerly of the general missionary force were with us. Bro. Erwin has gained quite a reputation as a preacher in this field and Bro. Chute is recognized as a man of sterling worth by the Saints here, and Bro. Baggerly as a scholarly lecturer and good man.

From Bay Minette I came here and preached two nights to the satisfaction of the Saints. Two old ladies were baptized here to-day aged sixty-eight and seventy-three years respectively. This mission needs more laborers. There are many calls for preaching; and many could be gathered into the church here by proper work being done. What is needed here is the principles of the gospel presented plainly and under the influence of the Spirit of God, leaving out theories, worldly wisdom, and scholastic lore, and preach the gospel that saves. I go to Scranton, Mississippi, this evening. Expect to be in that part of the mission over two Sundays, then back into Alabama. Praying and working for the success of the gospel, I am,
In the faith,

DUNKERTON, Iowa, Sept. 2.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed you will find orders for fourteen Hymnals. I was surprised when I read in the Herald that there were only about five hundred ordered. Where are those large orders we heard of at General Conference last spring? I understood then that one branch was going to order about five hundred. I am sure the book is needed; then why wait and not send in the orders and money at once?

Our conference for Eastern Iowa, held at Fairbank, closed last night, and since I have been in the church I have never attended a more serene, peaceable, and enjoyable conference. All seemed to enjoy themselves, both Saints and outsiders. A number of outsiders invited the visiting Saints home with them to stay all night. O, what a change! Only a few years ago while Bro. Roush and the writer were holding forth in the same town a mob waited on us at the hall door, but did us no harm. Now we have many warm friends there. This change is no doubt due to the faithful living of the Saints in town and vicinity. May they so live as to compel their enemies to speak well of them.

I never felt better in my life than I did in preaching at the conference. On Sunday afternoon I had the pleasure of baptizing Miss Alameda Linnell, of Powersville, one of the foremost school-teachers of Floyd County, also Miss May Hines, of Independence, a noble young lady whose father once lived in Nauvoo, and who though now dead, always spoke well of the Saints. This lady's mother was baptized a short time ago at Independence, Iowa, by Bro. Hand, while we had the tent there.

We were all very much disappointed that Bro. Lambert was not with us at conference; we had a large attendance and all wanted to see Bro. Lambert. I think I was asked by fifty or more, "Won't Lambert be here?" We also expected Bro. O. B. Thomas, but he did not come; on that account I had to drop the Clayton County appointment, and Bro. Hand goes to Clinton City with the tent, while I will wend my way to Montrose reunion. May God bless his work to the salvation of the honest, and to the burning out of the dross of the dishonest ones.

Yours for the truth,

J. S. ROTH.

P. S.—My address is Grinnell, Iowa.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing my experiences have been somewhat varied. After spending about a week in the garden and hay field at home I started for Boston, where I joined Bro. F. M. Sheehy in his tent in a country place called Rakeville, where we stopped some two weeks. This is a new place and my experience there was delightful. Sleeping in the tent and eating vegetables fresh from the gardens sustained and invigorated the body; friendly intercourse with the neighbors developed the social elements; reading matter and cordial attrition with Bro. Frank nourished the intellectual; and the demand evinced for the gospel by full tent at the services brought out that upon which the spiritual could be abundantly fed. Still I'm no giant; I often wonder why so much good fodder is thrown away upon cattle that won't grow. Yet I presume the working horse requires some good food to keep him going. The name of Rakeville will always be associated in my mind with pleasant recollections.

From there we attended the Massachusetts reunion at Plainville. That season of profit and enjoyment has been written up for your columns by Bro. Robley, although I might add that from an individual standpoint the "wheel" that sometimes brings fortunes proved a source of hateful excuse and brought results of a "staple" character. It was also my happy lot to visit the hills of Cumberland and enjoy the fruits thereof; after which I joined Bro. Robley and with him pitched the tent on Bellevue Avenue in the city which perpetuates the name of Roger Williams. The good Spirit as well as the good Saints stood by us in our efforts and the general testimony is that the two weeks spent there were by no means lost. Many encouraging words have come from both within and without the fold. We were ably assisted in four discourses from Brn. Joseph Luff and U. W. Greene.

I afterward preached two discourses in the tent, which has been removed to Diskville and is now under the management of Bro. Robley, assisted by Bro. George Smith, a promising young brother on his maiden missionary trip. These men are so sanguine concerning their success in that place that they even expect to convert a barn; and I have no doubt but many will hear able sermons, strong testimonies, and fervent prayers coming from that convert. Of course it will require some labor upon it first.

The Sunday following I spent with the Saints in the city. I enjoyed their society very much and was made to feel their good will in a substantial manner—in various ways, all of which I appreciate and will not soon forget. I was also sensibly impressed with the necessity of moral, mental, and spiritual development to be able to answer to the demand upon a traveling elder. May the good Lord bless them in every department of their work. I have shaken the kind hand of Providence (Rhode Island), and expect to proceed to-day to the Maine reunion at Green's Landing.

LOW BANKS, Ont., Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—After our reunion at Niagara Falls Bro. R. C. Evans and I came to Low Banks and did what we could for the spread of the gospel, until August 11, when we opened up at Dunnville, a town of considerable size. Through the kindness of Mr. Montague and the efforts of the Saints we obtained the use of his large opera hall for one week and longer if we desired. Having this good opportunity for presenting the truth the good Saints went to work with a will and put out large posters notifying the people of our coming and advertising the subjects to be talked upon for the first week, which were as follows: "Jesus from the cradle to the grave." "Is the earth the final abode of Saints?" "Does death end all?" "Is water baptism essential to salvation?" "Is the gospel of Christ taught in its fullness now?" "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God or a blasphemous and daring impostor?" "Is the Book of Mormon of divine authenticity?" "The abominations of Salt Lake Mormonism denounced." "Cause and cure of infidelity." "Signs of the second coming of Christ." I must say that Elder R. C. Evans handled the foregoing topics in a masterly manner, the good Spirit being with him to a marked degree.

Of course such peculiar teaching was not received by all, but it served to set the people thinking and Satan raging, and as a consequence we were told by the hall manager that we could not have the hall longer than the week advertised; and in order to show the citizens of Dunnville that he did not indorse our teaching, so as to keep up his trade (Mr. Montague has a large general store), he with others sent for a Rev. Keffer, a Disciple of some fame who bears the proud title of "our Ontario debater." On coming he immediately put out dodgers to the effect that he would expose Latter Day Saintism as being a fraud. Wednesday, August 21, was the day set for his first lecture and Bro. R. C. and myself were in attendance immediately under the inspiration of our Ontario debater. Our presence seemed to be of no help to him as he appeared very nervous, and at the close of his speech Bro. R. C. asked permission to ask a question, when he was promptly told to sit down. But our brother seemed to not understand the refusal given him and turned to the large audience of seven hundred who were now arising to go out and told them to sit down. "No," says Keffer, "you sit down;" but as yet the understanding of Elder Evans appeared to be absent from him and he turned again to the audience and exhorted them to sit down. By this time all were re-seated and Mr. Keffer seeing that it was difficult to make R. C. understand, allowed him to say a word if the manager of the hall would give his consent. Keffer knew the manager was against us and of course, as we expected, the manager arose and said we could not speak; but on seeing the audience disapprove of this he finally consented to permit Bro. Richard to make an announcement. Now you may rest assured that Elder Evans talked very plainly and positively and managed to say a great deal when he had opportunity. He stated to the people that he was willing to meet this Rev. Keffer upon the same platform with half hour about and fair play. To this the audience cheered to the echo. He further killed the leading thought advanced by Keffer in his discourse and made an announcement for the next evening; for at this moment a gentleman in the audience, seeing the injustice done by trying to refuse us permission to speak arose and said that we could have his building, which is an old Baptist church, to preach in. At the close of our brother's talk Mr. Keffer replied that he did not wish to get into any storm, and so his meeting was dismissed.

Next day we went to work and fitted up the building which was granted us, with the seats which were formerly used, and kind friends gave us lamps and other necessary things. I attended Keffer's lectures nightly and reported to Elder Evans his arguments, who replied to his tattle and scandal on the next evening; thus you see the attendants of our "replies" not only heard the attack but the defense.

Full houses greeted us and we have continued holding services till the present and will still further continue as long as interest demands. After Keffer had delivered his four orations to dwindled audiences he took occasion to come to our meeting one evening when it had been announced that I was to speak; but, poor fellow! R. C. was with us ready for any emergency. At the conclusion of the service the Ontario debater desired opportunity to speak and was accordingly granted it. The substance of his remarks showed that he was now willing to debate, but O, how one-sided it was to be to suit Mr. Keffer! He said he would not put up his faith against the Latter Day Saints, but was willing to debate with a Methodist or Baptist and discuss the claims of each. So you see his unfairness. Bro. Richard arose and showed his cowardice, and having a list of propositions with him he read them off and was willing to affirm four while Keffer was only asked to affirm three. To this fair platform of debate Mr. Keffer would not come and after Elder Evans had placed his propositions to the audience as to the fairness of them, they with a large vote decided in favor of the fair manner in which Elder Evans was willing to discuss; and when the opposite vote was called for not a hand went up. The truth is triumphing, error is falling before its march, while the honest in heart are learning of the restored gospel. Nine were baptized Friday and more expected to follow.

I ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of Elder Evans that he may receive strength of body to perform the duty devolving upon him. He has now preached twenty-eight times in twenty-nine days. As a result he is suffering greatly from an afflicted side and has been compelled to go to his home for rest.

MAYSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—We have just closed a very successful reunion at Clarksdale, Missouri. While the additions were not so large, yet we believe more prejudice was removed and a better understanding had of our position than ever before. Bro. J. A. Robinson gave us two sermons while swinging around his circle that gave unusual satisfaction to all who heard. Come again, John. Bro. A. H. Smith came to our rescue on the first day and like a brave soldier stood to his post heroically, until Friday evening, when he left us for Montrose, Iowa. A. H. has become a favorite here, and many will hail the day of his return. Preachers from whom we had promises and depended upon did not put in an appearance, hence Uncle Alex's appearance was to us like a Godsend and made us throw up our old hat and rejoice; and the sledge hammer blows he dealt for five days upon the sides of the old, struggling crafts, made many a heart rejoice and glad that they were Latter Day Saints. If he had staid until the end of the session I am inclined to the opinion I would have believed the whole story myself.

Bro. John Hawley from Sheridan, Missouri, was also with us and gave us some very valuable instructions. Uncle John is ripe in experience, and his advice if taken by younger ones will be of lasting good. These were the only two brethren with us from a distance until Friday, when Bro. J. W. Wight put in an appearance, also the smiling countenance of ye secretary, Bro. Cochran, and rendered us valuable aid during the three last days. The crowds at night were all we could ask and the preaching by J. W. very good and well received by all.

Bro. Wight and the writer are holding a week's meetings at Maysville in the new district tent—which we here remark is a "daisy," and we recommend John May, of Independence, the boss tent maker, for workmanship, material, and prices. Prospects are very flattering and people are anxious to hear the gospel. What the harvest will be is hard to conjecture. Of one thing we are assured: The gospel is winning its way to the hearts of men and women with greater rapidity than ever before in our experience, and we believe this is indicative of the "hastening time."

Although somewhat worse for wear in throat and lung power, yet we are still in the faith and standing by our guns with hopes of conquering in the sweet by and by.

Yours in bonds,

T. W. CHATBURN.
