WIRT, Indiana, Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—Some time has elapsed since I have written you, but I have been keeping the work moving to the best of my ability. Calls for preaching are far more numerous than I can respond to. When I. P. Baggerly, our missionary, gave me my portion of the field to labor in I had considerable trouble to get places to preach in, but there seems to be a change. People are anxious to hear the truth. Doors are opened and the cry comes, "Come and preach for us." The apostate gentile churches of the present century are falling, or, in other words, Babylon is falling just as the angel said she would. The cunning arch impostors of modern times under the name of Popish and Protestant ministers are being put to flight, and the gospel of the Son of God is winning its way as a witness to the nations of the world.

At our grove meeting in Ripley County, we had a splendid time; all enjoyed themselves well, except Bro. Daniels, and he blistered under the collar. I never saw as large a crowd attend meeting as was in attendance while there. I think some six or eight will unite with the work if all goes well. I have of late received several invitations to return, which we will do, nothing preventing, the 14th inst., and I hope to have Bro. I. P. Baggerly to assist me.

Some eighteen or twenty years ago when Bro. C. Scott opened the work in and near New Marion, he had considerable opposition to contend with, such as stopping flues, chopping trees across the roads, and even a mob armed and equipped came to molest. When the alarm was given in relation to danger Bro. H. Scott would not go to meeting, and when Bro. Columbus went he preached from the text, "Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" I am told by old people who were there that the brother's tongue was as the pen of a ready writer, and by the power and influence of God's Spirit the enemy was put to flight and no one hurt, while Bro. Harbert is out of the work, now preaching for the Christian Church. God don't want cowards; he wants men who will defend this work in time of trouble as well as when all is peace.

I am the only conference appointee in this part of the district and have only preached as my circumstances permit. I have labored all week preaching of Saturdays, Sundays, and the work now demands attention. A person never knows what good he can do even around home until an effort is made. I am asked quite frequently, "When will you preach at home schoolhouse," where we have large crowds and good interest. Brethren Marshall and Porter have been willing helpers. Ever praying for Zion's redemption,

M. R. SCOTT, JR.

WHY I AM A "JOSEPHITE."—No. 2.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

WE have shown that a successor was to be appointed, and how he was to be appointed, and it now remains for us to show who was appointed. Turn again to that which is written:—

Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must needs remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.—D. C. 84: 3; Utah edition 86: 8-10.

The use of this passage in this connection is objected to upon the ground that it is not definite enough in its statement of whose seed or lineage is meant, because of the passage in the first paragraph of this section, "Verily thus saith the Lord unto you my servants." Unfortunately, we cannot tell, either by the revelation itself or by history, who are meant by the term "my servants;" but fortunately, we know (and no one will dispute it) that one of the persons addressed was Joseph the Seer, and the language used makes it plain who is meant by "you" in the paragraph quoted; for in order to show who is meant, this qualifying clause is added, "with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers;" and turning to the Book of Mormon the lineage of Joseph the Seer is revealed to extend back to Joseph of Egypt (2 Nephi, chapter 2); so no one except a carping critic would ever think of placing any other construction upon it.

The order of this priesthood was confirmed to be handed down from father to son, and rightly belongs to the literal descendants of the chosen seed to whom the promises were made.—D. C. 104: 18; Utah edition 107: 40.

Again an objection is made to the use of this passage to prove the right of Joseph's seed, and the assertion is made that it refers only to the evangelical ministers spoken of in the previous passage. No such construction, however, can be placed upon it, only by the casual observer. Turning back to the first verses of the revelation quoted we find an explanation given as to how this priesthood came to be called the Melchisedek priesthood, and it states that prior to Melchisedek it was called "The holy priesthood after the order of the Son of God." It then goes on and gives all the different offices in this "order of the priesthood," and after the enumeration of all the different officers in that order, it says:—

The order of this priesthood was confirmed to be handed down from father to son, and rightly belongs to the literal descendants of the chosen seed, to whom the promises were made.

The object referred to in the words "the order of this priesthood" are evidently "the holy priesthood, after the order of the Son of God"—in the first verse. I shall not, however, insist on this interpretation of the passage, for it is not my intention to prove lineal priesthood as an established rule of the church, but that God chose one from Joseph's seed in this instance, for the prophetic office; and I simply introduce this as collateral or corroborative evidence.

In a vision given in the Kirtland temple, April 3, 1836, to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, the following language is found:—

After this, Elias appeared, and committed the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham, saying, that in us, and our seed all generations after us should be blessed."—Utah Ed. D. C., page 405; Mill. Star 15: 739.

Oliver Cowdery left no male seed, so we must look for the fulfillment of this promise in Joseph's seed or acknowledge the promise a failure; and I call attention to the words "all generations after us," showing that no generation is to be skipped, but that all are to share in the blessings given through him and his seed. And again, I call attention to another prophecy or revelation concerning Joseph's seed, for it seems that God is not going to leave us without witness.

And now, I say unto you, as pertaining to my boarding-house, which I have commanded you to build, for the boarding of strangers, let it be built unto my name, and let my name be named upon it, and let my servant Joseph and his house have place therein, from generation to generation; for this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, in thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed.—D. C. 107:18; Utah Ed. 124:56-58.

Again an objection is urged that this does not apply to the question under discussion, that it means that in consequence of Joseph's having paid stock into the Nauvoo House, therefore he and his seed shall have place in it. Methinks it would have to be a pretty large house if all who took stock in it should have a place therein with their posterity; and inasmuch as God is an impartial God, he would have to treat all alike; and surely there would be no room for the "boarding of strangers." But the objector does not seem to realize that he is certifying to his own dishonesty in argument or else his lack of mental penetration when he asserts that the passage has no reference to the powers of the priesthood; for the blessing that is to be bestowed upon Joseph and his seed shall be of such a nature that by it the "generations of the earth shall be blessed," and surely this end could not be attained by Joseph and his boys having a house to live in. O no! It must have been the priesthood—that inestimable blessing that God has bestowed upon man; for only through that could the generations of the earth be blessed. I am not going to argue here that because the words "the head of his posterity" are used, that it therefore means the oldest son; but the position I wish to establish is that to his seed belongs the right to hold the prophetic office, and that upon his seed will this wonderful blessing and gift be bestowed.

I have presented three distinct prophecies of the fact that Joseph's seed should figure prominently in holding the priesthood; and I now turn to history, and in a letter written to John C. Calhoun, dated January 2, 1843, and published in the Times and Seasons of that year, also in the Mil-lennial Star of March, 1844, page 171, from which I quote; Joseph utters this remarkable prophecy:—

While I have powers of body and mind; while water runs and grass grows; while virtue is lovely and vice hateful; and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was; I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence, until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins.

Was Joseph Smith a prophet or not? You who deny the right of priesthood to his posterity, please answer. If I were engaged in controversy with those who profess to believe in the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith and who refuse to follow the lead of his sons, and were called upon to give evidence why I did not believe him to be a prophet, I should most assuredly quote the prophecies named above, and either force my opponents to admit the right of the posterity, or that these prophecies were lamentable failures, and Joseph Smith thereby proven a false prophet; for I read in the law and the testimony, Deuteronomy 18: 22, this:—

When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

And in Ezekiel 33: 33, this:—

And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

Also Jeremiah 28: 9:—

The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him.

I have proven so far that God designed that Joseph Smith should have a successor and that successor should be appointed by him, and that through revelation; also that that successor should be of his posterity.

It now remains to prove who of that posterity was chosen and appointed. I shall introduce the testimony of Lyman Wight here, although it has been objected to on the ground that he was an "apostate and had lost his honor, neither being true to the church of Christ led by his fellow apostles, nor true to the son of the prophet." The first statement that he was an "apostate" is simply a begging the question, for that is the matter under dispute as to who are apostates, and no honest man who wants to argue independently of the prejudice of the people would make such a statement. The second that he was not true to the son of the prophet, is a base fabrication, as is proven by his testimony. In Lyman Wight's private journal the following occurs:—

Sunday, December 8, 1850, bore testimony that Joseph Smith appointed those of his own posterity to be his successor.

October 5, 1851. In the evening, meeting was called and I lectured to some considerable length on the subject of a successor to Bro. Joseph Smith, endeavoring to show the impropriety of there being one aside from the fruit of his loins.

And in a letter written July, 1855, to the editors of the Northern Islander, a "Strangite" paper, he says:—

Now, Mr. Editor, if you had been present when Joseph called on me shortly after we came out of jail to lay hands with him on a youth and heard him cry aloud, "You are my successor when I depart," and heard the blessing poured on his head,—I say had you heard all this and seen the tears streaming from his eyes, you would not have been led by blind fanaticism and zeal without knowledge.

This does not look much like being untrue to Joseph's posterity.

The writer of this is a grandson of Lyman Wight, and his father and mother were among those who went from Nauvoo to Texas with Wight. I am personally acquainted with many of those who formed his company, and it is largely through the testimonies borne by him, coupled with the prophecies cited above, that they are to-day followers of "young Joseph;" and the statement that because he does not, in either of the extracts above, mention the name of "young Joseph" renders his testimony invalid because of its indefiniteness, would only cause a smile from those who were personally acquainted with Wight and have heard him bear testimony so often. And as to the discrepancies that seem to exist in his testimony in regard to the place where the blessing was bestowed, that does not invalidate the testimony at all. In those times when they were hardly in one place a whole day at a time one could not be expected to remember where each event took place; and, besides, there were two different times that young Joseph was blessed by his father. In a letter dated May 18, 1869, to J. B. Price, then residing in Goshen, Utah, young Joseph says, in answer to an inquiry as to his blessing and call:—

To proceed at once to the subject matter of your letter; I can only answer. My father, who was and is acknowledged as the proper one through whom the priesthood in its ramifications was conferred twice before his death in what might be called private assembly, pronounced the blessing of his priesthood upon me, once in Liberty Jail, Missouri, once in the Council Chamber at Nauvoo.

Twice in public did he bear testimony to the people of the church that he had appointed me, by the Spirit of his calling, to the work whereunto he was called; once upon the stand in Nauvoo, once just before he departed for the jail at Carthage, the goal of his martyrdom on earth.—Saints' Advocate, page 365.

And in a letter to the writer dated Lamoni, Iowa, November 1, 1894, in answer to a similar inquiry, he makes substantially the same statement. Now, which of these blessings did Lyman Wight participate in? One occurred while they were in jail, the other shortly after coming out; and he might have assisted Joseph in both.

The above is also a sufficient refutation of the statement made by Elder B. H. Roberts of the Utah Church, that young Joseph did not remember being blessed, or the nature of the blessing bestowed upon him, by his father. But I will add that in a personal conversation had by the writer with Joseph Smith at Lamoni, Iowa, he stated to me that he did distinctly remember each of the blessings given, their nature, and the circumstances under which they were given.

Conference Minutes.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

Conference convened with the Deer Creek branch in the village of Meadow Grove, August 31; W. M. Rumel presiding. Reports were read from Deer Creek, Clearwater, and Evergreen branches. Elkhorn failed to report. Letters were read from Elders W. Weston and D. W. Shirk. L. Gamet and W. M. Rumel reported in person. Priests J. H. Jackson, C. N. Hutchins, and E. Downey reported; also Teacher Frank Vrooman. Bishop's agent's report showed amount on hands and received $59.59; paid out $57.55; on hand $1.54. Gospel boat fund, received $3; on hand $3. W. M. Rumel was sustained as president, Levi Gamet as secretary and Bishop's agent. Preaching by Elders Gamet and Rumel. The attendance was not large, but the business was harmonious and the interest fair. Adjourned to Clearwater branch the last Saturday and Sunday in February, 1896.

STATE MINE INSPECTORS' REPORT.

DES MOINES, Iowa, September 5.—The biennial report of the State Mine Inspectors was filed to-day with Governor Jackson. It shows the mining industry in good condition, with wages good and employment steady. By the strike of 1894 the loss to the miners was $980,000 in wages not earned. The inspectors attribute the whole deficiency, compared with the preceding year, to the strike, as good times prevailed up to the time of the strike, in May and June. They advocate the settlement of all difficulties in mines where they originate, and argue against any reduction in the standard of wages.

Miscellaneous Department.

THE REUNION NEAR NAUVOO.

September 9.—At nine a. m., prayer service. James McKiernan preached from 1 John 3: 8 at 10:45. At 2:30 p. m. C. Scott delivered the sermon, using 1 Corinthians 13: 17 as text. In the evening F. A. Smith was the speaker; text, Matthew 16: 24.

September 10.—Five prayers and eighteen testimonies were offered, and nine hymns or verses were sung at the morning social service. A good spiritual time. At 10:45 J. S. Roth preached from Matthew 6: 33. A. H. Smith was the speaker in the afternoon; text, Luke 24: 49. J. R. Lambert delivered the evening sermon, using as texts Acts 5: 32 and John 15: 17. At the close of service it was announced that as the attendants wished a day for outing and visiting points of interest and historic importance, there would be no meeting to-morrow until 7:45 p. m., when Bro. F. G. Pitt would preach. Bro. F. A. Smith having received a telegram that his little girl was ill with typhoid fever, took the night train for home.

September 11.—Mr. Porter and Clarence Schroder took a four-horse load to Carthage to see the city and jail. A great number visited Nauvoo and other points of interest. F. G. Pitt discoursed in the evening, from Proverbs 10: 12 and 1 Corinthians 9: 24.

September 12.—Prayer service at nine a. m. A. H. Smith sermonized from Mark 16: 16 at 10:45; in the afternoon J. S. Roth spoke on eternal judgment, and at 7:45 p. m. C. Scott was the speaker; text, Luke 21.

September 13.—Nine a. m., business session. Bro. J. R. Lambert and A. H. Smith in the chair. Bro. D. Tripp made a verbal report of his committee work. Stated the expense on grounds was paid by means raised by Montrose business men, and that the leading ones were in favor of us coming again next year on the same condition; also Messrs. Wm. Baum owner, and W. H. Singer manager of grounds, had expressed their entire satisfaction of the manner in which the grounds had been used, and requested that we come back next year on same terms. D. D. Babcock next gave a verbal report; didn't know whether Nauvoo wanted the reunion next year or not. President of committee, Elder James McKiernan, reported. Spoke of the trouble of securing grounds, etc.; also made his financial report. The report was received and F. G. Pitt, Fred Johnson, and C. Scott were appointed to audit same. The committee withdrew a few minutes and made out the following report: We your committee appointed to audit the account of the chairman of committee on reunion beg leave to report that we have examined the same and have found it correct as follows: Receipts: Chicago branch, F. G. Pitt, $2.50; Burlington branch, James Wright, $5.50; Rock Creek branch, H. T. Pitt, $17.80; collection on the 8th, $12.65; Sr. E. Newberry, $2; Bro. A. St. Lewis, $1; total, $41.45. Expenses: Sundries, $17.60; chairman of committee, $17.90; cottage rent for elders, $4; ministers' railroad expenses, $23.80; total $63.30. Amount still due $21.85. Report adopted. Voted that Decatur, Des Moines, Eastern Iowa, Nauvoo, Northern Illinois, and Kewanee districts meet together again next year in reunion. On motion a committee of five (James McKiernan chairman, J. R. Lambert, D. Tripp, F. G. Pitt, and J. S. Roth) was appointed to locate grounds and make all necessary arrangements. On motion the above committee was authorized to petition General Conference to make this a general reunion of the church.

At 10:45 F. G. Pitt preached; texts, 1 Peter 3:15; 2 Corinthians 13:5. James McKiernan preached in the afternoon on the resurrection, using Acts 26:8 as text. C. Scott delivered the evening sermon on the Jews as a sign to this generation.

September 14.—Prayer service at nine a. m. J. R. Lambert preached on perfection of Christian character at 10:45 a. m. At 2:30 p. m. met in Sunday school convention. F. M. Weld was chosen chairman. After the usual devotional exercises Bro. Weld made appropriate remarks on the importance of Sunday school work, and the object of the present meeting. James Wright, of Burlington, gave a talk on interest and methods in Sunday school work. J. McKiernan, superintendent of the Farmington Sunday school, spoke on Sunday school work in general and gave a brief account of the work at home. Sr. Whitehead, of Lamoni, spoke of the interest taken in Sunday school work at that place; how it had helped her to advance, and what a help it is to all who make the Gospel Quartermen a study. Sr. Hattie McKiernan addressed the convention on work in intermediate classes. Then on call Elder James McKiernan spoke on the use of the blackboard in Sunday school work; and then exemplified the work by illustrating two different lessons, after which questions on blackboard work were asked and answered. This ended the literary part of the program and the convention proceeded to business. A committee of three was appointed to make arrangements for the Sunday school work at next reunion. F. M. Weld was made chairman of said committee and James McKiernan and Ella Whitehead were made members. Adjourned. At 7:45 p. m. M. T. Short preached from Acts 20:28.

September 15.—Sunday, at nine a. m., prayer meeting. J. R. Lambert delivered the forenoon sermon, using as text 1 Corinthians 3:11. At the close a collection was taken up and $20.16 was raised. At 2:30 p. m. C. Scott delivered the sermon; text Matthew 24:14. At the close a collection was taken up for the joint benefit of the reunion and tent fund, at which $7 was donated. A vote of thanks was tendered the city of Nauvoo for the offer of grounds made to the committee; and also a vote of thanks to the business men of Montrose for the money that paid for the use of Bluff Park, and to Mr. Blom, owner, and Mr. Singer, superintendent of the grounds, for their courtesies. After the close of the above meeting the ordinance of baptism was administered, F. M. Weld in charge. After appropriate song service and prayer J. S. Roth baptized four; Thomas Junk, Louis Balsar, Osa Wallace, and Homer Wallace. These were afterward confirmed by Elders J. R. Lambert, Short, Scott, and Pitt. James McKiernan was the speaker in the evening, using Job 14:14 as text. After a brief introduction of the subject a wind and rainstorm came on that caused a hurried dismissal and dispersion to the various cottages. So ended informally this reunion.

As the committee did not have opportunity to make a final report of receipts and expenditures we insert it here. Receipts reported September 13, 1895, $41.45; received later by collections and donations, $30.16; total $71.61; expenditures at time of report, September 13, $63.30; paid out for coal oil since, 70 cents; total expense $64; balance in hands of committee, $7.61. James McKiernan, chairman of committee.

All who attended this reunion expressed themselves as highly gratified with the location and accommodations. The prayer meetings were spiritual, the preaching edifying and strengthening, and the associations of that character calculated to cement more closely and bind together more firmly the ties of brotherhood and sisterhood that should be with the children of God.

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT REUNION.

The above reunion began September 7, in the historic town of Baxter Springs, Kansas. "Camp Logan," the site of the reunion, is pleasantly and conveniently located for such gatherings. The pavilion in which the meetings are held was erected by the G. A. R., and with the grounds is owned by that order. The pavilion will seat about 2,000 people, so we have ample room.

A meeting was held at 2:30 p. m. to effect organization. Bro. H. H. Robinson was elected temporary chairman and Bro. J. C. Chrestensen temporary secretary. Permanent organization was effected by electing Bro. O. P. Sutherland president, W. S. Pender secretary, and A. H. Herke treasurer. Bro. William Maloney was selected usher, and Brn. Frank Attlebury and Albert Richardson assistants. Sr. A. C. Hart was chosen chorister, Bro. W. H. Doty was elected marshal, and Brn. C. Strickland and W. H. Smart assistants.

At eight p. m. Bro. I. N. White delivered the opening address. The speaker said we ought always to be anxious to occupy every opportunity to represent the gospel of Jesus Christ. We may change our views and be carried about in political and other matters, but in the gospel of Jesus Christ we ought to be established. When Pharaoh imprisoned his chief butler and baker they each had a dream. They requested Joseph to give them the interpretation. Joseph told them God was a revealer of secrets. He sought God and obtained from him the meaning of the dreams. This was no private interpretation. We should seek God for an understanding of his word. For this purpose Jesus commanded his disciples to tarry in Jerusalem till they were endowed with power from on high. Be cheerful during the reunion, even if there be some adverse incidents. If you get the "blues" "salt them down;" don't let anyone know it.

(Just at the closing of the Sunday evening service the rain began to fall in torrents and that before "Israel gat to her tents." It continued to rain for about two hours. The above advice was thus tested, and, happily acted upon in a way quite pleasing to witness.)

The speaker closed by alluding to Solomon's temple and the discovery by the builders of a stone which they could not use because they did not know what it was for. It was the keystone of the structure and was much needed to hold the building together. The architect could have told them just what the stone was for and just where it belonged. God is the architect of his spiritual house. We must go to him and we will find that all parts of his spiritual house are necessary.

Sunday, September 8.—Nine a. m. prayer service in charge of Brn. O. P. Sutherland and J. C. Chrestensen. After opening exercises five prayers were offered and twenty-one bore testimony. A pleasant time was had, the Spirit indicating that the Lord would bless the gathering if they sought him in humble prayer.

At eleven a. m. Bro. H. H. Robinson preached, saying: The Spirit of the Lord is necessary for both speaker and hearer; for the former that he may properly present and for the latter that he may correctly understand the truth. His text was Matthew 13:31-52. The parable of the mustard seed represented that the kingdom of God at its beginning is small and attracts but little attention. It develops until men "lodge in the branches thereof" and find "rest to their souls." Its influence for good is also felt in all the governments and institutions of the world. Such had been the work of the church and such its influence and development since its divine inspiration in 1830. He closed with profitable admonition to the Saints, pointing out duties and privileges.

Announcement was made of prayer meeting at nine a. m., preaching at eleven a. m., 2:30 and eight p. m. each day.

Sunday 2:30 p. m. the writer [W. S. Pender] spoke, his theme being "the narrow way." Text, Matthew 7:13, 14. He called attention to the unity of Christianity in the beginning and the warning of inspiration to "mark them that cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned." Notwithstanding the divisions and consequent confusion of the present age, Christianity can be defined now. This definition should be obtained from the Scriptures, the text book of Christianity. Like text books upon any other subject, the Bible, if prayerfully and properly studied, may be understood. It speaks to all alike and may be understood by all alike. "He whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God." We should listen, therefore, to every man who claims to be sent of God. If his claim be true, his definition of Christianity must harmonize with the text book, the Scriptures. After thoroughly searching the Scriptures and listening to those who claim to be authorized to represent the message of life, if still in doubt, it is one's privilege to ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not."

Just prior to this service at 1:30 p. m. Brn. James Carr and W. I. Clark were baptized by Bro. H. H. Robinson. They were confirmed at the afternoon preaching service by Brn. H. H. Robinson and I. N. White.

At eight p. m. Bro. I. N. White preached, announcing as his subject, "What shall I do to be saved?" God sometimes waives his law or makes a break in his regular way of dealing. Some persons discover these breaks or exceptions and form their faith upon them rather than upon the law itself, thus going into error. As an illustration: The Bible tells us death was passed upon all men. By and by we find an exception, a man is translated, and hence does not die at all. From this waiving of the law some have concluded death may be entirely avoided by all. Any legislative body may suspend, in a specific case, a law or rule, but after that case is disposed of the law or rule immediately becomes operative again. The case of the household of Cornelius was a suspension of the law for reasons in that particular case. Manifestations of the Spirit were received prior to baptism. Necessity of belief in Christ and in the personality of God were presented as necessary prerequisites to repentance. If you insult or wrong a man, you may become penitent and make proper amends. No effort at reconciliation would be thought of unless you were sure it was a man whom you had wronged. So, in order to properly repent we should have a conception of the personality of God against whom we have sinned. Baptism for remission of sins was announced as the law and the laying on of hands alluded to. A storm came up as the service was closing.

September 9.—The nine a. m. prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. W. S. Taylor and Bro. E. W. Depue. The writer was not present, but it is reported as an enjoyable and profitable service.

At eleven a. m. Bro. T. J. Sheppard preached; text, Jeremiah 6:16: "Thus saith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." Latter Day Saints do not preach a new gospel. If it sounds new it is because the old time gospel is not a familiar sound. In the past men have wandered from the truth. Latter Day Saints as well as others ought to be admonished by the text. In Acts 20 Paul warned the church that "of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them." Matters were already going wrong at Galatia. "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another." Paul wrote to Timothy: "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." Why? They had heaped to themselves teachers, who were not called and hence not blessed of God. In referring to this falling away, Isaiah says: "The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant." Hence the necessity of God sending an angel to the earth to establish the gospel, "the old paths."

At 2:30 p. m. preaching by Bro. S. W. Simmons. His text was Isaiah 8:19, 20. Many persons connected with the various churches are as honest as are Latter Day Saints. They also have a certain testimony to bear. All must be tested by what is written. All the officers which were in the Jerusalem church should be in Christ's church to-day. "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." Apostles and prophets, together with the other officers named in the New Testament should be continued in our time; for they were "for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

The storm of the night before had all passed away, but some of its effects were still visible. As the people could not get to their tents until a late hour on account of the rain and for the same reason could not sleep in some of them even if reached, beds had been arranged in the pavilion. Some of these had not been removed and had a few occupants during the afternoon service who evidently had been deprived of rest the night before.

At eight p. m. Bro. E. A. Davis preached; text, 1 Corinthians 13:8. "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away." The idea that the "perfect" referred to the Scriptures could not be true, as the revelations which compose the Scriptures are the "parts," and when the "perfect" is come the "parts" are to be done away. This would destroy the Scriptures. Nor can that which is "in part" refer to spiritual gifts as "knowledge" is one of these gifts, and when a child develops to maturity it knows more than before. That which is to be done away are the imperfections which characterize us in this life.

September 10.—From eight to nine a. m. was occupied by a spiritual prayer service in charge of Brn. J. C. Chrestensen and S. Maloney. The rest of the day was devoted to district conference of which you will learn from the district secretary.

At eight p. m. Bro. I. N. White preached from the text, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants, the prophets."—Amos 3:7. The speaker showed that God had followed the rule laid down in his text, in the different dispensations designated in Scripture as "early in the morning," "third hour," "sixth hour," "ninth hour," and "eleventh hour." The speaker showed conclusively from Luke 20 that Christ's personal ministry was the "ninth hour" of Matthew 20. The whole was illustrated by a chart and was very instructive and entertaining.

Two had been baptized during the afternoon by Bro. O. P. Sutherland, Mr. Isaac Depue and Mrs. Myrtle. They were confirmed by Brn. English and Sutherland.

September 11.—From eight to 9:30 was devoted to social meeting in charge of Brn. E. W. Depue and Wm. France. The remainder of the day was used by the district Sunday school association. The association is presided over by Sr. A. C. Hart who is an earnest Sunday school worker. All the time the writer was present was occupied in business and in recitations by primary, intermediate, and Bible classes. An entertainment was held in the evening. At 1:30 p. m. Bro. A. M. Baker administered the ordinance of baptism to Srs. Ida L. Simmons and Eliza Dodson and Brn. Joseph B. Clark and Wallace Storms. They were confirmed at 4:30 by Brn. I. N. White, H. H. Robinson, O. P. Sutherland, and S. W. Simmons.

September 12.—At the nine a. m. prayer meeting the gifts of tongues and interpretation were manifested and all seemed to rejoice in God. At eleven a. m. Bro. A. M. Baker preached from Romans 8:14-16. To obtain the Spirit of God and be led by it there is something to be done. On the day of Pentecost Peter taught the people they must repent and be baptized for remission of sins. Another ordinance followed, "the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost." In Acts eighth chapter we read: "Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who . . . prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost. . . . Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Closed with excellent evidences of the unity of Christ's church. Preaching at 2:30 p. m. by Bro. W. S. Macrae. The fifteenth chapter of John was read as a lesson and the fore part of the chapter respecting the husbandman, the vine, and the branches was used as a basis to show the necessity of individual righteousness in order to bear much fruit." Bro. I. N. White was advertised to speak at eight p. m. on the subject, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet?" He being hoarse the writer, by request, occupied the hour. He offered the evidences of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon as proof that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. The Book of Mormon is a product or fruit of his. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

September 13.—The morning social service was indeed a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The forenoon hour was occupied by Bro. J. M. Richards, Bishop's agent, in a presentation of the law of tithing; text, Psalms 50:5: "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." The Scriptures represent God and his people as coworkers. One party in a partnership affair does not get all the profits. Those Saints that God gathers together by sacrifice will certainly receive some benefit. What is the sacrifice God requires? The Lord chose Abraham because he would keep his commandments and order his household. Genesis 28:22 tells us Jacob promised the Lord, "Of all thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." It is fair to infer that there was a command of God to that effect.

A commandment to that effect is recorded in Leviticus 27:30. Some of the benefits of observing this tithing law are stated in Malachi 3:10-12. Jesus indorsed this law. (Matthew 23:23.) At 2:30 p. m. Bro. A. C. Hart preached; text, John 14:21. The sermon was an exhortation to the Saints to keep all the commandments of God. In the evening Bro. E. A. Davis preached interestingly upon the subject of the resurrection. Human bodies are a necessity. How the resurrection will be accomplished is a matter beyond human comprehension. The rotundity of the earth, its rotation upon its axis, and many other things which are now admitted facts were once unknown and would have been thought as improbable as the resurrection. There being a necessity for the resurrection, nothing will stand in the way of its accomplishment. Isaiah 26:19; Job 19:24, and other scriptures were cited in proof of the resurrection.

At the prayer service the morning of the 14th the Spirit of the Lord was present during the entire meeting. Experiences narrated were instructive and inspiring, hopes and desires were strengthened by the Spirit of revelation, giving assurance of divine approval. At eleven p. m. Bro. H. H. Robinson preached. The speaker's remarks were based on Matthew 4:16 and 5:20. He called attention to the final purification of the earth and the building of a pure and glorious city for the people of God. We should be pure and cleanly in every respect in order to be prepared for a place in the city of God. While the reunion had not been largely attended by the people of the town, yet he thought it was held in the right place. It had educated the Saints. Closed with advice respecting order and conduct at reunions. At 2:30 p. m. J. C. Chrestensen was the speaker. He showed the necessity of work and faith combined. Also that the works must be those which God has commanded. The reason the Lord did not accept Cain as well as Abel was because he made an offering God had not commanded. The building of the ark of a particular kind of wood, the requirement to look upon a brazen serpent, and various other illustrations found in Scripture were used to impress the necessity of a union of faith and righteous works. At eight p. m. Bro. I. N. White spoke in further explanation of his chart. He used the following texts: Psalms 8:4; Amos 3:7; Acts 3:19-21; Ephesians 1:10. From the chart the speaker showed that God, in harmony with his first text, had always been "mindful" of man; with the second text that he always used a prophet in each dispensation to do his work. "The dispensation of the fulness of times," referred to in the last texts he reached, with the promise of concluding Sunday eve.

September 15.—The nine a. m. social service was the last prayer meeting of the reunion and it was a grand one, the Spirit being present to cheer. The gift of prophecy was enjoyed; giving words of encouragement and admonition. At eleven a. m. the writer spoke upon the first principles of the gospel. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. E. A. Davis made a clear argument to show the necessity of divine revelation from John 3:5. He showed from copious illustrations of history that man could neither formulate nor interpret a perfect law without inspiration. For these reasons, and because of Satanic influences, man would be at a great disadvantage without divine inspiration. So the reunion draweth to a close. But few attended from the town. Those who did come heard the gospel of Christ proclaimed by the Spirit of the Master. For himself, the writer can say he was personally instructed and benefited. Doubtless others share the same sentiment. The publications of the church were kept constantly before the public by Bro. J. C. Chrestensen. At eight p. m. quite a number of Baxter people were out to hear Bro. I. N. White conclude his efforts with the chart. One of the editors, who was present at this service, predicted, so the writer was informed, that another reunion of Latter Day Saints at Baxter would be attended more generally by the people of the town.

OHIO DISTRICT REUNION.

Saturday, Sept. 7.—No meetings were held during the day, but at three p. m. T. J. Beatty preached from Matthew 24:14. The speaker held that this referred to the end of the nations. "Surely the Lord God doeth nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Noah preached the word and warned the people. Jesus says in the last days it will be as it was in the days of Noah; they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage. The gospel is being preached to-day, as a witness of the end. If it is not preached as a witness, then we have not the gospel. We find different churches to-day, preaching different doctrines. Is it impossible for all to see alike? If so, then there may be some excuse for different churches. We all read the same book, and it reads the same to all. Then it should mean the same to all. Peter says, "No prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation." We are all drifting. We are all lost, and hence the need of a Redeemer. Paul was a religious man, and at the same time wicked; needed to do something to be saved. If the things in the book will not save them that obey them, then I don't know what will. The same gospel will do as much for us to-day as it did for people in a former day. Ensign to be lifted up upon land shadowing with wings before the harvest or the end. We should search the prophecies, and learn in what day and age of the world we are now living. Fishers and hunters to be sent. Men claim they can be saved in any church, and after they have said this, they renounce their former faith, and preach to get men to join something else. Now I have no church to build up. One asks, "Don't you belong to the church?" Yes, but it is not mine. If I had one, it would not be worth anything. Bro. Beatty preached an excellent sermon, and as he is one of the pioneer ministers of this district it was well received by both saint and sinner. It was consoling to remember that God had fulfilled his promise to raise him from affliction, and that we were again permitted to hear him preach the word.

Sunday, September 8.—Prayer and social meeting at nine a. m. Preaching at 10:30 by I. M. Smith; text, Revelation 22:18, 19. This was one of Bro. Smith's "big sermons," and we cannot do it justice by giving notes. However, he showed that the language of John had no reference to the claim that men make, that there was to be no more revelation. It meant that man had no right to take from or add to the word of God, but that the Lord would add from time to time. God had said through Moses, "Thou shalt not add unto the word of the Lord thy God." While this forbade man to add, God had added a great deal since that time through his servants. When Joshua, Samuel, David, Isaiah, and others wrote books, they were not adding to the word of God, but were writing his revelations. "Every word of God is pure;" "Add not," etc. See Proverbs 30:5, 6. Whenever a prophet speaks or writes the word of the Lord, we should accept it without adding to it. In order to show who it was that took away from the word, Bro. Smith gave the people a sample of creed building. He formed a creed according to popular opinion, which did not accept blessing of children, administration of angels, signs to follow the believer, nor baptism by immersion. It did not admit baptism for the remission of sins, laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost, nor the gifts and blessings spoken of in 1 Corinthians 12, save three gifts; viz., faith, knowledge, and wisdom. All the rest were done away. This is the kind of a creed that suits the majority. But God gives the word pure, and says we must not add; nor take from. When men have taken away blessing of children, they add sprinkling or christening. Men take God's word, and take from it, and add to it, and then after they have done all this, they say God must add no more. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by H. E. Moler upon the subject of dispensations from the parable of Matthew twentieth chapter. The subject was illustrated by a chart. At 7:30 p. m. Isaac M. Smith was the speaker; subject, sign seekers. This was the ablest we have ever heard on the subject. The brother showed the inconsistency of the people accusing Latter Day Saints of claiming to heal the sick by their own power, by calling their attention to the fact that other churches baptize in the name of the Trinity for the remission of sins, and that they never think of charging them of claiming the power to forgive or remit sins; yet they have the same grounds for making such a charge as they have for the other. He showed that signs were not given to make believers. That when people did see signs they would not believe, but attributed it to some other power. When men sought for signs the Lord did not always grant them. The Devil wanted Christ to show him a sign. The people asked Christ to come down from the cross to prove his divinity, but he did not do it. Abraham told the rich man that if his kinsfolks would not believe Moses and the prophets, they would not believe though one rose from the dead. Christ did not show himself openly, but only to chosen witnesses. Why did he not show himself openly and show that he was risen from the dead? The brethren of Jesus said: "If thou do these things, shew thyself to the world." But he did not choose to do it. His charge to those he healed often was, "See thou show it to no man." Paul said, "Faith comes by hearing," but the people wanted to get it by seeing. Bro. Smith showed further, that in the last days the Devil would show signs and wonders. When the Devil sends out his ministers he says, "Work wonders and miracles; call fire down from heaven and deceive the people." John the Baptist worked no miracles, yet the Savior said there was not a greater prophet than he.

Sunday, the 8th, was the largest gathering during the reunion. The Saints leaving before the reunion closed missed the best meetings of the entire session. A good feeling prevailed from first to last. Everybody was encouraged and strengthened. Some without are beginning to think. Collections to defray expenses were taken, amounting to nearly $25.

This was the first experience in this district of camping on the ground. And although only about six families came prepared to tent we think that others will see the convenience and propriety of so doing, and by our next reunion everybody will come prepared to camp in true style. Brn. T. J. Beatty, James Spaun, James Moler, and others did nobly in caring for those who did not bring camp equipments with them. Reunions in this district can, and we predict will be made a success. A vote of thanks was tendered the people of Limerick for their kindness, and to Prof. R. E. House and singing class for services rendered in song service.

MAINE REUNION.

The Maine reunion convened at Green's Landing, September 7; Elders W. H. Kelley and U. W. Greene presiding, J. C. Foss secretary; A. C. Dunham organist, F. M. Sheehy and H. J. Davison choristers, A. C. Dunham and F. H. Haskell janitors, W. H. Kelley and U. W. Greene, press committee. Hour of services ten a. m., 2:30, and 7:30 p. m. At 7:30 p. m. W. H. Kelley preached from Acts 17:27. Spoke of the class of people at Athens who spent some of their time in hearing and telling of strange things while worshipping their unknown god. But Paul showed them how they could know and tell of the true and the living God. A union to God is required in the gospel. To that end everybody should labor.

September 8.—At ten a. m., preaching by Elder J. C. Foss. At 2:30 p. m. F. M. Sheehy spoke from 2 Corinthians 10:12. The speaker said many times people would render false judgment because it was not from a true measurement. The sermon was a good one. S. O. Foss was the speaker of the evening; text, Mark 16:15-19. He treated on the gospel and the vast importance of obedience. The afternoon sermon was by John N. Ames from Matthew 6:24, showing the need of living to the law of God, for no one can serve two masters. In the evening F. M. Sheehy (text Galatians 1:1-12) spoke of the gospel and its unchangeability, and by obedience man can be inspired by the Almighty now as well as anciently; he is entitled to revelation from God and thereby know that God exists.

September 10.—Social meeting in the forenoon. In the afternoon E. C. Foss, from John 9:17, treated on the children of God being fed on the bread of life that cometh down from heaven. At 7:30 p. m. U. W. Greene spoke from Luke 6:43. We are living in an age when men are crying, "Lord, Lord," in various ways, introducing all kinds of methods to bring people to the Lord; in the streets with flags, banners, drums, tambourines, and charts, but no one can enter the kingdom of God, only by obedience to the law of the Lord.

September 11.—At ten a. m., G. W. Eaton gave for our morning comfort his experience since he came with this people. All were highly pleased, and closed the meeting with a few testimonies. No meeting in the afternoon. At 7:30 p. m. W. H. Kelley spoke from Nahum 2:3, 4. He discoursed on the question of preparation. Touched on the times of the past. John the Baptist came to prepare the way before the Lord. The sermon was a grand one from first to last.

September 12.—Social service at ten a. m. Met for business at 2:30 p. m. Minutes from the committee on arrangements were read and approved. Moved to hold reunion next year, time and place left with the committee to appoint. U. W. Greene, W. W. Blanchard, Joel Wilson, E. M. Walker, and Abbie Colby were chosen that committee. A vote of thanks was extended to the steamboat companies for granting rates. Vote of thanks was offered to the people of Green's Landing for entertaining the reunion. A vote of thanks was extended to committee on arrangements. At the evening hour H. J. Davison spoke on the restoration and gathering of Israel, illustrating with his chart. Sr. Nellie E. Pert, who had been baptized that day by W. G. Pert, was confirmed by U. W. Greene and F. M. Sheehy.

September 13.—At ten a. m., social meeting. No meeting in the afternoon. At 7:30 p. m., preaching by H. J. Davison; subject, resurrection of the dead.

September 14.—Social services in the morning. At 1:30 p. m., conference business of the Western Maine district was transacted. William Bradbury discoursed from Isaiah 55:6 in the evening. It was soul cheering.

September 15.—At 2:30 p. m. U. W. Greene spoke from Daniel 2:44, illustrating the kingdom of God from his chart. F. M. Sheehy spoke in the evening.

Thus ended a very pleasant time. Two were baptized at the close of the reunion by F. M. Sheehy. J. C. FOSS, Sec.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

PATTIE: OR LEAVES FROM A LIFE, WITH INTRODUCTION BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

A book in which is traced the intimate connection between the history of Protestantism and the founding of the Government of the United States with the event of the restored Gospel; interwoven with which is a tender story from a real life, telling of the efforts of one to find the Kingdom of God, its object being to trace God in modern history, and to show that his dealings with men are as clearly discernible now as in ancient times.

A book for Sunday school libraries and the home. Price.....$1 14

CO-OPERATIVE PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION.

INTERESTING facts regarding the success of coöperation were brought out at the recent International Coöperative Congress in London. The coöperative stores in England now number 1,674, with a membership of 1,343,518, a share and loan capital of over $90,000,000, and an invested capital of nearly $40,000,000. Their sales in 1894 amounted to $250,000,000, upon which a profit of 10 per cent was realized. Satisfactory results were also reported from other countries. Coöperative production, however, has not been so successful. There are, in England, 120 societies organized for such production, with a capital of $9,000,000. The profit in 1894 was nearly $340,000. In other countries coöperative production is growing more slowly than in England. In Belgium the attempt at it has failed, owing to the fact that "the workingmen were wanting in the necessary recognition of the difference of capacity; which made it necessary that the manager of a coöperative productive institution should exercise adequate authority," as a Belgian delegate explained. The Congress adopted a resolution in favor of profit-sharing with the employees of coöperative stores. It seems that there are coöperative organizations in Austria, Rumania, Russia, Servia, Denmark, the Netherlands, and Australia, as well as in England, Germany, and France. It is considered rather strange that the Americans have not interested themselves greatly in this movement.—Literary Digest.

THE LANTERN IN CHURCH.

A SHORT time ago an article appeared in this journal (The London Optical Journal) advocating the use of the lantern in schools. Admirably written as it was, I wished at the time that the reverend writer had gone further, and shown the advantages which would attend the use of the lantern in church. No one would, I think, deny that we are taught more by the eye than the ear. If the eye wanders, the mind soon goes after it, and thus an eloquent sermon or carefully thought out lesson loses much of its value in transmission. Every teacher knows how much easier his work becomes when he has a picture with which to illustrate his lesson. He can teach more in a few minutes by the aid of a picture, than he can in half an hour by mere verbal description.

Now what are the difficulties to be encountered when introducing the lantern in church? First, we have people (both clergy and laity) who are shocked at the idea because it is something "new." They must run along the orthodox railway line method, and cannot get off the track. Others are horrified at the bare idea of a "magic lantern," as they call it, in church, the lantern being an article associated in their minds with school treats and entertainments. Others, again, are afraid that there might be some hitch in the working arrangements, a picture upside down, or the light suddenly going out, etc. It is much to be deplored that they should have reason to expect such mishaps. I am constantly finding that the lantern is made unpopular by incompetent exhibitors. It is a well-known saying, "Every man thinks he can manage a little farm," and it might be said also, "Every man thinks he can manage a lantern."

Now, I say at the outset that the use of the lantern in church demands the most careful and painstaking attention to details, together with the best of apparatus, an experienced operator. If the exhibition is not to be given perfectly and reverently, without noise or bustle, the idea had better be given up. Every lanternist will agree with me, that when the lantern is used in church it has reached its highest and most honorable place.

The exhibition of the pictures must not interfere with the worship, or detract from the sacred character of the service, else an important objection can at once be made. The apparatus should, if possible, be placed at the extreme west end of the church, and should be hidden till required by curtains or screen. When the picture is to appear, the curtains should be parted only just enough to allow the beam of light to pass through, so that nothing is seen but the lenses, the object being to prevent any temptation to look round at the lantern. If there is a gallery at the west end of the church, the labor of elevating the apparatus to a suitable height will be much lessened. This will be seen better when we speak about the screen. Long focus lenses will be required if the size of the picture must be limited, as will sometimes be the case, and a brilliant light is a sine qua non, as the gas cannot be turned out, and there may be (as in my case) an immense chandelier just behind the center of the screen. This leads me to say that an opaque one is far the best when obtainable. My lantern was a hundred feet from the screen, consequently a quantity of light was lost on the way, the gas lights helping to diminish it.

If it is necessary to have the lantern adjusted beforehand and put away, the positions should all be carefully marked to ensure the pictures appearing in the center of screen.

The screen should be hidden till required, and this will tax the ingenuity of the operator severely.

Ours is an ordinary one, twenty feet square. It was so arranged that by a simple movement or two, it flew into its place in a moment, having been out of sight the first part of the service. It is done in this way. High up on either side of the chancel archway, on the choir side, pulleys are placed and cords passed through, and through the top hem of the screen. By these means the sheet is easily drawn, and during service hangs behind one side of the archway, being fastened at the top and bottom on that side only. It is readily brought into place, and also withdrawn as readily, by a choir boy. I might mention that the screen hung high enough for the altar to be seen from beneath, as some people would object were it hidden.

Now we come to the slides, by no means the least important part of the whole. These should be the very best obtainable. There are plenty of so-called sacred slides to be had, which are really comic and most crude. These, if used, would speedily banish the lantern from church. Avoid them if you wish your picture service to be a success. A bad sacred slide is the very worst slide. Good scripture slides are very scarce, though good scripture pictures are plentiful enough, and it only wants more demand to create a better supply. I only know of one or two firms who lend really beautiful slides for this purpose. If a shilling or two is of consequence, it must not be saved here. This applies most especially when the congregation is a high-class and critical one, as it was in my case.

We found it necessary to carefully rehearse the whole beforehand, but we were well repaid for our trouble by our great success.—Ex.

SCIENCE IN THE SAME BOAT WITH THEOLOGY.—Mr. Spencer himself insists that ultimate scientific ideas are inconsistent and incomprehensible. Space, time, matter, motion, force, and so forth, are each in turn shown to involve contradictions which it is beyond our power to solve and obscurities which it is beyond our power to penetrate. Thus science and theology are, so far, on an equality, that every proposition which considerations like these oblige us to assert about the one, binds us also to assert about the other.

What reason is there for the intolerant and supercilious bigotry with which Agnostics and scientists look upon the theologian? If the ultimate ideas of science are unintelligible, how can science itself be regarded as rationally established upon such an unthinkable basis? If Mr. Spencer can see that what we are conscious of as properties of matter are but subjective forces induced by objective agencies which are unknown and unknowable, what can be said as to the scientific certitude with which we make even such an assertion as that the sun gives light?—W. T. Stead, in April Review of Reviews.

THE UNEXPLORED REGIONS OF THE GLOBE.

SAYS Prof. I. Logan Tobley, in an address before the London Geographical Congress: "Leaving out of account the very imperfectly known regions of Central Asia and the interior of the northern parts of both North and South America, as well as the similar areas of Africa and Australia, there is an aggregate area of about twenty millions of square miles of the surface of the globe as yet quite unexplored. This aggregate is made up as follows:—

Africa	6,500,000	square miles
Australia	2,250,000	"
North America	1,500,000	"
South America	500,000	"
Asia	250,000	"
Islands	500,000	"
Arctic Regions	3,500,000	"
Antarctic Regions	5,000,000	"
Total	20,000,000	"

"When we add to this great total not merely the enormous areas of only partially explored regions, but also those that tho explored are not yet accurately surveyed, it will be seen that the field for further geographical exploration and research is abundantly wide."—Ex.

COMING STATEHOOD

Is necessarily a subject that interests every resident of Utah, because the admission of the Territory means great advancement and rapid strides in the right direction, the influx of foreign capital, and the coming of a new element, whose only aim will be to build up the country, and essentially to participate in the prosperity that will follow. Between now and the time the new star is put on "Old Liberty," many things of grave importance will happen, and it should be the wish and the care of every one to keep thoroughly posted on the situation, and the only way to do that is to get the news regularly by subscribing for the daily, or Semi-Weekly Tribune. The semi-weekly costs but 75 cents for three months. You can afford to spend 75 cents for such a cause, can't you?

THE DEVIL.

We are told he does not go about like a roaring lion now;
But whom shall we hold responsible for the everlasting row
To be heard in home, in church and state, to the earth's remotest bound,
If the Devil, by a unanimous vote, is nowhere to be found?
Won't somebody step to the front forthwith, and make their bow and show
How the frauds and the crimes of a single day spring up? We want to know.
The Devil was fairly voted out, and of course the Devil's gone;
But simple people would like to know who carries his business on.—Australian Exchange.

The October Arena contains a startling paper by A. R. Barrett, ex-Government Examiner for Failed Banks, entitled "The Era of Fraud." It should lead to prompt action, looking toward protecting the people from unscrupulous guardians of their funds.

An English Essayist, Alfred Milne, M. A., discusses vaccination in a masterful paper in the October Arena. This gentleman makes one of the strongest arguments against vaccination we have read. He is evidently a scholar, and has given the subject long and careful attention. His contribution will doubtless provoke general discussion.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

Do not always live in complete harmony. This is due to imperfect knowledge of themselves and each other. The sensitive nature of one is not appreciated or considered by the other who is stronger and more robust. Pride and independence coming from large Self-esteem are lost sight of, and impossible readiness in yielding is expected. The desire for approval coming from large Approbativeness is not understood, and it is withheld. People think they know each other, but Phrenology will open doors undiscovered and let in new light, thereby producing much more of harmony and perfect love.

Is anything more important than conjugal happiness? Not only are the feelings of husbands and wives involved, but the effects extend to all posterity.

Special Consultations with the examiner at the Phrenological Parlors of the FOWLER & WELLS Co., 27 East 21st Street, have many times resulted in a new and better understanding. 18 Sep. 3t.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

A small book—pamphlet size—3 x 4½ inches, 20 pages, with a statement of the faith of the church, as given in the Epitome, with slight alterations. The Scripture texts adduced to support the various items of faith are printed in full, with chapters and verses. Faith in God; in Christ; Repentance; Baptism by Immersion; Laying on of Hands; Resurrection of the Body; Eternal Judgment; Authority and Ordination; Church Organization; Spiritual Gifts; the Marriage Question as believed by the Church, etc.; are each presented and supported by Scripture passages.

The reader is referred to the Herald Office for Catalogue if other church literature is desired.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is it essential that each officer in the two priesthoods, whether they are under missionary appointment or not, have their names enrolled in some quorum of the church?

Ans.—Yes, we so understand; for we know of no body of the ministry for which there is a place independent of quorum organization. Quorums are departments of the church's organization. The revelation on priesthood, (section 104 of Doctrine and Covenants,) the most specific statement on record concerning the order and duties of the ministry, provides for the organization into quorums of all grades from the First Presidency to the Deacons. From deacon to elder the provision is made for assembling as quorums and for the instruction of each quorum by its president, who is to sit "in counsel" with them. This gives opportunity for mutual teaching, counseling, coöperation, and general interchange of thought, the advantages of which are apparent, and which manifest the wisdom of God in making provision for quorum organizations. The judgment of ninety-six men in a quorum of elders, of forty-eight in a quorum of priests, of twenty-four in a quorum of teachers, or of twelve in a quorum of deacons, is better than that of any one of them.

Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend.—Prov. 27: 17.

The principle and the advantage of coassociation and cwork are here represented. The principle of interdependence which unites the human family into groups as families, citizens, and other branches of the fraternity of man, is also recognized in church work, in the kingdom of God.

Quorum work conduces to the welfare of the general body and to the individuals comprising said quorums. Men in quorum capacity can take up and discuss questions within the scope of their work and get a clear understanding of them, and thus save time to the general body because of having investigated and become intelligently informed upon the questions discussed. They are then prepared to act promptly and correctly, and are not unprepared to meet the issues considered as they go forth to teach the principles of the law to the people and meet the emergencies that arise; hence quorum association results in good to those ministered to as well as to the minister officiating, whether the officer be an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon.

It is an established principle of law with us as a people that all matters passed upon are considered upon the principle of "common consent," including all General Conference rulings and revelations received. The minister who discusses such matters, who examines into them and comprehends them, is prepared to do his part in their execution, and therefore becomes an intelligent, successful servant of God and of the people; while he who fails to comprehend is not capable, nor reliable, however strongly he may believe. "With all thy getting get understanding," or knowledge, is the admonition of the wise man. This the Lord evidently contemplated in making provision for mutual counseling and coöperation in quorum capacity,—that men should learn what to do and how and why to act.

The General Conference has also taken action providing that all officers in the church not enrolled in quorums shall send their names to the Secretary of the Church for enrollment. The revelation of 1882 provides for filling up the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. Other revelations also indicate the organization into quorums of all grades of officers. It is our conviction that any man in the ministry can do better for the church and for himself as a member of a quorum than as a sort of solitary wandering star. Then, too, quorum organizations generally spur up a man to diligence by reminding of remissness in duty and failure to report. "In union is strength," in division or separation weakness. The elders have been commanded in the revelations to teach one another diligently the laws of the kingdom that they might know how to act in the government of the church. That work is certainly facilitated by quorum organization.

A MINISTER'S CRITICISM.

BROOKLYN, New York, Sept. 15.—Rev. Francis Edgar Mason, pastor of the Church of Christ, preached this morning on "Divine Manhood." During the sermon he criticised a verse copied from Hymn No. 380 of the Methodist Hymnal:—

Justly might thy vengeful dart
Pierce this bleeding, broken heart;
Justly might thy kindled ire
Send me to eternal fire.

Mr. Mason said: "Is it not time such senseless poetry was eliminated from our church hymn books? Is it not reprehensible in us sending our children to places where such sentiments are promulgated? What is it in man that kindles such a contemptible view of God as to lead to such utterances?"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A DUTY OF SAINTS.

CONFIDENCE in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.—Prov. 25: 19.

It may be an exhibition of superior wisdom for a man to be at odds with all his surroundings in the political and social world, and ready to condemn everything in the way of civil law and the rules of restraint imposed by society, asserting that the world is out of joint and altogether given over to evil; but after some forty years of contact with the things of the world we fail to see wisdom in such a course.

We do not mind to see a man who by a course of right living according to the best light he has had has grown aged and gray in the service of his fellows, and bears no ill will to any, to be given to philosophizing on the inequalities in wealth and social standing existing among men, and speculating on the causes and what the remedy should be; but the carping cynic who has reached the dregs of the cup of life all too soon by the intemperate use of the good and foolish, if not wicked, ventures into the realm of evil and vice, is an eyesore, a moral excrescence on community, who possibly may not be summarily gotten rid of, but who should be ignored by every sensible person. The first may be borne with, the last ought not to be.

In communities formed as those are in which the Saints as individual citizens and aggregate social integral parts are living, there is a necessity for the enforcement of the laws of the land, that the weak may not be wronged, nor the strong wrongdoer go unwhipped of justice. It is not the province of the Saint to sit in individual judgment on the laws under which all live; that is delegated to others whose duty it is to become conversant with the principles of equity, and minister in the courts where the laws are understood.

No law bears hardly on the man who does right; whose intention is to live peaceably with all men; but to him the laws are safeguards of direction and protection. To such a citizen the word "honor the law" means that he shall not only give tacit consent to the existing conditions which he cannot mend though he may deem them wrong, but he shall give the executors of the law the moral support which he as a citizen has the right to exercise, and also absolute and active aid and support when such are needed.

We were much pleased not long since to learn that an attorney at law, who had been prosecuting attorney in a county in Missouri, adjoining Decatur, in Iowa, had this to say of the Saints:—

I have a warm side to your people. I know quite a number of them, and in the exercise of my duties in enforcing the laws as prosecuting attorney, I found them ready to aid in maintaining good order. They always stood by me in my efforts to execute the laws.

Such words should be deserved by all. We believe them to have been deserved by the Saints living in the locality of which the attorney spoke. And why should it not be so? A people distinctly told that among the vital principles of their faith subjection to the powers that be was a duty; lawbreakers and deceivers, busybodies and mischief makers, disorderly and riotous persons are an abomination to God, as well as destructive to the peace of society, of all people on the earth, should be law-abiding and in the exercise of the rights of citizenship active aiders in the enforcement of the laws.

Let us be good citizens of the Republic, and other governments of which we may be parts, that when He comes to reign whose right it shall be, we may have so formed the habit of obedience that we shall then be found worthy to inhabit and enjoy the government of God on the earth and in heaven.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. H. PORTER, Wilber, Nebraska, September 26:—

I had the pleasure of baptizing a gentleman and his wife here yesterday. It seems to me that several are very near the kingdom at this place. The work here is in good condition. I wish I could say the same concerning the whole district, but the drought has smitten us three years in succession and many Saints have left, and others are in a very unsettled condition.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. M. R. SCOTT, JR., whose letter appears in this issue, refers to an item dated Holton, Indiana, the 16th, which has appeared in press dispatches, and is to the effect that "the Mormons" are holding "secret meetings" and "are determined to stand by their doctrine regardless of their neighbors;" and "have regular officers and a set of rules which each member must obey." The charge of holding "secret meetings" is an old one, and known to be false. That of being determined to stand by the truth as Christ revealed it and of having regular officers and rules of conduct, is correct. The Saints of Indiana, like the primitive Christians, doubtless prefer to do their own thinking, and also allow their friends of other denominations to do the same, but pledge and manifest loyalty to the laws of the land. The item shows what religious prejudice will resort to when sound arguments cannot be adduced by our opponents.

Bro. Elbert A. and Sr. Clara A. Smith recently returned from their wedding trip into Northern Iowa. Bro. Elbert is the son of Bro. David H. Smith and nephew of President Joseph Smith; and Sr. Clara the daughter of Bro. A. S. Cochran. Both have been employed in the Herald Office; Bro. Smith in the bookbinding department, Sr. Clara in the secretary's room. The best wishes of all go with this happy couple.

Bro. Heman C. Smith returned from Salt Lake City, Utah, on the 21st, called home by sickness in his family, and Bishop E. L. Kelley from Missouri and Iowa points on Monday, the 23d inst.

Bro. C. W. Dillon, from the field in Wisconsin, has returned home, to Lamoni, for a visit and will return and resume missionary labor at an early day.

Brn. A. H. Smith and R. M. Elvin are in attendance at the Logan, Iowa, reunion.

Bro. and Sr. James Whitehead, of Lamoni, returned home from the Nauvoo reunion at Park Bluffs, Montrose, Iowa, well pleased with the sessions. Bro. Whitehead was private secretary to the Seer whose memory he reveres and of whose faithfulness to the church he continues to bear witness.

Bro. B. W. Warren, of Alton, Missouri, recently returned from the late discussion between Bro. Joseph Ward and Elder H. T. King, of the Christian Church, at Wheeling, Arkansas, reports a complete victory for the truth. He thinks Elder King failed to make a point, although an experienced debater. Bro. Warren rejoices in the truth. He advises all who have opportunity to obey it promptly after becoming satisfied of the divinity of the work.

Bro. J. J. Cornish wrote from Barryton, Michigan, the 24th inst. that he was operating in a tent at that point, a new opening. Six had been baptized to date.

Bro. George Washburne writes from near Ludington, Michigan, the 22d inst. that he had baptized seven more and left others believing. One of those baptized had to be taken to the water by conveyance, but was healed at baptism, and walked home, and has since been about her household duties. He expects to soon meet an opponent in discussion. There are many calls and he is trying to answer what he can; hopes to soon be constantly in the field.

"And he who is faithful shall overcome all things, and shall be lifted up at the last day."—D. C. 75: 3.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"For sweet friends and kind affections,
Gentle hearts, and home's dear love;
For bright health and holy pleasures,
For the faith that soars above:
Grateful hearts to thee we bring—Lord, accept our offering."

AT CHURCH.

THE following clipping from the October number of the Ladies' Home Journal we earnestly commend to our young lady readers. It is taken from among the many good things Ruth Ashmore says monthly to her girls. Of course what is said in reference to pews and prayer books will not apply to you, but study carefully and see if there is nothing in it which you can and ought to appropriate. Burns expressed the wish,

"O wad some poerer the giffie gie us
To see oorself's as ithers see us."

And while sitting in church we have sometimes found ourself wondering if a large mirror placed so as to reflect the entire congregation would not prove a perfect revelation to many? Facing a portion of the congregation (as we do each Sabbath) we certainly have had revelations of an unpleasant kind made to us, in reference to the deportment of some whom, previously, we would have selected as examples.

THE GIRL AT CHURCH.

SOME OF HER SHORTCOMINGS MIRRORED BY RUTH ASHMORE.

You pride yourself on your politeness. You count yourself a well-mannered girl and would be very indignant if you were told that you were lacking in ordinary politeness. When you are invited out you are careful not only to be prompt but to be considerate of your hostess. What consideration do you show God when you go to his house? Too often you come in late, seat yourself with a little noise, and do not hesitate to turn and twist until you feel that your skirt is arranged exactly right and you are quite comfortable. Then you give a sigh as you look at the preacher. He is one whose sermons you do not admire, so while he is trying to do his duty you coolly read your prayer book or hymnal, or look around the congregation, and catching the eye of a friend, give a shrug of disgust. When the sermon is over you give vent to a sigh of thankfulness, and you never seem to realize that this bad behavior on your part is bad behavior not only to the clergyman, but to that God whose representative he is.

When the collection is taken up you look here and there and everywhere to see who is depositing a bank note. Before the benediction is said you crane yourself like a bird with its plumage so that you will be ready to start out the very minute it is ended. I do not suppose you realize for a moment how dreadful this is. How it is giving an opportunity to an unbeliever to say, "What can these Christians think of their God when they are so impolite to him?" Then you do something else. In your church the pews are rented. When you enter you close the door and give no poor sinner an opportunity to sit beside you, and yet, in the sight of God you are all alike, and before him the rich and the poor stand together to be judged.

HOME-COMING.

When life's hours of toil are ended,
And my day draws to a close;
When the bells of evening, chiming,
Call me to my long repose,
Eagerly my feet shall hasten,
And my eyes shall look to see,
Standing close to heaven's portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

They who long from that far country Watched me as I faltered on,
In earth's weary round of labor,
Strength and courage almost gone.
When they see me drop life's burdens
And to heaven's refuge flee,
Swift will gather round the portals
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

And when on their silver hinges
Wide the gates of pearl shall swing,
And by grace of Him who loved me
I am suffered to come in,
First of heaven's joys to greet me
In that joyful hour shall be,
As I pass those shining portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

Then the cords which earth's rude conflict
Here had broken shall be joined,
And beyond death's gloomy kingdom
Still more strongly shall be twined;
Ah! my heart, fail not thy singing!
Though the way may weary be,
Soon my joyful eyes shall see them,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

THE SPECTER OF HEREDITY.

NO GREAT subject has a deeper hold of the people than that of heredity," says the Journal of Hygiene, and we honestly believe it is a fact.

No one will deny the fact that a knowledge that children inherit the talents and peculiarities of their parents goes back into early times; for the statement in the Bible that "Fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge" is simply a poetic and very picturesque recognition of this fact. How often we hear the expression, "This child is the very image of its mother, meaning that the child has inherited her mother's form and features. "Jack is a chip of the old block" means that Jack's case is one of heredity. How often we hear the remark, "He comes honestly by his traits of character," when a child follows the same course of life that one of his parents did. "He must have got this trait from a remote ancestor, we believe," when he does worse than his parents. "Blood tells," says another old proverb, and no one doubts it.

Now, Daughters of Zion, I would not detract one iota from the belief in the influence of heredity, but I would not overestimate it or give it credit or blame when none is deserved. We are all greatly indebted to our ancestors; most of them probably did quite as well for us as we are doing for our descendants. How many Saints to-day look ahead and plan for the bodies and minds of those which may be born in the future.

Now what I want to impress upon your minds is that you must not let this specter of heredity hold you back from improving yourself and offspring. If you have inherited any defect from your ancestors, as most of us have, it is simply your duty to stop complaining about it, and go to work and correct it; if your body is weak as a whole or in part because your parents were not strong, go to work and strengthen it. If you have inherited a physical or mental defect, be brave enough to find it out and mend it by an effort of the will, by culture, training, and education. I knew a man who inherited a love of liquor, who kept this inheritance from being his master by making himself master of it, and quelling it. I knew a woman with a tendency to consumption, inherited from a consumptive parent, by wise, physical culture, a life of outdoor activity, by moderation in all things, she mastered the disease; and baffled her inheritance. If she had lived in mortal fear of it and made no effort to take care of herself, she would have died of it before this. Bjornson tells the story of a child in whose veins coursed the wild blood of debauched and depraved ancestors for two hundred years, and who, under the influence of a wise mother was trained into a splendid manhood.

Now, dear sisters, if you see in your children hereditary traits of character that you do not like, remember that environments can influence heredity. If we want a higher type of men and women to come into the world we must follow the teachings of Christ and keep evil from our hearts, and when the child is born have its environment of such a nature, that the higher faculties will be brought into use and the lower ones suppressed. COINING SUNSHINE.

"It did seem as if there was nothing for the poor soul to live for when her husband forsook her, leaving her in straitened circumstances, with two small boys to care for; but—will you believe it?—she dried her tears in a few days (of course we are not prepared to state whether they were dried through the long night watches or not), and began bravely to untangle the much disordered skein of her life. She made one dollar do duty for five; she worked hard, smiled often, and made the best of everything. Some one consoled because she had to support the two boys.

"Their father might, at least, have taken them off your hands."

In unfeigned surprise, the plucky little woman made answer:—

"Why, that is one of the things I have to be thankful for. I could stand anything but losing them."

Another said:—

"I don't see how you keep up so; why, your rooms seem full of sunshine!"

"I coin it," was the laughing reply.

At another time she made the declaration that she thought it everyone's duty to look and act happy, whether they felt so or not.

She did not believe anyone had a right to parade his individual griefs or add a single cloud to earth's sky.

Another woman—infirm and old—occupied a very dismal, sunless flat, but for all that it always seemed cheerful there, and the neighbors loved to drop in at all hours.

"With only the north windows unobstructed," her friends oftentimes said, "how is it you are always so bright here?"

"Why, don't you know? I coin my own sunshine. I have to go without, and I don't choose to do the latter."

And here it is. Very many people have either to coin their own sunshine or go without, and too many go without, to their own detriment and everyone else's.

Not one of us is so situated but there is some brightness possible. We may have poverty, ill health, disappointment, even death of loved ones, to cloud our sky, but still we know the sun is shining behind the cloud, and, until it bursts forth, it is our sacred duty to coin our own sunshine.

If there are little ones in the house our responsibility is doubled. It is a positive sin to cloud the young lives; they will have enough of their own to bear, if they live.

Remember that, "Mamma's eyes are baby's skies," and as you love your darling do not let it see the shadows there; and the more you smile the easier it will be, until by and by the sunshine you forced into your eyes will have stolen into your heart.

We would that all mothers realized how completely their moods color life for their children—even children to man and womanhood grown.

And fathers—we wonder if your sons as well as daughters ever read these pages?—really their influence over wife and children is beyond computation. Only a wife knows how quickly the barometer runs up or down at the entrance of the husband; and only she and the children know what manner of man he is.

Good brother, leave your cares and worries at the store, office, or wherever your work is, and come into the home smiling, even if you have to coin a little sunshine. If there are worries to be talked over, wait until the little ones have gone to dreamland."—Selected.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

"Remember in all things, the poor, and the needy, and the sick and the afflicted, for he that doeth not these things, the same is not my disciple."—Doc. and Cov. 52:9.

Thursday, Oct. 3.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church. Memory Verse.—Doc. and Cov. 70:3.

Thursday, Oct. 10.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—Col. 3:12-17.

Thursday, Oct. 17.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—1 John 3:16-18.

Thursday, Oct. 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—2 Peter 3:9-12.

Thursday, Oct. 31.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 62:8-12.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SISTER M. A. FAULK, Austinburg, Ohio, requests your earnest faith and prayers that she may be healed of her afflictions which have been from her youth and which the physicians cannot cure, and that her children's hearts may be drawn near their mother that they may be converted and obey the gospel.

Bro. John Blue, of Blair, Nebraska, requests your faith and prayers that his eyesight and health may be restored. Sr. Alice Martin also asks your prayers for herself and family. Her husband is dead, and she is in poor health and poverty.

Letter Department.

CORNET, Ind., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—I will commence meetings here to-night in the United Brethren church. I have been holding forth near New Marion, for about one week in a grove. Have had fair attendance considering the condition of the work. When here four weeks ago I never saw better interest. At the close some clubs were thrown, and that caused quite a dark cloud. How it makes my heart ache to follow after some of our preachers and learn that they are tearing down the work. We should seek to establish the doctrine of Christ, and not sling clubs into our religious neighbors' yards. We are not commanded to slur, but to preach the gospel. I never saw excitement so high. The Ripley County paper had in it a notice as follows: "Mormons in Ripley. The Mormons are creating quite an excitement by preaching in groves and schoolhouses, and something should be done to prevent them from getting a foothold." But so far everything done seemed to terminate in our favor. A reverend divine came to have a chat with me to present some of his objections, and acknowledged, so I have been told, that it was of no use for a representative of any sect or body to meet the latter-day work. The harder this work is opposed the closer I expect to stick to it, and I wish I had help enough to canvass this entire county and preach in every place where we could get a hearing.

Indications are favorable for large crowds this week. The beauty and simplicity of the gospel of Jesus Christ is what is needed today to elevate mankind. Many are coming from a distance to hear our claims, and a great many are favorable which is causing Satan to rage. Some who had said that we had the truth, and expressed a desire to unite with us, have had runners sent to prevent us from getting a foothold, telling falsehoods and tales which are diametrically opposed to truth. I thank God that we are not to be judged by any human tribunal. Calls for preaching are more than I can fill. Note the inclosed clipping which indicates what people will do when their priestcraft is in danger.

In bonds,

ECHO, I. T., Sept. 3.

Editors Herald:—We came here from Gravett, Arkansas, the last of August. We found Bro. Simmons faithfully at work. We continue until time to start to Baxter Springs reunion. We have had open opposition by three ministers and we have the promise of having to meet a big gun, one who has proved himself to be very abusive and unfair.

Bro. Simmons had his picture drawn again and placed upon our pulpit. He used it to advantage to illustrate his subject. It was not so pretty as the one I mentioned in my last; yet some thought Bro. Simmons did the work himself and used it for a text.

Some have seemed very anxious to diet us upon poison and eggs; one shot fired missed its object, the speaker, and splattered some very gentlemanly young men who were crowded near by me for the lack of room elsewhere in the building. They threaten prosecution upon our enemies. We think our friends have doubled in numbers and we believe, will defend us. The attention is better and our crowds are increasing. We both have had the best of liberty if not the best of health. More anon,

No. 2 Barrett Square, MILNROW, Lancashire, Eng., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—I here send a request to your readers, and hope it will find favor with them, and they be able and willing to comply with my request; namely, Give what they can relating to the following subject: "Pre-historic America, or who are the American Indians?" I fully expect having to deliver a lecture upon the above subject in January or February, 1896, before the "Literary and Scientific Society" at Rochdale, and if possible give magic lantern views. I would like to have what views it is possible to get, and extracts proving that they are Joseph's children. A brother in Manchester has promised to take views and make slides for a lantern lecture. Those kind of lectures take very well here in winter. It may be inconvenient for the brethren, but nothing is gained worth having only by such. I have thought of this method for a long time and think it a good method of instructing the people; and if we can get men to think we have done something towards the end we have in view. I shall try and do my part, I can get possibly to the ears of these people on this subject; on other things I could not. I intend to proceed upon this line. Take threefold evidence, the Bible saying Joseph's children shall be found over the "sea" "in the midst of the earth," etc.

Egyptian and Hebrew languages, etc., found in America and Egypt identical; chart for length of the year, etc. Book of Mormon, etc., and where they dwelt, etc.

If I can only get sufficient matter for one lecture to begin with I can gradually extend my views as opportunity affords. I think I can give two recipes whereby each at home can take their own etching views or get copying paper and indelible pencil and print their own and as many as they like. I will try if the brethren will respond. Hoping to hear from them,

Your brother,
JOHN SMITH.

BEAVERTON, Mich., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—I came here one year ago last December, and found three Saints living here, and that Bro. F. C. Smith had been here some time before and preached three sermons, and that was all they had heard about the gospel. I commenced holding meetings in the schoolhouse, and after I had preached two or three times the people sent to a place called Gladwin and had the Presbyterian minister come and lecture against us. He delivered his lecture and I did not get there to hear him. I arrived just as he was closing his lecture, and had not heard anything, so I could not reply then; but a lady there who was favorable towards us had noted his discourse; so I found it out and gave out that I would reply to him, and I did so the next evening. Previous to this he had organized a Sabbath school, but after I had replied to his lecture and showed wherein he had made some false statements, the superintendent and wife began to investigate our faith, and in two weeks later I baptized them. Then the war commenced. The Presbyterian minister dare not meet me in a debate, so they sent and got three Methodist preachers to come. And they came and attended a few meetings and made up their minds they did not want to debate with us either; so they went around all over the whole village and told the people not to come out to hear us; but the people kept on coming just the same.

What to do next they did not know. They heard I had held a debate with a minister by the name of Rogers, but he lived some forty miles away. They got a rig and went after him, but he said he did not care to debate, but he would come and lecture two nights for them against us for fifteen dollars, and they agreed to give him the said amount. The time being set, he came and delivered his lectures. I was there, and when he got through I challenged him to meet me in debate, and he refused. Then I told the people I would answer his lectures, and I did so. Then I baptized four more, and that made the people so mad they told Mr. Rogers he must debate, so he agreed to meet me, and the propositions were drawn up and the time set. He came, and we went at it, and it lasted seventeen nights, or thirty-four hours. During the debate I baptized two, a man and wife. A short time after the debate I baptized eight more, and two of them were the superintendents of the same Sabbath school that they appointed in the place of the one I had baptized before.

One thing here I wish to relate before I proceed. During our debate Rogers said to me, "If your God be God, why don't he stop me from lecturing against the Saints?" I told him perhaps he would. But he defied me or my God to stop him. The third day after the debate was over he was taken sick and he never got off from his bed alive. There was another man that attended the debate who was very prejudiced, and he said, "If we are going to starve the Mormons out of Beaverton, we will neither buy nor sell to them, nor give them any work; we will starve them out." He also was taken sick in a few days, and he died in about four weeks. Before he died he came to want; the people had to carry in provisions for him and family; he died a pauper; the town buried him. But we keep right on preaching and baptizing, until we have over fifty Saints, a nice branch, and the interest is better now than ever before. I baptized a lady last Sunday, and many more are believing.

J. A. CARPENTER.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—I am on a month's trip in the coal fields. Progress is slow here, but not without some elements of life and encouragement. The Hamilton branch is making an effort to have a chapel. A frame and lot were offered by Elder Broadway, president; and though it means a great effort and sacrifice, yet they are intending to get it ready for the December conference. They are being materially assisted by Bro. Wight of Tuncurry in special arrangements for timber. Just after the conference, it is probable that there will be a debate in it, the disputants being Elder Kaler and Mr. Mogg, champion of the Christadelphians in this vicinity.

Since here have preached at several points, and exercised oversight as district president. As my services are needed more in Sydney just now, will return there soon.

The letters of introduction received from Sisters William Satterfield and Miriam Preston were utilized this week in a visit to Mr. Richard Jones, of Tighes Hill, New Castle. Was respectfully received, but no special interest was manifested for our gospel. This for their information.

GOMER WELLS.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—After a brief sojourn with Saints at Richland Creek, Tama County, and preaching three times there after the conclusion of the debate, I went to Rhodes, Marshall County, August 20, and making headquarters at Bro. Nirk's, Bro. Jerry Miller took me ten miles south to Bro. C. C. Barbee's. The schoolhouse hard by was soon procured and on the evening of the 21st we began services there, with Bro. Miller assisting, with small audiences attending. Clouds and rain interrupted the meetings some; the clouds as often as the rain. One wonders that the clouds and a little lightning so terrify the people of late. It was not so in my earlier recollections. If a cloud appears during the services you might just as well conclude the meeting; the congregation will go! That great journal, the Iowa State Register, has been investigating the question of tornadoes and cyclones for the last three months, and advocating the constructing of caves, resorts of safety during the visitation of those terrifying and destructive visitants. The fear of the thunders and lightnings seems quite universal. It reminds us of the prophecy of Joseph the Seer, given to the world in the name of the Lord in 1832, Doctrine and Covenants, 85:25. Men begin to "feel" "the chastening hand" of the Almighty, as predicted in the revelation on the Rebellion. The statements are receiving unquestioned emphasis. Men's courage fails them for fear! But will those little caves save the people? Is this move a prelude to prayer for rocks and mountains to fall on and hide them from God's glory? At all events the people fear the clouds, and our meetings are disturbed thereby.

The borders of the new religious movement — the Christian Alliance, so-called — had touched society in Bro. Barbee's neighborhood, and our efforts seemed away below par; so after a few trials there we gave it up, surrendering the territory for the time (something unusual for us), and after a second effort, including four sermons, moved on to Baxter, where we occupied the Christian church twice, preaching to small audiences with Bro. W. C. Nirk in charge. Bro. and Sr. C. C. Barbee did their best to have us feel at home while sojourning there, as also Mother Smita and family who reside near, and who take the church papers, Herald, Hope, and Ensign. Sr. Cachatt lives at Baxter, who with her husband makes the elders feel at home when sojourning with them.

Our three services held in the opera house at Rhodes, with Bro. Nirk in charge, were well attended, notwithstanding preaching has been done there for years past by some of our ablest representatives. I do not think gospel work is done at Rhodes yet. The few Saints left there are working with a will in both church and Sunday school work.

Wednesday, September 4, found me at Des Moines where I found Bro. William Thompson holding meetings in the eastern outskirts of the city. I preached the next evening at the church by request; felt blessed of the Lord in so doing; Saints present seemed encouraged in the cause.

The district Sunday school convention held at Runnells, on the 6th, was well attended and interest in the work is on the increase. The conference of the 7th and 8th was the most largely attended of any since I began labor in the district. Reports show a gain of twenty-two to twenty-five in membership since the 1st of June last; also that local laborers with branch officers are moving on to higher ground. Most all the baptisms reported were by local laborers. The new chapel lately built at Runnells by our people and their friends is a credit to them and the town and to our cause, and is highly appreciated by the community. Bro. F. A. Smith, on his way to Montrose reunion, stopped over at our conference. All were glad of his presence, and at least four hundred and fifty per-

The chapel was dedicated on Sunday, September 8. We were sadly disappointed, however, that circumstances rendered it impossible for Pres. Joseph Smith to be present, as it was fully expected, almost to the hour of service, that he would be there to deliver the dedicatory sermon. As Bro. Joseph had no control over the circumstances that denied his presence with us, and as he, no doubt, was as sadly disappointed as were we, he will surely pardon this reference to the matter. And we can assure our beloved brother that the jewelled teardrops of sympathy glistened in the eyes of Saints and friends as we tendered our brother's regrets of absence on the occasion to the audience that filled the house to its utmost capacity. There being five hundred and three persons seated in the house by actual count, besides children, the committee requested that Bro. Nirk or I deliver the sermon. Bro. Nirk declined and the lot fell to me. Bro. Nirk, district president, took charge of the services; Sr. Mary Bouton presided at the organ; Bro. William Thompson offered the opening prayer; Elder D. M. Rudd read the statement of the building committee and the Scripture selections; Elder F. A. Smith then stood and offered up to God in fervent appropriate prayer the building as an offering to him, in behalf of the Saints of Runnells branch, and their friends, who assisted in building it. But what of the sermon? Of the speaker I can assure you, while usually blessed with so fair degree of confidence, in rising to address an audience that was expecting to hear another whose place it is most difficult to fill, for various reasons, a great personification of diffidence confronted me which I overcame only as divine aid came to sustain me. I did not present the line of thought at first contemplated, but yielded to the provisions of the moment and presented reasons for and evidences of the great restoration movement now operating in the religious world and agitating it like the storm does the great ocean's restless bosom, as reasons why Latter Day Saint churches, distinctively, were being built in many parts of the land. God gave whatever of merit characterized the effort. The music of the occasion was well rendered, and appropriate.

The house is neatly constructed, fifty feet in length by thirty in width, the floor slightly raised as we approach the rear. Pretty little windows of colored glass, and sharply angled at the top, alcove pulpit, and choir situated between the doors, with entry room on either side. A modest little belfry graces the front end of the building; walls and ceiling well decorated. Mrs. and Mr. W. P. Brown, merchants at Runnells, deed the lot for the church, valued at $250. The Sisters' Aid Society has $171 in the building. The property as it stands has cost $1,375, and we shall presume that the Bishop of the Church will be in possession of the deed for this property by the time this greets the eyes of the Herald readers. A splendid feeling seemed to pervade the hearts of all at our conference.

and went to Montrose with Bro. Smith, to represent the district at the Bluff Park reunion, the Saints donating my railroad fare to and from the reunion. Was glad to be permitted to attend. I believe it was a success. I came to this city last Monday. Have held two cottage services and one lawn service, at the homes of Messrs. Harmon and Hinds; am to speak again to-night, and then go to Logan reunion.

It was a rare treat to witness the visiting together of old Brn. James Whitehead, and Allen Waite, and Sr. C. Salisbury, sister of the Martyr, all of whom were members in the old organization. All witnessed the apostasy from the faith under Brigham Young and coadjutors, and passed through the dark and cloudy day, but now rejoice beyond measure in the "evening time" light that reflects on the pathway of the church—the Reorganized Church, and with the favor of God attending it, as indicated in the prophetic word.

Will the church appoint a General Reunion to be held in this mission to celebrate the return of the captives and the liberty of rebuilding the waste corner stone of Zion for 1896, it being fifty years since the captivity began? We will wait and see.

Expectantly,
C. SCOTT.

CANBORO, Mich., Sept. 15.

Editors Herald.—After nearly three weeks of busy toil and hard labor trying to arrange matters at home that the little family might at least have the necessaries of life, and to keep the world from saying I had denied the faith and got "worse than an infidel," I again find myself ready for gospel work, and expect to board the early train to-morrow morning for Port Huron, where I will meet the district tent and hold a series of meetings.

While glancing over the pages of the Herald I find, as usual, it comes loaded with soul-cheering news from all parts of the world, telling how God's servants have wrought for and scored victories all over the land. The Herald ought to be in every home to cheer, comfort, and strengthen the Saints; as by it we can see just how the gospel is advancing, and many times read of the arts of Satan being set up, which to my mind indicates the near approach of the Messiah.

A few days ago I was called to Fargo, St. Clair County, to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Thomas Dempster, a worthy Saint, and on my arrival found the Methodist church packed to overflowing, while the Methodist choir did most excellent singing. The writer enjoyed splendid liberty on the principle of the resurrection of the dead, and word came from there of late that all were well pleased except one man, notwithstanding that is the place where the Methodist pastor refused Bro. J. A. Grant the privilege to reply to Musser last spring.

On the 12th ult. I was called to Bay Port to preach the funeral sermon of Sr. Abraham Harder, another worthy Saint, and was greeted with a full house of eager listeners. It seems the Lord is like himself and takes the best of the flock. The Saints at Huron Center have erected a lovely little church building and have it nearly all paid for, which proves that they are alive to the work. Three were baptized at the close of the two days meeting August 24 and 25.

If Bro. M. H. Bond will send me his permanent address I will send him a little money I have in my hands for books, due him. Also Bro. E. C. Briggs; send me your permanent address, as I have a little money for you. The long spell of dry weather was broken the other night, and we are getting plenty of rain. In bonds, MANCHESTER, England, August 30.

Editors Herald.—The missions conference held at Sheffield, convening on the evening of the 3d and adjourning on the evening of the 5th ult. was fairly attended, its sessions being peaceful and measurably profitable. The first Monday in August is a bank holiday and very generally observed. Railroad excursions are given at reduced rates. The Sunday school in some localities is but in its incipient stage, hence this gathering affords an opportunity for the more experienced in Sabbath school work to stimulate, instruct, and encourage the less experienced. Then it affords an opportunity for mutual instructions, which appear potent reasons at present for continuing the above yearly gatherings; and yet in the course of events, it is quite possible the time and money thus spent, may be otherwise utilized for the good of the cause. I don't believe our likes, or dislikes should stand in the way for the adoption of measures for the best good of the work; for its extension and establishment should be our constant aim, without by intrigue or otherwise legislating or scheming for personal benefit or advantage. Seek to know, and keep in the line of present duty, whether pleasing or trying. Time passes rapidly; and the reckoning time is at hand. Who shall enter into the joy of the Lord as a reward for diligence, integrity, and true loyalty to God? Who shall make a Samuel's record (1 Sam. 12:1-4)? who? All may try.

England has survived the excitement, expense, etc., attendant upon a general election. The Liberals are down and the Tories are up, making some glad, and others sad. So moves the world. Whether the measures which the late government essayed to carry; viz., disestablishment of the Welsh Church, home rule for Ireland, local option, etc., will ever be resurrected, with the abandonment of the House of Lords, I couldn't nor would I attempt a guess; for thereby I might give a greater prominence to my ignorance, and that is needless. But touching the drink traffic, I read the following: "Fresh phases of the evil of the drink traffic were introduced by Sir Wilford Lawson at a temperance meeting at Birmingham, where he remarked that the church was tyrannized by the drink traffic. They knew how the electors were under the influence of the traffic and so was the House of Commons. The late Lord Randolph Churchill once stated that in his opinion two-thirds of the members of the House of Commons were tyrannized by the great drink traffic. The Prime Minister had told them that if they did not control the drink traffic it would control them. The democracy of to-day was the most extraordinary democracy the world had ever seen. They thought they ruled, but they were ruled by the drink trade, which was hand in glove with the aristocracy of this country."

The effects of intoxication seen daily in England are indeed distressing. Wives and mothers with husbands and fathers are inveigled and held fast in the grasp of the monster intemperance; and not infrequently one sees a mother staggering on the thronged streets with a helpless babe in her arms. With such intoxication and the evils resulting therefrom, together with the blighting effects of a universal apostasy or a spiritual intoxication, the lively remembrance of the effects of polygamy, with the persistency in classifying us with the Utah Mormons, makes the preaching of the gospel an arduous task.

The Manchester district has, in common with others, its troubles; but the president and local officers are pushing ahead. The Salford mission, which was in its incipency a year ago, is under a systematized method of tract distribution and preaching, is growing, the establishment of a Sabbath school being a great help. The work thus far, with help from the district president, has been prosecuted by young brethren. Some holding no office have been pressed into the service of tract distributing. Sensible! There is hope for a district when all are active. They may be confronted or beset with barriers, but the love of duty consequent upon a love for the work enables them to meet and overcome these besetments, and onward they march. But inactive officials in a district find time for useless disputations, cavilings, etc., and it is hardly practicable for them to find time to quarrel and be active too. The former prevents the latter, as the latter prevents the former; so, non-quarrelsome officials are in great demand, at this particular juncture.

The push and godly persistency in the Bradford mission has resulted in the establishment of a branch. Ministerial work is being pushed in Stockport and Roehdale, with fair prospects.

It can hardly be expected that his Satanic Majesty in view of this stirring and pushing, thus evading his dominions, will remain quiet; but we should be prepared to meet and resist him.

Efforts are being made in Ardsley, where Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Senior, held a discussion with a Mr. Brown. What the result will be the future must tell; but in the meantime the Saints, and especially the officials, should see to it that in this God-imposed work of spreading out into new localities the work is not injured by tenaciously clinging to pet present plans and rules. This breaking forth may necessitate some changes in present branch organizations, which should not be done without proper thought and legitimate efforts to obtain common consent and coöperation; for we should come together and work, not for the worse, but for the better; and when matters relative to the building up and spreading the work have been duly considered, coöperation sought and obtained, let controversy cease, and all correspondingly labor to reach the desired end.

The Sheffield district is small in numbers, having but two branches, but an extensive territory. The people in Sheffield are hard to reach, so that a necessity for unity of action with the branch members, with a view to success, is an absolute necessity. A systematized method of tract distributing in that large town might result in much good. Brethren and sisters there as elsewhere should learn and know their rights and duties, moving along peacefully and orderly in their several positions, always remembering the necessity for order and peace in all our doings. We must not always excuse ourselves for being boisterous, turbulent, or violent because of being big, strong, etc. We must strive to overcome such unseemly ways and manners. Nor should we become too technical, nor watch too closely to make one an offender for a word, or by sharp practice essay to expose the weakness or shortcomings of another, and thus take glory to ourselves. Nor should we become so conceited in our own measures or plans as to think others' unworthy of notice, or get affronted if any suggested plan of ours should be refused and another's adopted. In all this we shall be greatly assisted by cultivating a desire to do to others as we would wish to be done by.

Bro. J. Austin, as president of this district is doing good for the work so far as his circumstances permit. The Clay Cross branch greatly needs a more desirable house of worship. I hope they may ere long secure one. Unity of action accomplishes much.

There are capable officials in the Birmingham district and hundreds of thousands of people within a small radius of country; but the work moves very slowly at present. We ought to be trying to turn something up and not wait all day for something to turn up.

As per request and liberality of Bro. John Jervis I engaged a public room for seven meetings in Stavely Town; had posters and small handbills printed, distributed the latter from house to house, and commenced preaching on the evening of the 11th of August. Bro. Austin and Gowers from Sheffield, and Bro. H. and S. Holmes from Clay Cross, were present; audience first evening fair, but meager through the week. I shared the liberal hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Frisby during my stay in Stavely, whom I hope may yet become members of the church. Some attention to Stavely, by Bro. Austin and other brethren may in time give us a foothold in Stavely; but the people there appear shy, distant, and prejudiced. I might add that the Sabbath school is slowly increasing in Sheffield, and that three more were baptized on the 23d inst. Some two or three others investigating.

I hope all in this as well as in other countries may evidence in a practical sense that they noticed the late appeal of the Board of Publication and not overlook, "Let your yea be yea."

Permit me to offer my sympathy and condolence to the bereaved family of Bro. G. W. Shute. He was a faithful worker and doubtless he and his family sacrificed much for the work's sake. May his rest be glorious.

Bro. W. R. Armstrong got in a correcter of a statement published in Tid Bits, a very widely circulated journal, a copy of which I forward you.

Unlooked-for events have retarded the building of the London chapel, but when finished we hope to gain a prestige never before enjoyed in the world's metropolis.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

KNOX, Ind., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—We are enroute the district in the interest of two days' meetings. Thus far five appointments have been honored, and we are at Knox as the sixth, to prosecute the work. Bro. Phelps conducted the services at Dimondale, and we learn that a good, spiritual time was enjoyed, though the deeply-rooted weeds of prejudice still bloom and wave in the hearts of the people.

The Marcellus branch dedicated the grove situated on a beautiful promontory extending into Finch Lake, for the meeting held at that place. Elder E. C. Briggs and myself were present to conduct the services. The largest attendance ever had in that locality and the intense interest manifested indicate the present as an opportune moment for the unfurling of "Zion's ensign." It would, indeed, greatly rejoice the hearts of the few good and kind Saints at that place to have the six or eight sound thinkers, who are analyzing the work, let the shadow of their influence fall toward the latter-day work. We continued the meetings alone up to Friday of the following week, with unabating interest.

Moving along the line to Hartford, we had the comforting opportunity of delivering six discourses in two days in the hall occupied by the fraternal societies. Bro. Bruce had baptized one, an elderly man, on the day we arrived. The meetings were largely attended and the enthusiasm increased with each service. The Saints at that point are united in the effort to move up to advanced grounds. We left the city with great inquiry hanging on the lips of the people. Many are convinced, but alas! the courage of convictions battled down makes us to be slaves. When we learn that,

"Our liberty is in the law,

While snares and chains are put without;

But never forget, no, never forget,

That over the fence is out."

"The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus has made me free from the law of sin and death."

Buchanan branch received due attention, and the worship was conducted in the "old Advent church." I must say that a more earnest, zealous, constant body of busy workers is difficult to find. Here as at the former place my comfort returned. Six times, hard speaking in two days. Well, I had grace to endure, and I wonder how the audience get along without it. But on Monday, we drove to St. Joseph River and buried three persons with Christ by baptism in its agitated waves. Some encouragement to Saints and minister; the attendance was quite good throughout. Some new interest enlisted which followed up the appointments at Galien. Here Bro. Briggs rejoined and the meetings were carried on with considerable ardor. While we could have wished for an increase of energy and diligence at the Galien branch, there was the fire of resolve in the eye and the happy expression of willingness and consciousness of "doing" or "lack of doing" in the face. Fine audiences filled the hall; all looked like they wanted to be happy. "There is no law," as Carlyle says, "that anyone shall be always happy in this state of being." No, the opportunities in this respect are not uniform and continuous, but irregular, indefinite, and subject to various contingencies of interruption and disappointment. There are alternations of delight and sadness in every human life; the good and ill, the sweet and bitter, succeed each other according to some occult logic beyond our comprehension. In an average sense, undoubtedly, it is well with those who do right, and otherwise with those who do wrong; but this does not explain the numerous deviations from the rule, and does not provide a satisfactory method of adjusting inconsistent facts and tendencies. But let us not reject the rule because of exceptions; rather let us carry the exception in our progress to higher ground, on and on, till we occupy the broad, where we find the exception fits into the general rule; and brethren and sisters, we can always find it in the realm of truth. We know that the wicked frequently get what should go to the righteous; that mediocrity snatches prizes from superiority; that rascality thrives at the expense of honesty; and thus the distribution of happiness is studied in vain for proofs of systematic justice and fairness.

These last statements involve the thought that happiness is found only in the higher divine law, operative in the circle wherein God moves; and an understanding of that rule that will adjust in the "eternal fitness of things" all things to itself. The Great Cause moves rapidly along. Shall we keep pace, or lag in the rear? It does not look well in the arena of battle, to see the few in the front and the great body far in the background. We have found those who seemed to have caught the inspiration and were bold enough to declare that they had been led into greater and more spiritual depths by contact with non-professor than those who professed yet did not possess. What does it mean? That old Babylon's many bolted doors are being bursted open, revealing the cracks and chasms of "untempered mortar;" that there are no joyous, divine, and spiritual elements in the wisdom of men; and that the foundation bed rock is a powerless paper creed! Seeking for that which will answer the demands of wisdom and justice within their own hearts, and finding it not in the cankering rubbish of popular sectism, good men draw aside the curtain, let in the light of real day, break loose from the old mother's apron strings, throw overboard denominational baggage, and start up "independent" on their own hook, to draw spiritual and divine light from the "unconverted" and "unregenerate." Yes, the progeny of the "scarlet" lady must go under.

Says the Rev. Joseph K. Dixon, D. D., of Philadelphia: "We are making Baptist history rapidly here, but making it backwards. One of our churches is reported to have sold its building and two or three others are offered for sale; one church has the prospect of going out of business; three or four others hitherto looked upon as bulwarks in the demination are seeking shelter under each other's wings, and thus the work of depletion goes on. Some Baptist facts stare us in the face. Call us pessimists, you who may, some awful blundering has been made and we are not likely to get very far away from old habits."—Philadelphia Facts and Fancies.

If these churches represent Jesus Christ, it will be comforting for our Baptist friends of the West to learn that Jesus Christ "has gone out of business" and is "depleting." Furthermore, if these churches had been the one that God built and Paul described, this "awful blundering" would not have been done; for God was to "inhabit that church by his Spirit" unless God did the blundering. (Eph. 2: 22.) But I did not intend to write an article, friendly Herald, just a letter.

The work in this district is in a favorable condition. The only drawback, so much to be done and so few to do the work. Bro. Briggs and myself came to Knox yesterday. Our appointments are out for six services. We are expecting Elders Daniel and Barmore to-day. We go from here to Coldwater, thence to South Scott. Are hopeful of good results all along, and especially at this place where so much sacrifice and anxiety on the part of the dear Saints have been manifested and where we have done so much labor in the past. Ever interested in the movement, I close until appointments are cancelled and conference date is set. Hopefully,

MIAMI, I. T., Sept. 23.

Editors Herald:—I left Maysville, Arkansas, in August, and came to Echo, Indian Territory, and began meetings in the Ballard schoolhouse. Had good houses; held ten meetings assisted by T. J. Sheppard and A. C. Hart. The Devil got among some of the good Christians and they gave us eggs as arguments against the truth. One hit Bro. Sheppard on the shoulder. We finished our work there and made some friends. Will go back after awhile and see how they do. We left there September 6 for Baxter reunion and spent eight days with the Saints. It was an enjoyable time. O, what a contrast between Saints and those who know nothing of the gospel.

We left Baxter at the close of reunion with a tent. Bro. Shepard came here with me. We set up the tent on the 17th and have held meetings every evening to small but attentive listeners. Bro. Sheppard left me on the 20th but Bro. H. H. Robinson is expected every day to assist. He went from Baxter to Joplin to hold some meetings there. I had two Advent preachers to hear me one night, but they were quiet; they are from Oklahoma, and I suppose they have come in contact with some of our boys and learned to keep hands off. There is a brigade of Baptist preachers in town, but all they are doing is to growl and show their teeth, slip around the corner, talk about the Book of Mormon and Joseph. I am feeling well in gospel work: better this year than ever since taking the field. The Lord has greatly blessed me, which I am trying to appreciate: so I hope to be in the fight to the end.

S. W. SIMMONS.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—This beautiful afternoon is the fourteenth anniversary of Miss Cordie Celestine Short. This, my eldest living, is a dutiful child. With each recurring autumnal equinox my parental heart blesses the day that brought the coveted prize to the humble home of this quiet northland village. A fair son of Scotch or Swedish type, and another daughter of Holland mould, have, in turn, made their advent in the corridors and halls of home. This triple band are clean limbed, sound physically, ordinarily bright, fairly obedient; but our little four-year-old, Ruby Irene, takes the cake for juvenile beauty and sweetness. My wife, Viola Vernon Short, has been in this church a quarter of a century the fourth day of last August; whereas I embraced the faith the third of May, 1874, at Galesburg, Jasper County, Missouri: having been tutored and brought up in one of the nominal churches.

I served my country for three long years when our flag was in great peril; but, thank Providence, my life was spared to behold the happy triumph of right, the dissolution of sectional strife, the emancipation of human slavery throughout all our borders, the resurrection of national prosperity, the unparalleled development of material wealth, the colossal strides of medical, scientific, and especially mechanical discoveries, the double quick and ever accumulating march of reason, improved facilities for education, and, more than any or all other things, the slow but steady rise, development, and spread of the church and kingdom of our adorable Lord and Savior. I have tried to stand in the gateways of salvation a double decade of years, and my heart's desire is to duplicate that time in the active field contest should time and opportunity be granted me to go in and occupy. I have been an ardent active missionary so long, I am in my element, or, at least, I am unhappy unless I am on guard and at the wheel.

I closed the tent for this season and on the 12th inst. left Lewistown, Illinois, and repaired to Park Bluff for a few of the concluding days of the pleasant reunion. It was rather an experiment, but, withal, it was thought to be all right, and a success. Sunday was a high day indeed, for behold! J. R. Lambert in the morning outdid himself in a most inspirational, pointed, and authoritative appeal; while C. Scott in the afternoon, swept out like a rushing irresistible avalanch, with elegance of diction, grace of delivery, and an ascending climax of fiery logic and heavenly truth that fairly filled and thrilled the enchanted auditors. Mr. Thomas Junk, of Henderson, Illinois, and two rather young Wallace men and a young man named Balsar—all from Hancock County, Illinois,—were baptized in the Father of Waters by J. S. Roth, on Sunday evening.

Recently Elder J. T. Kinnaman has been in these parts, and did some very effective labor, and, perhaps, as at least a partial result of his toils, five were duly inducted into the kingdom here last Sunday, all of which caused great joy in our confirmation and testimony meeting.

I never worked so incessantly in any previous summer as this hot one, delivering from seven to nine discourses per week, for more than three months, in our elegant tent. It was a new line of work, but I feel and verily know that I reached the ears of more than I otherwise could. No article was purloined, nor yet was anything injured maliciously, though we left it at nights, save while in Peoria. Elder T. F. Stafford gave me great assistance, and he now has our movable tabernacle carefully sheltered till tenting time again. The people, though skittish and shy at first, soon came around, and finally liberally aided the enterprise financially. I enter upon that department of work if selected for that arm of service with confidence and a growing determination to push the conquests of the cross to the very gates of the enemies, so to speak.

M. T. SHORT.

MOUND CITY, Mo., Sept. 15.

Editors Herald:—When I last wrote we were at Stanberry; while we stayed there we made some more friendly to the cause, and I believe removed much prejudice. The Saints there did all they could to make our sojourn pleasant. We came away on the 12th ult. I was poorly nearly the whole time there. We next took our tent to Mound City, a beautiful place, nearly ten miles east of the Missouri River. From the resident part of the city we could look over into Nebraska on the northwest and Kansas to the southwest. The scenery is grand. To the southeast are large hills dotted with timber. Bro. Ross got permission to put the tent on the old courthouse square. I learned that the mayor was kindly disposed towards us. However prejudice ran high, and just a few manifested any particular interest in our meetings. Wet weather interfered very materially with our work while there.

After two weeks' stay we took our tent to Maitland. As usual we were blessed with the privilege of occupying a nice corner lot in a good locality, just across the street from where we were staying. Here we found a much better spirit in the people that came to hear. It was easy to preach to them. They were sociable and gave good assistance in our singing. We heard that the preachers had held a council and decided to let us strictly alone. However, after the close of one of our services a minister offered some criticism upon Bro. M. P. Madison's sermon. I took him up and after some talk we separated with a kind feeling and a better understanding. I had thought to make a fuller reply to some of the things said and had arranged in my mind what I would say, but after prayer I felt led to go right along and make no reference to the little difference had between us the night previous. It was expected that we would. I told them that the church sent me out with the expectation that I would be a gentleman and not a blackguard. Two ministers were present to show fight. However, after the discourse, Rev. Bays was quite friendly and continued so during our stay. The day we left Maitland another of the ministers treated me very kindly and considerately. I believe they are good men, I told the people that we had no enmity toward the preachers; that we would take the ministers into our church with their congregations if they would repent of their sins and promise to live righteous lives.

At the close of our last meeting we received many good-bye's with an occasional, "I wish you God speed. When do you expect to come again?" I should state that we stayed with Sr. Black. She united with the church at Montrose, Iowa, near Nauvoo, in the year 1860. She has to wash for her living; her husband is not in the church, but favorable. She takes the Herald and Ensign and pays one tenth of all she earns to the church as tithing. She rejoices in the latter-day work.

At present we have the tent in a neighborhood called Harmony. There is considerable interest manifested. It is but justice to say that Bro. R. K. Ross has done all in his power to make the tent work a success. The tent meetings have been six and a half miles from his home. He has been present nearly every night and some of the family every night, so has Sr. Knowles, coming almost every night nine miles a good portion of the time.

Bro. Ross wishes me to say that he would be pleased to have any of the Saints that are looking for a permanent location to come and examine this country before purchasing elsewhere. He has no land for sale. He expects to buy more almost right away. There are a number of good farms for sale all the way from forty to sixty-two dollars per acre. This country can't be excelled in fertility and beauty. Should any wish further information please address as follows: R. K. Ross, Mound City, Holt County, Missouri.

Bro. J. T. Ford has been faithful. He went home to attend to matters that needed attention. Bro. M. P. Madison rendered valuable aid while at Stanberry and Maitland and was greatly blessed in his efforts. My health is and has been poor nearly all through the summer. I am preaching every night and blessed with liberty. I have heard murmuring because you discontinued "Items of Interest," some going so far as to say they discontinued Herald on account of its discontinuation.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

I NOW introduce evidence that ought to be taken by all fair-minded men as conclusive, inasmuch as it includes sworn statements of those who were present at the ordination and public appointment of young Joseph to be his father's successor. Young Joseph states in the evidence given in the Temple Lot suit, while under oath, as follows:—

I know that there was such an appointment of myself as my father's successor in office.—Plaintiff's Abstract, page 63.

Of the ordination and appointment referred to above, James Whitehead says:—

I recollect a meeting that was held in the winter of 1843, at Nauvoo, Illinois, prior to Joseph Smith's death, at which the appointment was made by him, Joseph Smith, of his successor. His son Joseph was selected as his successor. Joseph Smith did the talking. There were present Joseph and Hyrum Smith, John Taylor, and some others who also spoke on the subject; there were twenty-five, I suppose, at the meeting. At that meeting Joseph Smith, the present presiding officer of the complainant church, was selected by his father as his successor. He was ordained and anointed at that meeting. Hyrum Smith, the Patriarch, anointed him, and Joseph, his father, blessed him and ordained him, and Newell K. Whitney poured the oil on his head, and he was set apart to be his father's successor in office, holding all the powers that his father held.—Plaintiff's Abstract, page 28.

As to his being publicly proclaimed as the successor to his father, he further testifies:—

The church did take action as a body on the question of the ordination of young Joseph as his father's successor; the church consented to it. That was done first by the indorsement of the High Council, and then it was brought up before the whole body of the congregation, the whole people; and there were thousands there. That was done at the meeting held in the grove at the east end of the temple. . . . There was a vote taken, the congregation voted, and agreed to the appointment of young Joseph as the successor of his father.—Ibid., page 33.

As to its being known generally at Nauvoo, he says:—

Brigham Young said to me at different times, "I am not the leader of this people, nor the prophet of the church; we know who that is; it is Joseph, the son of Joseph the martyr."—Ibid., page 36.

It was the general understanding and belief among all the members of the church at Nauvoo, that young Joseph was to be his father's successor.—Ibid., page 37.

John H. Carter, Sr., of near Provo, Utah, testified in the same case; and as he was a member of the High Council at Nauvoo, he had a good chance to know in regard to the facts testified to. He says in regard to the public appointment of young Joseph, and as to its being generally known:—

Joseph came on the stand leading his son, young Joseph, and they sat him down on a bench at the prophet's right hand, and Joseph got up and began to preach and talk to the people, and the question he said was asked by somebody, "If Joseph Smith should be killed or die, who would be his successor?" And he turned around and said, pointing to his son, "There is the successor," and he went on and said, "My work is pretty nearly done." . . .

My father-in-law was with me at the time, and sat there and heard what was said, and when we were going home my father-in-law asked, "What does that mean?" He said, "That has got a meaning to it, from the way Joseph talked and pointed to his son; because Joseph had said, "There is your leader," pointing at the time to his son, and my father-in-law said, "We will see the fulfillment of that by and by."

It was the understanding of the people generally, of the church, as far as I know: all understood it from that day on that when the boy Joseph came of age he would take the lead in the church and be its head. There were a great many people who believed that, and moreover, President Young preached it himself for some time after he came into the Valley. That was the belief of hundreds and thousands; was the belief then, and is the belief now.

I have always believed that ever since I heard Joseph say the words I have stated, ever since I saw his father point him out; and I believe it to-day just as strongly as I ever did, and it was under that belief that I have followed President Young West with the branch of the church now known as the Salt Lake branch. That was the teaching and the ideas held out by the officers and elders, including Brigham Young and other prominent elders of the church, who afterwards came West and located here at Salt Lake City; and it was the teaching in Utah Territory for several years after the death of Joseph Smith. Here in Salt Lake City they publicly taught and held out the idea to the members of the church that Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph Smith, Jr., would eventually be the President of the Church.

The idea was held out for some time after they came here; but after awhile, when the boys did come here they were rejected for some cause. I think I know pretty well why they were not received. When I refer to the boys, I mean young Joseph Smith and his two brothers.

Not one half of the members would have followed Brigham Young West,—or would have followed his leadership if it had not been published at the time and advised by the authorities of the church that young Joseph Smith would eventually be the leader of the church.—Ibid., pages 180, 181.

John H. Thomas testifies of what occurred in a Spring Conference held at Winter Quarters.

At that conference the main question at issue was, that none of Joseph Smith's family were along. At that time we understood and believed as we do to-day, that Joseph's family, or the head of his posterity rather, young Joseph, should be the successor of his father. We understood that would be the case, and all attempts by Brigham Young to get any of his family to accompany him were failures. . . .

There were a great many of the ministry of the church who were dissatisfied and gave expression to their dissatisfactions, and in that conference Brigham Young made the statement, and Heber C. Kimball, and Dr. Richards, and the rest of the Twelve that were in Winter Quarters there, that they did not want anything more; that they had talked it over, for it had got noised abroad there and back in Illinois that the family was there in Illinois; and Brigham said we might just as well draw a knife and cut the boy's throat, as to be talking of such a thing, because if it was known that the promise was made to young Joseph in Illinois that he should be the leader of the church he would be killed. Brigham said not to talk of such a thing, or even hint at it.—Complainant's Abstract, page 255.

No event in the history of the church is so clearly proven as that young Joseph Smith was set apart and appointed by his father to be a successor in office; and no one has had the audacity to deny that fact until recently, when Elder B. H. Roberts has been put forward as the champion of the Utah Church. But there is one thing notable in that denial; and that is, that he puts forth no personal testimony in rebuttal, of those whom it is claimed were present at that ordination and appointment. He states that one reason of that denial is the fact that it was not put forward earlier, but when evidence is put forward showing that it was talked of, he tries to rule that testimony out. But the above quotations of the reasons why, are sufficient; viz., it would endanger the boy's life, a thing it would be easy to make the people believe under those trying circumstances.

I have, I believe, established the fact of young Joseph's call and appointment to succeed his father; but in my mind the matter of the greatest importance is, Did he or has he honored that call? Christ says:—

For many are called, but few are chosen.—Matt. 22: 14.

I quote young Joseph again. In his letter to J. B. Price, the same already mentioned, I read language that does honor to the man, breathing forth such a spirit of humility and confidence trusting in God to vindicate his cause as he (Joseph) shall deserve that vindication by an upright walk. He says in regard to his call—that is, the call to himself:—

The character of the call which I have received is that of the many which have been received by my compeers, the revelation of Jesus Christ, by vision, and by dream, together with the voice of the Spirit. One of the chief, perhaps the chiefest reason why I have made so little stir in regard to these things is, that I preferred, as I now do, that those desirous of knowing in answer to their just and holy aspirations, God might bear the proper testimony, through his Spirit, to the calling of myself in like manner, as such testimony was borne to the calling of my father. All who have attempted to steady the ark of our hopes, since my father's departure, have done so by attaching the extremest importance to their call, regarding the godly walk, the upright walk, as requirements easily dispensed with, if so be they were called. I am fully persuaded that no call of God can sanctify a man who departs from God's law, while he maintains that departure.—Saints' Advocate, pp. 365, 366.

Such was the character of the man who was to be appointed in Joseph's stead.

For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.—D. C. 43: 2.

This, young Joseph has always done. He has maintained the supremacy of the written word, and that all living oracles must submit to have their words and actions brought into harmony with that which is "written."

And a more remarkable fulfillment of a prophecy is not found in all history than is found in the "posterity" of Joseph Smith fulfilling the prophecy uttered by him when writing to John C. Calhoun, as previously quoted, and which says:—

I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence until Missouri makes atonement for her sins.

Instead of skulking off into the "valleys of the mountains" leaving the cause of injured innocence to take care of itself, the posterity of Joseph staid and fought the battle of truth against error in the State of Missouri until there is scarcely a hamlet, city, or village now existing in the State but has heard the glad sound of the gospel of peace; and still they and their colleagues are sounding that tocsin of peace, and will sound it until Zion shall be redeemed and the fair name of the church and its founder shall have been cleared from the foul blot of shame that has been placed upon them by those who should have been foremost in their vindication.

And not the least in evidence is the fact that Missouri to-day stands only second in numbers furnished to swell the names of those who have been initiated into the kingdom of God; and not long, at the present rate of increase, will she stand second, but will soon lead the van; and still the cry comes from every quarter of the State, "Come over and help us." So thoroughly has God's word been fulfilled that chapels for the preaching of the gospel are springing up all over the State, and peace and quiet are given as God has said would be given.

And behold I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs.—D. C. 102:5 Utah Ed. 105:25.

And not the least act by far in the fulfillment of that prophecy was the institution and carrying out of the Temple Lot suit.

I was actually astonished at the audacity of Elder B. H. Roberts in his endeavoring to establish the claim made by his church to rightful succession, when near the close of his book he almost goes into raptures over the fact that they have been persecuted, and his endeavor to show that by that persecution, or I might say prosecution, they had been brought before rulers, judges, legislatures, representatives, etc., and that thereby the gospel had been preached to the chiefs of the nation. Now I venture to assert without fear of contradiction that not one principle of the gospel of Christ has ever, through that means, been brought up before rulers or judges or discussed in legislative halls. There is only one principle ever been brought before the representatives of the nation by the Utah Mormons, and that is the principle of polygamy; and that has not the remotest connection with the gospel of Christ.

But look upon the work of the posterity of Joseph Smith as represented in the above-mentioned Temple Lot suit. There the gospel in its purity has been placed before the judges and people of the nation in opposition to that twin relic of barbarism called polygamy, and its kindred evils. The fair name of the church has been or is being cleared from the stain brought upon it by the Utah people. The cause of injured innocence is being brought to the front, and the efforts to fasten polygamy on the church and its founder have been met and frustrated. The claim of the legal heirs to the priesthood and the church property is being established, and the end is not yet. Who can measure the lasting benefit this action on the part of the Reorganization will have upon the future of God's work on earth? Who can tell but what the issues started in this suit will result in the restoration of thousands of dollars worth of property from which the church and individuals were wrongfully driven and deprived of? Surely a prophet has been among us. Surely God did speak through Joseph Smith when he said, "I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence until Missouri makes atonement for her sins;" For the coming "to pass" is plain to all unprejudiced minds.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

The conference was held at Fairfield, September 14. M. H. Bond, of St. Louis, was chosen president and J. F. Henson associate; district clerk present. Branch reports: Brush Creek 262, net gain 25; Dry Fork 45, loss 2; Kibbie 62, gain 1; Springerton 116, gain 15; Parrish 59, gain 1. Tunnel Hill 104, gain 11. Reports: Elders I. A. Morris baptized 1, J. P. Maddox, J. F. Thomas, F. M. Slover baptized 9, J. W. Stone, W. H. Brewer, H. Walker, W. A. Kelley, J. F. Henson baptized 11, J. D. Stead. Priests: H. T. Rankins, J. M. Bass. District officers elected were J. F. Henson president, F. M. Slover secretary. It was resolved that all the authorities be sustained in righteousness. A committee of three was appointed to draft resolutions and confer with the Bishop relative to the financial condition of the district. The resolution reads as follows: Whereas, there has been no report from the Bishop's agent in this district for two conferences, and whereas the district treasury is empty and no funds with which to prosecute missionary work, be it resolved that a committee be appointed to confer with the Bishop of the church looking toward an active prosecution in this district of the duties of Bishop's agent. The following was also passed: Resolved that we hereby tender the thanks of this conference to the mayor and authorities of the city of Fairfield for courteous treatment and for the use of the beautiful city park for our reunion and conference purposes. This conference and reunion was one of the best ever held in the district, the Saints' meetings in the morning of each day being especially blessed by the Spirit of the Lord. The preaching was good, Brn. M. H. Bond and Charles Jones, of St. Louis; E. Curtis, from Harrisonville, Missouri; L. F. Daniel and A. C. Barmore, of Indiana, being present with us. Good attention greeted the speakers at the several services. Adjourned to meet at call of the president.

WESTERN MAINE.

Conference convened at Green's Landing, Maine, September 14; W. H. Kelley in the chair, J. C. Foss secretary pro tem. Branch reports: Green's Landing, no change. Deer Isle, no change. Bray's Mountain, J. E. Eaton ordained a priest. Elders reporting: W. H. Kelley, W. G. Pert baptized 1, J. J. Billings, J. W. Blastow, O. C. Eaton, U. W. Greene baptized 9, J. C. Foss baptized 4, H. J. Davison, F. M. Sheehy; Priest D. H. Eaton; Teacher J. H. Eaton. Bishop's agents report: Received $242.81; paid out $225.68; on hand $17.13. Audited and found correct. Committee on looking after money matters with the Massachusetts reunion reported: So far they have not received the money due them. W. G. Pert sustained president of district, J. J. Billings assistant, and E. H. Pert clerk. Time and place of next conference left with president of district. Preaching by W. Bradbury, W. H. Kelley, U. W. Greene, and F. M. Sheehy. Adjourned to meet at call of president.

Sunday School Associations.

SPRING RIVER.

Convention met at Baxter Springs, September 11, at 9:30 a. m. Sr. Hart, assistant superintendent, presiding; Mirtie Jones secretary. Superintendent, G. W. Hobart, reported that on account of sickness he could not be present. Amount in treasury 85 cents, amount expended 65 cents. Schools reporting: Webb City, enrollment 116. Weir City 39. Angola 49. Seligman 26. Maysville was received into the association. Resolved that this district furnish a banner, to be given to the Sunday school having the best program at the entertainment, retaining the banner till the next convention; three judges to be appointed by the superintendent at each convention. Resolved that district assist in bearing the expenses of superintendent or associate in visiting the schools in district. A training class in each of the three grades was had; C. W. Sutherland in charge of primary, Mina Hart in charge of intermediate, A. H. Herke in charge of senior. A very interesting entertainment was rendered in the evening. Adjourned to meet at Angola, Kansas, the Monday following district conference at nine a.m.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The convention of the Northern Michigan district Sunday school association will convene at Boyne City, October 11, at 2:30 p.m. All interested in the Sunday school work please try and attend. All schools who have not reported do so as soon as possible.

H. J. BADDER, Sec.

The Sunday school convention of the Kewanee district takes place at Millersburg, Illinois, October 4. Secretaries please take notice and send in reports.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and Friends in the Eastern Nebraska Mission; Greeting:—The time has now arrived for the opening of the fall and winter campaign of preaching. I therefore take this means of addressing a few words of counsel and advice to you.

This mission is a large one, and we have six regular missionaries, and one who is to labor as circumstances permit. If all labor wisely and well, and receive the aid and assistance of all the Saints and friends in the mission, their influence will be great for good. If their labor is not wisely directed, or if they fail to receive the hearty coöperation of the brethren living in the mission, their success will not be so great. We therefore invite your hearty coöperation to the end that our labors may be crowned with success.

There are several ways in which a missionary may be assisted in his work. One is by the scattered Saints writing to the one appointed to labor in their locality and inviting him to come there to labor, telling him of the circumstances of their surroundings, opportunity for preaching, etc.; another is by taking an active interest in the meetings being held, and in assisting in temporal things as we may be able. We should remember that the responsibility of preaching the gospel is not upon the preacher alone. He cannot travel without means, and it is expected that he will be provided for in a proper manner, hence the Lord has said: "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward: and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple: by this you may know my disciples."—D. C. 83:16. Another way is by not inviting him to do work that does not especially belong to his calling without there is an actual necessity for it. It sometimes happens that an elder is invited as a compliment or by courtesy to go to a point, a branch for instance, and preach a series of sermons when there really exists no good cause for such. It would be good for us all to study closely what the Lord has said in Doctrine and Covenants 122:7: "The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, . . . so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them;" etc.

There is much unworked territory in Eastern Nebraska; and we have been counseled by the missionary in charge (Bro. A. H. Smith) not to follow the beaten paths too closely. With this counsel I heartily agree, and hope the missionaries will heed it and make special effort to do missionary work in their respective fields.

I also trust that the branches will honor and sustain their own officers, and not call for missionary help unless it is actually necessary, then the missionary will cheerfully render what aid he can, and thus effectual harmony will prevail, and good feeling and mutual coöperation will result in cementing in bonds of brotherly love all the workers of the body, and their united efforts will receive the blessing of God, and we shall all rejoice together.

In studying the situation and how we may the more effectually conduct the coming campaign, I have concluded to invite the missionaries to labor as follows: Bro. J. F. Mintun and G. M. L. Whitman in Northern Nebraska, outside of Omaha, to coöperate together as circumstances may require. They are also requested, if opportunity is favorable, to labor in Saunders County. Bro. W. E. Peak in Richardson, Pawnee, Johnson, and Nemaha. Bro. M. H. Forscutt in Otoe, Cass, Lancaster, and Gage. Bro. W. M. Self will coöperate, as circumstances permit, with Bro. Forscutt. Bro. Waldsmith will, in connection with his duties as Bishop's agent and district president, do missionary work in any part of Southern Nebraska included in the Eastern Nebraska mission.

The Saints and friends will please confer with these brethren by letter or otherwise in regard to work in their respective localities and coöperate heartily with them in building up the work already established, and in opening new fields wherever practicable.

These men are able ministers of Christ and are making sacrifice for the cause, and are worthy of the support and assistance of all people "called to be Saints."

In all the Counties not named east of the west line of Webster and Adams Counties south of Platte River, the Saints and friends will address all requests for labor, etc., to the sub-missionary. Let us all coöperate heartily together in the work before us, and "do with our might what our hands find to do."

We have a number of able men who are now laboring locally from whom we expect efficient help; especially is this true of Brn. A. J. Myers, Ezra T. Bryant, and C. E. Blodgett, of Southern Nebraska, who are so located as to render their assistance invaluable. Ever striving for the welfare of Zion,

Your brother and colaborer,

C. H. PORTER, Sub-missionary.

PROGRAM FOR SONS OF ZION.

The constitution of the Sons of Zion makes it the duty of the Advisory Committee to outline the work, or prepare programs, for the locals to use in their monthly meetings. In pursuance of this duty the committee has decided to announce the following as their judgment in the matter, believing that as the work progresses, experience will educate us as to what is best for the advancement of the work.

Believing that, where a knowledge of the evil is possessed, to cultivate a love for the truth will cause the evil to depart, we yet believe that in many instances it is necessary to point out the evil where it is not known. While the Spirit of truth will aid us to hate the evil, it does not always point out specifically the evil to be hated. Hence it is necessary, we think, especially for the younger ones, that some instruction be given as to what is evil. We do not believe that the average boy acquires these vicious habits because he prefers them to the good, but rather because they are presented to him in an attractive form, and he, without a single note of warning, many times, adopts the practice of that which fastens itself upon him as an enslaving habit, and which proves injurious to both mind and body, and which will, if persisted in, prove his irretrievable ruin. Many a youth would have been saved from such vicious practices had he been instructed by his parents or older companions with reference to their injurious character. Our work as we see it is not only to teach them in the truth so that they will hate the evil, but also to sound the warning note, so that if such habits are contracted, it will be contrary to what they have been taught.

We believe that the word of God should be the basis for the study and teaching of truth, and we hope to be able to bring from the Scriptures many things which are little known to the vast majority, which will teach us much with reference to the care of our bodies, and with reference to our social relationship. We believe also that there is much good to be obtained from books written by individuals who have spent years of investigation upon these subjects from a scientific standpoint, and are able to give us the best information gained from observation and study. We have, therefore, selected, and do advise the careful reading of, the two following books: "Plain Points on Personal Purity," which is adapted to all the adults and older boys; and "Almost a Man," especially adapted to the younger boys. These books may be had by writing to Bro. E. C. Ingraham, 509 Chestnut Street, Muscatine, Iowa. The former will cost 70 cents per copy, and the latter 25 cents.

We hope that presidents and secretaries of locals will call attention to these books and encourage a careful reading of them. We recommend that they be read in the meetings as part of the program, with whatever discussion may seem proper. Should there be quite a number of both younger and older members, it would be well to have them meet separately, each reading the book adapted to their grade. Either grade, however, may get much good from the book for the other grade, and where there are not enough to have separate meetings all can read and study together with profit.

While the constitution says that the Advisory Committee shall prepare programs for the locals, we do not think that it was understood that they should have no voice in arranging their own work. The general organization was somewhat hastily formed with but few present, and we did the best we could under the circumstances; and whatever of imperfections may be discovered in the plan, let us bear them in mind and work the best we can until the next general meeting, when they can be remedied. We do not think it without the province of the locals to follow their own ideas of arrangement of the work where there seems to be a demand for a different line of work from that suggested by the committee; but in doing this it should be remembered that the best interests of the locals will generally be served by working for the best interests of the general society. The committee has spent a great deal of time in searching for books suitable for our work, and in deciding as to the best plan for carrying out the same. We purchased twenty-five copies of "Plain Points on Personal Purity," which retail at one dollar, so that the locals could have them at 70 cents, the corresponding secretary, Bro. Ingraham, advancing the money to pay for them.

We hope soon to see many locals organized and the work taken up with a zest. Lamoni has organized with a strong corps of officers, and a prospect for a prosperous career. Who will be the next to fall into line?

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

CAMP MEETING AT COUNCIL BLUFFS.

As you have been flooded with lengthy accounts of reunions and as brevity is suggested we condense.

The reunion at Grand Plaza, Lake Manawa, four miles from Council Bluffs, reached by "dummy" train, and finest camp ground in Western Iowa; use of, tendered free by Col. F. C. Reed when Driving Park officials refused to fulfill their promise. Temporary organization Thursday to Saturday, H. N. Hansen president, S. V. Roberts secretary, T. A. Hougas chorister.

Permanent organization: Presidents A. H. Smith and T. W. Williams, A. B. Mair secretary, T. A. Hougas chorister.

Sunday A. H. Smith called home by telegram and on Tuesday the name of J. R. Lambert substituted. Rules for camp provided, police secured, and all arrangements to make camp life pleasant. Over a hundred tents on the grounds including big tent partitioned off for several families. The following brethren occupied and acquitted themselves creditably: Joseph Luff and R. Etzenhouser, three sermons; A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, M. H. Forscutt, E. L. Kelley, T. W. Williams, S. Butler, H. Kemp, and H. N. Hansen, three sermons each; Joseph Smith, W. T. Bozarth, H. J. Hudson, C. E. Blodgett, J. F. Mintun, J. H. Thomas, once each. Some of the above assisted in other meetings, as well as the following: G. M. L. Whitman, I. L. Rogers, A. S. Cochran, D. K. Dodson, S. Harding, John Lentz, John Evans, and others whose names we have not at hand. There were eighteen baptisms; glorious testimony meetings; unexcelled preaching; good and attentive audiences. The most peaceable and quiet camp meeting ever held in the church. The unanimous expression, "Let's have another here in '96." It was a great success; God was glorified and man bettered. A committee was appointed to confer with the Logan reunion to effect a consolidation of both reunions next year, if possible. The secretary may send a more elaborate report.

BREVO.

LOGAN REUNION.

The first session was held at 2:30 p. m., September 20, D. Chambers, chairman of the reunion committee, calling the people to order by announcing "Redeemer of Israel." Prayer was offered by Jonas Chatburn. "Come thou fount of every blessing" was then sung. Temporary organization was then completed by selecting the reunion committee to have charge of the services, J. F. Mintun secretary, and Mark H. Forscutt chorister, to be assisted by S. B. Kibler and James Pearsall. Short speeches were made.

D. Chambers said: "I expect this to be the most spiritual reunion ever held. To make it such each one must patiently do his part, and all be prayerful. These reunion enjoyments are but a foretaste of the glad reunion when the Savior will come. I hope we may all meet there."

Jonas Chatburn said: "My ability to push this work I love so well is waning. I note an added interest this year to that of any previous year, judging from the great number of tents on the grounds previous to the opening session. I have always felt repaid for all I have ever done for this work. This work is an individual work. I hope to always have the faith I now have, for I know this work to be of God."

Joseph Seddon, of the reunion committee, said: "It is thought by some that the committee is responsible for the results of these reunions whether they are successful or not. This is not so. True, the committee must do, and has tried to do its part, but the success of the gathering depends upon those present doing their part, and each can do something if no more than to ask the Father for his blessing. Some who met at our last reunion are gone to rest, and this should remind us that this may be our last one in this life, hence should make a determined effort to receive much help to prepare for our departure. We pray that God may hasten his work; are we prepared for it, and what are we doing to prepare for it? These reunions are the best efforts that have ever been made to hasten the work of God in these parts."

At 7:30 p. m. J. F. Mintun spoke upon the following points after reading John 16:1-15 and citing as a text Titus 2:13, 14. We are considered a peculiar people. We are peculiar in that the former day saints were peculiar. The faith we have accepted brings us into relationship with God, and we receive the fulfillment of the promise of Christ; we receive the Spirit of truth which prompts us to be zealous of good works, and to look for the coming of the Savior. We are peculiar in that while other religious organizations try to be satisfied with the record of what the Spirit of truth has done for God's children in past dispensations, we are satisfied by receiving the Spirit of truth in this the dispensation of the fullness of times as was received of old, and the record we make will be as valuable as any record now in existence, being the result of the existence of the Spirit of truth with God's people now. We expect to receive as great a reward as the children of God of past dispensations, hence we need equal privileges to assist us to make the preparation necessary. The reward to be obtained is divine; this necessitates divine means. The promise was made to the apostles of the church or to the church through one of the members divinely set in the church, hence the church needs such members now in the church that the church through them may receive the necessary divine blessings. In apostolic times the promise was to all whom the Lord would call that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth. If we do not receive the fulfillment of this promise it is an acknowledgment that we are not equally favored with those in the past; we come to present for your consideration the work of God again restored in which equal privileges are enjoyed, and the promise of Jesus proven true. These reunions are types of a great reunion to be enjoyed by those prepared when the Savior comes in glory when will be gathered in Christ all things in one, both that which is in heaven and earth; the angelic hosts and the church of the First-born. For the privilege of being present at this time let us labor and pray.

On Thursday eve there were fifty-four tents erected besides the large tabernacle and boarding house. On Friday eve there were eighty-six tents nineteen of which were vacant. One hundred and twenty people slept on the camp grounds. This number of tents did not include the large tabernacle, the district tent, boarding house, and three stands. Among the early arrivals of the ministry Saturday morning was Elder C. Scott.

At nine a. m. Saturday was held a spiritual prayer service.

At 10:45 C. Scott presented the word, taking for texts, Isaiah 54:2, and 1 Peter 2:2. The speaker said: We live in a period known as the last days. Scoffers exist who deny that there has been a flood. The Scriptures in many places speaks of the work preparatory to the coming of Christ in glory. Natural influences are strongly against the spiritual. Was not God on the side of the spiritual the adverse influences would be against us. The adverse influences will be overcome. The world will move along into sin and folly deeper and deeper. God will also do his strange work to bring about salvation. It seems that the hastening time has come, judging from the rapidity with which the masses are rushing into evil. Zion's cords are being lengthened and her stakes strengthened. The nations will hear the gospel, and a few from each nation will augment our numbers. Resulting from the efforts of human wisdom undirected by inspiration is division, contention, darkness, uncertainty, and despair. The growth in us resulting from receiving the sincere milk of the word is purification and sanctification occurring as rapidly as we willingly submit ourselves to the powers of purification. We should search the Scriptures and permit that word to have its proper effect. God's people must be a holy people, for without holiness no one can see the Lord. Christianity is something to be learned and practiced. God has given only one form of religion—only one way to become a Christian. Only one church was purchased by the gift of Christ. Popularity and orthodoxy are synonyms in the religious world. We want to advocate Christianity, and teach that to become holy we must learn what holy works are and practice them.

At 2:30 p. m. J. C. Crabb was the speaker. He spoke as follows from Ephesians 1: 9, 10: The latter-day work is the only work which had its origin exclusively in this country. All church organizations up to 1830 denied revelation from God, hence were founded by human wisdom. The latter-day work is rejected almost solely because it claims to have had its origin with God. Paul spoke of God making known the mystery of his will. So will he do in the dispensation of the fullness of times. A gathering is to take place of that which is in heaven and earth. Angels were to bring to earth the gospel. They rejoice over sinners that repent, hence have knowledge of what is being done on earth. God will always deal in the same manner in relation to salvation. Salvation is obtained by obedience to the gospel legally administered. This gathering "in one" is upon the condition that we are in Christ. We are baptized into Christ, then sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise. None can be in Christ without a belief of the truth. Ministers must present the truth, and those who hear must believe and obey to be in Christ. God forgives sins and gives the Holy Spirit as he formerly did. The resurrection of the body and eternal judgment are doctrines of Christ. The judgment does not take place until after the resurrection, because in the body were the deeds for which we are judged committed.

At four p. m. the first Sunday school session was held, at which time an organization was completed, selecting J. F. Mintun superintendent, W. D. Bullard assistant superintendent, Nannie Seddon secretary, George Shearer treasurer, Bertha Beecham librarian, and S. B. Kibler organist. Superintendent selected Nellie Ballantyne, Bessie Lewis, and Nannie Seddon as visiting committee.

At 7: 30 p. m. M. H. Forscutt preached from Romans 1:16, 17. He presented the nature and effects of the gospel, and how to obtain such results.

Sunday morning prayer service was disturbed by rain. At 10:45 service was held in district tent, C. Derry presenting the word. He showed the virtue of practicing the beautiful gospel theory, taking for his text, Blessed is he that heareth the word of God and doeth it. He showed that the blessing comes to us because God who hath promised is true. At 2:30 p. m., it still being very damp, the district tent was occupied for service, C. Scott preaching from Titus 2:11. This was an able presentation of the Christ life as it should be manifest in us. At 7:30 A. H. Smith was introduced as speaker. He presented the unity of the work of God in contrast with the divided condition of religion resulting from the exercise of human wisdom only.

Monday morning was clear and cold but the sunshine soon gave warmth. The prayer meeting at nine a. m. was a pleasant one. At 10:45 J. C. Crabb preached. At same time a session of Sunday school was held. About eighty children and young people were arranged into classes and a very interesting though short session was held. At 2:30 p. m. A. H. Smith took charge and a permanent organization was perfected by selecting Joseph Smith, Alexander H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, and Joseph Luff to preside; J. F. Mintun, J. W. Wight, and W. N. Robinson, secretaries; Robert Chambers, Richard Lambert, Frank Landingham, C. S. Kennedy, Willard Fallon, Frank Russell, W. D. Bullard, and W. A. Smith ushers. Short speeches were then made by A. H. Smith, Joseph Smith, Joseph Lambert, Joseph Luff, and Rudolph Etzenhouser, and a letter read from M. S. Frick, of Webb City, Missouri. At 4:30 a session of teachers' normal training class work convened, and a paper entitled, Teaching Children to Pray, written by Sr. B. C. Smith, of Independence, Missouri, was read, after which followed feeling expressions from Srs. Lizzie McDowell, Christie Stuart, Sarah J. Ross, and Brn. M. H. Forscutt, C. Derry, and W. D. Bullard, treating upon the same subject.

At 7:30 R. M. Elvia was the speaker. His theme was the gospel, and he used as a basis for his remarks Paul's statement, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation." Paul was at one time ashamed of this gospel, but God in his mercy reached down and showed him his error. God, being unchangeable, his love continuing, and being no respecter of persons, we have the right to look for and he does give us evidences that his Spirit is at work with his people at the present time.

This salvation through the gospel is accomplished by our good deeds and perfect works, and as God, being unchanged, has given laws, we teach that those preached by Christ and his followers then must be the same that shall be taught now, and the same requirements must now be in force. James 1:22-24 and Isaiah 1:16-19 were cited, showing these requirements and the results of obedience; also Revelation 7:9-14. By this it is seen that the adversary is continually setting up trials for us, and those who are permitted to wear the robes of righteousness are only those who have come up out of great tribulation. This sacrifice must be offered on the altar that God commands. The simple act of doing good in a manner suitable to ourselves will not suffice. Paul says, "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."

One hundred and twenty-four tents and three covered wagons are on the grounds at this date.

September 24.—At the morning prayer service six prayers were offered and twenty-two testimonies borne. A sister present and interviewed told how she had been converted from the Christian Church by her little girl who had learned the gospel in the Sunday school. Committee on administration, composed of R. M. Elvin, J. W. Wight, W. R. Davison, W. A. Smith, and D. Hutchings, was announced.

At 10:30 a. m. President Smith preached and admonished the Saints to do good unto all men; especially those of the household of faith. Felt more and more to give credit to other denominations for a consistent manifestation of their faith; portrayed by special reference their condition; and thought the Saints should exercise a goodly degree of charity. For the last several months had felt that the reason the leading men of Utah opposed discussing with us was that they either felt our position true or had hopes of a final coalition of the two. Did not wish the Saints to infer from this any desire on his part to compromise any principle of truth advocated by us and held dear, for the sake of an accession to our numbers. When the Brethren Kelley had prepared to go to Palmyra on a tour of investigation he had advised that they make free use of the crowbar in uprooting the facts of history made by the church, and should they find that the church had originated in fraud then he would be one of the first to go out with them in the exposition of such error, for he had no desire to foster an evil. Thought the ministry would do better to use the Doctrine and Covenants more in preaching.

In the afternoon, J. W. Wight, after reading the second Epistle of John, called attention to the ninth verse. One to come preaching love or belief in the abstract sense, or to advocate that there is no necessity to teach or observe doctrine, would assume that he knew more of what was essential to salvation than did the apostle. If there is no necessity to preach doctrine there was no use for Christ to bring doctrine. The doctrine of Christ was his Father's. Whatever was necessary to be presented as essential unto salvation is now necessary. God cannot change and still be God. No use to hear the word unless we are doers of it. Others are like a man looking into a mirror, forgetting what manner of man he is. God's word as it was and is will be what will judge us at the last day. When we become acquainted with the word are we willing to be doers of it? They who come to God must believe that he is, not only was, and this being so he must reveal himself to men in the same manner. It is an easy thing to assent to what pleases us, but we cannot please God unless we believe that God is and that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him. If we have faith we manifest it by obeying those in whom we have faith. One cannot repent of his sins until there is a belief in God. If we did repent before we had faith it would not please God, for without faith it is impossible to please him. After repenting of our sins it must be necessary to be relieved of them. Christ promised the Comforter before the resurrection. After his resurrection he instructed the disciples to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endowed with power from on high. On Pentecost this power was received. Peter preached and convicted many of sin. They asked, "What shall we do?" Those people showed their faith by the question asked. Peter told them to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins. Christ spoke these words through the Apostle Peter by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Peter promised the gift of the Holy Ghost. Peter and John came to Samaria and laid their hands upon those whom Philip had baptized and they received the gift of the Holy Ghost. I do not expect that anyone will obtain an entrance into heaven only upon the God appointed way. The laying on of hands was used to heal the sick, to bless children, to ordain to the ministry, and also to confirm those baptized by water. The resurrection from the dead gives us hope and the time will come when we will pass under the judgment, and when we do it will be decided that we cannot enter into eternal glory unless we have obeyed the perfect law.

J. R. Lambert was the speaker of the evening. He called attention to Acts 2: 47 as the base of the evening's thoughts. This statement was made by an authoritative witness. The church here referred to is the church of God. God prefers always his own wisdom. Man and the intelligence came from God. God's wisdom is infinite. God added his to church devised in his wisdom such as should be saved. Outside of Christ we are aliens and foreigners. Man must be born again. We cannot receive salvation without a spiritual birth. We begin our life in the kingdom of God as a babe and grow up into Christ a perfect man. We cannot enter into the church except we obey the law governing. Peter and Philip preached the way of life. Peter and Paul practiced the laying on of hands at Samaria and Ephesus, which shows that it was a part of the great gospel plan. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and as the Lord added to the church such as should be saved, the gospel must have been the means by which they were added to the church. The truth shall make you free if ye continue in my word. The truth and the gospel are synonymous terms. No one part is saving of itself, but the truth as a whole will make us free. The church cannot save us, neither can God unless we do our duty. Salvation is not promised outside of the church. The expression, The church of God, shows the church to be divine—of God. The church is the body of Christ, showing it to be a part of the gift of God. Christ gave himself for the church that he might sanctify it. This shows the church was divine. Christ was to build his church.

That he was to build it on a rock and the gates of hell could not prevail against it shows the divinity of the church. The church could not have been overthrown if the people as a body had remained faithful. Churches existed in the past, each believing a like faith, but the churches of the present differ in doctrine, hence those now existing cannot be considered a church—God's church—as those which in the past existed could be considered. Christ gave himself for the church, not churches. There is but one body, the church, but this one body consisted of many members. God intended that in the church we would receive such help as will bring us to him. The church is composed of both officers and members, and all are taught of God by the same Spirit as it comes from God. In the church we not only receive the helpful Spirit, but we also are brought in contact with all the trial necessary to develop and benefit. If we do right even our trials work for our good. God works like himself and is adding to the church in the same manner as he once did such as should be saved. The church could come to us in only one of two ways, by succession or restoration, and in whatever way it has come it must be the same as it was.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS REUNION.

The Southeastern Illinois district's third annual reunion was held at Fairfield, Wayne County, September 6-13 inclusive. Of the ministry Brn. M. H. Bond, E. Curtis, C. H. Jones, I. A. Morris, L. F. Daniel, J. D. Stead, J. F. Thomas, H. Walker, and A. C. Barmore were on the grounds and participated in the organization at 4: 45 p. m. Elder F. M. Slover arrived later. M. H. Bond and E. Curtis constituted the presidency; A. C. Barmore was chosen clerk; L. F. Daniel, chorister; Lewis Brown, chief usher; M. G. Powell, chief of police, to choose assistants; J. M. P. Delancy, mail man; Paul Ayers, chief janitor; I. A. Morris, chief of reception committee.

By mutual agreement the evening service was devoted to short talks in which the following took part: M. H. Bond, L. F. Daniel, E. Curtis, A. C. Barmore, I. A. Morris, H. Walker, J. F. Thomas, and J. D. Stead.

Saturday, September 7.—Prayer service at 9: 30 a. m. Five prayers were offered and six testimonies borne. A spiritual feast. At 10: 45 Bro. Daniel, as preacher, used Jude 3. He spoke relative to the faith of God's worthies, such as Abraham, Enoch, Moses, and others who lived in times past. God had given us sufficient light and intelligence to enable us to testify that he is the same to us if we comply with the conditions they did. He regretted the lack of divine blessing and spiritual power in some of God's people to-day, and concluded by exhorting the Saints to "come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." At 2: 30 p. m. I. A. Morris preached from John 1: 12. He confuted the false theory that nominal faith will save, and urged the necessity of accepting the law in its entirety. We should confidentially accept God's word and acquiesce in "the eternal fitness of things" as arranged by infinite wisdom. At 7: 30 the audience was entertained and instructed by a sermon in Bro. C. H. Jones' eccentric manner. Some of Colonel Ingersoll's reckless statements were canvassed and the possibility of a fulfillment of God's great promise to Abraham vindicated. See Acts 7: 3-6 and Ezekiel 37: 12-15.

Sunday, Sept. 8.—Usual prayer meeting in the morning. At 10: 45 M. H. Bond preached from Hebrews 4: 9. The orthodoxy ("falsely so called") which teaches that the ultimate "rest to the people of God" will be "beyond the bounds of time and space" was logically criticised, and "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth," with other pointed texts, was used to show that man's everlasting abode will be upon the earth, renewed and purified. The promises of God to Abraham in regard to the future estate indicate as much. At 2: 30 p. m., Bro. E. Curtis speaker; text, Matthew 20: 1-14. The popular idea that this parable refers to the different periods in a person's life when they may be converted was mildly disproven in the introduction. A chart was used to illustrate the subject. From lack of time the consideration was only continued to the ninth hour, the dispensation of primitive Christianity. Bro. Curtis was requested by interested parties to continue the subject, which he promised to do at some subsequent time during the reunion. At 7: 30 Bro. Barmore preached from John 15: 1-9. That faith, repentance, baptisms, and the laying on of hands are the principles by which we are grafted into "the true vine," received into Christ's church, or adopted into God's kingdom, was dwelt upon. After this plan by which we escape "the corruption" of the world and become "partakers of the divine nature" the essentiality of a practical observance of the advice given in 2 Peter 2: 5-12 was presented.

The location is splendid, everything pleasant, convenient, and agreeable. It has been used for soldiers' reunions heretofore. The "big tent" and about twenty others are already up. The brethren have hired tents of the G. A. R. for fifty cents each. The "big tent" has been used mostly for the prayer services and when there were signs of bad weather. This is the first time that this district has held its reunion outside of a branch or used any camping tents. It has been "crawling" in the past but is now enabled "to stand alone." Some doubted the propriety of holding the reunion at this place but the developments so far have proven it a wise act. All the Saints are feeling well and the meetings have been excellent, especially the social services. A number of the Saints have already made their advent from different parts of the district. Bro. Wm. Damon, a young man of New Harmony, Indiana, who attended the two previous reunions, and is alone in this work in point of fleshly relationship, is also present.

A Birmingham pin machine makes 30,000,000 pins a day.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

To Agents:—There are several agents to whom books were delivered, some as long as three and five years ago, from whom I have never heard. Sales have been made long ago, but no report. Would like to hear from them. A single small amount long due from all would help me just now. This notice is not for any but long and careless delinquents. I need the money for books sold.

MARRIED.

SMITH—COCHRAN.—On Wednesday, September 4, 1895, at the residence of the bride's parents, Lamoni, Iowa, Bro. Elbert A. Smith and Sr. Clara A. Cochran; Pres. Joseph Smith officiating.

DIED.

RANDS.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, August 20, 1895, Mr. George Rands. Funeral services on August 22, conducted by Elder Heman C. Smith, assisted by Elders R. J. Anthony and E. Barrows. Remarks were also made by his neighbors, Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Jenkins. Mr. Rands was born in England, and at the time of his death was about seventy-five years old. He leaves a wife, one son, and five daughters. At one time Mr. Rands was a member of the "Utah Mormon" Church, but twenty-four years ago withdrew therefrom, since which time he has not affiliated with any church. The esteem in which he was held was attested by the large and respectable gathering in attendance.

MARSHALL.—At Luverne, Minnesota, September 3, 1895, Ray Oliver, son of Bro. Charles and Sr. Melissa Marshall, aged 1 year, 11 months, and 9 days. The little fellow was in the garden, and childlike picked some beans and put them in his mouth, and in some way got one in his windpipe, then proceeded to the house. Sister Marshall saw something was the matter and proceeded to relieve him, at the same time sending for the doctor, but before the doctor arrived he was beyond help. It was not until the post mortem was held that the cause of his death was known. The funeral was held at the home the afternoon of the 4th; interment in the Beaver Creek cemetery.

VAN DUSEN.—In St. Joseph, Missouri, at his home, August 29, 1895, Bro. C. H. Van Dusen, the cause of his death being an accidental fall in an elevator shaft, which had been left open. He was born in Fort Edward, New York, January 27, 1831. He was married to Harriet M. Barber in the State of Wisconsin on March 18, 1855. From this union has sprung a large and interesting family, nearly all of which survive the deceased, and have followed their paternal head in obedience to the gospel, he having been baptized by Elder Samuel Powers years ago. All who knew this brother were his friends, because of his moral worth and spiritual integrity. He loved the work and died in the Lord. His funeral, which occurred from the church on Sunday at two p. m., was largely attended, and now he sleeps in beautiful Mt. Mora, awaiting the resurrection morn. Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Terry, assisted by Elder Wm. Lewis.

TAYLOR.—At Coldwater, Michigan, September 18, 1895, Ilena May Taylor, aged 11 months and 3 days. She was a twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lew Taylor. Funeral services from residence; remarks by Elder S. W. L. Scott, to a large audience; text, Psalms 127: 3.

TEETERS.—Dale, son of Bro. and Sr. Harry Teeters, of Clear Lake, Indiana, died September 19, 1895, aged 1 year and 19 days. Remarks by Elder S. W. L. Scott to a large assembly of interested people.

Wide the shining gates are opened,
For the children are at home,
Back to us comes the sweet echo,
"Suffer" "little ones" "to come."
Put away the empty cradles,
Keep we only in our sight
That bright glimpse of heaven's dwelling;
Ilena and Dale are there to-night.

HARDER.—At Bay Port, Michigan, September 9, 1895, Sr. Mary E. Harder. She was born in the State of New York, January 6, 1835. Married to Abraham Harder April 7, 1859. Burial service conducted by Elder R. E. Grant.

ROBSON.—At Blakes Mills, Ohio, September 12, 1895, of paralysis, Sr. Margaret Hughes Robson. She was born April 6, 1834, at Carbondale, Pennsylvania, and was in the 62d year of her age. She was married to Bro. Robert Robson August 16, 1854. Ten children were born to them, all of whom with several grandchildren were present at the funeral in the Saints' church, on Saturday, September 14, Elder W. H. Garrett conducting the services. In early life the deceased united with the Welsh Independent Church, and later with the Baptist Church, in whose communion she remained until October, 1884, when she was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ at West Austintown, Ohio, by Bro. John McMillen. She was a faithful devoted wife and mother; an earnest, consistent Saint; a kind neighbor; and is greatly missed in the home, the church, and her circle of acquaintances.

DIGGLE.—Sister Sarah Diggle, born November 12, 1827, in the county of Lancaster, England; married to Samuel Diggle November 24, 1850; migrated to America with her husband in 1853; united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1863. She departed this life on the evening of September 15, 1895. She leaves behind her a husband, four sons, and three daughters, most of whom belong to the church. She was a faithful wife, a tender, loving, and noble mother, a kind neighbor, a true friend, a firm believer in the gospel of Christ, hence a true Latter Day Saint. If "a tree is known by its fruits" she was truly a plant of the great Father's planting; therefore we mourn "not as those who have no hope." Her funeral sermon was preached from Proverbs 14: 32; 10: 28, by Charles Derry, assisted by Elder James A. Donaldson, at Woodbine, Iowa. Her remains were taken to Unionburgh cemetery.

ROWLAND.—Ephraim Rowland, at his home in Bevier, Missouri, on Monday morning, September 20, 1895. Bro. Rowland was born in Dowlais, South Wales, July 20, 1824, and came to America in 1855. He united with the church in 1844, in Wales, and performed missionary labor under supervision of Capt. Dan Jones as early as 1847. He accepted the work of the Reorganization of the church at an early day and in his life was zealous for good works. He leaves a widow and family of six—five sons and one daughter, who greatly mourn his departure. Funeral services conducted by Elder E. L. Kelley, assisted by Rev. Adams, pastor of the Congregational church of Bevier.

SMITH.—At Mound City, Missouri, September 22, 1895, Sr. Lucinda W. Smith, wife of Bro. Lewis C. Smith. She was born in Dyer County, Tennessee, September 15, 1843. Came with her parents to Nauvoo, Illinois, when a babe. At the time of the dispersion of the Saints from the beloved city they came to Holt County, Missouri, where she has remained ever since. She was married to Bro. Lewis C. Smith August 17, 1871. Baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ by William A. Litz, May 2, 1875. She was a firm believer in the gospel and bore a faithful testimony to its truthfulness. A large assembly of friends and relatives attended the funeral services, which were held at the pleasant home of the departed one, August 23, and gave marked attention while Brother E. B. Morgan discoursed from 1 Corinthians 15: 21, 22. One of Mound City church choirs came and did the singing, which was beautiful and impressive. Sr. Smith was the daughter of Bro. R. K. Ross, Sr., of Ross Grove, Missouri, who, though eighty-six years of age, attended the funeral. A husband and nephew, with a host of relatives and friends, mourn their loss.

GISH.—At her home in Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, September 26, 1895, Sr. Ella Gish, wife of M. A. Gish, aged 39 years, 11 months, and 19 days. Sr. Gish, formerly Sr. Ella Green, was married March 5, 1878, to M. A. Gish, who, with two children, mother, brothers, sisters, and many friends, mourn their loss. Sr. Gish was a firm believer in the gospel, a faithful Sunday school worker, a noble, patient, and loving wife, mother, and friend. She will be sadly missed by all, and more especially in the branch where she resided. She was one of God's noble and faithful daughters in Israel, and we feel to mourn her loss, but not as those who have no hope. She was laid to rest in the Latter Day Saints' cemetery at Wheeler's Grove, September 27. The funeral services were held in the Saints' church at that place, conducted by Elder D. Hougas.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

PATTIE: OR LEAVES FROM A LIFE, WITH INTRODUCTION BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

A book in which is traced the intimate connection between the history of Protestantism and the founding of the Government of the United States with the event of the restored Gospel; interwoven with which is a tender story from a real life, telling of the efforts of one to find the Kingdom of God, its object being to trace God in modern history, and to show that his dealings with men are as clearly discernible now as in ancient times.

A book for Sunday school libraries and the home.

BRADEN-KELLEY DEBATE.

Propositions:—(1) Is the Book of Mormon of Divine origin, and are its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people? (2) Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, the Church of Christ, and identical in faith, organization, ordinances, worship, and practice, with the Church of Christ, as it was left perfected by the Apostles of Christ? (3) Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in fact, the Church of God, and accepted with him?

IRON IN OUR FOOD.

THE value of iron as a tonic has remained unquestioned until recently, owing to its undoubted presence in healthy blood, and perhaps to a survival of the old medieval notion that since it is the strongest of metals it should strengthen the body. On a similar principle, gold, the most valuable of metals, was freely administered, where the patient could pay for it, and it was doubtless with some vague notion of the kind, and not merely out of bravado, that Cleopatra dissolved and quaffed her pearl. But it seems probable that a good deal of the iron that has been taken has passed out of the body unchanged. We must have iron, it is true, but we get it commonly through food-stuffs in which the necessary chemical compounds have already been formed in the process of growth. These ideas, born of recent observation and experiment, are set forth by Prof. E. Bunge, of Basle, Switzerland, in a paper that forms the subject of an interesting article in Modern Medicine (June), from which we quote the following extracts:—

"The proportion of iron entering into the composition of the body has been greatly overestimated. The most recent researches show that the body of an adult man contains not more than 2.5 grams (38.5 grains) of iron, the greater part of which is found in the blood as hemoglobin. . .

"The food does not ordinarily contain hemoglobin, and it is not likely that hemoglobin can be assimilated by the body, even when it is present in the food. Professor Bunge's opinion is that hemoglobin is formed within the body only from the organic ferruginous combinations of food. The yolk of eggs and also may other food substances contain the hematogenic compound, nucleo-albumin, which is used in the development of hemoglobin in the body. This is proved by experiments made by Socin, in which he kept mice in perfect health by feeding them on nucleo-albumin.

"The following table, prepared by Professor Bunge, shows the amount of iron found in various food substances:—

Strawberries.....	.138
Lentils.....	.147
Apples.....	.205
Spinach.....	.556

"It is interesting to note, in the above table, the large proportion of iron contained in certain vegetable substances, particularly in lentils, apples, and spinach. This perhaps explains the craving which invalids sometimes have for spinach and similar substances. It is interesting to note that a fruit, as the apple, contains nearly as large a percentage of iron as beef. One can easily eat a much larger quantity of apples than beef, and this fact immediately suggests that apples should be much more freely used than heretofore in anæmia.

"A remarkable and rather surprising fact is the small quantity of iron contained in milk. It has recently been conceded that milk constitutes a perfect food. Observations made by other German physiologists have shown, however, that milk is deficient in carbonaceous elements, containing a larger proportion than is best for the body, of the proteid or albuminous constituents. Professor Bunge now shows us that milk is not the best food for blood-building purposes, since it is so deficient in iron. It is very interesting also to observe that strawberries contain more iron than beans, and nearly four times as much as milk. This will add still more to the great popularity of this delicious fruit. . . .

"Wheat is the richest of all the grains, containing, in 1,540 grains, .15 grains of iron, or exactly one hundredth part of one per cent., more than twice as much as is contained in milk; hence the advantage of adding wheat preparations to cow's milk as a food for infants with teeth.

"Bunge regards the various ferruginous preparations commonly used in medicine as more or less irritating, and suggests that, even if it were proved that they are absorbed (which he does not admit), it would by no means follow that they are also assimilated and utilized by the body in the formation of hemoglobin."—

IN THE SICK-ROOM.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE WOMAN WHO WISHES TO BE VALUABLE.

"When pain and sickness rend the brow" the woman who has not had some slight training in the rudimentary principles of nursing will prove a very inefficient ministering angel. She may wear noisy shoes; she may have the curtain up so high that the light shines into her patient's eyes; she may not draw the sheet smooth and tight, and discomfort will be the result. If she follows these rules, however, she will be more or less of a success.

The room, says the New York World, should be kept exquisitely neat. Especially should all soiled garments and utensils be removed, the towels and napkins be fresh, and the food offered arranged to please the eye as well as the palate. Never let curtains, rugs, and table covers hang askew, or the invalid will have to straighten them mentally over and over again, one of the most distracting processes of an illness. To keep a patient from watching every line in the wall paper or wearying the mind with observations of all the defects in the furniture bring in fresh bouquets of flowers or some other pleasing object on which the eye will love to linger. The bed should be kept orderly. Straighten the covers and smooth the pillow quietly whenever they get disorderly, and in making the bed at the regular intervals do it thoroughly and with care. If it is not possible to change the bed linen daily, have two sets and alternate their use, so that each set may be well aired before using again.

Do not question invalids when you can avoid it, and let the work of the room be done quietly and unostentatiously, so as not to jar or rack the patient's sharpened nerves.

Carry the physician's orders out carefully and without criticism. Say nothing about the medicine until you have prepared it neatly, and afterwards put cups, spoons, and towels out of sight.

In giving baths—a very necessary care—be gentle—but so firm of touch that the patient will understand that you are thoroughly self-possessed and need feel no concern. Nothing is so fatal as an invalid's lack of confidence in your physical strength.

If you know what healthful dishes will please your patient, prepare them promptly without consulting the sick and observe the utmost daintiness in detail. Never season an invalid's food highly, and avoid melted butter as much as possible, using cream on toast and roasted potatoes. It is hard for a sick person to wait long for a meal when hungry, therefore never let her do so. When sitting with the sick don't rattle a newspaper or creak your chair; speak gently and distinctly, but don't talk too much. Never discuss diseases.

Wear soft garments and light shoes, so as to avoid a nerve-searching rustle or a heavy, jarring step. A nurse's garments should be changed often and should be neat and fresh. A crooked collar or dropping pin is tantalizing to sick nerves.

Do your best to keep long-faced visitors away, and, in fact, visitors of every kind; strangers often serve to excite a sick person. Tolerate no whispering in the room or just outside the door. When permissible, have the room cool, quiet, and dark at night, and look out for ventilation and let in all the fresh air you can without injury to the occupant of the bed.

FREEDOM OF THEOLOGICAL TEACHING.

IN the current number of the New World the Rev. Dr. J. H. Ecob makes a forcible plea for a theological university which shall be free from denominational control.

“What shall we say to the Baptist deacon and the Presbyterian elder who have wickedly hoarded their money in life, and when dying would perpetuate their favorite ism? We must resolutely and righteously say, ‘Thy money perish with thee.’ Shall we accept the money with the conditions and then, when the donor and his ism ‘lie mouldering in the grave,’ call the lawyers to divorce the money from his ism that we may be free to apply it to our own? Let the seminary charters and their court records answer. We have quite as much ground for questioning the denominational seminary's financial right of being as its doctrinal. In all cases its creed cannot endure the test of history, and, alas, in too many cases, its money foundations cannot bear the weight of the Ten Commandments. Has not the time past sufficed for working our denominational will? Is not the last product of that order, seminary control, a result so childish and perverse as to suggest that the system has reached the stage of senile debility? The prophetic demand of the hour is for no more schools to perpetuate the idiosyncrasies of one denomination, but for a theological university that shall enlarge and enrich the elemental life of all denominations.”—Review of Reviews.

HAPPINESS OF LIFE ON THE FARM.

A PROSPEROUS and intelligent farmer sat in this office a short time ago discussing the events of the last year; the financial panic, the unexampled business depression, the industrial unrest, and the progress of a rebellion against the government which if not arrested, would have ended in civil war. “Well,” he said as he arose to go, “I am going back to my farm and let the old world go its own gait, I am happy there. Nothing disturbs me. In the worst year that can come I will have plenty to support my family. I will have my books and papers and know what is going on outside, but I am safe. Panics and trade revulsions do not affect me at all, and even a revolution would hardly disturb me in my quiet nook.” Now, bright people have been cudgeling their brains to make out a picture of the future Utopia. But is there anything, even in the dreams of visionaries, that is much nearer to a condition of material happiness than this? Hardship and struggle are there and everywhere. Life without struggle would be worthless. But there also is independence; and, with industry and frugality, absolute assurance against future distress. It would be an untold blessing if armies of the unemployed and of the unfortunate could be transplanted to the farm. In Minnesota alone there are opportunities enough for millions.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

WHETHER REPUBLICAN OR DEMOCRAT

YOU surely want to keep fully abreast of the times. You not only want to know how the situation is in Utah for Heber M. Wells and John T. Caine, but you want to know what Reed, or McKinley, or Cleveland, and Whitney may be doing in the way of rustling for the Presidential chair. The only way to get such information, local and foreign, is from a newspaper—a real, live, metropolitan, up-to-date newspaper, and the Salt Lake Tribune is the only one in the Territory. People who differ in politics with The Tribune admit that it has no competitor in the Western country. One dollar a month for the daily, every day in the month, and but seventy-five cents for three months for the great Semi-Weekly.

LAYING ON HANDS FOR ORDINATION.

ONE of the earliest indications we have of the setting apart of persons to act in a high and sacred calling is that of the setting apart of Aaron to assist the lawgiver, Moses, as a priest. This was done at the commandment of God; (see Ex. 29: 7, and Lev. 8: 12.) And while it is not fully stated that in consecrating Aaron and his sons for the priest's office, it is stated that he anointed them with oil and set them apart to minister in the office. It is also stated in Numbers 27: 18, 21, that God gave a command to Moses concerning Joshua similar in character to the one in Aaron's case, but distinctly charging him to lay hands upon him. In verse twenty-three of this same chapter it is related that Moses "laid his hands upon" Joshua, and gave him a charge, "as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses."

There is no reason to suppose that the procedure in the one case was different to that of the other; hence the inference is strong that Aaron was set apart by the laying on of hands, as Joshua was; and it was done in the presence of the people. This is confirmed by the subsequent mention in Deuteronomy 34: 9, where it is stated that "Joshua, the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him."

Two things seem to have been secured to Joshua, as the circumstance is related here; one, the recognition of the call of God requiring the services of Joshua, and the public setting of him apart and investing him with the right to act in the office; the other, the securing to him the "spirit of wisdom," to qualify him to fulfill the duties of the calling to the acceptance of the Lord and the benefit of the people to whom he was called to minister. Both of these objects were secured by the laying on of the hands of Moses.

It is not difficult to realize how the fact that God had called Aaron and his sons, and Joshua and his sons, was made to appear plainly and tangibly before the people, in the public act performed by Moses in laying his hands upon them; it was a positive installation into the office and calling designated. The act witnessed unto the people that the right of God to choose and name his ministers was acknowledged and honored, and was a token to Deity of human acquiescence in his expressed will, manifested in manner and form as directed. All that was open to the sight and comprehension of those who witnessed the rite. They could understand how that those men thus set apart were recognized as representatives of the heavenly courts to minister to men, and were chosen because of fitness for the service. They could see and respect the manifestation of God's goodness in choosing them; and could also comprehend how that they should be known and respected in their calling and the service of their office.

It was not so easily seen, possibly not comprehended by the multitude, it may be not by Moses himself, how the act of laying on of hands did, or could exert any mysterious power by which any better wisdom than the men had by nature was conferred; but yet the record states that Joshua "was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him." The record goes further than this and shows that Joshua in his dealings with the people was a wise and valued leader.

In the calling of the disciples whom Jesus called "apostles," we have another instance of the calling, choosing, ordaining, and setting apart; and while we may not read that at such a time and in such a place, Jesus laid his hands on these men and set them apart to be ministers, we do read that he said to them, after his resurrection and before his ascension, as he "breathed upon them," "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." He had before this called and ordained them, and had promised them that the endowment of the Spirit should be given them; and at the time he "breathed" on them, he was possessed of all power both on earth and in heaven; all the powers of the unseen world had been made subject to him; and in the exercise of that power he had endowed his apostles by the giving them spiritual power to fit them for their mission, after his departure from them.

There is something most peculiar and fitting in the thought that the "spirit of wisdom" should have followed the laying on of hands in the cases of Aaron and Joshua; and it is equally profitable to believe that in the calling and ordaining of the apostles the same result should have been realized. The apostles must have known that this rite was recognized by Jesus and used by him; for in the 6th of Acts, the seven men chosen to administer in temporal affairs were set before the apostles, in the presence of the multitude of the disciples, and the apostles then laid their hands on them to the purpose that they might be made competent to the duties of their office by the "spirit of wisdom." The same method of procedure was observed still later when the Holy Ghost pointed out Paul and Barnabas to be chosen to the apostle's office. Those who held the right "laid their hands on them." Both Barnabas and Saul received the "spirit of wisdom," and were efficient in their service.

All this is written that we may comprehend, if we will, that by this sacred rite of laying on of hands the calling of men to officiate for and represent Jesus, the Christ is recognized; and through it certain sacred influences are put in active operation to so develop the latent, or dormant faculties of the one called and ordained, or to infuse a new element, by which the several duties to be performed by him in the office he may be called to shall be properly and wisely attended to.

It is not wise to haggle about it, to urge the simplicity of the means employed to bring about so beneficent result; it is sufficient if God has so ordained it. He holds the control of all forces, and can and will put the "spirit of wisdom" upon those whom he calls, and do it in the way designed and appointed by himself.

In direct and meritorious keeping with the principle cited above is the language of the command to the church, found in section seventeen, paragraph twelve, of Doctrine and Covenants:—

Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him.

It is remarkable how strikingly coincident and harmonious the enactments and directions of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants are with the teachings of the New Testament and the history of the dealings of God regarding his work among men. It is not only remarkable, but is one of the strong evidences of the divinity of this latter day dispensation, which our intelligence and reason assure us we cannot set aside and be justified. In this we appeal "to the law and to the testimony," and our work agreeing therewith, shows that there is "light" in it.

INDUSTRY IN RELIGION.

MR. G. F. LEWIS, editor of Zion's Day Star, a Salvation Army publication issued at Buffalo, New York, writing us for church publications, says:—

There is now a considerable and growing number willing to do justice and know the truth about this industrious sect.

Truth ought to be and is attractive—strongly so. There is that about the latter-day work which the more one reads the more he wishes to know about it; and, the more thorough the investigation made, the more apparent is the evidence of its divine origin. When individuals can be induced to examine the evidences upon which claim is made for a divine origin of the work, there need be little difficulty in satisfying the mind of the investigator that the work is what it claims to be. It is only when love of worldliness or worldly popularity stands in the way, when bigotry beclouds the mind, or an insufficient desire for light and truth is the fault that the investigator can turn away from the strong evidences that demonstrate the work to be of God.

It is not strange that the enemy of righteousness began his opposition to the work in slander and that he has continued that policy to turn the people from an investigation by the old story that no good could come from Nazareth. Our people have had to be industrious to vindicate the truth, to justify their acceptance of it, and to bring it to others. We trust that the same influences that have led them "unto the acknowledgment of the truth" shall lead others to see that what has prevailed against such a concentration of opposition has a higher than human origin. That it has divine origin is evidenced by the true principles it advocates, the evils it has steadfastly opposed, and the evil forces that have resisted it.

Industriousness in religion is a good thing; is strictly necessary there as in other lines of thought and life. It is scarcely conceivable that any religion has much force to it that does not awaken its devotees to personal, active sympathy in its progress and with its aims and movements. Certainly a system representing a divine order of government would be of such a character as to awaken people to look to things eternal as well as to things of time; to set the affections upon things that will endure when earthly uncertainties shall fail; or, better stated, a divine system ought to reveal the true harmony between the present earthly state and the future life. With the conviction that such harmony exists, and the inner spiritual-intellectual conception of that harmony, men and women are enabled to receive in church association that information and strength that rightly directs their powers, energizes the mental and moral nature, and brings them body, soul, and spirit into a condition of harmony with law, the law by which they are preserved, sanctified, governed, redeemed.

To these common sense propositions every faithful Latter Day Saint is committed; with them he has pledged an industrious fellowship; to them he bends his energies to "push the work."

The faith we follow and advocate contains a balm for every wound that afflicts humanity. No evil appears in the social system of the world but what can be corrected by application of the principles of the law of the Spirit of life. The Author of the gospel has devised a system applicable to the constitution and nature of man, and in its application moral evils are suppressed, eliminated; selfishness overcome, eradicated; spiritual darkness and uncertainty removed, and men and women made free in the glorious liberty of the children of God.

It is not strange that God's faithful people have been "industrious" in their religion, that some at least have manifested intense, unwavering devotion to the truth; that they have lived for it and died in it. As one ascends, the scene below him broadens, widens, extends. He sees not only the objects immediately about him, but others connected with and extending beyond appear, not seen before. So in spiritual, in heavenly things; when one obtains the testimony of the Spirit of truth that God lives, and receives the abiding, indwelling evidence, the consciousness of God's Fatherly interest in humanity, his heart is moved to higher emotions than mere love of the narrow and imperfect conditions of mortal life. He begins to feel the workings of the divine force that enlightens his mind to comprehend the higher and broader planes of life-action and the things which God has prepared for them that love him. Human hearts as merely human do not conceive the higher, the diviner realities that lie beyond the narrowed vision of the child of this world. They are obscured from the vision of the vain, the frivolous, the worldling—the lover of pleasure more than of God. As the image of the earthly, the spirit of the worldly, is inborn and ingrown by the absorbing processes of a life devoted to merely worldly things, so must there be a death process undergone and individuals be recreated, remade, refashioned, and lifted to those spiritual elevations where the view is broadened and the natural connections and relationships between this world and the unseen are revealed and harmonized, if a man is to be redeemed.

The influences of the gospel that have made God's people industrious in their faith are therefore not unnatural, not strange, but purely normal and rational. There is no mere idealism or mysticism in the principle of spirituality. The unseen world is revealed in its strength and solidity by the revelations of the Divine Will that require strong, genuine adhesion to moral principle and everything that enters into solidity and soundness of character and mind. In the divine system of government the principles of faith, repentance, and baptism require a common and universal conformity to a common and universal standard; and all men to be one, to be equal in obedience to morality, probity, righteousness, — the principles that make society permanent and by which alone its permanency is secured and guaranteed. Faith in God is faith in these principles, belief in them, strong conviction of their rightness, their trueness, their absoluteness. That faith is manifested by honoring them, by standing by them under all circumstances, by refusal to violate them for any consideration of whatever character, for place, for worldly position and power, or for monetary considerations. A man evidences his love for God, for the gospel, for the people of God, and for the world, by devotion to principle; otherwise, he does not. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me," is the plain, unmistakable language of Jesus in which he laid down the rule by which a profession of faith was to be tested.

To return to a more direct consideration of the thought that as one's spiritual vision is broadened this thought, this principle becomes apparent; namely, that God in blessing an individual must by the bestowment of his Spirit lead the individual, influence the man, to see his own imperfections and the imperfect and evil conditions of the world about him; in other words, must show him his own faults and the faulty, disorderly condition of things in this world. It is not reasonably consistent with God's attributes that he could be content that men and women occupy lower spheres than they might, than they should; especially so when those lower spheres or conditions entail so much of suffering, darkness, and innumerable evils. For it is apparent from an intelligent glance at the conditions of human society and a study of the nature and capacity of the human mind that the world is away below what it ought to be, what it might be. Every evil is traceable to some violation of physical, moral, spiritual, or other law; while every good is clearly traceable to obedience to good. As pain is Nature's protest and warning against the causes that produce it, so in divers ways Nature teaches that there is a right way and that in that right way is comfort, health, and content. In all phases of life, right and wrong exist in contrast. Human experience teaches us the existence of the right, above, around, beneath, and through all things. Belief in this right is belief in consistency, in common sense. "Faith in God" is the expression of belief in an intelligent supervision of Nature; a beneficent, controlling force that comprehends and responds to the necessities and eternal fitness of things; hence faith in God is the basis, the groundwork of rational life here and hereafter; and that prescribed, required in a life of faith is productive of man's highest and greatest good.

It is reasonably deducible then that God in the work of saving men from lower conditions must meet them just where he finds them and there begin the work of education, of correction, of change; that his demands upon them must be just and true and altogether right. There are many processes by which this work of change is carried on, each suitable to the character and condition, to the situations that have surrounded and influenced the man or woman, as each differs in nature, in makeup from the other, but in which processes there is a harmony, and in the final result no discordance; the unity, oneness, sought to be established between God and man being expressed by the oneness of the Father and the Son. Against the influences of evil these powers are arrayed; for their correction and banishment the Creator and Redeemer pledges his power and grace. He only awaits the entire willingness and faithful coöperation of the race to complete the work, to remove evil and deliver those who all their lives have been subject to it.

One man is converted to acceptance of the gospel under one condition, another under another, and each is started upon the career of discipleship to "overcome," that he may be saved "from his sins." It may be that covetousness is his weakness and that love for this world's goods has been the cause of his strivings. If he has been absorbed in money making, the probabilities are that he has developed a passion for it, unless during his financial career he has also cultivated an interest in others besides himself. The Spirit of the gospel will appeal to him, whatever his condition, and with a view to broaden and liberate him from narrowness and selfishness. If he has been energetic and economical, he will be commended for it; for true spirituality comprehends the complete development of the man—the symmetrical cultivation and right adjustment of all his powers. It cannot leave him in a onesided, uneven condition; unless indeed he refuses to heed its promptings. It must continue its work unceasingly, untiringly, until the work is done and the man emancipated. If he heeds its promptings, all well and good; for he is lifted up and prepared for eternal conditions by observing the law governing such conditions. The possession of a few thousand dollars may prove a benefit or a damage according to the conditions under which the possession is held. If it is the all-in-all to man or woman, the heart is set upon it and the possession is not sanctified as the gift of God. If made a source of vain, worldly enjoyment, then this saying is fulfilled in the possessor:—

They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some have coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.—Paul.

Earthly means, rightly used, is an advantage and a force for good. He who possessing them does not make them the absorbing theme of his life, but controls and sanctifies the use of them, manifests capacity, wisdom, soundness of character. It is the shallow, vain mind that becomes uplifted because possessed of a little of this world's good above others. It is the foolish, the untrue father or mother that encourages idleness or vanity in children by pampering to foolish tastes and encouraging extravagance. Children brought up under such conditions are a reflection upon their parents, are unhappy themselves, and a burden upon society. Here, in these things, is where the man or woman may be put to the test. God's love is great, but because of it the demands of his law are inexorable. Men and women must adjust themselves to the principles designed to harmonize the creations of God and by which the curse shall be taken from the earth, or their sins be visited upon themselves, and upon their children unto the third or fourth generation in an idle, listless, vicious, or bad-example progeny, unless such repent and do works meet for repentance.

Conversion to God means both profession and character. It means more than reputation too; it means the genuine gold of manly and womanly integrity and consistency that shall shine out in contrast to the spurious shams that burden the world with folly, vanity, and milk-and-water manhood and womanhood.

Inordinate love of the dollar is too little a thing for man or woman, and in the professed child of God becomes petty and little. So too of vanity; of love of social position as such; of little vanities and hypocrisies that pass with so many as current social coin, but which would be rejected in the higher realms as unworthy, as counterfeit, which they are.

The rebukes of both worldly selfishness and of thriftlessness and idleness are equally strong in the word of God. The happy medium, that of using this world and not abusing it, is the straight line in the word of God. They who are idle or absorbed in worldly gain are alike rebuked and admonished to be both industrious and temperate.

True happiness is not based upon the possession of one or two things alone; the promise to the faithful is that "all things are theirs;" "they shall inherit all things." Intelligence, love, unselfishness, industry, economy, are all actual quantities. It is not only the things called "material," such as rocks, hills, houses, lands, dollars, and stock that are real,

The things that are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.—2 Cor 4:18.

Judiciousness, spirituality, breadth of mind, love of humanity, diligence, etc., are all definite, substantial quantities and to be esteemed and sought for. They remain when material things are dropped from the grasp of mortal man. Indeed, they are essential to the true possession and use of the temporal or earthly substances—the "material," so-called. By those higher principles man is never injured; by lacking them he does injury to himself, to his children, and to society by misuse of temporal riches and misdirection of his own powers.

Every man and every woman needs God in his life; needs him daily, hourly, constantly, in sleeping or in waking hours; otherwise his life is imperfect, discordant, if not idle or wrong. They who seek for God and do those things that result in the general good of fellow townsmen, neighbors, and in whom God's law is honored;—they who seek the welfare of the whole, being influenced by the same Spirit that causes the Divine One to work now and ever for the good of all,—they are religious, they are just and true, and by their fruits are seen and known.

Either poverty or riches may be a reproach to anyone. If poverty results from idleness, or riches from improper means of acquiring, then reproach attaches. Industry, and good management, and spirituality, all go together. A man possessed of riches without spirituality is in danger to himself. If, however, he observes the law that honors the Giver of earthly possessions by a return of the portion required, and its consecration to the building up of the government of God for the common welfare and salvation of man, then the one giving is broadened, his sympathies are extended, and his whole nature is exalted as God blesses and more fully receives him into communion.

So of the observance of every law. The divine nature is that which God would develop within his children, that they may illustrate to the world his purposes, may express the true order of things and the possibilities of his grace.

Largeness of life, nobleness of nature, intelligence of mind, amiableness of disposition, necessarily attach to and form part of the Christlike character. However, they are not attained by the narrow mind, the undisciplined heart and brain, the unsound, the thoughtless person. The tendency to harsh, or foolish, or unjust criticism must be repressed. Something higher than neighborhood gossip and mere criticism must be cultivated, followed, thought of, conceived in the mind, and held there. The average causes of discord among people are too small for true hearts and minds. Right here individuals must place themselves under discipline if they would rise in the scale of being. What one thinks about and dwells upon and lives by he becomes, he absorbs, he assimilates. The ordinary causes of dispute that separate persons are, as a rule, unworthy of notice. Most of them should be passed by in sincere regret that anyone holding them should do so, and in hope that they may rise to higher things.

It is, we believe, to the "industrious" concentration of their energies and powers in behalf of true principles that our people have made profession of faith. It means, if it means anything at all, that every elder, priest, teacher, deacon, and member—man or woman—has pledged himself to the manifestation of the truth in this broad sense—not in pulpit nor in church alone, but everywhere; at home, at church, at work, at all times, and in all places.

It is illogical, inconsistent with the character of the work that earthly considerations should so absorb the mind as to cause the follower of Christ to forget the spirit of his calling, to be unchristlike. The law of the Lord is to be in his heart, to be his theme, his absorbing theme, his delight; the Spirit of the Lord to be the current that shall feed and inspire his mind.

ROYAL BLOOD IN EUROPE DEGENERATING.

THE Hapsburg blood has run out and if Archduke Franz, the Austrian Emperor's nephew and heir, proves to have dangerously weak lungs, as now reported, there is no near kinsman equal to the burden of the throne. The Italian heir is an undersized man who will never marry. The Russian heir is dying of consumption. The Hohenzollern's blood is tainted, as the Emperor's infirmities show. The Hapsburgs have no sound heir. The boy Spanish King is the only life between the cranks and libertines of the Spanish Bourbons, who stand next in male succession, though this crown descended this century in the female line. Half the French Orleans Bourbons who sat at the royal table at the recent marriage used speaking trumpets. Of such is the royal caste of Europe.—Philadelphia Press

Centuries of luxurious life and dissipation have told on the vitality of royalty. The vitiated condition of royal blood gives additional evidence that the hold of kings upon the people is waning. The monarchical systems of the world evidently have but few years to run. The overthrow of one or two more would doubtless so strengthen the convictions and hands of the people in various nations who hold to democratic ideas of government that the overthrow of the remaining remnants would doubtless be consummated at an early day. Kings are out of date and destined to step down and out, and the people to rule. Self-government is the destined end and aim of the masses; the wrong is to fail, the right to prevail, and all men to be free and equal. The establishment of popular government in America and the better conditions of the people under it have been so demonstrated to the civilized world that men the world over are agitating the rights of man to enjoy a government of the people and for the people;—not of the few, but of the many.

DISCUSSIONS, when properly conducted, are often very profitable to the cause, resulting in widespread influence for good and in giving prestige to the faith of the church; also in a greater respect being shown its ministry and membership. We are pleased to note multiplying evidences that such have been the results of the late discussion at El Dorado Springs, Missouri, in which Bro. I. N. White stood in defense of the faith. This is evidenced by a late article published in the El Dorado Sun, of September 27, in which the Southwestern Missouri reunion is written up in terms of high commendation, both of the faith of the church and its ministry and membership. The brethren in that portion of the field as also the Saints in general have reason to thank God for grace and favor realized according to the promises of early days. A good work has been done and further and greater good remains yet to be accomplished by the united efforts of our people in that region. We append one of two paragraphs of the article mentioned.

Elder White is the gentleman who so ably defended his church in the debate with Elder Clark Braden at this place last winter. He is a very pleasant and agreeable gentleman, and is acknowledged to be one of the best posted members of the Latter Day Saints' Church. He is sincere in his belief, and is ready and willing to defend the teachings of his church against the world.

The Reorganized Church, which has been proven the original church by the courts of the land, accepted Joseph Smith, Jr., son of the original prophet, as the leader of their organization, and as a result their number has increased and their church has prospered. The Reorganized Church discountenance polygamy and deny the allegation that Joseph Smith ever gave a revelation concerning the same.

Those of the Reorganized brethren whom the Sun man has had the pleasure of meeting are all intelligent, worthy, and law-abiding citizens—thrifty and industrious, and are earnest workers for the cause of humanity. They practice the religion that they believe to be the purest and best in the sight of God, a privilege that is accorded to all men in this land of freedom; and surely no man has cause to complain.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. C. SMITH, Kalkaskia, Michigan, September 27:—

I baptized two more at Kingsley, a man and his wife, on the 20th. They had both belonged to other churches. There are some quite interested here. Four have been baptized by Bro. John Hanson; others will obey.

Of the debate between Bro. O. B. Thomas and Elder Glendenning, Christian Adventist, at Thornburg, Iowa, Bro. S. C. Donaldson wrote the 30th ult., as follows:—

The debate between Bro. O. B. Thomas and Elder Glendenning is progressing finely in favor of the truth. Bro. Thomas will prove victorious, without a doubt.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WORD reaches us that the Court of Appeals has reversed the decision of the United States Circuit Court in the Temple Lot Suit, the findings being adverse to the Reorganized Church. The Opinion of the Court has not yet been received. A further statement will be given the HERALD readers later on.

Brn. A. H. Smith, E. L. Kelley, A. S. Cochran, and J. W. Wight have reached home from the Logan reunion; the latter called to return because of sickness in his family.

Bro. J. R. Lambert arrived home during the week of the 30th ult. from an extended missionary tour in Illinois and Iowa, including attendance at the Logan reunion, having been actively engaged in tent work and other pulpit service in the mission fields since about the close of General Conference.

Bro. E. A. Blakeslee and Sr. J. H. Royce, of the Galien, Michigan, branch are visiting at Lamoni, enroute home from the Logan reunion. Sr. Royce has been appointed to edit a Sunday school department of the HERALD and will enter upon that feature of work at an early day. We bespeak for her the hearty support of every faithful Sunday school worker. This arm of the service is very important and a department devoted to its interests will prove helpful as a medium of exchange of ideas, methods, experiences, etc.

President Joseph Smith returned home from Logan, Woodbine, and other Iowa points on the 4th inst. Bro. Frank Criley arrived from Kansas City and Independence the same date.

Bro. and Sr. Bradbury Robinson, of Eureka, California, are at Lamoni, visiting relatives and friends.

Bro. W. W. Blair writing from Sacramento, California, September 30, that he hoped to reach Genoa, Nevada, October 5 enroute to Fairview, Nevada, conference. He had held five services at Sacramento, and would hold three more. They had a Pentecost, Sunday, September 29 at social meeting. Outlook was good.

We thank brethren for various newspapers sent us. We have used such items as we found to be of interest to our readers. Others, unmarked we have been unable to make use of. It will save us time if brethren will kindly mark items they desire to see noted.

At Tashkend in Russian Turkestan, English has been substituted for German as an obligatory study in the high school.

Nasrulla Khan, son of the Ameer of Afghanistan, who recently recited a Mohammedan prayer at St. Peter's tomb, is trotting about Europe with seven thousand pounds of baggage. He is accompanied by a brass bed, cooking utensils, and other paraphernalia of royalty far from home. The continent joins with England in dubbing Nasrulla a nuisance.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Never a day is given but it tones the after years,
And it carries up to heaven its sunshine or its tears."

"THE CHILD AND ITS RIGHTS."

IN the Herald of September 18, there is an article in the Mothers' Home Column on the above subject, which was taken from the Arena, and which contains some statements that have, as "Frances" said, given food for thought; and I having had some thoughts in my mind since reading it, take the liberty of writing a few of them, hoping they will do good, and knowing that I ease my own conscience by so doing.

I believe it is with child training as it is with Christian life; we must grow in it. We do not expect when we first put on Christ to become perfect immediately, or why did Paul exhort us to go on unto perfection? In order to train a child rightly we need training ourselves, and yet I have heard people say they would not punish a child for doing what the child had seen the parent do, and then keep allowing themselves the liberty of doing as they please, and weakly permitting their child to copy their way, which they could plainly see (in the child) was wrong. Anyone not willing enough to try to correct what may need correction in himself is not capable of training a child rightly.

The parent who is training himself, who is restraining the undesirable qualities of his nature or disposition, and cultivating the better ones, even though they come short of what he desires, is best fitted to have charge of a child. Would that only such were permitted to, we would not need to talk of the rights of children!

One statement I noticed was this: "You have invited an immortal to come into your temporary keeping," and then goes on instructing how that trust should be fulfilled. But what struck me forcibly was this: "How many are invited? They should be, but are they?"

I have often heard Christian mothers speak plainly on this subject and I know that they did not invite the children given them, but they came because of the lack of training in themselves. But when even so, parents are to be held accountable for the child, and the obligations are the same, only harder for such parents.

A child has a right to be taught to work, and it is for the everlasting benefit of the child. There is an old rhyme familiar to all, that Satan finds mischief for idle hands, and it is so true that I would rather risk hurting my child with work than idleness.

The people who were God's chosen people were careful to observe this right of their children, for they were early taught to work. It will not hurt children to know what it is to help maintain themselves, to pay for their clothing, schooling, etc. It will help to make them independent and self-reliant.

A child has a "right" to punishment, chastisement, correction, just as you please to term it.

The expression in this article that "a thousand times more children have been spoiled by the rod than have ever been ruined by the lack of it," is, in my opinion extravagant and decidedly foolish, and anyway it is only an assertion without proof. Some people have taken this idea of training children, just as they do the fashion, they take it for a "fad" and go on talking until they really think they are wiser than Solomon! This writer takes the position that most fathers and mothers punish because they are angry or have personal spite towards their child, and at the risk of some saying I advocate this idea, I say if you whip a child, it should be when deserved, not in passion, but with judgment, explaining to the child the reason why, and what you expect in the future.

God himself chasteneth whom he loveth and why should it be thought that parents have personal spite towards their child when they chastize him for wrong-doing?

There are extremes where some may become actually brutal, but we are considering our readers are those who try to govern themselves.

The other extreme is just as foolish as can be, for, if the rod and reproof are spared, wisdom is lacking and the child is spoiled.

Your sister,

ELLA J. GREEN.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE.

Sometimes I am tempted to murmur

That life is flitting away,
With only a round of trifles
Filling each busy day—
Dusting nooks and corners,
Making the house look fair,
And patiently taking on me
The burden of woman's care.

Comforting childish sorrows,
And charming the childish heart
With the simple song and story
Told with a mother's art;
Setting the dear home table,
And clearing the meal away,
And going on little errands
In the twilight of the day.

One day is just like another!
Sewing and piecing well
Little jackets and trousers,
So neatly that none can tell
Where are the seams and joinings—
Ah! the seamy side of life
Is kept out of sight by the magic
Of many a mother and wife!

And oft when I'm ready to murmur
That time is flitting away
With the self-same round of duties
Filling each busy day,—
It comes to my spirit sweetly,
With the grace of a thought divine;
You are living, toiling for love's sake,
And the loving should never repine.

You are guiding the little footsteps
In the way they ought to walk,
You are dropping a word for Jesus
In the midst of your household talk;
Living your life for love's sake,

Till the homely cares grow sweet—
And sacred the self-denial
That is laid at the Master's feet.—Sel.

GLIMPSES.

IT was a windy, dusty afternoon in early fall. In a small western village some festivities were in progress and the crowd gathered seemed filled with excitement. With a hasty glance about one would have discovered that baseball, our national sport, was the center of attraction. The players in their gay suits made bright bits of color in the field, while the tiers of spectators at the back reflected the colors and movements of the players. They shouted, clapped their hands, waved their hats, parasols, and handkerchiefs, or sank back with sighs and groans of disappointment and sympathy as the mascot of baseball was tossed back and forth by the two opposing teams.

Near the center of the bevy of interested spectators sat two women whose faces might have seemed to a keen observer to be capable of expressing deeper or grander emotions than those which now swayed them as they cheered exultantly, or deplored loudly the capricious favor of the baseball sprite as it seemed to rest first upon one, then upon the other club. One of these women kept score with a small borrowed pencil which seemed fatally disposed to credit their favored team with ciphers rather than scores.

The hours passed away until three had vanished into the unredeemable past, and the people sat upon those uncomfortable boards patiently—willingly. (I wonder if any ever complained about the benches at the church?) These two friends parted disconsolately at six o'clock, tired, dusty, and disappointed.

It was evening. In a quiet, airy room sat a small company around a long table covered with books, papers, and pencils. Intense interest marked their faces, and one glance into the gentle, serene face of their white-bearded leader gave one a clew as to the source of the calm peace which prevailed around those shaded lamps. Earnest, thoughtful men and women were gathered to study the holy word of God, and their longing minds sought to grasp the intricacies of its wonderful mysteries. The Spirit of light and truth was present and its influence felt by all. No, not all. Who are there who sit apart with abstracted gazes and restless movements? Surely not—yes, they are the two friends of the afternoon. Even the same short pencil is present trying now, however, to jot down one of the swift gleams of intelligence, one of the golden grains of thought which sprang into sudden being in that quiet assembly.

Both women seemed absorbed and unable to become interested. They smothered ambitious yawns and frequently glanced at the clock.

It is later. The golden moon looks down in peaceful splendor upon the slumbering world; the mind sighs dreamily among the rustling trees and whispers of coming cold and sorrow. The two friends stroll with reluctant steps to their separation. Listen.

"The meeting seemed all so wrong to-night. I didn't enjoy it a bit, did you?"

"No; I couldn't get interested at all, and there seemed to be nothing said of worth. I have gathered nothing this meeting to carry with me all the week as I usually do. I wonder what was wrong?"

Dear reader, do you?

LOWER LAKE, Cal., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion at Santa Cruz was a very enjoyable time, and our Master blessed us with many of the good things of the kingdom; and on the Monday after the close of the meetings four were baptized, and an excellent confirmation meeting was held in the room where the reunion was held; and nine were baptized on the Saturday previous. One of these was Bro. George A. Smith, who had come from Arizona to be baptized. And before the services closed on Sunday he was ordained an elder, and we hope and expect he will do good work in Arizona. May our Father bless him to this end.

Before the reunion closed I was called to administer to the little child of Bro. and Sr. N. Carmichael, at Hollister; but all the loving, faithful watchcare with the oil and wine of administration could not keep the sweet little babe with us, and on Sunday afternoon of the 15th of September the pure spirit of the little one departed from this home, to the bright, beautiful paradise of God to rest in hope and peace until the morn of the glorious resurrection.

From there we came to Santa Rosa and met the few Saints there in service, and on Saturday last parted with them and Bro. and Sr. Blair and came on to Calistoga and on Monday arrived by stage and wagon at this place, and am holding meetings in the Christian church.

Bro. and Sr. Blair have left an influence for good all through California, and we all feel very grateful to our Master and to them for all the good we in this mission have received from them. They have been indefatigable in their endeavors to help on the good work and to cheer, instruct, and bless all whom they met; and we parted from them with a feeling of sadness and loneliness, and started off to visit and help the sheep and the lambs in the mountains and valleys of this rough country, and to try to lead men and women to the Lamb of God, and to win souls to Christ. May God in his loving kindness bless them with every good thing needed, and the angel of mercy care for them on their homeward way and keep them from all accidents and harm, and may his peace abide with them forever.

We have here met Sr. E. E. Cobb and her son, John, and Bro. and Sr. Graulich, and others, and expect to lead a few into the waters of baptism before I leave. Peace.

No. 3,010 Sixteenth St. SAN FRANCISCO.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aug. 30.

Editors Herald:—Before leaving New Castle an excellent young man gave his name for baptism, which was attended to by Elder Broadway after I left. A late letter informs me that the wind blew over the building (up on pillars) which was to have been moved and converted into a chapel, doing such damage that it must be taken to pieces and the chapel put up anew. This means more expense,—something the tried few cannot take upon them easily. But I feel like commending the determination apparent; for they expect to go right ahead with the chapel. I shall be gratified to see the two branches in that vicinity cooperate in this matter; for both will share the benefit to be derived so far as increased prestige and permanency for our church is gained.

I had a desire for laboring in that locality awhile, but the demand in Sydney seemed greater, hence my return. One pleasant feature of my work there was the solemnizing of a marriage between Bro. Walter Haworth, (deacon of Wallsend branch,) and Miss Maud Webster, of Lambton, at the home of the groom's parents. May blessing and peace follow them.

Interest still continues here. New faces are continually seen at our services. One gentleman is so favorably impressed that he has thrown open his home to the local brethren for preaching, in the suburb of Leichardt. I occupy there to-night for the first time since my return.

An elder from Utah by the name of Ridges has visited the branch, in my absence, and some interesting talk resulted through his trying to convert some of the new brethren lately baptized. His argument was that they had "not yet accepted the fullness of the gospel." Elder Seaberg was sent for and presented some very knotty questions for him to answer. He soon saw that our brother had not been asleep during the ten years he had been in the church. Add to this an encounter he had with Elder Ellis at the home of the latter—one who was once a member of that church and who has had forty years' experience in the matter, and you can easily guess why he has not put in a second appearance.

And this, too, notwithstanding the fact that he was invited to speak (and did so), was introduced to the Saints, invited by them to the tea table, and promised food and shelter as long as he wished to stay. He seemed to think because they were persistent in their defense of the Reorganization, and bringing forth reasons for believing in a Utah departure, that he was being persecuted. Bro. Ellis from his well-stocked library brought tell-tale volumes and read statements which made the poor man rave and stamp his feet. It appears he was ignorant of any such utterances regarding plurality, Adam-god doctrine, etc. He expressed a desire to read these books, which was granted to his heart's content if he would come to the house and read them, receiving food and shelter as long as he remained. It also appears that he has been here two years and done practically nothing, and is now dragging his missionary time out. When he saw our congregation his "mouth watered," so to speak. His exclamation was this: "What a respectable, neat congregation you have here!"

I hear there are three of these Utah propagandists in New South Wales, and one in Queensland. Whereas, they are doing practically nothing, and only waiting for the expiration of their time, our workers are all busy as we care to be, and thinking of extending our time. We feel thankful that it is so. This is our comfort. Theirs is found only in the contemplation of their big temple, and of what "a mere handful" are the "Josephites." Far better a small lump with leaven than a big one "sad" and fallen.

Weather exceptionally dry, high winds, bush fires raging, cattle starving, water scarce and impure, fever increasing. This is the trial many in this colony are now enduring.

LAMONI, Iowa, Sept. 30.

Editors Herald:—Leaving home for Clarksdale, Missouri, direct, I remained there till close of their reunion, and learning that the tent in my own field had been taken down to be transferred to Logan reunion, I consented to go to Maysville, Missouri, to spend a week as the interest there seemed to demand it. Had a profitable time there laboring with Bro. T. W. Chatburn, he baptizing four.

Left there for Council Bluffs reunion to be in harmony with a notice in Ensign, which, by the way, I had not authorized. The reunion was a marked success in every way, the location being especially so. Thence to Logan, where I found many a hearty welcome after so long an absence from my field. There were seven localities where they wanted me to be sure and go just as soon as reunion closed! But a telegram calling me home, "wife sick," thwarted all plans. Arrived after forty-two hours suspense to find "neuralgia of the stomach" the cause, from which she is slowly recovering.

To those in my field I can only say that just the first opportunity I will be there. Will be detained, however, till Mrs. Wight has sufficiently recovered from a surgical operation she is to undergo in the removal of a bone from the foot.

J. W. WIGHT.

SOMERVILLE, Victoria, Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—After many dark and stormy scenes of the past, once more the "silver lining" appears, and a few rays from the "sun of righteousness" are shining in upon us to make our graces grow. Of all my experience in the church, I never saw the power of darkness take on such a bold and glaring appearance as they have with us lately, and I think nearly all the Saints have had a taste of the bitter cup. However, the tide has now turned, and prospects for fine sailing are quite flattering. When our dear old president of the Hastings branch bade farewell to the sights and scenes of earth, and passed away to join the heavenly choir, where he might continue his praise to God and the Lamb, some of the opposers to God's word were pleased; for they thought it was a deathblow to the Saints, from which they would never recover; for he was the mainstay of the branch. But they were disappointed, for his death was simply lighting the lamp to lead others to a quiet and peaceful rest. I saw the fire was lighted, and set myself in real earnest to pile on the fuel, so that at least, for once, the little village might get a warming up; and with a little help the blaze caught firm hold, and began burning brightly.

When this was observed, the alarm was given, and an experienced man from the city sent for, to put out the fire; but when the "archdeacon" put in his appearance and declared that "a handful of water was just as good as the mighty ocean," this only caused a flare, and the people lost confidence in him at once. He challenged proof to the contrary, and I accepted, on the point that more than "a handful of water" was required to cause such a fire to subside. He then declined for he knew what "abominable wolves in sheep's clothing we were," and in fact all about us; but I told him we didn't wear the garment, and asked if he had ever read the Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants, to which he replied "No." I asked where he got his knowledge, to which I received no answer. Said I: "Here are people being deceived, and going headlong to perdition in your estimation; will you take the platform with me, and show wherein we are wrong?" "No," he replied. Said I: "People are waiting to be baptized, here." He interrupted by saying, "You mean rebaptized." "Yes," said I, "If you like to call it such;" "But," said he, "there is only one baptism." "Yes" said I, "I believe that; but you know

Paul had to rebaptize some." To which he replied, that they were "baptized by John, which was not Christian baptism." At this juncture I quoted to him with unusual force the following: "The baptism of John, was it from heaven or of men?" This was rather unexpected, and he said, "I can't say." "What?" said I, "don't know whether it was from heaven or not?" He said, "I will answer as did the Pharisees." Thus ended the "first lesson," and arising to leave I offered my hand, but he refused, so we parted.

This set everybody to discussing the water subject, until the following Sunday, when the Lord let me entirely loose. All the elders know what that means, and the matter was finally settled in the minds of not a few, and yesterday I had the pleasure of baptizing eight citizens of the place, with the names of four more for next Sunday. Among these were the barber, baker, and photographer, to whom I may go, and get a clean shave, fine bread, and photos taken on short notice. The whole place is in an uproar, and all the Saints feel like standing at their post to see what the end will be.

We now stand very much in need of an experienced hand to come to our rescue and aid in caring for the lambs of the fold; and I trust the church won't forget us at next General Conference. Our few workers are doing about all they can, under present circumstances, to keep the truth before the people, and are meeting with fair success. I am still desirous of standing at my post until the Lord shall say it "is enough."

BLUE RAPIDS, Kan., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—Anyone wishing to, write me here. The work is moving slowly in this part of the Lord's vineyard. The local help is limited, but the few left are doing all that could be expected. My time since the close of the reunion has been occupied with the local work in the Blue Rapids branch with the exception of a flying trip to the southwestern part of the district to look after the scattered sheep. I found in Ness and Lane Counties Bro. and Sr. T. E. Thompson and family; Brn. and Srs. Sawyer, Pelton, and their families; also Bro. and Sr. Lund, of old-time acquaintance. Here I enjoyed one of the old-fashioned Latter Day Saints' visits, such as we used to have when it was a rarity to meet one of like precious faith. Some seem to feel and think the good old days have gone by.

I spent ten days visiting, talking, and preaching. The Saints are trying to stem the storm of hard times, failure of crops, and hold fast to the iron rod, though I thought a little discouraged; as some expressed it, they had not been visited by president of district or missionary for two years past. They supposed it was because they were too poor to be saved, as they had raised nothing and had nothing to help the preachers. They have a fair crop this year. It was said in my hearing, "We will have plenty of missionaries and preachers now."

After a pleasant time with the Saints and a promise of returning sometime in the future I returned to Collier where I occupied the Congregationalist church on my way down, and again to the discomfort of a kind and generous Baptist preacher who refused to let me occupy his church. Well, thank God, Kansas is settled up with a free, open-hearted people who believe in the constitutional rights of all men, hence but few are priest-ridden.

While here I had the pleasure of leading a dear sister, one of Abraham's daughters, into the water. Though her husband gave his consent, yet it broke him all up. He felt that his life's peace and happiness had collapsed and were buried forever. I felt a little sad for the brother, yet I could not feel that I had committed any sin, and only pray that God may bless him with light and knowledge until conviction takes hold of him with such power that he may find no rest until he finds it in a crucified Savior.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

"BUT," it is urged, "young Joseph did not come in the right way. He could not be the 'one mighty and strong.'" Mr. Roberts urges the tameness of young Joseph's speech at Amboy, Illinois, as one evidence against him; but unfortunately for Mr. Roberts' argument he shows his dishonesty in argument. Why did he not quote these words that follow from that address?

I came not here of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit. For some time past I have received manifestations pointing to the position I am about to assume. I wish to say that I have come here not to be dictated to by any man or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me.

Why did he not compare that with the statement by Micaiah,

As the Lord liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak.—2 Kings 18: 13.

Compare with Brigham Young's statement,

As the Lord's will is my will all the time. As he dictates, so will I perform.

He did not make comparison, simply because it would not answer the purpose; that is all.

When young Joseph uttered the words complained of by Mr. Roberts, he showed himself a true son of his father; for the rule laid down by that father was, according to Orson Hyde,

There is a way by which all revelations purporting to be from God through any man can be tested. Brother Joseph gave us the plan, says he,—when all the quorums are assembled and organized in order, let the revelation be presented to the quorums, if it pass one let it go to another, and if it pass that, to another, and so on until it has passed all the quorums; and if it pass the whole without running against a snag, you may know it is of God. But if it runs against a snag, then, says he, it wants inquiring into: you must see to it.—Mill. Star 5: 102; Times and Seasons 5: 649.

Revelations had been forced upon the people and doctrines had been promulgated as part of the laws of the church without submitting them in the manner stated, and young Joseph's pledge was necessary that the people might have confidence in him; for their confidence had been betrayed, and they were forced to move cautiously.

"God's ways are not man's ways." Tameness and mildness may be and are the mark of a true prophet of God. The Jews rejected Christ because he did not come as "a governor that shall rule my people Israel;" or, as the "Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace;" but he came in the person of the meek and lowly Nazarene, "despised and rejected of men;" and Israel suffered for rejecting him and to-day are wanderers on the face of the earth. Not always is the race to the swift nor the battle to the strong. Shakespeare says:—

He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister.
Oft expectation fails where most it promises, and oft it hits

Where hope is coldest and despair most fits.

In 1 Kings 19: 11 I read:—

And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord. And behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake; and after the earthquake a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire; and after the fire a still, small voice.

And in this voice did Elijah find the Lord and his message. I suppose that if Mr. Roberts had been there he would have insisted that the Lord should come in the wind, the earthquake, or the fire; but "God's ways are not man's ways."

A new objection was urged this spring, one that seems too trifling in its nature; and yet I cannot forbear mentioning it here to show how completely in every respect young Joseph has filled the law and the testimony. The objection was made after reading the revelation of 1894 that young Joseph could not be a prophet because he was not like his father; for his father always said, "Thus saith the Lord," while the present Joseph says, "Thus saith the Spirit." This objection no one earnestly seeking for the truth would consider of enough importance to make; but these obstacles, trifling though they may be, must be removed. All of God's prophets and inspired writers have different styles of writing, so that a person who is a careful observer can tell from what author a quotation is taken, by the language used. Isaiah is not like Jeremiah, and he in turn differs from Ezekiel, and so on; hence I conclude that God does not always furnish the words in which his messages are given, but giving the sentiment, the prophet is left to clothe it in his own language. But I think a few quotations from the New Testament will forever set at rest the objection.

Then the Spirit said unto Philip.—Acts 8: 29.

The Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.—Acts 10: 19.

And signified by the Spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world.—Acts 11: 28.

As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul.—Acts 13: 2.

So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost.—Verse 4.

And said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost.—Acts 21: 11.

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly.—1 Tim. 4: 1.

Preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.—1 Peter 1: 12.

For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Peter 1: 21.

I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day.—Rev. 1: 10.

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.—Rev. 2: 7. (See also 2: 11, 29; 3: 6, 13, 22.)

The principal objection, however, to young Joseph, is in the matter of priesthood or authority, each faction claiming that he ought to have come to them for his ordination. I have already shown that according to his own testimony and that of others his father anointed and ordained him, conferring all the powers and blessings which he himself held. If an objection is urged that he was too young at the time, being then in his twelfth year, I only call attention to Doctrine and Covenants 104: 27 (107 Utah edition):—

Noah was ten years old when he was ordained under the hand of Methuselah.

Jeremiah was chosen when he was but a child. (Jer. 1: 6.)

John the Baptist was ordained by an angel when he was eight days old. (D. C. 83: 4; Utah Ed. 84: 28.)

I believe that God in this ordination of the boy Joseph conferred the priesthood upon him; and, even should it be conceded that he did not, still it must be admitted that any high priest who had received his priesthood under proper authority could ordain and confer that priesthood upon any other man, providing he had not lost that right by transgression; and no honest controversialist will assume that a man is in apostasy until that apostasy is proven; and there is not a particle of evidence to prove that William Marks and others who were instrumental in ordaining young Joseph at Amboy, Illinois, were in transgression.

I would just say to Brother Marks, that I saw in a vision while on the road, that whereas he was closely pursued by an innumerable concourse of enemies, and as they pressed upon him hard, as if they were about to devour him, and had seemingly obtained some degree of advantage over him, but about this time a chariot of fire came, and near the place, even the angel of the Lord put forth his hand unto Brother Marks, and said unto him, "Thou art my son, come here," and immediately he was caught up in the chariot, and rode away triumphantly out of their midst. And again the Lord said, "I will raise thee up for a blessing unto many people."

It will not do to assume that these men were apostates and reject their testimony for that reason; for that is the matter under controversy as to who departed from the faith. The matter stands like this: Joseph Smith had organized a church, established well-defined articles of faith, and as he was about to yield up his life as a sacrifice to the work, he ordained and appointed his son to carry on that work. Several factions sprang up at his death, many going with each, and some holding aloof from all, Jason W. Briggs, Zenas H. Gurley, and William Marks being among that number, with the branches of the church over which they presided. They became members of no faction, except nominally; and yet examining into the claims of each; but becoming dissatisfied with all, retaining their faith in the work and their integrity as men of God, continuing the organizations over which they were appointed in Joseph Smith's time to preside.

Elder E. C. Briggs, in his testimony in the Temple Lot suit, says:—

There was a branch of the original church established at Beloit [Wisconsin], during the lifetime of Joseph Smith, and my brother Jason W. Briggs was the presiding elder of that branch. From the time of the death of Joseph Smith in 1844, up to the time of the commencement of the reorganization in 1851, that branch retained its organization.—Plaintiff's Abstract, page 197.

It is useless to assert that these men changed from one faith to another. They did not, but continued in the original faith, trying each claimant by that faith, until all were rejected, and then, by the command of God, banding themselves together to await further developments. William Marks retained his membership up to and after Joseph Smith's death, and was then dropped from his position by those who endeavored to force doctrines upon him that were contrary to the faith, and because he stood up for Sidney Rigdon when he was brought up for trial; doing only his duty as a high councilor; for the instruction given at the organization of that council was that as many should be appointed to speak for the accused as against, to prevent injustice; and for doing that which it was his duty to do, he was dropped, pending an investigation, which was never had.

President Young said that a president of a stake could be dropped without taking his standing from him in the church. . . . A president of a stake is only called for the time being. If you drop him, he will fall back into the High Priests' Quorum.

As to the other reasons for William Marks coming into disfavor with the authorities of the church at Nauvoo after Joseph Smith's death, they are found in the statement made by John H. Carter, whose testimony has before been referred to.

In regard to polygamy he says:—

The first time the issue was ever raised there was a member of the High Council by the name of Harris, and another by the name of Marks. They refused to accept it, and fought against it; they would not have it. . . . The first time it was ever presented to the High Council there were three of the High Council rejected it, but that was after Joseph and Hyrum were killed.—Temple Lot Suit, Plaintiff's Abstract, pages 184-5.

Here their spurious revelation ran against a snag, and that was the secret of their desire to get rid of William Marks; but the Lord had said through his prophet that although he should be surrounded by an innumerable concourse of enemies, yet he should be raised up "for a blessing unto many people;" and being one out of many who was true to the faith and to the one whom the Lord had caused to be anointed as his future prophet, that prophecy has been remarkably fulfilled.

When young Joseph came of age to properly claim his right as his father's successor, the conditions were not unlike those that confronted his father in the beginning of his career; and the question arose in his mind as to which of all the factions is right, and "where and with whom should my life-labor lie?" This was answered in a similar manner to his father's question as to which of the sects was right, only instead of answering that none were right, the answer came in this language:—

The Saints reorganizing at Zarahemla [Wisconsin], and other places, is the only organized portion of the church accepted by me. I have given them my Spirit, and will continue to do so while they remain humble and faithful.

This answer did not suit the other organized factions any more than the answer received by his father suited the different sects left out in the cold, and a constant warfare and systematic persecution has been kept up on them ever since. But in the language of our beloved president, (Young Joseph), "Those who are right can afford to wait;" and, thank God, that waiting has been rewarded in seeing our cause vindicated on every hand.

The homes of a few of the world's great men have been as carefully preserved as Goethe's at Weimar. Nothing has been disturbed, and in his sleeping-room, where he died, the same spread covers the bed, and his drinking cup, sponge, and wash-basin are in the same position in which he left them. The old man who once in the poet's lifetime repaired his coach still visits it periodically to see if it needs attention.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Galland's Grove district Sunday school convention will meet at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 12, at 2:30. A short business session is to be followed by a discussion of blackboard work; the evening session to consist of an address by Elder Charles Darry, of Woodbine, Iowa. We invite all to come and participate in the work, as we expect one of the most beneficial times we have ever had in our district conventions.

BY ORDER OF COMMITTEE.

Association of Decatur district will meet in convention at the brick church, Lamoni, Iowa, Friday, October 25, at ten a. m., holding three sessions, forenoon, afternoon, and evening. All the schools please send delegates. The time is the day before district conference, and the place is directly on the way for nearly all, and by starting one day earlier, those who contemplate attending conference can also enjoy the convention. A large attendance is hoped for. Program will be announced later.

NOTICES.

The new chapel at Pleasant Grove, Utah, will be dedicated on Sunday, November 3, 1895, to which all are cordially invited to come. Pres. W. W. Blair and wife will be present, also Elders Heman C. and Hyrum O. Smith, and R. J. Anthony. We extend our hearty thanks to all who have contributed to help, or who may help us. We need a little more means to buy the chairs to seat our chapel. Send all contributions to H. B. Sterrett, who will receipt for the same. Your brethren for the spread of truth,

H. B. STERRETT, Pres.

C. E. STERRETT, Sec.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Eastern Oregon and Washington, Greeting; Dear Saints:—I acknowledge the receipt of many letters inviting me to your respective localities to do gospel work. And while I have been very desirous of answering every call, I have found it impossible for lack of time and means.

I have had Bro. John Davis with me for nearly two months, and our association together has been a blessing to me, and I hope no disadvantage to him, and I heartily wish we could be together all the time, as really the law requires; but the calls are so many that it becomes necessary for us to separate again, and as Bro. John is young and active he will take his journey through Eastern Washington and Eastern Oregon as the way may open up and means be provided. I am fully satisfied that he will do the very best he can for the work in all places that he may visit, and I ask that you will receive him for what he is, an earnest worker, a man of pure life and upright conversation, and I hope you will be able to supply his wants, which will not be extravagant. And may the Lord bless you and him and sanctify his labor to your good and the good of the work, is my prayer.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI REUNION.

THE reunion of the Southwestern Missouri mission is now going on at this place, El Dorado Springs, Missouri. It is all that we anticipated, so far, and an excellent time is being enjoyed. We will not burden your columns with details of hymns sung or names of those in charge of certain services, as we are inclined to think it unnecessary and under present circumstances unwise.

The reunion was announced to begin Friday, September 20, and to continue until October 6, thus holding over three Sundays. When the date of commencement arrived the beautiful grove of Mr. Harmon in the east part of El Dorado became the center of attraction for everybody. Saints from the various parts of Southern Missouri and Southeastern Kansas could be seen driving in and unloading their camp equipage and pitching their tents for a stay of two weeks in the city of the Saints. Some good brother could be seen with an ax in his hand and a rail on his shoulder crossing the camp ground; but lo! he meets a familiar face not seen before for months, when, down goes the ax and rail, and a hearty hand-shake takes place, and then before he knows it he has forgotten that the wife has been waiting ten or fifteen minutes for some wood, but is suddenly brought to his presence of mind by a call from his better half or a tap on the elbow from one of the children, telling him to hurry up. The sisters, too, have their social seasons of enjoyment on such occasions, but in justice to the fairer sex I will say that they kill less time in camp life than the brethren. Of course there are so many things to talk about which are important and interesting that the brethren will collect in little groups around the camp and enjoy themselves together. These are not idle, silly conversations either, but the listener can usually learn something if he will treasure it up. Well, such an occasion is much more than a camp meeting: it is really a reunion.

Bro. I. N. White is present, and in charge of the services. The following named brethren of the general ministry are present to assist in the meetings; viz.: E. A. Davis, W. S. Pender, Henry Sparling, Emsley Curtis, F. C. Keck, C. R. Duncan, A. C. Hart, A. M. Baker, Will Mannering, F. L. Sawley, Henry C. Smith, R. W. Davis. We expect Bro. E. L. Kelley, Joseph Luff, and R. Etzenhouser the first of the coming week. A host of local elders and priests are present also. About thirty-five or forty families of Saints are in attendance and more arriving daily. The health of the camp is good and the weather fine, making tent life quite pleasant.

The meetings are quite well attended and everybody seems proud of the new tent, which is sixty feet diameter. We notice that it is pretty well filled each evening, and Sunday will likely crowd it to its utmost capacity. The attendance is, so far, less than last year, but will doubtless be very large during the coming week. The other churches in town took a new dodge to prevent us from "doing mischief." Instead of sending for one of their champions to come and lecture or debate they have just started up a revival meeting. Well, since the White-Braden debate there is a certain church that needs reviving badly.

A change of tone can plainly be seen in the newspapers of the town as may be observed from inclosed copy which is clipped from the Sun, of this place. It endeavors to deal with us fairly.

The preaching of the word has been well sustained by the light and power of the Holy Spirit, and the prayer meetings have been up to the average generally and some of them have been excellent, the gifts of the Spirit in tongues and prophecy having been abundantly manifested, much to the edification of all.

The singing is in charge of Sr. Mina Hart, of Angola, Kansas. We notice that better music can be made from the "Winnowed Songs" than from the "Harmony." It is evident that boys and girls who are accustomed to labor six days in the week cannot be expected to handle a book like the Harmony successfully. They may be able to read music readily, but unless they practice that and do nothing else their music will be below the standard. The new book—"The Hymnal"—is much needed. Names may not come in very fast with cash in advance for the book, but the first edition will meet with a ready sale just the same. We were inclined to doubt the wisdom of that move, to require the cash in advance for the book, when it was made, and we still remain of the same opinion; but we cannot afford to let this stop the publication of the book, and a special effort should be made by the friends of the enterprise to make it a success. If this book is not published we predict that some book of sectarian manufacture will take its place in our gatherings before long.

A communication has been received from some of the brethren in Iowa proposing to hold a Jubilee Reunion at Nauvoo, Illinois, next year, making it a general reunion. A special business meeting was called and a resolution was adopted expressing our willingness to cooperate in such reunion.

Five have been baptized, so far, and more to follow.

More anon,
C. R. DUNCAN.

CONTINUATION OF SANTA CRUZ REUNION.

September 3.—Preaching at 7:45 by W. W. Blair; Hebrews 13:1-22. The speaker desired to show that God would do as royally in fitting and preparing the people for the great change to take place at the second coming of Jesus as he did at the first advent. It is believed by many that angels are intangible beings of a shadowy character, often painted with stately wings. If such were the case, would they be mistaken for men? But our conception of angels is that they are in the form of man, and that man possesses the highest form, being made in God's image. We have numerous instances of where God has chosen angels to appear and perform his work; namely, the destruction of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen. 19); to Abraham and wife (Gen. 18); see also Daniel 10; at the resurrection of Christ, and in many other cases. When we come to the teachings of the Bible we learn that angels will minister in the last days and separate the good from the bad in the harvest time. Let us beware lest we fall into the condition of the people who will call for the rocks to fall upon them.

September 4.—Prayer meeting in charge of Elders John Holmes and D. Brown. The Spirit was present to a goodly degree from beginning to close. Preaching at 10:45 by Elder Thomas Daley. The brother thought that the question might be asked, How do we know that the angel spoken of by John in Revelation had come? The same question might be asked of Christ. The answer would be had by referring to the Scriptures, showing the predictions of the prophets concerning them and noting the fulfillment of the prophecies. We are frequently asked what evidence we have that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God? He is the only one who claimed to receive the message from an angel and promised the blessings as enjoyed anciently. Hundreds living to-day will testify to the truth of his claims. Should we not be more willing to receive the witness of living men than dead ones? We accept Joseph Smith as a prophet, not as a Savior. At 2:30 preaching by W. W. Blair. He desired to have a familiar talk with the Saints about those things that would make for life and immortality. We need truth, and all the truth we can have, that we triumph in righteousness. The fact that we need teaching, shows that we should have some one superior to ourselves to teach us. God has chosen an individual to preside over his church. One of the leading arguments of the day against having a prophet at the head of the church is, He may lead the people astray. Samuel was a true prophet and never a word failed to come to pass that he predicted. A false prophet is one that speaks by a false spirit. Jesus never sought to throw discredit upon the least of the prophets. We ought to desire instruction from this. God will fortify his people against being misled by a prophet of his own choosing. He is not infallible. The Saints are advised "not to borrow trouble" on account of President Joseph Smith misleading the people. God would soon remove him if he did. We should have a zeal according to knowledge that we do not harm to the cause. At 7:45 preaching by Bro. D. L. Harris. Although the Jews had access to all the records we have, and many others, yet they did not believe in the coming of Christ as a babe. Christ told them if they had believed the prophets they would have believed in him. It is very much the same way in this age; professors of religion claim to believe the prophecies yet do not believe in the second coming of Christ. The gospel should be preached in all the world for a witness and then the end should come. We may know the prophet has not spoken presumptuously when we see the things spoken of coming to pass. No one can say that Jesus is the Christ except by the Holy Ghost. The testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of prophecy.

September 5.—Prayer meeting 9-10: 30. There were four prayers offered and fifteen testimonies given. At 10:45 the sermon was by W. W. Blair, as follows: Our position is a peculiar one, the Reorganization being one of the peculiarities. The speaker very clearly pointed out how apostasy had crept in and done its work among the tribes before the days of Christ. There was a veil over the minds of the people. Jesus charged the elders or leaders with leading the people into apostasy. In Acts 20 Paul tells the saints of the departure from the faith in the future, that it would be wrought out by the ministry. Peter also predicts that because of the pernicious teachings of the teachers reproach would be brought upon the church. In the fifth century darkness and paganism took the place of the plain principles of the gospel. Is it not possible in the light of past history, that apostasy should take place in the latter-day work, that it would be partial, not entire, as formerly? Yet in the latter days they were to give heed to doctrines of devils. Those who have followed the church from its rise till now know how literally this has been fulfilled. There has been such corrupt practices as to be almost past belief and very painful to contemplate. When God was gathering the people to Zion, after the Book of Mormon came forth, he warned them that beyond them lay a sea of trouble through which they should pass. How comforting the promise of Jesus, that after these days of tribulation they should be greatly blessed! The speaker in his own pleasing way told the Saints that the greatest tribulations they could be called to pass through was that of false brethren and sisters that was to come after the fall of 1833. Their only security was to stand firm in the faith of the revelations of God. If in former days the people had faithfully kept the commands of God there would never have been an apostasy. This is also true of the days in which we are living. The speaker cited where the Utah people had forbidden to marry—changing the manner of solemnizing marriages, etc., also other factions that were broken off substituting man-made theories for the commands of God. The Saints received much valuable instruction and paid close attention throughout. At 2:30, preaching by C. A. Parkin. He said: As God's children we are to render unto him complete service. If God required absolute service in ancient times, he demands the same of us to-day, as we are taught in the Scriptures that God is unchangeable. We are told that "the law of the Lord is perfect;" if a thing be perfect nothing can be taken from it or added to it. God has given unto us a perfect system. If we desire to obtain that which is to accrue to this perfect law, we must render absolute obedience to that law. He read 2 Corinthians 8:12-15. There are six fundamental principles of the gospel as the foundation upon which to build. God has designed to save the people in this way. The work of the church is to send out this message unto the world. Our speaker clearly pointed out the duty of his hearers in the work. At 7:45 J. F. Burton said: Israel before their transgression, had received great blessings from God, having the word of God through a prophet continually. We believe this if we believe the Old and New Testaments or the testimony of the Jews. The most wondrous declaration from God to man was, "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." This man when he saw Jesus walking said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!" If God sent him for this purpose no one else has that work to do. Before Adam and Eve transgressed they stood in the presence of God, but through transgression they were thrust out, thus it became necessary that a redeemer be sent. Jesus Christ was the Redeemer sent, and God will send no other. When he sent his disciples out, he said, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, . . . but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." No doubt the "lost sheep" were not all in the land of Judea. In paradise he found some. Thousands of Jews are now gathering to their own land, where they will see Jesus coming again on Mount Olives. If we can believe the plan God sent eighteen hundred years ago, then we are prepared to receive it in this age.

September 6.—In prayer meeting a very peaceable season was enjoyed, there being eight prayers offered, and eleven testimonies borne. At 10:45 preaching by J. H. Lawn. The speaker held the three records in his hand; the one to the Jews, the one to the Nephites, and the one to the Saints of the restoration. He called the attention of his hearers to the diversity of opinion among the people of the world concerning the unpardonable sin, some believing it is committed by those who stay away from the preaching of the word, others believe it is murder, etc. But the word of Christ says (Matt. 12:31), "Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven unto men." We should be careful not to step out into disobedience, following after strange flesh, etc., as it leads unto the unpardonable sin. It is the duty of parents and teachers to teach their children in all things that they are not led into sin. At 2:30 the preaching was by William Newton; texts, Matthew 16:13-18; John 4:23, 24. He read the Scripture to show that God desired those who worshiped him to worship him in spirit and in truth. The Hindoos will suffer great punishments and even death to appease the wrath of their god. The Mohammedans will fast during the long month of March, and it is well known the long pilgrimages they take in order to comply with the demands of their prophets. In many other churches people will sacrifice to a great extent, many laying down their lives for the sake of their belief, showing that they worship in spirit, but they do not in truth. It is written, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God;" but there is another kind of food that we must have if we are lively members; it is the daily portion of spiritual food. There are many in the various churches who worship they know not what. At 7:45 the speaker, W. W. Blair, read part of the fourth and all of the fifth chapters of First Thessalonians. The second advent is an essential feature of the gospel. The disciples are to be with Christ after the second advent, many have been derelict in preaching on the second advent, because so many different periods have been set for the event that it has cast odium upon it. These are the days of the second coming of Christ. The Jews are to be gathered to their own land, the Saints to the land of Zion, and there instructed in the things relating to the gospel.

September 7.—At the prayer meeting there were six prayers offered and thirty-two testimonies borne. At 10:45, preaching by W. W. Blair. In this effort Bro. Blair desired to have a familiar talk with the Saints upon the rise and progress of the work of the reorganization of the church. From the close attention the hearers paid the speaker, I think they enjoyed the talk as well as if they were being preached to. Your writer paid such close attention to this talk, and to several other talks and sermons, that she forgot to take notes, for which I ought to beg pardon. I greatly wished throughout the meetings that I had learned shorthand and could have taken all the sermons down. Among many things the speaker said, I remembered a few: The dark side of the church, having been predicted, is an evidence of the divinity of the church. It was necessary that Israel be rejected for a time; the Babylonish captivity was an educator of the world. So when the Lord permitted the scattering of the Saints it was a means of discipline and a scattering of the seed, giving the people an experience to fit them to build up the church for the millennium. The church being rejected for a time, the quorums being broken, it was necessary that God revive the work. In 1852 the work of the Reorganization began. At first the work was rejected by some, but the Spirit revealed it unto them. It was through a little girl but nine years of age that it was made known to them that young Joseph should lead the church. In 1867 the manuscript of the Inspired Translation was given to the church. At 7:45 Thomas Daley said: It is in harmony with God's law to speak to a people whenever they place themselves in a condition to receive it. In the New Testament Christ told his disciples that he had other sheep which he must bring, and they should hear his voice. By reading Bancroft, Stephens, and others, we may find that this land had been peopled before it was discovered by Columbus. God being no respecter of persons, should it be thought anything strange that he should speak to this people? We believe he did, and the Book of Mormon is the record of his sayings to them. We can place this record side by side with the record of the Jews.

Sunday, September 8.—At the prayer meeting there were four prayers offered and twenty-seven testimonies borne. Among the testimonies was one given by a deaf and dumb sister and interpreted by her sister,

It melted many to tears to see the sister as afflicted, yet actuated by the Holy Spirit and with all earnestness, telling in her way (by signs and the deaf and dumb alphabet) the blessings received, her desires, and exhorting the Saints to be faithful. Preceding this service was the confirmation of nine who had been baptized previously by Bro. Burton. One of the new members was immediately ordained to the office of an elder under the hands of W. W. Blair and J. F. Burton. At 10:45, preaching by W. W. Blair upon spiritual matters. We believe in the spiritual graces and endowments that were had in the days of the patriarchs. God's Spirit produces a sound mind and never confusion, but leads along the path of harmony and operates like the light of the morning. It is the divine force that emanated from God and his Son while they created the world. By this Spirit healings, prophecies, spiritual dreams, etc., come. It moves upon the emotional nature and intellect, but always inclines to righteousness and to prayer, lifting the individual into moral purity. It operated upon the early fathers of our country when it moved them to that extent that they could leave home and friends with all its endearments to obtain the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of their own conscience; also with the Revolutionary fathers. It moves upon the animal nature, causing it to be docile. We should not murmur if we have not the gift of prophecy, or tongues, or the power to work miracles; but we may have wisdom, and can seek for the best gifts. We should humbly accept the gifts God sees fit to bestow and be faithful to every work assigned us of God. The speaker thought the reason God had called him to the ministry was that he desired to show what he could make out of almost nothing. The lusts of the flesh is what causes the sins of the world. The fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, faith, etc. We should keep our eyes turned toward the light, the Sun of righteousness. Obtain the spiritual gift by prayer. Prayer is the chastened desire of the soul. The young especially were admonished to chasten their hearts and gain control of their spirits. At 2:30 the sacrament was administered after which Bro. D. L. Harris preached. The writer was not permitted to be present, on account of the railroad agent being on the ground making out the tickets, my presence being necessary to sign certificates; but I feel assured that the speaker did justice to the subject and instructed the Saints as he did in all previous efforts. Bro. Blair occupied the evening hour owing to the absence of J. F. Burton who was called away to administer to a sick child. Biblical and historical evidences to the latter-day work, was the subject. This world is to be completely changed to prepare for the millennium. It is no stranger that Jesus is to reign on the earth, than was his coming as a babe formerly. It was the theme of the apostles that he was to come and usher in the greatest event the world has ever known. Jesus gave us a great variety of signs and many prophecies which should be fulfilled just prior to the coming of our Lord. Jerusalem should be under the feet of the Gentiles until just prior to Christ's coming. Now four fifths of the inhabitants of Judea are Jews. The vastness of the military preparations of the world go to show the want of confidence among the nations. All Europe is honeycombed with secret societies. This country is being bound in bundles by secret societies, trying to protect the laboring man. It engenders a spirit of bitterness and causes a division of society. The ambition of men today is to heap up riches. Society is out of joint, alienating one part from another. Every crowned head is uneasy over the state of affairs.

This sermon was the last of the reunion, and was listened to by many outsiders as well as the Saints. It was said there were more outsiders interested in the meetings at Santa Cruz than at any of the reunions of the district previously held. A committee of three was chosen to select time and place for the next reunion. The Saints all seemed to desire to advance in the work and sorry that the time of parting had come, but thus it is in this life. God grant that we may live so that we will be permitted to meet at that grandest of all reunions, where parting never comes.

LOGAN REUNION.

Wednesday, September 25.—At 8:15 a session of Sunday school was held in district tent, there being 109 scholars present, divided into five classes. At nine a. m. social service. There were two prayers and thirty-two testimonies. The Spirit of peace, love, and union prevailed.

At 10:30 Joseph Luff preached from 1 Timothy 4:18; John 16:13. Desired to chat rather than sermonize. We find ourselves between the two fires of scepticism and churchianity. In a dialogue with his former minister soon after connecting himself with this church he had informed said minister that he now had anywhere from ten to one hundred more reasons for believing in God than previously. He called that minister's attention to the fact that the Bible taught baptism for the remission of sins and the laying on hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, and wanted to know that if he believed these and still continued to believe in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the only Savior of the world that therefore he would be lost. The minister replied negatively. The same reasoning was used relative to the inspiration of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants with like admission from the minister following. Felt truly thankful that he could exercise himself to always have a conscience void of offence toward God and toward all men.

The atheist tells him that he has inscribed upon his banner intellectual freedom, and yet by illustration, he showed that progress consequent to such freedom had not resulted. Give me a simple portion of Scripture when rightly interpreted, that will proscribe my freedom, outside the restraint incident to the best welfare of all! A true magnet will attract; whereas its exact counterpart failing to be so magnetized will not so attract! So with the one born of God. To him magnetized by the Spirit of truth shall come all truth; while the one not so magnetized or born of the Spirit cannot so draw though he may be the exact counterpart of the other in every respect save this magnetizing influence. The infidel asks me to reject the miracle that God breathed the breath of life and accept in its place ten thousand miracles. With no life beyond then no supply for this very natural demand, and in this at least nature is lacking.

At 2:30 A. H. Smith was the speaker. He took for his subject, "The creation," using Genesis 1:1, as the text. He said there is a tendency among many to throw discredit on the revelations contained in the Scriptures, and they present the butterfly as one specimen of proof of the theory of evolution. The tadpole is cited as another. The fool has said in his heart there is no God. We then want the proof that there is. We must examine witnesses whom we cannot impeach, and first upon the hypothesis that we had never received any education or knowledge of the Deity. Nature at the very first examination, as well as the most extensive, shows that there was a Creator. The rocks at the very farthest depth man has dug are mute witnesses of such fact, but when questioned they do not answer who made them. The grasses and trees show there are laws in them no man can create, but they don't answer the question who created them. The clouds of moisture, too, and away above these on the snow-capped mountains can be found huge old gray granite monuments that, too, mutely answer, "We are put here and held here," but no word comes who did it. Ask the rivers, the oceans, the great frozen waters north and south; the aurora borealis, rainbow, the orb of day, also that of night, and the stars. None tell us the nature of this Creator. Therefore we are forced to say there are no witnesses to be found outside of the Creator himself and those through whom he has spoken, and these tell us man was created just a little lower than the angels, and if left to himself degenerates. Moses—a principal witness; also Elias, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and a host of others. These tell us who God is and how we can know him as he is, and finally enter into life with him.

Teachers' training class met at four p. m., Supt. J. F. Mintun in charge. The subject treated was, How to teach the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Many excellent thoughts were presented, and it was concluded that much was to be learned upon this topic, and a great desire manifest to become better acquainted. Many questions were asked to be answered on the session for Thursday at four p. m.

Preaching at 7:30 was by R. Etzenhouser. The speaker said that he thought that but few were entirely free from prejudice. He believed in illustrations and used a chart to illustrate through what difficulties the translations of the Bible had been made. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica there are 213 translations, and would it be objectionable for the Latter Day Saints to have one of these? He then presented a chart illustrating the manner in which the original of the Bible was written. He showed that the translators of the Revised Edition acknowledged that scholarship of man unaided by inspiration could not give a perfect translation. He then presented a comparison of the King James', the Revised, and the Inspired Translations, showing quite conclusively the superiority of the Inspired Translation in many places.

A census was taken of the camp and it was found that there were 151 tents, six covered wagons, and 639 people. About thirty-eight were boarding in the town of Logan.

Sept. 26.—At 8: 15 a. m. a very interesting session of Sunday school work was held, there being present over a hundred scholars.

At nine o'clock prayer service there was a large attendance, the Spirit being manifest in testimony, prayer, prophecy, etc. During the session three of the five baptized on Wednesday were confirmed, two of the five having been previously confirmed.

At 10: 45 C. E. Butterworth, the speaker, read Acts 5, and took for the basis of his remarks Luke 3: 15, and "We ought to obey God rather than men."—Acts 5: 29. At the coming of John all Israel were looking for the Messiah, but because he did not come in the way they looked for him they rejected him. They acknowledged that never man spake like this man, that he spake superior to Moses and the prophets, and that he healed their sick, yet they spurned him. He taught that which led to a better life, but it did not agree with their traditions, hence they put him to death. They did similarly with the apostles. It would seem that they taught and did that which it would be thought would have been received, but it did not agree with their tradition, hence they were rejected. The apostles chose to obey God rather than men; so should we. Christ was severely tempted after his baptism, but he evidenced that it was better to obey God even if he would have satisfied his present demands better by disobeying. We should all try to know at all times what God requires, and do it no matter what the result would be. Although Christ could have withstood the mob when they came to take him, yet he submitted to the will of God and suffered death. We should learn to do God's will even though it calls for us to suffer, and we could avoid this suffering by not doing this will. We are preparing to abide in the kingdom of God triumphant.

By doing the will of God we are brought into relationship with Christ. The family of God are one whether they be in heaven or on earth. The family in heaven is God and Christ and the angelic hosts and the family on earth is composed of those who do the will of God. When we develop the Christ character we shall abide with him forever and ever. Our development will continue until we shall know God and Christ as they are. When Christ comes we shall be like him. This likeness is to be attained by purifying ourselves by doing the will of God. We should examine ourselves and see whether we are doing the will of God or following the tradition of the elders. Abraham did what he knew to be the will of God when he went to offer his son Isaac as a sacrifice. The three Hebrew children would not obey man although they were cast into the furnace for not so doing. God delivered them. So did God deliver Daniel from his punishment for obeying God rather than man. It is our duty to stand loyal to God whether it results in life or death, and should try to understand what God desires of us, and then do it.

The speaker referred to the principles of the doctrine of Christ and showed that they should be accepted rather than what may be taught by any. As soon as Paul and Cornelius learned the will of God they obeyed. If we keep the commands of God, God and Christ will in some way manifest themselves unto us. We will be made a partaker of the divine nature as says Peter. The Spirit is to abide in the children of God, and it is by this that God is in us to will and to do of his pleasure. God gives grace sufficient, and makes a way for our escape from every temptation. We know God now by the preached word and the light of the Spirit, but when we stand in his glory we will know him in fullness, and be partakers of eternal life.

At 2: 30 p. m. Joseph Smith was the speaker and took for his text, Matthew 9: 38: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." As the sermon was reported in full and will be published, a synopsis of it is not given here.

A session of teacher's normal training work was held at four p. m. at which time several questions were answered and discussed, prominent among which was, How to teach children to pray. A very profitable session was held.

At 7: 30 M. H. Forscutt after calling attention to Isaiah 40: 9, 10 discoursed as follows: Preaching has been had for ages past called Christianity but not the gospel. God's work is to be done before he comes again. For this to be done God must reveal himself to man. The Scriptures foretell this. It is foretold that an angel is to come bringing the everlasting gospel before the fall of Babylon in Revelation 14. All nations will be drunken with the wine of the wrath of Babylon's fornication. In Isaiah 29 is scriptural confirmation of this idea. The reason of this drunken condition is because your prophets, seers, and rulers do not exist. Darkness exists because no spiritual light was received from heaven.

God will restore his gospel work as an unchangeable, eternal work by an angel. The restoration of the gospel will be the removal of the spiritual darkness and drunkenness. Isaiah 28 shows that God will teach knowledge to the young and that in another tongue, which shows that God is not confined to Hebrew only, and to such he will give line upon line. Isaiah 29 shows that a record is to come forth and also that the Lord will do a marvelous work, and that because men have sought to serve with their lips and their fear of God is taught by men's precepts. The Lord will do this just a very little while before Lebanon becomes fertile again.

About two thousand years ago Christ did a work which was marvelous, but he did not do all of his work, because in the time of Lebanon becoming fertile the deaf will hear and the blind will see. How thankful we should be that God has begun in power, and not be scoffers as the Scriptures predict some will be. Palestine has not always been fertile. Prof. Fowler had visited Palestine when it was not fertile, and again after its fertility. Geo. J. Adams witnessed the return of the former and latter rains, after the death of Joseph Smith. God was to do his work just a little while before this event. An angel was to come to a young man to make known the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

The speaker related a conversation he had had with David Whitmer, one of the witnesses to the Book of Mormon. There were three witnesses of the divinity of the Book of Mormon. God's work has begun. God sends forth his servants and they are accompanied by God's power and those who obey the gospel receive the remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Ghost. The speaker related his conversion to the Latter Day Saints Church, narrating some marvelous experiences he had had in the work. He presented strong proof that this was a marvelous work.

September 27.—At nine a. m. the business meeting of the session was held. Reunion committee reported as follows: Indebtedness $142.33, receipts $91.94, leaving a debt of $50.39; donation during session $22.61, still due $37.78.

Propositions from Logan and Woodbine were read; also letter from T. W. Williams presenting the action of the Council Bluffs reunion in regard to uniting with this reunion, with resolutions passed at the Park Bluffs reunion for this reunion to unite with them next year were read. After quite a lengthy discussion it was decided to hold the next reunion at Woodbine, Iowa, to begin the next to the last Friday in September, 1896, and continue over the second Sunday. David Chambers, chairman, S. B. Kibler, S. C. Diggle, James Donaldson, and Fred Oviatt were chosen as the reunion committee. By motion the Fremont and Pottawattamie districts were invited to unite with this reunion in their meeting of 1896. The Sunday school was by vote granted one afternoon and evening session of the next reunion.

Friday, the 27th.—At 2: 30 p. m., a session of Sunday school work, at which was shown the simplicity of the organization and conducting of schools as governed by the General Sunday School Association. Many comments were expressed favorable to such a practical exercise.

At 7: 30 one of the most instructive and highly literary entertainments was held that has ever been held in the church. This consisted of an address by Superintendent E. A. Blakeslee; a talk by Sr. J. H. Royce, editor of the Sunday school department of the Herald; a violin solo by Sr. Cora Young; a vocal solo by Sr. Grace Cobb; and a recitation by Sr. Ruth L. Cobb.

Saturday, the 28th.—Sunday school morning session at 8: 15, but on account of wind and cool air not a large attendance. Prayer services at nine a. m. Little could be heard on account of the heavy wind.

Preaching service at 10:45 by Bishop E. L. Kelley, from Hebrews 3: 5-19. Moses was faithful in all that pertains to the household of God, he being a type of Christ, a Son over his own house, which house are we. The church in a distinct pattern existed in the days of Moses. Those having charge of the household were faithful, so we must understand that those composing the household must be faithful. Unbelief was the cause of unfaithfulness in the days of Moses and Paul. The people thought, no doubt, that they were faithful. These things are written for our profit; that by seeing wherein others have failed we might take an admonition and try to overcome and thus be prompted to well-doing. Whether we shall be acceptable depends upon our faithfulness. People receive blessings from God in proportion to performance of their duty to God. If the people abide in the doctrine of Christ they shall be blessed. The more complete fulfillment of the duties of man toward God, the greater their blessings. The church has been in Egyptian darkness from 1844 to 1860, since which time we have been following a leader in the wilderness, now almost forty years, and like the children of Israel should be nearly prepared to pass over into a better condition. We cannot obtain this better condition until we are prepared. The gospel is being preached and obeyed in many lands. The burden no doubt upon the mind of the President is how to control the people after they have entered into the pale of the church. God is ready at all times to fulfill his promise, but the reason the great blessings many have anticipated have not been realized is because the people have been derelict. God said to Solomon after the dedication of the temple that if he and the children of Israel should keep the covenant, statutes, and judgments, he would bless and care for them. Unity can only be brought about by obedience to the law. Our peculiarities sometimes cause differences and we think disruption has taken place. The law of God is always the same. Our peculiarities will exist till the Christ-nature is obtained. Moses was faithful as a servant but in some minor matters he was not always right. So it may be with us. Before the people of God perform the law of Christ fully they cannot be fully blessed. We agree that the fundamental principles, all should be kept; but not many years ago some did not believe that the law relating to temporalities was now binding. Now but very few do not believe it is binding, but about three fifths are not making effort to obey it. Do we expect God to give the other and better things he has promised till we obey the law relating to these things? The speaker spoke quite lengthily to show that the Bishopric had been faithful in duties relating to that office, and urged upon the Saints to see if they had been faithful as members of the household. He spoke of the time coming when all should live subject to the same law that governs the sustaining of the families of the ministry. God said as early as 1831 for the people to bring all their tithes and offerings into the storehouse. Other religious bodies have adopted it since, although condemning it as a heresy then. From the fact that time has proven the wisdom of this revelation we should take faith and obey it. The Saints have not complied with the law because of unbelief in the law. You cannot be considered faithful as was Moses in all his house if you have not done your duty because of unbelief. In 1861 God commanded the Saints to obey the temporal law, and we cannot consider that we can get along as well in disobeying God's commands as in obeying. I know these principles are true, and of God. How do the three fifths stand who have not obeyed these things, approved or disapproved? We cannot expect to be worthy of Christ unless we are willing to make all possible sacrifice necessary: for we are expected to love Christ more than father, mother, wife, and children, houses and lands. We cannot expect God to call us to higher and more blessed duties or privileges as long as the majority of the Saints have not made an effort to obey God in every particular. In 1832, on account of the people not complying with the law, the whole church were under condemnation. I am here to ask you to comply with the law, whether it calls for you to make sacrifice to do so or not.

At 2:30 p. m. Elder J. F. McDowell: Diversity of thoughts gives rise to diversity of desire and action. Man is not an automaton, but to him was given the power of thought. Man was exhorted to not be carried about by divers doctrines, but to have his heart established in the present truth. We are charged with being heterodox, while that which is popular is termed orthodox. It is assumed those are orthodox who believe that the Bible is all-sufficient in furnishing all truth for time and eternity. There is not anything in the Bible to sustain such an idea. We claim the restoration of the old gospel in this present dispensation. The Catholic Church claims succession of the church since the days of Christ, but because the church did not remain loyal to the truth, Jesus Christ did not continue with it. The Devil would be and is pleased to see the perversion of truth, but God will not show his approval of it. We cannot measure the truthfulness of that advocated by the manner in which or by whomsoever it may be presented. The simple-hearted are those who are easily deceived, but the simple-minded receive that expressed as the mind of God. We as Latter Day Saints represent the solving of the theological problems in harmony with the principles revealed in God's word, and we do not feel that we are in error for proving the solving of the theological problems by other ministers wrong. Those who evade an investigation of the truth show that they are fearful of results. This church stands upon the truth as broad as Jesus and the apostles taught it, teaching the people to believe the word as it is. Peter had a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy because in his day they had seen fulfilled that prophesied of. We believe the claims of Joseph Smith were true because having obeyed that taught, we have received a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy, because the work introduced by him was prophesied of. If ever a light shone in a dark place it was when the gospel was presented to the world when darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people. We know the work we advocate is true and can be relied on. We have not followed cunningly devised fables, but have received individual testimony by the Holy Spirit of the truthfulness of the gospel. Within the pale of this church is the witness sent down from heaven. Contrast the gospel with anything and everything else and you will find it stands superior to them all. There is no longing of the human soul but what is satisfied by the gospel. Baptismal service was attended to at five p. m., M. H. Forscutt officiating. Teacher's normal training class met in district tent at four p. m.; a very interesting and instructive session; subject, Plans of using blackboard in class and review work.

At 7:30 Joseph Luff; texts Matthew 20: 1-16; John 4: 34-38; Jude 3. This was a lengthy and able effort. It would be impossible to do it justice by a synopsis.

Sunday, the 29th.—Morning prayer service at nine a. m. Eight were confirmed. This was the best social meeting of the reunion.

Preaching at eleven by J. R. Lambert; text, John 14: 6. The more nearly correct our ideas are when we apply divine rules in their examination the plainer they appear. Jesus Christ is the basis of truth. The minister who represents Jesus Christ fully is correct. God and Christ are one in character. When Christ is represented God is represented. When we properly represent the gospel we rightly represent God and Christ. Paul says that other foundation can no man lay than Jesus Christ. Peter says that only in the name of Jesus Christ is there salvation. This truth applies in all ages past, present, and future. This shows that by one plan God designed to save man in all ages of and places in the world. Peter says Christ has become the head of the corner. Those who stumble at the word come into dark and sinful conditions. Paul says that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. Paul was showing the Saints their duties when he made this statement. Jesus Christ was directly connected with the great gospel plan. There is no gospel that will save us without the Christ, neither any Christ without the gospel that will save. Those who preach or receive Jesus Christ must preach or receive this plan. The Scriptures promise salvation to those who believe in Jesus Christ. We must understand what it is to believe. We must not present the Scripture as contradicting itself. The Scriptures say plainly that if we do not obey God we will be cast off. We have as good a right to say one can be saved by obedience without faith as to say one can be saved by faith without obedience. Christ was the author of eternal salvation to those who obey him and when he comes he is to take vengeance upon those who obey not the gospel. Faith includes obedience, and obedience includes faith. Outside of Jesus Christ we are dead in trespasses and sins. When we obey God we pass from death unto life, and that Spirit of life will abide as long as we are obedient. Faith comprehends obedience. One who keeps the sayings of Christ should never see death. Obedience is the result of faith. Jesus said, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Jesus came as a Savior, also as a teacher, hence he taught doctrine. God through Moses spoke of Christ as one who should speak all that he would command him. Whether it is God or one of his ministers who speaks it mattereth not, for they who receive those whom God sends receive him. This shows that a man must be sent of God to speak the words of life. God says that all the words of Jesus Christ must be heard or the people will be destroyed. Christ came into the world to bear witness to the truth. The words of Christ will judge in the last day. Christ spake the whole counsel of God, that man might enjoy God's blessings here and hereafter. Jesus said it is those who "do the will" of God that shall enter the kingdom of heaven. We must not only believe that Christ died on the cross but also believe what he taught. When a man teaches as Jesus taught, as represented in the New Testament, does he not represent Christ? Jesus sent the ministers to teach all things he had commanded them. The baptism of water and Spirit comprehends one complete baptism, spoken of by Paul as "the one baptism." When we preach the laying on of hands for the blessing of children, for ordination, for healing, and for confirmation, are we not truly representing Christ? To represent Christ we must preach what he taught in fullness. Joseph Smith said that the people should obey the primitive faith. He did not complain of what had been previously taught as the gospel. We consider we are in the line of duty when we teach the gospel, and the organization, and when we teach the people to believe in Jesus Christ who has again sent his servants to represent him.

Afternoon preaching service, Elder Columbus Scott speaker; text John 17:20. This was a prayer of the Lord for the disciples especially, but in that prayer he remembered all. Many do not believe that Jesus was the sent of God. To believe is to believe in his coming, his teaching, his atonement, his ascension, and his coming again. This prayer has as yet not been answered. Are God and Christ one in spirit and different in faith? No. God and Christ are one in all their work, and especially in their efforts to convert the world. Men of thought desire to be certain when they start out in any effort. They desire to see evidence of certainty with those who claim to represent Christ. This unity he prayed should exist by believing on the apostles' words. The apostles' words are now what they were then. It is desired that we are to believe in one God, one Christ, one faith, one Spirit. This oneness is the underlying principle of the Christian work, and for it Christ prayed. It is impossible for us to be one in Spirit and divided in doctrine. Every doctrine has its accompanying spirit. Many spirits have gone out into the world. The spirit of disintegration exists among religious bodies. Many religions are because of this considering interdenominational union. The question is how to attain to this condition. Christ prayed that unity in faith might be that the world might believe in Christ. He inspired his servants to teach the same thing. All received the one Spirit. Those who believed on their teaching received the one Spirit. Those who have not the Spirit of Christ are none of his. Christ revealed but one gospel, but one doctrine. His doctrine was his Father's. All who obey that doctrine may know whether it is of God or not. All desire to be in harmony with God, believing in a futurity. It is a part of man to be religious. Those who are not educated to worship God will bow down to an idol in sight. It is more of a miracle to believe that all things exist without an author than to believe in one to whom we must account. Plato asked how we could worship God unless some one tell us how. Christ came and told us how. All who believe on Christ through the apostles' word become one, as God and Christ are one. To convert the world we must present the Christ in our lives, by the unity he taught. Religious division is called Babylon; Babylon is to have a fall. Evidences are now frequent that the fall is taking place. Spiritual death is taking place. We are inviting the religious world to build upon the rock; upon the rock Christ built his church. God added to the church. Christ gave himself for the church. God set in the church certain officials as apostles, prophets, teachers, miracles, etc. The people I represent will make the needed sacrifice to enter such a church. Are you willing to do that? If we all do that, we will enter into that unity which will be a remedy for all religious ills. To have the doctrine we have the Father and the Son. Paul tells us that this doctrine is faith, repentance, baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. Baptism in water is commanded. How can any minister have a good conscience toward God and teach the people to be indifferent to this command? When Jesus comes the dead in Christ will rise immortal, and the earth will be prepared for their abode. The rest of the dead will remain in the house of preparation until the spirit is prepared for the resurrection.

A collection was taken.

At the same hour preaching service was held in the district tent in charge of R. Etzenhouser, R. M. Elvin being the speaker. Both tents did not nearly accommodate the people present on the camp grounds. It was estimated that about six thousand were present.

Preaching at 7:30 by President Joseph Smith; text Acts 2:44, and the question, "Why should I join the church?" I am here to invite mankind to the offers of mercy found in the Scriptures. Unless God had revealed himself man would not have known the divine character of God. Man's service towards God should employ his every faculty. This service will prepare him for the association of angels. God has revealed his will in a way in which man could comprehend. All must pass into judgment to receive for the deeds done in the body. Jesus Christ presented what we call the church and authorized the existence of the officials that should form this church that the message of life might be presented, and into which man might enter to enjoy divine help to fight evil. If no church has divine sanction in doctrine, organization, and principles, we have equal right with all other churches; but if there is a church that has divine sanction, that is the one into which all should go. Man naturally has many powers of evil to attack him, and if he does not receive divine help his warfare with evil will prove a failure. Jesus Christ was tempted in all points like as his brethren. He fought out his battle, coming out a victor. The power or force to aid in overcoming evil is only found in obeying the truth. I did not wait till I was compelled to believe. I preferred to believe that Jesus Christ brought a message and established a church. We must become one of the family of God on earth if we expect to be one of the family of God in heaven. When reading the word "church," it conveys the idea of a collection of individuals in a visible body known as the church. All who have not become members of the church on earth during the various dispensations will be such as those who will be out of the city in the last great day. Mankind must obey God because of their desire so to do, not because of fear. God never intended that mankind should persecute their fellows because they do not believe as they do. God will not judge with respect of persons, neither should we. The invitation of the gospel is to all, whether rich or poor; and when the invitation is received the people press into the church. No one should do that but what we would feel that Christ would assist us in doing. Man should be the same upright being in the darkness as the daylight.

Thus closed one of the best reunions ever held by the church. The preaching was especially elevating, the prayer meetings peaceful, the singing grand, and Sunday school efforts best ever held; the administrations resulting in many being healed. Those on committee on administrations to sick were Brn. R. M. Elvin, D. A. Hutchings, W. A. Smith, and J. W. Wight; others assisting.

Quietness was preserved in the camp by Chief of Police George N. Derry, assisted by ten of the brethren.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

SHOULD YOUR BOY GO TO COLLEGE?

Is a college course the best training for a boy designed for a business career? Upon this important question good judges differ. The editor of Munsey's, believing that those entitled to discuss this question with authority are rather the practical men of action than the theorists of educational science, has collected and presented the views of some of New York's leaders of affairs on this subject. In his introductory remarks, the editor says:—

"It might perhaps be thought that in the trial of such a cause each juror's verdict would depend upon his own personal history; that the college alumni would support the honor of their alma mater by voting for an academic training, while those who stepped directly from the school to the shop or office would advise others to seek business success by the pathway they themselves followed. This is, however, by no means invariably the case. There are university graduates—men who made good use of their time in the class-rooms, and who went on to honorable places in the world—who question, nevertheless, whether those four formative years might not possibly have been spent to still better advantage. And on the other hand many, if not most of those who have gained success without a college course look back upon their early days with a regretful sense of having missed something that would have helped and benefited them all through life; of having entered the arena without a weapon which nothing can entirely replace, even though they win the battle with the arms at their command."

Mayor Strong thinks that while a college education is a good thing to have, it is far from being indispensable to the business man. He says that if he had to choose between two applicants for a position, the one a college-bred man and the other a smart young fellow with only a common school education, he should engage the first, if the post in view would warrant it, and providing the college man displayed an equal capacity for work. If the other applicant was found to be more active, more willing, he would prefer him. Mayor Strong concludes by saying:—

"A college education requires the investment of a small capital, and the expenditure of several years of study. The boy of natural talent, who enters business life when he leaves the public schools, begins to earn money at once; but it does not follow that the college man's time and money have been wasted. His increased broadness of vision, the greater extent of resources at his command, will equip him to contend with the exigencies of life, and to grasp the business problems that will confront him, with a surer hand, a clearer head, and more ready determination than his brother. The latter's advance in his chosen field will be steady, the result of unceasing labor. The college-bred man will gallop gracefully to the front, while the other's gait is slow and plodding, formed in the painful school of experience."

Similar ground is taken by Hon. Roswell P. Flower, who says that if he had a dozen boys he would not send all of them to college, but would carefully select from the number those he judged to be best fitted for higher education, and the rest would have to get along as best they could with elementary knowledge. He had to make his own way thus insufficiently equipped, and while he is quite contented with his fate, he cannot help wishing sometimes that in his youth he had had better opportunity for developing his natural ability. Mr. Flower invites a glance at the careers of some of America's great intellectual leaders of the past who had no college education, such as Clay, Douglas, and Lincoln. He says:—

"I think a college education the greatest boon that can fall to the lot of a boy endowed with a clever and active mind and a wholesome thirst for knowledge. However humble a man's station in life, knowledge will enrich him in the long run, one way or another. At the same time, a university training is not essential to success in business life. Moreover, I should hesitate to advise a parent to send even the brightest boy to college if I was not quite sure that he could withstand the temptations sure to be offered to him there. There is too much luxury about our present day college life. . . . Very few of the business men and politicians of the older generation were college-bred; the majority of those who are leaders in the commerce and industry of to-day, too, have achieved success upon the basis of a common school education; but the desirability of a university course is becoming more and more apparent as the struggle of life sharpens. Nothing will more thoroughly fit a boy for the battle before him than natural talent developed by a college education, and backed up by frugal habits."

One of the most conspicuous disbelievers in the university for the training of a boy for a business life is the well-known banker, Henry Clews, who is reported as saying:—

"Think of a man going into business with three fourths of his brain-cells filled with classical knowledge, dead languages, and high-sounding but unpractical ideas!

"I have been severely criticised for saying that I would not have a college-bred man in my office. Here is my reason: To become a successful merchant, banker, or broker, one must begin young. Most college boys, when ready to enter an office, are over twenty years of age. I have a son at college—a six footer, in his twenty-first year. Can I ask him to undergo the training I deem necessary for every business man? Would he be willing to commence at the foot of the ladder, with boys of sixteen, and on a salary of $150 per year? Why, that youth not only knows more in every branch of knowledge, than all the office boys and clerks in this office; he knows more than his father, too.

“A collegian cannot, or perhaps will not, humble himself sufficiently to learn the rudiments of the business man’s vocation. He rebels against the discipline necessarily imposed upon a subordinate. He has been used to regard himself as a brilliant young gentleman for several years; can you blame him for objecting to sit on the same bench with errand boys? And has he enough practical knowledge to deserve a place behind the desk? In my opinion the average graduate does not even know enough of arithmetic and of caligraphy to earn, upon his arrival in an office, a salary of five dollars a week. My legible hand secured for me the first good position I ever held; the average college graduate writes a fearful scrawl, and is proud of it. I understand that none of our universities employs a teacher of caligraphy. This is a sad defect, of which the collegian does not become aware, as a rule, until it is too late to remedy the evil.

“I have practically tested the problem whether a college education is desirable for a business man. Years ago I employed several college men, one after another; none of them succeeded in benefiting either my business or himself. So I got rid of them. Of the boys who came to me equipped with nothing beyond a common school education, a sound mind, and an ambition to work, dozens are now independent business men, while as many hold responsible positions with large firms.”

A more moderate view is expressed by a member of the famous Seligman fraternity, who says that in his business he prefers men who have received a college education, but does not make employment conditional upon that fact. Although college alumni are comparatively scarce among the business men of the present generation, he believes that the next generation will abound with them, for in every walk of life the necessity of higher education is becoming more and more apparent. He thinks that while a man of sound mind and good habits will come to the front, whether he is college-bred or not, with equal gifts and with the same application the collegian will outstrip him in the race.

The article closes with the views of Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, from which we quote:—

“While the world gives on its material side such examples of success as Commodore Vanderbilt and such instances of wise statesmanship and service to his country as Abraham Lincoln, we must remember that in the affairs of life no comparison can be made with the phenomenally gifted who are endowed by the Almighty from their birth with powers far beyond the equipment of their fellows. With the business man who must be more than his vocation, the artisan larger than his trade, and the farmer more learned than in the traditions of his fathers, it is the trained intellect disciplined by higher education which alone has any certainty of success.

“This is not modern thought, a new-fangled idea. American independence, and the founding of our nation upon constitutional lines, embodying the experience and the lessons of the ages, was the work of the graduates of the colonial colleges. Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, Columbia, and William and Mary, were the architects of the Declaration of Independence, of the Constitution of the United States, of the union of the States, and of the incomparable system of executive, legislative, and judicial independence and interdependence which have survived so successfully a century of extraordinary trial and unprecedented development. Samuel Adams, in his commencement thesis at Harvard, struck the keynote of colonial resistance. John Morin Scott brought from Yale to New York, the lessons which prepared that rich and prosperous colony for the sacrifices of the Rebellion. Alexander Hamilton, a student of Columbia, though only seventeen years of age, educated the popular mind to the necessity of the struggle; while the pen of Jefferson, of William and Mary, wrote that immortal document which lives and will live forever as the most complete charter of liberty.

“The best proof of the value of a college education in all the pursuits of life is to be found in the eminent success of those who have enjoyed it in the higher walks of the professions, of statesmanship, of business.”—The Literary Digest.

THERE IS NO EXCUSE

These days of quick railway and postal service, for not being posted on all the topics of the day—unless, indeed, you are not a subscriber for some stalwart, 365-day-in-the-year paper, like The Salt Lake Daily Tribune. And in fact there is no excuse for not being, because if one feels too poor to spend a dollar a month for the daily, the Semi-Weekly can be had for three months for 75 cents. It contains the condensed and selected matter of the daily, embracing the foreign and local telegraphic, editorial and local, and especially matter pertaining to Utah. There is no pardonable excuse for avoiding an education—and The Tribune is an educator. Everybody admits that. Think of it—three months for 75 cents!

The editor of the Review of Reviews finds several incidents in this fall’s political situation on which to comment with effect in “The Progress of the World” for October; the part played by the liquor question in the New York campaign is very clearly described. The present difficulties of the United States Treasury and the bearings thereof on national politics are discussed. The opening of the Atlanta Exposition and the recent patriotic gatherings at Louisville and Chickamauga, the international yacht racing fiasco, the building of American battle-ships and Lord Wolseley’s appointment as Commander-in-Chief of the British Army, are among the topics included in the month’s survey. The Madagascar campaign, the massacre of missionaries in China, the Armenian question, and progress in South Africa under Cecil Rhodes (whose portrait serves as the frontispiece of this number of the Review) are matters of international interest which also pass under editorial review.

A CORRECTION.

It appears that in speaking upon the voyage of Captain J. F. Burton, in the Evanelia, from San Francisco to Tahiti, last spring, we used a phrase that made a disagreement between the statement of Sr. Emma Burton, and the Captain's, as made to us. Sr. Burton has written the following, which we insert in her behalf, to correct any probable misunderstanding that may have occurred in the affair:—

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

Bro. Joseph:—While reading Bro. Luff's apology this morning, in Herald of September 18, which brought tears to my eyes, and the inward exclamation of "a noble example! Truly the church is 'coming up higher!'" I thereupon resolved even at this late hour to make a statement to you that I have been wanting to make ever since last conference, and set right a mistake that was made in consequence of landmen not understanding "salt-water phraseologies." Before Mr. Burton returned from conference the Ensign came to me—and others—containing the statement made in one of your addresses, that "Captain Burton ran the Evanelia into the harbor of Papeete within twenty minutes of the time he expected to when he left San Francisco." I knew there was a misunderstanding somewhere, for such were not the facts of the case, and felt bad, for there was an opportunity for a reflection to be cast upon either the statement I gave in Autumn Leaves of our being some five days longer than we expected in making the voyage—or that made to you by the Captain himself, but waited until his return, then asked how it happened that such a report got in the Ensign; to which he laughingly replied, "Bro. Joseph asked me what difference there was in the time of my making the land and the time that I had expected to make it, to which I told him that there was no difference at all, and explained how that I had made it just as I expected to; but when I saw the report in the Ensign, I knew that Bro. Joseph must have had reference to the voyage in his questions while I was answering him in reference to making the land." I then understood the situation, and wished him to send you a few words of explanation; but he did not deem it of sufficient importance to require correction, while I think to maintain the accuracy of one's statements is of very great importance. And in this case more than one had asked me how there came to be such a difference between my statement in Autumn Leaves, and that of Bro. Burton, in the time of making the voyage.

And now by way of explanation, I will say, is is one thing to make the land, and quite another thing to make the voyage. On leaving port the captain of any ship, no matter what size, consults his chart upon which his port of destination is located, and the correct distance is given, and therefrom ascertains the course he desires to run, and just when he is far enough clear of the land to put his ship on her proper course, providing he has a fair wind. As soon as she is put on that course he takes the "bearings" of some point of the land he is leaving, sets it down in his "log book," together with the time such bearings were taken, and the distance he was at the given point when they were taken. This is called his "departure" from whence he shapes his course and reckons distance, and if a competent navigator, and his nautical implements are true, he knows just what spot of the ocean he is occupying every hour of both day and night, and if competent in all things pertaining to navigation, he will discover the error if any in his nautical implements and can correct them. And thus knowing the number of miles intervening between him and his port of destination, and the number his ship makes in each twenty-four hours, or each hour if necessary, he knows when he has left them all behind him, or sufficient of them to bring him in sight of the land. But the length of time it will take to leave those miles behind him depends upon whether he has favorable or unfavorable winds. The former is called "making the land" which depends upon the skill of the navigator. The latter, in point of time, is called "making the voyage," and depends largely upon the elements.

A few words from you to the effect that you have lately learned that Bro. Burton had reference to making the land and not the voyage will be sufficient to put us both on record in shipshape again.

Very respectfully,

MRS. J. F. BURTON.

LOWER LAKE, Cal., Sept. 24, 1895.

(Read and approved by J. F. B.)

We did not misunderstand Captain Burton, but may have misstated him, using our own language instead of his.

To us it was quite a complete piece of work to run a small boat from one part of the watery world to another, without missing so small a port as Papeete. We understood the captain to say that his calculations were so nearly accurate that his course did not vary twenty minutes, using the term minutes to mean a portion of a degree, so that he reached the port to which he was sailing with scarcely an appreciable difference from the course intended or the miles sailed over. We did not understand the Captain to refer to the actual days occupied in making the run from port to port.

A MISTAKE.

It is quite a common mistake that many of the Saints are making, together with a great many others, that of crowding into the cities without suitable preparation to make a living. It is true that there is usually more work to be had in cities than in the country, or in small towns; but rents are usually higher, and suitable tenements harder to get. The cost of living is not higher as a rule, but it is the case with most American families that they live up to, and too many times beyond their means; and it is easier to do this in a city than in a country place, the styles and tastes in the latter being simpler and less extravagant. Work at present is not readily secured anywhere, plenty as it seems; and the man who has a family to support has need to be sure of employment. Hence when removing to a city he should be quite certain that he had labor in sight, if a laboring man; or a fair business prospect in view, if a business man, or one desiring to enter into business.

A country life offers the surest living, industry and careful prudence joining hands with pushing enterprise to keep things moving. Reverses may and do happen in country as well as in city life; and one is wise to be fortified against them. The Saints should be careful in business affairs, and avoid becoming dependent upon the resources of others, in settling in new localities; it is wrong in principle and disastrous in results, too frequently. Is a hint to the wise sufficient? "Let all things be prepared before you," is the direction given by revelation to the church; and experience has taught that to heed it was to be wise, to disregard it was to be unwise.

TIMELY ADVICE.

WE bespeak a careful reading for the letters of Brn. W. W. Blair and J. R. Lambert, on the subject of pulpit errors.

These brethren are in the foremost rank as public speakers; and are not only anxious themselves to be free from hurtful mannerisms in the pulpit, but are solicitous that other representative ministers shall also be free from criticism in this regard. Their counsel is good; and is the result of study and observation during years of public ministrations. No one has just reason to feel hurt, or injured by these letters, and this notice of them.

Not long since we listened to a sermon by a promising young elder; in the course of which there occurred numerous repetitions of a few pet phrases, that in reality could mean but little after the first expression of them; but being repeated, burdened the statement and argument seriously, tired the ear, and marred the effect which the sermon as a whole would have had without them.

Speech filled with useless repetitions is as much short of what it should be in its time and importance as is prayer. The speaker who permits himself to acquire the habit of burdening his efforts with any sort of surplus expressions, does himself an injury with the better class of hearers; and should set about correcting the habit.

Bro. Blair has pointed out some of those things in his own speech, of which some one has reminded him. It can be followed up by any thinking man, anxious and willing to "study to show himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," to the examination of his own methods, and the discovery of the faults there may be in them, thus enabling him to amend.

We give below a list of expressions, that after being once used by a speaker become useless and burdensome by repetition. "In the hearts of the children of men." "I ask you to think thoughtfully and seriously on the subject;" "I ask you the question;" "We ask you seriously to consider the question." These and many others do not help the argument; but sometimes do injustice to the sincerity of the audience, for the reason that they imply that the hearers are not properly taking heed of what the preacher is saying.

Bro. Lambert's words of caution should be emphasized in the mind of every reader. Statement is neither fact nor argument, and can be at most only basis for argument. The rule of logic is so made that if the basis is faulty or false, then the argument must be of the same nature. The man who assumes anything to be a fact, for which he lacks the evidence, is liable to have his fabric of argument tumbled to pieces about his ears by one who being better informed on the point stated, may choose to attack the statement; the statement, if disproved takes the argument with it, no matter how carefully well builded the latter may appear to be.

"Be sure of your facts," is a legal axiom that preachers will do well to heed. Make no statement for which you have not some evidence satisfactory to yourself, is another good rule.

All these are but hints to the brethren in the field, for whom we are solicitous that there shall be no just cause of offense found in the manner of their presentation of the truth intrusted to us as ministers for Christ. Let us profit by what Brn. Blair and Lambert have presented.

IS IT IMPORTANT?

IN the political contest now going on in Utah, some importance seems to be attached by some on both sides of the controversy to the political preferences of Joseph Smith, the Martyr. The following clipped from a late Salt Lake paper is unique if not conclusive as to what Joseph Smith was in the politics of the time when he was living. However, we see no grave importance to be attached to the question whether he was Whig or Democrat, then; or would be Democrat, or Republican, now; which is a matter purely speculative. The people should form their conclusions on which of the many sided questions of the day they will array themselves from a consideration of the merits of the questions themselves, the men who favor this or that being a matter of secondary importance, weighing much or little, according to the opportunity they have had to become acquainted with the issues. However, here is the story:—

The Salt Lake Herald, in a lengthy communication, tries to prove the Prophet Joseph Smith, a good old Whig, was a Democrat. The Salt Lake Tribune disposes of the whole discussion, by relating an incident in a campaign two years ago. Ben E. Rich, it says, was answering in a little speech somewhere in Northern Utah the statements made by a Democratic speaker the week previous, that the original Mormons were all Democrats, and he called attention to the fact that John Henry Smith was a pretty good Republican; that Joseph A. Smith was a pretty good Republican; that Daniel H. Wells in his life-time was a pretty good Republican, when he was interrupted by some one in the audience crying out: "How about Joseph Smith? He was no Republican." And then Ben looked down and slowly said: "I guess that is so, but he might have been if the Democrats had not killed him about eleven years before the organization of the Republican party."

BACK VOLUMES OF AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE Herald Office has back volumes of Autumn Leaves for the years 1891, '92, '93, and '94 which are offered, bound complete in various styles of binding, in prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50, according to binding.

Volumes of 1891, '92, and '93, unbound, are offered at 50 cents. All volumes offered at these prices will be sent postpaid.

Address orders to the Business Manager.

Two embezzling Chicago bank tellers whose shortages were made good by bondsmen are being prosecuted by the United States Government through its District Attorney, under a statute which provides for imprisonment for such misdemeanor. That is evidently right; for the buying-off process by which a criminal act can be condoned or let pass for a money consideration is making the way plain to wrongdoing and the evasion of its consequences to men who have sufficient financial backing to injure or wreck institutions in which the interests of hundreds or thousands of the people and the general interests of communities are involved. Such practices and similar ones, unrebuked, and daringly persisted in, have made possible and led up to much of the financial wrecks of the times and paved the way for unscrupulous men to gain control of syndicates and combinations whose end justifies the means in money-getting. A later report of other Chicago defalcations shows that a Bankers' Association or Surety Company has joined with the government in hunting down the dishonest bank employee. The policy, "Let no guilty man escape," will prove wholesome, and salutary. Such efforts to protect the business world and general communities from rogues are among the hopeful signs of the times. Let the good work go on until the "truce-breaker" and the "traitor" becomes a thing of the past—if possible. Both restitution for the wrong done and sincere reformation of character and confession and subsequent uprightness are essential to the welfare of society. Only by such being insisted upon and had can evils be corrected and social conditions be as they should be.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Will the Holy Ghost, in the one who ordains such a one, lead him to ordain to another office than the one the branch has voted the member to?

Ans.—Who can answer this question? As it is given the field is too wide; no one being able to decide beforehand what the conditions of different cases might be. We think, however, that should such a thing occur, the conclusion should be that the Spirit knew best what the one ordained was qualified for.

OUR brethren, interested in tent work during the summer and in all that may prove useful in prosecuting the work at other seasons, may read with interest the item that follows, which we take from a recent Chicago paper.

The Disciples of Christ have built a little portable tabernacle, which is located at Lincoln Avenue and Halsted Street, in which will be held revivals. It will be moved from place to place about the city. It was to have been dedicated yesterday, but was not completed and the ceremony was deferred for a week.

AS AN indication of the growing tendency to more thorough and scientific study of agriculture and general farm life we note that the Farmers' National Congress will hold a Pan-American Agricultural Parliament at its fifteenth session to be held October 10-16 at the Atlanta Exposition. Prominent representatives and regular delegates from South and Central America and Mexico and from the British American Provinces, will be present. Among the topics to be discussed are the following: "The international character of modern agriculture;" "Agriculture and education;" "The weather and crop service;" "The conservatism of the farmer element the safety of the republic;" "The sunshine and shadow of farm life;" "The extension of dairy farming in the South;" "Farmers' wives, their needs;" "Recreation for farmers' wives;" "Irrigation;" "Paying farms and happy homes;" etc., etc. Both men and women will participate in the discussions.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

AT the Triennial General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, now being held at Minneapolis, Minnesota, many important matters are being discussed by the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies, the two legislative branches of the church. The constitution of the church is being revised, the revision involving discussions of change of name of the church, the leading presiding authority, etc. The names, "Holy Catholic Church" and "The American Church," have been suggested, but no change decided upon. The House of Bishops, after discussing the present rule which places the senior ordained bishop at the head, proceeded to provide that the bishops of each Province select one of their number as "Archbishop," all to be presided over by a "Primate,"—the head of the church. To these conclusions the House of Deputies has not yet assented. Many important questions, such as "apostolic succession," and the attitude toward the Roman Catholic Church, have been brought up in the discussion.

The publication of such matters in the daily press doubtless informs the people, to some extent, concerning the respective claims of the various churches, gives a better understanding of the general religious questions and trend of the theology of the times, and helps to prepare the way for the presentation of the latter-day dispensation of the truth. We like to see these questions opened to public inspection—our own claims as well. The truth is brought to light and that which is erroneous made manifest by investigation. The spirit of the times is at work, by the blessing of God, with a view to bring all systems to the front, out into the open light of open critical examination. By that means the wellbeing, the safety of the people is conserved. It is the merit of a question or principle that should and must decide in its favor, not what organization or what person has advocated or advocates it.

THE El Dorado Springs Sun of the 3d inst., adds to its good words, already given our readers, the following concerning the close of the late Southwestern Missouri reunion:—

On the whole meeting has been a grand success—highly pleasing to the participants and beneficial to the church. The closing exercises will take place on Sunday next when the brothers and sisters will depart to their respective homes renewed in energy and strength and better equipped to do battle in the cause they love. No more civil, high-minded, or worthy people ever congregated in this city, and if the cause they espouse so warmly is as pure as their lives seem to be—it is a good cause to live by and die by. The Sun bade them welcome when they came; it will salute them with a hearty, respectful, and earnest "good speed," as they depart.

WE have published the opinion of Dr. Coues, of the Smithsonian Institute if we remember aright, who investigated Theosophy and pronounced it unworthy of attention of anyone. We give the estimate of another member in the extract that follows:—

London, Oct. 3.—Herbert Burrows has written a letter announcing that he has left the Theosophist society owing to recent disclosures which have convinced him that deception in the society has been rampant for years by both Messrs. Olcott and Sinnett. He says he believes that Mme. Blavatsky was particularly fraudulent.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. COLUMBUS SCOTT writing from Rhodes, Iowa, October 5:—

Have preached here four times this week in the Opera House. Begin meetings tonight for over Sunday in old district tent. Some investigating and favorable. Go next week to Radcliff (D. V.), at request of Bro. Oden Jacobs.

C. J. Hunt, Deloit, Iowa, October 7:—

It is just possible that our good Bro. McDowell will be called upon to meet Braden in debate at Pocahontas Center in the Court-house sometime this month. Braden is to begin debate with a Restitutionist (Adventist) at Whitten, Iowa, to-day.

Bro. E. N. Beach, writing from Flora Vista, New Mexico, the 29th ult., says:—

Being deprived of a minister to proclaim the gospel, the Herald, beyond explanation, would be wonderfully missed. After twenty years' perusal of your pages, which have been my main comforter during all these long years, it would be more than a burden to be deprived of its visits. I have been struggling many years to have the gospel established here, but have met with disappointments and discouragements on every hand. There are a few members here and several who are anxiously waiting for a good, devoted minister to preside and cheer our sad and hungry souls. Some have suggested that a good defender of the cause, who would make friends and devote Sabbaths, if no more, to devotion and defense of the gospel would be duly assisted with necessaries of life were he to settle among us.

Bro. W. A. Bennett, Bryson, Texas, September 29:—

Bro. A. J. Moore was here the fourth Sunday in last month and preached two excellent sermons. He promised to return the last of October. Everybody is anxious to hear him and I do hope he will come. I would be so proud if Bro. Montague would come to see us; I think his health would improve. Cotton crops are very short this season in this country but corn is excellent.

Bro. C. H. Porter, Germantown, Nebraska, October 5:—

Commenced services at this place last night at the Methodist church. This is a new opening. Prospect seems favorable; cannot tell what may develop. Good interest last night, and we confidently expect a larger attendance to-night.

Mrs. L. G. Stingley, Eustis, Frontier County, Nebraska, the 3d inst.:—

When can we have another preacher of the Latter Day Saints? We had one last winter, Mr. Shute, who died in Oklahoma. He preached five sermons near us, but the rest of the time was so far away we could not attend. Many of the people around Eustis never heard the preaching, didn't know there was such a church. A good preacher would have a welcome here now.

Bro. John Smith, New Bedford, Massachusetts, October 8:—

The work still moves in Fall River; two more were baptized last Sabbath.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. G. T. GRIFFITHS sends us a copy of the Yorkshire, England, Post, of September 17, containing an article in criticism of the claims of Dr. Le Plongeon to discoveries in America. We have published a reference to Dr. Le Plongeon's article which appeared in a late issue of the Review of Reviews.

A clipping from a Ripley County, Indiana, paper—name and date not given—sent us by Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., makes correction of false statements concerning our people, sent out by sensational newspaper correspondents, and publishes Bro. Scott's statements concerning our people and their faith. Our brethren are doing much in the newspapers to properly inform the public of the faith of the church.

Three clippings from the Rochdale, England, Observer, one over a half column in length, describe the efforts of Bro. John Smith, referred to in his letter in this issue. Bro. Smith has been preaching on the town hall square, persisting in the face of pronounced opposition. He had succeeded in informing many of the moral status of the church and secured the good will of the people, who, with the editor of the Observer, have spoken out strongly against the persecutions of Bro. S. and the efforts to deny him the right of free speech. Success to all who stand by the right.

Sr. Josie Irwin, of Rushville, Illinois, desires the prayers of the Saints for recovery from affliction.

Bro. Henry C. Smith and wife, who have been doing missionary labor in the South since General Conference, returned to Lamoni on the 9th inst.

We learn from the Advent and Sabbath Advocate, of October 8, published at Stanberry, Missouri, that Bro. J. C. Clapp is to meet Elder R. H. Sherrill in discussion at Heppner, Oregon, in November. The rest day, the kingdom of God, and the conscious state of the dead, are the questions at issue.

The editor had the opportunity to shake the hand of the Hon. Senator W. B. Allison, the senior United States senator from Iowa, on Thursday, September 10, as he was passing Lamoni to Mt. Ayr, in Ringgold County, where he was to speak. The senator is a Republican, and was to open the campaign on that side of the political contest at Mt. Ayr. We were pleased to meet the Hon. Senator, not because he was a Republican, but because of the kindly attention and aid he gave to Elder Z. H. Gurley and the editor, in 1882 in the securing an interview with Hon. F. Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State, upon the matter of a protest by the church against the possible action of the letter to foreign countries, of Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, whom Mr. Frelinghuysen succeeded in office, in regard to the immigration of Mormons to America. Senator Allison was very friendly and kind on that occasion, and we were pleased in meeting him to note that he also remembered the visit we made him at the Capital City, that year.

By letter from Bro. G. H. Hulmes we learn that the late conference of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district was largely attended and a very good one; Brn. Kelley, Garrett, Hulmes, and others present.

Letters from Sr. Belle Crippen, Cherokee, Iowa, and Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California. The former writes hopefully and in earnest spirit. The latter reports the local work moving nicely.

Bro. Fred A. Smith departed for Omaha, Nebraska, on the 8th inst.

San Francisco advices, of the 10th, state that the city of La Paz, Mexico, the capital of Lower California, has been destroyed by a hurricane. The storm was followed by a tidal wave, the waters in the bay rising to an unprecedented height, invading that portion of the city fronting on the bay and carrying out to sea men, animals, and debris of wrecked buildings as the tide subsided. Confirmation of the report has not yet been received. La Paz had a population of 3,000.

THE REARING OF CHILDREN.

VOLTARIE said, "Give me the first five years of a child's life, and I will make it a saint or devil." Another great authority has said that the first five years of life are more important than all that come after, for therein the child learns a greater number of new things than in all the rest of its life. Then, dear wives and mothers, what school is more important than home? And since all women are liable to become mothers, should they not all be educated and prepared to do a good work for their children during the years when they have almost sole charge of them?

It is a usual remark, fully believed, that woman has little need of scientific education, unless she becomes a teacher. It is charged that she forgets her grammar, makes no use of mathematics, never analyzes a flower, and a few years after marriage forgets all she ever knew about anatomy and physiology. This may be all true, but "pity 'tis, 'tis true." Should not our prospective wives and mothers be taught to gather up science and wisdom for the express purpose of making them useful in the highest and holiest relationship of their future life? We believe this is the work of the Daughters of Zion, but to do it the ones that are in control of the work must be in touch with the people, full of love and sympathy, and have the power to slowly draw humanity up to a higher standard.

Any person with moderate perceptive faculty will readily see that periodicals of all kinds and novels fall around the young lives like autumn leaves. They treat of the mystery of love, its raptures and pains, but rarely lead them beyond the matrimonial altar into the home. In an experience of over forty years I do not remember of hearing any class of girls exhorted to fit themselves for the work of motherhood. To be good housekeepers, good cooks, devoted wives, economical, self-sacrificing, and patient, all these are enjoined upon them, that the love of the husband may be secured, and that he, the head of the household, may be made happy. Of such teachings there are enough and to spare. But how can a woman be all this and nothing more?

But, says one, what use has a woman of home duties for chemistry? Rightly understood it may be made subservient to her needs almost every hour in the day, if she "looketh well to her own household and giveth them meat in due season." How many of us mothers could answer chemically if asked by an earnest young daughter, "Mamma, why do you put yeast in your bread?" Our answer would almost surely be, "To make it light." But if instead of this answer a full reply could be given in a short motherly talk without the use of scientific names, the rudiments of science will be learned almost unconsciously, for they are simple truths, and the child's mind is easily impressed, and rarely loses what is early learned from a mother's lips.

Mothers, if they were well balanced and understood physiology, would never compress the waists of their children. If she understood the laws of health she would never tamper with the health, comfort, and morals of her dear ones by feeding them highly seasoned food.

We are told that children should not be taught too much, that there is danger of cultivating the brain at the expense of the muscles, which is doubtless true, if they are crowded with tasks to learn. Would it not be better when we teach them incidentally that the facts should be truths instead of fables? Would it be crowding the little brains too much to have them learn a physiology rhyme, telling them the rise of their tiny pink toes while putting them to sleep instead of the old story,

This pig went to meeting;
This one staid at home;
This one stole papa's corn;
This one wouldn't come;
The little one cried,

"Quee, quee, quee, can't get over the bars?"

After my marriage I moved onto a farm on the frontier of the West and soon lost all knowledge of studies, having no time to keep them up, owing to the abundance of work on the farm. But I was soon made aware of the fact that children were inveterate seekers after knowledge, not satisfied with facts, but asking causes and effects. One beautiful spring morning two of my children came to me in the midst of my work and showed me some stones, asking me questions of how they were made, etc. Busy with my Saturday pies I answered hurriedly, "I don't know." They went away, the happy, inquiring look giving place to one of disappointment.

Going out to the barn soon after I heard one say, "Mother don't know much, does she? I used to think she knew almost everything. Now I think she don't know much of anything, for when I ask her she only says, 'I don't know.'"

O, dear friends, did you ever feel a shock as of a thunderbolt, and see revealed by the lightning's glare the danger surrounding you? My precious children scarce beyond their babyhood, who had had the fullest confidence in Mother, were already learning that she was not equal to their needs, they had asked me for bread and I had given them a stone. What had I to give them? Was it enough that I could satisfy their stomachs and make their little bodies comfortable? Must strangers guide, govern, and direct the immortal souls and perhaps give tone and character to all their lives? Had I any assurance that the mind which could answer to their curiosity might not gain power over them and lead them into by and forbidden paths, out of which Mother's love could not draw them, even though it led down to destruction?

Such were the thoughts that came upon me until my spirit was almost crushed within me. I then and there made up my mind to store away in my brain useful information for the loved ones; and since that time have tried to keep the confidence of my children. Have searched for means of improvement, by reading the writings of wise and learned men and women, newspapers of thought and fact, and last but not least, the word of God.

Each one who reads this article may some day have such a school, more or less in number, and I do ask you if you love dress or novels to spend less time upon them. To those that work, do strive to spend a few moments each day on solid reading. Ways and means will come, if you seek them, for immense improvement. Your daily experience is full of truth if you will give it heed.

O, young wives and mothers, you who must be the mothers of coming men, you who must be in part the agent through whom God brings "life and immortality to light" among human beings, remember that your children will not be dolls to be dressed and clothed as things of a day, an hour, or a year; but beings to exist while God himself exists, and if we believe souls retain their identity in the hereafter, then will each and every one bear through the endless ages of eternity the impress of the hand that rocked the cradle.

"Gather then, gems of truth wherever to be found. Wreath them in the golden setting of a mother's love, into chains that shall link your darlings to the 'All Father' of the universe, the Author of all good and all true. Thus held by the good, the true, the beautiful, they will remain pure and," "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

ANON.

"FATHER, TAKE MY HAND."

The way is dark, my Father! Cloud on cloud
Is gathering thickly o'er my head, and loud
The thunders roar above me. See, I stand
Like one bewildered! Father, take my hand,
And through the gloom
Lead safely home
Thy child!

The day goes fast, my Father, and the night
Is dawning darkly down. My faithless sight
Sees ghostly visions. Fears, a spectral band, Encompass me. O Father! take my hand,
And from the night
Lead up to light
Thy child!

The way is long, my Father! and my soul
Longs for the rest and quiet of the goal;
While yet I journey through this weary land, Keep me from wandering. Father, take my hand:
Quickly and straight
Lead to heaven's gate
Thy child.

The way is rough, my Father! Many a thorn
Has pierced me; and my weary feet, all torn
And bleeding, mark the way. Yet thy command Bids me press forward. Father, take my hand;
Then, safe and blest,
Lead up to rest
Thy child!

The throng is great, my Father. Many a doubt
And fear and danger compass me about;
And foes oppress me sore. I cannot stand
Or go alone. O Father! take my hand,
And through the throng
Lead safe along
Thy child!

The cross is heavy, Father! I have borne
It long, and still do bear it. Let my worn
And fainting spirit rise to that blest land Where crowns are given. Father, take my hand:
And reaching down
Lead to the crown
Thy child.—Henry N. Cobb.

Thursday, Oct. 17.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—1 John 3:16-18.

Thursday, Oct. 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—2 Peter 3:9-12.

Thursday, Oct. 31.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 62:8-12.

Letter Department.

LONDON, England, September 26.

Editors Herald:—Let me freely plead guilty, brethren and sisters, to the sin of selfishness in perusing with profitable interest and pleasurable instruction, your kindly effusions from time to time, from week to week, and offering nothing of my own in return. The philosophy of natural history and biology teaches us that throughout all the vast eternal regions of nature there is not one plant or creature, even to the tiniest microscopical animalcule, that receives, but does not in return contribute of its own store, in one form or another, to the general good; and shall man alone of all created beings, prove himself so insensible to Paternal rule and divine government, as to continue expecting, like the horseleech's daughters of Proverbs, to receive and receive but give nothing in return? None of us are perhaps in the strictest sense of the term "hardshell Baptists," but are we not, alas, too prone to retire and remain within our spiritual "shell" till perhaps our little theological castle is so ruthlessly and remorselessly invaded from without that we are perforce compelled to come out and offer battle to the invader?

Believe me, dear brethren, your affectionate interest and gentlemanly readiness to aid in our building project in London has evoked, and will ever continue to do so, our deepest gratitude and our most profound appreciation.

I trust I am not "letting the cat out of the bag" when I say that our London branch is about to offer a kind and cordial invitation to Bro. Stephen Woods (through whose timely and munificent loan the structure has been now almost entirely reared) to be present at the opening services, of which due notice will be given to your readers.

The structure is not yet completed, but after a good many inexplicable delays, it is now approaching rapidly in that direction. The building is situated in Bowcommon Lane, near Burdett Road, in Limehouse district, London East. Any visiting brethren or sisters who may like to "see London," as well as the new building, are hereby most warmly and cordially invited. It is opposite a large red brick building of the Ionian order of architecture, belonging to the Roman Catholics; and although not in a "corner," as regards its topographical position and situation, it is certainly in a very "warm corner" indeed, to make use of an expression somewhat common in the vernacular.

What with the aforesaid Romanists exactly opposite, the Plymouth Brethren round the corner, the Gospel Mission (so-called) down the adjacent turning, and the Church of England a little further on, Elder T. Bradshaw computes that we shall be in the vortex of an ecclesiastical maelstrom consisting of about seven different divisions of Christendom. We may well exclaim, in the language of a wise but somewhat cynical man, "Save me from my friends, especially my religious friends." Upon being interrogated upon preferring so strange and so very unusual a request, he replied: "My friends have done me more harm in five months than my enemies could possibly have achieved in ten years."

We have been informed by the prophetic Spirit that "perilous times of grievous persecution" would ensue upon our entrance in and occupation of the new building, though these are not the exact words of a prophecy delivered by Elder William Kendrick several months ago, but it went on to say that "some would, even among our number, be trampled to death by wicked men, and should lay down our lives for his word, and seal the testimony with our blood; but that such were to "fear not," but greatly rejoice! for they should be "lifted up at the last day; and exceeding great should be their reward."

To me, beloved brethren, there is nothing startling or disquieting in this prediction, but on the other hand, it is in full harmony with the history of past ages, and the distinct and definite statements of Holy Writ: "For the time shall come when he that killeth you shall think that he doeth God service," said the Holy One of Israel, and since some of us at least, must die, what more blessed and comforting than to yield up our unworthy lives (if he so ordain) in the faith and service of him who not only gave up his own spotless life for us, but in so doing, gave us "life and breath, and all things," even joy eternal in the heavens. No! we will not and cannot deny our testimony that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God, and that the Holy and soul-inspiring Book of Mormon is a miraculous translation of an ancient record, pure in its doctrines, sublime in its morals, and "terrible as an army with banners," against not only polygamy, but every form of moral and social departure from the living God, the moral Governor of the universe. If, too, the archenemy has "come again" in "great wrath," knowing that his time is short and his kingdom and dominion almost at an end, what more rational and reasonable (judging from antecedent history at least) than that finding he cannot stop the testimony of God's "poor and afflicted people," he should seek, and eventually accomplish, their physical destruction? Indeed, I have oftentimes been struck with the solemn and emphatic statement in the Book of Revelation where it says that "power was given unto the beast to make war" upon "the saints" "and to overcome them," and to "wear out" "the saints of the Most High." May we have grace, dear brethren and sisters, to cling closer and closer to the Mighty One, who is "able to keep us from falling and to present us faultless before the presence of his Father with exceeding joy."

Our missionaries, Brn. James Caffall and G. T. Griffiths, are still in the northern portions of this land, and are about their Master's business. May he be pleased most abundantly to own and prosper their labors and works, my brethren, is the earnest petition of,
Yours in bonds,

FREDERICK TUBB.

VALE'S MILLS, Ohio, Sept. 28.

Editors Herald:—I was at our county seat, McArthur, Ohio, not long since; the place where Bro. Etzenhouser and Bro. H. E. Moler held forth in the district tent recently, and the present home of Rev. Taylor, who is to debate with Bro. Etzenhouser in the near future. While passing shops and stores I could hear people discussing Etzenhouser and, to them, his new doctrine; and where I staid over night the gentleman and his lady were very much worked up over the new doctrine and said it was true and that they could not deny it, but were not ready to obey. They with others said it was no use for Rev. Taylor to undertake to debate with Bro. Etzenhouser, for he would be beaten at every turn; for Etzenhouser had plenty of doctrine and good logic and reason, and Taylor had none. I heard him speak at a soldiers' reunion and am thinking much.

Yours for truth,

BARRETT ALLEN.

PALMETTO, Mo., Sept. 30.

Editors Herald:—I began a meeting here on Sunday the 22d inst.; preached at morning, also each evening through last week until Thursday, with good liberty and attention, though the audiences have been small, until last night, when I distributed some tracts among them which I brought from our reunion at Mount Grove. Bro. C. J. Spurlock came in on Friday and preached in the evening, also on Saturday evening; and last evening Bro. Shelby Cairo, of Ozark arrived. He also spoke Sunday morning. We will perhaps continue until October 6, when we expect to begin a meeting about five miles west of Palmetto, at Dorren's chapel, a union churchhouse.

This is the place where I replied to the Campbellite preacher, Parson Mills, who had been prating for some time about the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith, trying as he said, to protect not only his own wife and daughters, but those in his community. I had splendid liberty in my reply and had many warm shakes of their hands after the close, with pressing invitations from several heads of families to come back, saying they wanted to hear more of this gospel. The committee told me that whenever I found time to come and hold a meeting to let them know and they would see that I got the house.

I have just been informed that the house is ready for us to begin October 7 and occupy for two weeks. Many are anxious about this meeting and we expect to have a good time. Will give you the main items of interest as matters develop. We hope the Lord will bless the meetings for good.

J. P. BENSON.

WIRT, Ind., Oct. 5.

Editors Herald:—At my last communication I was to commence meeting in the United Brethren church at Correct. People were anxious to hear our claims, the weather was fair, and the people availed themselves of the privilege to come and hear for themselves, which I was truly glad to see; and the most interesting of all was to see them follow me to note my quotations. I noticed as high as six reporters taking items when I preached on the difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church, and you can just imagine, friendly editor, I was careful to give facts. I never was blessed to such an extent in my life as in defending our claims against polygamy. To God be all the honor.

At the close of my discourse an old Campbellite preacher asked permission to say a few words, which was granted, and before a large congregation he confessed he never had heard such an able discourse in his life; and to my surprise, when I asked him to dismiss the congregation, he thanked God that the speaker had enjoyed his Spirit—the Comforter. We had a splendid meeting and left many investigating.

I am now at home looking after home interests. I hope the time will soon come when I can devote all my time in defense of this great latter-day work.

M. R. SCOTT, JR.

MILNROW, England, Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—I send you some cuttings, all from the Rochdale Observer. I have had to work extremely hard in consequence of this man and others who opposed; the hardest task of my life. Oftentimes when leaving the square I have been nearly exhausted. On one occasion I had to cry; I did not know whether I should be able to walk home or not. I prayed for help and got it; was a great deal better than when I started.

I have been as much as nine hours in two meetings, asking questions from all sides. The man referred to when I first denied we had anything in common with regard to polygamy said he would be satisfied if he should see it in black and white. I gave him an epitome, and he went on the square as soon as he could and began to attack us. I replied; then he wanted to stop me, but the people would not hear him. That was in the spring. Then and since he has openly advised the people to use physical force to take me off the square. This man is paid three pounds a week and expenses, I think, so he says, to collect for the Baptist Tract Society.

I think the leaven is working. I have lent the Book of Mormon and the Voice of Warning. I have loaned "Presidency and Priesthood" to a woman who is looking for the truth, and another will shortly be baptized. Brn. Joseph Dewsnap, Senior and Junior, were in Rochdale last Sunday. The senior spoke, and as I was going home from Manchester from an appointment and in the train I heard his effort highly spoken of. A man, a traveling man, asked me where I was last night. I replied, "In Manchester." He replied, "I never heard an abler speech in my life." He seemed very agreeably surprised. I shall continue my effort to spread the work, asking your prayers. Your brother,

JOHN SMITH.

LUCAS, Iowa, Oct. 7.

Editors Herald:—We are at present very pleasantly located on the farm of a Mr. Kent, west of Lucas. We arrived here one week ago, and held our first meeting here last Tuesday night. The brethren—Snively and Elvin—have spoken—one of them—each evening since coming here, and yesterday (Sunday) we held three services. Audiences during the week have ranged in number from twenty to fifty. Sunday began rainy and our audience did not number more than twenty or twenty-five in the forenoon, but the weather turned fine, and there were probably sixty or seventy at the afternoon service, and in the evening the tent was filled. Through the kindness of Mrs. Kent we were permitted to have an organ at the tent, at the last two services. I think the word spoken was with the help of the Spirit, and that all present were interested, if not pleased.

I think that during our stay at Norwood the three weeks previous to coming here, much good was accomplished, and hope and pray that we may not be without good results in this place. Brn. Snively and Elvin are both suffering somewhat from colds. I am in good health as usual.

Your brother,

A. M. CHASE.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 3.

Editors Herald:—Having made the tour of many of the principal branches of California since the last days of June last, I think it proper to report outlines of church work and prospects for the future of church interests as they look to me.

Fair progress is being made in many places in increasing numbers by baptism, and the outlook is good for a much higher ratio of increase if strict attention is paid to the revelation of April 15, 1894, where it says:—

"The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the work into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past."—D. C. 122: 7.

The above item of the Lord's will as to missionary work should not be ignored, nor neglected, by any to whom it refers, for it is in strict harmony with the word of God going before on that matter, and is in exact keeping with the demands of the missionary interests of the church.

It is but just to say that unity among both ministry and membership in respect to doctrine and church government prevails in a large degree and is on the increase in the Spirit of love and Christlike forbearance. Paul said to the former day Saints:—

"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."—1 Cor. 1: 10.

The same teacher further said:—

"Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple."—Rom. 16: 17, 18.

When the foregoing instructions are fully heeded, in letter and in spirit, the Lord will work with his ministry and his Saints, also with those not yet in the fold of Christ, with greater measures of power and assurance than hitherto, and the increase in numbers and in goodly influence will be most gratifying and edifying.

When the ministry and the Saints kindly criticise the real or seeming errors and follies and shortcomings of each other in the love of Christ and for the love of souls and the success of the right, and do so personally, if possible, and be quite as willing to take as to give, excellent fruits will be seen and the cords of affection will be strengthened. But all should be very careful when looking after the "mote," whether seen, or surmised. It was the good fortune of the writer to be called in question as to matter and manner when in Southern California in July last in the following style, all of which was accepted as "an excellent oil,"—

"Kind friend; shew is pronounced 'show'; chasm is pronounced 'kasm'; idea is pronounced 'idea'—not 'idee'; sword is pronounced 'soard'; threw is not termed 'throwed.' You are an excellent speaker and there are very many who are spell-bound under the sound of your voice; but the above mistakes are noticeable, therefore pardon the mention of them from one who wishes you God-speed. Nearly all your language is fine. A friend."

The writer felt indebted to the friendly critic, as when Brother Joseph once remarked to him, "Brother Blair, you say 'gospil,' when it should be pronounced 'gospel.'"

In these, as in some other matters, we sometimes err through habit, or association, or neglect, even when we know to do better. We therefore ought to receive admonition in due season, for the good of all concerned, and in any case.

There was a goodly degree of spirituality manifest in all places visited in California, and in none more than in Sacramento. In the latter place the Saints enjoyed a pentecostal season indeed on Sunday afternoon, September 29, in the social meeting. Prophecy, tongues, interpretation, exhortation, and testimony abounded. Joy and gladness seemed to fill the heart of everyone present and the Spirit testified that the Lord would gather into that branch more than the chapel could hold, if the Saints and ministry proved faithful. Bro. and Sr. David Brand, of Marengo, Illinois, in company with one of their daughters, attended that meeting and faithfully testified for Christ and the restored gospel. It was cheering and encouraging to have the comfort and approval of the Lord's free Spirit as Sr. Blair and I were about to bid good-bye to the Saints of California. God bless them all—those we saw, and all others—and may he keep them "by the power of the Holy Ghost" until the appearing of the Lord our Savior, whose glorious coming is near at hand, as the Spirit has so often testified to us of late. The Saints received us everywhere with unfeigned love and undivided confidence.

From June 30 last till now, I have preached 68 sermons and attended 53 other meetings; considerable numbers have been added by baptism (administered by others of the ministry); many sick and afflicted ones were administered to, and a few ordinations to the ministry were attended to. A considerable number of young men we met give fine promise of usefulness in the church if they remain humble and "study" to show themselves approved of God.

In conclusion I can testify that from the time I began to prepare to go to California, as requested and advised by President Joseph Smith, whose duty and authority in the matter I recognize, I have seen the providential care and guidance of the Lord, and have been richly blessed and prospered in my labors. The Reorganized Church is the Church of Christ, and Joseph Smith is its lawful president. Happy are they who recognize these facts and act accordingly.

Very truly,
W. W. BLAIR.

HAMBURGH, Iowa, Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—All the summer long I have not written a word for your columns, being content with the occasional jot of information concerning my labors from the pens of others. But after having spent a very pleasant summer with the Saints and friends of Hamburg, Henderson, Glenwood, Red Oak, Excelsior school district (west of the latter place), Stennett, Shenandoah, Wales, and Prescott, I feel somehow like writing a few words.

A hearty welcome has greeted me everywhere, and each visit ended with a cordial "come again." The degree of interest has been somewhat varied, but the attention of the Saints to the meetings has, for the most part, been gratifying, and others have shown that they knew we were in their midst.

The tent meeting in Prescott was a marked success. The people there, noting the trouble the loose leaves of my worn-out Bible gave me in turning them, put a new "Oxford" into my hands the last Sunday of my stay among them, for which I was indeed thankful, as also I am for the kind care received from both Saints and friends. I have indeed felt to answer as did the disciples when the Lord asked them, "Lacked ye anything?" "Nothing, Lord."

I have found Bro. Henry Kemp a most genial colaborer, and one whose manner of directing the work is very agreeable. I have no baptisms to report; neither such great account of work to render as some have been blessed to do, but have striven to be diligent, improving each opportunity as best I could, by which I succeeded in getting in seventy-eight discourses in three months. How effective the work has been remains to be seen. I can only leave the result with God, hoping he will give the increase. Three or four series of future meetings are in contemplation in different places as a continuation of work already done.

I have here just closed my third discussion with Elder T. E. Glendinning, on the nature and destiny of man. We had the usual amount of browbeating and ridicule to meet, which makes debating unpleasant; but we do not feel at all discouraged by the effort to get the truth before the people, and shall let others speak of the measure of success given. I hope to be ever found valiant in the testimony of Jesus, enduring to the end.

In bonds,
O. B. THOMAS.

BANDERA, Texas, Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—Our Pipe Creek conference after a peaceful and spiritual session of three days closed on Sunday night to meet on the 31st of January in the Saints' chapel near Medina City, Texas. Our meetings from first to last were quite largely attended, very orderly, and with good attention. Two applications for baptism, two ordinations, and two sessions of ministers' council were held; and altogether we think much good was accomplished in the cause of Zion and the promulgation of the work in this district.

As an evidence of our gaining favor with the world we received a great many encouraging words from those outside of the church, and indeed we feel encouraged in the conduct and zeal shown by the members. Surely they are arousing and will arouse and shake off the coals from their garments. Some of the sisters thought I was a little severe when I shook up the Saints over the fourth chapter of Ephesians, but took it quite cheerfully.

I went from Pipe Creek to Bandera, and from there to Medina City, where I held several meetings with, I think, good effect. I now, October 4, find myself in San Antonio. My wife is traveling with me of late. As we are without means, we travel in a buggy with a good, faithful, strong horse to, as the Yankee would say, "draw" us. In the South you would hear the expression "haul." Sr. Wight's zeal for the work to a great extent shadows the hardships of a minister's wife, until we have occasion to travel in one day's journey about forty miles and at night find a comfortable lodging on the soft side of a sand-hill, or on a rocky mound, when she looks around and sees that her lodging room is sheltered with nothing between her and that of a clouded canopy or a starry-decked heaven. She seems almost ready to complain but after a sweet repose with these very comfortable surroundings for the night, she takes her breakfast without stopping to look over the bill of fare; gets cheerfully into the buggy, and rejoices in the happy reflection that the next stopping place is in the house of some good sister. It is sad indeed to find in our travels so many Saints who do not take the Herald, and only now and then after a deal of talking can they be induced to take it. I don't see how a Latter Day Saint can do without it. Those who take the Herald are reaping a benefit to themselves and also helping the church; and while it helps the finances of the church, it is helping the traveling preacher. Nothing that can go ahead of the preacher in his travels as an introduction and advertisement could be a greater benefit and assistant to him than the Herald. Saints, if you want to contribute two dollars to the cause of Zion, take the Herald. Read it, and loan it to your neighbors; not to some brother or sister who is able to take it, but to those who are not able, or to the starving world that has not heard the glad news of the angelic message.

We go from here to Floresville, where some are waiting for baptism, then to Falls City. There are some excellent people also at this place who have for some time been convinced of the truth of the restored gospel but have not yet yielded obedience. In hope and confidence of a grand triumph, I am,

Faithfully yours,
L. L. WIGHT.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—After the reunion at Greens Landing was over I attended the Eastern Maine conference. I am glad I was present, for it seemed like years ago when I traveled on the coast of Maine with blistered feet to carry the gospel to the people; and many a blessing I received then, as well as the Saints. I was away in the West for several years, and on my return to Maine I found things in an unhealthy condition, growing out of bad treatment and mismanagement of the work of God, more for a form, and a less desire for the power of God, but as the Saints are again looking to God for his directing influence, instead of man, the Father is once more working with the people by his Spirit.

The conference was the most spiritual one I have witnessed for a long time. Thank God for the return of his Spirit, and very glad the Saints are trying to adorn their profession with a well-ordered life. We should never lose sight of the power of God unto salvation.

I called on my way home to Cranberry Isles, and preached four sermons and baptized one,

Mrs. Ida F. Stanley. Prejudice runs high on the island. The preacher among them tells the people they don't want any such doctrine on the island, and his friends call it "stuff." I told them that in the judgment day they would wish to God that they were stuffed full of such doctrine: for it is the gospel of Christ, and the only plan that can possibly save them in the kingdom of God. I leave again tomorrow.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—Home from the El Dorado Springs reunion. We had a most excellent time, the interest unabated to the last; twenty-two baptized. Many of the baptisms were of special note; it seems we have captured the situation. We pray the Saints will make no break, but live pure and honest lives. A pure, practical religion is what we want. Bro. Luff was with us the last three days, and his efforts were much appreciated.

The laboring oars acquitted themselves all around. To say the least we have a noble band of workers in this mission. I don't want to be found bragging; but, honor is due to a large majority of the men in this mission. This is a hard and rugged field for laborers, yet most of our men go to their work with a will that is commendable.

Elder C. W. Sewell's article upon finding the twenty-four golden plates of Ether is now upon my table. My answer lies by its side. I am waiting a guarantee from Elder Sewell's editor, of Austin, Texas, that he will publish both articles side by side in his paper. When this guarantee is secured the manuscripts will be sent to the Herald, of Lamoni, Iowa, and the Firm Foundation, of Austin, Texas, for publication. This Mr. Sewell is the man I met in debate at Durango, Texas, last July. This controversy may not end with these two articles. We are ready for the fight if the work demands it.

I start for St. Louis Sunday evening, and on to Xenia, Illinois, to commence the debate with W. W. Hay, of the Missionary Baptists on the 15th inst. I am also billed to meet Rev. James Evans, of Springfield, Missouri, in debate, at Miami, Indian Territory, on the 24th inst. Mr. Evans is the leading minister of the Primitive Baptist Church. This last debate was gotten up by Elders H. H. Robinson, Simmons, Sheppard, and others. The Baptists are quite numerous in and around Miami, and they could hardly let our brethren preach in peace, hence they challenged our people to a debate and wrote Bro. Robinson saying, "Don't fail to send your best man." I accepted the situation by invitation from Bro. Robinson and as advised by Bro. Luff. I did not accept, nor do I know that I am sent as the "best man;" but it is thought advisable for me to go and save the church any further trouble and expense. I offer the foregoing as my apology for assuming the "role of honor" in this debate. I ask to be remembered by the church.

I had the pleasure of hearing two elders from Utah in the stone church at Independence, Tuesday night. Their subject was, Utah the Zion; the mountain of the Lord's house established in the top of the mountains; and Messrs. Young, Taylor, and Woodruff being the legal successors of Joseph Smith. Bro. Luff answered on Wednesday night. Both of the Utah elders were present to hear the answer. Bro. Luff's answer was very gentlemanly, courteous, and presented in a Christianlike spirit, although sweeping in his argument and seemingly unanswerable. He captured the situation so completely that we must acknowledge we were unable to see a loophole left for these Utah men to crawl out at. I really don't wonder at the Utah leaders instructing their ministers not to discuss with the Reorganized Church upon these mooted questions; especially after having heard one of our men in defense of our position. How long will this Utah Church be permitted to hide behind these false positions and thus hold in blind credulity the thousands of honest communicants, is a question not easily answered. The Lord has said the dark cloud will be penetrated and moved by and by. Shall I have a hand in it and live to see it accomplished?

In bounds,

I. N. WHITE.

YELLOWSTONE, Wis., Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you last at Story we moved our tent fifty miles west to this place. We encountered a fearful rain-storm on the way which drenched everything. We lost our road and were compelled to stay in a barn all night. Next day, after fording bridgeless streams and crossing many ruined fences, we arrived and set up our tent one mile southeast of Yellowstone, where we held forth for three weeks and baptized nine. I baptized five in the very place where the firstfruits of the Reorganization were baptized fifteen years before I was born. The weather became so cool that we stored the tent for the winter.

Looking over our past season's work we note that the tent is a decided success. This summer we baptized enough for two new branches, one of which has already been and the other I trust will be organized in due time. We opened the work in four new places where the gospel had not before been preached.

The next day after storing the tent I attended services at Waldwick, where the Seventh-day Advents were holding tent meetings. Elder Wilkinson made such glaring misstatements that I asked the privilege to ask a few questions and was denied, but was promised the use of their tent some evening, and was finally denied that. Not wishing to give error such advantages I announced a lecture on the Sabbath question next day in the street. Appearing on time I found the streets lined and a wagon in readiness for me to speak in, which I did for an hour and a half with excellent liberty. With the Lord's assistance I scored a complete victory on the "two laws" or "covenants." The Adventists replied in the evening which only gave me a better opportunity the next day when I charged them with spiritual polygamy, trying to live with both the old woman and the new,—the old covenant and the new. I enjoyed such liberty as I seldom have before. Glancing over the congregation—which by the way had gathered in a blacksmith and wagon shop—I saw Elder Wilkinson with tears in his eyes, which caused me to speak with feelings of commiseration for them; which in contrast with what I had said only showed the darkness of their theory. The M. E.'s in general came flocking up to me by numbers and thanked me for defending their Sunday. One old brother left a half dollar in my hand to show his appreciation. After that the Adventists refused to notice me, so I exposed their idea of punishment and unconscious state of the dead. The crowds grew larger and larger, when on the last night I used my chart illustrating the true idea of punishment together with a goodly degree of the Spirit. I completely upset the M. E. idea of punishment and showed that with their view of it they never could fight successfully the views of Adventists. Well, it would have done any Saint a world of good to have seen how kindly they took to it. One old lady was heard to say, "That knocks Methodism sky high, but it is true all the same." Dozens invited me to come back again and preach, and the Modern Woodmen tendered me the use of their new hall which they expect to complete in a few weeks. The Adventists continued their meetings for a few nights, but the boys cut sixteen ropes and felled their tent which put an end to their meeting for the present.

I expect to begin meetings in Argyle in a short time. One night on reaching my place of abode I found a young lady ready to be baptized; and as she was unwilling to wait till morning we went and she was baptized at eleven o'clock.

Have not completed arrangements with Elder J. L. Gardner yet for a three weeks' discussion. We have been trying to come to some arrangements for two years. I refuse to accept his terms and he refuses to accept mine, so we have had a good deal of sparring through the county papers. At present we have things near a focus. Those who have been waiting to hear from me on this point will please notice. I expect the debate will occur in a few weeks. Will the friends please address me for the next thirty days at Blanchardville, Wisconsin.

J. W. PETERSON.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Oct. 7.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here Sunday, October 6. I wish to say to all that I am well, considering the labor of travel. Found Bro. L. L. Wight here and have counseled in regard to work. The outcome will be sent to the readers of the Herald in due time.

Will say to the Saints of Lamoni and Kansas that the weariness of travel and the extra expense attached to the trip if visiting those places, I thought justified me in making different arrangements, and coming more direct. So please be not offended.

I will be glad to hear from all old friends and Saints. Do not wait for me to write, but write me at San Antonio, Texas, School 7, South Floris Street.

Your brother in Christ,

H. P. CURTIS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 4.

Editors Herald:—Having concluded tenting for this year I am at home, somewhat debilitated with a cold, yet getting the best of it slowly. We shall hold forth this winter at least, at the "corner of Fifth and Huntingdon Streets," instead of No. 1325 Columbia Avenue. Please note the change. Tent work has been a success this year, especially so considering circumstances which we could not avoid. Some sickness, but health generally good. It is exceeding dry; water scarce; bids fair for a famine.

A. H. PARSONS.

METZ, W. Va., Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—I came here from Mannington yesterday and will begin labor in "the church" this evening. There seems to be no one to object. I am told there have been no meetings of any kind here for about one year except what "the Mormons" have held, meaning the Utah people.

I used to labor here many years ago when a "Bickertonite," and find yet a few of that faith still remaining, but some have fallen asleep and some have gone off after the missionaries from Utah. Some who fled with Bickerton to "Zion's Valley," Kansas, have returned and are "all torn up" about who is right. It is a pity that good, truth-loving, honest people should be so carried about by every wind of doctrine by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive. We visited in Mannington our tried and true sister, Sr. Dancer. She is all alone. Her daughter, Dora, married one who is not a Saint, at least not of "the Mormon" Saints, but is bitterly against them, as his church is against all Protestant "heretics." Her two sons are with her and they form one of the foremost families of the town, notwithstanding all know the religion of Mrs. Dancer. Her boys are of the better sort of young men, of whom their mother may well be proud.

Prejudice runs high against us in this as well as other places where we have not been heard, and these young men partake some little of this evil which constantly troubles our sister; but we tell her all will come right when her sons and her daughter are older and better informed. They are all she could wish them to be except that they are not what she is in faith. How thankful she should be even thus far. And as "no man cometh unto me except the Father which hath sent me draw him," says Jesus, let us look to the Father, and await patiently his will.

Last evening as we undertook to rescue the perishing, a drunkard who had fallen from his horse in the road, came suddenly upon us with "assault and battery," being "moved by the spirit" he had swallowed. After brushing off the dust and sewing up some rents in our Derby, we were all right, except an aching left arm, a strained neck, and quite a host of injured and mortified "feelings." The idea of having to be "wallowed" and "mussed over" in the deep dust of the way by a cross-eyed, horny-handed sun-burnt hoop-pole carpenter and professor of the cross-tie university of the Cabin Counties of West Virginia, who had been to Mannington to get some "camphor for his wife," was extremely humiliating even to a Mormon preacher. It does not, however, come in the line of "persecution for righteousness' sake," and if our hat was made whole our heart would be right again. Still we are determined to do better after this "lest a worse thing come upon us."

I am expecting to meet Utah people here for the first time. I am by no means disposed to hate them; indeed I feel well in reference to their ways, all except one thing—I may not be able to bear some of their "strong meat." If they attempt to tell me that God, in order to raise up righteous seed from the fruit of the loins of Joseph commanded his people to go into "whoredom" and "abomination," I will surely "speak out in meetin'."

D. L. SHINN.

RIVERTON, Iowa, Oct. 11.

Editors Herald:—Our work in this district is moving along very nicely. We are all trying to do the best we can. Bro. O. B. Thomas has done well this summer and is very well liked by the people, both Saints and friends. He closed a debate last Tuesday night, October 1, at Hamburg, with Elder T. E. Glendenning, of the Christian Advent faith. I think he met with him twice before and discussed the same propositions, as follows:—

Resolved that the Bible teaches that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection. Affirmed by T. E. Glendenning.

Resolved that the Bible teaches that man is possessed of an immortal spirit, which is conscious between death and the resurrection. Affirmed by O. B. Thomas.

That the wicked shall be destroyed and cease to exist as conscious beings. Affirmed by T. E. Glendenning.

That the punishment of the wicked is conscious misery, and that it will be eternal only to those who have sinned against the Holy Ghost.

Bro. Thomas proved himself to be an able defender of the faith to the satisfaction of all the Saints and to many others who were unprejudiced and possessed with depth of thought, and shrewd intellect. Quite a number of the citizens spoke to us in eulogizing terms of the gentlemanly manner in which Bro. Thomas conducted himself, and of the meek spirit of the Master manifested by him all through the debate; while sarcasm and arrogance were visibly seen and keenly felt by many on the part of Glendenning.

Our cause did not suffer in the least; we gained many warm-hearted friends to the cause. To God be all the praise.

Mr. Soedt, the owner of the hall, is a gentleman of the highest type who very generously donated us the use of the hall with lights free of charge. May he in nowise lose his reward. We preached in the Advent settlement last Sunday to good, attentive audiences, and have other invitations to preach in other neighborhoods in the vicinity of Hamburg; thus prejudice flies away and superstition to a very great degree is sinking in the shades of oblivion, God's truth is manifested, and many ready to receive it.

Our Sunday school work is in the advance under the care and wise management of our faithful and zealous worker, T. A. Hougas and assistants.

To the Saints and workers of the district, let me say, Slack not your hands, but be nerved up to the vast importance of so noble a work, in which God and Christ work, with all the noble and worthy of the past and present. We earnestly pray the Lord of the harvest, and are assured that he will abundantly reward every faithful laborer in the great harvest field. I believe you are all trying to do the best you can. May God bless your humble efforts.

Your brother and fellow laborer,

HENRY KEMP.

WHERE IS THE PROOF?

SOME elders are in the habit of saying that Nicodemus "came to Jesus by night," because he was ashamed to be seen in his company in the daytime. All this may be true, but the question with me is, where is the proof?

Nicodemus was "a ruler of the Jews," and his visit to Jesus by night may be accounted for without admitting that he was ashamed to go in the broad light of day. When we positively affirm that which we cannot prove, it has a strong tendency to destroy confidence in the minds of all careful and intelligent listeners, either in our integrity or ability, or (sometimes) in both. Should we not avoid the practice of affirming in a strong and positive manner that which we have no positive proof to sustain? I think so.

Again: The same class of elders tells us that Jesus laid on hands for the giving of the Holy Ghost, and refer to Luke 24: 50 for the proof:—

And he led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them.

I do not deny that Jesus did, at this time, lay his hands on the heads of his disciples for the bestowment of the Holy Ghost; but it seems to me that the text does not justify the positive and unqualified statement that Jesus did, there and then, lay on hands for the giving of the Holy Ghost.

John 20: 22 is also quoted as proof:—

And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost.

This text says not a word about the laying on of hands, and Luke's statement, so far as the wording is concerned, is susceptible of a different construction. Jesus could have stood in the midst of his disciples, raised his hands toward heaven, and blessed them, without putting his hands upon their heads at all. To use for proof that which is of doubtful application, is to convince the thoughtful hearer that we are hard pressed for evidence (which is not true), or that we are careless and incompetent workmen.

Another position which seems to have become traditional among Latter Day Saints, is that the apostles sent Peter and John down to Samaria to lay on hands for the giving of the Holy Ghost, because Philip did not have the proper authority to officiate in this ordinance. Now, who knows what office Philip held? The record does not state that this was the reason why Peter and John were sent, nor is it certainly implied. There may have been other good and sufficient reasons. Through Philip's labors a large number of converts had been made, and these converts needed to be instructed and organized. Is it not careless and foolish in us to weaken our case by affirming that which cannot be proved.

I find it a good practice to put myself in the attitude of the objector when considering proofs.

The cause we represent is too good and glorious to needlessly suffer at the hands of its friends. A strained effort to prove a position assumed never fails to weaken that position. Here, as elsewhere, the proverb, "Let well enough alone," is a good one. It might be a pleasant thing to show that Jesus did actually lay on hands for the bestowment of the Holy Ghost, but it is by no means a necessity. When we have shown that the laying on of hands is one of the ordinances of the perfect and unchangeable gospel, by which plan alone we have the promise of eternal life; that the apostles, acting under the direct instruction and authority of Jesus Christ, both taught and practiced this ordinance (Heb. 5:12; 6:1-3; Acts 8:14-20; 19:1-6; 1 Tim. 4:14; 2 Tim. 1:6); that the purposes for which it was administered were, the ordination of men into the ministry, the giving of the Holy Ghost, the blessing of little children, and the healing of the sick,—we have done all that our position requires. If, when this is done, our opponents feel like attempting to prove that Jesus neither taught nor practiced the laying on of hands for the bestowment of the Holy Spirit, let them try their hand at it; for without this proof, their opposition is vain and futile.

It seems to me to be a waste of time for an elder to spend from fifteen to sixty minutes in trying to prove that Jesus did, actually and personally, baptize, using, of course, King James' version of the Bible as authority. After all these efforts are made, it still remains a fact that what is found in John 3: 22; 4: 1, is modified by what is found in John 4: 2:—

Now what these texts do plainly prove, when taken as a whole, is, that the converts were baptized, and that the baptizing was done by the command and authority of Jesus Christ. What more do we need?

The question is not, What are the facts in the case? but, What does the King James' translation of the Bible say and teach, on this matter, when taken as a whole? Or, What is the proper position to assume upon the authority of what is therein written.

Your coworker,

J. R. LAMBERT.

WHY I AM A "JOSEPHITE."—No. 5.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

AS TO the ordination of Young Joseph to the presidency of the Reorganization, no additional powers of the priesthood could have been given him than that bestowed upon him by his father, or by William Marks, or any other high priest or apostle, except in an executive sense; and that could be given by the body over which he was called upon to preside, or by direct command of God could be conferred by anyone holding the high priesthood. Besides, I read in Doctrine and Covenants 16: 3, Utah Edition 18: 9, this:—

And now, Oliver Cowdery, I speak unto you, and also unto David Whitmer, by the way of commandment; for, behold, I command all men everywhere to repent, and I speak unto you, even as unto Paul mine apostle, for you are called even with that same calling with which he was called.

In section 17: 1-20; 3 Utah edition, Oliver Cowdery is also called an apostle, and neither he nor Martin Harris was ever included in either the First Presidency or the Twelve, but was among the high priests or elders, and yet held the apostolic priesthood.

William Marks and others holding the same priesthood had an undoubted right to ordain, as stated above, and set in order the house or Church of God.

"But," says the objector, "this would undoubtedly be true if the Twelve had not been still living and to them belonged the right to set in order the church." I am not going to deny that the Twelve had this right; and had they properly exercised it all would have been well. God himself lays down the rule by which the quorums shall work, thus:—

Of the Melchisedek priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church.—D. C. 104:11; Utah edition 107: 22.

This is the chief quorum of the church; and then the Lord goes on and tells how the other two leading quorums may become equal to it in this statement:—

The twelve traveling counselors are called to be the twelve apostles, or special witnesses of the name of Christ, in all the world; thus differing from other officers in the church in the duties of their calling. And they form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned. The Seventy are also called to preach the gospel, and to be especial witnesses unto the Gentiles and in all the world—thus differing from other officers in the church in the duties of their calling; and they form a quorum equal in authority to that of the twelve especial witnesses, or apostles, just named. And every decision made by either of these quorums must be by the unanimous voice of the same; that is, every member in each quorum must be agreed to its decisions, in order to make their decisions of the same power or validity one with the other. . . . Unless this is the case, their decisions are not entitled to the same blessings which the decisions of a quorum of three presidents were anciently, who were ordained after the order of Melchisedek, and were righteous and holy men.

The following clause occurs in parenthesis in the above quotation:—

Some may have taken advantage of this to argue that a majority may form a decision, but it does not so read, but reads "a majority may form a quorum;" that is, if it is impossible, as it frequently is, for all the Twelve or Seventy to come together, if a majority is present they may form a quorum; but after that majority is formed into a quorum, then there must be a unanimity of decision and vote to make their acts binding and valid.

The Lord further instructs the quorums in regard to the manner of making decisions. He says:—

The decisions of these quorums, or either of them, are to be made in all righteousness, in holiness and lowliness of heart, meekness and long-suffering, and in faith, and virtue, and knowledge; temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, because the promise is, if these things abound in them, they shall not be unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord. And in case that any decision of these quorums is made in unrighteousness, it may be brought before a general assembly of the several quorums which constitute the spiritual authorities of the church, otherwise there can be no appeal from their decision.—D. C. 104: 11; Utah Ed. 107: 23-32.

I have placed some of the above in italics in order to call especial attention to the sentiment expressed. Now I maintain that almost every provision made in the above for making a valid decision by these quorums was violated. The Twelve were divided on the different measures proposed. Three of them, William Smith, Lyman Wight, and John E. Page, refused to acquiesce in some measures proposed for the government of the church, one of which and most prominent among them, was the putting in of Brigham Young as President of the Church by virtue of his being President of the Twelve. The same measure, as well as the doctrine of polygamy, ran against a snag in the High Council, and they had to drop certain ones out and put others in so there could be a unanimous decision made.

As an example of the work done in those days, please turn to Times and Seasons, Vol. 5, pages 686, 687.

Elder W. W. Phelps arose and offered a motion, that Elder Sidney Rigdon be cut off from the church, and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repents.

Bishop Whitney then presented the motion to the High Council, and the vote was unanimous in the affirmative.

Elder W. W. Phelps then offered the same motion to the church, upon which President Young arose and requested the congregation to place themselves so that they could see all who voted. We want to know who goes for Sidney and who are for the Twelve. He then called upon the church to signify whether they were in favor of the motion.

The vote was unanimous, excepting a few of Elder Rigdon's party, numbering about ten.

He then requested those who were for Sidney Rigdon to manifest it, and as before stated there were about ten.

Elder Phelps then motioned that all who have voted to follow Elder Rigdon should be suspended until they can have a trial before the High Council.

An amendment was offered, as follows: "or shall hereafter be found advocating his principles."

The vote was unanimous in the affirmative. . . .

Elder Hyde again arose and stated that Elder Samuel James had promised to preach a funeral sermon at the request of President Young. He came at the time appointed and preached anything but a funeral sermon, and after he got through he said, if Brigham Young wanted a funeral sermon preached he might preach it himself. He considered this unchristianlike conduct, and he moved that Samuel James be disfellowshipped from the church. The vote was unanimous.

He further said, whereas Jared Carter has gone on a mission, contrary to council, under the new revelation, I move that fellowship be withdrawn from him, and that it be published in the next Neighbor and Times and Seasons. The vote was unanimous.

Elder Amasa Lyman motioned that Samuel Bennett be cut off from the church, for having received a false ordination. The vote was unanimous.

Elder Lyman motioned that Leonard Soby be cut off for the same cause, with Samuel Bennett. The vote was unanimous.

This Leonard Soby was one of the High Council who would not accept the measures advanced by the Twelve, and they dropped him and put in Ezra T. Benson. But, to resume:—

It was motioned and seconded, that Joseph H. Newton be cut off from the church. The vote was unanimous.

It was motioned and seconded that John A. Forgeus be cut off from the church. The vote was unanimous.

Here is "righteousness," "holiness," "lowliness of heart," "meekness," "longsuffering," "faith," "virtue," "temperance," "patience," "godliness," "brotherly kindness," and "charity," with a vengeance; and yet the Lord said that all of these must characterize their decisions!

And Joseph Smith further says, in speaking of the powers of the priesthood:—

That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control, or dominion, or compulsion, upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, and when it is withdrawn, amen to the Priesthood, or authority of that man.

Behold! ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks; to persecute the Saints, and to fight against God. . . .

No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long-suffering, by gentleness, and meekness, and by love unfeigned;—

By kindness and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile.—Utah Ed. D. C., P. 424.

These are the rules laid down by the Lord and his prophet, and there is not one but what is violated in the proceedings as quoted above.

The rule of the church is that everything shall be done by "common consent;" and yet we see in the proceedings above the right of franchise taken from the members of the church, or they were allowed to use that right only by imperilling their membership in the church. The ten who voted to sustain Rigdon were dropped at once pending a trial, a proceeding they had no right to do under the law. The law says—and it is only common justice—that all members shall be labored with when an offense has been committed, and an adjustment had without a trial if possible; and that if that is not possible, then they shall be brought before the elders and if satisfaction cannot be obtained there, then on up in regular order until they reach the highest courts of the church; and in the organization of that high court or High Council ample provision is made for the accused to be heard in justification or defense of his or her action, and every chance for injustice being done is carefully guarded against. (D. C. 42, 99, 104; Utah Ed. 42: 102-107.)

And here we see men who were to set in order the house of God openly and unblushingly violating the law and cutting men off for the most trifling causes. I cannot forbear mentioning one right here as given in Millennial Star, volume 5, page 122:—

Moved and seconded that Josiah Butterfield be cut off from the church. Carried unanimously. President Young showed that it was because he had got a little money and was lifted up.

No trial was granted to any of these mentioned, no chance to speak for themselves; and so eager did the Twelve and their tools become to get rid of those who were snags against which their illegal proceedings were constantly running, that having exhausted these trifling causes for disfellowship, they cut off indiscriminately, right and left, without even the formality of a charge. Quorums were disorganized and reorganized, leaving out those who would not do as they were told, and putting in those who would; and those who have carefully studied the career of the Twelve—or of that portion of them remaining, have found that that has been their policy all the way through. One's mind cannot refrain from turning back to the statement of the Prophet Joseph already quoted:—

That they [the powers of the priesthood] may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control, or dominion, or compulsion, upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood, or the authority of that man.

Behold! ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks; to persecute the Saints, and to fight against God.

These words, spoken or written as they were in 1839, seem almost prophetic of that which was to come. Not only did the Twelve and their colleagues exercise unrighteous dominion, control, and compulsion, but they began a systematic persecution of those who opposed them and their measures. Emma, the wife of the prophet, was threatened, her property menaced, and according to the historian, Andrew Jensen, in his Historical Record, pages 805-6, many men, whom he pleases to call disorderly ones, were "whittled and whittled" out of the city of Nauvoo, by the boys. The reasons given by him for the organization of this whittling brigade are rather unique. He says of these characters:—

But how could they be dealt with? There were no police with authority to arrest them, and for the people to have waited upon them and warned them to leave the city would have afforded new pretexts to the enemies of the Saints for getting out writs and carrying them off to prison. Yet something had to be done.

So the "whittling brigade" was organized. Now one who is not in the habit of swallowing down anything that comes from the priesthood without question would naturally ask why the waiting upon these unruly characters and warning them to leave the city (an act which they had a legal right to do) would not have resulted in writs and being carried off to prison, while the illegal act of forcing men from the city at the point of sharpened sticks and gleaming knives would not. It was evidently a system of persecution of those who opposed the Twelve in their measures, as is related in history and in the statements of those who lived there at that time; and the historian, Jensen, has unconsciously admitted it. Persecution of friend, enemy, or apostate, never was, nor never can be the manner in which God or godly men act; but upon the other hand, as Paul says, 2 Timothy 2: 24-26:—

And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will."—2 Tim. 2: 24-26.

There can be no doubt in the mind of the careful investigator that the Twelve proved recreant to their trust; and even had Joseph, as they claim, bestowed upon them all the powers which he himself possessed, yet subsequent history has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that those powers were abused by them and that through that abuse they lost them, and were left to kick against the pricks, and persecute the Saints, and fight against God. God, however, was merciful to them and gave them ample time and opportunity to repent and to do their duty. In a revelation given to Thomas B. Marsh, July 23, 1837, the Lord warns them not to exalt themselves and says to Marsh:—

And pray for thy brethren the twelve. Admonish them sharply for my name's sake, and let them be admonished for all their sins; and be ye faithful before me unto my name. And after their temptations, and much tribulations, behold, I, the Lord, will feel after them; and if they harden not their hearts, and stiffen not their necks against me, they shall be converted, and I will heal them.—D. C. 105: 5; Utah edition 112.

Alphonse de Rothschild, whose secretary was the victim of the outrage the other day, does not believe that the reign of capital is destined to endure. Interest dwindles. He said not long ago that the man who in another generation has $20,000 a year may think himself rich, so rapid is the fall in interest and so rapid the spread of socialistic theories.

There is only one happiness—duty.

Conference Minutes.

ST. LOUIS.

Tent committee's report: Total paid out $88.03; received $50.85; September 28, 1895, indebtedness of the committee $37.18. Report audited and found correct. Voted that a general appeal be made to the district for subscriptions to meet the indebtedness of the tent committee. Bishop's agent's report: June 21, 1895, on hand 5 cents; received tithes and offerings $35.95; received from Bishop E. L. Kelley $35; total paid out $71.05; September 28, 1895, balance due agent 5 cents. N. N. Cooke agent. It being understood that Russell Archibald, Jr., had written Bishop E. L. Kelley refusing to accept the appointment of Bishop's agent, unto which he had been recommended by the last district conference, therefore, Be it resolved, that inasmuch as the Bishop's agent, N. N. Cooke, has asked to be relieved as agent, and that he is now only acting temporarily, that we recommend John G. Smith as Bishop's agent. Carried. Resolved that elders or others reporting be requested to omit all unnecessary verbiage or superfluous communication not relating to ministerial labor. A petition and appeal of John Molyneaux from the decision of the St. Louis branch in his case was read, and the appeal was rejected. Preaching by Elders M. H. Bond and R. Archibald. Adjourned to meet in St. Louis, Missouri, Saturday and Sunday, December 28 and 29, at ten a. m.

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.

Conference convened September 28, with the Janesville branch, in the gospel tent at Porter, Wisconsin, at ten a. m.; W. A. McDowell, president; J. O. Dutton, secretary. Branch reports received from Janesville, East Delavan, Fiora Fountain, and Oregon. Ministry reporting: Elders W. A. McDowell, E. M. Wildermuth, C. H. Burr, C. C. Hoague, J. Blackbourn, J. Hackett, H. Southwick, O. N. Dutton, and W. Robinson; Priests A. Delap and L. Houghton; Teachers F. M. Ball and H. Lockwood; Deacon J. O. Dutton. W. A. McDowell was sustained district president, J. O. Dutton clerk, and C. C. Hoague Bishop's agent. Bishop's agent's report: On hand at last report $22.49; received since last report $52.85; total $75.34; disbursements $50; on hand $25.34. Resolved that two days' meetings be appointed at places in the district where such meetings are desired and the district president make arrangements for them as to time, place, and speakers, as far as possible to do. By vote of district conference on evidence of membership Christian Jensen was accepted as a member of the church. Preaching during conference by Elders E. M. Wildermuth, C. H. Burr, and H. A. Stebbins. Moved that when this conference adjourns it does so to meet with the East Delavan branch on the last Saturday of February, 1896.

NAUVOO.

Conference convened at Rock Creek church, at 10:30 a. m.; W. McGahen president, F. M. Weld and D. D. Babcock secretaries pro tem. Branch reports: Rock Creek, Burlington, Farmington, Keb, and Montrose. Keokuk, Pilot Grove, New London, and Vincennes not reported. Ministry reporting: Elders J. S. Roth baptized 13, J. R. Evans, C. Willey, H. T. Pitt, W. T. Lambert, W. McGahen, F. M. Weld, D. D. Babcock, and R. Lambert; Priests D. T. Williams, D. Tripp, and I. J. Pierce; Teacher J. McKiernan; Deacon S. Seigfried. Bishop's agent, J. H. Lambert, reported; report received, audited, and found correct. C. N. Craig, chairman of tent committee, reported in full by letter. Report received and Bro. Craig instructed to pay Brn. Richardson and Seigfried amount borrowed of them first, and balance on hand to Bro. W. McGahen. Moved that all moneys in hands of individuals for tent fund be turned over to J. H. Lambert, and he to Bro. Craig, and receive receipt for same. Sunday school association reported, and on motion the report was received and ordered spread upon the minutes. On motion Bro. Chas. Willey's resignation as district secretary was accepted and D. D. Babcock chosen in his stead until next election. It was decided next district conference would convene at Burlington, Iowa, first Saturday in March, 1896, at ten a. m. District president and missionary in charge, J. S. Roth, were instructed to go to Montrose and adjust difficulties there. Preaching by J. S. Roth and J. R. Evans. On a whole the conference was a fine success. While the attendance from a distance was small, the local attendance was good considering the inclemency of the weather. The Spirit of God was clearly discernible from the beginning, and especially was its hallowed influences felt during the Sunday afternoon prayer service.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Conference convened at Bevier, October 5; J. A. Tanner president, Louise Palfrey secretary. Branch reports: Bevier 196, gain 6. Higbee 76, loss 2. Huntsville 9, gain 4. Carrollton 10, no change. Pollock 11, first report. Ministry reporting: Elders J. A. Tanner, J. T. Williams, F. A. Evans, R. R. Jones, W. Vincent, M. A. Trotter, W. Vaughan, D. F. Richards; Priests W. Chapman, J. Waltenbaugh, D. Edmonds; Teacher J. T. Richards; Deacon T. Lilly. Bishop's agent, J. T. Williams, reported: On hand $98.18: total disbursements $79.98; on hand $18.20. The following resolution was adopted: Whereas, the law of God provides for the manner and way that all those who bring reproach upon the church should be dealt with, therefore, be it resolved that we, in conference assembled urge the prompt action of branch presidents in seeing that such members are properly labored with, and if restitution is not made, to see that the law takes its proper course. And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to each branch president in the district. Preaching by Elders Cato and William Chapman. Adjourned to meet with the Higbee branch the first Saturday and Sunday in February.

MALAD.

Conference convened with the Malad branch September 28, 1895, S. D. Condit presiding, W. L. Johns acting clerk. Reports were received from Dingle Dell, Malad, and Samaria branches, and letter read from H. O. Smith, in which he resigned position of district president. His resignation was accepted and S. D. Condit was chosen president. Henry Evans was released as district clerk and W. S. Johns chosen clerk and district treasurer. A. J. Layland, S. D. Condit baptized 2, M. Jones, O. Thomas, W. Richards, J. Thomas, T. Jenkins, and H. Johns, of the elders, and Priests W. L. Johns and John Price reported. Two prayer meetings were held. Preaching by S. D. Condit. Mrs. Sarah Williams was baptized and confirmed, and one child blessed. Attendance small, but a peaceful spirit prevailed. Adjourned to meet at call of president.

Sunday School Associations.

NORTHERN AND CENTRAL CALIFORNIA.

Association convened at Santa Cruz, California, September 6, 1895. As both superintendent and associate were unable to be present, J. F. Burton was appointed chairman, Essie Cockerton, secretary. Treasurer's report read and accepted; $4.05 in treasury. Reports of delegates from most of the schools in both districts received. Superintendent J. A. Saxe proposed (by letter) that the districts be dissolved on account of the extent of territory to be gone over; that an officer being engaged in business it is impossible to visit each school and attend to his Sunday school office properly. Treasurer made motion to that effect, and it was carried. It was requested that as superintendent and secretary are in the Northern district, the assistant superintendent and assistant secretary are in the Central district, that each officer continue his labor and report at conference held at an allotted time in each district. Treasurer handed secretary $4.05 to be sent to General Association.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Program of Decatur district convention, to be held at Lamoni, Iowa, Friday, September 25: Ten a. m., business session. Two p. m., discussion: The laws of teaching as applied to Sunday school work. Leaders, J. A. Gunsolley and Mamie A. Allen, followed by general discussion. Should this topic be exhausted other subjects having practical application to the work will be discussed.

Evening: A joyful greeting in song. Prayer. Quartet. David Wight, Undeveloped forces in the Sunday school, (twenty-minute talk.) Solo. Closing address, district superintendent, (twenty minutes.) Song.

Will the superintendents of schools please take an especial interest in seeing that a good delegation is present.

COMMITTEE.

The following is program (as far as completed) of the Fremont district Sunday school association, to convene at the Saints' chapel near Thurman, Iowa, Thursday evening, October 24, 1895, at 7:30. Thursday evening, teachers' training class in charge of district superintendent; lesson from Trumbull's "Teaching and Teachers," pages 3-198, for all to take part in. Friday, ten a. m., business. At 2:30 p. m., address, "The future of the rising generation," A. Badham. Essay, "What we most need in Sunday school, and how to get it." Charley Fry. Review of Trumbull's "Teaching Process," Mrs. Emma Hougas. All to be followed by questions or discussion. At 7:30 p. m., a model Sunday school; lesson No. 3, for October 20. Teachers not yet provided. The lesson will be followed by blackboard review and other illustrations, questions, etc. All should make preparation on the lesson from Trumbull for Thursday evening. An unusually good time is expected from present indications. All come, and come Thursday.

T. A. HOUGAS, Supt.

In connection with the district conference, the Sunday school association for the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district will convene at 9:30 a. m., October 25. Questions of interest to all Sunday school workers will be under consideration. Will you be present to take part in the discussions?

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI REUNION.

The closing scenes of the El Dorado reunion were witnessed yesterday at this place. To say that we had a good time would not be exaggerating. The writer was not permitted to be present at all the services but the reunion has certainly done good. Probably one thousand persons were present to hear the closing discourse by Bro. Joseph Luff on Sunday night. It was an able effort. The other brethren occupying during the day acquitted themselves nobly and placed the work before the people in a proper manner. If the writer has kept proper count there were twenty-three persons baptized during the meetings. There were in attendance, during the last week, probably fifty families of Latter Day Saints.

A business meeting was held on Friday, the 4th inst., at which it was determined to hold another reunion next year. A committee of three was appointed to make all arrangements. The committee is composed of Brn. I. N. White, of Independence, Emsley Curtis, of Harrisonville, and Henry Sparling, of Willow Springs.

At the above-named meeting the committee reported on the purchase of the large tabernacle tent. The tent as it now stands is paid for and a balance of about $38 on hand. This will be used in enlarging the tent for next year.

The conference of Clinton district was held Saturday, but the writer was not present, so can say nothing of the proceedings. If these few notes do not properly represent a reunion of large dimensions the brethren will please be wise enough next time to select some one who has health to be present at every service and make proper reports.

C. R. DUNCAN.

EL DORADO SPRINGS, Mo., Oct. 7.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS REUNION.

Monday, September 9.—At the nine o'clock prayer service four prayed and fifteen testified. At 10:45 J. D. Stead spoke from Hebrews 11:1; 2 Peter 1:16-19; Jude 3. He spoke of his skepticism prior to meeting this work, but since then God had given him light by which he has a certainty in regard to divine things. In the afternoon one was baptized and confirmed, which belated the service; but at 3:30 p. m. F. M. Slover talked from Amos 3:7. He dwelt upon the necessity of divine aid and was glad that by God's blessings he is able to testify as Job of old. (Job 19:25.) At eight p. m. Bro. Daniel as speaker used Matthew 23:19, 20; Mark 16:15-19. The sermon was chiefly upon the first principles and was delivered in a radical, aggressive manner.

September 10.—Usual prayer season in the morning. At 10:45 M. H. Bond, speaker. He used Isaiah 55:4-15. Jesus Christ is a leader and teacher now as well as in the past. Alexander, the Cesars, and ancient philosophers live only in history. No man can give satisfaction in the administration of our affairs. The ideal government will not be realized until the millennial age. At 2:30 Bro. Curtis preached on the spiritual gifts. These gifts may be counterfeited, so we must use the standard by which we detect the false from the true. See Isaiah 8:20 and 1 John 4:1. An impartial use of the law as contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants is our only safeguard. At eight p. m. Bro. Jones preached. Col. Ingersoll was assailed for charging the horrors of the inquisition to Christ's Church. That Roman Catholicism did this, also the deleterious work mentioned in Isaiah 24:5, was clearly proven.

September 11.—At the Saints' service seven prayed and twelve bore testimony. At 10:45 Bro. J. F. Henson, who had recently arrived, was in charge. Bro. Daniel spoke from 1 Corinthians 1:27; 3:9. That this work is a mutual one and all bear a responsibility was presented, hence the necessity of cooperation was also urged. It was adapted to the Saints from the character of the advice given. However, some outsiders were present. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. Barmore preached; texts, Hebrew 3:1; 2 Corinthians 3:18; James 1:23-26. Jesus Christ the great type, model, and example of the race, as revealed in the gospel, was the theme. At eight p. m. Bro. Bond discoursed from Mark 11:22. The skepticism produced by the conflicting creeds of modern times was talked of and the gospel as the only true basis of "faith in God" presented.

September 12.—The forenoon prayer service, consisting of seven prayers and eleven testimonies, was followed by a sermon from J. F. Henson; text Matthew 4:4. He was followed by Bro. Curtis. The subject under consideration was the law of tithing. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. Daniel preached from Psalms 8:4-7; Hebrews 2:6-8. The past, present, and future condition of man's soul was discussed. The "inner man" came from God to occupy "our earthly house of this tabernacle," and after the latter's dissolution it returns to God who gave it. At five p. m. the reunion met for business. The past year's committee reported and was discharged and another consisting of three persons was selected to arrange for next year's reunion. Recent arrivals: Brn. L. B. Curtis and A. Boyd, of Kibbie, Illinois, on Monday; Bro. J. A. Ferguson, of Centerville, Illinois, on Wednesday. To-day's include Sr. J. R. Gauger and Bro. B. A. Morris, of Xenia, Illinois, and Brn. Lowery, Stone, and Rankins, of Springerton, Illinois. At eight p. m. A. C. Barmore preached; subject, The kingdom of God. The constituents of said kingdom; namely, king, subjects, laws, officers, and territory were canvassed in their order and Bible texts marshalled in their consideration. This day's work closed the reunion proper, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, being set apart for the district Sunday school association and conference. The reunion adjourned subject to the committee's call. Shortly thereafter Brn. L. F. Daniel and A. C. Barmore left for Indiana. We were sorry that the demands of the work elsewhere made it necessary for some of the brethren to depart at the time of greatest interest. When such seasons of rejoicing and communion when we are permitted to "sit together in heavenly places in Christ" come to an end, we query, "When shall we all meet again?"

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

To the Saints of Kewanee, Illinois, District of the Reorganized Church:—The Saints of the Kewanee district will please take notice that the former efficient agent of the Bishopric for said district, Bro. John Chisnall, has resigned and the appointment made upon the recommendation of the Kewanee district conference of Bro. D. C. Smith, of Dahinda, Illinois. Please send to Bro. Smith at Dahinda tithes and offerings for the building up of the work and sustaining missionary labor, and whether the gifts be great or small let them be "as the Lord has blessed every one," and thus fulfill the law of Christ. The church is in great need of funds at the present to sustain the gospel work. Truly it may be said, "I was hungry and naked;" and shall we not desire to be of the number of those who aid in such hours? Let every member in said district respond with an offering in some amount at once and send to Bro. D. C. Smith to aid in this needed hour and receive as the Lord has promised.

The Bishopric take occasion to express gratification with the prompt and consistent work of Bro. John Chisnall all through his labors as Bishop's agent. May his reward be that of the just and faithful.

With confidence in the one hope, I am, very respectfully,

LAMONI, Iowa, Oct. 12, 1895.

To the Saints of the St. Louis district of the Reorganized Church:—You will please take notice that in pursuance of the action of the last district conference of said district, I have this day duly appointed and authorized Elder John G. Smith, of No. 2220, South Third Street, St. Louis, Missouri, as Bishop's agent for the St. Louis district of said church, in place of Noah N. Cooke resigned.

Upon the former action of said district recommending Bro. Russell Archibald for this position no appointment was made for the reason that Bro. Archibald notified me that he would not likely be able to continue as agent if appointed. The present appointee, Bro. John G. Smith, has long been a resident of St. Louis and a worker and consistent member of the church in said district, so that he is well known and his integrity and devotion to the cause unquestioned.

We can heartily commend Bro. Smith to the Saints as devoted to the cause of the Master and are glad to have his assistance directly in behalf of the work of the Bishopric in the St. Louis district.

Bro. Noah N. Cooke, former agent, has earnestly and zealously worked in the interest of the cause for a great many years, and has done a great and good service for which the Master will reward him in his own time. In laying down the office of agent, he has the confidence and sincere thanks of the Bishopric for the faithfulness of duty in this department, and we trust that he, although not directly connected as agent, will continue his aid in the financial work.

Trusting that every member in the St. Louis district will have his or her name duly entered upon the church records, kept by the Bishop's agent for said district, together with amount of tithes and offerings required in the law, and so fully fulfill all the law of Christ, I am in behalf of the Bishopric,

Very respectfully in bonds,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, October 10, 1895.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

We thank Bro. J. Y. Graumlich, Lower Lake, California, for a "Historical and Descriptive Sketch Book of Napa, Sonoma, Lake, and Mendocino Counties, California," for the library.

JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district will convene October 26-28, with the Clear Lake branch, four miles east of Fremont, and two and one half miles south of Ray, Indiana, at 10:30 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend. Full reports, branch and missionary, are expected. Elders Briggs, Daniel, and Barmore will be present. Come, let us make this conference the chief among ten thousand and one altogether lovely.

S. W. L. SCOTT, Dist. Pres.

BORN.

SALES.—At Missouri Valley, Iowa, January 25, 1895, to Bro. C. F. and Sr. Mary Sales, a son. Blessed at Logan reunion, September 29, 1895, by Elders R. M. Elvin and George M. Scott, and named Lewis Arthur.

BAKER.—At Mondamin, Iowa, August 1, 1895, to Bro. Warren and Sr. Hattie Baker, a son. Blessed at Logan reunion, September 29, 1895, by Elders George M. Scott and R. M. Elvin, and named Glenn Albert.

PARRISH.—At Hazel Dell, Iowa, November 9, 1894, to Bro. Andrew J. and Sr. Clara Parrish, a son. Blessed at Logan reunion, September 29, 1895, by Elders R. M. Elvin and R. Etzenhouser, and named Ewing.

DONALDSON.—At Mill Creek, Iowa, September 22, 1895, to Bro. N. B. and Sr. Emma Donaldson, a son.

STOKER.—Harry, son of Bro. Isaac W. and Sr. Gertrude Stoker, was born August 6, 1892, at Cheyenne, Wyoming. Blessed by Elder C. H. Porter, at Wilber, Nebraska, October 1, 1895.

STOKER.—Genevieve, daughter of Bro. Isaac W. and Sr. Gertrude Stoker, was born April 12, 1895, at York, Nebraska. Blessed by Elder C. H. Porter, at Wilber, Nebraska, October 1, 1895.

PURCELL.—At Woodbine, Iowa, April 13, 1895, to Bro. John and Sr. Ella Purcell, a son, and named Halsey. Blessed at Logan reunion, September 29, 1895, by Elders R. M. Elvin and R. Etzenhouser.

DIED.

TERRY.—At Aledo, Illinois, September 21, 1895, Sr. Hannah Terry, mother of Elder J. M. Terry and other sons and daughters. She was born in Chester County, Pennsylvania, February 1, 1818; was married in 1838; and settled in Millersburg, Illinois, in 1848. She united with the church in the early sixties, hence has been a member about a third of a century. She led a quiet, peaceful, and apparently contented, consistent, sainted life. Funeral services in the Saints' chapel, Millersburg, Illinois, to a large attendance of sympathizing friends. Elder I. B. Larue assisted in the funeral, while the Methodist friends aided in the music and service of song.

WOOD.—At Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, August 29, 1895, Guy Edwin, son of Bro. L. G. and Sr. J. F. Wood, aged 8 months and 18 days. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of their many friends in this the loss of their only child, but their loss is heaven's gain, for of such is the kingdom of heaven. The services were conducted at the Saints' church by Elder D. Hougas, August 30.

COYLE.—Peter Coyle, born at Owensville, Kentucky. Baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, September 7, 1890, at Freeman, Missouri; died August 30, 1895, at Deerfield, Missouri, aged 77 years, 3 months, and 12 days. By his request his funeral was preached at Woodbine, Iowa, by Charles Derry. On being visited by Bro. C. F. Belkham, president of Newall branch, Missouri, he smilingly assured the friends that he was ready and waiting to go to his reward; "Doubts and fears have forever fled." His dying request to his companion was, "Tell my children to meet me in heaven." Text, Revelation 14: 13.

Children, hear that Father's voice,
Let his pleadings not be spurned—
Repent and make his God your choice, "While the lamp holds out to burn."

C. DERRY.

EARNSHAW.—Sr. Mary Earnshaw was born October 15, 1821, at St. Helens, Lancashire, England; was baptized at Liverpool, England, in 1843, by Elder Wilford Woodruff. Came with her husband, Thomas Nuttall, to America in 1849, residing for a time in New Orleans, removing to St. Louis, when her husband's health demanded a second removal to Davenport, Iowa, again removing to Chicago, Illinois, where her husband died, leaving her with a young child, a stranger in a strange city. Some years later she was married to John Earnshaw, of Chicago, removing to Batavia, Illinois, where she with her husband was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Elder Philo Howard December 25, 1863. After residing there for some time they moved to Sandwich. Residing for a number of years in this city they again moved to Key West, Kansas, from there to Independence, Missouri, where her health began to fail. She expressed a desire to visit her relatives in Sandwich, hoping to regain her health. On the first day of June, 1895, she arrived in this city. Her health gradually failing, she departed this life on the morning of Wednesday, September 25. She leaves one son, one daughter, and a foster son, her husband preceding her just two months and one day. A faithful, loving wife, a tender mother, she has gone to her rest in the paradise of God. Funeral services held at the home of her niece, Sr. Belle Randall, conducted by Elder W. Vickery. Deseret News please copy.

EARNSHAW.—Bro. John Earnshaw was born August 23, 1826, in Melton, Yorkshire, England; baptized December 25, 1863, at Batavia, Illinois, by Elder Philo Howard. He departed this life July 23, 1895; he left to mourn a wife, one son, stepdaughter, and a foster son. A kind and loving husband, a faithful, devoted father has found that long wished for rest; the storms and tempests of life are forever hushed. "In the eventime it shall be light." The body of our departed brother was brought from Independence, Missouri, to Sandwich, Illinois, his former home. Funeral services held at the home of his niece, Sr. Belle Randall, conducted by Elder W. Vickery, of Plano.

AUMICK.—At Lucas, Iowa, September 4, 1895, Dora Bell, only daughter of E. and A. Aumick, aged 4 months and 4 days. The Lord gave and the Lord took away. Blessed be his name forever. Burial service by John Watkins, assisted by R. S. Gray.

SCOGINS.—Elder G. R. Scogins, at Gregville, Alabama, September 1, 1895; born February 9, 1837. Bro. Scogins preached the gospel twenty-eight years in the Reorganized Church. He did much for the Master's cause in Alabama and Florida. His wife is left to mourn. Funeral preached at Pleasant Hill conference, October 5, at eleven a. m., to a large gathering of Saints and friends by J. D. Erwin.

HICKLING.—At the house of her parents Burton-upon-Trent, England, August 18, 1895, aged 38 years, Sr. Mary Hickling, daughter of Brother and Sister Potts, and sister of Elder George Potts, of Brooklyn, New York. She was baptized at Burton-upon-Trent, April 1, 1882. At the time of her death she was a member of the Manchester branch (England), having been received by letter June 14, 1890. During her membership therewith she was for a great part of the time an active worker in connection with the Band of Hope and Sunday school movements. Funeral sermon by Elder Dewsnap, Sen., Saints' meeting room, Manchester, September 15.

"She sleeps! Her troubles here are o'er;
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumberer's rest;
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God,
To mingle with the blest."

WOOD.—Samuel Wood, at his home in Unionburg, Iowa, September 7, 1895, aged 79 years, 4 months, and 16 days. Wife, seven children, forty-one grandchildren, forty-two great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild mourn. Funeral sermon the 8th, by Elder J. W. Chatburn, assisted by Bro. John Beckman, to a large congregation of friends and neighbors, in the grove near his late home. Brother Wood was one of the old Latter Day Saints. He was through all the troubles in and around Far West, and was at Haun's Mill at the time of the slaughter of the Saints at that place. He ran to the blacksmith shop, but could not get in for those already in had barricaded the door. He then ran across the river into the woods on the other side of the stream, the bullets falling all around him as he crossed the water. He came to Western Iowa with the Saints and settled near Kanessville until the spring of 1851, then moved to Union Grove, making a home, where he lived and died. He joined the Reorganization in an early day and did quite an amount of labor, taking one mission to Utah some twenty-five years ago.

GRIMMETT.—At her home in Riverside, Idaho, August 29, 1895, Sr. Emma A. Grimmer, wife of Elder Hyrum Grimmer. She was born June 16, 1858, at Provo, Utah; was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Lander, Wyoming, by Elder John Grimmer, and from the time she united with the church until the day of her death she tried to live a faithful, consistent Christian life, and was ever ready and willing to give a reason for the hope she had within her. Husband and four children mourn the loss of a faithful, affectionate wife and a kind and loving mother, and the Saints have lost a much beloved sister from their midst.

PHILIPS.—At Henefer, Utah, Elder John Philips, in the 74th year of his age. Deceased was born at Langadock, Carmarthen-shire, Wales; baptized into the Reorganized Church, January 27, 1870, by E. C. Brand. He lived an upright, peaceful life, and died in the full faith of the gospel.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

PROTECT THE EYES OF CHILDREN DURING SCHOOL LIFE.

MINNEAPOLIS Times: An address on the subject delivered by Dr. Frank Allport, the well-known oculist of this city, before the Minnesota Academy of Medicine, is deserving far more general attention than it has received. The main object of the address is to show that the most serious diseases of the eye—myopia, hypermetropia, and astigmatism—are due largely to the neglect of the eyes of children, particularly during the period of school life. The address starts out with the proposition that in the realm of medicine this is an age of prevention rather than of cure. It is proof of the disinterested and humanitarian spirit which characterizes the medical profession that the proudest physician and the one most honored is he who discovers a preventive rather than a curative measure. The paramount importance of establishing and preserving the health of the coming generation is universally admitted, and one of the most efficient agencies for the accomplishment of this end is the proper regulation of the conditions of school life. Because, the doctor thinks, "many of the diseases incident to human existence can trace their origin to the school life of the sufferer."

Chief among these evils are those named above, most of them due to the refractive errors of school life. Some of the statistics given by Dr. Allport in support of his statements are exceedingly interesting. People engaged in pastoral or rural pursuits show few if any errors of refraction. Examination of 2,000 Mexican school children showed only eighty-eight myopics, sixty hypermetropics, and ten astignatics. The German Empire, the home of the most highly intellectual and most universally educated people in the world, shows 50 per cent of school children afflicted with myopia, and one school in Vienna produced 75 per cent of myopic youths.

The suggestions made by Dr. Allport for the elimination of existing school evils relating to ocular hygiene, and for the treatment of the eyes of children at home before they enter the schools, or while they are attending kindergartens, are extremely interesting and valuable, and should be carefully considered by both parents and teachers. Children are sent to school too early in life. Regard should be had to a child's physical condition in determining the period at which he shall begin school. The print of the books read at home and the nature of the light used in reading should be carefully watched. Common humanity suggests that children inheriting a myopic, tuberculous or scrofulous tendency should not be sent to the public schools at the average age, "to be assigned to the same tasks and treated in the same way as the youth of untainted health and robust constitution." The doctor recommends that the early education of such children be "religiously neglected," that they be kept in the open air and amid country surroundings as much as possible, and that "systematic study should not begin until about the 15th or 16th year, after the body is thus strengthened, and the ocular tissues have grown firm and better able to resist the encroachments of myopia." He recommends an ocular examination of each pupil as a requisite for entrance into a school and a repetition of such examination at stated intervals.

Other methods are suggested by the doctor. One is to have a competent physician appointed to pass upon the eligibility of all pupils for admission to the schools; another would be to require of each pupil a certificate from a reputable physician stating the ocular condition of the applicant, or a combination of both of these methods, "requiring each pupil to pass an ocular examination employed by the board of education, but leaving it optional with parent or guardian whether the child shall be passed upon by the school examiner or by a physician of recognized standing of their own selection."

But in the event of none of these methods being considered practicable at present the doctor recommends the delivery of a lecture or talk on the subject to the teachers and principals of the city schools at least once a year, this talk to include "plain and comprehensive remarks on the anatomy of the eye, refraction, and how to use but not abuse the eyes in school and home work," and also to "instruct the principals how to test the eyes," in accordance with a plan which he carefully outlines in his address. The subject is one of the greatest importance to parents, and most of all to the children themselves. The rapid increase of diseases of the eyes which compel the use of glasses by young people cannot have escaped the attention of all observing persons. The number of children and youths of both sexes who are compelled to use artificial aids to vision is painfully and unnaturally large, and is steadily increasing. The Times would be glad to know that the printed address of Dr. Allport was in the hands of all the parents and teachers of this State. The Minneapolis Board of Education could not render a more valuable public service than to give it the widest possible circulation among the patrons of the public schools.—Exchange.

WAS THE FLOOD UNIVERSAL?

THE veteran English geologist, Joseph Prestwich, does not agree with those who have been maintaining that the flood was a local deluge. He was led to an examination of the subject by the existence over large parts of the world of "a widespread superficial covering of loose material," from which, together with the peculiar distribution of animal remains therein, he deduces the fact of a widespread and short but sudden submergence of the land beneath the ocean. He has just published a small work entitled "On certain phenomena belonging to the close of the last geological period and their bearing upon the tradition of the flood." We quote below portions of a review of the work in Natural Science (London, September):—

"This hypothesis of a widespread and relatively short submergence, followed by early reëlevation, seems to the author to satisfy all the important conditions both of the problem of an extensive deluge, and of the nature and disposition of the 'rubble-drift' or 'head.'

"In this exposition of his views on the subject, Dr. Prestwich treats briefly of the Mosaic and Chaldean accounts of the traditional deluge; and gives his reasons for not accepting as satisfactory the supposition of its having been a valley flood in the Babylonian region.

'He also premises that extreme uniformitarianism cannot be allowed to have any force against his explanation; for 'uniformity in degree in all time' is not allowable, though the law of 'uniformity in kind' cannot be questioned. It is evident that upheavals and down-sinkings have taken place in many periods of the earth's history; but their relative intensities may and must have greatly varied. . . .

'When these changes of level took place, man must have existed for his implements, chipped out of flints, are present at many places in the rubble-drift, having been swept off the surface all over the area treated of by the author, as well as in such cave-earths and loess (sometimes with human bones) as were contemporary with it. The relative date of the rubble-drift can be calculated though not clearly, from the extent to which it has been worn away on cliffs; and (coincidentally) from the probability that paleolithic man existed at the close of the glacial period, within a period of from 10,000 to 12,000 years of our own time.

'With these observations on facts and theoretical deductions, Dr. Prestwich seems to have found good cause to express his opinion that natural results from changes of tension in the mobile earth-crust would bring about oscillations of land and sea, such as have often happened; and that such a change gave rise to a submergence, and subsequent emergence, seriously affecting certain regions, their surface and their inhabitants, within the history of the human race.

'He recognizes the absence of direct evidence as to the similar diluvial materials existing far eastward of Europe, in that region where the 'Mosaic deluge' has always been supposed to have occurred. The extentensive European area, however, where the movements of land necessary for the incursion and retrogression of sea-water must have taken place, is quite sufficient, he thinks, to have driven a large proportion of the then existing populations to hills and mountains as places of refuge; from which centers those that survived proceeded in time to repeople the lowlands, and to be the source of traditional legends of the great event.

'Of course, Dr. Prestwich takes cognizance of only such purely natural features and incidents as are mentioned in the Hebrew and Chaldean legends of the 'deluge,' when he refers to these in connection with his subject. He does not find it necessary to allude to other legends; and he leaves it for others to trace the origin of such legends, whether in distant parts of the earth or nearer home.

'This little book of well-digested knowledge will certainly produce good results toward a clearing away of old-fashioned, fanciful, mystical, and nonnatural ideas about any so-called 'universal deluge.' It gives a good geological standpoint for the consideration of a diluvial catastrophe, of limited extent, in South-European, and probably West-Asiatic, regions, which must have occurred since man began to inhabit this part of the world."—Literary Digest.

WAIL OF DESPAIR FROM THE POPE.
 ROME, October 9.—The letter of His Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., to Cardinal Rampolla, the Papal Secretary of State, on the recent fetes in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the entry of the Italian troops into Rome, was published this evening. It is as follows:—

'The sentiment of humanity, which even minds dominated by passion retain, seemed to permit of the hope of some consideration in our old age, but this has been brutally ignored. We have been reduced to become almost immediate witnesses of the apotheosis of the Italian Revolution and the spoliation of the Holy See. That which most afflicted us is the design to perpetuate rather than to terminate the conflict of which no one can measure the disastrous effects. The final object of the occupation of Rome was not to complete political unity, but, in destroying the walls of the temporal metropolis, to more closely attack the spiritual power of the Popes. The object was to change the destinies of Rome, return to paganism, and give birth to a third Rome and a third era of civilization. That is what it was desired to celebrate recently under the sanction of the new law by noisy demonstrations conducted by a sect which is the enemy of God.

'The nation suffers, for not only are the promises of mutual benefits unfulfilled, but morally Italy is divided and subversive to factions which menace all civil and social institutions in augmenting numbers and force. Nothing will ever confer veritable independence upon the Papacy so long as it does not have temporal jurisdiction. This condition they pretend having guaranteed us, subordinated to the arbitrary will of others, and lately there has been a suggestion of a threat to abrogate even the guarantee itself."

The letter of the Pope then vaunts the blessings of pontifical sovereignty and invites Italians not to be bound up with sects and to consider how pernicious it would be to perpetuate the conflict, which is profiting the enemies of Christianity. It then affirms that the head of the church follows with loving vigilance humanity's road.

The letter of his Holiness concludes:—

'If Italians, throwing off the Masonic yoke, would listen to us we could open our heart to the fondest hopes. Otherwise we can but predict new perils and greater disasters."—Press Dispatch.

BRITISH MARITIME INTERESTS.

According to careful and elaborate calculations which have been made recently by the Admiralty in London as well as by the principal experts on naval matters, the gross value of British maritime interests amounts to slightly over $10,000,000,000. These figures comprise the total value of the sea-borne commerce of the British Empire as well as such foreign maritime commerce as is carried in British ships owned in England, the value of the securities and marketable documents conveyed to and fro in British ships owned by British subjects, and the value of the mercantile shipping itself. In the face of these stupendous figures the sum of $100,000,000, which the British Parliament votes every year toward the maintenance of its navy, cannot be regarded as excessive.

 Uncle Sam has expended during the present year $13,182,134 on new ships for his navy.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

IN our last issue we made reference to the action of the House of Bishops at the Triennial General Convention of the Episcopal Church, at Minneapolis, Minnesota, which had adopted a rule recommended by a committee appointed to revise the constitution and canon of the church, which provided that bishops in various provinces or regions of country appoint one of their number as an archbishop; also that one of the total number of bishops be appointed "Primate," or head of the church.

To this action, however, the House of Deputies, the lower and popular legislative body of the church, refuses to assent. It is composed mostly of men of more democratic turn of mind and some of its members think the high-sounding terms "Archbishop," "Primate," etc., are too suggestive of the rule of prelates in the middle and early ages, hence are opposed to anything savoring of a hierarchy with power to discipline and depose lesser ecclesiastics at will, and that may lead to disruption or division. The resolution of the House of Bishops was amended by striking out the word "Primate" and substituting the title "Presiding Officer" therefor. The remainder of the revision committee's report was referred back by both houses for future consideration.

The discussions as reported in the press were spirited and interesting. Limited space forbids a fuller presentation of the convention. Our readers may see from this brief notice, however, that "all things are in commotion" and passing through the processes of reconstruction peculiar to the times now upon us.

LOOK OUT.

WE are informed that the advertisement "How a woman paid her debts," which appeared in one issue of the Herald and which advertises a "dish washer" and asks for canvassers, is issued by parties who have not dealt according to straight business methods. Our informant warns against them, and states that some who saw the ad. in other papers denounce the methods of advertisers.

We mention this for the benefit of our readers. We aim to examine into the merits and standing of all advertisers who do business with us, but may occasionally fail to catch up an unreliable or untrustworthy concern. We shall try to be alert however.

We have declined "bushels" of advertising matter, including that of popular patent medicines and nostrums, complexion powders, etc., etc., and other useless or harmful stuffs and articles too numerous to mention.

We shall not insert such matter in our church publication at any price, nor shall we advertise anything that we learn is useless or harmful. We are opposed to any policy that would secure to the Herald Office or to any one a dollar by the advertisement or sale of catchpenny or harmful commodities. "Value for value received;" reliable commodities, and reliable and trustworthy methods of doing business, is the policy of truth and what it is the work of the HERALD and of our people to encourage by watchfulness and by discouraging and refusing to countenance all methods and practices contrary to honest, fair, and open dealing. "Let the purchaser beware" may be relied on by some to justify the practices and business methods peculiar to the business policy of the spirit of the world. That standard, however, is "low," in contrast with and in opposition to the high standard required of the "children of the kingdom" under "the law of the Spirit of life." The HERALD therefore advocates the gospel standard and the gospel spirit. Let all abide in it, live for it, and stand by it, in their own behalf and for the welfare of fellow men—all of them.

LAMONI'S NEW RAILROAD.

THE citizens of Fayette Township, which includes Lamoni and its population, voted in favor of levying a tax not to exceed four per cent on assessed valuations, to pay the Township's proportion of the assessment to aid the proposed new railroad from Minneapolis and St. Paul to Kansas City and the Gulf. The election was held on the 14th, the vote being 323 in favor of to 34 against the tax. If the promises of the railroad's representative are kept the line will be built through Lamoni.

WANTED, PRIMARY QUARTERLIES.

THOSE having extra copies of the Primary Grade Gospel Quarterly for October, November, and December 1895, who can spare them, will accommodate others whose orders have not yet been filled if they will mail such copies to the Herald Office. Due credit will be given all who send them with names attached. The number printed for future editions will be ample to supply the wants of all.

HERALD MATTER, ETC.

BRETHREN writing to the HERALD should have their matter in our hands by Friday or Saturday of each week, in order to secure insertion in the following issue, the paper being mailed every Wednesday. Heretofore we have held the HERALD open for Saturday's mail, but now have arranged to hold it for mail received on Monday, not going to press until three o'clock Monday afternoon. However, all matter received as late as Monday cannot be inserted, because the HERALD pages are already "made up" by the time Monday's mail arrives.

An explanation will help all interested and aid in the mutual coöperation of all concerned, for the benefit of the service. The HERALD is so arranged that all its matter appears on consecutive pages; that is, it is so published as to read from page to page, as a book, that when bound in volumes it will read from page to page without transfer of matter. The pages or forms are "made up" on Monday, and the first form must be on the press about three o'clock on Monday afternoon in order to begin the printing of the second form by nine or ten o'clock Tuesday morning, after which it must be folded, covered, and stapled, and wrapped and sorted, for mailing on Wednesday morning. Lamoni has no morning mail, except from local points. Mails arrive at 12:30 and 2:50 in the afternoon, when on time, and are delivered, on an average, at about 1:30 and 3:10 p. m., making allowance for delayed trains; the first mail at times being as late as two o'clock, Lamoni being on a branch of the line with connection north to Des Moines, and running from Chariton, Iowa, to St. Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri, and not on a main line of railroad. It is three miles from Bethany Junction, which is on the line from Chariton to St. Joseph and Kansas City. (Daily mail from the north leaves Chariton, Iowa, about 9:30; and the south—at Kansas City—about seven and at St. Joseph about ten o'clock a. m., daily, some mail being received—as we understand—from the east and west at other points enroute.) This is stated that our mail facilities may be known and the exact conditions be comprehended. Lamoni has not the advantages of being on a main line of railroad. However, it hopes to be so situated at no distant day, as items published concerning the proposed railroad from St. Paul to the Gulf, indicate.

Brethren will therefore readily see that matter mailed so late as to reach us on Monday is not sure of insertion, for the reason that all the HERALD forms are "made up" before noon. Spaces are left open for insertion of notices and other brief items; but lengthy communications, unless very important, are not inserted, but held for the next issue, for the reason that other matter must be taken out and held if it is published then. Then, too, some matter that may arrive earlier may be held, if not injured by holding, that later and more important matter requiring first publication may be inserted.

Newspapers and some other publications transfer articles that run over one page, to any other page, say from the first page to the sixth; but which prevents matter from reading regularly—from page to page. By such transfer the first form can be made up and gotten out of the way. This we cannot do, hence must keep spaces open in both forms for the last day's—Monday's—mail, as stated.

We have been particular to state the conditions very plainly, that all may understand. We endeavor, and shall endeavor, to give the ministry and the Saints in general the promptest, the best service we can, under the circumstances that govern us. In days to come, when the church can afford it, we hope to own another large paper press and thus be able to print the second form of the HERALD simultaneously with the first; or, later on, to have a perfecting press that will print, fold, and paste the paper before it leaves the press, and thus enable us to more freely insert matter received up to the time of going to press and mailing. Like many other branches of the service in general, we are governed and limited by the conditions that are about us. To do the best we can with the facilities at our disposal and the circumstances surrounding, is what, in common with our brethren and coworkers everywhere, we shall strive to do.

Brethren will facilitate the work in their own fields, assist us in our labors, and promote the general good by noting these points and getting matter in promptly—by Friday or Saturday—the former preferred, for the following issue of the HERALD. When it comes as late as Monday we shall do the best we can with it, as stated, as we shall with all matter intended for publication. It has been difficult for some to understand why matter mailed from remote points at the end of a week does not appear in the next week's issue. Such, often intended to reach us by Saturday or Monday, is at times delayed enroute, and does not reach Lamoni until Tuesday. Then, too, complaints are made at times when the one complaining is himself at fault. The practice of delaying district conference reports, of not sending conference minutes until the conference following is about to meet, has been quite general, and is a case in point. We frequently get the minutes of a preceding conference with the notice convening the next one; reunion minutes and reports, etc., have been sent us very late, and in some cases after having been published elsewhere. For these things the HERALD is not responsible, but has been placed at a disadvantage at times because of them.

We renew our request for reports of matters of general interest, and for promptness. Our people, as all others, want the news while it is fresh, alive, and interesting. Put it in as brief, compact form as possible and we shall make use of the best of it and publish all our space will permit. Address matter for publication to the Editors.

Promptness in the transaction of business is essential to the welfare of the work in general and promotes it and relieves the burden that always accompanies the habit of neglect or delay and the putting-off policy of dilatoriness and "slowness." Businesslike methods and practices are strictly essential in religious matters—in the Father's business—as in any other, to insure that for which we are laboring—complete success in the work of God.

We note these items and make request, as in former requests, for the good of all, asking the Saints to aid us in our endeavors to work with them for the advancement of the work and the common good.

SHALL IT RULE UTAH?

SALT LAKE, Utah, October 12.—Monday last, at the close of the Mormon conference, a priesthood meeting was held, composed of about three hundred men, the same being made up of high priests, bishops, president of the seventies, councilors, and other high Mormon officials.

Two Mormon apostles criticised severely the action of Moses Thatcher and B. H. Roberts, respectively candidates for United States Senate and the national House of Representatives on the Democratic ticket, they being members of the Mormon Church, and it being claimed they had no right to take part in politics without first having obtained permission from the church.

Immediately rumors were circulated throughout Utah that the church desired the defeat of the Democratic ticket. Chairman Powers convened the Democratic executive committee and issued to-day an authorized interview declaring if the Mormon Church was to interfere in political affairs, after promises made that all of the people were free to act politically, the Democratic party would resort to extreme measures and take the Democratic ticket from the field, disbanding the Democratic party, and advising the people to vote down the Constitution.

The Democratic executive committee has called the State committee to meet at Salt Lake, Monday next. That committee will undoubtedly reconvene the late State convention at an early date. The convention will have submitted to it the question as to whether it shall continue the fight in view of the manifest interference of the church and issue a declaration of independence, appealing to the people of Utah to act politically without regard to the wishes of the church authorities or whether the Democratic tickets shall be taken from the field and a return to the old condition of things in Utah.

Great excitement prevails in all sections of the Territory. Many Republicans openly declare the fight of the Democratic party for political freedom is likewise their fight, and the tension upon the people is great. The Democratic party seems to be a unit in sustaining its committee in the action it has taken, and it is likely the question of the interference of the church with the State will be fought out and settled in this campaign for all time.

Chairman Powers was seen by a reporter and in response to questions said the Democratic party would fight this matter to the finish. He declared the members of his party would stand firmly and no church influence could sway them, and from information he had this morning it would not be necessary to take the ticket from the field, but the party would appeal to its members to resent the attempt to take from them the victory which he says they have in their hand.—The Tribune.

Should the above from the Chicago Tribune, of October 13, prove to be true, the agitation in Utah over the question of church and state is not yet at an end.

Though newspaper reports are not always reliable, we should not be surprised to learn that there is at least some ground for this report. Early in the present campaign we became satisfied that by church officials entering into politics in the partisan spirit of politics they would engender feelings of bitterness and distrust in their own ranks. Hence we have watched the result with more than ordinary interest.

That two of the apostles should severely criticise the action of Moses Thatcher and B. H. Roberts, and that they in turn should criticise the action of partisan opponents, is but a logical outcome of a partaking of the spirit of partisan politics. If the battle in Utah is to be fought out on party lines, we have nothing to say, nor do we care much what the result shall be. But if it is to be fought upon the question of "church dictation," our sympathy is decidedly with the independent party, and we sincerely hope that Moses Thatcher, B. H. Roberts, and their associates will have the manhood to resent church dictation, and will refuse to be humiliated by the iron hand of despotism and oppression.

To "take the Democratic ticket from the field," and advise "the people to vote down the constitution," would be a bold stroke of policy; but Judge Powers is equal to the emergency. A man of splendid ability, fine address, magnetic powers, active, and yet discreet, he is just the man to stand in the breach. If this issue is to be revived it is fortunate for the cause of right that Judge Powers is at the helm in Utah. The church will find in him a foeman worthy of their steel. He will not only be supported by his own party, but no good Republican can afford, for the sake of party to jeopardize the principle for which Utah has struggled so long.

We are opposed to church dictation in politics first, last, and all the time. Politics is not the sphere of the church, and when she leaves her legitimate sphere she should be severely rebuked. While the minister should have an active interest in all that concerns good government, we are of the opinion that it is beneath the dignity of a minister of Christ to drink into the spirit of partisan politics as that spirit prevails in all parties to-day.

Though we may differ widely from Mr. Moses Thatcher in his policy of building the kingdom of God, and though he may himself be more of a partisan than his words would indicate, we can but commend his words as used at their late General Conference, as follows:—

Too much seeking after the honors and riches of the world would alienate the Spirit of God, leaving the man in blindness, to do and to say things which under other circumstances he would carefully avoid. Saints could not afford to have the friendships of years broken up by the vain wranglings and discussions of politics. Rather should every effort be directed through the Holy Spirit to the establishment of the kingdom of God.

It was an evil day when this spirit entered the church at Nauvoo, and its withering blight has been felt, and is felt to-day.

The Utah Church is threatened with disruption by the same spirit.

Let the ministers of the Reorganized Church take warning and be wise.

Since writing the foregoing, the following press dispatch and clipping from the Salt Lake Tribune have appeared. They confirm the report of politico-religious differences. It appears from Salt Lake papers just received that it was George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, of the Presidency, who made the criticisms. They have since left the city and cannot be interviewed.

Salt Lake, Utah, Oct. 14.—The Democratic Territorial committee met here to-day. A vote was taken and unanimously decided to issue a call to reconvene the Territorial convention. The call is in part as follows: "Efforts are being made to cause the people to believe that the dominant church of Utah desires the defeat of the Democratic ticket. The Democratic party has no quarrel with any church in Utah. Its grievance has been caused by those who are willing to drag the cross of Christ in the mud and filth of politics to advance selfish ends; therefore, in order that there may be issued a declaration of political and religious independence, the Democratic State committee hereby directs the reassembling of the delegates that composed the original convention at Salt Lake on Tuesday, the 22d day of October, 1895."

DEMOCRATS SIGN A PETITION AGAINST CHURCH INTERFERENCE.

Chairman Powers last evening received the following dispatch from Logan:—

LOGAN, Utah, Oct. 12, 1895.

The Democrats of Cache County unite in declaring for absolute separation of church and State. We oppose the idea that men should be compelled to get permission from ecclesiastical authorities before exercising their political rights. We deny that Democrats are religiously or otherwise bound to follow the advice of Republicans in making up Democratic tickets. We shall uphold every legitimate effort of our party to resist and disavow such pretensions, if any such have been made. Stand firm for the right.

BRO. J. F. McDOWELL is to meet Clark Braden in discussion at Pocatonton, Iowa, October 15. The following reprint of a handbill, furnished us by Bro. J. R. Lambert, gives particulars:—

PUBLIC DEBATE!

At the courthouse, Pocatonton, beginning Tuesday evening, October 15, at seven o'clock on following propositions:—

1. Is the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, of which I, J. F. McDowell, am a member, the Church of Christ and identical in faith, organization, ordinance, and practice with the Church of Christ according to the Bible? Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings, October 15, 16, and 17.

2. Is the Disciple or Christian Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, the Church of Christ and identical in faith, organization, ordinance, and practice with the Church of Christ according to the Bible? Friday, Saturday evenings, and Sunday at two p. m., October 18, 19, and 20.

3. Is the Book of Mormon of divine origin and are its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people? Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, October 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, and 25.

4. Resolved that the canon of Inspired Scriptures—the Bible, closed by divine appointment with the apostles and those on whom the apostles had laid hands. Saturday evening and Sunday two o'clock p. m., October 26 and 27.

5. Was Joseph Smith, through whose instrumentality the Church of Latter Day Saints was organized, a prophet of God? Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday evenings, October 27, 28, and 29.

There will be two half-hour alternate speeches at each session.

Disputants: Clark Braden, Christian Church; J. F. McDowell, Latter Day Saints' Church.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

LAY IS RIGHT ONCE.

THE following is from the Monroe, Platte County, Nebraska, Looking Glass, for October 10, sent us by Bro. H. J. Hudson. We congratulate Bro. W. K. Lay, upon the fairness in which he says that the Reorganized Church is the coming theology, though he does say, also, that he is not a member of it.

LETTER NO. 58.—CHALLENGE ON BEHALF OF ZION THE FREE.

Text:—But upon Mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness . . . and the captivity of the hosts of the children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites . . . and saviors shall come up on Mount Zion to judge the Mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's.—Obadiab, verses 17-21.

Editor Looking Glass:—Our last letter brought us into the discussion of Zion and Babylon, Zion captive in Babylon and Zion the free. The theme continues in Isaiah 46.

"Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth; their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages were heavy laden; they are a burden to the weary beast. They stoop, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden but themselves (marginal, their souls) are gone into captivity."—Verses 1, 2.

"Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of the house of Israel, which are born by me from the belly, which are carried from the womb: and even to your old age I am he: and even to hoar hairs will I carry you; I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you.—Verses 3, 4.

1. In the first quotation above we have Bel, Nebo and the other gods of Babylon carried upon beasts, and yet not able to hold up their heads, while their worshipers are gone into Babylonian captivity. In contradistinction Jacob, the remnant of Israel, is carried by his God, as a mother bears her prenatal son, even carries Israel to gray hairs and will yet deliver him, give him birth.

2. We are in the midst of a controversy of antitypical Zion and Babylon, as we found in the last letter, and hence the idolaters with Bel, Nebo, et al, are Christians gone into "soul" captivity. In contradistinction to them God bears a gray headed church, Zion the free, as one not yet brought fully to birth. The fact that it is "soul" captivity proves that we are not discussing the ancient Babylonian captivity.

3. While the Catholic calls the Protestant sects, Babylon, and the sects return the compliment, we will include them all captive in "confusion" together with all Christian religions and private beliefs, except Zion the free.

4. There was a remnant of Israel that did not go to Babylon. So in the confusion of this age we may find a true church, having testimony of the ministry of angels, an inspired standard of doctrine, an authorized priesthood, an organization by Jesus Christ. Such is "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," with full testimony of proof for their claims. I do not belong to them for sufficient reasons but cannot avoid proving their cause.

5. It was predicted that their church would be for a generation, and we may for good reasons call that a century. If you will step in to their Columbus chapel you will see the little congregation composed of very aged people holding to the doctrines of their prophet, and earnestly waiting for their birth, their deliverance, promised even to their gray hairs. Their little organization will soon shake this old and vanishing world and Christendom will know that a child is born. The writings of their prophet largely compose the standard, the ensign to be lifted to the nations from far.

6. The gods of Zion captive in Babylon are the idolatry of Romanism, the worship of sectarian names in Protestantism, certain formalisms, worship of the man with cash, the minister with erudition who sets a price upon his Master's gospel and exacts it, or threatens to quit, the worship of each other as social beings neglecting the humble, and the worship of the general teraphim of the world of bankers, secretists, politicians, business men, and society people.

Verses 5-7 regard idolatry, after which on account of the free Zion, the captive receives the following

CHALLENGE.

"Remember this and show yourselves men; bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors. Remember the former things of old; for I am God, and there is none else: I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure; calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country. Yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it. Hearken unto me, ye stout-hearted, that are far from righteousness; I bring near my righteousness: it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry; and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory."

This challenge conforms to the general features of those preceding, mentioning the former things, the ancient prophecies and things to come to pass. In addition to the references to "man from the north" "servant," etc., we have mention of "the man that executeth my counsel from a far country." "The ravenous bird from the east" will prove from other prophecies to be Russia.

At the head of this letter is a text from Obadiah. His short prophecy of one chapter corresponds with Isaiah 34 relative to the controversy of Zion with Esau, Edom, or Idumea. Like Isaiah, the prophecy mentions matters which could not have been fulfilled in the literal Edom. In antitypical prophecies Edom and Babylon refer to the same foe of Zion. This text calls attention to a free Zion and its deliverance at the same time there is a captivity of Israel. Saviors appear on Mount Zion—the free church of our age—who will judge Esau. Edom, the organized wickedness of the earth. Zion will possess a standard of Judgment by which the nations will be cut off. But these are questions to be discussed in their place.

PLEASE NOTICE.

OUR patrons and coworkers are requested to always send letters of instruction, with names and addresses in full, with all moneys or remittances. Our reason for asking this is that post office and express orders, and sometimes drafts, are at times sent to the office in envelopes without letters accompanying, which causes unnecessary trouble and delay; and in such cases the sending post office stamp often is badly blurred or entirely unreadable, making it difficult to learn who has sent the money. Full instructions should be forwarded with every order.

When asking change of address, the address to which the publication has been going should be given, in all cases, that the mailing lists may readily be consulted and corrected.

For instance, if some one asks that his HERALD or Autumn Leaves be sent to Kansas City, or any given point, it is necessary to know where it has been going, in order to make the change for mailing, and to keep the mailing list correct.

All orders for books, tracts, or other publications, including changes of address, remittances, and similar business matters, should be addressed to Frank Criley, Business Manager.

All matter for publication, including general articles, conference minutes and clippings, etc., should be addressed to the editors.

The business and editorial departments are separate; matter intended for one should not be addressed to the other.

These requests are made to facilitate the transaction of business with the publishing department. The brethren and sisters will assist us and save themselves unnecessary delay and annoyance by kindly complying with them.

FROM HONOLULU.

BY late mail we have received a copy of the Doctrine and Covenants in the Hawaiian language, the translating of which from the edition of 1880, published by us, has been done by Bro. Poepoe, Mrs. E. Nakuina, and Bro. G. J. Waller,—all under the supervision of Bro. Waller himself. The letter accompanying the book we present to the readers of the HERALD, as it is both interesting and instructive.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

LETTER from Bro. U. W. Greene, Canton Point, Maine, October 10. He writes:—

Since the reunion closed at Green's Landing, six have been baptized there. Saints report good meetings and considerable interest there. I am associated with Bro. W. W. Blanchard in Oxford County. We can see indications of the gospel seed taking root and hope to report baptisms ere we leave here.

A brother writing from Peoria, Illinois, the 17th inst., says:—

We are moving along slowly and quietly here. Unity and peace prevail among the Saints and all are alive and active in the line of duty. Bro. Jonas D. Stead, of Xenia, has lately come among us and was elected presiding elder at our last business meeting. We hold regular services on Sunday, but our place of meeting being on the third floor we cannot attract strangers. However, we are trying to secure a better location. Our Wednesday evening prayer meetings are well attended and spiritual. Bro. F. G. Pitt was with us last week and Bro. John A. Robinson this week. Both gave the Saints good advice, which was well received.

Bro. Columbus Scott, Runnels, Iowa, October 16:—

Am holding meetings here evenings while looking after some other matters connected with the work. Calls are so numerous that I do not know where to go from here.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, Pocahontas, Iowa, October 17:—

The debate is progressing nicely. Mr. Braden was very mild the first night, but got a little excited last evening. Bro. McDowell did well last night and I felt to thank God for such a noble "defender of the faith." Large crowds in attendance and the interest is growing. If Bro. McDowell's health holds out good we expect a victory. Braden is resorting to his same old "stock in trade." Bro.

C. E. Butterworth is moderator for Bro. McDowell and Elder F. E. Butterfield, of Fonda, for Braden; County Attorney F. L. Dinsmore is chairman.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. F. M. SHEEHY baptized four at Scranton, Pennsylvania, October 8.

Bro. A. Z. Rudd, formerly of Independence, wishes brethren to call on him at his home one mile east of Lee's Summit, Missouri, where he has removed.

Bro. F. M. Weld reached Lamoni on the 15th inst., from his field, the Nauvoo district. He reports a deep interest among the people in having a large reunion at Park Bluff or some other point in or about Nauvoo next fall. We note that there is quite a general interest among brethren of the ministry in the Nauvoo reunion of '96.

We learn that Bro. G. H. Hilliard of the Bishopric has recently returned to Independence from his extended labors in the Southern States.

Bro. E. L. Kelley, one of the committee appointed to act with the railroad company in behalf of Lamoni and other towns in Iowa and Missouri reports that the company is satisfied with the bonuses raised by said towns. Surveyors will begin the work of making preliminary surveys at once, and the agreements entered into and arranged by the cities interested duly examined and perfected, after which further and final action will be decided upon and reported. Prospects for the securing the road good.

Bro. W. W. Blair arrived at Ogden, Utah, October 17, at five p. m., enroute to the East. He was well and all was going fairly.

BRINGING UP CHILDREN.

The son of a very eminent lawyer, while awaiting sentence in the felon's dock, was asked by the Judge: "So you remember your father?" "Perfectly," said the youth; "whenever I entered his presence he said: 'Run away, my lad, and don't trouble me.'" The great lawyer was thus enabled to complete his great work on "The Law of Trusts," and his son in due time furnished a practical commentary on the way in which his father had honored that most sacred of trusts committed to him in the person of his child.—Ex.

The six richest men in the world are Li Hung Chang, John D. Rockefeller, Col. North, the Duke of Westminster, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Woh Qua, the Chinese tea magnate, whose total fortunes aggregate $1,080,000,000.

Thou can'st not to thy place by accident,
It is the very place God meant for thee;
And should'st thou there small scope for action see,
Do not for this give room to discontent;
Nor let the time thou owest to God be spent
In idly dreaming how thou mightest be,
In what concern thy spiritual life, more free
From outward hindrance or impediment;
For presently this hindrance thou shalt find,
That without which all goodness were a task
So slight, that virtue never could grow strong.

HEART-LIFE.

A WEARY woman stood at her door and looked out across the dusty sheen of roadside. Upon her face had settled lines of weariness and care. Discontent, too, had left its traces upon the open brow and in the sorrow-dimmed eyes. In her heart rose and fell murmuring tides:—

"O, I want to rest; to go out in the brown fields and meadows; to get a full breath of the autumn breeze; to lay my head down upon the fallen leaves! I yearn for the grandeur of forest—the musical tinkle of babbling waters! I am tired—so tired of this dull routine of recurring duties! Weary, so weary of the pressing weight of labor unperformed!" She stretched out her arms to the blue above her—to the green about her, and plead for perfect rest!

Golden opportunity appeared. Tremblingly she hurried into hat and gown and turned her face towards those everlasting blessings of nature. Out toward the old home! As her eager feet press the dear familiar way, mingled thoughts of tenderness, regret, contentment, and yearning touch her soul and her mind is busy with its fond memories. How tenderly she thinks of the time when a timid, happy bride, she received the blessings of parental love! Of the day she left the home nest and fluttered so cheerily to the cozy one prepared for her! How confidently, how eagerly she had gone to meet her future and—how the grateful tears well up as she thinks how happily her bright dreams have been realized.

She brushes away the tears, and smiles as she recalls the pride with which she had carried her firstborn out to the old home to receive the lavish tenderness of its beloved inmates. Other little ones had since come to her arms and she realizes how heart and soul had expanded in the sunshine of their clinging love and trustfulness.

"O, Father divine," she cries, "watch with thy tenderest care over my heart treasures! Keep thou the tiny feet in paths of thy choosing! Make sure for them a future blessed with duties well performed and radiant with the special ministrations of thy love and Spirit!"

And to her heart cry she hears a whisper, "They shall be precious in my sight!"

She gathers the flaming golden-rod and its royal companion—purple aster. A flood of tenderness sweeps over her soul and passionately she lifts the sweet flowers to her wet cheeks:—

"Dear Savior, these are thine! All things good and beautiful are from thee! O, help me I plead, to be worthy this communion with thy innocent creations! O, quicken, I implore, that portion of thy Spirit within me, which recognizes thee in these! Teach me to follow more truly their whispered lessons! Let me come nearer to thee, to learn from thee patience, wisdom, and love!"

The autumn wind presses closely about her; it rustles among the trees; the dusty flowers at the roadside sway in its power.

"Whence comest thou, O wind, to me? Where is thy resting place, where thy morn of life? What are thy messages for me? Dost thou warn of woe to come, or sigh in regret for the past? Or dost thou whisper of peace and rest for the weary of earth?"

Thus cries the awakening spirit within this child of care, and behold, a calm steals into her soul, a peace to her troubled heart. "God is love; his mercy brightens! He waits to bless thee. Seek with a pure heart his kingdom, and he will in no wise forsake thee!"

Lightly she speeds along the homeward path. The peace which passeth all understanding lies shining in her eyes; the nobility of earnest purpose softens each feature. Joyously she kisses the babies at the door and passes in to her life's work, never again to find it heavy. The spirit of the autumn has entered into her soul and she has found rest!

SOMEBODY'S BABY.

I see each morning as I pass

A tiny house that's on my way,
A pretty picture through the glass,
A face that haunts me through the day.

'Tis some one's baby there who crows
And stretches out his hands to me;
He thinks I'm some one that he knows,
I'm not, but I should like to be.

I'm not the only man who goes Along that street and glances in,
But I'm the only one he shows
The very slightest interest in.

He's taught me one thing that I'd missed,
His winning ways a seed have sown.
I'd give my freedom to be kissed
By such a baby of my own.—Selected.

Dear Saints and Sisters:—As I sit in my parlor window, watching the throngs of gay people going to the fair grounds, I cannot help noticing how few there are who seem to have any thought but "having a good time," as they call it. This good time consists of taking part in the bowery dance, where many drunken boys and men are the partners of gay girls and women, and of horse-racing where men risk their last penny at betting on some animal whose owner or trainer has already been bribed to allow him to be held up in the race.

Married men, with good, honest, patient wives, and dear little children at home, are themselves seen going with their gambling boards, stars, and all the appurtenances required to carry on these nuisances. This same class of men follow the baseball as vigorously as though there were salvation in the interior of that small object. But ask them to go to church, or to drive a team a mile from town to carry provisions to some poor family, they cannot go at all, they are so weary. Not weary of well-doing, but really exhausted in both mind and body from following a common nuisance.

Are those people eligible to a seat in God's kingdom? Some tell me that I will have plenty to do to prepare myself for that "beautiful beyond," without grieving over others. O, yes, I know it, but I want to warn my sisters and brothers. For we are all sisters and brothers, according to God's law, and whose authority is higher than this?

One more thing in this connection, I notice ladies passing, who, every day have gorgeously trimmed dresses sparkling with passementeries, to be spoiled by dust one day, and rain the next. Some may wonder what this has to do with me as these ladies are accorded these privileges without anyone daring to question. O yes, I know it, but will not God some day ask them to give an account to him for wasting their substance? He surely will.

Then here is another thing: When I ask them to subscribe for one of our church papers or books they tell me this: "Well, really, I just can't afford it, because last season's costumes, the excursions, the auxiliary banquets, balls, theatres, millinery bills, table decorations, duchess curtains, cut flowers, and livery, all cost so much, it takes every dollar to keep up appearances."

Well, I go home, wondering how much longer the Lord will suffer this state of things to exist. These appearances must be kept up, and here are our poor ministers who must go out into the world, preach the glorious gospel, some of them with scant clothing, and no doubt oftentimes with scant food, when they could be made so comfortable if they had just a little of the money so foolishly spent. For example, a friend of mine not long since went shopping, and on her way home called on me. Opening one of her parcels, "See here," she said, and held up three beautiful remnants of embroidery. Said she, "I don't know that I shall ever use them, but they were so cheap and pretty, only one dollar and five cents is all I paid." Now just think of it, dear Saints, here is $1.05 to be piled away where it will do nobody any good. That amount would have paid for a bed and three meals for one of our ministers, and he could also have stamped two letters and bought one postal card. That small amount she threw away could be used right now in our ministry. The same might be said of the money hanging in our closets. We have our closets filled with articles of clothing we could have got along without, and with half that money in the ministry how much good would be done. Don't think I have not been among the guilty ones, for I have, but shall never be again. One or two good dresses each year instead of six or seven will suffice in our home after this. It will also save the dressmaker much trouble in ripping old dresses, and me expense, and more of my money shall go for tithing, and less for dress,

In reading Josephus and the Bible I found that one of God's first laws was that his people should deny themselves and contribute time, talent, and money to his cause. He has never withdrawn his decree, and let us pay our tithing and have one dress less.

Yours for Christ,

LUCILE ALLMYRE.

Dear Sister Walker:—I have been impressed for some time to write, but have not attempted it until now. I love this latter-day gospel above all else on earth, and my heart rejoices when I read of its progress and it causes a desire in me to do more than I ever have done in the past, but it seems like I am doing so little for its advancement that it almost makes me sick at heart. My companion is not with me in this work, but is against me, and I cannot have as much reading matter as I would like to distribute among my neighbors, but the Lord has promised me if I am faithful my companion shall obey the gospel, and I desire the prayers of all the Saints that I may ever be found faithful, that God's promise may be verified.

I have been thinking for some time that I would write to the editor about the "Gospel Chats" written by May. I tried to save them so that I could have them bound, but I lent them so much that they are too much worn to have bound, and I was wondering why they could not be published in book form so the Saints could have them for their children on Christmas as presents. In my estimation there couldn't be a book published that would be more valued among the Saints than the "Gospel Chats." How many times my heart has been made to rejoice through reading them, and I desire so much to have them in a book so when my children grow large enough to read they can have them. Perhaps other Saints have thought of this plan. I hope they have.

Your sister in Christ,

MARY E. DOSS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—Last Friday I officiated at the funeral of Bro. Joseph Lightowler, of Stockton, who died on Tuesday, October 1, after three and one half years of intense suffering. He had no relief from anything but the ordinances of the house of God. His wife has proven her devotion and true wifely conduct during the awful, trying ordeal through which she passed.

On Sunday, the 6th, the San Jose and Irvington Saints had a reunion on a small scale. It was my day to go to Irvington to preach, so I was invited to San Jose, also the Irvington Saints. We had a profitable time. I preached at morning and evening, with good liberty. In the afternoon we had a sacramental and testimony meeting which was very enjoyable, the Spirit being present in a marked degree, especially in administering to the sick.

Our charming and dearly beloved sister J. C. Clapp has lost none of her old time zeal. She is a power to help the young, and the weak and erring ones. Sr. Penfold said at the close of our afternoon meeting, "Isn't it grand to be where that Spirit is?" The grand work is moving on. I am greatly rejoiced to see the young trying to serve the Master and advance his cause.

Editors Herald:—The McDowell-Braden debate began Tuesday evening the 15th inst. at this place in the courthouse. Five propositions are to be discussed in order as follows: Latter Day Saints Church; Disciple or Christian Church; Book of Mormon; Canon of Scriptures; Prophetic mission of Joseph Smith;—seventeen sessions to be used in the examination.

The first proposition was finished last eve, and the manner in which Bro. McDowell handled the question was grand indeed. God blessed him to a remarkable degree and Mr. Braden seemed lost to know how to answer. Mr. B. is resorting to his old tactics, but he found himself in a corner last night and roared out "liar" when Bro. J. F. caught him.

We feel thankful to God for such a noble standard bearer and the blessings received. The attendance is good and interest excellent.

Yours truly,

C. J. HUNT.

Editors Herald:—Perhaps a word from this part of the field would not be out of place. We may not be able to give as glowing accounts as some but we believe we can at least "report progress."

Both our conferences, the Northeastern Illinois and Kewanee district were fairly well attended and blessed by the presence of God's Spirit. The spirit of unity and peace prevailed throughout. The former officers were sustained in the Northeastern Illinois district. Bro. James McKiernan was chosen to preside over Kewanee district in place of Bro. A. J. Keck who was forced to resign on account of ill health.

We hope the day is not far distant when the high priests and elders shall be willing and able to assume the responsibility of their calling, and relieve the seventies that they may push their work into new fields, agreeably to the late commandments; but until that time there does not seem to be much chance for a release of these men. If there is a demand for any one thing in the church to-day, it is for pastors. There are many who are willing to go out and preach the gospel to the world, but few to feed the church, to take care of branches and districts after they are organized. May God raise up men and help them to qualify themselves for these positions!

Our tent work this summer was not as successful as we could have desired owing to one of our missionaries being hindered through sickness, leaving the tent in the hands of one a good share of the time. This work is altogether too much for one man. However we believe much good was accomplished; some were baptized and much prejudice removed. Those left to do the work did nobly and it is certainly no fault of theirs if sufficient progress were not made. The interest manifest by the people in hearing the word is truly encouraging. The calls for preaching are more than we can supply. I have never been so busy since I entered the field, and I never enjoyed my work better.

A few weeks ago I held a series of meetings at Dahinda, Illinois. Bro. Dean Smith lives about four miles from this place and through his efforts a good interest had been aroused. There are no Saints living in town, but from the first a good audience was in attendance, and Sunday evening the large schoolhouse was simply packed. I enjoyed good liberty and the people seemed to drink in every word. Some idea may be had of the good influence the gospel has had in this place when we state that Bro. Smith has had subscribed something over seven hundred dollars for a church building to be erected this fall. The foundation is nearly completed, the lumber has been purchased, and by Christmas we hope to see a good building dedicated to the service of God, with a free pulpit and an open Bible. Ours will be the first church built in this town; built principally by outsiders, not a member of our church in town. Strange, isn't it?

One gentleman, a member of no church, but formerly an opposer of our work, was so delighted with the gospel that he made arrangements for me to give a series of sermons at Williamsfield, a town situated about five miles from Dahinda. He took pains to have our meetings well advertised by circulating bills throughout the country, besides putting notices in the papers. He hired the opera house, a very fine hall; friends helped form a choir and played the piano for us, and we had a good hearing. I held five services and was well received. I could not ask better treatment and not a murmur did I hear in opposition to the truth.

One evening the Methodist minister and his wife helped to form our choir. He sat near me during the preaching. My subject was, The Plan of Salvation. I had excellent liberty and certainly preached as plain as ever I did in my life. I had little reason to suppose my reverend friend would feel pleased, but to my surprise, at the close of the services, he and his wife grasped my hand and thanked me for what I had said and expressed themselves as well pleased. He asked for our tracts; I gave him some; also the Voice of Warning. We have reason to believe good was accomplished. O what a pleasure it is to speak to a houseful of outsiders who are willing to hear the truth!

I arrived home from Williamsfield last Monday. I have had to neglect the work in the city to fill the many calls outside, being away, I think, the most of my time this season. The local brethren, however, have held the fort and done well; visiting brethren also have helped us. Bro. Henry Stebbins did us good service in his recent visit; I much regretted being unable to be at home while he was in the city. Bro. A. H. Mills kindly rendered the Saints service last Sunday.

The work in the city seems to be doing nicely. The spirit of peace and love prevails in our assemblies. "This is the Lord's work, and it is marvelous in our eyes." The Lord has been good to us especially in the administration to the sick. Three have lately been baptized who were made to realize the truth of this work through the healing of the sick. Another case of the kind is causing considerable commotion in certain circles. A young lady, a member of the Baptist Church, was stricken down with typhoid fever. In order that she might receive extra attention she was taken to the Presbyterian hospital and a trained nurse engaged at twenty dollars per week. In a little more than a week she was given up by the doctors. The mother of the lady sent word to her brother in Indiana who is a member of our church. He came at once to the city, but before doing so requested the prayers of the Saints in behalf of his niece. Upon arriving in the city he called upon the elders to administer to her. When they administered to her she lay unconscious and but little hope of her recovery was entertained. The father and uncle, however, seemed to obtain the evidence of her recovery, and wanted her removed to her home. The next day when we called again she was much better and all were rejoicing at the change. The father became disgusted at the lack of faith in God manifested by the attendants, and at the medicine administered, (whiskey and strychnine,) and had her removed to her home and refused to allow another drop of medicine to pass her lips. We have seldom seen more faith manifested among the Saints.

As might be expected this raised quite a storm of opposition, but the father was firm. After she was brought home we administered to her again and she has been getting along finely ever since. She is now able to sit up part of the time, the fever has left her, and her appetite is good. She is still quite weak but gaining strength rapidly. To God be all the praise! We think you may expect to hear from these parties again.

I mention this incident to show how the Lord is working; the indications point to a good work here. There are many obstacles to the work in a large city that are not encountered elsewhere, but there are good people here, and on the whole we feel encouraged. Still battling for the truth,

Yours in bonds,
F. G. PITT.

JOHN'S MILLS, Mo., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—I have been working in this country since August 10. Have been having good liberty in speaking, and large and attentive crowds in attendance. The work here is moving in a steady manner. Since coming here I have baptized twelve persons all of them heads of families.

A good interest is being manifest among the people. Some strong opposition is commencing, doors being locked, lies being told, and the usual cry of "Mormonism," "Delusion," etc. I am watching closely the little work I am getting started here.

The people are mostly poor, but I expect the result to be good, and the little opposition so far has only been in our favor. I don't care for the outside as long as the inside is clear of the enemy. This work grows grander and grander. And of late I am strongly impressed that the "hastening time" is indeed right here. There is great commotion in the minds of the people here, that is, those that are getting awake. Some, however, are dead asleep.

My love goes out to all Saints, and especially those who are scattered on the hills and desert places.

I am yours in Christ,
W. C. CATHER.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., Oct. 14.

Editors Herald:—The 28th of July found me at the Baker schoolhouse attending a two days' meeting appointed by Elder George Jenkins. He has done a good work at this place, having baptized a number, I think about fifteen. Here I met Bro. Harvey Kepley and wife, Bro. Wheeler and wife, and Mrs. Jenkins and Sappenfield, all of the Byrneville branch. Elder V. D. Baggerly was also in attendance. We had a time long to be remembered, by the writer at least. Quiet a large crowd attended our meetings and good was accomplished. The singing was fine, being led by Bro. Kepley and his wife, who by the way is the finest vocalist in the church in Southern Indiana. There are a number here near the kingdom. We look for a good report from this place at no distant day.

The 3d of August found me at the Sulphur Well in company with V. D. Baggerly, where a short time before he had baptized two noble men—Bra. Jeffries and Pernady. There are others here who will unite with us soon no doubt.

From here we passed on down the Ohio River to the little hamlet of Darby, where I tried to dispense the gospel. On the 14th I was at the Rously schoolhouse, and at the Lilly Dale branch. Some here seem to be watching and waiting for a more convenient time. On the 25th I was at the Huff schoolhouse in Spencer County, thence to McVillie, where the restored gospel had never been presented before. At other points along the route we sought to effect openings, but were denied.

The 5th of September found me at Fredonia. Some interest is manifest at this place, and there may be a few gathered out by and by. The 14th found me at Oakland City. Preached here till the 19th, when I went to near Oatsville, where I tried to dispense the word for one week. A little interest was manifested at this point. From here I passed on to the Wilder schoolhouse in Pike County; and on the 27th I was attending district conference with the Plainville branch, and on the Sunday following dedicated the Saints' chapel at that place. There was a goodly number in attendance. All seemed well pleased, both Saints and friends. On the Thursday following I baptized Bro. William Harbestrit; others there will unite with the church ere long. I visited Tom's Hill, but preached only once on account of a severe cold.

On the 12th of October I returned to Oakland City where I am at the present writing. Yesterday (Sunday) I baptized Miss Lottie Coleman, daughter of Bro. Sylvester Coleman. She is very zealous for the gospel and will be an honor to the church. May she be faithful to her covenant.

Thus the work moves slowly in this part of the vineyard of the Lord. Bro. James M. Scott reports encouragingly from his field. He has baptized a number of late. The brethren as a rule are pushing the work, I believe, to the extent of their ability.

LITTLE PRAIRIE RONDE, Mich., Oct. 14.

Editors Herald:—Bro. L. F. Daniel and I reached this point and began church the 10th inst. Three points were assigned us by the missionary in charge to be worked prior to the district conference.

We began shortly after the Knox two-days' meeting and are now at our last place, the others, Buchanan and New Troy, having received their quota of gospel work. The writer also spoke at Gallien the 5th and 6th.

We stopped at South Bend, Indiana, while on our way here and found Sr. Listenberger very sick. We administered to her twice, which resulted in convalescence for a time; but she was not quite so well when we left. We pray that she and her anxious husband may be attended by "the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ" in this and all other trials. While in the city we viewed Mr. J. Oliver's and C. Studebaker's mansions. The former is not yet complete. From their preparations I judge they are placing themselves in readiness to say, "Soul, take thine ease;" but Jesus said that rust corrupts, moths eat, and thieves break through and steal earthly treasures. However, these destructive agents may not be able to affect mansions in the manner indicated, to any great extent; but it is certain that they are not beyond the power of disintegrating influences. In view of those facts, coupled with the special financial unrest of our day, we conclude that our souls are immeasurably easier than theirs, despite our penury in silver and gold. Notwithstanding this, if the word "everlasting" invariably means "without end" in point of duration, as many modern religionists assiduously aver, mammon (the riches of this world) can build "habitations" that will survive the expiration of time; so these gentlemen "are wiser in their generation than the children of light," whose spirits may be easier, under present exigencies and distresses. (St. Luke 16: 8, 9.)

Truly the world is in a deplorable condition in its relations to "the glad tidings of the kingdom of God." Human ideals are now and ever have been faulty. The apostles said: "The fashion of this world passeth away."—Paul. For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth and the flower thereof falleth away; but the word of the Lord endureth forever."—Peter.

We shall continue here until time to start to the district conference of the 26th inst.

MIDWAY, Utah, Oct. 12.

Editors Herald.—I am a long way from the church I have espoused. I love the brethren and sisters. I am sorry to see so much indebtedness to the Herald Office by them, but I cannot help it; I wish I could. They must feel in bondage. We should all stand upright in the world. We as Latter Day Saints should realize that we are one family and we should be upright with one another, bound together as the heart of one man, and have an interest in each other's welfare, realizing that as the children of God are one family in heaven, we should be one family on earth, with the love of God in our hearts. When I was a child my father died, when I was about six years old. My mother taught me good principles from that time till I grew large enough to go to Sunday school, where I learned to read the Bible. The superintendent taught me good principles that I cannot forget.

I read the supplement to the Saints' Herald, which brought me to think of my mother and the superintendent's good advice, which has been a guide in my life. I knew that baptism was essential to my salvation, and the Holy Scriptures are my best guide. I counted the cost before I was baptized.

I came to Utah in 1868. I soon found that they were not in the same Spirit as I was. I found they were too covetous, that I was deceived, so I did not join any branch. I would not be baptized again, as I did not see any need to. I see more and hear more cursing and swearing than ever I heard in my life, and particularly from those who say they have been through the [endowment.—Ed.] house. It is not like the example our most blessed Lord and Savior has set us. We are to follow him. He says, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." I try to govern myself in all things; I find that is the best government in the world, to follow the teachings of the Spirit of truth, the Holy Scriptures. They are my daily companions and my heart rejoices in them.

Everything we do should be with the sentiments of our hearts, either singing, praying, or preaching; then there is a power given us of God our Father. O that light and truth may spread over the earth and the people flock into the Church of Christ as doves to the windows and not act the hypocrite, but serve God with the full purpose of heart! He knows our hearts and thoughts; we cannot hide from his presence. I could write a great deal of my experience. My love to all.

Your brother,

THOMAS STREET.

HONOLULU, H. I., Oct. 1.

Editors Herald.—By this mail I send you one of the first copies of the native edition of the Doctrine and Covenants that I have received from the hands of the printer and binder. As you will see from the title page it is some time since it was started, the printer having had to wait for copy from the translator. The printing and binding of one thousand copies has cost $443.10 or at the rate of $1.05 per page, the work being done by the Hawaiian Gazette Company, of this city.

The bulk of the translation was done by Bro. Poepoe, who read it over and corrected mistranslations with Bro. Clapp and myself. Mrs. E. Nakuina also aided in translating and proofreading; but Bro. Poepoe revised the whole of it, and I believe the translation to be a very good one. I am glad and thankful that it is finished, and now we shall have to try and sell the books. I have already advanced the greater portion due for printing, and am to pay the balance when the whole of the books are delivered. We shall try and sell the books at the rate of seventy-five cents or one dollar each, and hope to dispose of quite a number to members of the Utah Church, who as yet have no translation of the revelations given to the church.

As you will notice from the index we show what revelations are to be found in the Utah editions. If we are successful in disposing of the books we intend then to devote a portion of the proceeds to printing of the Book of Mormon, a native edition of which is badly needed. With this end in view Bro. Poepoe and I are now translating together the Book of Mormon so as to have copy ready.

So far, this has been a year of trial for Honolulu, and events have interfered with our progress. First we had the revolution early in the year which upset business and everything else. For some time we were unable to hold services and the natives remained for some time in a restless condition. Now we have the cholera to contend with, and although it has not been epidemic, we have had enough to upset business and to interfere with our church meetings, which were stopped altogether for a time; and now we are allowed only one a week, on Sunday morning. Under these conditions it is impossible to make much headway, but I trust passing through these trials has humbled us and increased our faith in the Lord and his work. I know it has made me more anxious to labor for the spread of the gospel. I hope also that these trials have done something towards preparing the hearts of others here for the reception of the gospel teachings. So far none of our members have been taken with the cholera, though they have been living right in the midst of it.

As for myself and family, we at the present time are fairly well, but I would like to feel stronger. My wife has had quite a siege of sickness, but is now well. I have almost made up my mind that I shall have to hold on to the work alone here till next year. Well, perhaps it is for the best. I rejoice to see the progress that is being made elsewhere, and to notice how the Lord is blessing those who are faithful. Although I have never yet experienced the abundance of the Spirit that seems to have been bestowed upon many, yet I know that at times I have been remembered, and I have been specially blessed and prospered also beyond all expectations in these troublous times and because I pay my tithing.

When prevented from meeting together recently with the members on account of the cholera, I addressed a letter through one of the native papers to the members of my flock, exhorting them to faithfulness and diligence in keeping God's word, and spoke of the opportunity that they now had of letting their light shine, by living the lives of Saints of God, and by sustaining those in the government who were doing their utmost to stamp out the cholera by improvement of sanitary conditions and by other means. I also asked them to devote a certain Thursday to fasting and prayer. In an editorial the following day in a native paper the church received commendation for its course, and it mentioned that we were the first and only ones to do it so far.

Seeing the prevalence of the disease Bro. Poepoe, myself, and many others did voluntary inspecting work twice daily, which was necessary to help out the Board of Health in their labors, and also to quickly report cases which were constantly concealed by the natives till the victims were dead or dying.

There has not been a case of cholera for three days, and only two or three during the last ten. We hope it is over. Total cases 87; deaths 61.

Our lessons from the Gospel Quarterly are also translated into Hawaiian and published weekly in a native paper, which goes to different parts of the islands; so you see we are trying to keep the work alive. Kind regards. Your brother in Christ,

G. J. WALLER.

LEBANON, Oreg., Oct. 11.

Editors Herald.—I wish to ask the Saints to remember Bro. C. A. Bishop. He is very sick and has been confined to his bed for four months. Bro. Bishop is a man full of energy, and has faithfully stood by the church for many years. Such men are valuable to the cause of Christ, and I ask that the prayer unions throughout make especial mention of him before the Lord that he may be yet spared unto the church and his family.

J. C. CLAPP.

SINKING SPRINGS, Ohio, Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—In company with Bro. James Moler I held a ten days' meeting at Elmville, about five miles from here, closing on the 6th inst. Two were baptized; others are convinced and desire to obey but are hindered. The meeting was arranged for the grove, but the weather being so chilly, after a few services, we were permitted to occupy in the schoolhouse. We had a very favorable hearing and expect to return again at a more convenient season of the year for a grove meeting.

We have held three services in the branch here, and go to-morrow to a place known here as Nace' schoolhouse, another new opening about five miles from the church. Bro. James Moler left me on the 8th for home, thence on to Hocking county. I expect after closing this meeting to join the contending forces at McArthur, Ohio, on the 21st inst., under the generalship of Bro. R. Etzenhouser and that indomitable hero of Creola branch, Bro. Aaron Kirkendall. We believe we are making fair progress in this district, though there is much to oppose us. Prejudice very great, people generally unconcerned about religious matters.

I expect to labor part of the winter in West Virginia; and any seeing this notice and knowing of new openings, where little or no preaching has been done, will please correspond with me, and with Bro. D. L. Shinn, that arrangements may be made ahead, so that no time be lost when I get there. My address is Byer, Ohio.

Fraternally yours,

J. L. GOODRICH.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—We inclose list of church services in and around St. Louis, and would like to have the ministry passing through give us a call. Bro. John Robinson, of Independence, was with us last week, in attendance upon the St. Louis fair, looking after interests connected with his business in the agricultural implement line. We enjoyed his social visits very much and the Saints were instructed by his counsel last Sunday, we are told; not being present personally, but away to fill appointments at Alma, Illinois, where we expected to be at this time of writing had not sickness in family called us home, Sr. Bond being taken with what the doctors would probably call pneumonia. She is better but still very poorly.

We hope to be able to return to Alma first of next week to hold a series of meetings. An excellent time was had at Alma last Sunday, a large audience in the evening, and an excellent spirit throughout the day. Some of the local officers are ministerially active; Bro. John Parrish preaching at Oak Hill and Cheltenham afternoon and evening last Sunday. Preaching to-morrow evening at De Hoadamont, where we are trying to secure an awakening as to our claims.

Attention to branch matters in the way of adjustments of troubles of long standing perplexes and hinders effort, and mutual growth and general prosperity are retarded by indifferent and careless lives. The greatness and importance of attention to daily detail of duty shuts out and bars the abundance of Spirit manifestation, power, and growth in the divine life, when neglected, until but little save a perfunctory and scarce pass muster service toward God and his church is seen, and, with not a few, resulting in an almost total loss of interest or attendance upon divine service and means of Christian growth and grace.

There is a younger and rising generation, however, that promises, under proper influences and leadership that are in touch and spirit with the work of the Reorganization, and a clean cut divorce from those enticing mysteries that have taken the place of clean, clear, simple, and devoted gospel life, better things than is possible until the old leaven is worked out, and that which Solomon affirmed to be the beginning of wisdom takes its place.

The evening of October 4, our chapel was invaded by a wedding party. Mr. George Reeves and Sr. Mamie, daughter of Bro. Charles and Sr. Peet were the principals, both estimable young people. Elder John Parrish, uncle of the bride and friend of the groom officiated at the altar. The church was beautifully decorated by the artist in such matters, Bro. John Dawson. The reception and social following, held at the bride's parents', was a pleasant and decidedly agreeable event. The happy couple left shortly after for points in Texas, and on returning will take up residence near this city.

Striving to prepare for coming necessities and emergency, always hoping for better things to come and in hope of the final victory,

In gospel bonds,

M. H. BOND.

JOHNSTON, R. I., Oct. 14.

Editors Herald:—When last I troubled your columns I was at Norwalk, Connecticut. I continued there until July 30, enjoying myself after the fashion of a missionary. The Saints and friends were kind and I enjoyed my stay among them. Leaving Bro. Potts to more than fill the place I left vacant, I went to New York and after a half-day's tramp around the city took passage on the steamer Massachusetts for Providence. Went home and tried to induce the youngest member of the family to recognize me as a necessary piece of furniture, but no amount of baby talk could do it to our mutual satisfaction, and time alone has bridged the coolness between us.

Sunday, August 3, in company with Brn. George Smith and William Fenner we went to Bro. Ransom Searle's where quite a company of Saints was gathered. We enjoyed the service, and in the evening listened to Bro. George Smith tell of God's love, at Providence. On Friday in company with Bro. George Suttill I went to Plainville on a steed that never tires, although I believe it is sometimes retired. On the reunion grounds everything was going on nicely, Bro. F. O. Coombs being on hand as large and smiling as ever. Saturday night the writer was called on to preach the first sermon, and although tired did the best I could. After the reunion Bro. Davison and the writer assisted by Bro. Greene put up the tent in the city of Providence. On the first night Bro. Greene did the preaching, while Bro. Davison, the writer, and several local brethren did their best to keep order on the outside. We were not disturbed afterward, however, as a blue coat and a few brass buttons seem to work like a charm in quieting hoodlums. Bro. Luff rendered valuable service in the tent, also Brn. Greene and Davison.

From Providence we moved the tent to Fiskville, where we remained some three weeks, preaching to fair audiences with good interest. Bro. G. H. Smith started in missionary work with me at the above place, as Bro. Davison left for the Maine reunion. The qualities of Bro. Smith as an all-round man were tested, as our tent was pitched along side of a respectable looking barn that the Cranston branch had voted to turn into a church; and as men folks seemed to be a little scarce, Bro. Smith and the writer laid aside the preacher's coat during the day and put on the carpenter's habiliments. For three weeks we worked days and preached nights. Some of the brethren came to our aid; also some who do not belong to our faith. May God bless them all. Sr. Jane Randall deserves special mention as a noble helper in every way. The church is now ready for plastering. The work in this vicinity is onward, and it is especially gratifying to have a church building where they have tried to "drive the Saints out;" but the sentiment is changing, thank God, and all we have to do is to be faithful, and all will be well. While preaching at the above place I had the pleasure of baptizing Sr. Howard, who had been a member of the Baptist Church for fifty years. From Fiskville we went to Hope, Rhode Island, where interest was good; but the cool weather drove us into winter quarters. Next week I am off for Nova Scotia; so sayeth the powers that be.

Yours as ever,

G. W. ROBLEY.

ELM MOTT, Texas, Oct. 14.

Editors Herald:—I am now at Geneva, Sabine County. I came here Saturday, to commence meetings, we found the new schoolhouse was not finished and the old one had been turned into a livery stable. So I could get no house to use to hold services in. One other object I had in coming here was to ordain Bro. C. W. Spence to the office of an elder, but he refuses to be ordained; so it seems that my trip here is nearly fruitless; yet I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. W. D. Caustead and Sr. Eva, his wife; also Bro. Spencer; and find them all very well and moving on in the good work. I went to church Sunday, and Sunday night heard some Baptist doctrine. O, how I felt like preaching the gospel to the congregation! I don't wonder at Paul saying that his spirit was stirred within him at Athens when he saw the people wholly given to idolatry, when I see the people of my day given over to creeds that have been made by men in darkness.

The preacher said last night that works had no relation to salvation at all in any sense, in obtaining it or in keeping it, and that those who believed they had were not saved. I wonder when the time will come when the people will hear the gospel under such circumstances. God have mercy upon them.

I leave here to-morrow for Elmwood, Bell County; and next Saturday for Durango. I had to wait until then to get a house to preach in there.

Yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

HILLS, Minn., Oct. 18.

Editors Herald:—I am still at work endeavoring to acquaint the people of this the southwestern corner of Minnesota with our work. We are gaining ground in and about Magnolia, and I trust, also in this vicinity. The few scattered members in these parts are doing nobly, assisting me in various ways. One more, Sr. Lizzie Pokett, has been added to our number at Magnolia. A few weeks ago Bro. Pokett and I went to Adrian to see if a place could be obtained there to preach in, but without success. Last week I went to Luverne, the seat of this county, went from house to house distributing tracts, also spoke a few times in Bro. Marshall's house, but few only came to hear. Last Tuesday I came to this place, and have spoken twice in the house of Bro. Midgorden to a few interested listeners; will speak to-night in the town hall. To-morrow I return to Magnolia to fill appointments in two different places on Sunday. Expect to go to South Dakota soon.

I shall endeavor to reach as many new places as possible, but believe it to be equally necessary to look after, encourage, and build up those already in the faith, at least until organizations can be effected.

Yours in the work,

PETER ANDERSON.

IS SECTION 17 OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS A REVELATION?

MANY times, when talking with different brethren and discussing the law and order of the church, I have been met with the statement that section seventeen of Doctrine and Covenants is not a revelation from God but only a declaration of belief and rules adopted by the church. I have heard some elders so express themselves in public. To show that this is a wrong position and to prove that it is as much a revelation as any other, I quote from History of Joseph Smith, published in Times and Seasons, volume 3, page 928, October 1, 1842. Joseph Smith, editor:—

In this manner did the Lord continue to give us instructions from time to time, concerning the duties which now devolved upon us, and among many other things of the kind, we obtained of him the following, by the spirit of prophecy and revelation; which not only gave us much information, but also pointed out to us the precise day upon which, according to his will and commandment, we should proceed to organize his church once again, here upon the earth.

Here follows the revelation now known as section seventeen of Doctrine and Covenants. It will not do for any of us to seek to evade any of the issues therein contained by saying that it is not a revelation, for Joseph Smith says it was given him "by the spirit of prophecy and revelation."

T. W. WILLIAMS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Sept. 3, 1895.

WHERE RESPONSIBILITY LIES.

WHILE there is much to cheer and encourage and many indications of progress in our work, there is no doubt that if the revelations already given were better understood Zion would prosper and flourish to a much greater extent than at present. But the chief responsibility seems to rest upon the priesthood. They are to perfect the Saints, and edify the body of Christ till we all come to the unity of the faith, etc.

They are to see that the law is kept, and in order that their counsel "may be made effectual" by their example, they must be "without blame in word and deed."

My thoughts have of late been especially drawn to the necessity of greater oneness and faithfulness among the ministry as a means, as the means, of bringing the church up higher, and of winning souls to Christ.

Unto us, not only of the greater, but also of the lesser priesthood, have been given the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Do we appreciate the measure of our responsibility, the power for good vested in us according to the gifts and callings of God? Only as we advance can the church come up higher, can the world be brought to a knowledge of the truth. "If your eye be single to the glory of God, your whole body shall be full of light" the Lord has said; but if we lack in one point the whole law is broken. If we fail ourselves in observance of the instructions God has given to us, we are as salt that has lost its savor, so far as the church is concerned.

The late Herald editorial, "Local officers and their work," merits more than a hasty reading. Are there not many holding authority who are making but little effort to perform the duties incumbent upon them by virtue of their office and calling?

Those who are made officers in branches especially, the lesser as well as the greater priesthood, are in a position by faith to work righteousness and accomplish much for the church. But preaching is not the only means of doing good. The priest's duty is not only to preach, but to teach, exhort, expound, and these especially I think in private, as he is to "visit the house of each member and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties."

How great an arm of salvation is paralyzed when in branches the priest fails to act! The teacher's work is also a highly important one, inasmuch as he is to "watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty." Can this be accomplished without personal visitation? The deacon also is more than a mere door-keeper, for he is to assist the teacher always if occasion requires.

Now if family duties are not attended to, the members do not pray vocally and in secret by reason of the priest's failure to do his duty, and the members do not do their duty in not meeting together often; and if there is hardness, backbiting, and evil speaking by reason of the teacher's and deacon's inactivity, where will the work go to? The times of our ignorance God has winked at, but now we ought to be awake.

Can an able, traveling elder, much less an unable one cure by preaching that which God has otherwise provided a remedy for?

How grand and good the provisions that God has made for his church, every man to labor in his own office and calling; the missionary to bear the burden of souls of the honest in heart and gather them into a fold where they will be shepherded and fed by those who are called to do such work. How inefficient must either branch of the ministry, local or traveling, be, without the other's kindly, hearty, and diligent support.

Desiring not to criticise or find fault with any, but to encourage and sustain all in the discharge of duty, that animosities, divisions, harshness, evil speaking, etc., may pass away, and that love and unity may prevail and Zion prosper to the joy and rejoicing of all our hearts, has the above been written.

M. F. GOWELL.

WHY I AM A "JOSEPHITE."—No. 6.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

AND so the years passed on, the Lord waiting patiently for the Twelve to do their duty towards the flock over which they had been made overseers. Iniquity accumulates, law after law was violated, until it came to pass in the year 1852, in the eighth month and 29th day, that the great culminating act of sin and apostasy was brought about in the introduction of polygamy. But the Lord had still a few in reserve that "had not bowed the knee to Baal." "A few names even in Sardis [Zarahemla] which" had "not defiled their garments," and to them he turned as the hope of latter-day Israel, and in 1851 and 1852 those few, by command of the Spirit, began to cast off all claimants to the leadership of the church and to bind themselves together waiting for the Lord's anointed.

And on January 29, 1854, came the voice of the Spirit unto them saying:—

Ye ask truly, but ye ask amiss: cleanse yourselves of all bitterness, and come before me as one man, and prove me thereby, saith the Lord by the voice of his Spirit, and lo, I will scatter the darkness, and thy watchmen, O Israel, shall see eye to eye, and this remnant shall rise out of obscurity and put on strength. Uphold the first elder, or senior, in this work, whom I have appointed, by your faith and prayers, and surely I will give you knowledge, and show you hidden wisdom, concerning the remnant of whom I have spoken in days of old, whom I have appointed to speak comfortably to the captives, and give them bread and water in their journey.—Saints' Advocate, page 141.

In the light of this revelation through the voice of the Spirit we can understand what is meant by the Prophet Joel when he says:—

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.—Joel 2: 32.

The enemies of this remnant which the Lord has called try to make it appear that these revelations and manifestations came through a little girl, and endeavor to throw discredit upon them for that reason. They base their statements upon the fact that on one occasion a little girl, a daughter of Elder Gurley, spoke under the influence of the Spirit, in tongues concerning this remnant. And this is the only instance where anything of the kind occurred that is related in history; but so eager are they to "fight against God" and his chosen remnant that they forget that Jesus said,—

I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.—Matt. 11: 25.

Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise.—Matt. 21: 16.

Coming, no matter from what source, it is prophetic of the then future of the Reorganization, and the words "This remnant shall rise out of obscurity and put on strength," have met with a brilliant fulfillment; and if I am asked how, I can best answer, I believe, in the language of our President, Joseph Smith, written in 1878, in answer to the question "What has the Reorganization done?"

It has saved the faith of hundreds in original Mormonism.

It has proved that evil, wrongdoing, crime, and debauchery do not justly belong in the faith and practice of Latter Day Saints.

It has restored the confidence of hundreds in their fellow men, and shown that a man may be clothed upon with the priesthood, or authority to act in the name of Christ, without being given to evil practices by which his fellows are wronged and defrauded.

It has sent its elders into nearly all parts of the United States where the early elders of the church had gone, and there set about the work of redeeming the name of the church from the odium cast upon it by the advocates and practitioners of polygamy.

It has won respect for its doctrines in those places where its elders have been heard.

It is spreading the doctrines of primitive Mormonism in every place where the elders can go, and in doing this it has made clear the difference between Utah Mormonism and the primitive faith of the church.

It has built up, since 1860, over three hundred branches, extending from Maine to New Mexico, and from Oregon to Florida, in England, Wales, Tahiti, and Australia.

It has made the name of Latter Day Saint honorable in places where it was a hiss and a byword, and been the instrument of fulfilling the word of the Lord, "and ye shall find favor in the eyes of the people."

It has so wrought that its elders are able to stand up in defense of its truths without a cringing sense of shame of the name they bear.

It has kept its public pledges to advocate the truth and insist that honesty is not only the best, but the only policy that will establish men.

It has an almost empty treasury, but its Bishopric can sleep in peace, because their coffers hold no ill-gotten gains, and its officers do not fear the just complaint of wronged and oppressed comrades. . . .

It has built "houses of worship" in places where its members dwell, and where they have sung, prayed, and worshiped God, after the manner their neighbors call heresy, but have maintained their integrity during it all.

It is carefully and steadily gaining ground everywhere, and the Lord confirms the word. . . . It has so labored and so lived that the places whence the Saints were driven in the years gone by are open to their return, and the inhabitants thereof are asking the Saints to come in and dwell with them, thereby making practicable the fulfillment of the prophecy, which states that the waste places of Zion shall be rebuilt. . . .

It has made a happy and smiling people of those cast down, oppressed with care; and well nigh hopeless.—Saints' Advocate, vol. 1, pages 31, 32.

I shall now answer a few inquiries in regard to matters which the Utah people consider of infinite importance and which are put to our elders everywhere, and then submit these reasons to the consideration of the public. I append these questions and answers because the people of Utah have been misinformed in regard to the position of the "Reorganization."

1. Do you believe in the building of temples?

Yes, but we believe that the building of them must be commanded of God; that they are not acceptable to him unless the building of them is commanded. We do not interpret the command contained in Doctrine and Covenants 107, (Utah edition 124,) as a perpetual command. The statement is, "which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name." If the terms were reversed making it read "commanded to always build," then some such an idea might obtain; but not without doing violence to the sense of the passage can it be made to appear as a perpetual command to build. The evident sense of the passage is that God reserves the right to command his people when he desires a house built unto his holy name.

This statement is borne out in history. Andrew Jensen in Historical Record volume 7, page 434, says:—

The previous summer (August 5, 1837), the authorities of the church in Missouri had resolved in council to go on moderately and build a house unto the name of the Lord in Far West. When Joseph arrived there he counseled that the building of that house should be postponed until the Lord should reveal it to be his will to have it commenced.

See also Millennial Star volume 16, page 89. And further; it is possible for a people to build temples to the name of God and be radically wrong. In fact, the building of temples for the purposes named in the revelation just quoted, without a direct revelation or command from God, is evidence of itself that the people are wrong and very presumptuous.

No more striking fulfillment of prophecy can be found in scripture than is exhibited by the Utah people in their cry everywhere throughout their land,

The temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord, are these.—Jer. 7: 4.

I do not say that this prophecy refers to the people in the valleys of the mountains, but it looks very much that way and yet the Lord says:—

Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Trust ye not in lying words, saying, The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, are these.—Jer. 7: 3, 4.

For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and buildeth temples.—Hosea 8: 14.

So it is not a mark of God's approval to build temples unless he has commanded to so build; and no one has ever claimed that the temples in Utah were commanded to be built, by God; but, upon the contrary, Brigham Young taught that it was no more necessary for us to have revelations for temples than to have them upon the building of our dwellinghouses. In Journal of Discourse, Vol. 1, p. 278, he said:—

You might as well ask the Lord to give revelation upon the dimensions and construction of the various apartments of your dwellinghouses as upon the erection of temples, for we know beforehand what is necessary.

The Reorganization owns and controls the only temple standing to-day that has been built by command of God, and are waiting patiently the perfecting of its title to the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri, and a command of God to build a temple unto his name in that chosen spot.

2. Do you believe in the gathering?

Yes, but only to the land of Zion, in Jackson County, Missouri, for God has said that "Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered." (D. C. 88: 8; 94: 5; 98: 4; Utah edition 90: 37; 97: 19; 101: 17.) And Independence, Jackson County, Missouri, was the central stake of Zion, and no other place was to be appointed until there was "no more room" found there for them. But they might gather into "the regions round about." And further; we believe that the gathering should be in strict accordance with the directions given in the revelations of God and that which is written, which is as follows:—

And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight.—D. C. 58: 12; Utah Ed. 58: 56.

And now, behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning his Saints, that they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste lest there should be confusion, which bringeth pestilence.—D. C. 63: 8; Utah Ed. 63: 24.

Therefore a commandment I give unto all the churches, that they shall continue to gather unto the places which I have appointed; nevertheless, as I have said unto you in a former commandment, let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you.—D. C. 98: 9; Utah Ed. 101: 67, 68.

Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people: and behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs.—D. C. 102: 7; Utah Ed. 105: 24, 25.

This we are doing, and as an evidence of God's favor, we are having the favor and grace of the people.

3. Do you believe in tithing?

Yes, but not as it is taught in Utah. The beginning of tithing is one tenth of all one possesses, be that one dollar or one million of dollars; after that, one tenth of one's interest (not income) annually. An individual who only earns enough to keep his family during the year is exempt from paying tithing, after he has tithed his possessions, but if he earns a dollar above his necessities, one tenth of it belongs to the Lord. But if, by sacrifice, he can save a few dollars, he may give under the law of freewill offerings.

This does not work hardship, but is just and equal. Surely one who can lay aside one or a hundred dollars per year can give one tenth of it to the Lord; and in the matter of freewill offerings, there is ample room for sacrifice.

4. Do you believe in baptism for the dead?

Yes, but like the building of temples we are waiting for the Lord to command, and also to remove his restrictions. In the year 1841 the Lord said to his people,

... But I command you, all ye my saints, to build an house unto me; and I grant unto you a sufficient time to build an house unto me, and during that time your baptisms shall be acceptable unto me.

But, behold, at the end of this appointment, your baptisms for your dead shall not be acceptable unto me; and if you do not these things at the end of the appointment, ye shall be rejected as a church with your dead, saith the Lord your God. For, verily I say unto you, that after you have had sufficient time to build an house to me, wherein the ordinance of baptizing for the dead belongeth, and for which the same was instituted from before the foundation of the world, your baptism for your dead cannot be acceptable unto me; for therein are the keys of the holy priesthood ordained, that you may receive honor and glory. And after this time, your baptisms for the dead, by those who are scattered abroad, are not acceptable unto me, saith the Lord; for it is ordained that in Zion and in her stakes and in Jerusalem those places which I have appointed for refuge, shall be the places for your baptisms for your dead.—D. C. 107: 10, 11; Utah Ed. 124: 31-36.

Nothing can be plainer than this: that if the temple at Nauvoo was not finished in a certain time (and the Lord declares that he will give them a sufficient time), they are to be rejected as a church with their dead.

It was generally understood at Nauvoo that this would be the result of a failure to finish the temple. Parley P. Pratt said that this would be the case. In a speech he made and which can be found on page 693, Vol. 5, Times and Seasons and Mill. Star Vol. 5, page 123, he said:—

He showed the consequences if we did not build it [the temple], "that we should be rejected as a people with our dead."

And Orson Pratt understood that that would be the case, for in a footnote in the Utah edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants he says:—

The Saints to be rejected if they refuse to build the house.

In regard to the finishing of the temple, I find this entry in Parley P. Pratt's autobiography, page 377:—

We continued, however, our work on the temple, a portion of which was finished and dedicated.

Here is an acknowledgement from one who knew that only a portion was finished.

In the Latter Day Saints' Herald, of January 1, 1872, a writer speaking of the Nauvoo Temple says:—

In no sense can it be said truthfully, that any part of the Temple at Nauvoo was completed, with the possible exception of the main assembly room, into which the front doors opened. The basement, in which was the font, was incomplete; the stairway to the left of the front, was not relieved of the rough boards laid on the risings, on which the workmen went up and down; the upper assembly-room was not accessible, the floor not being laid, neither the doors hung nor the walls plastered. Besides this, the inside ornamentation was by no means finished, even in those parts called completed.

And Brigham Young said in the St. George, Utah, Temple, January 1, 1877:—

We that are here are enjoying a privilege that we have no knowledge of any other people enjoying since the days of Adam; that is, to have a temple completed, wherein all the ordinances of the house of God can be bestowed upon his people . . . We built one in Nauvoo. I could pick out several before me now that were there when it was built and know just how much was finished and what was done. It is true we left brethren there with instructions to finish it, and they got it nearly completed before it was burned.

These quotations show conclusively that the Nauvoo Temple was not finished, and it is useless to make the claim that the only reason why it was not finished was because their enemies came upon them. This might have been the secondary reason, as the result of a primary reason; for God had said, "I grant unto you a sufficient time to build an house unto me;" and that meant that all hindering causes would be removed or kept in restraint until they had had sufficient time to prove their faithfulness, and in case of their faithfulness being manifested, he would entirely remove the hindering causes and give them grace, and favor, and prosperity; and in case they should not prove obedient he would "reject" them with "their dead."

And further, as reasons for not practicing the baptisms for the dead and not accepting those baptisms as practiced in Utah, we call attention to the latter clause of the revelation quoted above.

For it is ordained that in Zion and in her stakes and in Jerusalem those places which I have appointed for refuge, shall be the places for your baptisms for your dead."

God had appointed the land of Missouri as the land of Zion and declares that none other should be appointed than that which he had appointed until there was no more room in that place for them. (D. C. 98; Utah Ed. 101.) So if we go by God's word, as we are bound to do, we must reject all baptisms for the dead performed outside of a house built by express command of God, and that house must be built in the appointed Zion, or her stakes, or in Jerusalem.

Fuller reasons and evidence upon this question of the rejection of the church will be given in my next article on "The Necessity for a Reorganization."

A LESSON TO PARENTS.

A YOUNG sister in one of our branches was ill, and suffered untold agonies from kidney diseases, etc., and after suffering some days with intense agony, and having employed a physician, who had operated upon her without permanent relief, her mother, a member of the church, suggested that the elders be called to administer the ordinance for the sick, as given in James 5: 14-16. The young sister revolted at the idea, not from a lack of faith, nor from any objection to the elders, but from a vivid sense of existing wrong, not in her own life, but in that of one of her parents; this parent formerly a member of the church and a presiding elder over a branch, but now a miserable, drunken sot, depriving his wife and children of their earthly necessities, and robbing them of all domestic joy, and stamping a blot on the fair name of the church.

The thought of his conduct caused her heart to revolt at the idea of sending for the elders, and though suffering intense pain, and to all appearance death staring her in the face, she exclaimed in tears, "O, Mother! how can I send for the elders and Father carrying on in his drunkenness?" What a terrible comment on a father's life, that father bound by every law of nature, of God, and of man, to provide for, and give every comfort within his power, to his family; and, greater than all, to lead that family in the ways of righteousness by holy teachings and a righteous example! But instead of doing that he is destroying his own soul, proving a curse to his family, and degrading the fair name of the church; and this conduct so gross and vile, discourages his child from seeking from the Divine source the blessing she so greatly needs.

But, thank God, the faith of the gospel prevailed; she was persuaded to send for the elders. Only one was attainable at first, but he went and did his duty in humility, but only temporary relief was obtained; but on the advent of another elder coming into town both were called for and administered, but yet no permanent relief. Again in the night they were called from their slumbers, as elders often are; again they humbly sought the Lord, and administered in his holy ordinance, and although but a moment before the young sister was groaning and crying in the severest agony of pain, the pains ceased and the mouth-piece was permitted to say, "Thy testimony shall be heard in the congregation of the Saints." All but the elders had concluded she must die, but God be praised, from that moment she improved, and unbelievers in God's ordinance were compelled to confess that a wondrous miracle had been wrought by the power of God. One Methodist lady in attendance, being wrought upon by the Divine influence during the prayer, confessed she believed the sister would be relieved by the immediate hand of death of her physical suffering, but that to recover was an impossibility; but when she saw so great a physical change she told the young sister that she had reason to glorify God and live for him; for that indeed God had wrought a miracle upon her.

A young man present, whose life had been reckless, called me aside, and assured me he had learned a lesson, and had witnessed the power of God attending this administration of the ordinance. He confessed that he had been a scoffer and an unbeliever. May God grant that the lesson may be indelibly impressed upon his heart, and that he may become a faithful member of the Church of Christ. That father was plainly told by the servants of God that if he wanted the blessing of God upon himself and family he must live a righteous life. Will he heed the lesson? "The prudent man foreseeth the evil and avoideth it; but the wicked pass on and are punished." To God we ascribe all praise. No elders could feel their weakness more, and their entire dependence on him, than those who were called to administer in the above case, but God was with them in mighty power.

A WITNESS FOR GOD.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG AND KIRTLAND.

Conference was called to order at one a. m. Saturday, October 5 in the Saints' hall, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, by Elder W. H. Garrett, president of the district. Elder W. H. Kelley was chosen chairman, W. H. Garrett assistant; E. S. Fairley secretary and T. S. Hadfield assistant. Branch reports: Kirtland, 87; Fair View, 44; Wheeling City, 130; Youngstown, 28; Blake's Mills, 63; Conneaut Township, 23; Pittsburg, 164. Officers reporting: Elders W. H. Garrett, J. Reese, J. H. Cramer; Priests A. H. Mills and E. Curry. Bishop's agent's reports: Frank Criley, receipts $635.47; expenses $662.75; balance due agent $27.28. L. W. Powell, receipts $67.10; expenses $66; balance on hand $1.10. Resignation of Frank Criley as Bishop's agent accepted, and a vote of thanks tendered for efficient service. The following changes were made in relation to Rules of Representation; viz., in section 2, "That the number of delegates shall be, one delegate at large for each branch organization; also that each branch shall be entitled to one delegate of representation for each six members in good standing" instead of each twenty members. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that scattered members of this district be and are hereby requested to recognize the law as contained in the Book of Covenants relating to their uniting with the nearest branch. Adjourned to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Saturday, March 1, 1896. Three persons were baptized.

DES MOINES.

Met with the Valley branch, September 7; W. C. Nirk presiding, C. Scott assistant; William Johnson clerk. It was one of the best conferences the district ever held. The business, though dragging, was done without a jar. The preaching was grand; speakers, C. Scott, F. A. Smith, W. Thompson, and D. M. Rudd. Elders reporting, C. Scott, D. M. Rudd, W. Thompson, W. C. Nirk, W. H. Kephart, W. Johnson, J. W. Morgan, J. Knox, E. Hayer, J. B. Heide, and N. Stamm; Priests, W. T. Maitland, J. Lilly, J. Barnes, G. M. Jamison; Teacher C. B. Brown; Deacon J. S. Young. Branch reports: Angus 45. What Cheer 19. Des Moines 131; 4 baptized. Des Moines Valley 114; 2 baptized, 1 died. Head Grove 38; 3 baptized. Oskaloosa 22; 1 received. Richland 76; 2 baptized. Boonesborough, gain 2. Edenville 61. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $6.29; received since $78.38; paid out $70; on hand $14.67. Adjourned to meet with the Des Moines branch the last Saturday in February.

PHILADELPHIA.

Conference was held at Baldwin, Maryland, September 28; F. M. Sheehy was chosen to preside; E. B. Hull clerk. Branch reports: Brooklyn 124, gain 22. Philadelphia 59, gain 9. Baldwin 66, gain 1. Ministry reporting. Elders A. H. Parsons, G. Potts, J. Stone, J. Squire, W. Clark; Priests A. N. Watz, W. Harrison, H. H. Bacon, J. Cook; Teachers J. Carter and T. Lester; Deacon H. Hargan. District officers elected as follows: A. H. Parsons president, E. B. Hull secretary and treasurer. Preaching Sunday morning by Bro. F. M. Sheehy and in the afternoon by Bro. Geo. Potts. In the evening Bro. Sheehy was the speaker, the discourse being on the journeys of the Nephites and other peoples mentioned by the Book of Mormon, locating the cities, etc., on a large map. Adjourned to meet at Brooklyn, New York, the first Saturday in March.

FAR WEST.

Conference convened with the Kingston branch, Saturday, October 5; T. T. Hinderks in the chair, assisted by W. E. Summerfield; C. P. Faul secretary. Bishop's agent's report: Received and on hand $266.11; paid out $186; balance on hand $80.11. Audited, found correct, and adopted. Ministry reporting: Elders T. T. Hinderks, W. E. Summerfield baptized 1, R. L. Ware, T. W. Chatburn baptized 13, J. T. Kinnaman, J. M. Terry, A. W. Head baptized 6, A. J. Seely, W. Moore, R. Archibald, J. Snider, T. J. Mauzey, L. Booker, J. C. Elvert, D. E. Powell, B. Dice, C. P. Faul baptized 3, F. C. Graham, and R. A. Marchant; Priests W. Haden, F. Mauzey, M. Bryant, P. Peterson, C. Householder; Teachers M. F. Beebe and J. Friend; Deacon L. Neidorp. Branch reports: Edgerton Junction 38, German Stewartsville 71, Delano 94, Kingston 93, St. Joseph 323, Pleasant Grove 95, DeKalb 26, Wakenda 50. Stewartsville referred back for correction. Whereas many are deprived of the privilege of attending the quarterly conference when held near the first of the month, therefore be it resolved that hereafter in appointing the time it be placed not earlier in the month than the 12th. The matter referred to at our last conference regarding John Rounds talking and teaching against keeping the law of tithing, and its disbursements by those having charge, came up for consideration. After the matter was talked to by several of the brethren, Bro. Rounds arose in open conference and asked, publicly, forgiveness for making such remarks about the law of tithing. On motion the conference accepted the confession of Bro. Rounds for speaking against the tithing law and its distribution, and forgave him. To the president of the Far West district: In a case of examination against me in which a decision was had affecting my calling and ordination as priest in the Church of Jesus' Christ of Latter Day Saints, given on the 28th September, 1895, at Stewartsville, and from which I gave due notice on said date that I should appeal to your honorable body, therefore I hereby perfect my appeal and ask for a rehearing on the following grounds: 1. The decision is not in harmony with the facts concerning my ordination. 2. That I have not been convicted of any crime that would justify such a decision, therefore I ask a rehearing by your honorable body. In bonds, Charles Householder. On motion the appeal asked for was received and that a committee of three be appointed, the president of the district being one of that committee, and T. W. Chatburn and D. E. Powell the other two, this committee to obtain all the evidence in the matter and then to present the whole matter to Joseph Luff, missionary in charge, for his decision, and his decision shall be final. Resolved that we recommend that no branch in the district shall give letters of removal and recommendations to any person who shall not pay his debts or make satisfactory arrangements with his creditors before leaving or removing from the branch of which he is member. T. T. Hinderks, D. E. Powell, and A. W. Head were chosen committee on appointment of missions. John Rounds and D. J. Flanders, Gospel Hill and Presbyterian churches. R. Phillips and J. Friend, vicinity of Kingston. L. W. Booker and J. N. Cato, Wakenda and vicinity. J. Snider and Peter Peterson, Bonanza and vicinity. J. S. Constance and M. F. Beebe, Mable and Victoria. J. T. Kinnaman and W. Lewis, Hemple and vicinity. Ben Dice and Wm. Worden, Lathrop. A. W. Head, C. P. Faul, and Wm. Haden, Carrol schoolhouse, Orchid, and east of Orchid. L. L. Babbitt and James Limb, west and north of Clarksdale. J. Lampert, as circumstances permit. Officers elected, T. T. Hinderks president, W. E. Summerfield vice president, C. P. Faul secretary. William Lewis was sustained as Bishop's agent. Missionaries appointed by the General Conference were sustained. Preaching by Brn. W. T. Bozarth and J. M. Terry. Two were baptized. Adjourned to meet with the St. Joseph branch on Saturday, March 14.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.

Met at Scranton, October 5 and 6; John T. Davis president pro tem., and Phineas Cadwell secretary pro tem. Branch reports: Scranton 98, gain 7. Atchison 59, gain 2. Fanning 69, gain 12. Netawaka 59, no change. Baker, no change. Ministry reporting: Elders J. T. Davis, P. Cadwell, J. A. Davis, W. Gurwell, C. E. Guinand, J. Buckley, D. Munns, W. Menzies, and J. B. Jarvis; Priest J. Cairns; Teachers A. L. Garwell and S. Davis; Deacons J. Patterson and J. Baillie. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $9.40; received $21.05; paid out $20; on hand $10.45. Audited and reported correct. Voted that Bro. Buckley be under direction of missionary in charge to act in traveling capacity. Missionary in charge was instructed to organize a branch in Topeka, Kansas, with officers as the Spirit may direct. John Arthur Davis was chosen district president, James Baillie secretary. A vote of thanks was tendered to Brn. Green and Munns for past assistance. Voted to sustain all the church officers. Sunday morning, at 8:30 a. m., met in the capacity of Sunday school convention; James Cairns in the chair, James Baillie secretary.

J. T. Davis, for Netawaka, in his remarks said that prospects were good to organize a district Sunday school association. J. A. Davis, for Atchison, was also in favor of such organization. Remarks by J. B. Jarvis in its favor. A motion to organize at once, with Sr. Parker, of Netawaka, superintendent, Sr. Miller, of Atchison, associate, Sr. Hudgens, of Baker, secretary, and Sr. E. Cairns, of Scranton, treasurer, was carried. To meet at call of superintendent. Preaching by John A. Davis. Adjourned to meet at Netawaka in February.

Sunday School Associations.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Association met at Five Lakes, October 4, 1895; district superintendent was introduced by Elder W. J. Smith; Adam Harder was selected secretary pro tem. The different schools not having understood the delegate system, it was voted that we suspend the rule of delegation for this meeting. Report of Evergreen Sunday school read and accepted. A verbal report of Buel Center school was had and accepted, instructions being given to submit a properly written report to secretary of district. Sisters F. Shinnick, M. Liddy, Addie Grant, and A. E. Hicks were elected delegates to General Convention. Remarks by W. J. Smith on Sunday school work and the necessity of funds to defray expenses of district association. Collection was taken for same, amounting to $1.20. An article on Sunday school work was read by Sr. Edith Rathbun. Brn. H. Rathbun, J. A. Grant, Levi Phelps, W. Davis, and A. E. Hicks cheerfully addressed the convention when called upon by district superintendent. Adjourned to meet the day previous, and at the place where the next district conference shall convene.

Miscellaneous Department.

NOTICES.

To Whom it May Concern:—This is to notify the Saints in general that at the coming Annual Conference of the Reorganized Church, convening at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6, 1896, I expect to offer the following resolution, if present: That as a church we disapprove the opening of our church doors for political aspirants for the purpose of partisan speeches.

I give notice thus early that the Saints in general may have sufficient time to deliberate on this, to me, all-important question; and that the Saints of Australia may see it in time to instruct their delegates according to their wishes in the matter.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Southern Missouri district conference will convene at Woodside, six miles north of Alton, Oregon County, Missouri, on Friday, November 1, at ten a. m. All branch and other reports may be forwarded to me at the above-named place, in care of A. M. D. McGuire.

W. A. BROONER, Clerk.

BORN.

PITT.—At Adrian, Illinois, August 28, 1895, to Bro. W. O. and Sr. Hattie Pitt, a son, and named Herbert Gilson. Blessed at the Rock Creek church, October 6, 1895, by Elders J. S. Roth and H. T. Pitt.

SHERMAN.—At Joyfield, Michigan, April 20, 1889, to Bro. Charles and Sr. Lulu Sherman, a son, and named Floyd. Blessed at Joyfield, Michigan, April 20, 1894, by Elder F. C. Smith.

JOHNSON.—At Burnham, Michigan, April 30, 1894, to Bro. Eugene and Sr. Emma Johnson, a son, and named Don Cortez. Blessed at Burnham, Michigan, July 11, 1894, by F. C. Smith.

MARRIED.

HAYDEN—FLETCHER.—At the home of Mr. John and Sr. Elizabeth Fletcher, in Sandwich, Illinois, on the evening of October 17, 1895, their daughter Margaret L. was united in marriage to Mr. William W. Hayden. Elder H. A. Stebbins officiated in the ceremony. A few special friends were present and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

DIED.

WALLING.—Cleva May, infant daughter of Bro. and Sr. W. H. Walling, at Glenwood, Iowa, August 8, 1895, aged 3 months and 19 days. Funeral at the home, conducted by Bro. T. A. Hougas.

LEWIS—At her home in Neponset, Illinois, September 27, 1895; Sr. Ella Lewis, wife of Benjamin Lewis, aged 29 years, 3 months, and 3 days. She leaves a husband, two children, brothers, sisters, and many friends to mourn their loss. Sr. Ella was a noble, patient, and loving wife, mother, and friend. She was loved by all who knew her and will be sadly missed by her circle of acquaintances. She was one of God's noble and faithful daughters in Israel, a true Latter Day Saint, a devoted Christian, and loved her religion. Her remains were laid in the Neponset cemetery.

"She sleeps; her troubles here are o'er,
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumberer's rest;
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God
To mingle with the blest."

HOPKINS.—At West Freehold, New Jersey, Sr. Agnes T. Hopkins, aged 83 years, 2 months, and 14 days. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church December, 1879, by T. W. Smith. She was a good wife and affectionate mother, a good, faithful Saint and neighbor. She rests in peace and the glorious hope of the first resurrection. Funeral in the Baptist chapel, at Hornerstown, on the 25th. Sermon by A. H. Parsons.

ELDREDGE.—Maggie Myrtle, wife of Bro. Harry H. Eldredge, departed this life at her home in St. Joseph, Missouri, October 2, 1895, at the early age of 21 years, 8 months, and 17 days. On August 1, 1894, she stood at the sacred altar and was wedded to her husband, occupying the same spot where she was placed on the 4th in silent death. Nine months of her wedded life she was more or less under the bondage of affliction, during which she maintained an abiding integrity in the work of her choice. At no time was she so pressed by her affliction as to resort to medical aid, always relying on the Lord. She talked freely of her death and longed for release from suffering, her prayer being, Take me, Lord. Through administration and the untiring care of Sr. Eldredge, mother of her husband, her suffering was reduced to its minimum. Being faithful to duty in life, rendered her fearless to enter the portals of death. Maggie was prepared to go. The funeral service was held at the church on the 4th at two p. m., conducted by J. M. Terry from Psalm 116:15, assisted by Bro. H. D. Ennis.

WILLIAMS.—Sr. Francis A. Williams died at Scranton, Pennsylvania, October 6, 1895, aged 47 years, 7 months, and 10 days. She was the daughter of Thomas R. and Mercy M. Russell; was born in Scott, Pennsylvania, where her remains were interred. A goodly number of her early associates and relatives attended the services in the Baptist church there. Services by Elder F. M. Sheehy. She had been a member of the church about one year, having been baptized by Elder H. H. Robinson.

HOUSTON.—At Rosborough, Illinois, October 11, 1895, Agnes Houston, aged 74 years, 4 months, and 1 day. Deceased was born in Scotland. She was not a member of any church, but long before death she made peace with God. Services at the house by Reverend Cate, of Sparta, Illinois, assisted by Bro. Houston.

THOMAS.—Scranton, Pennsylvania, October 1, 1895, Meshach Thomas, aged 17 years, 2 months, and 7 days. He was the son of William J. and Emma Thomas; was born in Scranton. He was highly esteemed by associates and friends, as evidenced by the large number attending the funeral. This sad bereavement to the family was followed by the death of Meshach Weeks, father of Sr. Thomas, and buried from the same house, both being laid in the same grave. Funeral sermon by Elder F. M. Sheehy.

"None looks beyond the bounds of time,
When what we now deprecate,
Shall rise in full immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more."

BAILEY.—Near Farwell, Michigan, Sr. Malvina Bailey, daughter of Homer and Martha Smith. She was born May 13, 1861, and died August 1, 1895. She was baptized when nineteen years of age by Elder John Bailey in Maple Valley, Michigan, and remained firm in the faith unto the end. She had a premonition of her death and spoke with calmness and certainty of it, and seemed anxious to go and leave her toils and sufferings behind. To her weeping mother she said, "Little Daughter Grace [then lying very low with typhoid fever] and you will soon come too, and then we will all be together," while a heavenly smile illuminated her face. Elder John Cornish delivered the funeral sermon to a large concourse of people in the Congregational church. Interment in Farwell cemetery.

ALLEY.—At Jonesport, Maine, September 29, 1895, Almira G. Alley, aged 62 years, 5 months, and 27 days. Funeral sermon by Elder J. C. Foss; text, John 5: 25-29.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR- MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Beliefs, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

ADDRESS OF MISS WILLARD,

BALTIMORE CONVENTION, W. C. T. U., OCTOBER, 1895.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church has this year declared in favor of non-alcoholic wine for sacramental purposes.

In the widening field of athletics all stimulation is discounted. The bicycle is the most influential temperance reformer of the time, and milk is the favorite beverage of those who ride to win. Men who drink take less, and more men do not drink at all than in any previous year. This is the testimony of railway managers, life insurance agents, police captains, and the general public. Steam and electricity have put level heads at a premium, and the trend of invention lies parallel with the white path of personal purity in all the habits of life. Legislation follows on after individual progress. The Canadian Parliament this year declared by an overwhelming majority in favor of prohibition; in South Australia and Utah women have been admitted to the full rights of citizens. Five Legislatures last winter voted to submit this question to the people. In New York City reform has forsaken the line of least and sought that of greatest resistance. Municipal politics in that metropolis and many others turn on the temperance question. The enforcement of law by Commissioner Roosevelt and the renewed war upon Tammany, led by the redoubtable Dr. Parkhurst, are the salient features of the time.

The constantly increasing participation of women in all the affairs of the world is of the utmost significance for good. But what the world waits for is not the new woman alone, but the new man. "One swallow does not make a summer," and one parent by the hearthstone does not make a home. We need to stop singing the old ditty, "What is home without a mother?" and to put in its place: "The father alone can make the house home." If he spends his leisure time in what is now popularly known as "The Workingman's Club," a disguised name for the dram-shop, and his wages are levied on by the proprietor, a new woman will be necessary to keep the home together, unless he himself becomes a new man.

The temperance reform is the universal solvent, bringing brotherhood to the front and sending sectarianism and sectionalism to the rear.

The action of the Methodist conference in voting to admit women to the general conference is the largest straw on the current of the times.

The Woman's Department of the Atlanta Exposition and the great congresses of women held in the farther South are other tokens hardly less significant. That good Bishop and other ministers who have spoken unkindly of the progressive women movement do not represent the guild to which they belong; on the contrary, no other class of men has done so much to bring in the era of justice to women and children and of peace and purity as the American clergy. But for their teachings, that have mellowed men's hearts, woman would never have been in the Colorado Legislature, nor would a bill presented by those women have been adopted raising the age of protection to eighteen years, nor would the Legislature of Texas have been specially convened to forbid a couple of prize-fighters to bruise one another within the borders of that State.

The polyglot petition, with its seven and a half million of names and indorsements, has this year been presented in America and England. Its journey will continue until it has borne the plea of the home to every government.

UNION OF REFORM FORCES.

A union of reform forces is contemplated, and the leaders have agreed to the following basis, which is commended to the good will of all White Ribbon women:—

1. Direct legislation; the initiative and the referendum in national, State, and local matters; the imperative mandate and proportionate representation.

2. When any branch of legitimate business becomes a monopoly in the hands of a few against the interests of the many, that industry should be taken possession of, on just terms, by the municipality, the State, or the Nation, and administered by the people.

3. The election of President and Vice-President and of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, and also of all civil officers so far as practicable.

4. Equal suffrage without distinction of sex.

5. As the land is the rightful heritage of the people, no tenure should hold without use and occupancy.

6. Prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes, and governmental control of the sale for medicinal, scientific, and mechanical uses.

The labor movement is the natural ally of the White Ribboners. The "working class" are the only true aristocrats. The time is not distant when those who do not work will be drummed out of the camp and stung out of the hive, and will learn by what they suffer that it is a law of God written in our members that "He who will not work, neither shall he eat." We are confronted by a vegetating aristocracy on one hand and an agitating democracy on the other, and if the Federation of Labor and the trades unions will, throughout their entire membership, decree that strong drink shall be left teetotally alone, it will within ten years become the arbiter of destiny.

The revival of Napoleon worship is not a good omen. It is surprising that well nigh a hundred years later this man, whose battles made targets of millions, and who was a moral monster if one has ever lived, should be the theme of poet, philosopher, historian, and playwright. This phenomenon no doubt arises from the reaction of the bourgeoisie against the socialistic spirit. The "strong man" seems to be the easiest way out of their problem, but it will be found too late in the day for such measures to avail. The incorporation of justice into law and brotherhood into custom are the only solvents for the icy heart of selfishness that dominates the world.

Roman Catholic young women of Danbury, Connecticut, have formed a society of members pledged not to marry any man who is not a strict abstainer. The only wonder is that this measure of self-protection has not been strenuously carried out by young women of common sense in every line of life.

An equal standard of purity for man and woman or what we call "a white life for two," is the demand of modern civilization.

The World's W. C. T. U. has established a department of amusements, and it is being perceived that until men and women together determine what amusements are helpful to the public, the great domain of recreation must remain on a lower level than the society it claims to represent.

To the reformer the most discouraging feature of current criticism about the stage is that it is made by those whose surroundings, education, and prejudices have prevented them from giving so intricate a subject any personal observation. It is well known by students of history that a diagnosis of a nation's health can be most correctly made by those who study its amusements.

AS TO SOCIAL PURITY.

Those who form the dread procession of degraded womanhood are chiefly the daughters of that class whose first lessons concerning the most sacred facts of life come to them with their earliest recollection in ways the most debasing. It is time that the children educated by the Nation were taught, through channels pure and wholesome, the scientific truths of their own being, based on the divine laws "written in our members." It is time that those who in church, Sunday school, and mission hall are trying to protect the tempted ones should recognize more generally the perfectly natural and harmless desire that young people have for each other's company, and we should replace the casual meeting on the street corner or the appointment at the concert hall by reputable places of wholesome entertainment, where young men and women can meet each other openly, surrounded by the safeguard of helpful friends. There are hundreds of young men who come from respectable country homes to study a profession or enter houses of business in London and New York who, during the struggling years of their probation, have no means of forming the acquaintance of any respectable woman whose influence might in part replace that of the mother and sisters, whom they so greatly miss. What wonder that from the ranks of these are recruited the constantly enlarging army of deteriorated manhood that forms the chief menace of the homes of the future? It is my deliberate conviction that until women are associated with men in the supervision of public amusements there is practically no hope of utilizing this mighty force for the purification and uplifting of humanity. We forget that since time began these amusements have been regulated by men, and the tendency has been constantly to degrade women for purposes of gain; but if women had a voice in determining what spectacles should be put before the people they would bring their higher sense of reserve and modesty to correct the low standards which even well-intentioned men have learned by long familiarity to accept as a "necessary evil." It is the province of good women to deepen in the minds of men the perception that it is impossible to degrade one class of women without diminishing the public respect for all, and that the disgraceful exhibition of the woman who caters to the degraded tastes of the men in the audience can but lower the standing of every man's sister and sweetheart. For God has so "fitly framed together" the different classes of the human family that "when one member suffers all the members suffer with" her.

No feature of this year is so encouraging as the pronounced reaction against the decadence in literature and law. The famous and infamous littérateur who is now serving out his sentence in prison was the center of a school that is so thoroughly discredited that the practical proof of the blight that has fallen upon it is found in the fear of publishers to bring out the works of any member thereof, either their so-called "art for art's sake," their "sex novel," or their prurient "poetry."

Miss Willard takes strong ground in favor of college settlements. An important part of the address is devoted to the situation in Armenia, and an urgent plea is made for the united efforts of women in collecting funds and circulating petitions for the relief of "our well-nigh martyred Christian neighbors in Asia Minor." The invasion of Madagascar by the French is referred to with indignation. The Queen is a devoted temperance woman, and gave aid and comfort to Mrs. M. C. Leavitt, the first round-the-world missionary of the White Ribbon host.

Miss Willard holds to the idea that she has advocated so long—viz.: that the Prohibition party should change its name to the Home Protection party. She says that the use of the word prohibition as the name of a party has given an excuse to the pulpits of the land to cease from advocating the principles of prohibition.—Chicago Tribune.

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 16.—Postoffice Inspector Salmon has served notice on members of local churches who have been mailing tickets for church raffles and grabbags that these cases come under the lottery law and that the offenses must cease.

The total value of all farm property in the Province of Ontario, Canada, is officially reported as $970,361,000 for last year. Of this 587½ millions was the value of the land, 204 millions for buildings, 51½ millions for farm implements, and 111½ was the value of the farm live stock. The total valuation was about 1½ per cent less than that for 1893.

A combination of the virtues is essential to completeness of character. Honesty without industry, virtue without charity, are but partial possessions.

POLITICS IN UTAH.

THE following is an editorial presentation of the apparent aspect of the political field in Utah, pending the November election there on the constitution under which statehood is expected, taken from the Gazette, St. Joseph, Missouri, for October 17:—

When the Utah organic act was before congress, the opinion seemed to prevail generally that there was no danger of the intervention of the Mormon Church, as an organization, in the affairs of the new state, but recent events are calculated to dispel that illusion. It was inevitable that the first political contests in Utah, preliminary to its admission, should involve the relation of the Mormon body to the new state, and to the two great parties that are contending for control. This is a consequence of the social and political organization of the territory since its settlement. As everybody knows, its earliest population was wholly Mormon, and, at that time, church and state were identical. A system like that is not quickly abandoned or easily revolutionized. It now transpires that the course to be pursued by the Mormons at the coming election has been mapped out by the elders of the church. The Republicans are to be the beneficiaries, as the edict has gone forth commanding the faithful to vote for the Republican nominees. The belief is general that this will enable the Republicans to win, hands down, and the Democrats who, until a few days ago, were hopeful, are in a very angry mood.

Such a denouement derives its chief importance from the fact that it shows conclusively that the struggle of the Mormon hierarchy for unquestioned mastery in Utah is not over. The interference of the church dignitaries at this time, when the constitution and the question of admission is pending, and when such action as they have taken might imperil the attainment of statehood, is an evidence that they still regard Zion—that is themselves—as the government, and a popular election a mere form. With Utah a State, removed from the danger of federal interference, the Mormon leaders will throw discretion to the winds and proceed to make short work of the confiding Gentiles who, while the organic act was pending, cheerfully bore testimony to the patriotism and excellent qualities of the enlightened Mormons, and blandly told the country that thenceforth religious differences would cut no figure in Utah politics.

We desire to make no point out of the fact that the Utah Republicans are to be the beneficiaries of Zion's latest political maneuver. Probably it was a mere accident that determined the preference, and next year Zion may wear the Democratic label. Whether professing loyalty to one party or the other, the Mormon leaders will be faithful to neither, except as a means of propagating and perpetuating the sovereignty of the church over everything within the boundaries of Utah.

The crisis in Utah politics is not surprising. Bearing in mind the protracted and sullen struggle of the most enlightened Mormons against the enforcement of the Edmonds law, it is difficult to believe that they have in good faith renounced polygamy, and with the enlarged opportunities afforded by the admission of the territory into the union, assuredly they will not relinquish or even divide with the Gentiles, their political power. And the ascendancy of the Mormons means something more than the mere monopoly of the spoils of office. The identity of church and state is to the Mormons a dogma inextricably involved with their very conception of government. The leaders are the heads of the church, and the opinions of these leaders in political matters have, with the members, the full force of law. Henceforth the opposition to Mormonism in Utah will be directed, not against polygamy or any other tenet of the faith, but against the control of the state by the church.

Whatever may be its fortunes in Utah, the Democratic party can well afford to stand before the people as willing to sacrifice itself, if necessary, in behalf of a government absolutely free from religious dominion. Whether the winning of control in Utah and the election of two United States senators will compensate the Republicans for their coalition with the Mormon state and church, is something that they are likely to discover when public opinion in the other states has been fully apprised of what is going on there.

We earnestly hope that the condition and crisis in the Territory seeking to become a State are not correctly represented in the foregoing from the Gazette. It would be a great misfortune to Utah, and a source of much uneasiness abroad in the States, if it should turn out at the last moment before the election that the church proposed to dominate that election. Notwithstanding what the Gazette states, it is but fair to observe that Pres. Woodruff and Joseph F. Smith both declare that whatever may have been said in the Council of the Church in which the coming election was referred to, there was not the slightest intention to interfere in the slightest with the political opinion of any of the electors in the exercise of their franchise, or to dictate which of the two parties should be sustained, or which defeated. That if any so understood, it was a misunderstanding for which there was no ground.

If these men are sincere in their statements then the fears expressed in the action of the Democrats in Utah in ordering a new election are ungrounded. In case, however, there was a possible hint conveyed to the general church to favor the Republicans and thus defeat the Democrats at the coming election it will be quite too late for these denials to prevent such result, as the disavowals will not reach many affected by the hint. It will be a thing much to be regretted if there has been a priestly interference in the statehood affair at this late hour; we hope there has been none.

THE UTAH SITUATION.

NEWSPAPER reports are somewhat conflicting, but from what we can glean the situation and the causes for it seem to be about as follows: There was a priesthood meeting held in the Assembly Hall on October 7, at which Elder Joseph F. Smith, of the Presidency, during an address, criticised church officials for accepting nominations for political office without consultation with the Presidency, and mentioned the fact that one of the Twelve and one of the presidents of the Seventy had taken such liberty. His remarks and position were indorsed by Presidents Cannon and Woodruff.

So all of the Presidency are committed to the position (and it is also plainly stated in President Woodruff's address published herewith) that the Presidency hold the right to say to what extent an official of the church shall engage in politics or other business. They claim, however, that this position does not interfere with a man being either a Democrat or a Republican as his convictions may lead him. They also deny that the language used was personal, or had any political significance so far as its application to either party is concerned. On the other hand it is claimed that the language was personal from the fact that the instances cited could have referred to none others than Moses Thatcher of the Twelve and B. H. Roberts of the Presidency of the Seventy; that it had political significance from the fact that these gentlemen were both Democrats, and leading candidates on the Democratic ticket; that they publicly accepted nominations, and the Presidency had abundant opportunity to criticise and discipline these men before, yet awaited until almost the eve of election and then took a position calculated to prejudice church voters against them.

The suspicion that political effect was intended, is strengthened by the fact that Joseph F. Smith, who led in this criticism, is himself a partisan Republican, and has taken active part heretofore in Utah political campaigns, and the further fact that other leading men in the church have engaged in politics on the Republican side without being criticised as these men were. Either they had not consulted the Presidency, or if they had, Republicans were permitted to proceed. As Judge Powers put it in an interview published in the Salt Lake Argus of the 12th inst.

I have no quarrel with the First Presidency, and care not what it may do, or what it may say about the members of the Mormon Church, if what it does and what it says is uniform, and applicable to each and every one of its members and does not conflict with the State's affairs. But, in regard to the matter that we are discussing, I am told that there has been no rule of the church requiring Mr. Roberts or Mr. Thatcher or anyone else to take counsel with reference to their action in political affairs. I recall that Apostle John Henry Smith has been a candidate for and has filled a political office, and I have no knowledge that he has ever been criticised. Neither do I know that Joseph F. Smith has ever been criticised for spending his time in the political field, or for discussing political questions. Neither am I informed that Apostle Merrill and Apostle Lund, each of whom have been Republican candidates, have ever been called to account for failing to take counsel as to their political action. I have understood that the church has placed the political conscience of every man in his own keeping.

However, as to whether a partisan effect was intended, or as to whether the language should be so construed, we have nothing to say, nor are we especially interested. But we do think that the rule contended for by the Presidency is under the circumstances dangerous; and if the people accept statehood with that rule in force, they thereby volunteer to face a grave and critical situation.

Under this rule the Presidency if disposed can dictate in the politics of Utah as absolutely as in the past. If they have political preferences they may consent to have influential men of their own party engage in politics, while they discourage or even forbid those of the opposite party, thus strengthening the one and weakening the other.

That Moses Thatcher as an apostle should be subject to the direction of the Presidency of his church must be admitted. But who would be so foolish as to claim that he as an apostle should be subject to the Pope of Rome, the head of the rival organization? Yet this is parallel to Moses Thatcher, a Democrat, being subject politically to Joseph F. Smith a Republican. But it is claimed in the language of Joseph F. Smith also published in the Argus:—

They receive compensation for their services from the church and the church is therefore entitled to their full time.

If so, why should the Presidency be authorized to permit them to defraud the church of a part of their time? And why should Joseph F. Smith, a Republican, who also receives compensation, be permitted to spend as much time as he chooses in discussing political issues, while Moses Thatcher, a Democrat, is required to consult his political opponent in regard to the part he shall take?

If the authorities of the church in Utah think the interests of the church are sufficiently important to demand their whole time and attention, and will mutually agree to keep out of active politics, it will be fair to all, and no party can complain. This, in our estimation, would be wise not only for them, but for every other organization claiming to be authorized to represent the interests of the kingdom of God. Surely God's work is of sufficient magnitude to demand the full attention of God's servants, and the special work of politics, though necessary and important, should be left to those not so charged with weighty and sacred responsibilities.

It may be claimed that this policy would interfere with a man's privileges as a citizen of the republic. Perhaps so, but has not the privileges of the minister in secular and professional pursuits been limited by the duties of his calling ever since the Lowly One invited men to "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men"? However, if this conservative policy is not agreed upon, then the broadest and fullest liberty should be given to all. To lodge the power to dictate in the hands of a few is dangerous to the liberties of the people and should be resisted everywhere. In Utah if this policy is not disavowed statehood should be denied.

We hope that the men by this circumstance thrown in the breach will be firm and true, and the interests of liberty in Utah will be safe in their hands. The fight is on, and we shall watch it with interest. Moses Thatcher says he knows of no agreement requiring him to consult the Presidency in this matter, and if there is such agreement he is not a party to it.

B. H. Roberts in a long interview published in the Salt Lake Tribune of the 14th inst. says among other things the following:—

Next let me say that the church authorities have in the most authoritative manner disclaimed that it was their intention to interfere with the members of the church in political matters, or attempt, as church officials, to dominate the State.

I accept their declarations as having been made in good faith. To believe anything else would be to charge them with perfidy of the blackest character, so that while I admit their right to make such rules and regulations for the church officials, and may try them and condemn them for violations of those regulations, I do not concede to them any right to dominate the State or control the political affairs of this State that is to be, nor do I believe they claim the right to do so, and if they do, then that claim must be resisted. A constitution has been framed which says, "There shall be no union of church and state, nor shall any church dominate the State, or interfere with its functions." I signed that document in the most solemn manner, and so did the rest of the delegates in the constitutional convention. I did it in good faith, and I mean to maintain it in like good faith. The people of Utah are going to vote on that constitution this fall, and if it carries it will be the supreme law of the land, and made so by the solemn act of a people acting in their sovereign capacity. I mean to maintain, so far as I am concerned, that supreme law of the land, at whatever cost; on that issue, I stand ready to risk all that I am or can ever hope to be. It is a matter that must not be trifled with, and all who vote for it stand in the same attitude, or are guilty of the blackest perfidy that men in the name of honesty can be guilty of.

WHAT HE PROPOSES TO DO.

Now, what do I propose to do in the present crisis? I mean to do this: Since the Republicans are in various localities taking advantage of this incident in the priesthood meeting to encompass my defeat, and through that the defeat of the Democratic party, I am willing to resign my nomination if the Democratic party has become frightened of defeat and proposes to cringe before this incident that has happened and the influence that arises from it, and let another man be nominated who will not encounter this species of opposition. Or, if the Democratic party, responsive to that noble spirit of Democracy which ever rises higher as difficulties increase, wants to meet and crush this church influence—not used by the First Presidency of the Mormon Church, but by the Republicans who have taken advantage of this unfortunate circumstance to inject it into our politics to save what was virtually a lost cause by religious influence—then I stand ready still to be their standard bearer, and in every town and hamlet will appeal to the people to resist the employment of such church influence in political affairs, and put the people of Utah to the test as to whether, when they vote on the constitution, they do so in good faith, and find out whether or not they are in earnest when they vote for a constitution that prohibits church interference with political affairs. . . .

I do not know what the results will be to my religious standing, but in this supreme moment I am not counting costs. I shall leave all that to the divine spirit of justice which I believe to be in the authorities of the Church of Christ. I shall trust that spirit, as I have ever done; and I say to the Democratic party that while my position in the Church of Christ is dearer to me than life itself, yet am I ready to risk my all in this issue. Let no man depreciate the crisis which confronts us. It is one of those moments on which the fate of a State trembles in the balance. Let the Democratic party now ground its arms, call off its candidates, and statehood is defeated and all our pains go for nothing.

Other leading men are reported by the Tribune as follows:—

Several of the gentlemen were seen by a Tribune representative, and all expressed themselves as being in hearty accord with Judge Power's action.

"Now is the time to settle this matter," said Mr. Turner, of Cache County. "I came to Utah in 1861, and have always been a Mormon, but I want political freedom and intend to have it. The Gentile Republicans are apparently feeling very jubilant over the outlook for their success, but if they win by virtue of church influence it will be a dearly-bought victory.

"I believe I speak the sentiments of the Cache County Democracy when I say that we are in hearty accord with the action thus far taken."

Alma Greenwood, candidate for State Treasurer on the Democratic ticket, was of the same mind.

"We want a square deal," he said, "and intend to have it or know the reason why. The people down my way are unanimously in favor of sustaining the action of the committee, as we feel that now is the time to settle this matter forever."

San Pete County was also heard from during the day, by wire, the message being as follows:—

EPHRAIM, Oct. 13, 1895.

Hon. O. W. Powers:—San Pete Democrats oppose church dictation in politics. They stand ready to follow the Democratic party in fight for political freedom. Call State convention and demand a public retraction or resort to heroic measures.

[Signed] Democratic County Central Committee and Nominees.

The following is the statement of President Woodruff, as published in the Tribune, of the 14th inst.:—

A Tribune reporter yesterday afternoon called on President Wilford Woodruff for the purpose of interviewing him relative to the disturbance caused by Democratic leaders over the recent priesthood meeting. The venerable head of the Mormon church had, however, already prepared a statement for publication, which is as follows:—

To All Whom it May Concern:—Inasmuch as there has been so much written and said concerning the proceedings of a priesthood meeting held in the Assembly hall on Monday, the 7th day of October, I feel it my duty to make a statement concerning it.

I consider it the right of every man, woman, and child on earth to enjoy their religion, let that religion be what it may, for that is between themselves and their Creator. So I say with regard to politics. Every man has a right to enjoy his political belief unmolested, let this be what it may. There is not a Democrat in Utah Territory who can truthfully say that I ever asked him to vote a Republican ticket, or join the Republican party. Neither can any Republican say that I ever asked him to vote a Democratic ticket, or join the Democrats.

A part of my own family are Republicans and part are Democrats. I have never counseled one of them to change his politics. They are, all of them, strong, independent men, and they enjoy their freedom without any interference of their father.

Now, concerning that meeting referred to, there was not, according to my recollection, one word said about Democrats, Republicans, or politics. Joseph F. Smith's remarks were upon the same subject that the apostles had taught through the conference to ten thousand people.

When the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized, it was with the holy priesthood in its various orders and quorums. And when a man was appointed to the apostleship, or presidency, or in any office, as a teacher of the people, it placed him in a very grave responsibility. And no man was counted at liberty, from the organization of the church, to engage in any branch of business, politics, or anything else to take him entirely away from his calling, business, duty or responsibility for a length of time, without first counseling with the Presidency of the church, or with his quorum, on its propriety, and getting permission to do so. And this order has rested upon us all alike. And this has been my position for sixty years of my life, and that, too, without interfering with my manhood. And this course does not require a man to give up his position in the Democratic party or in the Republican.

Several Democrats have called upon me since this campaign commenced. Among the number was my friend, John T. Caine, saying he had been nominated for Governor. I said, "Go ahead. I think you will make a good Governor." I think so still.

Every man has his own free agency. He has the right to withdraw from his quorum, or the church, if he wishes. But while he remains in his quorum, or in the church, we think he should be subject to the same rules that we are ourselves. But that duty does not require any man to withdraw from the Democratic or Republican party, or give up his political principles.

WILFORD WOODRUFF.

"CHURCH UNITY."

WE do not intend to discuss a subject involving so much as the heading given above might indicate, but simply to present a few clippings as suggesting what is being done in that line in the vain endeavor to unite in church unity a long list of bodies who are hopelessly at variance. "Ecclesiastical statesmen" is the apt designation of a practical-minded delegate in the late Episcopal convention. Statesmen, and more than statesmen, would be the men who succeeded in conglomerating and keeping intact a body composed of a union of modern churches. When such men come to the front and do the work it is probable that a proper designation may be invented that will do something like justice to their fame. We may be pardoned if having little faith in all efforts having that object in view however.

That church unity is possible we do not deny, but that the "unity of the faith" may be attained by Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists, etc., as such, we do not believe. Until "the truth" is recognized as the only authority and that truth as expressed in the word of God is made the basis of all action, we shall continue to be skeptical of the success of the efforts of denominations to attain to "the unity of the faith" and of "the Spirit in the bonds of peace."

The first clipping is from the Church Union, published at New York; the latter from a telegraphic report of the late Episcopal convention, dated October 17:—

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHURCH UNION.

1. Whatever occasion may have existed in times past for the division of the church into separate denominations, we hold that the efforts of Christians should henceforth be positive and continuous toward an actual and visible oneness.

2. While opposed to any such concentration of power as would trench upon the inherent liberty of the individual Christian or society of disciples, we hold that the evangelical believers and congregations of each locality should aim to manifest to the world their essential unity in faith and spirit.

3. We hold those churches to be evangelical which, maintaining the Holy Scriptures to be the only infallible rule of faith and practice, do believe in the Lord Jesus Christ (the only-begotten of the Father, King of kings and Lord of lords; in whom dwelleth the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and who was made sin for us, though knowing no sin, bearing our sins in his own body on the tree), as the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.

James Biddle of Philadelphia ridiculed the entire question of Christian unity, and styled it as a horrible nightmare which they should get rid of. He said that the church had gone too far towards Christian unity already, and was troubled with too much Lambeth. The church did not belong to the Anglican communion, and he would like to see a sea of fire between the church and all Anglomaniac theories. He ridiculed the idea of the Episcopalians ever being able to unite with the Presbyterians, and said that a leading Presbyterian had told him the effort was at an end. If the leaders got together and tried union they would find themselves with half a dozen covenants in every diocese. It was impracticable and absurd, and the quicker they dropped the idea of church unity the better.

THE BISHOPS ON MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

THE Episcopal Bishops and clericals, holding convention at Minneapolis, have at last decided as follows on the question of marriage and divorce:—

The canon now reads: "No minister of this church shall solemnize the marriage of any person who has a divorced husband or wife still living, but this prohibition shall not be held to apply to the innocent party in a divorce for the cause of adultery, or to parties once divorced from each other seeking to be united again. The evidence of adultery must be found in the records of the court.

"In all cases of doubt as to the facts or as the pastoral duties arising under this canon the godly counsel of the Bishop shall be sought and followed."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BY letters to Bro. W. W. Blair from Bro. C. W. Earle, Los Angeles, and Bro. J. F. Burton, Lower Lake, California, we learn that the work both in the south and north, California, is progressing fairly. Bro. Earle states:—

The district conference of the Southern California district proved to be one of the most peaceful and harmonious that has ever been my lot to attend, the Spirit's presence being manifest in the deliberations and in the preaching of the word. The conference was presided over by Bro. H. L. Holt, assisted by Bro. Wm. Gibson.

Bro. Burton writes October 12:—

I am still holding meetings nearly every night in the Christian church. Will baptize two more to-morrow, a man and his wife; and will probably organize the fourteen members who live here and in the vicinity to-morrow, also; and on Tuesday will go to Lakeport and hold services before I go to Potter's Valley. A sister in Lakeport sent for me hearing that I was here; so I will see what can be done there while I am in the vicinity; as the Boggs' are quite prominent men there I may learn more of their former history.

Bro. C. E. Butterworth wrote Bro. J. R. Lambert from Pocahontas, Iowa, October 18:—

The debate on the first proposition closed last night in good shape. Braden tried hard to enlist the prejudices of the people by reading from Book of Covenants, "For his word ye shall receive, as from mine own mouth," and such like passages; but Bro. J. F. had excellent liberty during the entire evening, but especially in his last speech. We feel thankful, and so trust God for help in the sessions to follow. The court room was crowded last night. Kind regards to all.

He also wrote Bro. Lambert under date of October 21:—

Debate on the second proposition closed yesterday afternoon and we feel satisfied with the results. I feel that the truth gained a victory in both instances or in the discussion of both propositions. Of course there are evidently some who think the Christians gained the victories, but I am satisfied that the majority think otherwise. People here as a rule do not indorse Mr. B's unchristian-like deportment and methods. He is trying in every conceivable way to enlist the prejudice of the people. Debate on Book of Mormon proposition commenced last night and Mr. B. was ready with a long list of Mr. Lamb's objections transcribed which required the greater part of his hour to read.

We are pleased that Bro. Joseph McDowell is blessed to make defense against the attacks of Mr. Braden; who is an unkind and unfair opponent, as the past experiences of the brethren have amply proved.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser wrote the following from the seat of war—McArthur, Ohio, the 26th inst.:—

Dr. Taylor and I began on the 21st and closed the 24th on first proposition; viz., I affirming our church. It is sufficient, perhaps, to say that it ran about parallel with debate at Washington, Indiana, with Jacobs, and that of Lowery City, Missouri, with Briney. I have been nobly supported by brethren and Saints, wonderfully blessed of God. Saints rejoice and sinners tremble. Zion prospers, all is well.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE HERALD presents another attraction in the Sunday School column. The beginning indicates that the future of the column is to be one of much practical value to that department of church work. Those interested in teaching and general school work should read it and thus keep fully in touch with the advance movements and helpful suggestions of the workers.

See request for contributions to Graceland College Library. Those who have volumes to spare could hardly make better use of them than to donate to the college, where hundreds will have opportunity of reading them.

Bro. and Sr. W. A. Cline, No. 47 Wellington Street, St. Catharines, Ontario, state that some are ready to unite with the church there when an elder arrives. They are alone in the faith, but rejoice in its blessings.

Sr. Joanna Hennicutt, living at Copeland, St. Clair County, Missouri, twenty miles from Clinton, desires elders in that field to labor there. She thinks the place a good one for preaching. Sr. H. also asks prayers in behalf of her grandchildren, lately bereft of their mother.

Sr. Polly Hyde renews her request for labor at Belmont, New York, Allegany County. She was baptized and confirmed in early days under the ministrations of Patriarch Father Joseph Smith, Zebedee Coltrin, and another, and has remained true to the faith, and bears witness to the people in the region of country where the work began.

Bro. J. J. Morgan commends Bro. F. M. Sheehy's late labors already reported, and says the Saints at Scranton are building a font, in which six or more persons will be baptized when Bro. S. returns from New York. Much good could be done could Bro. Frank remain a few months.

OMISSION.—The editors of the Primary Quarterly wish to call the attention of the primary teachers to an omission that occurs on page 10, lesson 6, in not stating fully that Jesus drove out of the temple the men who sold the animals as well as the animals themselves. The teachers in their class work will please supply the omission.

Latest advices from Bro. and Sr. Case were dated July 27, a private letter, from which we learn that they were at work at Avarua, island of Rarotonga, one of the Friendly Islands, a British possession, and touched by steamers from New Zealand and Papeete, Tahiti. They with other foreign missionaries had been excluded from the Society Islands, under rule of the French Government. Bro. and Sr. Case were doing what they could; he preaching, she teaching, both working, using the Tahitian while learning the Rarotongan language. Bro. and Sr. Devore, they thought, were still on Tahiti or adjacent islands; Bro. McGrath, they supposed, had returned to America. Remember the missionaries in foreign lands.

Bro. D. E. Tucker is having a busy time at Kirksey, Kentucky, with some of the Utah elders. He will likely meet Elder Richardson, from Utah, and if he can will secure a discussion with him. We think, however, that the same policy that was pursued by Elders Lyman and Roberts, at San Bernardino, California, and D. Stout and others, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, will be pursued, that "the authorities forbid us to engage in debate with you Josephites."

Bro. George Montague spent a few days at Lamoni the past week, visiting relatives and brethren, and arranging for labor in his field. His field address until further notice will be Kingfisher, Oklahoma.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.—The late decision of the Temple Lot Suit case on appeal has been published and is on sale at the Herald Office in pamphlet form; 15 pages, stapled, bound in paper covers; price 25 cents, cash in advance. Orders promptly filled,

RICH IN HER POVERTY.

AS I was crossing the ferry from New York to Hoboken, one day in the early spring, I recognized an old acquaintance in the person of a German woman who was carrying a large market basket.

Her face told the life full of hardship and privation which had been her lot, and yet there was an expression of peace and joy which spoke of some hidden spring within. I had known her in the darkest hour of her trial, when her husband, who was a mason by trade, had been brought home a cripple; when her children were crying for food, and she had not known where to turn for "daily bread." Yet her faith had never wavered, and had carried her triumphantly through all her trials.

I had lost sight of her for some time, and was glad to meet her again. After asking for her welfare, and hearing that she was now comfortable in the home of one of her sons, I said: "Well, Mrs. B—, you have an advantage over me in one thing. You have known what it is to be very poor, and can feel for those who suffer from want, more, perhaps, than I can, who have always had a dollar in my pocket."

Her reply was: "But I have never been so very poor. I have always had food and clothing."

"Yes," I said, "but you have known what it was to be cold and hungry. I remember when you were picking up coals on the railroad, and did not know where to find the next morsel to put into your children's mouths."

She sat silent for awhile, and then, looking up, she said: "I think, sir, that perhaps you feel more sorry for the sufferings of the poor than I do. You, who have never had to suffer in that way, think that want and misery are too dreadful, and cannot be borne. I, who have been through it all, know that they can. There are troubles worse than that, and our heavenly Father is caring for us just as much when we are hungry as when he gives us plenty."

She had prayed for "daily bread" for spiritual strength as well as for bodily need, and her prayer had been answered.

I looked at her in speechless wonder. Toiling early and late, amid sickness and sorrow, for the bare necessities of life as I knew she had done, suffering agonies of body and mind as few of us could imagine it possible that we could suffer and live, her faith had risen above it all.

To her, human misery seemed as nothing when compared to the higher, spiritual life which she had attained. She had found the "true bread which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world." How few of us, when we pray for "daily bread," desire before all things else that heavenly gift. Our privilege as well as duty it is to bring comfort and relief to God's poor, but while we relieve their bodily wants, let us pray that we and they may have faith to seek for spiritual strength and grace to bear every burden, and to realize, with St. Paul, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory which shall be revealed in us."

IN ERROR.

"Give me this day, dear Lord," I cried,
"Some blessed station near thy side;

"Some work in very deed for thee,
That I may know thy need of me."

Thus pleading, praying, up and down
I wandered, searching field and town,

Intent on task, the very best,
Eluding still my eager quest.

And morn to noonday brightened; night
Drew slowly toward the fading height,

Till I, low kneeling at the throne
With empty hands made weary moan:

"Thou hadst not any room for me!
No work was mine, dear Christ, for thee!"

Then sudden on my blurring sight
Swept majesty and love and light.

The Master stood before me there
In conscious answer to my prayer.

He touched mine eyes. In shame I blushed.
In shame my weak complaining hushed!

For, lo! all day, the swift hours through,
The work, Christ-given, for me to do,

In mine own house had slighted been,
And I, convicted so of sin,

Could only lift my look to his,
The grace of pardon ask for this,

That I had wandered far and wide,
Instead of watching at his side;

That I had yet to learn how sweet
The home tasks at the Master's feet.

Sr. Walker:—For the past week or two I have been trying to get an opportunity to give you and the sisters in general a little sketch of my pleasant association with Sister Blair during her visit to California. I was not at the Southern reunion, but met her on her return at the Santa Cruz reunion, and I assure you we enjoyed many a cozy chat together between meetings while linked arm in arm in our leisure walks, and our occasional visits to the ocean, a favorite health and bathing resort for people all over the country. We also, with several others, were the guests of Sr. Moses during the reunion. So I had the privilege of much of her society.

At the close of the reunion mostly all who were destined to San Francisco and intermediate stations, took a "narrow gauge" ticket, and I thereby concluded my experimental knowledge of what a narrow gauge route meant; which was over the most scary grades, the most breakneck bridges, and through the most suffocating tunnels that one could pass and come out all right.

The day we left Santa Cruz chanced to be the anniversary of "Admission day;" that is, the day that California was admitted into the Union, and many extra cars were attached to the usual train to accommodate the crowd of visitors who had come in on the morning train and now were returning to the city. Bro. and Sr. Blair, Bro. Newton, Sr. Clapp, and her friend Nettie, and I (Mr. Burton was called to Hollister on Sunday afternoon to administer to a sick child and had not yet returned, so was not with us) boarded a car that was already well filled with Germans, who in turn were well filled with beer, both men and women. Despite this, ten or twelve bottles more were brought in the car and consumed during the first part of the ride. Sr. Blair and I took a seat together, and twice had the obnoxious stuff offered to us. When we got up into the mountains the sun poured down on us, making the crowded car almost suffocatingly warm. Windows were opened, letting in the smoke, dust, and din and rattle of the cars, which, together with the boisterous shouts, noisy talking and laughing, and shuffling, and tumbling of our beer-steeped crew, was almost deafening. The appearance at one time was that they were going to get up a fight among them.

"I don't believe I like this road," said Sr. Blair, as the car swung from side to side, and whisked around a sharp curve in the road, leaning menacingly towards the outer edge of the precipitous grade, and shot into a long tunnel. Our comrades were not clear-headed enough to put their windows down, so the whole company was nearly suffocated with the gassy smoke. But we were not in darkness, for the lamps had been left dimly burning, and remained so till we had left the five long tunnels behind us. Santa Cruz Mountain, as well as Santa Cruz town, on that day swarmed with visitors, and at each of the three stations another crowded car was added to our already heavy train. And now after this heavy train had been made up, we entered the fifth and last tunnel, and the longest one by far, the last half of which was evidently iron trestlework; for though the windows were closed on entering that one, the rattle and vibration were almost deafening. One had to shout to be heard by those next him, and I must confess to a feeling of relief when we once more merged into daylight and felt the solid earth beneath us.

But this road was not all rough and scary. After the first part was gone over the scenery varied from the rough and uncanny to the picturesque, the beautiful! the grand!! such as only mountainous country can afford; and, withal, we caught an occasional glimpse of a giant redwood tree. As we rattled on past fathoms and fathoms of cordwood, all levelly piled, and while I was looking at this and thinking of early days in Nova Scotia, Sr. Blair said,

"Sister Burton, you must write up this trip and take it all in."

Naturally my first thought was, How am

I going to get all that cordwood into a single letter, saying nothing of the smoke, noise, and dust? But the noise within the car was subsiding and drowsiness taking its place. As we neared San Jose where Bro. and Sr. Blair, and Sr. Clapp and friend were going to stop, Sr. Blair, true to motherly instinct, went back where Bro. Newton sat and told him to take the seat just back of me as soon as they left, and be sure to stay there as a guard until we reached San Francisco. But others opposite were on the watch for more comfortable quarters, and secured it before he could get to it. However, there was no necessity for vigilance, for our merry-hearted friends were fast sinking off into comfortable naps. What a crowd there was that surged up the steps beneath the white light from the electric jets and poured in on the ferry-boat for San Francisco. Tired and hungry I was when I reached Sr. Knight's at about eight o'clock in the evening.

THE FRUIT OF FAITH IN IMMORTALITY.

The sceptic, the atheist, the agnostic may reach a very lofty eminence of character, far transcending that of the ordinary believer; but the most perfect sceptic that ever lived cannot be compared with the most perfect believer that ever lived. There is a something produced by faith which honest doubt cannot furnish you. You may lay your foundations deep, you may build your arch along the lines of beauty and symmetry, but unless you bind the structure with a capstone it will forever remain unfinished and insecure. Faith in immortality is the capstone in life's triumphal arch.

These three questions: Whence came we? Why are we here? and, Whither shall we go? these answered, there is nothing to fear. You are prepared for the present and ready for the future. The sun rises and your day's work begins; the sun stands directly overhead, and your work is half done; the sun sets, and your task is finished. The sun will rise to-morrow and dissipate the darkness of the night; you, too, will rise to-morrow, after the night of death has spent itself.—New York Herald.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

To the Sunday School Workers Throughout the Length and Breadth of the Land; Greeting:— Since it has fallen to our lot to take charge of the Sunday school column, we come before you with no claims of personal merit; but as one who is willing to be made an instrument in increasing the numbers, advancing the interests, and inspiring the workers in the grand Sunday school army.

The success or failure of this undertaking lies not wholly with the editor. While she may, from time to time, wish to talk with you of your plans, the practical value of the column must emanate from some other source than her pen.

The work is yours. You know your field of labor; you know your needs, and this is the medium through which you may make your wants known. Questions will always be in order, and amongst the many readers will be found some one who has had experience along your line, and who will gladly lend a helping hand.

In your many reunions and conventions the papers that are valuable to you will be valuable to others. The rich thoughts brought out in discussion merit a brief report as a supplement to such paper.

There are little observations in connection with any school that will be of interest to others. Jot them down as they occur to you. Do not wait to dress them up. The beauty of some of the brightest jewels of thought is often marred by their being set in too gorgeous a background of words.

I trust that the interest in this work may be so great that the space allotted to us may not contain a half of the good things you may wish to contribute. When may we hear from you? We will need you much in the heat of discussion, but more just now.

Greater strength is needed in overcoming the inertia in starting than in keeping astir afterwards. Friends, the time to labor is so short that we need the best thoughts of all to help us in economizing time in the building up of the Sunday school—not as an end, but as a means for fitting souls for citizenship in the kingdom of God.

Yours in the work,

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, Editor.

SUPERINTENDENTS, can you come just a few minutes early? Have the organist play something spirited, and be sure that you take part in the singing whether you have ever sung before or not. This encourages others to sing, and, as you join with them in praise, all will catch the spirit of the work at the beginning. As you sing do not forget your bow of recognition to the little groups that are gathering. Let your glance be a sweeping one that will reach the face of each and make him feel that it is a welcome to him individually.

First, feel this in your heart, and the manner of making it manifest will come to you. The spirit of the superintendent is contagious. If you ever find it irksome to be present, do not look for big results that day. If you are happy in the thought that you can be present you will find others like minded.

Superintendents, have you certain rules of action? How do these suit?—

Commence on time.

Order, on my part, is necessary.

Make all feel at home.

Earnestly study my work.

DEER LODGE, Mont., Oct. 14.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I wrote a line for the Herald, and it may be possible that a word or two from me will not be out of place. When I last wrote I was in Idaho; since writing I visited Montpelier and Thomas Fork. At the latter place I preached to a few people three times and baptized two women, Srs. Jennings.

I returned to Montpelier and occupied the Mormon meetinghouse one night; I judge there were about one hundred people out to hear. I spoke on succession, and had splendid liberty. On the Sunday I spoke in the hall in the new town; at the eleven o'clock service the turnout was small, at two o'clock the sacrament was administered and the Saints testified to the blessings of the gospel to them.

At night a splendid audience greeted me, and I preached the truth to them and drew a clear and a distinct line between the Church under the presidency of Wilford Woodruff and the Reorganized Church. I felt well and free. From a number of expressions, the discourse was favorably received. The hall was secured by Bro. A. J. Layland; Brn. James and Jasper Jennings did all they could to get the people out to hear, but they didn't seem to care much to hear what we had to say.

I returned to Idaho Falls intending to visit St. Anthony, Egin, and other points up the Snake River Valley, but my horses had strayed away, and so I came direct to Deer Lodge, Montana. I held service here in the little church on the Sunday, September 15, and on the 16th I went to Woodside.

While I was in Deer Lodge, from September 12 to 16, I administered to Mother Hanson. She was suffering with dropsy and it was with great difficulty that she could breathe; her limbs were swollen out of proportion, and to sleep was almost impossible. After the administration she instantly received the blessing of God, and her limbs were reduced so wonderfully that she told her daughter Katie that she was well and that she would sleep alone. Her rest that night was sweet and refreshing. I was led in the administration to ask the Lord to so bless her with the Spirit that she would bear witness to his truth and the power of the gospel. Bro. Andrew Christofferson, president of the Deer Lodge branch, laid hands on her with me; I anointed and confirmed the anointing. Mother Hanson is his wife's mother, and has not regarded the Reorganized Church with favor until just a short time ago.

She obeyed the gospel under Brigham's regime with her husband in Denmark, in 1858. They sold their possessions for nine thousand dollars in Danish money, and with generous heart and liberal hand assisted the elders and the poor to emigrate to Utah. They soon became dissatisfied with proceedings in Utah, and the doctrine of polygamy especially was rejected by them. While in this condition of mind Joseph Morris, the Weber prophet, arose, and they with many others cast their lot with him, and instead of securing rest and peace, their hope in the latter-day work was almost stranded; and yet they were loth to give it up, but after years of disappointment they gave up the little remaining faith and cast their lot with a Norwegian claiming to be the "man child" spoken of in Revelation. While they were under this cloud Father Hanson died, and Bro. J. C. Clapp preached his funeral in the little chapel at Deer Lodge, the writer being present at that time.

After administering to Sr. Hanson I went to Woodside, in the Bitter Root Valley, and held several meetings with seemingly good interest until the 8th inst. when Bro. Andrew Christofferson wired me to return to Deer Lodge at the earliest possible moment. I was confident the dispatch had reference in some way to Mother Hanson, but I supposed her end was near; as she was now in her eighty-seventh year I concluded her race was about run. I canceled my appointment for the next night and returned to Deer Lodge as per request.

On my arrival at Deer Lodge I met Bro. Andrew, and after making inquiry as to the health of the folks and being informed that all were well, I was curious to know what I was called for. Did it portend good or evil? Good, was the answer, and then Andrew told me Grandmother wanted to be baptized. At that my heart was touched and I felt to praise the Lord for his wondrous love, not only in hearing the petition of his weak and frail servants, but because he had led his aged handmaiden to see the light and to desire to be "born again." My soul was filled to overflowing when I heard the Lord had done for her all that I had asked him to do. She testified from the time the Lord healed her till now that God had greatly blessed her through the administration and that she now stood ready to give her body a living sacrifice to God.

After preaching to the people here yesterday, we all wended our way from the little chapel to Bro. Christofferson's, and in the presence of a goodly number of relatives and friends, with the assistance of Bro. R. J. Jenkins, I laid our aged sister beneath the wave and from the watery grave she rose to a newness of life in the risen Lord. I tried to talk to the people before the confirmation, but I was too full and felt like one of old when he had seen the Lord. In my heart I felt to say, "Lord, let thy servant depart in peace."

Bro. Joseph, I consider this the grandest act of my ministry. Our Father had so signally blessed my ministry and then to see how he had led his aged handmaiden to see the light and fill her heart with love for him and give strength to obey, was to me one of the grandest and best evidences of his goodness to me, to think I should be the weak instrument used to adopt one eighty-six years and seven months old into the kingdom, was truly glory for me.

God has greatly blessed me in preaching this year and I feel thankful to my heavenly Father for his goodness to me. I haven't baptized many, nor preached as often as many others, but I have tried to do good for the cause; and while I have failed in some particulars, I have not in others. I want to remain true to the gospel, true to the race of man, and to the Lord our God.

Yours in bonds,

R. J. ANTHONY.

Editors Herald:—In my travels and intercourse with the people, I find them becoming more and more liberal in their views. They do not cling so tenaciously to the traditions of their ancestors and elders, but demand more of reason and sound doctrine, the results of which we see in the frequent additions to the church. Our elders do not appeal to the traditions, neither to their affections particularly but rather to their reason and judgment; hence when the brain has had time to pass judgment upon any matter the man is prepared to adhere to what he has undertaken. On the other hand, anyone accepting any theory or dogma on the impulse of the moment, and from the affection of the heart only, and before the intellect has had time to render judgment, very often finds results disastrous and is a failure.

Several additions have been made to the church here of late. Last week I was in Centralia. I found three good openings and opportunities for the preaching of the word. Bro. Joseph McDougal is ready and willing to take the elders to their appointments at all times, and aids in other ways. From here I go westward. My address for next month will be Concordia, Kansas, care of William Landers. In gospel bonds,

Editors Herald:—The debate with S. F. Cayce, Primitive Baptist, closed October 19. It lasted five days. Elder Cayce is an able man, said to be the ablest of the Primitive Baptist order in the world; but the truth being against him it was hard work for him to cover it up. Changing climate from Alabama to Arkansas made me sick, hence did not do as well as I desired. The fourth day my vocal organs failed so I could not speak. Bro. Joseph Ward was with me and stepped in my place and routed him all day long. On Saturday morning my vocal organs had recovered so I could close the debate. S. F. Cayce could not sustain the Primitive Baptist Church and failed to disprove the Reorganized Church, hence mounted their hobby—unconditional salvation—and rode it through the five days. Christ redeemed his people, a part of the human family only, unto God; hence will be saved, is already saved, and that is all there is of it.

We are satisfied with our part of it which will be published to the world in a book. Mr. A. J. Mears, of Little Rock, Arkansas, employed a shorthand reporter to take our proposition and will have it published to the world in a book. J. D. ERWIN.

EAST PHARSALIA, N. Y., Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday's number containing letter from Bro. Tubb caused me to think that possibly I am somewhat at fault on the lines indicated by him; viz., not sending my mite occasionally.

The summer season was spent principally in tent work. Can't say that anything exceptionally resulted. We kept busy and enjoyed the work and certify that tent work as a means of reaching the people during the summer is the best way we know of. By request of apostolic powers I came this way. Attended the Philadelphia district conference held at Baldwin, Maryland, in their tent. The attendance was fair for the place. The Saints seemed to enjoy it. There was in addition to the conference some stereopticon lectures by Bro. Gunn, a man recently baptized in Brooklyn, who was formerly an Episcopal minister and held a chaplaincy in the English army during the war in the Sudan. His views as shown in the lectures were upon that topic, and taken by himself during the battles there. There is noted improvement in the Philadelphia branch and prospects for good are not waning—Bro. Parsons has again moved his family there.

I arrived in Scranton, Pennsylvania, in time to attend the funeral services of Meshach, son of William J. Thomas. He was a young man well spoken of by the people as well as attested by the large attendance at his funeral.

I preached a few times at Dunmore, a suburb, and baptized four, the results chiefly of the efforts of Bro. "Johnnie" Morgan, whose zeal is proverbial thereabouts. The work in Scranton is not in a desirable condition for various causes. I think, however, good results would obtain with careful labor, from the salt that has not lost its savor, there.

From Scranton I came here about a week ago. Brn. Rathburn and Griswold and wives and Sr. Lewis form the nucleus for what gathering there may be hereabout from modern Babylon. In this country Joseph Smith and Emma Hale formed that matrimonial union that has indelibly left its impress upon this generation as well as of historical import. It is near here, in Afton, where it is said some of the money digging occurred and where "Young Joe" performed the miracle of walking on the water when some mischievous boy pulled out the plank and the prophet was immersed, also where he cast out the devil ("bigger'n a woodchuck") from a man and was arrested for it. I presume that was before the law put a premium on killing woodchucks. "Joe" ought to have been paid for that job instead of being arrested. The county history has the following of his schoolboy days: "Smith while here attended school in district number 9. He gathered around him a few who were profoundly impressed with the reality of his supernatural powers, and these (some of whom afterwards joined him in the west, Stowell among the number) he formed into a society at the house of 'Joe Knight,' on the south side of the river near the Lobdell House in Broome County."

As to the kind of converts "Joe" made even while at the district school, the same history speaks of one of them as follows:—

"Isaiah Stowell, a Vermont sufferer, and one early settler on the Susquehanna in this town about two miles below Afton, a deacon in the First Presbyterian church of Afton, educated in the spirit of orthodox Puritanism, a man of much force of character, possessing an indomitable will; a very industrious and exemplary man who by severe labor and frugality had acquired property which excited the envy of many of his less fortunate neighbors, and who at this time had 'grown up sons and daughters' to share his prosperity and honor his name."

The above rather exceeds the apochryphal legends of Jesus in his schoolboy days, for he only has the credit of exciting amazement among the boys, while this youthful prodigy captures the leading men of the community, deacons of the church, etc.

Is it true that "all traditions and myths are only misplaced verities"? One thing I am assured of; viz.: that the sectarian bigotry and spiteful intolerance that existed in the early days of the church according to their history of it is a tangible reality here now. All that keeps the monster from using his fangs and claws is, he dare not because of the liberal element in the world that he is afraid of. The hereditary traits are not lost by evolution or modified much by environment as far as the Father of lies is concerned.

I am preaching here in a private house.

Expect to go to-morrow to Preston and preach in a church. Only have the promise for one service and for that favor a liberal-minded man stands sponsor for me.

Matters in the Massachusetts district are progressing fairly well in the main. Of course we can find room for improvement and always expect to until our ideal is reached. I feel contented to plod on until the end, meeting obstacles according to the motto, "Obstacles are to be overcome."

May peace of soul and success of attainment crown God's Israel.

I am sincerely yours,

F. M. SHEEHY.

Editors Herald:—I closed a successful debate with Rev. W. W. Hay, of the Baptist Church, near Xenia, Illinois, on the 18th inst. Last night (24th), I commenced another debate of ten sessions with Rev. James Evans (Baptist) at Miami, Indian Territory. Mr. Evans is an elderly man, but said to be an expert in the line of debate. He is a glib talker and a ready scholar. We are holding the debate in a fine hall fifty feet square. Mr. Evans is a contestant and I look for a lively time. I am feeling well for the battle, and proud of the noble work that I am standing in defense of. The debate in Illinois was certainly a sweeping victory. To God be the honor and the praise. Wishing to be remembered, SAINT JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—Eagerly I grasp the little roll when it comes, and with eagerness scan its precious pages. To read of the earnest efforts and success of colaborers gladdens my heart. That earnest welling up of the soul in fervent desire to do more for this lovely cause is my repeated experience. When I contrast the blessedness of the work with the great need of the human family for just such a system, it fills me with anxiety to go out, and with long and loud efforts try to persuade men and women to accept God's most precious gift, eternal life.

I would love to see the gospel finding its way into foreign and heathen lands, to Asiatic climes where only relics of the true gospel can be found. I often think of and pray for Brn. G. T. Griffiths and James Caffall that their arduous task in gospel work may eventuate in the salvation of many souls. You are not forgotten, brethren, by your American colaborers whose missions may be more pleasant.

While I may be ambitious to do some great thing for the cause I love so well, I remember that great things are made up of small constituent parts, and if I would do much for the cause the only way is to do a sufficient number of small things that in the aggregate they may be counted by the Judge as sufficient in proportion to the talents given. This work grows more lovely to me as I learn more about it. I have been led to use the Book of Covenants quite freely of late in presenting this gospel, and have been greatly blessed in so doing.

We are struggling with our common enemy. Sometimes the conquest seems in sight and easy to obtain, then again the enemy masses his forces, and appears as a formidable foe. Withal the Saints are advancing as a rule and rejoicing in the fray against darkness and vice. Some grow inactive and become drones, some do even worse. Such are being disciplined, and the laggard is being bestirred, while the main body is marching gloriously onward.

Two were added by baptism on Sunday last: one a very intelligent lady, a school-teacher; the other a Sunday school scholar, a little gem in the kingdom. Others are standing almost persuaded. Bro. Niedorp, our book agent, is constantly urging the Saints to patronize the Herald Office. He is a diligent and efficient agent as well as a deacon of the branch.

Yours, consecrated to Zion's cause,

J. M. TERRY.

WILLIAMS' BAY, Wis., Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—Last Sunday night, the 13th, we closed our tent labors and on the following day loaded up and brought the tent to Bro. C. C. Hoague's, in Rock County, where we put it away in winter quarters until the warm sun and balmy breezes of the spring of '96 shall warrant the unfolding again of the canvas church. Our labors have been principally confined to Rock County, which we found much too large to give it anything like the thorough canvass we would have liked, and though we have been kindly invited to visit places which we were unable to reach and perhaps have been censured by some because we have not, yet we have striven to the best of our ability to labor when and where it seemed most fitting for the welfare of the work.

We began with a dedicatory service at the residence of Mr. Hoague, May 19, at Fulton, which was attended by nearly all the members of the Janesville branch and the Wilder Saints enmasse, besides a goodly number of nonmembers. The following week we set up in the town of Evansville, about eight miles distant, and remained there until June 3, when we closed up to attend the district conference which was to convene at East Delavan, after which we returned to Rock County and set up at the village of Fulton. We went from there to Indian Ford where Brn. Samuel Powers and H. A. Stebbins had preached in years ago and the sound had not yet been forgotten. We left a good interest and many friends and some are still near the kingdom and if not neglected may be brought into the fold.

From there we went to a United Brethren neighborhood and near their church; from thence to a small hamlet on Rock River called Newville. While there I held a two-nights' discussion with a gentleman who held differing views, which awakened quite an interest. Even the United Brethren preacher who acted as moderator for our opponent said, "You have set us all thinking." Our advice was to just keep on thinking.

On September 17 we moved from Newville to Wilder school district, town of Porter, where the district conference was to again convene. Bro. Henry Stebbins gave us valuable assistance there; two were baptized and we felt when we left that we never left a better interest or a better feeling among the people.

October 2, we began preaching in Oregon, a small town about ten miles south of Madison, our State capital. This is where Brn. Wildermuth and Peterson have done effectual work this summer, baptizing a sufficient number so that a branch has been organized here. We had a pleasant location for our tent near the central part of the town. Our attendance ranged from thirty-five to eighty-five, and when we closed up because of cold weather, we did so with a growing audience and an increasing interest. The new Saints there are alive in the work and enjoying the same Spirit that always characterizes the work of God.

As a summary of our gospel tent labors this summer I would say that so far as visible results are concerned they are small, only three having been baptized; but we have opened up new fields and made many friends for the work, removed a large amount of prejudice, and left open doors in halls and schoolhouses wherever we have been and a kind invitation to come again. We bespeak a hearty welcome to our successor, whoever he may be, and we believe that seed has been sown that if properly cared for will at no distant day bring forth fruit in the kingdom of God.

I am now at home for a few days preparatory to a winter campaign in the northern part of the State. In bonds,

CHARLES H. BURR.

WALSINGHAM CENTER, Ont., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—God is blessing us in this part of his vineyard; three more were baptized since I last wrote you, making eighteen since I came here, August 5. I expect to baptize three or more on the 26th.

God has truly blessed our labors here with signs following. Sr. Wingrove was healed of typhoid fever in such a marvelous manner that her husband was convinced of the work and was baptized the following Sunday. Sr. Margaret Book was healed of hip disease of thirty years' standing. Sr. Pattison before she was baptized could scarcely do anything. The doctors said she was liable to go at any time. She had consumption; would cough all night, and most of the day; would have to sit down to wash her dishes. Now she is able to pull beans and husk corn. This is a living testimony to the people here as to the gift of healing, and has done much for the advancement of the cause. Bro. Hyrum Thompson was troubled with fits for years. They had pulled him down so he could scarcely do any work. He was healed through administration, and now has gained several pounds in weight and is rejoicing in the restored gospel of Christ. To God be all the praise. Since August 5 I have preached fifty-seven times, besides visiting and fire-side work. We have prayer meeting every Sabbath at 2:30 p. m. I have also organized a Sunday school, and intend to start as soon as the Quarterlies arrive. We have the use of the town hall to hold our meetings and Sabbath school. We look for a grand work to be done here. I expect Elder John H. Lake soon to organize a branch. We now number nineteen. We feel much encouraged in the triumph of Zion's cause, and have no desire to cease laboring for the Master until we hear that welcome cry, "Come up higher." In bonds,

ADRIAN, Ill., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—I closed a very interesting series of meetings here in Rock Creek church last night. The meeting didn't die, for last night the church was so full that they could not all get seats, and a number were outside at the windows. The interest was good throughout, and splendid order. Some came as far as eight and ten miles.

Bro. J. R. Evans gave them four sermons, then went to Ottumwa, and I gave them about seventeen with good liberty. Yesterday I baptized three more, six since I began here, all adults. Several more have said, "That man preaches the truth." But they had not the courage to turn away from the world and follow the humble Nazarene. But I believe a number more will obey here if the work is not left too long.

The saints here seemed to enjoy the meetings if their kindness and benevolence to me is any token at all; and "By their fruits [works] ye shall know them."

There are some very prejudiced people in these parts, this place being half way between Nauvoo and Carthage, right along where the early Saints endured so much trouble. I expect to labor in these regions till the holidays, then the remainder of the conference year in Eastern Iowa. I like this field well. May the Lord bless his people and enable them to do right.

BUEL, Mich., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—I receive much light and encouragement by reading the Herald as it comes freighted with the soul-cheering news. I love to read the letters of those who have been engaged in tent work, as I have spent most of the summer with the new tent purchased by this Eastern district of Michigan.

Bro. R. E. Grant and I pitched the tent in Port Huron about the middle of September. I was called home in about ten days on account of sickness; but on October 4 I left home and loved ones to attend our conference which convened the 5th and 6th. It was a grand success. The Spirit of the Master seemed to be enjoyed by all present. Our business passed off without a jar. The prayer services were spiritual, peaceable, and orderly, and furnished food for the hungry soul. Brn. Cooper, W. J. Smith, E. Delong, and William Davis were the speakers. The preaching was just grand.

From conference I returned to Port Huron with W. J. Smith to resume the effort there. Some are very much interested and purpose to give the work a thorough investigation, and I believe in time will obey. Jack Frost with his cold breath caused us on the 17th to pull down the tent and store it away for the winter. We hope to continue the effort in a hall.

I came to Applegate to attend the debate between Mr. Elorthorp of the Baptist Church and Bro. F. M. Cooper, which was to begin the 22d. On account of sickness Bro. Cooper did not get there, so the writer engaged his predecessor for the one day, and an account of the busy time at present, the people moved an adjournment for four weeks. I expect Bro. Cooper will be on hand as he is the one expected to meet the propositions. I expect to devote my time this winter in the branches and shall strive to build them up, which is very much needed. Latter-day Israel, it seems, forgets God as Israel of old, and in many places they do not manifest to the world and to each other the love they should; and when Saints will bite and devour one another the apostle says, they shall be "consumed one of another." I do hope we may all learn our duty and do it with an eye single to the glory of God.

MORRISTON, Wales, Oct. 11.

Editors Herald:—I continued my labors in Leeds for three weeks. What the results of my efforts there will be is difficult to predict, but there is one thing that I do know: if the brethren will love and prefer one another, use discretion, and exercise patience as the Lord has admonished us, much good will accrue to the church through their united labor.

Bro. Moir, president of the branch, is a man who has served in the British army for many years, hence knows what discipline is; besides, he has traveled very extensively in his time and acquired considerable knowledge of men and things, and those who have not had these advantages in life would do well to heed his counsel and good advice. May the Lord bless him and his coworkers that they may grow and develop spiritually that they may become a power in the hands of God for good in that great city.

From there I went to Birmingham, where I remained for one week. There are two branches in this city; one is presided over by Bro. Thomas Taylor, the other by Bro. C. Tyler. I occupied the rostrum twice in the former branch and once in the latter, also attended a priesthood meeting under the jurisdiction of Bro. C. H. Caton, president of the district. A profitable time was had. It is evident that that kind of meetings when properly conducted are conducive of much good, as they tend to unite the brethren and are a means by which they become better acquainted with the duties of their respective offices. I spent several hours in pleasant conversation with Brn. Taylor, Caton, George Greenwood, Meredith, and Tyler. I was kindly entertained by Bro. Matthews and family with whom I stayed.

My next stop was at Lydney. I held a few meetings here and baptized Sr. Mackay, being the fruits of other men's labors. The brethren here intend erecting a chapel soon, as they have been presented with a suitable piece of ground and in a prominent part of the town, their chief and good reason for building being that all public places have been closed against them. The brethren here would thankfully receive any donation the Saints may feel disposed to make towards this enterprise, which should be sent to Bro. Thomas Griffiths, Aylburton, near Lydney, England.

From here I wended my way to Cardiff and stayed with Bro. Gould and family, whom I found strong in the faith. There are only four Saints in this large town, and the prospects for an ingathering there are not very flattering at present. Having an engagement with Bro. A. N. Bishop, president of the Eastern district, Wales, I left the next day for Brynmawr and spent three days at this place; also called on Bro. John Jones and family at Nant-y-glo, which is about a mile distant from Bro. Bishop's. Accompanied by Bro. Bishop, I visited Merthyr and Aberaman, and on the evening of the 5th inst. we landed at Porth and attended the conference, which lasted from the 5th over the 7th. It was a success throughout, as it was the largest gathering which I have yet seen in Wales. The social and preaching meetings were well attended by Saints and outsiders, and a good spirit prevailed throughout the entire sessions, and thus it is that the Eastern district is looking up. One encouraging feature is the fact that in these parts a number of young capable men are coming up in the church and taking an active part. I expect in the near future to deliver a series of sermons in this place and at Llanelly. With love to all, I remain,

Yours in gospel bonds,

OTTO, Arkansas, Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—Since the Southern Missouri reunion I have had splendid health and been very busily engaged in gospel work. On the 2d of September I left Mountain Grove, Missouri, for a point in Douglas County, where I had an invitation to preach. I held a short series of meetings at what is known as Clifty hall and left some very near the kingdom. I stopped at home a few days and prepared for a theological combat with Rev. H. T. King, of the Christian order, which took place at Wheeling, Fulton County, Arkansas, commencing September 16, and lasting six days. The last day of the debate Mr. King wrote out another challenge, changed the wording of his proposition, and transformed the scale so that his proposition would come first. I accepted, and the second debate between us will be at Center, Sharp County, Arkansas.

After the debate at Wheeling I came to Point Pleasant. Had a good meeting there. Baptized one, left the brethren very much strengthened, and took my departure for Bald Knob, on October 2. Commenced preaching on the 3d and held ten meetings. Congregations were small but interest good. Some are waiting for us to come back to baptize them.

On the 11th I came to Otto, Falkner County, and on the 10th had the pleasure of meeting our worthy brother, J. D. Erwin, who came all the way from his field in Alabama to meet Rev. Cayce, of Martin, Tennessee, in discussion on church propositions. Mr. Cayce is editor of the Primitive Baptist and one of the leading lights of the Primitive Baptist faith. I am of the opinion he is their strongest man, and I am always glad to give honor to whom honor is due. Rev. Cayce is a gentleman and a fine debater, but his theory of total depravity and salvation unconditional, so far as man is concerned, were rather too weak to stand the flame of the everlasting gospel when it was being fanned by Bro. Erwin. All I regret is that our brother's vocal organs failed him the second day of our proposition and I had to take his place for one day, then he was able to resume his place and put on the cap sheaf.

I am well satisfied with the result of this discussion. A gentleman from Little Rock hired a reporter to take the last proposition (which is our church), and will have it published in book form. We are preaching here every night and visiting the Saints through the daytime. We will go from here to Bald Knob the 26th.

Your brother in bonds,

FINDING THE TWENTY-FOUR GOLDEN PLATES OF ETHER.

DURING the debate at Durango, Texas, I made an argument on the finding of the above-named plates, which I will give below. But for the benefit of that class of readers who are not acquainted with the teaching of the Book of Mormon I will first explain that that book teaches that three different colonies left the old world and settled on this continent at different times as follows:—

1. The Jaredites who left the Tower of Babel at the confusion of tongues. Mr. Kelley says they "first settled north of the isthmus, or narrow neck of land, as described by them, and inhabited first what is now called Central America, and afterwards the more northern parts of the continent."—Braden and Kelley Debate, page 49. These people exterminated themselves in the civil war about six hundred years before Christ, leaving their history recorded on twenty-four golden plates, about the finding of which we are now contending.

2. About six hundred years before Christ a colony of Jews left Jerusalem and settled on the west coast of South America. Mr. Kelley says, "Occupying the territory now known as Peru and Bolivia, and from thence spread over the whole continent."—Braden and Kelley Debate, 49. These people were known as Nephites and Lamanites, and their country was called the land of Nephi.

3. Eleven years later another colony left Jerusalem, and "landed on or near the coast of what is now called Yucatan in Central America." (Braden and Kelley Debate 50.) This last named country is, in the Book of Mormon, called Zarahemla. The following is the argument as I presented it in the debate: On page 158 of the Book of Mormon, King Limhi who lives in the land of Nephi (Peru) gives an account of the finding of the Jaredite plates as follows:—

Being grieved for the afflictions of my people, I caused that forty and three of my people should take a journey into the wilderness, that thereby they might find the land of Zarahemla [Yucatan]; that we might appeal unto our brethren to deliver us out of bondage; and they were lost in the wilderness, for the space of many days, yet they were diligent, and found not the land of Zarahemla, but returned to this land, having traveled in a land among many waters; having discovered a land which was covered with bones of men and of beasts, etc., and was also covered with ruins of buildings of every kind: having discovered a land which had been peopled with a people who were as numerous as the hosts of Israel. And for a testimony that the things that they have said are true, they have brought twenty-four plates, which are filled with engravings; and they are of pure gold. And behold, also, they have brought breastplates, which are large; and they are of brass, and of copper, and are perfectly sound. And again they have brought swords, the hilts thereof have perished, and the blades thereof were cankered with rust.

These twenty-four plates of gold contained a history [of—Ed.] the first colony—the one that came from the Tower of Babel. I affirmed that these plates were found on or near a hill in Ontario County, State of New York, which the Book of Mormon and the Latter Day Saints call Cumorah. If I am correct I showed that the forty-three people of Limhi got lost in South America, wandered up through Central America to New York, a distance of about five thousand miles, picked up these plates and wandered back, thus making a journey of some ten thousand miles through an unbroken wilderness over or around numerous mountains, and across ten or twelve unfordable rivers. And we are asked to believe that the Book of Mormon that contains this absurd story, contains the fullness of the gospel. But Mr. White denied that these plates were found at the hill Cumorah, but on the Isthmus or "narrow neck of land." Yet when I had given evidence to prove I was correct he refused to give anything to disprove my positions or to prove his, but called on the people to read the Book of Mormon to see that I was wrong. He used it as an advertising scheme to sell his books. He was there to show my arguments were false; the debate was gotten up for that purpose, yet he refused to notice it only by denial. When I pressed him for some evidence from the Book of Mormon that I was wrong, some one in the audience called out the page; but he would not even read it, but said, "When the debate is over I will flood the country with circulars showing it is not in the book." Finally I asked him for equal space through the papers and he agreed to it; hence this article. But I shall now give my reasons for saying those plates, according to the Book of Mormon and Mormon writers, were found in New York.

1. The last great battle of the Jaredites was fought at that hill. This Mr. White admitted, but I will give the proof:—

And it came to pass that the army of Coriantumr did pitch their tents by the hill Ramah; and it is the same hill where my father Mormon did hide up the records unto the Lord which were sacred.—B. M. 531.

The following pages show that the final battle was fought there. Oliver Cowdery in describing the hill Cumorah found in Ontario County, New York, says: "This hill, by the Jaredites, was called Ramah; by it, or around it, pitched the famous army of Coriantumr, their tents." "Between these hills, the entire power and national strength of both the Jaredites and the Nephites were destroyed."—Letters of Oliver Cowdery, page 29.

Book of Mormon pages 532–33 we learn that after the battle was over and all were slain but Coriantumr that "the Lord spake unto Ether, and said unto him, Go forth. And he went forth . . . and hid them in a manner that the people of Limhi did find them." Now where did he hide them? There where the battle was fought? Or did he trudge off with them to the Isthmus of Panama—a distance of near four thousand miles? Which is the more reasonable considering the long distance, the mountains, and the ten or twelve nonfordable streams that intervened?

2. Our second argument is based on the description of the place. Limhi says of his people, "having traveled in a land among many waters." Where is this land of many waters?

Book of Mormon 491–92:—

And it came to pass that we did march forth to the land of Cumorah, and we did pitch our tents around the hill Cumorah; and it was in a land of many waters, rivers, and fountains.

Let Elder White show us some other land so described in the Book of Mormon. Was "the narrow neck of land" so described?

3. Limhi says the people who found the plates "Having discovered a land." Was the isthmus undiscovered at this time? Certainly not, for the Nephites under Mosiah had fled across it into the land of Zarahemla and Limhi's people had crossed back over it to the land of Nephi and knew that it lay between them and Zarahemla, hence he could not say of it, "having discovered a land."

Now if Mr. White has anything in the Book of Mormon that will prove I am mistaken let him bring it forth in his reply to this.

Yours for the truth,

C. W. SEWELL, JR.

ELDER C. W. SEWELL,

Dear Sir:—Your article on finding the twenty-four golden plates of Ether to hand. I see that you are still in the dark on this question as you were in the debate at Durango. You make assertions but fail to furnish proof. If the Book of Mormon teaches that the twenty-four plates were found at Comorah, why did you not point out the page and then I would have felt as though I was under obligations to answer it. But the question was on the two churches and you cunningly endeavored to evade the issue by making wild assertions as to what the Book of Mormon taught, yet failed to give chapter and verse. Did you think I would read all the book to the audience just to show them that there was no such statement there? No, I preferred to debate the main question and let the people hunt for your evidence themselves, inasmuch as you failed to show it, after I positively denied it being there. You did present evidence to prove that the last great battle was fought at Cumorah, but does that prove that Ether hid the twenty-four gold plates there? You cunningly quote the words of Moroni, where he says his father, Mormon, hid some plates there; but because Mormon hid plates at Cumorah many hundred years after Christ, is it any proof that Ether hid the twenty-four plates there a thousand years before the days of Mormon? Reader, please note that the controversy is not over the place where Mormon hid plates 400 A. D., but where did Ether, the Jaredite, hide the twenty-four plates one thousand years before that time. You argue because the last great battle of the Jaredites was fought at Cumorah, that Ether must have hid the records there; and in making the quotation on page 532, you very cunningly leave out a very important point. I give the quotation as it is in the book with the part which you left out italicised.

And the Lord spake unto Ether, and said unto him, Go forth. And he went forth, and beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled; and he finished his record; (and the hundredth part I have not written); and he hid them in a manner that the people of Limhi did find them.

Your leaving out this part and connecting as you do improves things to some extent for your theory, I suppose. When the connection is taken it spoils your theory. He went forth and beheld that all the words of the Lord had been fulfilled. What were the words referred to? We find some of them on page 527, for the utterance of which Ether was "cast out from among them." They are:—

The word of the Lord came to Ether, that he should go and prophesy unto Coriantumr, that if he would repent, and all his household, the Lord would give unto him his kingdom, and spare the people, otherwise they should be destroyed, and all his household, save it were himself, and he should only live to see the fulfilling of the prophecies which had been spoken concerning another people receiving the land for their inheritance; and Coriantumr should receive a burial by them; and every soul should be destroyed save it were Coriantumr.

Now note the quotation on page 532, "and [Ether] beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled." Could Ether sit down up there at Cumorah and witness that all the nations had been destroyed when the capital city and central government had been down in Central America? No sir, he must go over the ground and see the empty cities and the desolate land, for the record says he "beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled." Could he sit down at Cumorah and finish his record and certify that the people of Zarahemla had landed in Central America and met old General Coriantumr, and after nine moons residence among them, had died and they had buried him? No, sir, Ether must have gone back to the capital, or the regions thereof, which was in Central America, and there finished his record right in the vicinity of where the people of Zarahemla landed.

You speak of the great distance and of the unfordable streams, etc. You must know that the Book of Mormon teaches that these people had horses and other beasts of burden. The country had been densely populated and great armies had crossed back and forth over the streams. They had lived in the country hundreds of years, and yet you would have us believe that Ether "trudged off" on foot and had no way of crossing rivers. The book itself spoils your theory that Ether could not have gone back to Central America by telling us that Coriantumr did go back there after his people were all killed, and met the people of Zarahemla and was buried by them. You see the evidence is all in favor of Ether having gone back in the region of the capital city to "finish his record." The principal part of your criticism is based upon the mistake you have made in supposing that because the people of Zarahemla landed in Central America that Zarahemla was at Yucatan. You can see on page 267 that the Zarahemlites landed in the country called Desolation (Central America) and went from there into the land southward, or South America, and settled. They made no permanent settlement in "Desolation," but located in South America.

I will now set you straight on the geography of the Book of Mormon and the criticisms you make on Limhi "having discovered a land." On page 268 we find that Desolation and Bountiful join each other. The line between them is on the Isthmus of Panama where it is a day and a half journey from sea to sea. Again; page 267, the "Land on the northward was called Desolation, and the land on the southward was called Bountiful." On page 378, we read that Hagoth "built an exceeding large ship, on the boarders of the land Bountiful, by the land Desolation, and launched it forth into the west sea, by the narrow neck which led into the land northward." Desolation and Bountiful are thus plainly located. Zarahemla was located in South America—south of Bountiful. There was a wilderness between Zarahemla and the land of Nephi. We read on page 267 of the land of Nephi (Peru and vicinity) "which was divided from the land of Zarahemla by a narrow strip of wilderness." Again; page 267, speaking of Zarahemla where the Nephites dwelt, giving the northern boundary the record says: "On the north, even until they came to the land which they called Bountiful." To show that Zarahemla was in the land southward, or South America, see page 518:—

And it came to pass that their flocks began to flee before the poisonous serpents, towards the land southward, which was called by the Nephites, Zarahemla.

You mistake me when you assert that I claimed that the twenty-four plates were found on the Isthmus. My position is, and was, that they were found in "Desolation," which country had its southern boundry on the Isthmus. Desolation is just such a country as Limhi's people visited; see page 267, where it is referred to as "the land which had been peopled, and been destroyed, of whose bones we have spoken, which was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; it being the place of their first landing." Page 185 says of the place where the twenty-four plates were found:—

Nevertheless they did find a land which had been peopled; yea a land which was covered with dry bones; yea, a land which had been peopled and which had been destroyed.

Again; page 158, we read that Limhi's people "found not the land of Zarahemla, . . . having traveled in a land among many waters; having discovered a land which was covered with bones of men, and of beasts, etc., and was also covered with ruins of buildings of every kind, having discovered a land which had been peopled with a people who were as numerous as the hosts of Israel." Desolation was just such a land as this. The bones were there. The buildings were there, and even remain unto this day. The "many waters" are there too, with the Caribbean Sea on one side and the great Pacific Ocean on the other. The "rivers and fountains," are not mentioned in connection with the country where the twenty-four plates were found, notwithstanding your statement. These "rivers and fountains" are in the land where Mormon hid his plates, away up at Cumorah about one thousand years later. Limhi's people therefore traveled northward from the land of Nephi (Peru), missing Zarahemla, on through Bountiful, up through the Isthmus into Desolation, where they found the twenty-four plates of Ether and returned, and nothing unreasonable in the narrative either.

I. N. WHITE.

"WHERE IS THE PROOF?"

THE OTHER SIDE.

As I have, to some extent, come under the ban of the article having the above title, I take the liberty to present a few thoughts on the other side; and more especially so from the fact that I was once before criticised by two of the "foremost rank," for, as they understood it, objecting to the use of inference. Having on that occasion "put myself in the attitude of the objector," and reasoning from that standpoint, they had misunderstood my position, hence the criticism.

Now I would like to know which of two criticisms is the correct one, the one that says the preacher should use inference, or the one that at least implies he should not?

As to Nicodemus having been a coward. While I believe from inference that he was, I have been careful to use the term "doubtless" so as to stand on the safer basis.

As to Jesus laying hands on those taken to Bethany. I don't recall that I ever made the positive statement but once in my life, and that during the last sermon preached in Lamoni. Hardly had the statement passed my lips when a premonitory influence as to criticism to come took possession of my being, and one good brother so criticised just as I stepped down from the pulpit. It was accepted in the spirit given. And so far as that may go so is the criticism contained in the article being replied to.

Matthew, Mark, and Luke all give an account of the blessing of infants; but no two of them give it alike. In one point, however, there is a "positive and unqualified statement" of harmony—that in the act of blessing these little ones Jesus came in contact with them. Matthew says "he laid his hands on them." Mark says "he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them." Remember that he blessed them by putting his hands upon them. Luke says the children were brought that he would touch them.

The objector may interpose that if this proves anything, it proves too much; that if it proves he laid on hands to bless, it also proves that he took them in his arms to bless. But when even so much as an inference be found that any who were confirmed were taken in the arms, then it will be time to offer the objection as well as to imagine that grown people were taken in the arms of the elders to be confirmed.

But it is said, "Jesus could have stood in the midst of his disciples, raised his hands toward heaven, and blessed them, without putting his hands upon their heads at all." "Where is the proof?" It is easy enough to assert that he could have done so, but to prove it is quite another thing.

I am satisfied that he could have asked God to bless them while in the occupancy of such an attitude, but very doubtful that he could have blessed without contact with their person, hence one very strong reason for the laying on of hands in all its divisions as an ordinance.

To me the Scriptures teach the necessity of a means of transmission that the blessing may be conveyed from the giver to the recipient. For this reason God uses the Holy Spirit, angels, men, and devils, through or by whom he conveys his blessings and his cursings.

It may be interposed that Christ could have assumed such attitude and used the Holy Spirit as a means to convey the blessing, but it is answered in the thought that he was not as yet given, nor did he come till ten days after.

The other points in the article do not apply to me, so I leave them untouched. I do not object so much to the criticism of the article as I do to its manner, and more especially its application. If every elder in the field were to come to the standard of the application of this article and be confined within its limits, then not another class would be reached by our preaching. If the preacher shall put positiveness of statement aside only where it is so absolutely true that there can be no chance for objection, then in statement, and finally in manner as well, he will become so halting that he will not retain the interest of his "thoughtful hearers," for they will very naturally conclude that he is not positive with regard to his own statements and therefore is himself in doubt.

Conference Minutes.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference was held at Jonesboro, Maine, September 20-22, 1895, S. O. Foss president, J. D. Wilson clerk. Ministry reporting: S. O. Foss, J. S. Walker, Emery Foss, George Eaton, J. C. Foss; Priest J. N. Ames. Bishop's agent's report presented and accepted. Moved that the committee appointed to settle with Massachusetts district be discharged and a vote of thanks extended for their services. S. O. Foss was sustained as president, J. D. Wilson as clerk, J. S. Walker as Bishop's agent. Time and place for the next conference was left with the president to appoint where he thought best.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Conference convened with Five Lakes branch October 5; J. A. Grant president, A. E. Hicks secretary. Ministry reporting: Elders W. J. Smith baptized 4, A. Barr baptized 4, E. Delong baptized 2, W. Davis baptized 7, J. A. Grant baptized 1, L. Phelps baptized 5, R. E. Grant baptized 9; Priests H. Rathbun, T. Rawson, A. DeWolf; Teachers A. E. Hicks and H. Avis; Deacon H. Jenkinson. The following officers were elected: President, J. A. Grant, assistant, E. Delong, secretary, A. E. Hicks. Andrew Barr was sustained Bishop's agent. The following were elected delegates to the next General Conference: J. A. Grant, A. Barr, William Lewis, E. DeLong, A. E. Hicks, Srs. A. Barr, Frone Shinnick, J. A. Grant, and Sr. Hinds. A sisters' meeting was held the evening of October 6. Sr. Rathbun spoke first, also read an article on the help of woman to restore the gospel, which was highly appreciated. Srs. Shinnick and Pearson, and Brn. Rathbun and Davis also spoke, all of which was very instructive. The district Sunday school convention met on the 4th but it being the first since the district was organized, it was lightly represented, only two schools making reports. The next conference will be held in the German branch.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Conference convened at Galland's Grove, Iowa, October 11, at 10:30 a. m.; presidents, C. E. Butterworth and W. W. Whiting; Nellie Rudd secretary. Branches reporting: Coalville, no change. Harlan, no change. Galland's Grove 283; 5 received, 2 died. North Coon 49. Salem 69. Dow City 105; 3 baptized, 3 removed. Mason's Grove 146; 5 baptized, 3 died. Pilot Rock 21; 4 baptized. Ministry reporting: Elders J. T. Turner baptized 3, A. Jackson baptized 2, C. J. Hunt baptized 5, C. E. Butterworth baptized 6, J. F. McDowell baptized 1, J. M. Baker baptized 3, O. Holcomb, H. M. Daniel, W. W. Whiting, J. Pett, W. Smith, B. Salisbury, J. H. Young, C. Derry; Priests J. Carlson, D. Brewster, R. Wight, J. Dobson; Teachers J. O. Booth, J. L. Butterworth, C. Holcomb. The appeal of C. M. Wilder was heard and the brother forgiven. Bishop's agent reported: On hand and received since last report $257.49; paid out $234; balance on hand $23.49. Collection was taken to pay the expenses of J. F. McDowell and C. E. Butterworth while attending the McDowell-Braden debate and $14.35 was received. Preaching by W. Smith, C. Derry, D. M. Rudd, J. M. Baker. Adjourned to meet at Dow City at call of president.

BIRMINGHAM.

The annual conference convened at Leicester, June 1-3, C. H. Caton presiding, G. S. Greenwood secretary, J. E. Meredith assistant. Branch reports: Priestly Road, Summerfield, Stafford, and Leicester. These reports showed 7 added by baptism during the year. Ministry reporting: Elders T. Taylor, C. Tyler, J. D. Davies, J. R. Greenwood, H. Tabbiner, C. Walton, E. A. Webb, G. S. Greenwood, H. Pearce, J. E. Meredith, J. Matthews, T. Dawkins, C. D. Norton, C. H. Caton; Priests J. Healey, A. Crump, D. Roberts, E. Matthews, T. Anderton, J. Worman. Financial report: Money received since last conference along with balance in hand, £5-16.3½; expended £4.11.3½; balance in hand £1.5. Auditing committee, J. E. Meredith, C. D. Norton, Joseph Matthews, reported finding the account correct. In answer to a question, the president said he would do what he could in sending elders to help the different branches from time to time. Preaching by J. Matthews, J. E. Meredith, G. S. Greenwood, and E. A. Webb. Resolved that the committee on district rules be continued. Resolved, that C. H. Caton be the delegate of this district to the annual mission conference in British Isles, 1895. The Stafford branch recommended Bro. John Dyche for ordination to the office of elder. The conference approved the recommendation. All licenses sent in to this conference were ordered to be indorsed by vote. Resolved that we sustain Apostles J. Caffall and G. T. Griffiths by our faith, prayers, and means. Resolved that we sustain by our prayers the authorities of the church in America. Moved that we sustain the authorities of the Birmingham district by our faith, prayers, and means. Resolved that this conference tender its thanks to the Saints of the Leicester branch for their kindness. Adjourned to Summerfield branch, Icknield, Port Road, Birmingham, 1896.

WHITE-HAY DEBATE.

The debate began October 15 and lasted four days with two sessions a day. Bro. I. N. White affirmed that the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is indeed the church of Christ and in harmony with the New Testament in doctrine, organization, and practice. Our brother showed what it took to constitute the Church of Christ in primitive times and that our church agreed with that church back there in every particular, not only in organization, but in doctrine and practice as well. He maintained every one of these principles so plainly from a Bible standpoint that nearly all could see the harmony. He also showed that the gifts and blessings of the gospel were for the faithful children of the Lord.

Reverend Hay did not make a strong fight against those things. He said the Baptist brethren could make the Mormon brethren (as he expressed the term) ashamed of themselves when it comes to speaking in tongues. He also said that he believed in praying for the sick as is recorded in James 5: 13-16; that he went and prayed for an old sister by the name of Ward and she got well. Bro. White asked him if he anointed with oil and laid on hands. He said No. He tried to show that the revelation in Doctrine and Covenants, section 4, paragraph 3, was false, where it speaks in regard to the three witnesses viewing the plates. He said that eight others saw them, hence that proved the revelation to be untrue because only three were to see those things. Bro. White showed that while eight others saw the plates, they did not claim to receive the same testimony as David, Oliver, and Martin; thus all could see that was fair and reasonable; that Bro. White maintained his proposition in every point.

Rev. Hay then affirmed for two days that the Missionary Baptist Church is indeed the church of Christ and in harmony with the New Testament in organization, doctrine, practice, and origin. In his first speech he said that John the Baptist was a Baptist preacher. He also admitted that the church went into the wilderness in fulfillment of Revelation 12:14 and was to remain there twelve hundred and sixty years. He also said that although she was concealed for twelve hundred and sixty years, the Baptist is the only Christian community that has stood since the apostles. He said that our Authorized Version of the Bible was translated by fifty-four men. This last statement he read from the work of J. Newton Brown who was himself also a learned Baptist. However this Rev. Hay did not like the translation of Acts 2:38 which did not suit him. He wanted it to read, "and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, because of the remission of sins." However, he criticised our epitome of faith where it says, "We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." The Rev. convinced us that he was converted to the same principle, that the Bible was not all translated correctly, when we heard him trying to change the word "for" that was translated from the Greek word eis and that as he said by fifty-four men to read "because of." However, we were not to receive the remission of sins until after we repent and are baptized. Bro. White made this so plain that all could see the point when he turned to the Bible and showed that John whom his opponent claimed as a Baptist preacher taught the same doctrine that Peter did on the day of Pentecost; that is, baptism for the remission of sins at the same time telling Rev. Hay that if John was a Baptist preacher that he (Hay) had apostatized. Bro. White also showed by means of a chart that was placed on the wall back of the speaker's desk the difference between the organization of the Missionary Baptist and the Church of Christ thus:—

|----------------------------|-------------------------|
| Bishops.                   | Origin.                 |
| Deacons.                   | Apostles.               |
| Origin.                    | Prophets.               |
|                            | Evangelists.            |
|                            | Pastors.                |
|                            | Elders.                 |
|                            | Bishops.                |
|                            | Teachers.               |

He showed that in the Church of Christ the officers must be called of God. Rev. Hay seemed to ridicule the idea of revelation. Bro. White turned to him and asked him if he was called of God to preach. He said, "Yes." "Well, then," said Bro. White, "you have been receiving revelations from God." He then showed how God's preachers were called at Antioch when there were prophets and teachers in that church and that Saul and Barnabas were called and sent by the Holy Ghost; then telling his opponent that no such an officer could be found in this Missionary Baptist Church, that they were fulfilling the prophecy of Paul in 2 Timothy 3:1-5, when in the last days he says they were to have "a form of godliness," but denying the power thereof; from such turn away. When this Baptist preacher saw that he could not maintain his cause he ran back to Brigham Young and the work done by him also telling the audience that Emma Smith the wife and widow of the prophet and her four boys left Utah, not being satisfied with that work, and came to Illinois and founded the Reorganized Church.

Here Bro. White showed up his mistake so plainly that all seemed to see the truth of it. He also showed that the work done by Brigham Young was in fulfillment of prophecy. Rev. Hay's attempt to prove Baptist succession was a complete failure, so much so that I think that nearly all could see it. He claimed that the Baptist Church had continued ever since the apostles; but as Bro. White was well versed in Baptist literature, having with him five eminent histories of the Baptist Church, he showed their origin in America; that one Roger Williams was baptized by one Ezekiel Halliman who was a layman, and thus the first Baptist Church was started in America, about the year 1639, and that without authority from God. This left them without authority whatever in this country. Bro. White then showed from their own historians that one Mr. Smyth baptized himself about the year 1608 over in the old country and that was the way they started over there, so this left them without authority whatever; and as Rev. Hay said the church was in the wilderness for one thousand two hundred and sixty years, Bro. White illustrated the church going into the wilderness by means of a locomotive and a train of cars going through a tunnel. Showing that it was the same church that went into the wilderness that was to come out with apostles, prophets, and all the gifts of the Spirit with the same laws that characterized the beautiful church of Revelation 12, and that the angel with the gospel was to come in this the eleventh hour dispensation to restore the ancient faith; and that this Baptist Church was not the church that went into the wilderness and was to come out, because as Bro. White informed him that church as he represented as a train went into the wilderness or tunnel with the great light of God, clothed with the sun. She had eyes, or prophets, apostles, pastors, elders, bishops, deacons, and teachers, all called of God by the Holy Ghost. "Now," he said, "if this Baptist Church is that same train, there surely has been a wreck in the tunnel; for she only has bishops and deacons." It was so plain that nearly all could see the point. He showed that in the place of this church coming out of the wilderness spoken by John in the Book of Revelation that they came out of the Roman Catholic Church, hence one of the harlots of that mother spoken of in Revelation 17.

This debate was held in the Garden Prairie Baptist church. I can truly say that it was a great and grand victory for the truth. To God be all the praise. The house was crowded each day. All our people were well satisfied with Bro. White's manner of warfare. He is a good debater. We wanted a good strong man to represent our side; and as we had heard a great deal about him, we sent for him to come and help us out. He makes his points clear so nearly all could see them. As he remarked to Rev. Hay, his positions went down at every sound of the hammer.

The majority of the people here think the Baptists were badly downed, and they surely saw the weakness of their own position when it was shown so plainly. Their preachers had been telling them they were the very church spoken of by Christ in Matthew 16: 18 and prophesied of in Daniel 2: 44, and was organized by the Savior and has stood ever since. Bro. White showed from their own men that such a succession could not be maintained. Bro. White will leave here to-day for home, thence to Miami, Indian Territory, to meet one Mr. Evans, another Baptist.

Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

GRACELAND COLLEGE LIBRARY.

Every successful college must have a library. Small though it may be in the beginning it must necessarily increase in order to keep pace with the times and the demands of students. Graceland College has just begun. Provision is being made for a library. A committee appointed to devise ways and means began its work by appointing a librarian. The librarian will keep the books in a suitable place, solicit donations, and make purchases when funds are available. All friends of the college are requested to make donations. Many rare volumes are often hidden out of sight or in some corner, that would be valuable and desirable in a college library. This class consists largely of governmental and social publications, reports of statistics, histories, and kindred subjects.

Any persons wishing to benefit the cause of education by donations or otherwise will confer with the undersigned.

T. J. FITZPATRICK, Librarian,
Lamoni, Iowa.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

To the Saints of the Northern Michigan District of the Reorganized Church:—Please take notice that upon the recommendation of the conference of said district, Bro. John J. Cornish, of Reed City, Michigan, has been appointed Bishop's agent in place of Bro. J. H. Peters resigned. We trust that the new agent may have the instant and hearty support of all interested in the gospel work in said district and that notwithstanding the loss to the cause in the district of the efficient services of Bro. Peters there shall not be any cessation of the gospel's onward progress.

Bro. J. H. Peters has been faithful and efficient in his work and it is to the regret of the Bishopric that he has found it necessary to relocate and thus cease his immediate connection with the work in Michigan. We trust that he may be blessed and richly endowed in his new home with the peace of the Master.

For the Bishopric,
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

To the Saints of the Alabama or Mobile District:—You will please take notice that upon the resignation of Brother F. P. Scarcliff and recommendation of conference of said district, that Bro. G. T. Chute, of Bay Minette, Alabama, has been duly appointed and authorized to act as Bishop's agent for said district. All moneys intended for the use and benefit of said district should be paid or forwarded to Bro. Chute who will give receipts to all making donations, either for tithes or other offerings.

The thanks of the Bishopric are hereby extended to Bro. F. P. Scarcliff for the faithful discharge of the duties heretofore, and we trust that for each and ever work he may be blessed and rewarded of the Master.

It is the duty of all Saints in each district to see that some offering, either as a tithe or otherwise, be made to the advancement of the cause in the gospel work, and this should be either sent to the agent or the Bishop of the church. In districts where it is convenient it should be paid to the agent, but all should see that an offering is made, no difference how small it may be, and their names duly entered upon the records of the church.

Trusting that before the close of the year every name in the district may appear either upon the agent's books or the general church books of the Bishop, I am in behalf of the Bishopric, a laborer in the gospel,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

KIRTLAND CONFERENCE NEWS.

I herewith give notice that the managers of the Cleveland Daily Plain Dealer have agreed to furnish a first-class reporter to report the proceedings of the General Conference, of April, 1896; and I here wish to call the special attention of the Saints to the fact that Mr. Kennedy, the new manager, will publish on April 6 a history of the church, in which the doctrines, organization, and the distinction between the Utah Church and the Reorganization will be clearly and accurately set forth; also excellent cuts of the prominent officials of the church with biographical sketches, and cuts of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon, Kirtland Temple, Graceland College, Herald and Ensign buildings, will appear in said edition.

Mr. Kennedy has pledged his word that the cuts will be of the best, and only correct and truthful reports shall be published in his paper. Mr. Ice, who reported for the conference in 1891, is now one of the sub-editors of said paper and is a staunch friend to the church. One advantage to the church in these gentlemen reporting will be that a correct account of the conference proceedings will pass through their hands into the associated press.

The cost of the daily throughout the entire conference in the United States and Canada will be thirty cents; in Europe and Australia forty cents. The extra copies for April 6, which will include the history and cuts, will be at two cents per copy, and in foreign countries three cents per copy.

I may add that all the editors of newspapers in Wales are to be supplied with a copy of the April 6 number, and dozens have been ordered by the Saints to be sent to the editors of newspapers in England and to their numerous friends. I trust that the Saints throughout the world will follow this example, as it will afford us a rare opportunity to remove much prejudice and to place the Reorganization in its true and proper light before the press and the general public. So please forward orders for copies of April 6 to send to the editors of papers in your respective localities and the friends to whom you wish the paper sent.

All orders for the daily and extra copies for April 6 to be sent to my home address, Temple, Lake County, Ohio. Please do not send orders to the managers of the Plain Dealer, as they have placed the matter solely in my hands.

The reason for publishing this notification so early is that the Saints in all the world may have time to send in their orders.

Yours,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

(Ensign, please copy.)

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Northwest Kansas district conference will convene with the Goshen branch, Clay County, November 30, 1895, at ten a. m. All officials and branches are requested to have their reports made out and on hand at the opening of conference. A full representation is desired, as matters of importance touching the future prosecution of the work will be considered.

Brethren, come bringing the Spirit of God with you that we may have a profitable time. We all need the reviving influence of the Spirit to qualify us for the work. The field is large, the laborers few, the harvest great, and the powers of darkness strong. The conflict is before us, therefore, we ought to pray the Lord of the harvest to give us strong men who are in downright earnest; upright men that are not ashamed to bear the reproach of Christ; honest men, men that are afraid to swear, lie, or get drunk; who are willing to make a sacrifice of everything that is low and degrading. Love that which is pure, good, and elevating; with such as do so the Spirit of God like a fire will be found burning, and the light of the latter-day glory will be made manifest to all men and they be persuaded to enter into it, to the honor and glory of God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, Amen.

A. KENT, Pres.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kans, October, 24, 1895.

MARRIED.

STONESTREET—HOPKINS.—At New Washington, Ohio, Wednesday, October 16, 1895, Francis X. Stonestreet to Marie Hopkins.

DIED.

KRUCKER.—At his home near Davis City, Iowa, Bro. Louis Phillip Krucker. Bro. Krucker was born in Paris, France, December 2, 1838, and departed this life September 17, 1895; being 56 years, 9 months, and 15 days old in mortal life. He came to America when sixteen years old, drifted in Oregon among the pioneers, where in time he married Rebecca, eldest daughter of John and Jane Buckingham. He, with the families of himself and father-in-law, removed to Lamoni, in the fall of 1881, having heard and obeyed the gospel under the administration of Elder Joseph C. Clapp, in Oregon. He left a wife and four children who mourn him. Funeral services in the Saints' church at Lamoni, October 20, 1895, the body having been interred in Rose Hill cemetery September 18, sermon by Pres. Joseph Smith assisted by Bro. Joseph R. Lambert.

WIGHT.—At his home near Ridgeway, Missouri, September 8, 1895, Bro. L. L. Wight. Deceased was born December 27, 1833, in Clay County, Missouri, under hastily constructed shelter at the time when the Saints were driven from their homes. He became a member of the church when young and soon became acquainted with the hardships incident to membership in the church in those troublesome times. At about eight years of age, in company with his mother, he went to visit his father who was then in Liberty jail. He was detained there several days. This incident of his life was ever fresh in his mind. Shortly after the death of Joseph and Hyrum, his father in charge of what was called the Old Company, emigrated to Texas. From this time on, for almost thirty years, his life was spent on the frontiers, subject to considerable hardship, privation, and adventure. In 1853 he was married to Eliza Leyland who is yet living. At the breaking out of the Rebellion he enlisted in the Confederate army, but soon became very ill, secured an honorable discharge, and returned home. The church being reorganized in 1860, he renewed his covenant by baptism in 1865 and has ever since borne a faithful testimony to the work. Besides his companion, he leaves two sons and three daughters, all of mature age, and church members. One grown son and two infant children, son and daughter, have preceded him across the dark waters. During his last illness he suffered much but had comparative rest the last few days, and just as the sun set that beautiful Sabbath evening his spirit quietly took its departure. Almost his last words were, as he awoke from a gentle sleep shortly before his death and turned his head wearily on his pillow, "O, I forgot that I was in this world!" He was a kind husband and father, and his loving words and gentle influence are missed in the family circle. Funeral sermon by Elder Myron Haskin, from John 11: 25.

BAUER.—At Burlington, Iowa, October 6, 1895, Elder John G. Bauer, who was born August 1, 1815, in Hildsburghausen, Germany. Shortly before his death he gathered his children around his bedside and left a fatherly blessing upon the head of every child. The spirit of his deceased companion came and conversed with him at five o'clock in the morning. He said in an hour from that time his spirit would leave for the realms above. The dear ones closely watching the hour, saw him breathe out at six a. m. the last breath of life. The life of Bro. Bauer was an eventful one. He left the Protestant Church in 1852 and was baptized into the Baptist Church, under much persecution. He tried to advocate that doctrine; met with some success. Finally a church was organized, shortly after which he left for America. In 1864 he was ordained by Eisele and Gubelman in St. Louis as a minister in the Baptist Church, in which he labored faithfully until the gospel reached his ears. He strongly advocated the second coming of Christ while laboring for the Baptist Church. In 1871 he was baptized and ordained an elder in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for which he labored with untiring zeal to the last. He sounded the gospel story in the German tongue. As a consequence a German branch was organized in Burlington. He was the author of several German tracts. He died strong in the faith, leaving four children, thirty-nine grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. The funeral was in charge of T. T. Hinderks and J. S. Roth, Bro. Roth preaching in English and Bro. Hinderks in German, to a large gathering of friends and relatives. Interment in the Burlington cemetery, a large procession following to the grave. So one by one these faithful old soldiers drop out of the ranks for younger ones to take up the armor until the work is finished.

CLARKE.—January 22, 1895, at the house of his son, Bro. James Clarke, 101 Brunswick Street, Oxford Road, Manchester, England, Father Wm. Clarke, aged 84 years. Deceased was baptized into the early church shortly after the introduction of the gospel message into this country; was ordained an elder and labored in the interest of the church until the introduction of polygamy, shortly after which he withdrew himself from association, and remained aloof until the message of the Reorganized Church was declared in his hearing. He recognized its identity with the original work, became associated therewith by the vote of the Manchester branch, May 7, 1882, and was ordained an elder August 20 following. Our aged and esteemed brother was prior to his death mainly instrumental in laying the foundation of the Northeast Manchester branch, and remained a faithful and active worker with the church until a few weeks before his departure. His body was interred in the Parish church yard, Cheadle, near Manchester, by Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., January 26. The funeral sermon was afterwards preached in the Saints' meeting room, Manchester, Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., also officiating.

"He's gone! His work on earth is done;
The battle's fought, his race is run;
Blest is the path he trod:
For he espoused the glorious cause,
In prompt obedience to the laws
Of the Eternal God."

He died in the Lord. "Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

LEWIS.—Annie, daughter of Bro. and Sr. E. H. Lewis, September 22, 1895, aged 3 years, 2 months, and 27 days. Funeral sermon by Elder J. R. Evans, assisted by F. M. Weld; text John 5: 26. Thus one more of the lambs of the flock of Christ has been called home.

HALL.—Sr. Myrtle B., wife of Bro. Peter Hall, was born in Eldred, Pennsylvania; died September 4, 1895, aged 22 years, 2 months, and 7 days. She was baptized June 27, 1893, and ever since has been a shining light. Husband and four small children are bereft of wife and mother.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

In paper covers, 40 pages, each..... 8
Per dozen..... 75
Without covers, 5 cts each; per dozen..... 20

PATTIE: OR LEAVES FROM A LIFE, WITH INTRODUCTION BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR

A book in which is traced the intimate connection between the history of Protestantism and the founding of the Government of the United States with the event of the restored Gospel; interwoven with which is a tender story from a real life, telling of the efforts of one to find the Kingdom of God, its object being to trace God in modern history, and to show that his dealings with men are as clearly discernible now as in ancient times.

A book for Sunday school libraries and the home. Price.....$1 14

TOO MANY INCOMPETENTS.

THE top of the ladder of life is pointed to by The Outlook in the following editorial on "A need of the Times:"—

"Some one has well said that the tragedy of to-day is not the tragedy of the criminal, but of the incompetent; and not of the absolutely incompetent, but of the relatively incompetent. It is the tragedy of the man who has the best intentions and the best character and a fair equipment for his work, but who has not a thorough equipment, and who cannot do the thing he starts to do in the best possible way. Society is crowded with half-equipped workers, with men and women who are honest and earnest, and not incapable, but who are not up to the level of the very best work. It is amazing, in view of the immense number of those who are seeking for positions, how few persons there are competent to fill any particular position. To fill a position of any importance requires often most diligent searching in many directions. There is a host of thoroughly well-equipped people, but there seem to be, at the moment when they are needed, few perfectly equipped persons. When one has a piece of work to be done, it is easy to get it fairly well done, but it is extremely difficult to get it thoroughly well done. This is true of all grades of labor. The really competent men and women who go out for daily work in any community can generally be counted on the fingers of one hand. The rest are partially competent and partially trustworthy. They will come if it suits them, or if the weather is propitious, or if they have nothing else to do, and when they do come they work with a fair degree of skill and industry; but the man or woman who goes despite the weather, and who works with the utmost economy of time and the utmost productiveness, is a very rare person in any locality. If a leading pulpit is vacant, it is astonishing how few persons thoroughly equipped for it can be found at the moment. If a board of trustees are looking for the president of a college, among the host of educated men it is amazing how very few names suggest themselves. In spite of the terrible need of work which weighs upon the masses of men, and in spite of the superior processes of education which are offered to the fortunate few, it remains true that society is filled with incapable or only partially trained people, and that when the thoroughly trained man or woman, perfectly fitted to do a specific thing in a superior way, is needed, a candle must be lighted and a long search begun. The great lesson to be read to boys and girls to-day is the need of some kind of absolute competency, some kind of ultimate superiority."—Exchange.

"Not only is it very healthy to yawn," says a French physician, "but artificial yawning should be resorted to in cases of sore throat, buzzing of the ears, catarrh, and like troubles." It is said to be as efficacious in its way as gargling the throat, with which process it should be combined.

It is a good idea to float the American flag above every schoolhouse. But it is even better for every city to be able to say that no child in its bounds was ever denied an education under that flag for lack of schoolhouses on which to wave it.—Baltimore American.

ITALY AND THE POPE.

WHILE the Germans are celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of their political reunion, similar festivities are being held in Italy. On September 20 a quarter of a century had elapsed since the Italian troops entered Rome and that ancient city became the capital of the new Italian kingdom. But the Italian anniversary is of much greater international importance than that of the Germans. When Garibaldi crowned his work by adding Rome to the rest of united Italy, he deprived the Pope of nearly the whole of the territory over which the head of the Catholic Church had held sway as a temporal prince. Henceforth the Pope was considered himself a prisoner on the limited area still left to him; he has never left it, and still protests against the spoliation. The Italian patriots, on the other hand, have claimed that Italy without Rome would be but a second-rate power, and they assert that the Pope needs no land to maintain his prestige. Crispi, the Italian Premier, expressed himself very strongly upon this point at the unveiling of Garibaldi's statue. He spoke, in the main, as follows:—

"The enemies of the Italian unity have sought to interpret these fetes as an insult to the Pope, but it should not be forgotten that Christianity, divine in its nature, has no need of cannon to defend itself. Our adversaries do not consider that a temporal prince cannot at the same time be holy and impeccable. The material arms and legal violences necessitated by reasons of state would disturb the soul of a demigod, and stifle all sentiment of veneration for the Vicar of Christ on earth, whose special prerogative it is to preach peace and absolve sins. In no other country, moreover, does the church enjoy as much liberty and respect as in Italy—the only country which has set the example of renouncing all claims on behalf of the state in ecclesiastical matters. The Pope has an influence which all other powers may well envy. Protestant sovereigns, and even those outside of the religion of Christ, defer to his judgment. Italian genius, by the law of May, 1871, has solved a problem which in other days seemed insoluble. As a temporal prince the Pope's authority would be diminished. All would band together against him, as was, indeed, the case for centuries, to the detriment of faith and spiritual authority. After 1870 the Pope was able to contend with Prince Bismarck, proving his strength. Italy does not fear attempts at rebellion. The ministers of religion know that they will not be interfered with as long as they do not exceed their rights, but rebellion cannot go unpunished."

Romualdo Bonfadini, in a lengthy article in the Nuova Antologia, Rome, explains that it is impossible to expect cordial relations between the Pope and the King of Italy, if the former becomes Prince of Rome. He says:—

"The Pope opposed the union of Italy, not as pontiff, but as sovereign. But Europe soon began to notice the contrast between the papal state and the kingdom—on the one hand a sovereign who rested in the love of his people and could grant liberty without the fear of disorder; on the other hand a state which had to use daily its foreign mercenaries to maintain its authority, a government which robbed the Jews of their children to baptize them by force, a sovereign who was frequently forced to deny the supreme gentleness of his character for political reasons. The law abolishing ecclesiastical courts and the reduction of religious corporations, adopted by the Sardinian Parliament, was met by furious protests and excommunications on the part of the Roman Cure, but it was inspired by a moderation highly appreciated throughout Europe. France, indeed, regarded it as her duty to resist with her troops a government thus opposed to all human progress. But papacy did not benefit much by this interference. Its star was sinking, while the star of Piedmont rose."

The war with Germany forced France, who needed all her soldiers, to withdraw her protection, and the Italians took possession of Rome amid the rejoicings of the people. But the moving spirits of the Vatican have not yet given up all hope. Cardinal Svampa, who is now and then mentioned as an aspirant to the triple crowns, recently expressed himself as follows:—

"The Pope can never consent to become an Italian official. He must be free. The 'Guaranty Law' is not sufficient to guard his right. It has been framed by the Italian Parliament and could, therefore, be repudiated by the Italian Parliament. What the Pope needs is international guaranty. That would be a step in the right direction. But the Pope can never rest until his temporal power has been restored, and that will happen when the unnatural unity of Italy becomes a thing of the past. The monarchy is not much in favor except in the Northern provinces. It is not impossible that Italy will, in the end, form a federation of three states, the center and the south becoming Republics. Why should the Pope be unable then to obtain a territory, however limited?"

To most people these hopes appear somewhat Utopian. More practical is the plan mooted in The Daily Telegraph, London, which suggests that the Roman Catholics should purchase a part of Italy, including a seaport, to be given to the Pope as his temporal property forever, under guaranty of the powers. The Curie is to pay £200,000,000 sterling ($1,000,000,000) for this, a sum which could easily be raised among the faithful. There is not much chance that this plan will be adopted. Some papers think it is of American origin, and intended to prepare the way for an American Pope. Others point out that the Pope has all the rights of a sovereign as it is, more so, in fact, than when he held his territory at the pleasure and under the protection of the French Emperor. The Westminster Gazette sums up the Pope's sovereign rights, as guaranteed to him by the Government of Italy, as follows:—

"The Pope's person is sacred and inviolable. Any attempt upon his life is punishable in the same way as an attempt upon that of the King. The Supreme Pontiff is entitled on all Italian territory to sovereign honors. He is allowed to retain his own guards. A sum of £125,000 is paid for his civil list. He retains inalienable sovereignty over, and possession of, the Vatican, the Lateran, and Castel Gandolfo, and all their appurtenances and precincts. During any vacancy of the Holy See the perfect freedom of the cardinals is guaranteed, and the same securities are given to all papal conclaves. All persons visiting the Vatican on spiritual business are similarly protected. The Pope is accorded a private postal and telegraphic service under his own control, and entirely free from that of the civil power. All the papal training-schools and colleges in Rome are exempt from the interference of the state. Can anyone honestly say that there are no temporal guaranties here such as the Church of Rome requires for 'the life and action of her unique religious institution'? The Pope, it is true, chooses to live and pose as 'the prisoner of the Vatican.' But it is by dreams of temporal, as opposed to spiritual, sovereignty, that he is held in bondage."—Literary Digest.

FATHER'S DOMESTIC HEADSHIP.

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in November Ladies Home Journal writes concerning "The Father's Domestic Headship": While, perforce of ordinary circumstance, the father's duties will hold him considerably apart from the contacts of home life, yet whatever successes he may achieve outside will not atone for any failure on his part to regard his home as the prime sphere of his obligation and the point around which his devotements will cluster in distinguished earnestness and constancy. Whatever he may have achieved in his art, trade, profession or other engagement, the man who stands at the head of a household has been in the broad sense of the term a failure if he has not been a true husband and a wise, strong and devoted father. It cannot be a successful home where the mother looks after the children and the father looks after his business. The most productive services rendered are always personal, and any amount of exertion expended outside in providing for the necessities of the home will not take the place of that tutitional ministry which comes only by the direct and continuous contact of father with child. However complete a woman may be as a mother there are qualities of character which the father will communicate to his children that the mother will be less able to do as well as less intended to do.

Premier Crispi is now in his seventy-fifth year. Nevertheless, even in looks, he is anything but an old man. Energetic, restless by temperament, he leads a wonderfully active life, seldom leaving the Italian capital, even when the heat of the Roman summer drives every one else to the seaside.

American locomotives have been shipped this year to Asia, Africa, South America, and Australia. And now comes an order from Europe for twenty freight and an equal amount of passenger engines. Russia may be backward in some matters, but she is ahead of many other countries in railway equipment.—St Louis Republic.

GENERAL KNOWLEDGE, ETC.

WE publish some articles on the HERALD cover and elsewhere at times, not because we indorse all they may contain, but because they do contain some good things and sometimes, both sides of questions, that our readers will be benefited by knowing; also other things that reveal the spirit or trend of passing events. The errors or supposed errors we may not always try to point out, some of them being of such special character that we do not deem it wise to discuss in the church paper, leaving it to our readers to individually examine and reach their own conclusions upon whatever we may deem it injudicious or not within our province to discuss.

Infidels, politicians, Heathens, Christians, Jews, and all shades and conditions of men have some things to say; some of them taking but narrow, partial, or incorrect ground however. "Whoso readeth let him understand;" "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good;" should govern the spirit of all investigation, which, in our judgment, must be made in the spirit of candor. He who would "know the truth" must divest himself of prejudice, bigotry, partisanship in religious, political, or general matters, must be impartial, if he would know things as they are and be prepared for things as they ought to be.

In the midst of so much human weakness, perverseness, and imperfection, it becomes those who would see truth glorified and humanity glorified in the truth, to begin now the cultivation of that candid critical judgment and moderation that shall enable them to reach correct conclusions.

Everything earthly bears the touch of the earth earthy, which in itself is imperfect. Life is but the great school of opportunity where, surrounded and subject to the influences of true and false principles, all may, if they will, learn to discriminate, to make manifest such facts and principles as shall conserve the true and reveal and defeat the false. The Spirit of the gospel prompts to study, to thought, to investigation, to analysis, to arrangement,—to strong adherence to the right without partiality, without bias, without fear.

No one should fear to make proper investigation of any principle, any realm, at proper times and by proper methods. To shrink from what such investigation may reveal is weakness, and tends to hinder knowledge and progress. Truth while modest, is also fearless, and they who stand by convictions based upon truth are not fearful that something may be brought forth that will remove from under them the foundations of what they affirm and to which they have pledged their support. It is only a false position that dreads or decries complete examination. The false knows that light and truth are so superior that flaws necessarily appear as the rays of truth are focused upon it. The reason why Christ and the apostles could not convert the people was because they were controlled and misled by those who deceived and influenced them to turn their ears from hearing and their minds from investigating the truth. The world could be converted to-day could the people themselves shake off their prejudices and refuse to be turned aside by any pleas from impartial, candid investigation.

We believe the spirit of the latter-day work is so broad, so all-inclusive, so grand, and so free, as to liberate the mind and heart and spirit and conscience of every man and woman, if they will free themselves from the bondage of bias and narrowness. Its all-inclusiveness takes in every true reform measure, every element of progress in all phases of life. It is our opinion that the power of an endless life is so to be manifest in a coming day that God's people will be a light to the world because they are able to bear what God will bestow upon them as they come up and occupy higher ground. The work before us as a people is too high, too exalted, too momentous, and requires service of too reliable a character to justify a narrowing of the scope of knowledge or of completeness of action for good,—to warrant any man or woman in narrowing the scope of the realm of true knowledge or action in affairs of church or state or anything else.

No one can attain an eminence equal to faithfulness in the sphere to which God has called him. In such position an individual is placed where his gifts and talents are rightly directed, his whole nature developed, his powers brought out and adjusted as he continues, being led and guided into all truth.

Breadth of mind, largeness of heart, freedom from vanity, toleration of spirit, interest in the advancement and best good of all, are essential to manhood and womanhood in Christ.

Legitimate information on and investigation of all things pertaining to life and godliness should be sought for and encouraged that "knowledge" may "increase in the earth."

Without knowledge man cannot be redeemed.

That which promotes investigation promotes knowledge and tends to the salvation of man.

IN DEBATE.

By a copy of the Shelton Clipper, of Shelton, Nebraska, for October 25, we learn that Bro. C. E. Blodgett will hold a debate with Rev. C. H. Polhemus, of the United Brethren Church, the subjects being,

Resolved, that the doctrine, polity, and usage of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ are in accord with the Bible and the teachings of Jesus Christ. Affirmed by Rev. Polhemus, negated by Rev. Blodgett.

Resolved, that the doctrine, polity, and usage of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are in accord with the Bible and the teachings of Jesus Christ. Affirmed by Rev. Blodgett, negatively by Rev. Polhemus.

In addition to the notice of the discussion, Bro. Blodgett succeeded in getting the Epitome published entire in the same issue.

CHART AND MAP WORK.

THE chart, the map, the chronogram, the stereopticon, and other aids to public teaching and preaching are being brought into requisition in the work of extending the gospel. The ear is reached with the oral message, the eye with illustrations, diagrams, etc. When the eye can see what the ear hears, the impression on the mind often is more strongly made and more deeply implanted. Recognizing this, public teachers, ministers, and lecturers are making quite general use of the aids mentioned.

With a view to stimulating further inquiry into the merits and practicability of such helps in gospel work we publish the following statement from a late letter written by Bro. George F. Weston, of Buchanan, Michigan.

We do not know how much the archaeological committee may have to say of such matters in their report to next General Conference, or whether they shall mention it, or that they include all we have referred to as within the scope of work assigned them. However, we refer to this branch of gospel extension work that brethren who have used it to advantage, and others who contemplate making use of it, may discuss it, or take such steps in conference or elsewhere as a proper estimate of its usefulness may warrant, and thus bring out its merits or demerits.

As chart and map work seems to be coming into some demand, I am prepared to do the former at low figures, and purpose giving the Herald an advertisement of the same as soon as final arrangements are made in regard to the map of Ancient America, now under supervision of the archaeological committee in the East, if further successful in communicating with them as so far, favorable to publishing them by a process which I have in part invented and which I hope may be useful in this and in other features of illustrative church work. In my studies of the Book of Mormon and other works pursuant of the map of ancient lands I feel that I have been much blessed and benefited, and also in the draughting of lands now sent to the committee; and I trust that all interested will speedily respond to the committee's request for items and sketches that as good an average can be obtained as possible and a map drawn up for presentation to the next General Conference that will meet the demand for lecturing upon the Book of Mormon and for home and Sunday school use.

FREEDOM IN THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.

BY advices from Bro. L. R. Devore, dated September 10, 1895, at Papeete, Tahiti, we are informed that at the request of Bro. Devore and the kindly and firm intervention of U. S. Consul Doty, the Chief Governor at Papeete has granted the brethren permission to prosecute their missions. The Consul has advised the authorities at Washington, and seems to be of the opinion that our missionaries will not again be interfered with; provided they continue to be peaceable and lawabiding; of which we have no fears. This liberty will include Bro. Hubert Case and wife, and Bro. Gilbert when he returns to the mission. The brethren will use this opportunity wisely, we trust.

YESTERDAY'S EARTHQUAKE.

THE brief extract which we publish below is from an editorial in the Chicago Tribune of November 1. We make the extract that it may appear from the standpoint of one who may not attach to it the same significance as do those who regard the visitation as one of the signs of the times.

The item furnishes a very brief statement of the extent of the earthquake shock. The complete telegraphic report occupied about a full page of the paper mentioned—a very large one.

The spectacle of buildings shaking and people rushing out of homes in fear is a very significant one and indicates what may often or much more frequently be seen in days to come and in a region of country once supposed to be practically safe from liability to such disturbances and calamities. The calmest judgment must be able to discern the cause for distress of nations mingled with perplexity in the complicated condition and increasing complexity of the general situations of the present age. It is comforting indeed to know that God has set his hand to show the nations their need of his aid and has provided the Deliverer, in the Redeemer, of those who will look to him.

The earthquake of yesterday morning was one of wide extent and severity for the United States. Except on the Pacific coast, where the geological formation favors seismic disturbance, our earthquake visitations are usually local, and very mild as compared with those experienced in many other countries. The most noticeable previously were those at New Madrid, Mo., in 1811, and the one at Charleston, S. C., the last day of August, 1886. There was a minor shock in and near Chicago about a quarter of a century ago, and probably the disturbance in 1811 was felt here by some of the very few people who then lived at the head of Lake Michigan, nearly all of them except Indians being in Fort Dearborn.

The area affected by the earthquake of yesterday was a vast one. It included Alabama and New Orleans on the South, Kansas City and Topeka in the Southwest, Western Iowa, Southern Wisconsin, Southern Michigan, and West Virginia. It was felt with especial severity in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, awakening many thousands of people from their sleep, wrecking some buildings, breaking glass and crockery, and in other places causing stovepipes and tinware to drop from their fastenings, but not involving any loss of human life so far as reported at this writing.

NEWS FROM NEW SOUTH WALES.

BY letter from Bro. John Kaler and by copies of the Mornington Standard, published at Frankston, New South Wales, for September 12 and 19 we learn that a Rev. Reid, of the Church of England, has attacked the faith of the church there and was met by Bro. C. A. Butterworth, out of which a discussion was likely to grow.

Bro. Kaler writes from Tuncurry, September 25, from which we copy.

The work seems to be on the move forward all along the line, slowly but surely, and the seekers for truth are being gathered in. I don't think anything in this world would induce me to lay the armor down, save a release from Him who has called me to the work. I desire to go onward in this glorious work and be the means of saving myself and as many others as possible; for the reward of all faithful Saints is glorious to contemplate.

Of the progress of the work in the neighborhood of where this debate between Rev. Reid and Elder Butterworth may occur, a report from Elder A. Wolley, to the Standard for September 12, states:—

We have been holding extra meetings for some weeks past with good results, thirteen having been added by baptism; and we believe others will follow. We have just held our conference, and have spent a profitable time together. Our church is open for friendly discussion with ministers of any denomination on any doctrine of our church, the Bible to be the standard of evidence; and we allow questions to be asked after preaching services. Will be glad if you will kindly insert this.

It is this progress of the work that has likely drawn the attention of Rev. Reid and the church to which he belongs.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT REVERSED.

THE decision of Judge Phillips, of the United States Circuit Court by which the right to the possession of the Temple Lot at Independence was decided to be in the Reorganized Church, was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, Judge Caldwell presiding, the opinion being handed down by associate Judge Thayer.

This reversal of decision makes necessary another effort to secure legal redress in the courts of the land. To make this effort will require an additional expense to meet legal costs of procedure. To meet this additional expense the Bishop makes a direct appeal to the Saints, which has been indorsed by President Joseph Smith, Bro. W. W. Blair being absent from home, and which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The conference of 1891 authorized and directed the Bishopric to take steps to remove cloud from the title to the lot in question. The Bishop pursuant to the instruction made the effort; resulting in a judgment of the Court before which the cause was first heard in our favor, which was reversed in the Court of Appeals. This was done at the expense of the general church funds, properly the fund of supply for the support of the missionary labors and the needy ones of the flock. Bishop E. L. Kelley believes that, in order to meet the costs of a further procedure to secure a proper hearing of the cause and thus a verdict in our interest to which we fully believe we are entitled, it is right to appeal to the church in behalf of a direct fund to be used for the purpose.

To us it seems to be important that another effort to secure justice should be made; and we believe that the Saints will so decide also, and make such decision by sending what they can spare to make up the amount required.

This should be done at once as the time in which to move for a rehearing is very short, and what is done must be done quickly. Let every branch respond; and let individuals be sure and not wait for dilatory branch action. It is time to move and to move vigorously, if we deserve success. There should be no vexatious delays.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. S. ROTH, Burnside, Illinois, October 30:—

It looks as if the meetings here will be a freeze-out; so far no interest at all. I will close here Sunday night. The leaven is still working at Rock Creek. On Monday they came after me to baptize four more into the kingdom, and there are still others who talk of being baptized before I leave the district. I went from here after preaching Monday night to Rock Creek on Tuesday and baptized those four in the Mississippi, and at night was here again to fill my appointments;—no time lost.

Bro. F. C. Smith, Sutton's Bay, Michigan, October 30:—

Came here first of the week, started to preach and help Bro. McIntyre, of Inland, who has done a good work here. The large schoolhouse was full last evening; good order and good interest. He has baptized two and others seem near the kingdom. All the Saints are feeling well in this part.

Bro. F. G. Pitt, Chicago, Illinois, October 31:—

Have just closed a series of nine preaching services at Sandwich. Baptized one; several others believe and seem to be very near the door. At their business meeting Monday evening Bro. I. L. Rogers was sustained as branch president, Bro. William Hart chosen to act as priest, Henry Fisher teacher, and Davis Rogers deacon. Saints generally feeling well.

Sr. Ann Webster, New Castle, New South Wales, September 30:—

We are getting well on with the church. It will be ready for conference. Bro. Broadway is doing his best to make it a success. The Lord is blessing his labors; there are a few ready for the kingdom. The depression is still felt. We pray for deliverance.

W. C. Cather, John's Mill, Missouri, October 30:—

I am doing my best to push the work. Two more gave their names for baptism. I am meeting strong opposition, but onward goes the work.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, Pocahontas, Iowa, October 29:—

The McDowell-Braden debate was a victory for the cause we love. The resident Catholic priest was present one or more sessions and complimented Bro. McDowell for his gentlemanly efforts. I sold the priest a Book of Mormon.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. WILLIAM STRANGE writes of the work in Chicago. Additions to the branch continue steadily, and the membership are encouraged by the manifest blessings of the Lord in their public meetings, upon the sick, and in general. Meetings are also held at West Pullman, where a number of Saints removed from Plano, Illinois. Pulpits of other churches are at times open to use of our brethren and the general sentiment toward the church becomes more favorable. He exhorts Saints not to neglect attendance at meetings.

Recent arrivals at Lamoni include Brn. R. M. Elvin, J. S. Snively, and A. M. Chase, from district tent work near Lucas, Iowa; Bro. H. A. Stebbins from Illinois and Wisconsin points, and Bro. Columbus Scott from the Des Moines district. Bro. E. L. Kelley went to Kansas City on the 29th and Bro. F. M. Weld to his field on the 31st.

Bro. J. H. Lawn desires the prayers of the Saints for his daughter, Mrs. Emma Baker, of San Francisco.

Bro. V. S. McKinzy, of Blakes Mills, Ohio, desires prayer for his restoration to health.

Bro. Gomer Wells sends us a handbill used to advertise his lectures at Balmain, New South Wales. It shows enterprise and tact in its get-up.

The House of Bishops of the Episcopal Convention has issued an address in which they express sympathy with the idea of church unity, but report that no practical, clearly defined movement toward bringing it about has yet been decided upon.

The late conference of the Unitarian Church joined with the Episcopal conference in the conclusion that Christian unity was at present an impossibility. At the Congregational Council, however, as a step toward Christian unity, a union of all "Protestant Episcopal" churches was proposed, based on these elements of faith: 1. The acceptance of the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments inspired by the Holy Ghost to be the only authoritative revelation of God to man. 2. Discipleship of Jesus Christ, the divine Savior and Teacher of the world. 3. The Church of Christ, which is his body, whose great mission is to preach his gospel to the world. 4. Liberty of conscience in the interpretation of the Scriptures and the administration of the church. We note these that brethren may see the directions of various religious currents.

Bro. Joseph Ward closed meetings at Otto, Arkansas, on the 24th ult., Bro. E. A. Erwin assisting. Three were baptized. He announces three debates ahead; one with a Baptist, the others with Christians. New openings would then be made in their field.

Bro. S. E. Robinson writes from Tuncurry, New South Wales, of his conversion to the faith under the preaching of Bro. John Kaler. He rejoices in spirit and bears witness to the truth.

Appeals for aid should be sent to the Presiding Bishop or his agents. For obvious reasons we cannot publish such in the HERALD.

We failed heretofore to note that the lower house of the Hungarian Diet on September 30 adopted bills providing for the recognition of the Jewish religion and establishing freedom of worship.

"In time of peace Russia has a standing army of 858,000 men; next comes Germany with 580,000, and then France with 512,000 men. In case of war Russia and France could put in the field 9,700,000 men, against the 7,700,000 soldiers of the three countries forming the Triple Alliance—Germany, Austria, and Italy. In time of peace the maintenance of the standing armies of the above powers costs $1,000,000,000 annually."—Information.

Vienna, Austria, has elected an anti-Semitic Municipal Council by a large majority, on a program including the separation of the Jewish from Christian children in the public schools, the exclusion of Jews from office, the nonemployment of Jewish contractors, and the cancellation of existing public contracts with them. The Jews form one-tenth of the population of Vienna and pay one-third of the taxes."—Information.

From two items published concerning the Jews some of the favorable and unfavorable conditions affecting the Hebrew people are brought to notice. However the general trend is in their favor, the national action of the Hungarian Diet looks to a permanent move in their favor, while the election in Vienna is evidently but temporary and municipal at most—probably a local reaction against the methods or successes of the Jews of Vienna.

Bro. G. F. Weston, of Buchanan, Michigan, writes of the favorable condition of the branch there, in which he labors as presiding priest. The Saints are active, growing in grace, and others are being added to their number. The sisters are doing good in prayer union and in the practical work of their sewing society, by which they have started a fund to help build a church, toward which one of the brethren has donated two lots and promised to do more. The children are also at work, active in the Sunday school and in literary lines. All— young, middle aged, and elderly people are united to build up the branch and extend the work abroad. This is a good report and such as we like to hear and think ought to be given the Saints by every branch in the church.

From Armenia again comes the old, old story of Turkish outrages; of mobs of Mussulmen attacking Armenian villages, setting fire to houses, schools, churches, and shooting the helpless people as they ran out; tying men to the stake and burning them and assaulting and mutilating women and children. The total number of victims runs up into the hundreds. The opinion grows that the Turkish government should regulate its domain on a humane and progressive course of action or be retired from the list of political powers and compelled to submit to forces that can guarantee something like nineteenth century civilization to the peoples of its realm.

Another financial scandal in France has compelled the ministry under President Faure to resign. Venality of members of the government is said to have also caused the collapse of the former French ministry.

Bro. J. B. Heide wrote the 29th ult., from Powersville, Iowa, where he had closed a series of meetings. He had also commenced work at other points near by. Some were convinced of the truth. Saints had been good to him, supplying him with clothing, etc.

Statistics completed for the annual report of the Secretary of State show that 6,546 suits for divorce were brought during the year in Ohio. Of these petitions 970 were refused and 2,497 divorces were granted, the additional number of cases still being in the courts.

REMEMBER THY PEOPLE.

SR. N. W. THOMSON.

Remember thy people who trust in thy word,
Whose joy is thy kingdom, thy glory, O Lord,
Who look for thy coming and long for thy smile,

And as they are waiting, Lord, bless them
the while.

O come, Lord of love;

Draw nigh to thy people who seek thee in love.

Remember the lonely, far off from the fold,
Who have known that the world is unfriendly and cold;

Thy comforting Spirit of light, may it be Their constant companion, to tell them of thee.

O bless thou thy servants, thy messengers true

Their labor of love thy salvation to prove;
O, strengthen them, Lord, in thine eternal strength

To stand through the conquest and conquer at length.

THE TITHE AND OFFERING FUND.

IN the midst of the many calls for church incidental expenses, church buildings, College Fund, Home Fund, church publications, etc.; it becomes necessary to call special attention to the more important part of "almsgiving" known to the law, that is, the Tithe and Offering Fund.

This is a means in gospel work ordained of God and enjoined as a duty upon all his children without distinction or respect of persons; and by the faithful keeping of the law we build and prosper, or in the failure to comply we stumble and fall. It is the basis of supply for the Lord's ministry and the poor among his people.

It is this fund referred to in Book of Covenants section 42, paragraph 8:—

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them; . . . and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors. . . .

Duty in this is again set out in section 64, paragraph 5:—

Behold now it is called to day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people.

Failure on the part of the church to fulfill the law of Christ touching this fund brought the church under condemnation at an early time. Section 102, paragraph 2:—

Behold, I say unto you, were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them. . . .

The necessity of fulfilling the law of tithes and offerings is further directly enjoined in section 114, paragraph 1:—

In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing.

Under these plain, direct, suggestive, and mandatory provisions, is it not singular that there should be found anywhere one who has been made free by an acceptance of the first principles of the gospel and who has failed to obey or conform to this law in the strictest sense? Even if we should count this work one of the lesser things in the church, Christ in speaking of the performance of duty touching the temporalities says:—

He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much.—Luke 16: 10.

The law is God's, and perfection cannot be attained by the Saints without a full, hearty, and literal compliance. This may seem to some a hard statement, but not harder than that of Jesus when he said to the rich man,—

If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.—Matt. 19: 21.

Appeal is made to the earnestness of Saints in fulfilling this law as has not been urged by us heretofore, for the time is at hand when there should be a universal compliance. We cannot move forward and leave this work undone. Speaking of this duty among other things, the Lord says,

Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer.—Book of Covenants 102: 2.

No one can be justified who will neglect or refuse to do duty in these times of exigency, and the church cannot be satisfied with less than an earnest effort on the part of every member to fulfill his or her duty under the law.

With a united effort, a sacrifice by each and everyone, we shall be upon a plane at once never before attained by the body, and receive temporal and spiritual blessings, gifts and power, as has not in this generation before been realized or witnessed by the church. The Bishopric shall work to the accomplishment of all this, and ask the coöperation of every member of the church in faith, prayer, and work to the fulfillment.

We are confronted with the following conditions:—

1. The law should be fulfilled to do the will of God.

2. The church is in great need of means to sustain the preaching of the word and to aid the poor and afflicted of God's people. It may truly and literally be said to-day,

I was an hungered.—Matt. 25: 35.

In such a time as this, is there one who will be lacking in duty?

The Bishop's agents in the several districts and branches of the church are hereby charged to use every gospel means to secure a full compliance with this law in their respective districts, zealously striving to administer the same according to its provisions, and to honor Christ who hath ordained the same as a means of good in his work. By doing this, they will also bring everlasting good to every one whom they move to action with full purpose of heart; for with Paul each may truly say,

Not because I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account.—Phil. 4: 17.

The excuse has been offered by some in extenuation of their noncompliance with the law that some of the ministry were not as industrious as they should be in the cause, but remained about home too much.

If those thus complaining will seriously consider this proffered excuse they will soon discover its insufficiency. Toward the law of Christ no one is released from a nonperformance of duty on account of the fact that some one else fails to do his duty. Such a mode of procedure is calculated to destroy confidence and create division and discord, and could not be prompted or approved by the Spirit of the Lord. It would set every brother a judge and watch over his neighbor and feed all the evil tendencies of jealousy, cupidity, and revenge found in the natural man.

If there is a supposed wrong toward the body or individuals by any minister in his nonperformance, or misperformance of duty, there is an adequate remedy under the law for the correction, and brethren can never be justified in the violation of a law in order to try to correct what they may deem to be a wrong.

All other matters of rule and discipline are regularly provided for, and it must not be supposed that any wrong in this direction has not been.

Any person who may feel that a minister is lacking in the performance of his duty has a right to ask that the matter be investigated and may properly file with the Presidency, the Twelve, the Bishopric, or any other acting officer, complaint of inquiry; and by so doing they cannot be charged with unbrotherly conduct or unjust work; for such a proceeding gives the elder a chance if he is wrongfully complained of, to explain and defend himself. This is both honorable and Christian, in keeping with the law, and far in advance of the method of secretly whispering around complaints against a brother which he is not permitted to fairly meet and answer.

Complaints thus justly filed must be fully investigated by quorums or committees at the General Conferences, and when they are found to be justifiable, the elder must be excused from the missionary list, unless restitution is made; and this procedure would hold good in all departments of the work. Can anyone say that proper rule and order in matters of discipline shall not be followed in the church?

The tithe and offering fund cannot, then, rightly suffer on the ground that some one else is neglecting duty; and it follows as a necessary sequence that the name of every member of the church should be found upon the Bishop's records, showing an earnest effort toward carrying out the express terms of the law. This first having been done, as one should "Seek first to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness," which is clearly directed in the law, then blessing and honor will be brought to him who in every other legitimate way strives to do good and bless his fellows, whether in an educational, literary, or business way.

Hoping, praying, and trusting that we may have cause for reporting to the next Annual Conference the fact of a universal compliance with and fulfillment of this law of tithes and offerings, I am, in behalf of the Bishopric,

Your coworker in the gospel,

E. L. KELLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, 2d November, 1895.

THE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

THE Court of Appeals has filed an Opinion reversing the decision in the "Temple Lot Case," and the church in order to maintain its rights and preserve its established landmarks, is again compelled to follow the line of procedure provided by the rules of law.

Under the instruction of the General Conference and the demands of equity and justice in this case, we cannot feel that duty will be discharged until the property in question shall have been restored to the rightful ownership, or every legitimate course to this end duly exhausted.

The Court of Appeals failed in the Opinion to notice any material question involved in the case, deeming it sufficient to defeat us upon the lateness of our suit, rather than its merits. Had not the church as Complainant presumptively as well as in fact, been bound to exercise that forbearance and labor in an ecclesiastical way, which is enjoined by the doctrine of the New Testament, before calling upon the civil tribunals of the land to interfere, the course pursued by the distinguished Judges would not have been so surprising. As it stands, however, and we make the statement with the highest respect to the Court, it is necessary to further press our claims, until satisfied that the due and impartial consideration shall have been given the case which its importance demands.

But we must have some aid to carry to a successful termination the issues involved. Heretofore no call has been made to carry on this suit, but expenses have been borne by the tithe and offering fund. This should not be done. The demands for that fund and immediate gospel work and the poor are alone burdensome. We need help at once for expenses, and we look confidently to the brethren to furnish it. The means can be readily raised if all will take hold with a will.

To accomplish this we ask a response from five hundred brethren in the sum of ten dollars each at once. Do not be afraid of too many answering this, for if an excess should be received it can be placed to the credit of the fund that has already borne the burden of this suit, and it is needed there. Think but a moment: There are over four hundred branches of the church in America. One prompt remittance from each branch would nearly suffice; and where the branch is very small and no one party is able to do this, let a collection be taken and the branch take the credit of it and forward. We feel that we have a right to ask this and that all must approve of the course, for in this suit we have heretofore done at the lowest fair estimate two thousand dollars worth of work in addition to our regular duties and never asked or received a cent for the same. Neither shall we. All we ask is the means to complete the work begun, and the burdens as well as the blessings should be shared by the many.

This may be paid to any Bishop's agent, missionary, or branch officer, or sent by draft or money order, direct to E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa. We ought to hear from this full number in twenty days, and if in a less time, it will materially hasten our work. As the apostle said, "we are perplexed, but not in despair," and with your ready response shall confidently move forward. Remember the amount, ten dollars ($10), at once.

In behalf of the committee, respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY.

LAMONI, IOWA, November 4, 1895.

The foregoing appeal for aid to further prosecute the suit for the Temple Lot, is indorsed by me.

JOSEPH SMITH,

Of the Presidency.

LAMONI, IOWA, November 4, 1895.

The village of Seaman, Ohio, near Winchester, has been deprived of water by the drought. Every spring, well, creek, and cistern within a radius of five miles has been dried up. General Manager Hunt, of the Cincinnati, Portsmouth, and Virginia Railroad sent several trainloads of water to the town October 11. The people of the neighborhood packed the depot in the scramble for water, which was bountifully supplied to all.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Lo, where the routed shadows pass,
Upon each lifted blade of grass
The tokens of a fray—
Pale life-drops from the heart of night,
Mute witnesses of sudden flight
Before the host of day."

STRAY THOUGHTS.

WEARY the day had left us, and as the moon rose above the clouds our tasks were not yet completed. Two tempting letters lay upon our table, but we could not yet stop to read them. At last, when the clock was on the stroke of nine, the last home duty being completed, we were at liberty to read. One we discovered was not for us but for the "Column;" the other from beyond the sea, while not written for publication, contains some things which we must share with our readers, and if asked why we must, the answer would be, Because of the great desire of our soul that God would baptize with his Holy Spirit and send into his vineyard many, many other earnest, faithful, self-sacrificing laborers such as Sr. Devore. The example she is setting ought to be contagious—provocative of like works in every one who loves the Lord Jesus and who hopes to be numbered with his elect in the day of his coming. Think of it, you who are at ease in Zion, too absorbed in your own petty cares to even inquire, "Watchman, what of the night?" Think of five long, weary years of exile from friends and home passed in suffering and toil incessant, a witness of the love of Christ constraining! And then, hardest of all, just as the beacon lights of home are inviting and her heart beats high with hope and in imagination her feet press again her native soil and she stoops to lift the brimming cup from the fountain hard by the portal, to have it dashed from her parched lips and see the lights fade out and die one by one! In a time like this to turn bravely and resolutely away from the path leading to an earthly home and the companionship of kindred and friends and say while the tears fall and the heart aches with its bitter disappointment, "Not as I will," is witnessing for Christ in a way which must tell for good both now and in days to come. She writes:—

"Now I must tell you that through our American Consul here being backed by the authorities in the United States we have succeeded in getting a permit for my husband and all foreign missionaries; also the Mormons, to prosecute work. Mr. Doty, the consul, urged my husband to go and ask for a permit in person from the governor (who, notwithstanding all our written petitions, had treated us with silent contempt), then return and tell him the result. We went, but the governor would not give a permit, though Bro. Devore pressed it. When Mr. Doty heard this he said, "Now I will go." Armed with the Herald, the minutes of the conference here, Voice of Warning, and other things Husband had given him, he went; taking for a witness Captain Hart, an American, and formerly the United States Consul here, and a great friend to us, not of the faith, but personally. They talked one and a half hours. The governor for awhile was very much prejudiced and stubborn, and had a lot of false reports to bring up, but the consul wiped them out of existence as fast as he brought them, showing what honorable, upright, noble men our missionaries were, showing that Bro. Devore was president of the mission and was recognized as such both in America and the churches here. When he heard that he checked himself and said he was pleased to hear that, and said he did not know it, and finally gave permission to labor again. For three months we had done no public work, and were waiting word from Brn. Joseph and Kelley to be released, and making preparation to leave. Now we turn and take up the broken threads again, and this week start out on the deep to far away islands from six hundred to seven hundred miles distant. It caused us both to bring into action all the courage and strength we had at command and to pray for additional power to help us to go forth and do our duty until after April conference. The struggle was so great that it cost me many a tear and prayer, for O, we are both so tired, TIRED. We have suffered so much on the sea, and have sacrificed and endured so many things for five long years, that we feel we need a change. Had we not been interrupted in our work we would not have endured this suffering. But as we had to meet that we were helpless and we turned our faces and thoughts and energies homeward, and now we are turned completely around; and while we rejoice and thank the Lord we are free to labor again, the body and all its members are up in arms to be subdued and brought into subjection. If only we can do these dear people good, and we both be fitted for the many duties, and qualified for the same so that we honor God's holy cause and name wherever we labor, we shall feel glad that we bore the cross and endured the pain.

"One great blessing, we go in the dear little Evanelia, where we can feel at home and have a good bed on which to lay our suffering bodies, and not feel we are in the way, but at home.

"Dear sister, I ought not to burden you with my trials, but I feel it is a relief to tell it to a mortal who can feel sympathy in her heart—a living, breathing heart.

"ELLA R. DEVORE."

Taking up the HERALD another pleasant event greeted our eyes. Neighbor to the Home Column we found the newly established work of the Sabbath school and our heart was both cheered and encouraged by the brave, true words of its editor. We greet the new department with gladness and bespeak for Sr. Royce the cordial support of all who love this latter-day work. "God is marshalling his armies," and is calling to all, "Awake ye who slumber!" There is work for all, for each, and he will choose not only those who are in the humble walks of life, but from the courts of "Phareo" he will select his trained leaders, and the willing ones he will bless. Faithfulness in our labor—no matter what the character of that labor may be—is what God requires at our hands and is that which he will approve.

Yes indeed, Sr. Royce, we need "enthusiasm!" The spirit to do with our might that which comes to our hands to do. We were greatly impressed with this thought recently while reading the following:—

"One of the most fatal things in the life of faith is discouragement; one of the most helpful is confidence. A very wise man once said that in overcoming temptations, confidence was the first thing, confidence the second, and confidence the third. We must expect to conquer. That is why the Lord said so often to Joshua, 'Be strong and of good courage;' 'Be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed;' 'Only be thou strong and very courageous.' And is also the reason he says to us, 'Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.' The power of temptation is in the fainting of our hearts. The enemy knows this well, and he always begins his assaults by discouraging us if he can in any way accomplish it."

And why should we fear? Our God commands every resource of this mighty universe, and if he is "for us who can be against us?" The home and the Sabbath school (if successful work is done, especially in the latter) cannot be separated, and the parent who thinks to see his or her neglected work done by the officers and teachers of the Sabbath school makes a mistake than which none can be graver.

To this new department the Home Column extends a hearty greeting and a most cordial Godspeed.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR NOVEMBER.

"Whene'er a noble deed is wrought,
Whene'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts in glad surprise
To higher levels rise."

Thursday, Nov. 7.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church. Memory Verses.—1 John 2: 5, 6, 9-11.

Thursday, Nov. 14.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—James 1: 26, 27.

Thursday, Nov. 21.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—James 2: 14-17, 26.

Thursday, Nov. 28.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—1 John 2: 15-17, 28.

A RECITATION IN THREE PARTS.

BY ALICE E. COBB.

1. A GREETING TO THE SAINTS.

Here are the Saints, convened again

To worship God together;

Regardless of the scoffs of men,

Of ill luck, and bad weather.

Blue canopy, spread broad and long

Curtained around with living green,

Forms shelter safe for brave and strong,

Lovers of the Nazarene.

My soul, as harp strings long unstrung,

Attuned anew, responsive rings,

Rejoices to be ranked among

The children of the King of kings.

And if thus born, as heirs to thrones,

By regal right are ours,

Gold crowns bedecked with precious stones,

Inherent princely powers.

Born royalists, no fame to win,

No galling yoke the neck enthralls;

True palace dwellers, here within

Nature's terraced, dome built halls.

Noble men in council meeting,

Tightly grasping proffered hands,

Showing by true heartfelt greeting,

Royal rank and kindred bands.

Rosy healthful tintings gleaming

From fair faces all suffused

With joyful smiles, while minds are teeming

With the words the Savior used.

The love of self we must resign,

But, "Love ye one another,"

Was the last command divine,

Of our beloved elder Brother.

He hath our stubborn nature wooed,

By his sublime beseeching,

Till we forget our boastful mood

And hearken to his blessed teaching.

All enraptured do we listen,

Souls in close attention held,

In our eyes the teardrops glisten,

And our pride is all dispelled.

Ambition earthly down is hurled!

For plainly he is saying,

"My kingdom is not of this world:"

Vain, then, is our weak displaying.

Behold! The scene is sadly changed,

And my soul is sore distressed,

I see a cross, 'tween thieves arranged,

A head bowed low upon a breast.

2. A SCENE,—THE SAVIOR FROM THE GARDEN TO THE CROSS.

Hark! I hear the stealthy treading,

Hark! the flaming torches hiss,

See them through the garden spreading,

Feel the traitor's burning kiss.

Know the fear that seized his fellows,
As they scattered here and there,
Also how the hard heart mellows
After seasons spent in prayer.

Poor disciples! sobs suppressing,
Following on they see him scourged,
First denying, then confessing,
Hear his crucifixion urged.

Trials mock! what fiendish yelling
Interspersed with awful calm,
Ah, the rabble's wish is telling,
There's a sceptre in his palm!

He royal robing doth allow,
But all kingly honor scorns,
With drooping head and pallid brow
Bleeding 'neath a crown of thorns.

Poor lashed shoulders, quiver, bending
'Neath the heavy torture beam
But, thank God! the scene is ending,
Fairer visions slowly gleam.

The crucifixion towers above
Human touch of brush or pen.
Astonished at such wondrous love,
Mortals moan and sob, Amen!

strong physically as some, a word of comfort shown to me—how much brighter the way seems to me. What more discouraging than when young in years and in the faith also to have a dreaded disease preying upon your body. But then, it is like a ray of sunshine bursting forth to go to God and ask for relief; and what a pleasure to think also that we have dear brethren and sisters close by to cheer our sad hearts.

Dear readers, I hope we will be very cautious and think before a word proceeds from the mouth, so that none of us, no not one, will be classed under the faultfinding list.

From a loving sister,

IDA L. JONES.

MAINE, Minn., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am still alive and at my post. The work is moving slowly. I am now assisting the local workers what I can. We had a good peaceful conference of this district the 5th and 6th inst., which all present seemed to appreciate. The local part of the work is not what it should be, but we are now gaining ground in that direction.

We have resolved to hold a reunion in this district next June, in the city of Fergus Falls, and by the help of God we shall work to make it a success which will be easily done if all will pull together. It is quite cold, snowing a little at times. May the Lord bless and prosper his Saints.

In haste and on duty,

I. N. ROBERTS.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 28.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you last have continued in Sydney with unabated interest. We moved into a new hall on the 15th, where we get better accommodations. With an organ and orchestra with five pieces we could well draw comparisons of the present with the past, and rejoice over it. Three had been baptized a week previous, one of them the best solo slide trombone artist in New South Wales. He is now musical director for the branch, and with his son, renders excellent service in the musical part of the worship. The branch had the further good luck of purchasing a one hundred and fifty dollar French (Alexandre) Harmonium, new, for only fifty dollars, and a non-member volunteered his services as organist. These instruments are not in popular favor now, and though good, are falling in price. No better can be found for church purposes.

Am expecting Elder Kaler and wife to arrive soon, when I will take a trip north, where I have not been for over a year.

I hear of progress of a substantial nature at New Castle, which is very gratifying. The local brethren there are preaching, baptizing, and building a chapel. Every available person has turned carpenter just now. Good news of an encouraging kind comes from Victoria. Bro. Butterworth is baptizing at Hastings, and persecution of a small, but ugly kind is developing. A debate was set for last week between him and the Rev. Dr. Reid, a champion, of Melbourne. On account of a sore throat he wired for me to come if possible, but could not well leave. Local brethren down there are buckling on the armor, which is very gratifying.

Our work in this country is shaping more as we have wished, and the report is one of progress all along the line. It is for the Saints to maintain this new vantage ground by wise demeanor, otherwise it will be partially lost. How easily zeal and energy will be cooled by intemperate talk and unwise action in local matters, has been demonstrated in the past. The art of self-government must be learned in spiritual as well as political affairs.

A distressing and costly drought has come and only lately been broken by copious rains. A day of "humiliation and prayer" was set apart by the government, and rain came the day after. But it appears that the weather bureau had forecasted rain. Anyway, the drought had done its work.

September 30.—Excellent liberty yesterday; many new faces; five gave names for baptism, including the organist, and we are much encouraged. No less than 73 have been added to the mission since January 1.

One of the future prospects is the organization of a Religio local in Sydney. The school is growing; sixty-two in attendance yesterday; all enthusiastic over the Quarterlies.

Editors Herald:—I oftentimes think that when loving brothers and sisters in the faith are trying to assist one another in the ways of truth, how careful we should be that we assist in the way that God has commanded us; not the way our own thoughts would have us do. So frequently do we find fault one with another, in the way we have in assisting each other; for instance, if a brother or sister in the faith should be of a feeble nature, has not God commanded us to cheer and comfort them to the best of our ability? Certainly he has. Then surely in so doing it will be pleasing to our heavenly Father.

I can say of myself that I, not being as TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Oct. 27.

Editors Herald:—The Herald being the only means by which we receive the glad news of the progress the church is making in all parts of our country and foreign lands, is a welcome visitor in our home. We have been living here for four or five years and in that time have only heard one sermon preached. It was delivered by Elder Stead in the court house.

We are trying to let our light shine by preaching privately, distributing tracts, books, and the Herald weekly. Some have been convinced of the truthfulness of the restored gospel and have expressed themselves ready for baptism. If any of the elders should come this way we would like for them to call on us. Your brother,

ABRAM JONES.

PALMETTO, Missouri, Oct. 24.

Editors Herald:—We closed at Palmetto September 30, and began meeting at Kincer schoolhouse October 8. Reverend Mills and nineteen Campbellites voted us out of the Doren chapel. It is said that several there voted for us to begin our meeting on Monday night, as was arranged by the committee and word sent me to that effect, but out of about two hundred people Reverend Mills counted us out with only nineteen votes. The most of them did not vote at all, thinking, as I suppose, that it was not necessary to vote when Reverend Mills had taken the liberty to announce that he would preach Monday night, and perhaps a few nights longer. Well, I did not propose to be routed in this way, and made up my mind I would see the directors of the district, and if we could get into the schoolhouse we would occupy. Bro. Gray and the writer secured the consent of the directors, and we began our meetings at the Kincer schoolhouse on Tuesday evening, the 8th, and held fifteen meetings in all. The writer spoke three times and Bro. Spurlock twelve times. We gave them some strong meat on the apostasy, restoration, kingdom of God, Book of Mormon, and Joseph Smith as a true prophet. We had good attendance and left some interested and anxious to get church literature to read. What the result will be we know not. Some of these people are anxious to have us occupy the Doren chapel next time.

Brn. C. J. Spurlock and Shelby Carrow left here Tuesday for conference, going by way of Mountain Grove, Sargent, Willow Springs, and Burnham branches. The writer expects to start to-morrow via John's Mills and Vera Cruz in time for branch meeting, and then on from there to conference next week. Conference begins Friday before first Sunday in November.

I expect to be in the field as much as possible after conference. I desire to do all I can for the building up of God's kingdom. I therefore desire an interest in the prayers of all the Saints, that I may keep myself humble and pure that the Lord may be able to use me for gathering into the fold many of the precious ones, and of teaching and establishing those who are already in, as well as those who may come in hereafter. Ever praying for the building up of Zion and the welfare of her children, I am,

Your colaborer in Christ Jesus,

J. P. BENSON.

NORTHFIELD, England, Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—I beg respectfully to ask, Is it not about time we had "for the purpose of bringing our doctrine more clearly before the people" a small booklet, size say about 5x3, containing a clear and well-written statement of our position and the truths we have to present to the people? Our tracts, Epitome of faith, Who then can be saved, etc, etc., are not nice for distribution. They are an awkward size and have too many references, people will not take the trouble to refer. These tracts when presented do not appear of sufficient importance to merit perusal and investigation. What is required is a neat, well-written, nicely gotten-up pamphlet or small book, clearly setting forth the principles and truths of the restored gospel; an article one might hand to anyone without the fear that it would be considered so much waste paper and immediately destroyed. Gotten up in the form indicated it would be preserved by the recipient and oftentimes read and considered where the leaflet is now crumpled in the hand and cast aside; and I believe also that where we now distribute ten leaflets we should give away thirty small books.

I know that the most serious objection is the cost. If we should give away greater quantities, they need to be very cheap; and if we can get them printed very much cheaper in England than you can produce them in America, might we not get some printed here? A brother can afford to spend only so much for the purchase of these small books to give away. Then the more he can obtain for money the better it will be for the onward progress of the work. There are plenty of elders who could write this well.

Not only do we need to place our position or the truths of the everlasting gospel clearly before the people, but we need to place their own position before themselves. They do not know that they are the people who are "tossed to and fro." The people are stupefied, and if you try to arouse them they resent it as an impertinence. They don't know what they believe, or whether they really believe anything. So long as they can have a pretty good time here they seem willing to take the hereafter on chance. All the same we have to witness unto them, and the present is a good opportunity; for the people's minds are just now exercised in regard to religion. The Pope's letter, the number of parsons that are going over to Rome, and the decided leaning towards Rome of a number of the English churches, the church congress at Norwich, of which no doubt you read the account, that almost the first meeting held was in regard to unity—"unity of the churches"—about which they have made so much fuss lately; how that at the meeting they manifested so much brotherly love, such unity, etc., that they were nearly coming to blows, and as one of the morning papers said, "It more nearly resembled Donnybrook than a meeting of Christian clergy." Ignorant apathetic "Christianity;" socialism; anarchy; selfishness;—every man hastening to get rich and be hanged to his neighbor. But amidst all this and among all these are some grand men and women, and O, if we can but make them understand that it is they also who are to "come out of her, my people"!

I feel that the night cometh on apace and that the darkening hours will bring terror and destruction, and I have had a great desire latterly to be doing something while the light remaineth,—to be doing some little in return for so much that has been done for me; to bring some one into the light that fadeth not away. To those who hold fast and faithful to the covenant they have made the future is full of bright promise; no terrors nor darkness for them; but O, dear brethren and sisters, let us with hearts full of loving pity for those who are perishing use the little time remaining to us in telling the good news of the Christ that died for us and for them!

Yours in faith,

FRANK SWAN.

(Bro. Swan will find the substitute for the Epitome, just about as he describes, in the small pamphlet, "What we believe," advertised in the Catalogue. Other changes in tracts are contemplated by the Board of Publication.—ED.)

MANCHESTER, Texas, Oct. 24.

Editors Herald:—We are doing all we can for the truth. We have just had a debate with a Christian brother—C. W. Chisam, Bro. A. J. Moore representing the Church of Jesus Christ. The debate lasted five days of eight sessions each. The two churches being the propositions; to show which was in harmony with the Bible.

Mr. Chisam is among the ablest men of his church in Texas. He came loaded with all the histories he could find against the truth. He also had Mr. Sewell who debated with Bro. I. N. White, in Bell County, to help him; besides other preachers. They did all they could to overthrow the truth. Mr. Chisam had Orson Hyde's book against the church and many other just such books. He set up a tirade against Bro. Joseph Smith and tried to make his life as black as midnight; but Bro. Moore defended Bro. Joseph Smith's life and showed from the record of the court of the State of Missouri that he was not the man that Mr. Chisam claimed him to be. Bro. Moore ably defended the church with the Bible and made the truth so plain that it looked as if a child could understand it.

Mr. Chisam failed to substantiate his church by the Bible. He only claimed a part of the teachings of Christ and those whom he gave authority to preach the gospel eighteen hundred years ago, and claimed the rest was done away with. He said the six principles of Hebrews was under the old law and was done away.

We had large crowds out, splendid order, and as good moderators as I ever saw. Bro. Moore's moderator was Mr. Bob Marshbanks, a man who does not belong to any church. Mr. Chisam had a brother preacher, Mr. Sewell. Our chairman was a Baptist brother and a noble man. He made a splendid chairman and seemed to enjoy the debate. One Baptist preacher and a lawyer spoke very favorable to our side of the question. Many others are interested. Bro. J. Moore has many warm friends in this country.

We are doing all we can. We have just got back from a trip in the eastern part of Red River County and a portion of Bowie County, where we preached to the people. We have enjoyed splendid liberty this year and have baptized some noble men. We are also doing all we can to watch over two branches, being president of the Manchester branch and the Lydia branch, being newly organized, and all new members except two or three.

We are in great need of some more workers in this part of Texas. May God soon call more laborers into the field, inasmuch as the harvest is white. Let us do all we can to climb higher and live near our God. We ask an interest in the prayers of all Saints that we may do all God requires, though it cost all we possess in this life.

Yours in bonds,

E. A. ERWIN.

COALVILLE, Iowa, Oct. 31.

Editors Herald:—The debate between Elder Clark Braden, of the Christian Church, and Bro. J. F. McDowell, at Pocahontas, Iowa, which was held from the 15th to the 29th inst., closed Tuesday night with a full house. Pocahontas was comparatively new ground for both denominations, therefore the prestige of membership was not great for either society, though the Christian people have a large membership within ten to thirty miles of that point.

During the forepart of the debate four Christian ministers put in an appearance and sat at the feet of the Gamaliel of the Christian Church; three of them and two lay members acting by turn as Mr. Braden's moderator. Evidently the lessons given by the learned gentleman were too hard for them, as the ministers disappeared one at a time, until their champion was left without ministerial company or anyone to act as moderator. The county attorney, Mr. Dinsmore, who acted as chairman the greater part of the time, was not present during the latter part of the debate and the writer had the honor of acting as chairman during three sessions.

The debate, as I view it, was a grand victory for our cause on each and all of the five propositions discussed. When the debate commenced Elder Braden had the sympathy of the greater part of the audience, and notwithstanding his effort to enlist the prejudice of the Masons, Catholics, sectarians, and everybody else, he signally failed and the sympathy of a large majority was on our side before and at the close.

Mr. Braden was very harsh and unchristian-like, which did not take well with the people. We were called liars, hypocrites, deceivers, blasphemers, fools, jackasses, and the like. We were shown the rich things of the Book of Mormon, and the beauties of the Book of Covenants and the Inspired Translation, and were told that everybody would be damned who believed in the Book of Mormon unless God had pity because of our feeble minds.

A goodly number of persons were heard to express their contempt for his unchristian methods, stating that he was better calculated to make infidels than Christians. One man, who is postmaster and editor in a certain town in this section of country, was heard to say "Mr. Braden had better go home and learn common decency."

Bro. J. F. McDowell was humble and faithful, putting his trust in God, and conducted himself from first to last as a Christian gentleman, which won for him and the church many friends. His arguments were clear and logical, his main effort being to defend the truth while he educated the people in the principles of the gospel of Christ as taught in the standard works of the church. Mr. Braden's line of argument on other occasions has been presented to the readers of the Herald so clearly that I think it unnecessary to repeat them in this letter.

We feel fully satisfied with the results of the debate, though perhaps there are a few who think that Mr. Braden won a victory.

In bonds,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

EVERGREEN, Ala., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving along nicely in the Southland. Have lately opened a new point about twenty miles from Garland. There are many sincere people at that place who seemed interested and well pleased with the simplicity and scripturalness of the restored gospel. Most of the branches of the church are in good condition though some are in a disorganized state. We will have to make haste slowly.

We are on the verge of a conflict with that bellicose organization, the Christian Church. They assume the right to formulate all propositions, and how queer some of them are; for instance, they wish to affirm a proposition (?) like this, Resolved, that the Church of God, of which I, — —, am a member, is the church of God! If we can persuade them to revise these, the debate may take place. Bro. G. T. Chute will, no doubt, be our representative. We expect to hold a week's meeting at above place. People everywhere are very attentive. The spirit of the restored gospel is "in the air."

JAMES M. BAGGERLY.

MCARTHUR, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Editors Herald:—The debate between Dr. Taylor and I closed last night with the city hall jammed full. The Doctor paid as little attention to scripture as anyone who ever tried to defeat the faith. The old rot, stale stories, and efforts to enlist sympathy, were his stock in trade, in the main. He is as unfair and disreputable as Braden. The brethren and Saints who have departed themselves nobly and given me their full aid and support are happy in the result.

That peace consequent upon the trying to do our duty faithfully and well has been mine throughout. Never was my mind more clear as to the course to pursue. To God be all the honor and glory. Others have or will send items. Faithfully,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

SOMERVILLE, Victoria, Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—I am sending you two Mornington Standards. You will see by the marked paragraphs that we are very much alive here. There never was such a time of excitement here as now, and Bro. Burton could tell what it was like when Rev. J. Barley Sharp lectured against "Mormonism" at Hastings. Bro. Butterworth is to debate with the Rev. Mr. Reid next Friday night on the "divine origin of the Book of Mormon," and it is earnestly wished by the Church of England folks that we may be "rooted out." Bro. B. has lately baptized several, and I think jealousy is the principal cause of the outburst of feeling.

We feel quite serene as to the result, knowing whose work we are engaged in, and I fully expect more to come into the church in the near future, many making anxious inquiry about the faith.

Yours, quite hopeful,

EDWARD MCGURK.

VALUE OF SOCIAL GATHERINGS.

PRAYER and testimony meetings are appointed of God for the benefit and instruction of the Saints and should be honored and respected by all professed believers as being among the best of all good meetings, where all Saints have an equal privilege of giving thanks for favors and blessings received both temporal and spiritual. How eminently fitting and appropriate are the words of the Lord as given in the revelation:—

And that thou [meaning the church as a body] mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shall go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High.—D. C. 59:2.

It occurs to me that in our assembling together a necessary preparation of mind should be sought for by all calling themselves Latter Day Saints. Do we realize the beneficence and wisdom of our heavenly Father in thus providing for our spiritual necessities? Are we anxiously looking forward to these gatherings that we may enjoy a soul reviving feast? Are we anxious to show by a life of right doing that we value the privileges which God, in his kindness and good will, has placed within our reach? Have we sufficiently considered the fact that where much is given, much will be expected; that the gospel can be of no use or benefit to us only as we practice its rules and precepts.

The gospel holds forth superior promises for this life, and it has made provision for the life that is to come. The Great Teacher taught his disciples, or followers, to pray and if we desire the good, the help, the joy, the assurance, the wisdom, that come from God alone, we must earnestly, honestly, and in sincerity seek for it. Jesus taught his disciples:—

When thou prayest enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door pray to thy Father which is in secret.—Matt. 6:6.

Aside from worldly care, in the solitude of the night, or the business of the day, and as the poet has said,—

Remember all who love thee,
All who are loved by thee;
Pray too for those who hate thee,
If any such there be;
Then for thyself, in meekness,
A blessing humbly claim,
And link with each petition
Thy great Redeemer's name.

The promise is that such shall be rewarded openly, because the cultivations of such a spirit and its effects cannot be covered up; you cannot cover up or destroy the influence of a faithful, practical, praying man or woman; and the results of right doing will be seen and felt by all around, and especially in the assemblies of the Saints, when they meet for praise and prayer.

The Saint in his secret devotions asks for wisdom that he may be able to pursue the safest and wisest course, follow the best example, and thus by using the help afforded, his faith becomes stronger, he tries to pray in public with and for the Saints, and step by step he gains confidence and his faith increases; he learns to join his petitions in simplicity for such blessings as God by his Spirit shall put into his mind. He learns also that it is not necessary to use a multitude of words and that vain repetition is useless and unbecoming.

The true secret of prayer is to simply and honestly ask for such help as will enable us to overcome the various evils we have to contend with, whether within or without; for strength to endure, for courage to run the race that we may contend lawfully for the prize held out to man in the gospel, even eternal life; and thus we feel rewarded openly and the simple, honest experience given in the testimony meetings gives life and hope and courage to any that may be weary and cast down.

Thus we learn valuable lessons from our own experience and the experiences of others, and to those that are interested and have a desire to become true disciples these social gatherings, week after week, are looked forward to as seasons of profit and real enjoyment. Saints should always remember that it is a part of their duty to pray with and for each other. Bear in mind a little word in kindness spoken has often healed the heart that has been sorely tried, and caused hope's eternal sunshine to flow into the discouraged soul. We regard the prayer and testimony meetings as preëminently the Saints' meetings, where no one has the right to mar its usefulness by introducing anything that would hurt the feelings of the delicate and tender or offend the middle-aged and strong within those hallowed walls during the exercises. Let no personal charge, insinuation, or comparison of character be heard. Let the love that thinketh no evil through all your actions run, let all your words be mild and partake largely of the Spirit of Christ.

Let anger, malice, or revenge be entirely excluded from the gatherings of the Saints, more especially when they assemble for praise and prayer; and so our days will pass along in pleasantness and peace, and our lives will bear testimony as well as our words. By so doing we shall become witnesses for God and his truth, we shall secure and enjoy the blessings that flow from obedience to the gospel, and life to us will be worth living though our names may not be known among men. Life will be a success and the character we build will be a guarantee that we shall pass the heavenly portals and rest with the pure and good.

We have written these thoughts as they have occurred, because we saw a lack of interest manifest by those from whom we have reason to expect a more general attendance on the social gatherings and a lively interest for the good of all concerned.

A CITIZEN OF THE KINGDOM.

LAMONI, IOWA, August 23, 1895.

SHOULD YOUR BOY GO TO COLLEGE?

AFTER reading the article under the above heading, on the cover of Saints' Herald of October 16, although I am aware that it is not an original article, but copied from the Literary Digest, I thought it showed an eminently fair and impartial effort, on your part, to lay before your readers both sides of the question as to whether a college course is the best training for a boy designed for a business career; and I appreciate it as such.

But, forasmuch as both the pro and the con of said discussion are taken from men in the higher positions of life; to wit, "leaders of affairs" and "practical men of action," it struck me that while I believe with the editor of Munsey's (whom the editor of the Literary Digest quotes) that those entitled to discuss this question with authority are the men of practical experience rather than the theorists of educational science; because I think it is reasonable to assume that the latter class, believing in the business in which they are engaged, are probably in favor of a higher education per se, without any reference to the future business or occupation of the boy, as I most assuredly do also. Still, it seems to me that in order to cover the whole ground in this discussion, and to get at the "core" of the matter, it is necessary also to have the opinions of some of those who from lack of the means or an opportunity to secure a collegiate training, or having such, neglected to avail themselves of them until too late, and have ever after had cause to regret the lack of that ability, which is acquired only by disciplining the mind, and is parallel to the discipline necessary to the development of physical powers, as well as the opinions of the leaders of affairs. Exercise, cultivation, and discipline are to the mind precisely what they are to the athlete, the soldier, and even to the proper development of the soil; in fact to every occupation and pursuit in life. There is an axiom, that I wish to express in this article that has been tersely put to song; namely, "You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry." And it is the same with a thorough education; we are not apt to miss the advantages of it till we feel the need of them in the conflict of business or society; those abilities which are obtained only by education, and to secure, propagate, and perpetuate which the wisdom of the ages and the experience of men prompts them to erect colleges and universities.

As Mr. Chauncy Depew so ably and truly sets forth, in the article under discussion, "It is the trained intellect disciplined by higher education which alone has any certainty of success." And he then goes on to show that the founding of this nation upon constitutional lines, embodying the experience and lessons of the ages, was the work of graduates of the colonial colleges, and then names the colleges as well as the individuals who were the architects of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

Between long periods of time, and apparently in the crises of the world's history, God has raised up men seemingly for special works and purposes and endowed them with powers (as in his wisdom he saw fit) far beyond their fellow men, as for instances, Abraham Lincoln, Joseph the Martyr, and the leading spirits of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States; also Moses and others. But that ability to grasp successfully the situation under difficulties, and often the most trying circumstances in the varying phases of a business life, with ease; that quickness of perception, that clearness of ideas, that complete control of one's thoughts, that well-ordered mind, and command of language by which to give the best expression to the above faculties, can only be acquired by close application to studies such as are taught and enforced by the discipline of a higher education; to wit, a collegiate course of training.

It is true that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy;" and it is also true, on the same principle, that a one-sided development unfits a man generally for other business or occupation. But there is ample time for all things necessary to a well-rounded and successful life, as is proven by the fact that most of the successful men in business and in government in the early days of this republic came from the farms of New England, where it has been the custom for over a century to send the boys to college whenever it was possible to do so. So that we find the greatest men educated both to work and to govern or lead in the business affairs of life. And while it is true that God chose some illiterate men to introduce his gospel among men, to show them that it was not of men, but of divine origin, it is also true that he called very learned men such as Luke the historian and physician, and the Apostle Paul, very emphatically, to push the work forward; to stand before kings and before the highest councils and tribunals composed of the most learned and the most highly educated men of that time; of whom Paul was among the foremost if not the greatest and most highly educated of them all, as is attested by his deep reasoning and unanswerable arguments and logic found in his epistles; and to do as he says, more than them all, meaning the other apostles, and to transmit them to all future generations.

Hear his advice to all men:—

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

If some of our elders who have not had an opportunity to obtain an education, would study during their spare time and acquaint themselves with the principles of the gospel thoroughly, and also the use of the English language, I venture to say we would not have to hear such humiliating speeches, as happily, only a few of them make, once in awhile; for instance, I read a report in the Kansas City Times, which paper claimed to print an account of the proceedings in full of all the meetings held during the Annual Conference at Independence, Missouri, last April, of the testimony of one of the elders at a prayer and testimony meeting held during that week in the Saints' church, in which he stated that he knew this work is true (the work of the Lord), "but not by any miracle, or dreams, or visions as some of you [meaning the members of the church] claim to know it by; but I know it by my own intelligence;" or words to that effect. And, sure enough, the reporter commented upon it as being the smartest speech of any that was made at that meeting. Of course to his mind the claims of the testimony of the Spirit were all bosh anyway. Now forasmuch as intelligence may be only hearsay, or news of something that has happened, I presume the brother meant to say that by the power of his great intellect or that he has a knowledge of the truth by his power of reasoning, combined with his extraordinary ability to find out what are the things of God, which things, as declared in Scripture, no man can find out except by the Spirit. The revelation of the truth by the Spirit, and a knowledge that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God is at the foundation of the doctrine of the church. It is the great promise to attract men so that "they shall know for themselves." It is the gift which the Apostle Paul promises or states is given to everyone in the church, and I will venture to say, brethren, that if all of your elders were educated men, especially college graduates, we would not have to hear of such "breaks" as the one under consideration; for it looks as though the brother has got the "big head" or did not know what he was talking about.

So much for the necessity of a college education for our preachers: and in conclusion I would say that as the times are now, and the avenues of industry and opportunity are becoming more and more crowded, as in all countries as they grow older, and as must of necessity continue to do so, competition will grow sharper, the battle for life sterner, the struggle for existence more desperate, the necessity for men to be equipped with all the advantages they can possibly obtain in this life will become more apparent and greater immeasurably than at any period in the history of this country.

As one who has traveled in a distant country beset with dangers and difficulties, and who is desirous to help others who are about to make a similar journey, by informing them of the necessities for a successful trip; so I, having traveled the greater part of life's journey, feeling that the end is at hand, desire to advise those who in a short time will have to begin the struggle for success in life, if not for existence, of the better way to prepare and the surest course to pursue, assuring them that "knowledge is power."

I never had the opportunity to obtain a college training, but I feel competent to give advice on the subject because my business during the past thirty years has required me to travel thousands of miles and thrown me in contact with men in nearly all positions in life; and also because I have continually realized how much better equipped men are, and that I should be, with a higher education.

Therefore, I earnestly and sincerely hope that the college at Lamoni shall be a grand success; and if these broken ideas of mine shall help only one, to decide to send his boy or boys to college, or to donate what he or she can afford to help it along, I shall feel amply repaid for what to me, is very hard work; namely, writing for publication.

[Figures erroneous.—Ed.] E. J. French, having by the advice of the First Presidency, delivered the Laguna branch record to the officers of the district, the following was adopted: Resolved that we, the conference of Southern California district, do now cordially and gladly remove all restrictions from E. J. French from acting as elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The secretary was instructed to deliver said Laguna branch record to the said E. J. French's successor. A. Carmichael, district treasurer, reported: Received $2.80; expended 25 cents; on hand $2.55. Resolved that we urgently request all Saints of the district to take the church publications, especially the Herald. Albert Carmichael was elected district president for the ensuing year, Wm. M. Gibson his assistant, and W. P. Pickering secretary and treasurer. A vote of appreciation and confidence was extended to Elder Charles Baly as Bishop's agent. Resolved that this conference sustain the First Presidency, and respect the rulings of the Twelve, and uphold all other officers in good standing throughout the church in their respective and proper places. Three were baptized on Sunday. The preaching was by Elders A. E. Jones, C. Baly, J. W. Gilbert, C. W. Earle, H. L. Holt, and A. Carmichael. Adjourned to meet at San Bernardino on the first Friday before the first full moon in October, 1896. The attendance, both of the ministry and laity, as well as nonmembers, was unusually large. A good spirit prevailed throughout.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

Convention met at Fairfield, Illinois, September 11; J. D. Stead superintendent, Arthur H. Burroughs secretary pro tem. A good literary and musical program was rendered, after which the business of the association was taken up. Schools reporting: Zion's Hope, enrollment 65; average attendance 55. Mt. Pleasant 44; average 32. Tunnel Hill 65; average 41. Kibbie, report returned for correction. Report of treasurer read and adopted: Expended $9.20; on hand 82 cents. Officers elected, Isaac Morris Superintendent, Heppie Morris associate, Arthur H. Burroughs secretary and treasurer. Short speeches were made by several of the ministry encouraging the work. Adjourned to meet the day before conference.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Convention met at Galland's Grove, Oct. 12, at 2:30 p. m.; Superintendent R. Wight in the chair, Dora Young secretary. Schools reporting: Harlan, Dow City, Pilot Rock, Galland's Grove, and Deloit. No report from Auburn and Benan. The afternoon's work consisted of a short business session followed by the reading of a paper written by Sr. Anna Stedman-Salyards on Blackboard Work in Sunday Schools. The paper was very ably discussed and at the close of the meeting all felt edified and benefited by it. This discussion and free interchange of thought is certainly the true basis for work in conventions. The evening session consisted of a very practical address from Elder Charles Derry on the importance of Sunday school work. Thus closed one of the most beneficial conventions we have yet participated in. May the next one be more instructive.

ETZENHUSER-TAYLOR DEBATE.

Early in the month of August, while engaged in holding tent meetings in the town of McArthur, Ohio, Dr. C. B. Taylor came to the tent and challenged us to meet him in public discussion. Propositions were agreed upon as follows:—

Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the Church of Jesus Christ, the visible kingdom of God on earth. R. Etzenhouser affirmative.

Resolved, that the Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Protestant Episcopal, Disciple, and United Brethren Churches, together with all churches on earth agreeing with these in substance in faith and practice, compose the Church of Jesus Christ, the visible kingdom of God on earth. C. B. Taylor affirmative.

Time for holding the debate was left to Bro. Etzenhouser; October 21 was set; debate was held in the Opera House, in McArthur. Both disputants were promptly on hand, and the discussion began, Bro. Etzenhouser opening by making the first speech on first proposition. He read the Epitome and gave a general outline of the faith of the church. He set forth the principles of the gospel, and asked that they be especially considered. He dwelt upon the necessity of baptism for the remission of sins, and by immersion.

Dr. Taylor followed, saying that he would not object to the Latter Day Saints being a part of the kingdom of God; but they claimed to be the kingdom of God, hence it was the exclusiveness of their claim that he contended against. Said they were an insignificant sect; they believed in and practiced the laying on of hands, but it was in an unscriptural way; "For," said he, "the Scriptures say that 'they . . . prayed that they might receive the Holy Ghost,' while Latter Day Saints in laying on hands say, 'Receive ye the Holy Ghost.'" Said he believed in the laying on of hands in the scriptural way.

Bro. Etzenhouser showed the audience that Presbyterians did not believe nor practice laying on of hands, and asked if any one present ever heard Doctor Taylor preach laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. He also showed that we practiced laying on of hands just as the apostles did. In speaking of the Saints Dr. Taylor said they were a mere handful—only few in number. Said he knew their favorite text was, "Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, . . . and few there be that find it;" but that referred to then—the Savior's time; therefore did not refer to our day. Bro. Etzenhouser called attention to what the Savior said at the time of the end that it should be as it was "in the days of Noah;" then asked, "How was that?" "Were there many or few saved in the days of Noah?" "Then, as eight was in proportion to the number then that were not saved, so will the number saved at the last day be in proportion to the population of the world." Dr. Taylor said there was a noble old man in the audience, belonging to the Latter Day Saints whom he expected to meet in heaven, as much as he expected to go there; for he was a good man, was his friend, and his father's friend. This was fatal for Dr. Taylor, for he afterward said that this work was a "fraud," a "monster delusion." He was asked how this monster delusion could take this man to heaven; and if it could take him there, why it could not take others to heaven.

Dr. Taylor said he believed in apostles, but not in homemade ones, such as Latter Day Saints had. Bro. Etzenhouser replied that homemade articles were generally good, but that ours were not homemade in the sense that the Doctor implied; then he showed that apostles to-day are chosen as they were in the Savior's time. Dr. Taylor contended that no man could be an apostle unless he was an eyewitness of the resurrection of Jesus Christ; but here the Doctor was crowded to the wall when asked to prove when and how Paul was an eyewitness of Christ's resurrection. If Paul was made a witness of the resurrection by the appearance of Christ to him after his resurrection, why could not others be made witnesses in the same way.

Dr. Taylor objected to high priests being in the church to-day; said there never was but one at a time; that Christ was the last. Said it was tearing laurels from the Savior's brow for any man to claim to be a high priest. Bro. Etzenhouser read from 1 Peter 2: 9: "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood." Revelation 5: 10: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests." Thus showing that there were priests after Christ. He also showed that Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses (Ex. 2: 16) "was the priest of Midian;" not a priest only, and was contemporaneous with Moses and Aaron; therefore there was more than "one high priest at a time."

In regard to the signs following the believer, Dr. Taylor said that if his opponent would go to the drug store and get a quart of laudanum and drink it, and if it did not hurt him, "we will consider his claims." Although Dr. Taylor said to R. Etzenhouser and the writer, during our tent meetings, that he "did not believe in vilifying or throwing dirt in debate, for it was ungentlemanly," yet in the very commencement—in the first session—he began work of that kind, reading from "Harper's Magazine," and the "American Encyclopedia." He adopted some of Braden's epithets and phrases, and took great delight in calling "Joe Smith" "a glorious fool," a "conscienceless liar," and that he was not a decent, respectable man, etc.

On the second evening several questions of the first session were again brought up. Dr. Taylor attempted to make capital of the statement made to Joseph Smith in his first vision: "That their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt," etc. He said, "Now I want you to understand that, according to this, your dear old mothers who reared you, and taught you around the hearthstone, were all corrupt. Bro. E. replied by saying the statement did not mean that every member of the churches was necessarily "corrupt;" for it said "professors," and they teach for doctrine the commandments of men. Then he asked, "Were our 'dear old mothers' professors in the sense of teachers and forming creeds? It was the professors or preachers that taught for doctrine the commandments of men."

Taylor read from Professor Anthon's statement to prove that Joseph's statement concerning Reformed Egyptian characters was untrue. Bro. E. read the statement describing the paper and characters brought to him by Martin Harris, and called attention to the words "and the whole ended in the rude delineation of a circle, decked with various strange marks, and evidently copied after the Mexican calendar given by Humboldt." Then holding up before the audience a facsimile cut of the characters taken by Harris to Anthon, and telling them that the Mexican calendar was round like a grindstone, asked if they could see anything of the kind, or any "rude delineation of a circle"? Dr. Taylor made so frequent use of "Joe Smith," that Bro. E. said he hoped that either his parental training or his scholarship would prevail on him to say Joseph. Bro. E. further asked Dr. T. if he would affirm his proposition from such vile trash as he read against the Saints. Bro. E. called his attention to the agreement that the Bible was to be the standard of evidence in the debate and not the American Encyclopedia. He then impeached that work by showing that it represented the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon as denying their testimony; he then proved that each of the three were true to their testimony even to death. "Palmyra to Independence," pp. 139, 319. Dr. Taylor said he would bring the Encyclopedia Britannica the next night. Bro. E. thanked him for virtually conceding the impeachment of the American Encyclopedia. Dr. T. said he had held his peace as long as he could, but when he saw the poor innocent lambs going astray by this delusion, he had taken up what he had not desired to.

Great was the surprise of Dr. T., after he had attempted to fasten polygamy upon Joseph Smith, when Bro. E. read from Zion's Ensign for June 1, 1895, a clipping from the Kansas City Mail, an account of a case of Presbyterian polygamy.

Third session. Dr. Taylor having found fault with Joseph Smith for saying that the creeds were all wrong, Bro. Etzenhouser gave him some Presbyterian authorities on the corruptness of the creeds from Cleveland Plain Dealer for October 8, 1889, an account of a meeting of Presbyterian ministers in examination of Westminster confession, when Rev. J. C. Williamson said: "I have read and reread chapter third on God's eternal decree, and my moral sense has been no less shocked than when in my boyhood I first read the confession." The St. Louis Globe Democrat of March 3, 1890, contains the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage's sermon, "Why a new creed is needed," concluding his reasons by saying, "Let us put the old creed respectfully aside and get a brand new one." All fulfill Paul's prophecy, "Shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Dr. T. referred to Kirtland bank failure and said Joseph Smith swindled the people out of their money and then skipped. Bro. E. read what Beadle said on page 428 of his work, of Joseph Smith's fortune at Nauvoo, reputed to be a million that accumulated from the sale of land, that "with this he paid all his old debts in Ohio."

Dr. T. found fault with the revelation which says, "His word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth." Then, commenting, said that when he spoke people were compelled to accept it. Bro. E. showed that according to the rule of the church, which was always observed, each revelation must pass the examination and decision of all the quorums of officers of the church before it is accepted as a law. He asked the ministry who knew this to be the case to arise. All present arose. To show how the Reorganized Church stood to-day, evidence was reintroduced from Palmyra to Independence pages 327 and 293 showing that the Saints were invited back to Kirtland, Nauvoo, and Independence.

Dr. Taylor made little or no effort to answer Bro. E's argument, and gave as excuse for not reading that his eyes were bad, that he did not have good spectacles. Finally Bro. E. walked across the stage and asked him if he could not get a pair of spectacles, and if he could not he would buy him a pair, but to stop his shamming and get down to business. This brought down the house in applause.

Dr. Taylor said there was one thing Bro. E. said which he could not answer: that was what he said about his defective eyesight. He was prematurely old, humpbacked, etc., and the people knew what was the cause of it. Bro. E. called the audience to witness that he did not make light of his eyes nor anything else; it was only his shamming that he pointed out. He said, "I took notice you could read right along after that; so if I never work a miracle, I certainly performed a wonder in that case." Dr. T. in speaking of the "faith once delivered to the Saints," said that according to the Greek it meant "once for all." Therefore it would not again be delivered to the saints. He said, when Christ gave ordinances he said, "Till I come." Bro. E. showed up the apostasy of the primitive church by making numerous scriptural quotations and showed by the teachings of the churches that the ordinances, some of them, had been laid aside; that one had been changed; then he showed from the Scriptures that there was to be a restoration of the gospel which would restore the ordinances, as well as authority to administer in them. Dr. T. made no effort to answer anything concerning the apostasy or the restoration, save that he suggested that the apostasy might have begun with "Julian the apostate" in A. D. 361, and the restoration to have been brought about by the Pilgrim Fathers.

Bro. E. handed Dr. T. a copy of the prophecy of the war of the rebellion, asking him to pick it to pieces if he could. The Doctor read a part of it, and said that they were in the midst of a rebellion when that revelation was given; referring to the "nullification act" in South Carolina in 1832; then remarked that it did not take much of a prophet to tell what was going on at the time. Bro. E. read the revelation entire, showing that it had its fulfillment in the war of the rebellion in the division of the States, in slaves rising up against their masters, in the remnants vexing the Gentiles with a sore vexation, etc.

Fourth session. Bro. E. set forth the faith of the Saints regarding the Lord's supper, Sunday as a day of rest. He presented an article from the pen of W. T. Moore, who anticipated an apostolic church, showing that others were falling in line within the belief of the Latter Day Saints. Dr. T. attacked the Inspired Translation, but suffice to say it did not suffer by the investigation. Just here we may mention that R. Etzenhouser's "Three Bibles Compared" and his chart work illustrating the difficulties of translation, stood the fire. Dr. T. said Latter Day Saints never had a learned man in their church. Bro. E. said, "We hope to get you, Doctor." Dr. T. said he would never leave the religion of his fathers to follow the "delusion of Joe Smith." Bro. E. said, "If you did come we would have to put you in the primary class of the Sunday school till you learned some scripture." Dr. T. said that valuable as spiritual gifts were, Paul showed that there was to be "a more excellent way;" miracles were something out of the ordinary. If they were happening every day, they would cease to be miracles. Bro. E. asked if he did not admit that miracles continued for over four thousand years, and if they therefore ceased to be miracles. This, the doctor did not attempt to reply to.

This is about the pith of the debate on the first proposition. Bro. E. stood nobly by the question while Dr. Taylor attempted to answer mostly by playing "buzzard." The cause of truth has, we think, lost nothing. The second proposition will be reported briefly for the Herald readers further on.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

There will be a conference held at Deer Lodge, Montana, November 23 and 24, 1895. Every official in the Montana district is requested to report in person or by letter. We also ask that every branch in the District send in a report in due season. All reports sent through the mail should be addressed to Gomer Reese, Belgrade, Montana. Now, brethren, turn out, let us make this a district in reality, as well as name. We are aware it will require some effort and sacrifice to come to conference; but there is nothing accomplished in this work without some sacrifice. We ask your special efforts and attention.

JOHN E. REESE, Pres.

GOMER REESE, Sec.

Texas Central district conference will convene with the Texas Central branch on Saturday, November 23, at ten a. m. Sunday school association Friday night before November 22, at eight p. m. All branch clerks are earnestly requested to send me their branch reports one week before conference so I will have time to look over them to see whether any mistakes occur or not, as it will save a good deal of trouble in the general secretary having to write back to straighten up mistakes which often occur. Sunday schools secretaries are also requested to send in reports. We want every branch and Sunday school represented. All come that can. Let the elders, priests, teachers, and deacons of the district all attend. Let us have one good gathering of the ministry.

W. G. MCINTOSH, Sec.

BORN.

DAVIS.—At Joyfield, Michigan, July 28, 1890, to Mr. Horace and Sr. Harriet Davis, a daughter, and named Bessie Estella. Blessed July 22, 1894, at Joyfield, Michigan, by Elder F. C. Smith.

DONALDSON.—To W. B. and Emma Donaldson, September 22, 1895, a son, and named Frank. Blessed October 7 by Henry Kemp.

DIED.

SUTTON.—Sr. Martha Olive Sutton was born in Jackson County, Iowa, and died October 14, 1895, at her home, Fulton, Iowa, aged 27 years, 9 months, and 13 days. She had been afflicted with consumption for two years; was confined to her bed a little over a week, but for six weeks preceding her death was so weak that she needed constant care. This was faithfully given by her mother and other dear friends. Sister Ollie was baptized November 21, 1888, by Elder J. S. Roth, and ever afterward was found faithfully defending the faith. Her faith never wavered, and whenever in pain, wanted administration. She was ready, and was loth to go only on account of her mother, who is a widow, and whose only daughter she was; they were always together. Sr. Ollie was beloved of all who knew her, a school-teacher of ability, and will be missed by a multitude of friends, but most of all by her mother and three brothers. The funeral was on the 15th of October; sermon by Elder Warren Turner, of Massillon, Iowa, at her mother's residence, to a large congregation of sympathizing relatives and friends; text, 1 Corinthians 15: 22. We mourn, but not as those who have no hope.

BURLINGTON.—At his home in St. Joseph, Missouri, Daniel, eldest son of Bro. James and Sr. Elizabeth Burlington, aged 7 years and 19 days. He was a sufferer one week with that dread disease, diphtheria. Dannie was a favorite of his grandfather, Bro. John Burlington, who preceded him some three years to the better land; and for whose father he was named, their birthday occurring also on the same day. He was of a meek and forbearing disposition, which endeared him to all who knew him. The poor mother wept bitterly and the stout-hearted father's tears betokened the sorrow within. Some two weeks prior to his death his father was at his desk (he works at night) and having a few spare moments leaned over on his desk to rest. While in this position his father appeared to him and speaking to his wife said, "I will take care of him." He knew this meant something but did not understand as to whom it applied, but in the sad loss of the sunbeam of the household he understood it all. The favorite boy has gone to meet his beloved grandfather. Because of the nature of the disease no services were held save prayer at the grave by Elder J. M. Terry.

JUDKINS.—At Midway, Arkansas, October 12, 1895, Willie, son of Mr. Thomas and Sr. Kittie Judkins, aged 21 years, 7 months, and 19 days. He had never united with any church, but was friendly toward all churches. He was a bright young man and kind to his father and mother. He was liked by all who knew him.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

In paper covers, 40 pages, each ..... 8

BRADEN-KELLEY DEBATE.

Propositions:—(1) Is the Book of Mormon of Divine origin, and are its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people? (2) Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, the Church of Christ, and identical in faith, organization, ordinances, worship, and practice, with the Church of Christ, as it was left perfected by the Apostles of Christ? (3) Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in fact, the Church of God, and accepted with him?

SPIRITUAL GIFTS, AND THE SEER OF PALMYRA.

BY ELDER M. H. BOND.

Modern Prophets after ancient types. Who was Joseph Smith? Was he a religious impostor? Was he a "Spirit medium?" What does the Bible say about Joseph Smith?

The Truth by Three Witnesses—Christianity in the First and Nineteenth Century—The Ancient and Modern Pharisee—The Revelations of Emanuel Swedenborg—Modern "Spirit Mediums," and Hypnotic Religious "Revival," as Against Reason and Bible Testimony, and in Contradistinction to the work of "The Latter Day Seer," Examined in the Light of Facts and Human History—A Rational and Scriptural Exposition or Explanation of Old and New Testament Prophecy and Doctrine.

A Revision of "Spiritual Gifts," with supplement and appendix.

Paper covers ..... 25
Full cloth binding ..... 50

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshipped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

PROFESSOR SAYCE ON THE "HIGHER CRITICS."

THE change of attitude by Prof. A. H. Sayce toward Old Testament criticism, as opposed to the position which he held some fifteen years ago, having been spoken of, in The Contemporary Review, by Canon Cheyne, as a matter of "surprise," Professor Sayce, writing for the October number of that periodical, states and defends his present views. He admits that he has changed his attitude toward "criticism." Believing in "a sober and reverent examination of ancient documents and ancient history, based upon recognized scientific principles," he rejects "criticism which sets out with preconceived ideas and assumptions, which treats imperfect evidence as if it were perfect, or which builds conclusions upon theories which have yet to be proved." In admitting that he has of late years changed his attitude toward "higher criticism," Professor Sayce says that it is only of late years that he has begun to realize its true character, its tendencies, and its results. "We have all committed follies in our youth," he adds, "and one of the few compensations which old age is supposed to bring us is that of growing out of them." He asserts that fifteen years ago there was something to be said on behalf of the "new teaching" which cannot be said for it any longer; that on the one hand the "higher criticism" of the Old Testament had not yet arrived at its present pitch of extravagance or shown so clearly the goal toward which it tends, and on the other hand Oriental archeology was still struggling for recognition, and the most important and crushing of the replies which it is now making to the dogmas of the "higher critics" were still waiting to be discovered. He says that the "critical" method is essentially vicious, and that archeological discovery is proving that it is so; that early Hebrew literature and history no longer stand alone, and it is every day becoming clearer that the verdict passed upon them by the "critic" is not justified in fact; that archeological research has at last enabled us to test the historical statements of the Pentateuch, and to compare the documents contained in it with those of other Oriental nations in the Mosaic age, and that the result is unfavorable to the "new teaching." After a review of the counterproofs presented by archeology, he affirms that the "higher criticism" was triumphant only so long as the scientific instrument of comparison could not be employed against it. He believes that the Pentateuch is substantially the work of Moses. Against the counter-evidence of archeology, he asks, What has the "higher criticism" to bring forward? And answers: "Merely linguistic arguments. . . . I have been a student of language and languages all my life, and the study has made me very skeptical as to the historical and literary conclusions that can be drawn from linguistic testimony alone." We now quote Professor Sayce's conclusion:—

"But even if the archeological and linguistic evidence should be held to neutralize one another, there is one tremendous fact to which the 'higher critics' in this country resolutely close their eyes, but which ought to be more than sufficient to weigh down all the lists of words and idioms that were ever marshaled together. Against the evidence of the lists is the evidence of the doctrine and tradition of the Christian church throughout the eighteen centuries of its existence. And those of us who believe that, in accordance with the promise of its divine Founder, the Spirit of God has been in the church, guiding it into 'all truth,' find it impossible to believe at the same time that our new teachers can be right. The same method and arguments which have made of the Pentateuch a later and untrustworthy compilation, whose divine origin and character are discernible only to the critics themselves, would, if applied to the gospels, end in the same results. In this country, it is true, our critical friends have hitherto kept their faces steadily averted from the New Testament, but the Protestant critics of the Continent have been less timid or prudent, and the way along which they should walk has long ago been pointed out to them by the Tübingen school. And even if we confine ourselves to the Pentateuch, the consequences of the 'critical' position are serious enough. It is not only that the conception of the Mosaic law which lies at the back of our own religion, which was assumed by our Lord and his apostles, and which has been held ever since by the Christian church, is swallowed up in chaotic darkness; we are forced to assign the origin of the belief in the divine message and supernatural authority of the law to successful fraud. I know we are told that what would be fraud in modern Europe was not fraud in ancient Israel, and that with an improvement in manners and education has come an improvement in morals. But the question is not about ancient Israel and its ideas of morality, but about the immutable God, under whose inspiration, if we are to follow the teaching of Christ and Christianity, the law was given to Israel. The 'higher critics' never seem to me to realize that their conclusions are opposed to the great practical fact of the existence of traditional Christianity, and that against this fact they have nothing to set except the linguistic speculations of a few individual scholars. It is not Athanasius against the world, but Nestorius against the church. On the one side we have a body of doctrine, which has been the support in life and the refuge in death of millions of men of all nationalities and grades of mind, which has been witnessed to by saints and martyrs, which has conquered first the Roman Empire and then the barbarians who destroyed it, and which has brought a message of peace and good-will to suffering humanity. On the other side there is a handful of critics, with their lists of words and polychromatic Bibles. And yet the 'higher criticism' has never saved any souls or healed any bodies."—Literary Digest.

NOTE:—The numbers in brackets indicate the number of music in "The Saints' Harmony" and hymn in the "Saints' Harp."

THE HYMNAL IS COMING!

IN about thirty days the much-talked-of Hymnal will be ready to place in the hands of the church. The committee appointed to compile it, after much patient labor, completed their work creditably to themselves and the church. It was then placed in the hands of the electrotypers to prepare plates for the printers; and the Board of Publication, to facilitate matters and get the work out promptly, and to guard against errors, placed one of the committee in Chicago to proofread and correct any errors in music or words that might be in the original, or such typographical errors as might be made by those making the plates, and for the purpose of getting it out without delay, which in their wisdom was the proper thing to do. After an expense of almost $500.00, and $150.00 additional for paper and material, it is ready for the printer. It will then be ready for binding, which will cost about $200.00 more before the first thousand are ready to mail; and it will cost from $75 to $100.00 to pay Uncle Sam before he will deliver them.

I call your attention to these few facts for two reasons: First, to answer the criticisms upon the management of the publishing department in ordering cash in advance on this book; second, to show every stockholder in this institution a part of the responsibility that in our judgment rests upon him.

Let us examine the present existing conditions. The church has found it necessary to establish a publishing department for the furthering of God's kingdom; and in harmony with law both human and divine they so organize, and it becomes a part of the church, and in which all alike have an interest and become partners to its success by the covenant they make with the church by entering its fold.

The Board of Publication, appointed by the church, having called upon your humble servant to leave home and friends and come here and take charge of the business part of the publishing house, we find the Saints divided into two classes principally, with few exceptions. One class looks upon the office as a private institution, run in the interests of the few; the other class looks upon it as public property from which they can take all they can without giving anything in return. But, thank God, there are a few who are laboring for the building up of this department in every way they can, seeking to assist this part of God's kingdom; and had it not been for the help of the outgoing Business Manager in time of need, this department would be a thing of history, of the past.

Our labor here we feel to be temporary, and it is not for glory or gain, but because of our love for the success of this glorious latter-day work in all its departments that we make this appeal through the pages of the Herald, which should be used for better purposes.

We notice in the Herald of October 7 a brother's criticism on our demand for cash in advance for the Hymnal.

We doubt the wisdom of such advice as that from a traveling minister, who is sent out to represent the interests of God's kingdom in all its departments; and this we believe to be to the hurt of the treasury of God's storehouse, and amounts to practically instructing the Saints not to pay money into the treasury until the work is done. Such teaching is equivalent to saying that if his preaching is not considered worth the allowance given his family, to let the family go hungry.

Now, we look upon this demand or request for cash in advance for the Hymnal merely as a request to the stockholders to put up the means to publish that which they have ordered done, and in return for it they get value received in the publication when completed. Is this not a reasonable demand? If not, where is the money to come from?

For the information of the brother and for the information of the church, the present management have this to say: We would rather have only five hundred subscriptions for the Hymnal accompanied by the cash than five thousand without cash,—such as are attached to other publications of the office that the management have been compelled to carry on the books from two to ten years without any return, and in the meantime, by reason of your neglect, compelled to borrow money at from six to eight per cent interest for the privilege of carrying such names. Brethren, is this just? Is it right or in harmony with present revelation which says, Saints "shall pay for that which they receive." (See Doctrine and Covenants 72:3.)

Here is a fair business statement of facts: Here is one of the departments of God's church—the publishing department, from which you as a body demand a certain work which will require an outlay of about $1,000.00, and you place a man in charge of it and place no means in his hands to do the work.

Now, there are but two ways of getting it. If his faith is not sufficient to call upon God to supply stock, and material, and food for his family, while doing the work without money and without price, or in the absence of being instructed to go fishing for it as Peter was, which we confess our faith is not equal to, he cannot use either way. But as past experience has taught us that a little faith coupled with a good deal of works has brought better returns, then there is nothing

THAT RETURN AGAIN.

THE Return, the organ of the Church of Christ (Whitmerites, so-called), published by C. A. Wickes, at Davis City, Iowa, still keeps a garbled quotation from section 83, paragraph 8, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, at the head of its columns; and evidently expects people to retain confidence in him and his paper as exponents of the faith of the church.

In the October 15th issue, the editor on page six refers to the work of the Reorganized Church in Utah, in the following language:—

It remains to be seen what the leaders of the Utah Church will do when the elders (a) begin work among them in sufficient proportions to attract their attention, but we cannot believe that we shall meet the same opposition they have shown the Josephites, for we shall present to them nothing but the plain truths of the Bible and Book of Mormon, in the spirit of love and meekness; and we cannot help thinking that if the Josephites had stuck to the position taken by their first leaders on the question of Joseph Smith's responsibility for the peculiar doctrine of Salt Lake the result might have been very different.

We cannot see how the Josephites could expect to greatly prosper in that mission, so long as they made the basis of their attack upon a proposition which the people of Utah knew to be untrue, and KNEW THAT THE JOSEPHITES KNEW IT ALSO.

(a) The elders referred to are presumed to be the elders of the Church of Christ (or Whitmerites).

The editor of the Return took pains to capitalize the closing words of the quotation above given.

The "first leaders" of the Josephites assumed no position in regard to Joseph Smith's responsibility for the "peculiar doctrine" of the Utah Church, plural marriage, that has been denied or changed. Not a man among them knew that he was responsible; and the position was and has been, and is now, that the dogma was corrupt and contrary to God's law as found in all three of the recognized books, no matter who was the responsible human agent of its introduction. No other position than this has been taken by the leaders. Some individuals believed that Joseph Smith was in some way connected with it, and may have so admitted, in speech or writing; but that the leaders, either first or last, so held, is not true. The Josephites have not made their attack on the church in Utah, on the proposition that Joseph Smith was not responsible for their "peculiar doctrine;" but upon the broader ground that the dogma itself was contrary to the law and will of God, as stated in Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants; and this is the true and tenable ground for any believer in any or all of the books to take. Further, the Josephites did not KNOW at the start, nor do they KNOW now that "the people of Utah" KNEW that the proposition presented by the Josephites was UNTRUE and that the JOSEPHITES "KNEW IT ALSO." Such a statement as this made by the Return is neither within the knowledge of the editor of the Return, nor true in itself. We have been with the Reorganized Church since April, 1860, and know what positions were assumed by the "leaders" much better than anyone connected with the Return does or can know.

The elders of the "Whitmerites," Church of Christ, when they go to the Utah Church will find no sympathy for, nor encouragement to, the ideas that Joseph Smith was a fallen prophet whose standing with God and good men was broken in 1832, or 1834, and his authority forfeited in those, or later years; that David Whitmer was called out of the church in May, 1838, to "preserve the authority;" that there are to be no apostles, nor high priests in the church, and no presidency. They will also find that the people of Utah, while possibly respectful to the memory of David Whitmer as a witness to the Book of Mormon, he is still believed by them to have been unfaithful to the cause he professed to love, when the Saints were persecuted in Missouri and driven out by a mob, and that he was cut off the church in May, 1838, for what is believed by them to have been good cause. If they expect that the people will hear and heed men who attack the prophetic character of Joseph Smith directly, as the elders of the Church of Christ have done, and ask that the revelations given through him since somewhere (not stated) in the year 1834, be discarded and the Book of Covenants containing them renounced, then those elders, however meek and loving their spirit may be, will find that they have greatly mistaken the situation and the people—the people of Utah profess to know what estimate to make of such men.

The Return, of October 1, mentions the name of one man "converted from the Reorganizers" at Los Angeles, California; and in the number for September 15, gives the names of four who withdrew from the Church of Christ at the council at Davis City, Iowa, members of the local church there. The hand of fellowship was withdrawn from another; and the standing of three others was called in question of one of whom the report reads, "We find he is in a very bad spirit, and has been labored with and refused to repent." The council passed a resolution refusing to sustain Elias Land as an elder for what he wrote in the HERALD "until he apologizes through" that paper. The council also stated that it could not indorse the labors of John C. Cox, of West Port, California, and his case was laid over subject to an inquiry of a committee of elders to whom the case of Elder C. C. Frisby, of Provo, Utah, was also referred. Elder Frisby has since died, so he will not appear before that committee for examination. This committee is composed of P. A. Page, of Richmond, Missouri, C. A. Wickes, of Davis City, and John Clark, of Council Bluffs, the only three elders composing the council of the Church of Christ, held at Davis City, Iowa, September 14 to 16, 1895.

We have noticed these things in the Return for the reason that they seem to us to be legitimate fruit of the kind of work these men have been doing. Like our Utah friends they cry out against the Reorganized Church, (and the Return uses the word "Reorganizers" to designate us in his writings,) because our effort and claim have been that a reorganization was the thing needed to be done, and yet the Utah Church did reorganize in 1847 and onward; and the Church of Christ is seeking to reform, re-form, and reorganize the church; using David Whitmer's Appeal as the initial point.

If, under the peculiar philosophy upon organization held by those whose organ the Return is taken to be, three men may get together in Council at Davis City, Iowa, and proceed to discipline others, those present and those in places far away, then a similar number of men professing to be members of the Church of Christ, in other places may, in a similar way, call a council, and proceed to withdraw the hand of fellowship from these at Davis City;—and where is the end to such work?

It is reported in the Return that P. A. Page and John Clark will visit Utah and the Pacific coast on a mission; in view of which visit, we venture to suggest to our brethren whom they may meet in their journeys that they will kindly entreat them, while they are giving the reasons for their hope, no matter how widely they may differ from us in those views.

THE following, though late, is worth noting as one of the signs of the times of such general character as to receive official notice:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 20.—Reports received at the Weather Bureau indicate the present drought is one of the severest, most prolonged and generally known in the United States since the bureau's organization. There are a few places which show an exception to the general condition, but in no large section of the country, unless perhaps in the Northwest and Far West, does there appear to have been a soaking rain for the last two months or more. Where there has been exceptional precipitation it has been confined to small areas. In some parts of the country the drought began in the latter part of July, but in most of the sections it did not become markedly pronounced until in August.

INDIAN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

WE have received a pamphlet describing the United States Indian school at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, that to us is a surprise, notwithstanding what we have seen in the present and believed in and hoped for the future of our Indian brethren. The illustrations show the school and the progress of its students to be modern and up to date. The Seminole, Apache, Sioux, Chippewa, Omaha, Cheyenne, and numerous other tribes are represented, but by pupils attired in the garb of civilization and grouped in classes engaged in the study of various industrial arts, sciences, etc. Some of these Indians show intellectual capacity above the average and have made good records in scholarship, in the arts and trades. We are pleased to note these evidences of the Lamanites advancing in civilization. We would that further steps might be taken to protect them from the rapacity of unscrupulous Indian agents and frontier tradesmen, who take advantage and practically rob them of large portions of the allowances paid them by the government for the sale of their reservations. We give below a statement descriptive of the school at Carlisle.

The Carlisle Barracks, established in 1755 as an outpost against Indians, were originally granted rent free to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by the Penn proprietors, but in 1801 were purchased from them by the United States.

The buildings, erected during the Revolution and subsequently, having become dilapidated, were rebuilt in 1836. These remained until 1863, when they were burned by the Confederates under Fitz Hugh Lee, on the night of July 1st, just before the battle of Gettysburg. Rebuilt in 1865-6, the Barracks were occupied as a cavalry school for recruits until 1872, at which time the School was transferred to St. Louis, and the place was practically unoccupied until turned over to the Interior Department for an Indian School, September 6, 1879.

Located in one of the best agricultural regions in the country, surrounded by a thrifty, industrious people, Carlisle Barracks merited the indorsement given by General Hancock, who, in approving its transfer to the Interior Department for an Indian School, said: "I know of no better place for the establishment of such an Institution."

The aim of the school has been to lead the Indians into the national life through associating them with that life, and teaching them English and giving a primary education and a knowledge of some common and practical industry and means of self-support among civilized people. To this end there are shops where the principal trades are taught the boys, and two farms for their instruction in farming, and suitable rooms and appliances where the girls are taught cooking, sewing, laundry, and housework. But the crowning influence in the accomplishment of these purposes is an extensive and most effective system of placing annually hundreds of boys and girls out in families and in the public schools.

The buildings throughout are well lighted by electricity and heated by steam, which is generated in a building entirely separated from the other buildings, and thus the danger from fire is reduced to a minimum, and the light and heat are equable and of the best quality.

There is ample water supply throughout the buildings and grounds, coming from the reservoir which supplies the town.

The School is provided with an excellent hand fire engine, and the boys are trained in its use, so that within three minutes it is possible to throw water from two sets of hose upon any building in the School grounds. During the sixteen years of the School's existence, only one threatening fire incident has occurred, and that was caused by tramps firing a stack of fodder adjoining the School barn. Although more than half a mile distant, the boys were so prompt with the engine that the fire was suppressed before the barn was materially damaged.

There are two athletic fields for foot ball, base ball, and other outdoor games.

The walks throughout the grounds are granolithic or made stone, conducing greatly to the comfort and cleanliness of the place.

All pupils attend school four hours and work four hours each day at trades or industries of their own selection.

IT is said that at this time there are 22 ex-sovereigns residing in different parts of Europe, none of them in the country they once ruled.—Information.

The above is full of meaning and worth noting. There will be more idle sovereigns a few years hence than now—idle as sovereigns we mean; they may have to work for a living like other men.

PRES. W. W. BLAIR was at Ogden on the 4th. Of the dedication at Pleasant Grove, Utah, November 3, he states:—

Had successful time at the dedication of the new church at Pleasant Grove, yesterday. Bro. H. O. Smith will give particulars.

Of the same occasion some one in the Utah Enquirer, of Provo, of November 5, says:—

PLEASANT GROVE, November 4, 1895.—The Josephite chapel at this place was dedicated yesterday. President W. W. Blair preached a sermon to quite a respectable audience, after which Elder Hyrum O. Smith offered the dedicatory prayer.

A collection was taken up at the close of the services to liquidate a small balance due; $66 were put in the hat.

The chapel is a neat little structure built of brick, well finished and seated with chairs. At the rear of the stand, the following mottoes were conspicuous: "A Free Pulpit and an Open Bible;" "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

The members of the "Reorganized" Church have done well and deserve much credit for the labor performed.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH has labored at Salt Lake City, Ogden, Provo, Pleasant Grove, and Camp Floyd, Utah, during the quarter. He was prevented from much labor owing to dangerous sickness in his family, during the prevalence of the fever this last summer and fall at Lamoni.

It is probable that Bro. Heman will visit Oklahoma, on his way west to his field, to look after a discussion, said to be pending there. Of the laborers associated with him he states:—

Brethren associated with me are all diligent and have each accomplished as much as could reasonably be expected under the circumstances.

WE thank brethren for various papers and clippings of items having a bearing on gospel work. We use such as we can, holding some until we can verify some statements made. Newspaper clippings often are unreliable and the use of them unsafe and incorrect. What has been so wildly asserted of us as a church should lead us to receive with caution all statements concerning others, especially those unduly criticising other religious organizations. The spirit of justness is what we want and what we must manifest to all, including our bitterest opponents, when we have opponents, if we would do service for the Master. Our authority is the authority of the truth, and only truth and truthfulness in those endeavoring to advocate and defend it will be approved of God. It is our conviction that whatsoever is contrary to or less than this "cometh of evil," no matter by whom it may come. It is by manifestation of the truth in theory, in practice—in method and in the character of those professing it, that the light of God is ever to be seen by the world. The life of Jesus Christ is such an expression of God, of godlikeness, of godliness, to the world. Such a life as he manifested, seen in the lives of Saints and ministers, will teach the world, lead men and women to Christ, and rebuke the world of sin, of righteousness, and of a judgment to come. Let us all as Saints remember our personal missions to the world, and be steadfast in every good thing. It requires firmness of purpose, prayerfulness of heart, and humility and earnestness of mind, to be a worker for good. The great advancement to be made by the children of God can never be made by the thoughtless, the careless, the worldly minded. Devotion to God requires and means carefulness in what we do and what we say and a willingness to sacrifice. Are we equal to the demands?

INFORMATION is the title of a weekly publication issued by the Transatlantic Publishing Company, No 63 Fifth Avenue, New York. Under plain, comprehensive headings it gives statements of the leading events of the week in brief form. Each number is indexed and the index is kept complete up to the date of each number throughout the year. Eight three column pages with cover; price $2.50. It is just the thing for very busy people. Bound yearly it will make a neat volume and contain a concise record of the events of the year.

STRIKE AND LOCKOUT STATISTICS. THOSE who take interest in economic questions will find the report of Commissioner Wright to contain much of value.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11.—In his tenth annual report, Carroll D. Wright, Commissioner of Labor, computes that the loss to employees in establishments in which lockouts and strikes occurred during the thirteen and a half years ending June 30, 1894, was $190,493,382, and to employers $94,825,837. The loss to employees on account of strikes was $163,807,866, and on account of lockouts $26,685,516; to employers on account of strikes, $82,590,386, and on account of lockouts $12,235,451.

The number of establishments involved in strikes in this period was 69,167, and the number of persons thrown out of employment by reason of strikes 3,714,406, making an average loss to the employees of each establishment of $2,368, and to each person of $44. The number of establishments involved in lockouts was 6,067, and the number of persons locked out 366,690. These persons lost an average of $73 each. The assistance given to strikers and the subjects of lockouts was, as far as ascertainable, $13,438,704, or a little over 7 per cent of the total loss to employees.

Success was gained by the employees in over 43 per cent of the strikes, partial success in over 10 per cent, while the remaining 46 per cent were failures. Over 48 per cent of the lockouts succeeded completely, and over 10 per cent partially. The others were failures. In the successful strikes 669,992 were thrown out of employment, 318,801 in those partially successful, and 1,400,988 in those which failed. Of the total number of persons thrown out of employment by the strikes in the entire period of thirteen and a half years, 8.78 per cent were females, and by lockouts 22.53.

Sixty-nine per cent of all the strikes and 76 per cent of all the lockouts of the seven-and-a-half-year period occurred in the States of Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Massachusetts, Illinois taking the lead.

THE work of Utah Elders in West Virginia has frequently been referred to by press correspondents. We give below another report of the same kind.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 4.—Two years ago Mormon elders appeared in Wyoming, Wayne, Lincoln, Logan, and adjoining counties, and made a house-to-house canvass, securing converts by promises of fortunes to be made in the Western country. Many sold everything they possessed, embraced the the Mormon faith, and went West. The last week families of converts have been straggling back penniless from Utah to their home counties. An organization is being formed to warn others from joining the Mormons.

THE reports from the mission field are very encouraging as a whole. Brn. Holmes J. Davison and Samuel O. Foss, were in Northeastern Maine, where they labored until Bro. Holmes returned to Nova Scotia, where Bro. Foss would continue for awhile, the work demanding. Good reports come from their labors. Bro. Davison has been joined by Bro. George W. Robley, for the fall and winter campaign.

Brn. U. W. Greene and W. W. Blanchard are in Western Maine; Bro. J. C. Foss at Rockland and North of Deer Isle. Bro. George Smith, of Providence, Rhode Island, is aiding Bro. A. H. Parsons in Connecticut and Brooklyn, New York; though it is expected that Bro. Parsons will be on his way to Virginia. Bro. F. M. Sheehy is in York State, near Norwich and East Pharsalia. An effort was made to raise a mischievous persecution there; but it was futile. Bro. W. H. Kelley wrote the Governor asking that our men be not served as were the Christians in Armenia, or to meet the treatment given victims of the Whitecaps and Moonshiners of the South. Whether this had an effect or not, the brethren were not molested as yet.

Bro. I. M. Smith was successful in his debate at Goose Creek, West Virginia; so it is reported. Bro. R. Etzenhouser is disputing with Dr. Taylor, at McArthur, Ohio.

Brn. James and H. E. Moler, Brn. Goodrich, D. L. Shinn, and Godby, and others in their fields are busy.

Bro. William Bradbury has been active at Providence of late; and Bro. William Owens, of Brooklyn, is desirous of once more engaging in the good work, which we hope he may do with good effect.

All of which is gleaned from a report by Bro. W. H. Kelley in charge of the field.

J. A. ROBINSON, who spoke in Trades' Assembly Hall two weeks ago to a very much interested audience on subjects of great interest to everybody, especially workingmen, will speak to-day at Odd Fellows' Hall, in the Masonic Temple, corner Liberty and Adams streets, at ten a. m. and eight p. m. All are cordially invited to attend.

The above is from the Peoria, Illinois, Transcript, of Sunday, November 3. The Herald also published an announcement of Bro. Robinson's meetings.

PRESBYTERIANS AND THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

THE Christian Endeavor movement already shows signs of waning, one of which we call attention to by the following press dispatch:—

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 3.—The Christian Endeavor Society seems to be in a fair way to lose a large part of its membership unless the young people in the Presbyterian Church overrule their elders.

The General Assembly Committee on Young People's Societies considered the question assigned it at a meeting here last week, and to-day the Rev. Dr. D. S. Kennedy of the First Church, Allegheny, made a statement of the committee's position.

While it is practically agreed a recommendation will be made that a young people's society be organized within the church, no definite plan has been perfected. Dr. Kennedy said:—

"One feature about the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor to which Presbyterians object is the stress which is laid upon the value of interdenominationalism. We want our young people to recognize all Christians as brethren, but we want them also to be loyal to their own church, and we feel that the societies which some of them now have are not the best calculated to prompt this loyalty.

"At Christian Endeavor conventions addresses are sometimes made by men who hold ideas which our church has condemned, and we think something ought to be done to prevent them coming under such influences. There is the argument in favor of a denominational society, though, that the organizations in the majority at present divert a large part of what should be the church's revenues to uses outside of it, and this, too, while our church boards are deeply in debt.

"Another objection is that the members of the Christian Endeavor societies are required to take a pledge. The taking by Christians of any other obligation than their Christian vows should be discouraged."

THE ARENA.

THE Arena for the incoming year has an array of brilliant names among its contributors; such names as Rev. J. Minot Savage, of Unity Church, Boston; Rev. Lyman Abbott, of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn; Rev. Edward Everett Hale, of Boston, of the doctors of theology; U. S. Senator, John T. Morgan, of Alabama; United States Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina, of the lawmakers; Professors Richard T. Ely, of University of Wisconsin; Frank Parsons, of Boston University and Law School, Boston; George D. Herron, of Iowa college; J. Rhodes Buchanan M. D., of the professors; Postmaster William L. Wilson, and Helen H. Gardener, of the general utility classes, with others, make up an array of talent that will make the Arena, most interesting and instructive as a conservator of the best public opinion for the coming year.

Some special features will be "The Sociality of the Religion of Jesus," by George D. Herron, of Iowa college; "The Silver Question, by Sen. J. T. Morgan; "The Impending Political Advance, by James M. Ashley, Congressman and Governor.

The price is also reduced from $5 to $3 per year; which brings it within the reach of a family magazine, to much better advantage than heretofore. It is decidedly worthy of continuance and extended patronage. We wish the Arena success.

OUT OF PRINT.

THE work "Joseph Smith the Prophet and His Progenitors" (Lucy Smith's History) is out of print. We cannot fill orders for it.

TOBACCO AND SECRECY.

WE note that the University of Boston has required its students to give up tobacco or leave the institution, and that the Chicago University is taking steps to suppress secret societies among its students with a view to end the practices of "hazing" and "rushing," and to cause students to devote themselves to closer study. This, we believe, is right. The tobacco ought to go as a detriment to health and morals, and a relic of barbarism and general hindrance to progress and good. A man impregnated with tobacco cannot think or study as advantageously as if free from the tobacco habit, which some claim is a disease. There is an incongruity in a man studying moral, mental, spiritual, or other sciences, and adopting unscientific methods or habits that undermine and weaken if they do not destroy body and mind. The tobacco malady certainly conduces to destruction rather than to preservation. College societies organized to promote study and other good work have been organizations for good in many instances; but the "secret" phases of college and other societies are, in our judgment, objectionable and unnecessary. All necessary organizations can and, we think, should be without secret initiations and secrecy in their methods of operation. The spirit of secrecy in that sense is harmful. It ought not to be encouraged in educational institutions. Students at college should be free from its leaven and taught the foundation principles of openness, examination, and investigation — unhindered and unhampered, according to the true spirit of the times, which demands that all things that are shall be open to inspection and their merits or demerits brought to the light for scrutiny. We don't like secrecy as such. Students can learn to keep their own counsel when necessary and the virtue of silence when silence is golden; but the open practice and encouragement of secret organizations and the spirit of them is, as we see it, contrary to the true educational spirit and the principles that truly underlie and should actuate the conduct of man toward his fellow man. God has created the brotherhood of all men; secret societies narrow this spirit and promote the spirit that narrows to respect of persons and the preference of some before others.

The fundamental principles of life are engraven by God himself in the very constitution and nature of man—man as a whole, the race. Secrecy does violence to the principle of oneness and tends to division, separation, which is weakness; to castes, distinctions, and classes that jeopardize the good of the whole, in so far as they lessen the unity and union of society.

Away with tobacco and secrecy and other elements foreign to the welfare of man and contrary to the wisdom and moral government of the Creator. Every proper means should be used to discourage and suppress the perversion, the wrong use of both.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. D. R. BALDWIN, Ravender Springs, Arkansas, October 3:—

Every schoolhouse in this country is open for preaching and I receive more invitations to "come and preach" than I am able to fill. I have opened some four or five new places besides preaching at Martin's Creek, Coats, and Little Barn, where preaching has been done before.

Bro. J. S. Roth, Burnside, Illinois, November 4:—

I closed my meeting here last night and to-night I begin again, at Rock Creek church for a week or more, as a number are asking for more preaching there.

Bro. S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, Iowa, the 7th inst.

The work is moving here and I feel encouraged and blessed in trying to aid it in my feeble way.

Bro. R. Coburn, Blenheim, Ontario, November 4:—

The Saints of our branch are all in fair health. We had an excellent conference at Zone; the business passed off pleasantly and the meetings were good; the Spirit of the Master was enjoyed by all present.

One of the brethren writing from Peoria, Illinois, says:—

We have moved to a new and better location on the second floor, in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Masonic Temple, corner of Adams and Liberty Streets. The hall is nicely furnished and well lighted for day or evening services, and taken altogether is a very desirable place. Bro. J. A. Robinson having come to Peoria on business, was announced in the local papers for two discourses on Sunday. There was a good attendance, including several strangers. We shall be pleased to have any of the traveling ministry who can make it convenient, to stop over Sunday with us. At No. 605 Illinois Avenue, the latchstring is always on the outside, and any of the other resident Saints will also gladly entertain the wayfarer. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely; it is fairly well attended by the Saints and an occasional stranger, but it seems rather difficult to create an interest in so large a city.

Bishop E. L. Kelley has received the following from Pres. W. W. Blair, dated Denver, Colorado, November 9, which speaks for itself:—

I arrived here last night from Salt Lake and Ogden, Utah, and on reading the Herald of 6th inst. this morning find you request special aid to further prosecute suit for Temple Lot in Independence, Missouri, therefore I send you herewith an order for ten dollars ($10). Had busy time in Utah. The Territory has been and is being deeply agitated over politics, and church interference in matters of the state has been held up to merited scorn and rebuke. Hope to reach home by 20th to 25th inst.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOSEPH KNOX, of Sandyville, Iowa, secured the Methodist church for Bro. W. H. Kephart, who has been preaching there and in various portions of Morrow and Warren Counties, Iowa. Bro. Kephart's labors are well reported of by Bro. Knox.

Bro. E. C. Briggs reports considerable difficulty in securing qualified men for presiding officers over branches in his field. But this is not characteristic of his field alone; others suffer in a similar way.

Bro. J. R. Lambert has done much labor during the last quarter, preaching forty sermons, and has been at times remarkably blessed. The missionaries in his field are doing well, though some of the branches are in a low condition.

The corner stone of Graceland College will be laid on Tuesday afternoon, the 12th inst., just as we go to press. Particulars next week.

Dr. T. H. Allison writing from Crescent, Iowa, states that Bro. Lents was holding a series of meetings there with good results. Nine had already received baptism.

Elder J. C. Clapp reports being placed hors de combat in the Oregon field through continuous preaching and the damp foggy weather. The latter is so severe on his throat and lungs that he has to stop and recruit. Since entering the Oregon field in the last six months he reports one hundred and thirteen sermons; four branches organized; seven baptisms; ten confirmations; twenty-five children blessed; ordained one seventy, three elders, four priests, two teachers, and one deacon; performed one marriage, and traveled three thousand miles;—all under the greatly increased blessings of the Master. Who shall say that the elder's life is not a busy life.

Bro. J. S. Whitney, of Lake Crystal, Minnesota, mentions that point as a promising one for missionary labor.

The Civic Federation of Chicago is making preparations to assist the worthy poor during the coming winter, by systematic charity work through its philanthropic committee. The charity and reform work of civic organizations in Chicago, New York, and other cities is among the hopeful signs of the times and furnishes some ground for hope that even municipal and general politics may yet be purified—to some degree at least.

The Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, Vigilance League has offered the services of an attorney to prosecute City Attorney Moreland and Assistant Attorney House, of Pittsburg; and the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce has adopted resolutions calling for the fullest investigation of the charges and the punishment of all in fault. Moreland is said to have robbed the city of over $100,000.

Bro. J. H. Tibbels, writing from Relfe, Missouri, the 6th inst., recounts labor done there and at other local points where he has been preaching the word. He requests prayer in behalf of Bro. and Sr. John Godfrey. They have been sorely tried, having lost four children of late, and Bro. Godfrey is now severely afflicted; a son, Henry, is also afflicted, with epilepsy. Bro. Tibbels and family have removed from Nebraska because of drouth. He labors locally as circumstances and impaired health permit.

Bro. J. W. Gillen is home from Colorado, also Bro. F. A. Smith from Omaha—the latter called home by sickness. Bro. Columbus Scott departed for Central Iowa during the week of the 3d. Brn. J. R. Lambert and J. S. Snively are laboring near Allendale, Missouri.

Bro. Thomas Rawson, of Sand Beach, Michigan, would be glad to receive a call from some of the traveling ministry in that State.

Wanted, Times and Seasons volumes 1, 2, and 3; also volume 1 of SAINTS'

HERALD. Anyone having either of these volumes to sell will please notify the Herald Office, stating price.

FROM THE MISSION FIELD.

I MET Sister Blair on the following Thursday afternoon at Sr. Saxe's, where a good Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion meeting was held, and on Friday visited together at Sr. Anthony's. During the week a cold wind had been blowing and rain had fallen, and I had taken a heavy cold, so that when Sunday came the sister where I was doubted the propriety of my going to church. But the whole day at home or in the house looked long and lonely. The sun shone warm and pleasant, so I concluded to go to the morning service, promising myself that I would remain within doors the rest of the day and evening. The Sunday routine of services are, preaching in the morning in the city, and in the afternoon in Oakland, and those who attend the service in Oakland go directly from the church to the ferry. So when meeting was out Sr. Blair inquired of me if I was going over to Oakland, to which I replied in the negative. She asked several, but none were going over, so they started off down the street towards the ferry. I thought they looked lonely as they walked off by themselves, and wished I were going too. Then I concluded I would go. I felt better than in the morning, and still better when I resolved to go; and thus started off at a brisk pace till I overtook a brother from Berkeley, who was also going to the ferry, then I purposely kept just far enough behind so she could not hear our voices, and turned when they turned so as to give her a surprise at the end of our walk, which must have been nearly a mile. Just before crossing over to the ferry they halted on the sidewalk. Bro. Blair felt the need of some dinner before preaching again, and as they turned to look for a restaurant we met face to face. You should have seen how her countenance lit up. She grasped my hand and gave me as fervent a kiss as if we had not met for a month, saying she had been wishing she had persuaded me to accompany them. Both of us felt at home now, and soon found a restaurant into which we all entered and got lunch, thence to the ferryboat. Our little trip across the bay, and conversation as we went, was to me very pleasant. I enjoyed every moment.

At the close of the afternoon service Bro. Blair went home with Bro. Hart and Sr. B. and I with Sr. John Cockerton—it will be remembered that Bro. Burton was still in Hollister. As children when left to themselves often loiter by the way, so also did we, and had the misfortune to miss the "local;" not exactly missed the train, either. By a little haste, when we heard the rumbling of the cars, we got to the train, but the conductor would not let us on board simply because we had no tickets. So we were obliged to go to the waiting room and remain for a half hour, and also be nearly a half hour late for church in the evening.

On Monday Bro. Burton returned to the city and had arranged to go to Santa Rosa on Wednesday afternoon in company with Bro. and Sr. Blair. That cold and its effects had returned with double violence during the fore part of the week, and threatened to detain me at least. But through faith and prayers, also Sr. Kaighan's good nursing, I was enabled to accompany them, though on trembling limbs, for I had kept my bed the day and a half previous. Bro. and Sr. Blair started from another part of the city, and got to the ferry much sooner than we did. We had been unavoidably detained and only reached the boat in time. While at a distance we saw Sr. Blair in the upper deck scanning the crowd to find us, and becoming somewhat nervous for fear we were not coming. As soon as the boat got out in the bay I began to get hungry,—having eaten scarcely anything all day,—so Joseph insisted on my going down to the dining room for a lunch. The tables looked very nice. There seemed to be almost everything there that a person would wish to eat, I thought, as I sat down, and glanced around to see what I would like. "No, thank you, no coffee nor tea. Have you chocolate or cocoa?" "No." "Then I will take a glass of milk. A dish of strawberries and cream, please. No meats; those fresh rolls are sufficient." And nice rich milk it was. While eating Joseph said, "It is not often one gets strawberries at sea." Then the thought came to him thus, "Why didn't we bring Sr. Blair down too?" "Did not know that there were strawberries here," I replied, "but it is not too late yet. I will eat slowly while you go and get her." Off he went. Bro. Blair did not wish anything; had been to dinner, and it was then only 2:30. But Sr. Blair came and we enjoyed our feast of berries. "I shall remember this," she said, as she folded the Chinese paper napkin. "Nobody will use that again," I said; "take it along with you; it will help you to remember the day." "I believe I will," she said, (the waiter stood at our elbow,) "but I have got no pocket." "Put it in my satchel." She did so, and it remains there.

I was not able to attend any meetings in Santa Rosa, having a troublesome cough, still I enjoyed Sr. Blair's companionship the three days that we remained here. On Saturday, a cold, windy, disagreeable day, Mr. Burton and I took up our line of march again, going as far as Calistoga. Bro. and Sr. Blair accompanied us to the station. I assure you it was with feelings of deep regret that I clasped the hand and said good-bye to our beloved sister, whose visit I had enjoyed so much. While with her I seemed to forget that (through deafness) I was isolated from the rest of the world. Her voice was such that I could always hear without her having to speak loud, and so we could converse in one part of a room without being heard in another. I missed her much, and shall ever look back to our short association with each other as a bright spot in memory.

It was something after seven p. m. when we reached Calistoga. An appointment for meeting that evening had gone on ahead of us, so Mr. Burton went directly from the train to the "stand," while Sr. Gibbs, who met us at the station, took me directly to her house, where there was still a smouldering fire in the little stove in her cosy dining room that felt comfortable as we entered the house, for the evening air was as cold as December. Sr. Gibbs was not long in getting that stove warmed up, and soon a dish of hot milk and crackers was set before me—all I wished to have for supper—and I felt refreshed. Our two meetings on Sunday at that place were not largely attended. Perhaps that place is not quite ready for gospel pruning.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. BETTIE HARRIS, of San Bernardino, California, requests your earnest faith and prayers in behalf of Mrs. Emma Aldridge, of the same place, who is sorely afflicted and beyond the help of any but God.

Sr. Lettie Dunn, of Tama, Iowa, asks your prayers in behalf of Sr. Hannah Shimel; also of a sister who desires the blessing of sight.

Laws have been enacted in Belgium prohibiting the hunting of frogs. The Belgium hunters, however, have found it easy to continue their occupation in the neighboring country of Holland. Recently, in one day, these hunters sent as many as 20,000 frogs' legs to Paris. As these delicacies bring from four to five cents apiece the calling is a paying one to some of the hunters.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

THE Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan district held its semi-annual Sunday school convention at Clear Lake, Indiana, October 25.

The spirit manifested throughout was sufficient to put to flight all skepticism as to the relation of the Sunday school to the church.

Elder S. W. L. Scott, in his ever-pleasing manner presented the subject of teachers' meetings. Otto Storey led in discussion, showing that the methods presented were in use in the school he represented, and had proved practical.

Such thoughts as these were brought out: "Necessity drove us to organize;" "Our meetings are like a first-class prayer meeting;" "If you find a teacher who absents herself from teachers' meeting, you will find one most in need of its benefits;" "In addition to what one learns, the inspiration gathered makes one feel that he wants to put in his best licks."

Mrs. Bradford Corless conducted a primary class, showing how she would teach children who were too young to comprehend the Primary Quarterly. She is one of the few who are able to occupy child level.

Cecil Carrie Flagler read an excellent paper on normal work. Mary Corless led the discussion, making every point so clear that we could all see that it is but the natural, or God's plan, after all.

The man who, on being told by an M. D. that his lungs were in normal condition asked how long he might be expected to live, was not a member of the convention.

All teachers who have made a success of teaching have studied the science of child mind and the art of reaching the same, and thus have employed normal methods whether knowingly or not.

'Twas a profitable meeting. No time was occupied in silence, but the chair was kept busy in determining who was entitled to the floor.

Clear Lake Sunday school has a teacher living three miles from the church who in three years has been absent but three Sundays. Who can show a better record?

May we, then, as now, be ever
Bravely bearing each his part,
Till reunions last forever,
And we meet but do not part.

Let us labor harder, faster,
Till the closing hour draws near,
Then we'll serve our Lord and Master
Through the long Sabbatic year.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—By the article, "Finding the twenty-four golden plates of Ether," and Elder I. N. White's rejoinder, each one holds to the idea that the land of Nephi was in Peru, and that the land Desolation was Central America, where the people of the Tower of Babel first located, as found in your issue of October 30.

Now by the showing of two native charts called the Botturini and Gemelli, and their interpretation by the Book of Mormon, they show differently. The Botturini shows that South America south of the equator was exclusively the land of Lehi; and that Central America, northward of the Bay of Panama, to the Bay of Honduras, by the showing of the Gemelli chart, was the land of Nephi, and also that in the vicinity of the Honduras Bay was "the strip of wilderness, which ran from the east to the sea west;" and also that northward of the bay and strip of wilderness to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, was the country called "The land of Zarahemla."

Hence it will be seen by such showings that "Desolation," the Jaredite country, was northward of the Tehuantepec Isthmus; and that the ancestors of Zarahemla and his people landed in Mexico from the Gulf of Mexico, and "traveled up into the south wilderness," that was called "the land of Zarahemla by the Nephites" not "South America" as alleged by the two articles. It also shows that it was in Mexico proper, where the "twenty-four plates," the history of the Jaredite people was "found by the people of Limhi," and not in "Central America."

Most respectfully,
SIMON SMITH.

JONESPORT, Maine, Nov. 1.

Editors Herald:—I have been trying as best I could to labor in Maine, in various places. After our reunion, by request, I went to East Bucksport, where Bro. M. F. Gowell had preached two sermons and it was thought that there was some interest in the gospel; but the people seemed to be much more interested in home affairs and all other kinds of meetings that would give them more worldly pleasure; so after an effort of about a week I succeeded in preaching to a few for two evenings, then went to West Ellsworth on Sunday and preached with good liberty to the Saints and a goodly number of outside people for a country place.

I then went to South Orrington, my native town, among old-time neighbors, kindred, and friends, and preached to a good-sized house

A RECITATION IN THREE PARTS.

BY ALICE E. COBB.

I look again, ah, strange to tell!
The Lord has truly risen,
Broken the bonds of death and hell,
And opened wide the prison.
Mortals soon saw him ascending,
Angels say he'll reappear,
We upon their words depending,
Think his "second coming" near.
Mid the groanings of creation,
Everywhere on every hand,
Every tribe and every nation,
Then his worth shall understand.
Until then, his truly loyal,
Tried, and trusty servants bring
Words of comfort, from our royal
Lord and Master, Prince and King.
We must then, as brave defenders,
Hold his fortress though assailed,
He who to the foe surrenders
Sees our spotless banner trailed.
Word nor sentence of his teaching,
None must alter nor condemn,
When he sent his servants preaching,
"Feed my Lambs," he said to them.

3. AN EXHORTATION TO SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

Hence our elders go out calling
Back the lost and scattered sheep.
Go with many ills befalling,
Often lacking food and sleep.
Plodding on they keep repeating,
What the shepherds did of old,
And to hush the lambkin's bleating
Gather them within the fold.

Women, too, are burdens bearing
With sad hearts and tear-stained eyes,
Little children, too, are sharing
In the common sacrifice.

Each young man and loyal maiden,
Yielding not to worldly pride,
Will be found with honor laden,
When He comes to claim his bride.

He hath offered many a treasure
Young and old from sin to lure,
But his one especial pleasure
Is to bless the good and pure.

Once when saints he was addressing,
Taking children in his arms,
He gave to them his choicest blessings,
Noting many childish charms.

And when men were greatness seeking,
Taking up a little child,
In their midst he placed it, speaking
Of its glory undefiled.

Then if his, we must be winning
Children to him in his name;
Keeping little ones from sinning,
Helps to keep us from the same.

The hearts of women, children, men,
No more in sadness need repine
For deeds of love and mercy,
When willing workers all combine.

Helpers are increasing daily,
And our growing ranks contain
Happy children, trooping gaily
By our side in one vast train.

Heads erect and steps elastic,
Keeping time to Scripture rules,
Moulding little minds while plastic of attentive listeners. There has never been any preaching there before. By the way, I had the pleasure of preaching in the hall built under the administration of George J. Adams, and where I first heard him proclaim the word so mightily; and I thought as I stood there, O, that I had the talent of that man, which seemed to me to have been wasted in that place. I think a good open has been made for future work in that village.
Is the work of Sabbath schools.

After visiting friends in that vicinity for a few days I returned to East Bucksport and met Bro. S. O. Foss on his way home from Aroostook. He spoke to a few who went with us. I found a home while there with Bro. and Sr. Richardson. God bless and reward them for their kindness to me while there.

Bro. Richardson took us by team to West Ellsworth, where we held three meetings. I hope and trust that fruit will be the result of the effort made and be gathered by some one in the future. Expect to go on the island on Sunday, where an Advent lion has been roaring and has frightened some of our sheep. A Holiness man is also trying to capture them. Am in the conflict for truth and hope to remain to the end. In bonds,

Editors Herald:—On August 31 I went to Santa Cruz, to attend the Northern and Central California reunion. Was met at the depot by Brn. Putney and Scott and I was soon at the cool and shady camp grounds, and the first to welcome me was dear Sr. Emma Burton, with smiling face and outstretched arms, who took me to the large tent occupied by Sr. Moses and Sr. Scott, where I was made welcome, and took dinner with them with many others, among whom were Bro. and Sr. Daley of the Northern district. I went outside to renew old acquaintances and form new ones, but had only time to shake hands with a few before the afternoon meeting, when Elder William Newton was the speaker. After the service closed another season of rejoicing in meeting so many of the dear Saints. But Bro. D. Harris had brought my tent, and thanks to Brn. Smith, Holmes, and others, it was soon erected, and mattress filled with straw, and my few belongings set in order to camp alone till Tuesday the 3d, when my daughter, Emily Davis, and husband were coming to share it with me. I was not lonely with the Saints on all sides of me.

The next day we were made glad by the arrival of Bro. and Sr. Blair, and were privileged to hear him preach several sermons, and were edified and instructed by the wisdom of his counsel; and once as he was bearing testimony to the truthfulness and divine calling of Bro. Joseph's mission as a prophet of God, Sr. Stone saw a bright beautiful light which reached from where she sat and encircled Bro. Blair; and she heard an audible voice close by her which told her to believe it, for it was true (I forget the exact words). She told me she never doubted it, but now she knew he was a prophet of God.

On Tuesday my daughter, her husband, and their little daughter Ethel, came; and on Saturday, the 7th, she with eight others were led into the waters of baptism by Bro. J. F. Burton; and on Monday four more were baptized by Bro. Daley, and a meeting appointed to confirm them, when the good Spirit was manifested in a wonderful manner. The camp had broken up and many of the Saints gone; but those who were there can never forget that meeting.

This reunion in my opinion is the best I ever attended, partly owing, I believe, to the beauty and quietude of the place; the name "Vienna Park." It was shaded by stately pine and gum trees. The building or "tabernacle" in which our meetings were held was quite spacious, being about one hundred feet long by forty wide, well seated and lighted, and just far enough from the noise of the city to be pleasant; and one source of recreation and pleasure to all was to go to the beach between meetings; and those who did not care to walk could ride on the street cars. Too much credit cannot be given to the committee for their untiring efforts to make all comfortable and happy. Your sister, MRS. ALBERT PAGE.

Editors Herald:—This finds me feeling well in body and mind. I stopped here Tuesday last, trusting that gospel work might be done. I found a town of five or six hundred inhabitants, and no preaching by our ministry, so far as can be learned by the writer. Bro. and Sr. Mosiah Winegar and their two daughters are here running a hotel, livery, feed barn, and millinery establishment, who received me heartily and have treated me kindly.

I find it a little out of my common experience to be well domiciled and kindly cared for in a first-class hotel. It makes one feel like he was somebody in the world after all. I found the Misses Winegar doing what they could in song and Sunday school work, in the Methodist church; and because of that, most likely, they secured the M. E. church for one service only, at which I set forth what we call the latter-day apostasy. As this was a new place for our work, it seemed necessary.

After learning from the janitor that they intended to let us use their church but the one night, we applied for the Christian church, and through the influence of Bro. Winegar we expect to hold meetings there next week, and possibly longer. The Christian minister seemed willing that we should occupy their church, treating us very kindly indeed. He was present at our meeting in the M. E. church, and introduced himself at the close of the service, and seems to be a Christian and a gentleman, as he understands Christianity to be. Would God that all the preachers were as good as he.

Since the reunion at Logan, I have preached in Little Sioux, the Jones schoolhouse, and Lake Circle. The meetings at the Jones schoolhouse were especially well attended. I might say as did Bro. Roth, they came for miles around, so that on the last Sunday night's service the house was packed, and we learned that seven teams came and drove away for want of hitching room.

Meetings will be continued there at intervals by Bro. G. M. Scott, of Little Sioux, as they have been in the past by Bro. Hutchings, of the same place. To sum the matter up as to the Jones neighborhood, I think that we, as a church, hold the swag. There are a number of families of good Saints in that locality.

Our meetings at Lake Circle were disturbed owing to the prevalence of diphtheria in Onawa, it being but three miles from the place of meeting. The weather at present is fine, roads good, people healthy, and nothing in the way of a good time next week.

And there it goes again; somebody writes, and somebody else objects; and at the risk of somebody objecting to this, I will say that if Bro. J. W. W. had not taken matters so much to heart and kept still, we at this distance perhaps never would have known who the criticism was especially aimed for; yet we see neither propriety nor right, vested in Bro. J. R. L. to indirectly implicate the whole ministerial force of the church because of, to his understanding, the wrong or at least the lack of right doing, on the part of (perhaps) the few.

Would it not be far better that all such things be righted (where there is thought to be any wrong) by private correspondence and thus save our church paper from going abroad, freighted with wholesale accusations against everybody in general and nobody in particular. I do not now refer to the above circumstances alone, but to all articles of a similar import. It was well enough for Bro. W. W. B., if he felt like it, to tell how some good friend had criticised his imperfect use of language, and let it have gone at that; but human nature seemed to have loomed up and suggested that somebody else was guilty of the same or a similar offense; and while we knew who the one was, we were left in dark as to who the others might be, if anybody was guilty.

As for me, I like to hear our ministry use good language in the expression of all their thoughts; yet I would much prefer to hear good thoughts expressed in imperfect language than to hear ideas altogether too thin to make good gospel soup expressed in the best of language. I agree with the writer that "privately criticising each other, [and I will add, in manners of speech, or in decorum of any kind,] is profitable, if done in the right spirit." But it is the publishing the faults of some, and at the same time implicating others to which I object. With me, it stands like this: while I endeavor to clothe my ideas with the use of the best language at my command, I avoid occupying too much time in considering how the thought shall be expressed, lest I should forget the thought itself. In fact it might be somewhat difficult to fix the standard for good language. Whilst Webster is acknowledged for aught I know throughout the world as a standard, we know that place of birth has to do with pronouncing words; and I would be surprised to hear a man raised in the Eastern States pronounce "cow" as one would who was raised in the Western States; although the same dictionary is used both East and West.

Then lest the preaching of the gospel should be "hindered," let us be just in our criticisms, and make them so private that no one will feel hurt, because of public exposure.

There is such a thing as one feeling his own inability to that extent that a very little thrown in to discourage throws him or her clear out from making any further attempt. Listen! I am in favor of the highest possible advancement in all that is good, but let us be careful to get at it in the right way.

J. C. CRABB.

GILCHRIST, Ill., Nov. 5.

Editors Herald:—The elder that can baptize by the dozen or the score at a time does not frequent these parts. Converts whom I immerse generally come by the ones, twos, or small numbers. Meager efforts give small returns, whereas persistent labor, indomitable energy, invincible courage, tempered with commendable zeal, fortified by irrefutable logic, sanctified through pure motives and demeanor, are the formidable weapons of ministers of the cross. A sly old fox is not easily snared, a good fish is quite difficult to obtain, and a person of caution and care is not gullible nor too readily disciplined.

On last Sunday, the 3d inst., and on my venerable mother's eighty-third anniversary, it was my pleasant duty to lead Bro. L. Hinkley's wife and one Robert E. Lee into the sparkling tide of "Edwards." The day was delightful, the autumnal scenery was grand, four conveyances from Millersburg twenty miles to the west, and a vast concourse of Protestants, Catholics, and nonprofessors lined the shores. Mr. Henry McIntire and wife of this place and others have declared in our favor and think to become obedient. They have not only cheerfully given myself and others access to their domestic comforts and home hospitality, but he as clerk of the school board secured the use of the schoolhouse for me. He went to all the expense and trouble of furnishing lights and fuel and caring for the house, without desiring or even permitting a collection to defray necessary contingencies. This unlooked for kindness was shown to me when the Union (?) churchhouse here was denied me; howbeit orthodox (?) institutions, the "Salvation Army," "American Protective Association," festivals, magic lantern shows, and the like, use the rendezvous at will. I have revisited this point several times since Bro. Samuel Adams first brought me here and introduced me to his relations in this locality. That first call was about a year ago, and Bro. Lee was an active participant in the Salvation Army up to that event. Books, pamphlets, tracts, and church papers have been freely diffused among this coal mining and adjacent agricultural community.

A week ago to-night I preached my fifth and last discourse in the Dogtown Congregationalist church. One honorable director was quite willing for me to continue, but two brothers, who held the balance of official power, would not leave the issue to the popular vote, but declined my further occupancy. The stall-fed preacher hedged against me, the people were pleased with the services, but "for the peace of the church," and the harmony of the neighborhood I had to take a walk. As a last resort, and finale, I announced that I would move out of the valley upon the hill to their district schoolhouse and resume my series of meetings the very next night unless I hit a snag as big as the Rocky Mountains. No obstacle appeared, so I look the citadel and "hold the fort," and still they come. Hireling priests keep the masses hoodwinked, for by their craft they, like the ancient shrine makers of Diana, have their wealth. How a blind guide, with his pack of unwary dupes, dislikes the searchlight of truth. How miserable and hateful they feel when anything that is pure and of God is around and on exhibition.

None of the ecclesiastical shepherds care to parry with, much less cross theological swords with me in these diggins. Their sort are often loth to face the music, and learn to keep step and time. The fox fire of fungus old sectarianism is all some want or will have as a light to their feet and warmth for their benighted hearts. Many as in days of yore, have sightless eyes and deaf ears and dull hearts. This deep-rooted, uplifting, far-reaching Banyan tree of old Babylon cannot be all rooted out, levelled down, and destroyed in a moment. The victor's wreath is for the conqueror's brow, but now the battle rages fierce and wild; but faith's conquests are at the door.

Editors Herald:—On the 26th of October I met Elder J. M. Scott at Rego, Orange County; where he and Bro. Jenkins had been preaching for some time past. A number had united with the church, a sufficient number for an organization, so on the 10th of October we organized them into a branch to be known as the Rego branch. Bro. James Peters was ordained priest, Bro. Ed Pavy teacher, and John May deacon. The above-named brethren were chosen as the presiding authorities of the branch, James Fancher clerk.

We had the light and liberty of the Spirit in the organization of this branch to a remarkable degree. I preached here at two points for over a week. Many are believing, and we look for a great work to be done in this region of country. In bonds, MALONE, N. Y., Oct. 31.

Editors Herald:—From September 7-16, I was in attendance at the Maine reunion and East Maine district conference held at Greene's Landing. The attendance was not so large as on previous similar occasions, a main cause being the time of holding was unseasonable—too late. There was a sufficient number present however to inspire confidence, and so a reunion and conference was successfully held. Those aiding in conducting the services, were the Brn. Fosses—John C., Samuel O., and Emery; Brn. J. S. Ames, George Eaton, William Bradbury, Henry Robins, William Pert, U. W. Greene, F. M. Sheehy, et al., assisted by a number of interested and zealous brethren and sisters, who put forth an effort to make the meetings a success. The preaching was good, prayer meetings fair the social feeling excellent, hospitality first class, and altogether a profitable time was had, so much so that it was resolved to hold another reunion next year. The conference business was transacted with seeming satisfaction to all, and a good spirit prevailed all through.

A pleasing feature that indicates enterprise and reflects credit upon the Saints and friends at Green's Landing is the erection of a new meetinghouse, or chapel, some 35x55 in dimensions and high in sufficient proportion to give it symmetry and attractiveness. A very creditable building, and when finished will be all the Saints could desire as a place of worship. Bro. U. W. Greene resides here and is entitled to some credit in inspiring the erection of this house.

It is a source of much satisfaction when the Saints can have a desirable place in which to worship, under their control and free from anything that smacks of sectarian intolerance, illiberality, and bigotry, and when it can be done without a mortgage. They are all to blame there if they do not dwell in the atmosphere of freedom, enlightenment, and true progress; and still more blameworthy if they do not manifest a higher and more perfect Christian ideal in the line of true liberality and the rights of men and society than is often exhibited towards them by their neighbors.

At the conclusion of the main meetings there were some baptisms and a general good feeling seemed to rule. We are indebted to Sr. Clarence Nolten principally for care while there.

Passing by other incidents and labors, October 6, 7 found me at the conference at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. It was a pleasant and successful meeting of Saints. Agreement was had in the business transacted and there is an observable growing sentiment and feeling in the direction of the right among the Saints there; the best yet seen by the writer. The attendance from outside of Pittsburg was sparse, yet the hall was well filled and the meetings enjoyable. Bro. William Garrett was continued as district president, an active, zealous worker; Bro. George Hulmes is still leader of the Pittsburg branch and possesses the confidence of the Saints.

Noting these points of labor, others are passed by for the sake of brevity, though perhaps as important and interesting. The work is progressing as well as could reasonably be expected considering the number of laborers. Really much is accomplished if the work but holds its own. Improvement and progress at Fall River, Massachusetts, is reported under the leadership of Brn. John Smith, Samuel W. Ashton, and David Shaw. The general ministry are out in the field and so far as reported are making progress. These are close times for the working classes, the farmers as well. Fine potatoes are selling from five to eight and ten cents per bushel here in the bulk, and many other things tend in the same direction. It takes a long time to pay off mortgages at such prices. Blessed is the man that owes no one and can and will live within his means or earnings.

I am here for a few days, holding meetings at Whippleville. We have friends in these parts and from appearances a good work can be done; but it will take time and continuous effort. There are inviting opportunities, however.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

EL RENO, Okla., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—It seems to be the disposition of man, and it should be so, to make all reports just as favorable as the case will allow, and yet retain the dignity of honesty. It would require a very skillful artist, or an able writer to give a flattering or favorable report of the work in this Territory and yet represent a true picture.

I returned to this field about June 4, and have endeavored to labor in the interest of the angel's message. Returning here from General Conference, I found the fields and farms almost as bare as a floor. Up to the latter part of June, in some places, there was not a tinge of green in field or pasture. In consequence of this faith vanished and fear was the prevailing condition of men's minds. Many moved away, and the love of many waxed cold. Some had been admonished to remain in the interests of the work, but in the face of the trial they fled to other parts, forgetting that they had been admonished to "remain here for at least two years." But we live to learn and learn to live.

Where I have labored this year there is, with few exceptions, very little interest manifested. Opposition has faded and gone; it has sunk into peaceful oblivion; and now when our elders make appointments the people dip their snuff and smoke their pipes around their own hearthstone, singing the sweet song of the dark ages, "O the old-time religion is good enough for me," etc.

If you have any philosophers to spare, please send us one to tell us how to get at these people. But, hark! methinks I hear sweet voices singing,

"We thank thee, oh God, for a prophet,
To guide us in these latter days."

That prophet has said by inspiration, "The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them, in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past."

The fulfillment of this promise has been enjoyed by your humble servant while laboring in "new" places. The people come out well for awhile, but they soon do like those at Logan, not caring to hear more of the word. So I comprehend, according to the "hastening time" and other indications which mark the near approach of our Lord, that the great mass of people will not hear or obey the angel's message; so I content myself with the facts, knowing that, "as it was in the days of Noah" so it is in our day, and that our cause is God's cause and the reward for the faithful.

The friends in this mission had rejoiced in hope when reports came from the April Conference, but as our beloved brother G. W. Shute was taken, we all deeply regretted the loss. Then our favorite, W. S. Macrae, retiring from the field left us rather lonely and disappointed. There is a constant inquiring for "Bro. Macrae;" and I can say for myself that he should be in Oklahoma. A cordial welcome is awaiting his return. Come, Bro. Macrae, you and Edda, we need you here to help bind the bundles.

By kindness of Bro. T. J. Smith the monotony of being alone is broken. We held forth one week at the Head schoolhouse. Only a few besides the Saints attended, yet we think good was done. We left the Saints in better spirits. We are now at Fairview, where Bro. Erwin had the debate last winter and where several were baptized. Have held three nights with very few to hear. Prejudice! well, we'll all know by and by. We go from here to Sunny Side, a new place. The people there have been calling for us, so we hope to have a good meeting.

I have been made glad while noting the encouragement that the Herald has brought. The many good letters, the lines of poetry, especially that from Bro. Elbert A. Smith entitled "Kinder than a brother."

"Joseph's star is bright and shining,
Alexander's more than mine;
Mine is just below the mountain,
Bide its time and it will shine."

I trust the time is near at hand when this will truly be;
When angel's voice shall loud proclaim that David is set free.

Yours, believing it,
R. M. MALONEY.

ANGOLA, Kan., Oct. 1.

Editors Herald:—It is about a year since I have contributed anything to your "letter department;" not because I loved your precious pages less, but more. It is now over two years since I came to Council Bluffs to labor and, humanlike, I take a retrospective view. Above all things else that I prize is the consciousness of having a desire to do the right. Whether that desire has always led me to the performance of right remains for others to answer. I have sought to avail myself of every opportunity to further the work, but whether in my zeal I have construed that to be an opportunity which was not, and thus retarded rather than advanced the work, must be determined by wiser minds than mine. Possibly opportunities have developed which others have seen and I have not.

In moving out to do that which my hand found to do, I have received a divine consciousness of acceptance which transcends all human commendation or appreciation. While I rejoice to know my labors have been appreciated by the Saints, it has been of infinite satisfaction to know that my heavenly Father was pleased. For six months I have acted as branch president. I accepted it, not because I felt that the local talent was not qualified, but in harmony with a previous resolve that I would never refuse to do anything that God or his people appointed, providing I could. I took up the work as laid down by my predecessor, and while I may have wrought in a different way (no two working alike), it was not to throw discredit upon the labors of others, but to fulfill the injunction, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

The Saints could save branch officials much trouble if they would. Members move from place to place and forget or willfully neglect to take letters of removal as the law directs, and as a result, after several years absence they become lost to the church. I found some fifty absent in the branch and spent much of the time for two months trying to locate them, and as a result over thirty have taken letters of removal, and there are yet a number who are lost to the church.

I would suggest that in all large cities a church directory be kept, in which the name and residence of each member be recorded, and as soon as one removes that it be noted, and as soon as possible have them take a letter.

If sisters when they get married would only think to notify the branch secretary, it would save much bother. I found ten or twelve sisters who were married (some for years) while their names were still unchanged on the record. If young (and aged sisters too) who contemplate marriage would remember this it would be of advantage to those keeping branch records.

Another thing the cities need is that some plan be devised for observing the law of Doctrine and Covenants wherein provision is made that the "priest" shall "visit the house of each member;" and the "teacher" see that the Saints "do their duty." In a branch where there are from two to three hundred members and those holding the priesthood are dependent upon their daily labors for maintenance, it is almost impossible to fulfill the law for lack of time. When a man works from seven a. m. to six p. m. each day, and must attend to personal affairs after this, it leaves but a short time for visiting; and he cannot possibly visit more than one or two families in an evening. To fully comply with the law it would take a man one half his time at ten hours a day to visit each member once in three months. Brethren who labor for a livelihood cannot give this much time. The traveling missionary should not. Now how is this part of the law to be observed?

This was solely why I took the presidency of the Council Bluffs branch. I felt the brethren did not have the time to devote, that the work demanded, and I thought I might help them. Six months have rolled away and while quite a number have been visited twice, some have not, and I have been busy all the time when not engaged in preaching. Will this be the work of evangelical ministers in large branches? If not, who will do it? Answer, ye who can.

Owing to the urgent demands for my labor in different parts of the district the missionaries in charge have directed that I labor most of the time in the district until next General Conference; so as soon as I can arrange to leave I do not expect to be in the city much between now and then. It is probable that my active labors in Council Bluffs are at an end; and while I would be disappointed if the future would not continue to bear fruit, yet I am satisfied with results up to the present. Since I have been connected with the branch it has increased perceptibly in membership, notwithstanding there have been over forty removals. At the time I came but few outsiders attended the meetings, but by urging our claims and holding tent meetings in different parts of the city it is not an uncommon thing to see from fifty to one hundred outsiders in attendance on Sunday evenings.

There has been a gradual growth in spirituality, and it is entirely dependent upon the Saints whether this vantage ground shall be retained or lost. Council Bluffs has some good local talent; in fact much more than many other branches; and I am satisfied if each will make an effort that they can get along without a general missionary. They will, of course, need the assistance of the Saints.

There is no reason why the interest may not continue if the Saints will go to with their might and do all they can to keep it up. I pray that they may. What we need in the church is beautifully expressed in a late poem of Ella Wheeler Wilcox entitled, "Leaners and Lifters." We need more lifters. The Saints should learn to stand alone and not depend upon some one to hold them up. They should not only stand alone, but they should assist some other weak one to get on his feet. When you see some one staggering, don't push him over, but rather help to steady him.

I have been rusticated in Kansas the past two weeks and preaching nearly every night. Expect to remain here some ten days longer and then return. Will the friends in the different parts of the district where I have promised labor please be patient for a few weeks and in due time I will come. I feel it my duty to answer all the calls out of organized branches first. Duty first, pleasure second. My duty is to labor among strangers, yet it is a pleasure to labor among friends.

I shall ever remember the kindness and true saintly feeling manifested towards me in my long yet short sojourn in Council Bluffs. After having labored so long it is gratifying that I still have the confidence of the Saints. I have at times wondered why it was that the Saints have all along been so pleased to have me labor among them, feeling, as I have, my weakness; but I now realize in this a fulfillment of a prophecy made by Father Watkins, president of the Lucas branch, when I commenced my ministerial labors, also one shortly afterwards, that in pursuing my calling I would be so blessed of the Lord that I would make friends for myself and the cause wherever I went. I have never lacked for friends and have had few if any enemies. Thank God for this blessing. The Saints have been ever mindful of my needs and have seemed more than pleased when an opportunity was afforded for showing their love and confidence which I shall never forget. With renewed diligence,

Yours humbly,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Editors Herald:—I make use of Herald columns to communicate with those of the Little Sioux district, for two reasons; that I may reach the more; and give correspondents a reason for not replying to their letters.

To those in general, I may say I have hopes of reaching my field by December; to those who have written me, my failure to reply is a lack of funds to do so.

"I DO NOT LIKE TO HEAR HIM PREACH!"

It is not infrequent that we hear the above expression regarding the efforts of some brother who has been doing his utmost to present the gospel truth; and what makes it the more lamentable is that it comes from the lips of a professed Latter Day Saint. That there are men far superior to others in mental capacity, in oratorical ability, and acquired knowledge none will deny; but are we warranted in permitting our likes and dislikes to so warp our natures that we do not care to worship God only when there is a man in the stand who comes up to our idea of fitness?

The following colloquy will illustrate this point:—

Bro. D. "Are you going to meeting this morning?"

Bro. I. "Who is going to preach?"

Bro. D. "Why, Bro. Q."

Bro. I. "O well, I won't go then; I don't care to hear him preach!"

Six hours later.

Bro. D. "Well, Bro. I., are you going to church this evening?"

Bro. I. "Why I don't know; who is going to preach?"

Bro. D. "I learn that Bro. A. is."

Bro. I. "O yes, I wouldn't miss meeting when he preaches. I always like to hear Bro. A.—!"

This spirit is creeping in all over the church, and one who permits it to predominate in his life is not moved upon by the Spirit, neither has he the love of God in his heart. If the same language was used by nonmembers it might be excusable, but when used by a Latter Day Saint it is reprehensible.

Carrying this argument one step farther, suppose you were living where you did not like any of those who preached; would you be warranted in staying away altogether? It is the duty of every Latter Day Saint to go to church regardless of whom may be occupying the stand. If the brother is young and inexperienced, make a special effort to be on hand and pray for him that God may bless him. The Saints are neglecting to encourage those who are weak. It is not very stimulating to a new beginner, or to one who is not so specially qualified as others, when called upon to preach at a conference, reunion, or even in one of the local churches, to observe a perceptible falling off in attendance on that particular occasion. It is your duty as the Saints of God to make a special effort to be present at this time; not to criticise, nor when some mistake of word or act is made to exchange with your neighbor that contemptible I-told-you-so smile, but rather with hearts lifted to God pray that his blessing may attend his servant in his weakness.

Again; requests are, from time to time, sent to those whose duty it is to appoint men for the several missionary fields, saying, "Send Bro. T. to labor with us, we do not want Bro. N." Is this right? Would it not be better to say, "Send us whomsoever the Spirit of God and wisdom may suggest and we will give him our unqualified support and prayers"? Which knows best, God or man? His plan is that his ministry are to be sent out by the direction of his Spirit and that Spirit to be given to those whose duty it is to appoint. It is the duty of every member of this church to rally to the support of every minister, whether local or traveling, so long as that brother is living right and trying to do the best he can. If he is not, you should report him to the proper officers.

In the cities and most large branches some of the members are becoming so punctilious or overnice that they do not want anyone to preach but the traveling ministry. Which knows best, God or you? The last revelation says that the Twelve and Seventy and as many of the high priests and elders as can travel are, as far as possible, to leave the branches to be cared for by the local talent and they to go out into the world. The local high priests and elders are the ones to preach in and look after the branches; and let me say right here that just as soon as these brethren, whose duty it is to look after the local work, will apply themselves thereunto and will creditably acquit themselves in the performance of the same, then, and gladly too, will the Twelve and Seventy be free and willing to wait upon their ministry in warning the world.

It seems to me that some of the Saints will have to be converted over again before they will willingly follow the order laid down in the law of God. God can endue a high priest or elder just the same as he can a seventy, and if he does not it is because there is something wrong with said high priest or elder. Is it not passing strange that the church is under the necessity of sending seventies unto localities where there are high priests and elders to do the work which they cannot or do not do, when at the same time the High Priests hold authority equal to or superior to the Seventy? Again; when seventies go into these localities they virtually perform the labor which the high priests and elders ought to do. Why is it? Is it because the local talent is not efficient? or is it because the Saints are becoming fastidious? or is it both? If the local laborers will not seek to acquit themselves they need not expect the support and confidence of the Saints. And again; if the Saints will not live their religion and be active in the cause unless they have one of the traveling ministry all the time, how can these men go out to the world and fulfill their legitimate calling? It is the duty of the local talent to do their best and the duty of the Saints to support them in it, even if they are not so able as others. "O," says one, "our local brethren are so behind the times; they talk so loud; they mispronounce words, and they are not graceful in the stand; they can't preach!" Well, may God forgive your fastidiousness!

This is the first step towards a collegiate education for the ministry.

The next thing will be to prescribe their teaching and pulpit attitude and have them preach and act to suit the congregation: If God has called a man and that man is doing his best, God is pleased with him with all his mistakes. Now can God be pleased with us when we treat that servant with indifference, or try to crush him by adverse criticism? If anyone thinks that the special work of the minister is to entertain, then you do not understand his mission. His special work is to instruct and if you go in the proper spirit you can receive instruction from the unlettered and country-bred preacher the same as from the polished one, and sometimes more so if the uneducated one has more of the Spirit of God. Many of the Saints are much harder to please than the world. This is the reason it is so hard for our elders to preach at General Conferences. If all was as it should be it would be easier to preach to a congregation of Saints than one composed wholly of nonmembers. A person who goes to church intent on criticising the effort of the minister has neither the love of God nor the proper respect that he should have for his brother.

I once heard a sister say, "O Bro. Williams; you should have heard Bro. Y. preach last Sunday; his discourse was just heavenly!"

"What was his text?" I asked.

"O, I don't know, but he preached so nice."

"Well, what did he talk about?"

"O, I can't tell a thing he said but his talk was just grand."

Now that man's sermon was a failure so far as this woman is concerned. She judged by sound and sight. He was a specially gifted speaker and a graceful orator and that was what she noticed. A man's voice may be harsh and uncultivated and his gestures may be crude, but if he has the love of God in his heart and the Spirit of God to inspire his mind he can instruct you; while on the other hand a man may be as gifted as Demosthenes and as graceful as Chauncey Depew and unless he has the Spirit of God he cannot benefit you spiritually. What a man says is of first importance, how he says it should be of secondary consideration.

Do you ever stop to think that Christ's ablest apostles were mostly "ignorant men" as viewed from a human standpoint? Have you forgotten that the ministers in Book of Mormon times worked during the week and preached on the Sabbath? Or did you ever read the Book of Mormon? If not please do so at once. Have you forgotten that Joseph Smith was an ignorant boy?

Does not Paul say these things?

For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.—1 Cor. 1: 21.

For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God.—1 Cor. 3: 19.

For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence.—1 Cor. 1: 26-29.

If the Saints keep on growing fastidious and overrefined, I forecast that in less than ten years they will not want a man to preach for them unless he is an elocutionist, an orator, and a fluent speaker; and then it will be very difficult to draw the line between our neighbors and ourselves.

We admit that some of our ministry are to blame for the dislike the Saints have for their preaching; and especially is this true among some of the local talent. Some think it does not take much to preach this gospel, while the Lord counseled the early elders to study, not for personal effect, but that they might become qualified to instruct. Many of the local brethren make no effort to improve and cannot preach any better than they could twenty years ago. Now either they never were called of God, or the gospel is not an educational factor, or such brethren are living beneath their privileges. No man is qualified to preach unless he is living up to his privileges and trying to do the best he can. Because God selects ignorant men is no reason for them always remaining so. While God never intended that they should become actors, or efficient in Delsarte, he does intend that they acquire that dignity that becomes his ministry. While it is not necessary for them to become elocutionists, they should seek to acquire that modulation of voice that will best convey intelligence to the hearers. In other words, remember that you are there to tell a story, now tell it in the most effective manner.

If the Saints see any grave mistake that a brother is making go to him and tell him of it, and, if he has the Spirit of Christ, he will receive you kindly, and profit by it. Don't talk about a man's mistakes to everyone but himself, and thus injure his influence, and he be none the wiser. Many times have I offered a suggestion in a kindly way and many times it has been received in the same spirit. Occasionally, however, some brother gets mad and resents it; but it does not hurt me, and I am only sorry that he did not understand my motive, and was, consequently, the loser. Never have I refused to take a correction offered, and I have been wonderfully benefited by applying the same. May God preserve me that I may never so far progress (?) that I will resent a correction given for my good.

Paul tells Timothy,

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Tim. 2: 15.

And to the Saints he says:—

I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.—1 Tim. 5: 21.

Also,

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak.—Rom. 15: 1.

If there are any of the brethren who are not seeking to acquit themselves, they should be kindly spoken to and counseled in the proper spirit.

Saints who are so particular that they only want certain men and will not support others are not deserving of any.

It would be better for us as ministers to always feel that we are in the stand to instruct, not merely to entertain or to show ourselves off to advantage; that we only need to talk loud enough to be heard; that it is best to emphasize our argument by logic and not by noise.

In everything be natural. Don't get in the habit of talking in a falsetto voice. There is no reason why the minister should have one way of talking in the stand and another one out of it. A great many of us are deficient in language; we mispronounce words; we use them in the wrong connection. This we should seek to rectify. I am satisfied that every man whom God has called he will equip and educate by his Spirit. There are numbers of men who, it is evident, were never called of God. There are others who have been called but who never appreciated it, and God has left them to themselves.

I am satisfied that there is not a man in the church to-day who has been called of God and holding the priesthood but what God would qualify him for his work. If he is a high priest or elder he will be able to preach, teach, expound, etc., and look after local work. I do not believe that certain men were called simply to administer to the sick, or to preside over the prayer and business meetings of the branch. When a man is set apart to the priesthood, he is blessed to perform all the duties belonging to said office. If the local brethren would seek to apply themselves to the work and acquit themselves as ministers of Christ, and the Saints would appreciate the efforts of every man of God, and if the church would refuse to sustain every man who was not doing his duty, then there would be no need of anyone using the expression heading this article; confidence would in a measure be restored, the work would receive new impetus, and the traveling ministry would then be unincumbered and could go forward in their work of warning the world.

That God may help us as ministers to acquit ourselves, and assist the Saints to appreciate the efforts of even the least of the brethren, is my humble prayer.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.

Conference convened with the Clear Lake branch, October 26-28. The organization was perfected by placing E. C. Briggs as chairman, Leonard Scott assistant, Otto Storey secretary, Starr Corless assistant. Branch reports: Buchanan 31, gain 5. Marcellus 13. Clear Lake 97; absent 17. Hartford 21, gain 2; absent 5. Coldwater 124, gain 11. Knox 40, gain 1; absent 4. Galien 119, gain 1. By sickness and the death of our worthy Bishop's agent, the books were put in the hands of Francis Granger, who reported from July 11, 1895, as follows: Total receipts $99.41; expenditures $58.79; due church $40.62. Elders reporting: E. C. Briggs baptized 5, S. W. L. Scott baptized 12, B. Corless baptized 7, A. C. Barmore, L. F. Daniel, L. B. Scott, and R. Alcott; Priests J. W. Kiefer, G. Corless, J. Emerick, G. F. Weston, and S. Bruce baptized 1; Teacher D. B. Teeters. District tent committee reported, and all money on hand was ordered to be turned over to the Bishop's agent. The following were elected delegates to General Conference: L. F. Daniel, Alma Barmore, J. Kiefer, Wesley McInterfer, John Shook, H. Richardson, Jesse Proud, John Erter, Frank Deller, Belle Royce, Cecil C. Flagler, Adam Smith, Francis Granger, L. B. Scott, O. H. Storey, Dudley Locke, Ann Locke, Leonard Scott, E. A. Blakeslee, Elsie Lockerby, F. J. Prettyman, and Robert Alcott. Leonard Scott was chosen president of district, Otto Storey secretary. Samuel Stroh was recommended as Bishop's agent. Leonard Scott, Starr Corless, and Francis Granger were chosen as committee on obituary. Samuel Stroh, Francis Granger, and G. A. Smith were ordained priests. Customary resolutions were passed, and one of the most successful and largest conferences ever held in the district closed. Adjourned to meet with the Coldwater Saints at call of president.

DEDICATION.

The dedication of the second house of worship in Utah built by the Reorganization occurred here on Sunday, November 3, 1895. President W. W. Blair, accompanied by his wife and daughter-in-law, was present, and he delivered the sermon. The dedicatory prayer was made by Hyrum O. Smith. The house was well filled with attentive listeners, the Saints coming from as far as Nephi (fifty-two miles) on the south and some from Camp Floyd on the west.

An especial degree of the Spirit prevailed and every one felt amply repaid for sacrifice in coming, and the Saints at Pleasant Grove felt as though God had accepted their offering. They deserve great credit for the persistency with which their efforts have been made in bringing the work to completion. The chapel is 22 x 32, built of brick, and the woodwork neatly grained and painted. Conspicuously over the pulpit appear the mottoes, "A free pulpit and an open Bible." "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." The Saints of the branch extend their thanks to all who have so nobly aided them to make their effort a success.

The following is a list of those contributing since last report. The exact cost of the building cannot be given, as many of the brethren worked unceasingly on the house, keeping no account of work done, deeming it sufficient reward to see a house dedicated to God's work, where they could labor and worship where none could molest or say them nay:—

A collection was taken up at the close of the services on Sunday, which amounted to $16.75; making a total of $206.67 contributed by nonmembers and those outside of Pleasant Grove branch.

HYRUM O. SMITH.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, Nov. 5.

The chapel of the Greenville branch, located one mile south and four and one half miles east of Lamoni, will be dedicated on Sunday, November 24. President Joseph Smith will preach the dedicatory sermon, nothing preventing; Bishop Kelley will also be present and take part. The services of the day will be as follows: Social meeting at 9:30 a. m.; dedicatory exercises at eleven o'clock; Sunday school at two p. m.; preaching at seven p. m. by Bishop Kelley. Singers from Lamoni are requested to attend.

ALFRED LOVELL, Sec.

ETZENHOUSER-TAYLOR DEBATE.

October 25, first session on second proposition. Dr. Taylor began by saying that as he was affirming for all the local churches he had a right to defend any one of them. Referred to charge of polygamy against Presbyterians in India. Admitted that there was a man who wanted to join the church without putting away his second wife, and that they concluded to wait till they heard from America. I put the word "visible" in the proposition. I believe there is an invisible kingdom of God. "Cannot see the kingdom of God." "Kingdom of God is within you"—in the hearts of men. I agree with Bro. Etzenhouser on the meaning of the word saint; it does not necessarily mean a holy person. A man can be told by what he seeks for. If you can say down in your hearts that you want to be good and do right, you belong to the invisible kingdom of God. Simon Magus' heart was not right; Peter did not tell him he was not baptized right. Visible kingdom of God is composed of the grand aggregate of all local churches. Nonessentials are things concerning which there has been no special commandment. The essentials are found where Peter confessed Christ. "How Christ died for our sins." In the visible church there are two ordinances: baptism and the sacrament of the Spirit, also the Lord's supper. These are all the essentials that I shall mention except one; the members must bring forth the fruits of the Spirit.

Bro. Etzenhouser: Presbyterian polygamy; the Doctor concedes that there was a case of polygamy under consideration, and referred to the church in America. They have taken it in on probation. There is not a minister in the Latter Day Saints Church that could not decide that question at once without sending to America. Dr. T. presumes wonderfully upon my knowledge of the Scriptures; he did not give one single reference to chapter or verse. If feeling makes right, then the Heathen are right. Let them admit Catholics. Are Protestants willing to stand with them? "Christ died for our sins." Dr. T. said this was what Paul preached. Let us see how Paul preached Christ. Turn to Hebrews 6 and read of the principles of the doctrine of Christ, which he taught. That is what we did at the tent. The doctrine of Christ includes the laying on of hands, but the Doctor does not teach that. He says there are "two ordinances except one." Bro. E. then gave some pointers toward a better creed.

Dr. Taylor read from Galatians 5: 22, 23, concerning fruits of the Spirit. A church that does not produce these, cannot be the church of Christ. Repentance implies a turning away from sin—not that alone, for some turn from one sin unto another. Turning from sin to God is repentance. This gospel Christ commanded us to carry everywhere. Why do we send missionaries to the Heathen? Because they will be lost if they do not hear of Christ. First, because Christ commanded us to. It is only where the gospel goes that women are equal to men. Told of a lady who was missionary to China, and what she saw and did. Brought back a kitchen god and gave it to Dr. Taylor.

Bro. Etzenhouser showed that repentance is a turning away from, and a forsaking of sin. A trip to China. Well, I enjoy descriptive work; but what has that to do with this proposition? Read from Larger Catechism and the M. E. Discipline. They say the "Scriptures are the only and sufficient rule of faith." Why then have they other books? They take uninspired books to interpret what they say is the only book inspired of God on the earth. Presbyterian idea of God: Incomprehensible, omnipresent, etc. But Matthew 11: 27 and John 14: 21; 17: 3 show us that men can know both God and Jesus Christ. God is not everywhere. Jesus prayed, "Our Father which art in heaven." Why did he not pray, Our Father who art "everywhere"? "Let us go down."—Genesis 11: 7. No need of God going down if he was everywhere. Decrees of God. "Unchangeably foreordained." Bible says whosoever will turn from sin shall save his soul. "Whosoever shall give you a cup of water . . . shall not lose his reward."—Mark 9: 41.

Catechism says that punishment shall be without intermission. Bible says certain sins shall not be forgiven in this world nor in the world to come; thereby implying that some sins would be forgiven in the world to come.

Second session. Dr. Taylor: I will hand two questions to Elder Etzenhouser: 1. Is baptism valid when not administered by proper authority? 2. Have Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodist Episcopal, Disciples, etc., proper authority? Begin to think that Elder E. is one of those who cannot see the kingdom of God. He says religion is not so much a matter of the heart, as of the head. It begins to look like he had a heathen religion. An excellent lady in the Disciple Church became partly deranged. According to Elder E., her head not being right, her heart was wrong. Here comes the only man living or dead, that I ever heard of, that knows God; that is Etzenhouser. Strongest mind will reel when it thinks of the eternity of God. Read from Job; Isaiah 55; 40: 28; Romans 11: 33. I don't know much about hell, and I'm trying to keep from knowing. Bible is easy to be understood regarding man's duty; but the philosophy of the Bible is hard to understand. Presbyterians never had a confession of faith as a test of fellowship. A great majority of it is a good book. Elder E. asks, "Why the difference among the churches?" Well, I'll answer that: When we began to crystallize out of the Reformation we were foolish enough to believe what he does. We were foolish enough to divide on matters of small importance. We are getting away from that. If I could make every Christian a Presbyterian by the turn of my hand, I would not do it. Elder E. is a witness of miracles among Presbyterians as you heard in the tent last summer. One proof that our church is the church, we have the administration of angels.

Bro. Etzenhouser: These questions the Doctor handed me, what a dodge. We are not here to ask questions, but to discuss. But I will answer them for him: 1. Answer, No. 2. Answer, All who have authority from God are proper authority. "Heartless service, or religion." Pretty compliment the Doctor pays you who attended our meetings at the tent last summer. Did you hear a "heartless religion" taught? Dr. T. himself was present till we announced a reply to an attack on our faith, which he knew would be uncomfortable for him. What have Presbyterians got a catechism for, if it is "not a test"? What do they want with it? Showed that there is a lack of unity among the Protestants. Read from Herald and Presbyter—Mistakes of the New Testament. Examined Gilbert, Clark Braden, et al., Taylor's witnesses.

Dr. Taylor: He was afraid to give direct answer to my questions. Why, you could not draw him out with a forty horse power corkscrew. How did Whitmer know he had the original manuscript? David in hell. This was spoken concerning the burial and resurrection of Christ. These various churches are each integral parts of the Church of Christ. We believe in the ministration of angels; you know the angels carry our departed loved ones home; the rustle of their wings is around the bed of the dying. Related two instances of individuals dying happy. A lady calling her mother by name in her dying moments: "We won't accept this blighted, cursed Mormon faith, where we have to go to hell and get out again." We have hundreds of evidences of friends going home to rest. These things do not happen outside of the kingdom of God. Jesus says he will forgive our sins. No half way about God's forgiveness of sins. (Sang an old-time song.) When this debate shall have ended, Mormonism will be killed too dead to skin.

Bro. Etzenhouser: Dr. Taylor concedes miracles to-day. He does not defend the teaching of his catechism. Let him take notes the next time. Begins to look to me as though he never saw a debate, much less have anything to do with one. Says I claimed to impeach American Encyclopedia by Whitmer. See his glaring misrepresentation! I impeach it by Bancroft. Read Dr. Schaff. Antiquity of the gospel. Jesus said he came to finish the work of his Father. That would show that God's work was already begun. Church in the wilderness. Examined the doctrines of total depravity and foreordination, showing their absurdity.

October 30, third session. Dr. Taylor: I have taken the position that the kingdom of God is hid in the heart. Those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled. I believe that any man, anywhere, in America or China, who seeks for righteousness, is in the kingdom of God. Etzenhouser says by his logic, that a man may be ever so humble and ever so good, if he does not belong to his church he cannot be saved. Born of water and the Spirit has no reference to the baptism that we administer. I believe baptism necessary; I could not be saved without it. But others cannot understand these things. Born again means to beget; to come into existence, etc; the water that God and Christ use. John 4: 10. He would have given the living water. That is the kind of water that Christ meant. See Isaiah 50: 1; Revelation 22: 17. Remember, water and the Spirit. Ezekiel 36: 25, "I will sprinkle clean water upon you." The Lord says, "I," "I" will do this. He did not mean water that we baptize with. Sprinkle clean water—born of the Spirit. Bro. E. has not said much about authority. Authority in his church began by Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery baptizing each other. He said I would not challenge their elders again. Well, that depends; if they take their tent to Wilkesville they will find the old man hot on their trail. Another debate will not be needed in McArthur. Joseph Smith condemned the creeds; Bro. E. passed his creed all over the house the first evening of the debate. They call it an epitome. Confession of faith a good book, but wonderfully behind the times. Half of our members in McArthur have not read it. One use we make of it is when we ordain ministers; we like to see if they are about on the track. We ask them if they accept it. Not necessarily every word of it.

Bro. Etzenhouser: I congratulate Dr. T.

that he has at last made an attempt at scriptural argument, says kingdom of God is in the heart. Well, he may have a large heart, but not large enough for that. Jesus says, "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 8: 11. "Kingdom of God cometh not with observation." Dr. Taylor's argument would include the Pharisees in the kingdom of God. The Savior was addressing them. There is no kingdom of any kind that can exist in the heart. There must be in a kingdom laws, officers, territory, etc. Let Christ be his own interpreter regarding John 3: 5. If Christ meant Spirit both times, why did he not say so? Christ's own act defines what he meant: "Went up straightway out of the water."—Matt. 3: 16. So you see he misapplies scripture and locks horns with Presbyterianism. Read from Herald and Presbyterian a statement: "Our mode is sprinkling." The Doctor said God would do the sprinkling (which is correct), while his brethren say, "Our mode is sprinkling." Here is Presbyterianism against itself. He said, our teaching was that their loved ones were in the bottomless pit. Do you not remember that we preached that God will reward all men according to their works? that there is a glory of the sun, another of the moon, another of the stars, etc.? Why does he speak as he does? Does he want to presume upon your credulity? Said he could not be saved without baptism, but intimated that others could. Peter said, "Be baptized every one of you."—Acts 2: 38. Authority; he says I am loth to say anything about it. Well, I'll read some for him. (Read Revelations 14: 6, 7.) Do you remember my presenting this? We claim that this angel came to Joseph Smith and conferred authority to preach the gospel to every nation. He referred to debating again. Well, he need not refer to that while there is a challenge here staring him in the face, and good during his natural lifetime. There is a difference between our epitome of faith and the Presbyterian creed. The epitome is in harmony with the Bible, while the creed is not in harmony with the Bible, as I have already shown. Dr. T. says that revelation is complete in the Bible; we claim that it is not. Others say God does not speak. How can there be authority if God does not reveal himself? If I go out as a salesman for Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, without any authority from that firm, it would soon be on my trail and have me dealt with because I acted without authority. Now is it possible that man can do with God's work what he cannot with man's? "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest" to send forth laborers; "called of God as was Aaron," is the teaching of the Bible. I referred to Isaiah 11: 11. Did Dr. T. pay any attention to it? Malachi 3: 1-4. Messenger to be sent and Lord to come suddenly to his temple. That was not Christ's first coming, but refers to his second coming.

Dr. Taylor: He seems to think that because his creed is small, and ours large, that therefore ours must be false. Epitome says, "We believe the Bible as far as translated correctly." Why did they not say, "We have it correctly translated"? It says, "We believe that God by his Spirit will continue to reveal." Why did they not say, "Yes, and we have the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants"? Any local church is the church of Christ if it begins with the bed rock: "Christ the Son of God." A great deal of our differences are because we try to peer too far into the mysteries of God and into the future.

Bro. Etzenhouser: The reason we have not got everything on the epitome is because it is not large enough. Have we kept the Inspired Translation back? Have we kept the Book of Mormon back, when there is a challenge for him to meet on its divinity? You will notice he has not touched Malachi 3: 1-4. See verse 4: "Offering of Judah and Jerusalem shall be pleasant unto the Lord." It was not pleasant when Christ came the first time. Joseph and Oliver got their authority from the "messenger" which came to "prepare the way." We give due credit to the first reformer, and to all of them. Calvin (though honest) said, Luther did not bring it as it should be, so I'll try. Did Luther bring the church as it was in the days of Christ? Difference between reformation and restoration. None but God can restore the church as it was. A man has three sons: one concludes to be a lawyer; another that he will be a doctor; the other concludes to be a preacher. So they all go and learn their professions. Now is not one called of God as much as the other? Read from Herald and Presbyterian a man "granted temporary license for three months." Did you ever read of Paul or Peter being granted license for three months? Lord has a people among Babylon, and he says, "Come out of her, O ye my people." Probation after death. Heathen inquire what became of their forefathers, who never heard of the gospel. What can Protestants answer? How about those who died in the dark ages?

Fourth session. Dr. Taylor: Enjoyed debate when it does not last too long. Examined Isaiah 11: 11; called attention to wolf dwelling with the lamb, etc. Has that day come yet? Now then, in "that day shall the Lord set his hand the second time," etc. Baptism for the dead. Does the Reorganized Church practice this? All the different churches fulfill the essentials of the Scriptures. All show that they are churches of Christ by the fruits of the Spirit which they show forth. Death of their people attended by the ministrations of angels. There have been two great false prophets: Mahomet and Joseph Smith. The work that each performed was much alike. Koran and Book of Mormon very similar. Comes to us on the testimony of one very bad man.

Bro Etzenhouser: Isaiah 11: 11, the Doctor read right, but a day is not always only twenty-four hours or the light part thereof. "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years."—2 Peter 3: 8. Lord set his hand once, but was to "set it again the second time." Who are the "remnant"? The two and a half tribes that were not carried into captivity. Baptism for dead; it was a practice anciently and formerly, but the Reorganized Church has had no word from the Lord on the matter. We are willing to act when the Lord speaks. Christian Evangelist says that Baptists are not the Church of Christ. Dr. T. said none of the churches he affirmed for claimed to be exclusively the Church of Christ; but the Disciples do. Then he bumps their heads together and says, "You are all one." Read from Our Position (Disciple), "We do not acknowledge sects." The apostasy of B. Young foretold in the Scriptures. What does he want to talk about the Book of Mormon for when there is a challenge here for him to meet? Let him accept it. I'll give him a chance to pile dirt on Joseph Smith. Or, if he is willing, for the same length of time as this debate, I will affirm Joseph Smith to be a prophet of God. How is the word to be preached? Answer, In sound doctrine adapted to the capacity of the hearer. How many of you understand the Doctor's Greek?

Dr. Taylor: Fruits of L. D. S. not exactly glorious. Sixteen reputable ladies testify against Joseph Smith. Unity of Protestantism: Methodists are uniting, so are Presbyterians. Christ said his church should never die. Fruits of Christianity: Men will not locate where there are no churches. All the care for the little folks came in with Christ. How does it happen that there is no civilization except where the Church of Christ goes? Ministration of angels attend our dying beds. The old faith stands the test.

Bro. Etzenhouser: Dr. T. mentions sixteen reputable ladies who testified against Joseph Smith. You will find seven of them buried with Brigham Young—his polygamous wives. Blessing of children done away with among Protestants. Laying on of hands is for four purposes, while they practice it for one purpose only. Gifts of the Holy Ghost denied. Wanted me to drink a quart of laudanum to prove that Christ's words in Mark 16:16-18, were true. Said he expected to meet Bro. Arrington [a colored L. D. S.] in heaven; yet he calls our faith a "monstrous delusion."

Bro. E. presented a summary of his arguments in his last speech which we cannot give the readers, as we failed to get it. He also composed and read a letter, that he suggested that Dr. Taylor write and send to Lane's Theological Seminary at Cincinnati, Ohio. In this letter Bro. E. brought in every epithet and phrase that Dr. T. had used against the Saints. It was amusing, and yet had a good effect. So ended the Etzenhouser-Taylor debate. We feel that the truth did not suffer.

BORN.

PEAK.—To Bro. Warren E. and Sr. Mary E. Peak, at Netawaka, Kansas, September 30, 1895, a daughter; named Ferol Sylvia. Blessed October 24, 1895, by Elders J. T. Davis and W. E. Peak.

DUNLOP.—At South Arm, Michigan, October 30, 1894, to Bro. William and Sr. Belle Dunlop, a daughter, and named Nellie Cecil. Blessed at South Arm, Michigan, November 29, 1894, by Elders F. C. Smith and C. G. Lewis.

MARRIED.

PETTERSON—SLACK.—At the home of the bride's parents, Los Angeles, California, Thursday, at 11:30 a. m. October 17, 1895, Elder A. Carmichael officiating, Mr. John E. Petterson, of Los Angeles, and Sr. Mary Slack. May the peace of the Master be theirs.

DIED.

JONES.—Two miles south of Higbee, Missouri, October 18, 1895, Willie, son of Robert D. and Elda Jones, aged 3 years, 5 months, and 19 days. Funeral services at Saints' chapel, Sunday, October 20, by Elders A. J. Cato, and J. Waltenbaugh. Burial in Higbee cemetery.

BAILEY.—At her home in Davis City, Iowa, Sr. Ida, wife of Bro. Albert Bailey. She was born August 13, 1877; baptized in March, 1893; married March 3, 1895; died October 10, 1895. During her illness she showed great patience, never complaining. She would not resort to medical aid but rather to the ordinance of the house of the Lord. She prayed to go and be at rest; and just before the last she bade all her friends good-bye and requested them to tell the church good-bye, with the hope that they might all meet where parting is no more. She passed away feeling that her reward was sure. Funeral services conducted by Elder J. R. Lambert assisted by Elder H. R. Harder. She was buried at Andover, Missouri, by her mother's side, by her request.

GROESBECK.—At Unadilla, Nebraska, October 17, 1895, Sr. Lurinda Groesbeck, aged 64 years, 2 months, and 29 days. For a good many years Sr. Groesbeck has been a member of the Nebraska City branch; received by vote, she having been baptized when but a young girl. Her parents having lived at Kirtland and Nauvoo, came to Western Iowa and settled about four miles north of Glenwood in Mills County, and in the first settlement of Nebraska they came to Otoe County and located in about the year 1856. Her mother, Mrs. Hannah Faunce, was about the first in Southern Nebraska to unite with the Reorganized Church, which she did in 1861. Her funeral was largely attended; four of her sisters, two brothers, four daughters, and one son, besides a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren present. The sermon was preached by the Rev. George E. Driver, of the United Brethren Church.

KELLEY.—Bro. Frank L. Kelley, of Indian River, Maine, passed from this life to the paradise of rest July 25. He was born in Calais, Maine, August 14, 1873. Possessed of an amiable disposition and those sterling qualities that make noble men, he endeared himself to scholars, teachers, men of business, and a large circle of friends. Having a tendency to pulmonary phthisis, he was unable to complete his course at Bucksport Academy, and was also obliged to give up teaching. Having been taught the gospel from childhood, he became obedient to its teachings June 25, 1893; was ordained a priest November 7, 1894. His parents, who had watched the progress of the same disease with other children, had no hope of his recovery, unless God, to whose service they had consecrated him, should manifest his power in his behalf. He sought in every way to qualify himself for the ministry; was associated with Elder U. W. Greene until February, 1895, when he was obliged to return home. For five months the conflict continued, then the reaper came and left the home circle desolate and the village in sorrow. Funeral from the Baptist church conducted by Elder U. W. Greene, sermon by Joseph Luff; Bro. R. Bullard also assisting.

RODGER.—At El Toro, California, October 13, 1895, the twin boy of Bro. Glaud H. and Sr. Nancy Rodger, aged 1 month and 9 days.

BRAY.—At Little Deer Isle, Maine, October 16, 1895, Everett Bray. Born at Little Deer Isle, Maine, October 6, 1855; baptized March 10, 1895, by Elder J. C. Foss, who also conducted the funeral services.

MAUZEY.—At Edgerton Junction, Missouri, October 15, 1895, Edna Alice, daughter of Bro. T. J. and Sr. A. E. Mauzey, aged 1 year and 11 months.

MOORMAN.—At Edgerton Junction, Missouri, October 16, 1895, Laura Maud, daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Florence Moorman, aged 2 years, 10 months, and 4 days.

MAUZEY.—At Edgerton Junction, Missouri, October 20, 1895, Lewis Alma, son of F. M. and A. A. Mauzey, aged 2 years and 10 months.

CORNETT.—At Edgerton Junction, Missouri, October 21, 1895, Cyrus, son of Bro. and Sr. Cornett, aged 2 years, 11 months, and 11 days.

KLEINSTIVER.—In Petrolea, October 18, 1895, Ameilie Kleinstiver. Born June 5, 1877, at Dashwood, Hay County, Ontario; baptized June 5, 1892, at Petrolea, Ontario, by Elder E. Delong. Funeral service in the Saints' church, Petrolea, by Elder George Hampshire; text Revelation 14:13.

THOMAS.—At Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, October 14, 1895, Elizabeth May, daughter of Sr. Sarah Thomas, aged 4 years and 5 days. A sister and three brothers, with mother and grandparents, mourn the loss. Her gentle, loving spirit was endeared to all who knew her. Funeral services conducted by Elder George H. Hulmes.

LEHMAN.—At his home at Seeburger, Missouri, September 26, 1895, Bro. John Lehman, aged 25 years, 9 months, and 1 day. He was baptized by Elder Ivor Davies ten days before his death. He was firm in the faith, with the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral sermon at the schoolhouse by Elder Noah N. Cooke, September 28, 1895, to a large congregation of relatives and friends; text, Job 14:14.

GARNER.—October 12, 1895, little Alma, son of John P. and Hattie Garner. The sweet babe was taken sick at Logan reunion. It was a sad loss to the family, as his sweet disposition endeared him to all. Funeral service at Saints' chapel, Magnolia, Iowa, October 15, to a large number, of all faiths. Sermon by Elder Alma Fyrando.

THE HYMNAL IS COMING.

left for us to do but to supply the money ourselves or borrow it, paying a good per centage for it.

Now these are the facts in the matter, and we ask you to consider them and ask yourselves how long an institution would stand in the world under similar conditions, and what caused the Master to say that the children of the world were "wiser in their generation than the children of light." Where in the Scriptures is it written that we have claim upon the Master before we have done our part? Let us realize that to be in touch with this great latter-day work it is necessary to be acquainted with and help every department of it.

TRACT FUND

Every mail that comes bears a request from some one of the ministry in the field to send them tracts and reading matter to distribute free to help open up new places; and thousands in the church can testify what these tracts have done for them; yet not one since I came to the office in July last, has remitted one cent to help pay the postage on these tracts; nor do I write this to find fault because it has not been done, but to show the possibilities for good there are here with the proper help from the church abroad.

I would suggest that each branch of the church start a "tract fund," and send, every month, amounts received to the Bishop or to the Business Manager of the Herald Office. Who will be the first to make the move? God will bless the effort.

Brethren, we ask your help to move forward the publishing department. We call especial attention to the young who for years have been reading the Autumn Leaves, one of the best publications for the young and their advancement that is published on this broad earth. The editor of that magazine is making a sacrifice of her life to make it a success; but I am sorry to say that the subscribers are over $3,000 in arrears on their subscription, thereby causing her efforts and sacrifice of time and brain to also be a loss.

This causes me to inquire, Are we indeed a band of brethren and sisters, bound together by the ties of love? And have we one another's interest at heart as God's children should have?

Once more we appeal to the church to unite with us and stand shoulder to shoulder to push forward every department of God's work.

And, once more, and to increase our faith, confidence, and our good works toward one another, we ask and appeal for cash in advance for the Hymnal; and in justice to all we will have to first send Hymnals to those who first send in their money to help get it out. General Conference directed its publication when the sale of one thousand was guaranteed, so we are ahead of time, as this has not yet been done, by almost one third, as subscriptions are not guarantees. I am sorry to say, as our books are the witnesses; and the Herald Office books testify against many hundreds. So send in your cash with orders.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MOR-MON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED

AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

The Truth by Three Witnesses—Christianity in the First and Nineteenth Century—The Ancient and Modern Pharisee—The Revelations of Emanuel Swedenborg—Modern "Spirit Mediums," and Hypnotic Religious "Revival," as Against Reason and Bible Testimony, and in Contradistinction to the work of "The Latter Day Seer," Examined in the Light of Facts and Human History—A Rational and Scriptural Exposition or Explanation of Old and New Testament Prophecy and Doctrine.

A Revision of "Spiritual Gifts," with supplement and appendix.

Paper covers..... 25
Full cloth binding..... 50

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

AUTHORSHIP OF THE PENTATEUCH.

THE diversity of views obtaining among a certain class of Biblical critics as to the authorship of the Pentateuch is well illustrated by the following passage from a volume recently published in London as one of a series of "Books for Bible Students." The work is intended as a vindication of the ancient belief in the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch. The passage is as follows:—

"We might almost say in regard to the critics, tot homines, quot sententiae [as many minds as men]. Dr. Driver claims that there is an agreement among them, but the facts are quite different. Not in details only but in vital matters the critics disagree. All agree Moses did not write much, but in regard to what he did write or as to the limits of the supposed documents on which the Pentateuch was based, and the age of them, no two are alike. Twenty men might easily disagree that the earth was not round. The value of their denial is estimated by the sort of explanation they give of the earth's movements. The critics agree that Moses was not the author of the Pentateuch, but their harmony means nothing when we find them in entire discord among themselves as to how the Pentateuch came into existence. The introduction of De Wette-Schrader recognizes the three elements adopted by Dr. Driver, and of course they agree. When one man borrows from another it is likely that there will be agreement. Wellhausen and Robertson Smith agree as touching the post-exilic theory, because the Scottish divine simply copied the speculations of the German. But you have not to read far before you discover traces of difference between the members of these respective pairs. Some think Hilkiyah wrote Deuteronomy, others that Jeremiah forged it. Ewald attributed it to a prophet who had taken refuge in Egypt during the time of Manasseh. Graf puts it down to the reign of Josiah, Vaihinger to that of Hezekiah. In regard to the documents Ewald recognizes nine, Hupfeld four in Genesis only, Knobel six, Bleek recognizes only a Jehovis who expanded the Elohist fragment. The newer school of Graf and Wellhausen puts Deuteronomy before the priestly code, whereas most others have thought it to belong to the exilic or even post-exilic age. All this looks rather unlike agreement."—Literary Digest.

IN PRAISE OF THE HOLY INQUISITION.

THE Alt-Katholische Volksblatt, a German paper devoted to the interest of the so-called Old-Catholics, who deny infallibility of the Pope, offers its readers something rather novel at the end of the nineteenth century. It is a translation of an article in praise of the Inquisition and its tortures, from the Analecta Ecclesiastica, a Roman publication edited under the special supervision of the Vatican. The writer of the article, Father Pius a Longonio, describes all those who condemn the Inquisition as "sons of darkness," and glorifies the memory of Thomas Torquemada, the Spanish Grand Inquisitor. He says:—

"No doubt the sons of darkness will roll their eyes and grind their teeth when they read this, and they will talk of medieval intolerance. But it is useless to answer them. It is much better to demonstrate that Llorente and other historians of the Inquisition are utterly in the wrong. It is clearly proven that the Catholic historians are neither liars nor dreamers when they assert that there were apostates in those days who secretly favored Judaism and worked for its advance, while outwardly they pretended to be Christians and even wore the garb of the priest. The laws of the church and of the state therefore justly opposed them. Wolves should remain with the wolves; when they enter the fold in sheepskins, they must be driven out with fire and sword. Far be it from us to follow the lines of befogged liberalism, and to fancy that the Holy Inquisition needs to be defended. Neither the rude ways of those times nor the blind zeal or the stern character of the priests need be mentioned in defense of our Holy Mother the Church. We need no sophism. The happy watchfulness of the Holy Inquisition preserved, in Spain and elsewhere, religious peace and that firmness of faith which is to this day the glory of the Spanish people. O blessed flames of the stake! Through them a small number of very cunning people were removed, but thousands upon thousands of legions of souls were preserved from the pit of error, and thus from everlasting damnation. Society was saved, and the country freed from the danger of civil war. Honor to the memory of Torquemada! He decreed that Jews and infidels should not be forced into baptism, but he also managed to prevent the spread of Judaism and apostasy among the baptized people."—Translated for Literary Digest.

Among the women who play a part in the politics of the world are the Queen of Madagascar, the Dowager Empress of China, the Queen Regent of Spain, the Dowager Empress of Russia, the Queen of Corea, the Queen Regent of the Netherlands, and the Queen of England. Each of these royal personages, with a single exception, seems to have her full share of trouble. In no one of the republics of the world do we observe any woman of political importance.

 Is restored to earth again,
 As 'twas said by an Apostle,
 We the Spirit may obtain;
 By obedience
 To redemption's only plan.

2 God has given us his Spirit,
 For we have obeyed his word;

THE HYMNAL IS COMING !

IN about thirty days the much-talked-of Hymnal will be ready to place in the hands of the church. The committee appointed to compile it, after much patient labor, completed their work creditably to themselves and the church. It was then placed in the hands of the electrotypers to prepare plates for the printers; and the Board of Publication, to facilitate matters and get the work out promptly, and to guard against errors, placed one of the committee in Chicago to proofread and correct any errors in music or words that might be in the original, or such typographical errors as might be made by those making the plates, and for the purpose of getting it out without delay, which in their wisdom was the proper thing to do. After an expense of almost $500.00, and $150.00 additional for paper and material, it is ready for the printer. It will then be ready for binding, which will cost about $200.00 more before the first thousand are ready to mail; and it will cost from $75 to $100.00 to pay Uncle Sam before he will deliver them.

I call your attention to these few facts for two reasons: First, to answer the criticisms upon the management of the publishing department in ordering cash in advance on this book; second, to show every stockholder in this institution a part of the responsibility that in our judgment rests upon him.

Let us examine the present existing conditions. The church has found it necessary to establish a publishing department for the furthering of God's kingdom; and in harmony with law both human and divine they so organize, and it becomes a part of the church, and in which all alike have an interest and become partners to its success by the covenant they make with the church by entering its fold.

The Board of Publication, appointed by the church, having called upon your humble servant to leave home and friends and come here and take charge of the business part of the publishing house, we find the Saints divided into two classes principally, with few exceptions. One class looks upon the office as a private institution, run in the interests of the few; the other class looks upon it as public property from which they can take all they can without giving anything in return. But, thank God, there are a few who are laboring for the building up of this department in every way they can, seeking to assist this part of God's kingdom; and had it not been for the help of the outgoing Business Manager in time of need, this department would be a thing of history, of the past.

Our labor here we feel to be temporary, and it is not for glory or gain, but because of our love for the success of this glorious latter-day work in all its departments that we make this appeal through the pages of the Herald, which should be used for better purposes.

We notice in the Herald of October 7 a brother's criticism on our demand for cash in advance for the Hymnal.

We doubt the wisdom of such advice as that from a traveling minister, who is sent out to represent the interests of God's kingdom in all its departments; and this we believe to be to the hurt of the treasury of God's storehouse, and amounts to practically instructing the Saints not to pay money into the treasury until the work is done. Such teaching is equivalent to saying that if his preaching is not considered worth the allowance given his family, to let the family go hungry.

Now, we look upon this demand or request for cash in advance for the Hymnal merely as a request to the stockholders to put up the means to publish that which they have ordered done, and in return for it they get value received in the publication when completed. Is this not a reasonable demand? If not, where is the money to come from?

For the information of the brother and for the information of the church, the present management have this to say: We would rather have only five hundred subscriptions for the Hymnal accompanied by the cash than five thousand without cash,—such as are attached to other publications of the office that the management have been compelled to carry on the books from two to ten years without any return, and in the meantime, by reason of your neglect, compelled to borrow money at from six to eight per cent interest for the privilege of carrying such names. Brethren, is this just? Is it right or in harmony with present revelation which says, Saints "shall pay for that which they receive." (See Doctrine and Covenants 72:3.)

Here is a fair business statement of facts: Here is one of the departments of God's church—the publishing department, from which you as a body demand a certain work which will require an outlay of about $1,000.00, and you place a man in charge of it and place no means in his hands to do the work.

Now, there are but two ways of getting it. If his faith is not sufficient to call upon God to supply stock, and material, and food for his family, while doing the work without money and without price, or in the absence of being instructed to go fishing for it as Peter was, which we confess our faith is not equal to, he cannot use either way. But as past experience has taught us that a little faith coupled with a good deal of works has brought better returns, then there is nothing:

WHY APPEAL TO THE COURTS OF THE LAND?

WE have been written to by several in regard to the action of the church in the Temple Lot suit. Among these letters occur questions like the following:—

1. Was the church compelled to go to law; or did it enter suit?
2. Was the mind of the Lord sought for and obtained in regard to the same?
3. If not, was it not considered of sufficient importance to have obtained the counsel of the Lord in a case that would cost the church thousands of dollars, even if gained? And more especially so, there being no means to carry on the suit without taking it from the tithing and offerings given for the support of the ministry?

To these we reply:—

1. The church began the suit. The lot in question was held in possession by a small party of men who claimed to be the church in succession of the church organized April 6, 1830. All efforts to reach an understanding with this body of believers in the angel's message through the Palmyra Seer, failed, unless we were willing to discard the Book of Covenants and all revelations after some time in 1834, not specifically stated. This the church could not concede. Time was running against the claim, and it would soon have elapsed when those in possession would by such possession acquire title whether their deeds were good, or otherwise. It therefore became a necessity to begin the suit. This answers the first half of question number one; the church was compelled to go to law.

2. The mind of the Lord had been given years ago pointing out the land; and so far as is known to us this was never annulled, or countermanded. There as also a command given soon after the Saints were driven from Missouri, to "importune at the feet of the Judge"; to gather in the regions round about, and be prayerful and humble and we should find favor with the people, while we were saying unto them in authority, Redress us of our wrongs. In the absence of any other command expressive of the mind of the Lord in the matter, this was acted upon. No specific appeal to the Lord on the subject was publicly or officially made by the church, nor was any such appeal thought to be needed as the word already received seemed to warrant the action.

3. The subject was deemed of sufficient importance for the church to instruct by resolution of conference, directing the Bishopric to take steps to remove the cloud from the title; as had been done in the case of the Kirtland temple. It was fully canvassed in conference and the propriety of the step decided after all had been heard.

The question as to the expense and the source whence it was to be supplied was not specially taken into account, for the reason that the action of the Bishopric being ordered, carried with it the authority to pay the necessary cost of the proceeding out of the general fund not otherwise appropriated. The cost was not known, nor was it supposed that so plain a case would be so held by the courts as to compel a resort to the higher court to get its merit decided. In view of these facts the Bishop has shown wisdom, and a due regard to the feeling of the great majority in asking the people to assist the fund to further prosecute directly, not feeling willing to further draw on the general fund, unless forced to do so by necessity; which it is hoped will not be the case.

GRACELAND COLLEGE—THE CORNER STONE LAID.

ON Tuesday, November 12, in the afternoon, the corner stone of Graceland College was laid with impressive and fitting ceremonies. The exercises of the day began at two o'clock in the afternoon and were in charge of Bishop E. L. Kelley, of the College Committee.

The weather was fine and contributed much to the interest in and enjoyment of the occasion. Lamoni's citizens turned out practically en masse, and business was about suspended. The interest of the people of the town and vicinity was unquestionably thorough, and all, young and old, took up the spirit of the exercises.

The college project has been watched with solicitous interest from its inception, and that interest has grown with the growth of the movement, and will doubtless continue to increase as the college work is shown to be a success and its benefits become more and more apparent. The citizens of Lamoni and our people interested in the permanent growth and general welfare of our young city have been thoughtful enough to foresee that something more than mere ordinary material growth is necessary to its welfare; that if the important matter of education was not sufficiently provided for, and fostered, and encouraged, and its advantages afforded, the younger and progressive elements would be obliged largely to transfer their interests, if not their time, to other places where such advantages are to be had. The College project has therefore been watched with unabated interest and the laying of the corner stone was witnessed with a sense of satisfaction evidenced by the close attention of the spectators, who listened intently and in whom was apparent the spirit of deep concern rather than of noisy enthusiasm.

The procession from the center of town to the college grounds was of good size, composed of carriages and other vehicles, the Junior Band, college students, pupils from the high school, east and west side grammar and intermediate and primary schools, followed by many on foot. The exercises opened with music by the band and a song by the choir, "America" being the appropriate selection. This was followed with prayer by Elder H. A. Stebbins, after which another song was rendered. Speeches were then made by the following and in the order named: Mayor W. W. Scott, President Joseph Smith, Hon. Z. H. Gurley, Prof. D. F. Lambert, Principal of Lamoni Schools and member of the College Board, and Elder A. H. Smith, also member of College Board. President Smith formally laid the corner stone. It bears the following inscription: "Graceland College, Nonsectarian; Erected 1895; Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints." The stone was furnished and inscription carved gratuitously, by Mr. Robbins, of Des Moines, Iowa. Mayor Scott reviewed the founding and growth of Lamoni, stating that its founders contemplated the establishment of a place where peace and the advantages accruing from it might abound, as encouraged by the settling of a class of people who fostered education. The past history of Lamoni's people, in providing good general schools and a high school, were in evidence that they were progressive. He welcomed the college on behalf of the incorporation and its citizens.

President Joseph Smith, Chairman of the College Building Committee also Chairman of the Board of Directors, in his address expressed the pleasure he derived from the occasion. One misfortune that had happened to most institutional localities was the spirit of sectarianism that limited and narrowed institutions of learning fostered by various religious organizations, by which intellectual development was hampered and the full, complete growth of individuals greatly hindered if not rendered impossible. Good minds had been developed under influences that tended to religious and general narrowness and bigotry. This result had compelled the American people to accept the idea that there must be an entire separation of church and state to insure full liberty of mind and conscience. Those appointing the Building Committee and Board of Directors were united in the sentiment that it should be conducted on nonsectarian lines. Its doors were to be open and give unhindered opportunity to all who sought the benefits of higher education. The moral welfare of students would be looked after, leaving them free to make their own choice of religious belief. He believed it possible to carry on the work of education in this broad and free spirit.

President Smith stated that copies of the Chicago Times-Herald, Inter Ocean, and Tribune; the Lamoni Saints' Herald, Independent Patriot, College City Chronicle, Autumn Leaves, Gospel Quartermies; Zion's Ensign; also Inspired Holy Scriptures, Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and Articles of Incorporation, had been placed in the corner stone.

State Representative Gurley traced the disadvantages of one lacking the privileges of higher education, and made a strong plea for unity of purpose that the institution be pushed to completion and its work extended.

Professor Lambert presented the cause of education as the cause of humanity. Educational work had gone hand in hand with civil and religious liberty in the mental and moral progress of the American people. Educational institutions should be welcomed and their work aided by all. He would see the spirit of this institution as broad and liberal as truth itself, with room on the platform for all who would seek to enter it, without distinction of race, color, or sex. Absolute equality was essential to full opportunity that truth might obtain supremacy and error do as little harm as possible.

Elder A. H. Smith forecasted the future development of this portion of country and the city of Lamoni. One railroad now passed, running east and west; another was expected to run north and south. Our town, already a center of population, would grow in influence and acquire prestige with its moral, social, and educational advantages. This institution would be a great aid in equipping the rising generation to meet coming issues and to fight the battle of life. The work so far done was substantial. He urged unabating substantial interest and aid to insure its completion.

The doxology was then sung and the assembly disbanded, most of them "going through college" on the invitation of President Smith, the lower preparatory floors having been laid, permitting access to the lower rooms.

Graceland College thus begins to show itself a substantial aid and lasting ornament to our growing young city. It will be by far the handsomest structure in Decatur County, and will attract attention and tend to materially elevate the general spirit of the surrounding country. It will represent and diffuse the spirit of learning, which means progress and morality and all that conduces to the general good.

Steps are being taken to enrich the college with a well equipped library, also other necessary adjuncts.

The HERALD heartily commends the college to our people and with the assurance that pupils entering it will make such satisfactory progress as to commend the work of Graceland College to all interested in educational work.

Our college has a wide and important field to occupy, and we believe its future is to be great for good.

MANUSCRIPT OF BOOK OF MORMON.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Nov. 4.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I inclose an item that to me is significant as to the future history of the church—a stinging rebuke to Braden and his ilk. I cut it from the daily Inter-Ocean, of September 9, 1895.

Yours in bonds,

H. J. HUDSON.

BOOK OF MORMON MANUSCRIPT.

The most valuable manuscript now owned within the limits of the United States, the Federal constitution and the declaration of independence alone excepted, has lately come into the possession of George W. Schweich, of Richmond, Ray County, this State. The relic in question, which is unique as well as historical, is nothing more nor less than the manuscript of the original Book of Mormon, just as it was translated from the golden-plate records of the Nephites by Joseph Smith and his assistants. If you have a copy of the Book of Mormon to refer to, you will find that the back of the title page bears a notice to the world in the shape of a "Testimony" by the three witnesses to the divine authenticity of the book. One of the three witnesses who saw the angel which God sent from heaven with the plates and engraving, and who heard the voice of God commanding that they bear record of the same, was David Whitmer, who died at Richmond, June 25, 1888. David Whitmer had long been the sole owner of the manuscript, and upon his death it descended by right of heirship to D. J. Whitmer, a son. Not long since D. J. Whitmer was smothered to death in a sand pit near Richmond, and George W. Schweich, a nephew (grandson of David Whitmer, one of the founders of the Mormon Church), became sole owner of the valuable document. In order that readers may have an idea of the value of Mr. Schweich's treasure, I will say that a short time prior to David Whitmer's death the Salt Lake hierarchy offered $100,000 in gold for it, and it is believed that they would have made an offer of $500,000 had they thought that there was a prospect of Mr. Whitmer parting with it.—St. Louis Republic.

Bro. H. J. Hudson, like the veteran he is, has always had the keenest sense of the fitness of things; and the suggestion in his letter accompanying the clipping that the estimate of the value put upon the manuscript copy of the Book of Mormon by public opinion now, is indicative of the changing of sentiment towards the history of the people for whom, and with whom, the book came to light, and that proper estimates will finally be accorded the facts in the case, is a pleasant and a profitable one to contemplate.

David Whitmer was never the owner of the manuscript referred to, in the sense of individual proprietorship, did not so consider himself in his lifetime, but was the custodian of it, Joseph Smith having placed it in his possession with a solemn charge to keep it safe. This he did, priding himself on his faithful discharge of that duty. George Schweich is not the owner of the manuscript, any more than David Whitmer was; his possession being that of a custodian, and we are pleased with the thought that he will take pride in his charge as his grandfather did.

In company with Elders A. H. Smith, W. H. Kelley, and Thomas W. Smith, we had the pleasure of engaging in the work of reading and comparing the Palmyra, Nauvoo, and Plano editions of the Book of Mormon with this manuscript, and found no sufficient reason to remodel our edition, the books being so much alike that they and the manuscript are essentially one and the same.

We desire to be free from the influence of superstition, but in the case of those things coming into human hands by divine favor, we confess that we have a feeling that they should be held sacred and not trifled with. So in this instance we can but believe that had David Whitmer parted with the manuscript of the Book of Mormon so sacredly confided to him for money, it would have resulted in distress and shame to him and his; and possibly disaster to those who should have bought it of him; hence, we now feel that if the present custodian should for the lucre's sake part with the manuscript, such sale and barter would result in unpleasantness and shame and possible disgrace, and the money received therefor prove to be a curse rather than a blessing. From our acquaintance with Mr. Schweich, however, we entertain no fear of his selling the manuscript.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is it right for us Protestants to unite in marriage with the Catholics?

Ans.—The rules of the church are that persons should marry in the church, which is done to avoid controversy between husband and wife in regard to religion; but there is no reason why Protestants should not marry Catholics as well as in any other religious denomination, all other things being satisfactory. All persons are at liberty to marry whom they please, but the rules of Catholicism are so rigid that Protestants marrying them are usually put to some disadvantage. The counsel of a St. Louis priest to his Catholic flock a few years since was to the effect that the girls should marry Protestants if practicable, but that the men should not. A man with a Catholic wife would usually be controlled by her in the giving of money to support the church, and she would be sure to control the children and raise them in Catholic training. To the men he counseled not to marry out of the church for similar reasons that he gave in the case of women, the wife would be likely to control the household. Our answer, then, to the above question is that Protestants of our faith had better not marry Catholics.

Q.—Is it right for a branch when appointing delegates to district conference, to bind them on all questions, just how they shall vote?

A.—Yes, if all questions likely to be presented, discussed, and acted upon are known to the branch, and a majority appointing the delegates so choose to instruct; it is not usual, however, and presupposes that the branch cannot trust the discretion of the delegates chosen.

It is certainly a very superfluous work for a branch to attempt to present, argue, and decide all possible issues on which a conference might be called to act, in order to instruct their delegates.

The rule states that branches "may instruct," but there is none requiring that they shall so instruct.

If delegates appointed cannot represent the branch and vote as instructed they should before appointment so declare, or after the appointment is made, decline to serve under the instruction given, that the branch could appoint other delegates who can and will carry out their instructions.

CAUSES WHICH MAKE TRAMPS.

SOME time ago in order to obtain certain information concerning vagabondage and the tramp problem in America, one Josiah Flynt, set about the study of the subject by becoming a tramp of the tramps, thus putting himself into relationship with the genus with a view to ascertain his species, nature, methods, the causes of success, or failure, and the cause for his existence if possible. The results are being given to the reading public in a series of magazine articles, and are pithily told in one of our exchanges thus:—

Josiah Flynt has tramped with the "hobo" and shared his lot throughout this country and England with the view of discovering a solution to the tramp problem. He agrees with Prof. McCook that whisky is the root of the evil of vagrancy, but does not believe that the American tramp is in any sense the result of fluctuations of the labor market. The American tramp, as he has found him, does not want to work, as a rule. Under the influence of drink he becomes a sort of voluntary idler. If he could rid himself of this vice, however, Mr. Flynt is convinced that he will go to work and could be made a valuable citizen. Mr. Flynt sums up the following principal causes or sources of vagabondage as he understands them: "1. The love of liquor. 2. Wanderlust. 3. The county jail, owing to the promiscuous herding of boys and homeless wanderers with criminals. 4. The tough and rough element in villages and towns. 5. The comparatively innocent but misguided pupils of the reform school."

From Mr. Flynt's digest of causes it will be seen that the primary causes are an inordinate desire to wander from place to place, the disposition to avoid the restraints imposed by law and social customs and the necessity to labor; and the love for the cup that intoxicates.

The other causes stated by Mr. Flynt are secondary and resultant in a degree from those first named; two of them at least being well meant but ineffectual efforts on the part of society to overcome the evil tendency of the others.

It is to be hoped that a remedy will be found for the causes, which will cure the evil complaint of vagabondage and the "condition" of the tramp.

B. H. ROBERTS' BOOK AUTHORITY.

SINCE reading "Succession in the Presidency of the Church" by B. H. Roberts, we have wondered if the authorities in Utah, if pressed upon the point, would indorse this work with its sophistry and historical inaccuracies; and when Elder H. O. Smith stated in his articles on "Why I am a Josephite" that Elder Roberts was "put forward" we feared that he had said more than he could prove. Now Elder Roberts comes to the rescue and leaves no room for doubt. When in the late political muddle, he sought to show how loyal and respectful he had always been to the First Presidency he gave utterance to the following in an interview published in the Salt Lake Tribune of October 14, 1895:—

STATEMENT BY ROBERTS.

CLAIMS THAT HE CONFRONTS A GRAVE CRISIS.

The following authorized statement by B. H. Roberts, in the form of an interview, was given out at the Democratic State headquarters last evening.

Being asked for his views upon the present political situation, Mr. Roberts said:—

"I have always regarded myself as properly respectful and attentive to church authority. In my labors in the church, whether in missionary or literary affairs. I have always consulted with the presidency when communication was possible; and their wishes have been respectfully followed. All the manuscripts of tracts and books of which I am the author, that have been written in advocacy or defense of the Mormon faith, have been invariably submitted to their personal inspection or to the inspection of committees appointed by them. Nor has my respectful consideration to their wishes been confined purely to matters of the above description, as will be seen in the following circumstance. Several years ago, when conditions were favorable for carrying out what had been with me a long-standing intention to enter into the study of the law, with a view to practicing that profession, I submitted the proposition to them for their advice, expecting to follow whatever suggestions they had to make. I never received from them any direct decision as to what, in their judgment, I ought to do, but learning indirectly that it was contrary to their wishes for me to enter into the practice of the law, as they considered it would interfere with my labors in the church, I gave up what had been with me, up to that time, a life purpose. I mention these matters that it may be understood that I have not been inattentive to the wishes of my brethren in whom I recognize a divine authority."

The ministry of the Reorganized Church will therefore be justified in holding the church in Utah responsible for the mistakes of Roberts, and treating his book as authoritative, unless they disclaim it, and dispute the above statement of Mr. Roberts. Presidents Woodruff, Cannon, and Smith will please take notice that we shall so consider it unless they officially deny it. We further call upon them to explain why they would authorize Elder Roberts to discuss in this form that which they counseled him and others not to meet in public discussion. If "the fact that many honest people in the United States and other countries are being led astray by the pretensions of the 'Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' or Josephite Church, as it is more commonly called, must justify the publication of this work" (see Roberts' Preface), will not this same fact justify you in meeting these same issues on the rostrum?

Be consistent, gentlemen, and be courageous enough to answer at the bar of public opinion, in honorable and fair controversy, for your convictions.

Do not take refuge in the plea that public discussion is unnecessary, because God will care for his own work, while you discuss the issues thus avoided, through your authorized publications. In authorizing the publication called "Succession in the Presidency of the Church" you have acknowledged the necessity for a discussion of the issues. Are you equal to the emergency of supplying this important demand?

SOME idea of the vast amount of correspondence carried on between the Eastern and Western hemispheres may be obtained from the following account of one week's mail forwarded over one route, by the steamer St. Louis, between New York and Liverpool:—

The St. Louis carried 416 sacks of mail on the eastward passage. Of these 149 contained letters and 267 held papers. The letter sacks averaged 70 pounds each, making in all an aggregate of 10,430 pounds. The paper sacks averaged 55 pounds each, making in all an aggregate of 14,685 pounds. There were ac-ording to the postal officials, 4,000 letters in each sack, making a total of 560,000 letters. The consignment, including 291 sacks from New York, 14 from Philadelphia, 22 from Boston, 8 from San Francisco, 30 from Chicago, 5 from Baltimore, 13 from Hamilton, Ontario, 8 from Quebec, 5 from Ottawa, 7 from Winnipeg, 2 from St. John, New Brunswick, and 2 from Halifax, will be distributed as follows: London 176 sacks, Liverpool 6, Southampton 5, Glasgow 10, Dublin 1, Paris 21, Lyons 3, Bordeaux 2, Calais 5, Brussels 2, Antwerp 2, Luxembourg 2, Ostend-Ambulant 2, Verviers-Cologne 28, Baxtel-Duisburg 42, Aix La Chapelle 3, Amsterdam 2, Flushing Rotterdam 3, Modane-Turin 27, Belfort-Basle 4, Quloz-Geneva 3; Zurich 3, Madrid 4, Traveling Office to Spain 5, Alexandroy-Warsaw 2, Volatchick-Imerinka 2, Kibarty-St. Petersburg 4, Lisbon 2, Douro-N. 2, 2; Constantinople 2, Beyrout 2, Jaffa 2, Cape Town 5, Bergen-Newcastle 2, Malmo-Xassjo 2, Kiel-Korsor 4; Christiania 2, Helsingfors 2, and Egypt 2.

OVERUSE OF ALCOHOL.

ACCORDING to M. Chervin, in a paper to the Societe d' Anthropologie, the low birth rate in France is largely due to prodigality in Paris and thrift in the provinces. M. Rochard, however, ascribes it mainly to alcoholism, the annual consumption of alcohol having enormously increased of late years in France. Paris has a wine shop for every three houses.—London Globe.

The low birth rate in France and its growing decrease has repeatedly been set forth by statisticians and noted by statesmen, who see in it the diminishing probabilities and possibilities of French influence and supremacy in the councils and strategical movements of European, Asiatic, and African affairs. King Alcohol sits enthroned and grimly saps and consumes the vitality of that nation. His presence impairs the national strength and tends to prevent any probability of the recovery of France's coveted former possession, Alsace Lorraine, and the humiliation of Germany; and the French people are obliged to rely largely upon alliance with Russia to maintain anything like their old-time prestige in the councils and general movements of Europe.

Russia, Germany, Great Britain, the United States, and all other nations are also vitiated in mental, moral, and general power because of the tribute paid to rum. The force of this death blow to human welfare and hindrance to progress, inflicted by the people themselves, is beyond calculation. It is surprising that humanity, advancing in many respects as it is in civilization, does not unite to deliver itself from the death power of the rum traffic.

It is manifest that the wisdom of God is in the instruction given his people, in which he warned that because of evils that do and will exist in the hearts of evil and conspiring men he forewarned against the use of strong drinks. Latter Day Saints were thus given to understand that such "evils" as the use of intoxicating liquors as beverages, also the use of tobacco for other than remedial purposes, should be avoided and discouraged.

The decrease of the birth rate in France furnishes a marked, a striking example of the destructive power of the alcohol habit. It is not immoderate nor extravagant to designate it a "curse." One might as well conclude to call evil good as to call the rum habit anything less than a curse. We believe that every Latter Day Saint should let alcoholic drinks and the places where such are trafficked in, severely alone — except so far as they can help to suppress both. Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, hence lend their aid in suppressing what is opposed to good.

THE Bald Knob, Missouri, Signal of the 8th says this of the discussion between Bro. Joseph Ward and Elder J. H. Lawson, Christian or Disciple:—

So far the debate has been ably conducted by both sides and in a hightoned, Christian, and gentlemanly spirit. The best of feeling prevails between the disputants throughout, each presenting his side of the question in an able manner. We hope the same spirit will continue to the end of the discussion. Everybody should come out and hear them.

GOOD WORDS FROM ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

UNDER the heading, "New College for Lamoni, Iowa," the St. Joseph, Missouri, Herald, gives the college at Lamoni the following good words:—

LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE AN EVENT OF INTEREST.

LAMONI Iowa, Nov. 12.—The laying of the corner stone of Graceland College, a nonsectarian institution of learning took place here under the auspices of the Latter Day Saints. Over a thousand people witnessed the exercises which consisted of vocal and instrumental music, prayer by H. A. Stebbins, laying of the corner stone by President Joseph Smith, speech by W. W. Scott, Mayor of Lamoni, an address by President Smith, a speech by Hon. Zenas H. Gurley, a speech by Prof. D. F. Lambert, Superintendent of Lamoni public schools, and a speech by Elder A. H. Smith. Graceland College will be a substantial structure built of brick and sandstone, which will cost over $10,000. Though fostered by a religious body, it will be absolutely nonsectarian, and though under the best of moral influences, will not deal with the subject of religion.

SAM JONES, the Southern evangelist, it is said, smokes fifteen cigars a day.

Rumors are not always reliable; but if the report of those by whom "it is said" is true, Rev. Samuel Jones is no model for a reformer of men's morals or habits, and is condemned by the advice of the apostle who so sinneth against his own body sinneth against God.

BACK VOLUMES OF AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE Herald Office has on hand a number of back volumes of Autumn Leaves for the years 1891, '92, '93, and '94, which are offered bound complete in various styles of binding, in prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per volume, according to binding.

The volumes may be had either bound or unbound. Those wanting them bound for the holidays must order at once, to insure completion in time.

Volumes of 1891, '92, and '93, unbound, are offered at 50 cents. All volumes offered at these prices will be sent postpaid. Address orders to the Business Manager. 4t.

A WORD.

THE Business Manager desires us, on his behalf, to thank the Saints of the various branches that have appointed book agents in response to his appeal. Good work is being done by said agents in many cases, in collecting old accounts and obtaining orders for church papers, books, etc.

Such branches as have not yet appointed agents are requested to do so at once. Agents may or may not be branch presidents. Competent, reliable agents are desired.

Patrons are requested to order and make remittances through their branch agents where convenient to do so. Orders amounting to less than fifty cents, unless through agents, must be accompanied by cash or order — this to avoid carrying long lists of small accounts.

Be particular to give the same exact name in which publications have been going; also full address with remittances or orders for church periodicals.

Address business communications to the Business Manager. Send all matter for publication to the Editors.

STATISTICS show that during the past ten years bank wreckers, embezzlers, and defaulters have robbed the people of this country of over one hundred million dollars, an average of over ten millions of dollars per annum; and this state of things has been growing worse the past two years, for the year 1892 shows robberies by the above-mentioned methods of about $9,000,000, while 1893 shows about $19,000,000, 1894 about $25,000,000, and 1895 shows over $4,000,000 to July 1.

These sums probably do not represent what was actually taken during those years, but simply the amount of the robberies discovered. . . . Any state of affairs which will allow the robbery of over one hundred millions of dollars in ten years is certainly appalling.

The above is from an article, "The era of fraud and embezzlement: its causes and remedies," by A. R. Barrett, in the October Arena. We note the figures given as in evidence of the Apostle Paul's prediction that in the last days "trucebreakers" would abound.

WAR PREPARATIONS.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—Col. von Hannekin, the German officer who was military assistant to Viceroy Li Hung Chang, has arrived in the city from China charged with a special mission and fully empowered to arrange for the recognition of the Chinese army on the Russian, French, or German model.

PARIS, Oct. 16. — Before the Budget committee to-day Vice-Admiral Besnard, Minister of Marine, said the Chino-Japanese war had shown the necessity of possessing numerous swift, well-armed and armored cruisers.

The naval program for the period between 1894 and 1896, inclusive, involved an annual expenditure of £3,000,000, exclusive of torpedoes and guns.

The new program for building additional ironclads, cruisers, and dispatch vessels would increase the expenditure £400,000 annually, representing a total outlay for the next twelve years of £40,000,000.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. S. ROTH, Adrian, Illinois, November 12:—

I have been here at the Rock Creek church over a week now, which makes over three weeks' meetings. I baptized six more yesterday; that is, sixteen since I came; and I believe there are others who will obey before I leave. The Lord is truly blessing my labors here. A number more are investigating. I feel encouraged.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOME one suggests that a minister who officiates at a funeral does not preach "the funeral" but "the funeral sermon" of the deceased; also that the term "Old Church" is incorrectly applied to the Utah Church, and should be applied only to the church up to the death of the Martyr, in 1844, when the "Old Church" ceased to exist as an organized body.

Bro. W. H. Pease, Kansas City, Kansas, requests prayer for Bro. Albert Johnson, lately bereft of wife and only child.

Bro. S. O. Foss wrote November 2, from Wescogus, Maine, an account of his late missionary labors at Indian River, Mason's Bay, Jonesport, Machias, and other points. He was blessed of the Master and hospitably received by Saints and friends. Brn. Davison and Ames have also written of the work in that portion of the Pine Tree State. Bro. Foss joins them in the opinion that good work has been done and can yet be done more completely by the ministry in that field.

Bro. J. F. A. Smith reports new openings for preaching at and near Benwood and Wheeling West Virginia. Elders who could assist local brethren would be welcomed.

Bro. Isaac Bailey, of Gallup, New Mexico, sends us a copy of the Los Angeles, California, weekly Express, of October 31, in which appears a lengthy account of alleged discoveries of J. T. Goodman, in which it is claimed that he has deciphered the inscriptions of the ruined cities of Copan Palenque, Uxmal, etc., and that his books embodying results of his labors will be published in 1896 by an English house. We await verification, and suppose that the merits of the works will bring them to notice, if published.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote from Rockland, Maine, the 13th inst. He had made a fine opening at Tennant's Harbor and was meeting with good success until diphtheria appeared and broke up the meetings. Bro. D. S. Seavy was anxious that Bro. Foss continue there, which he would do when possible. The Baptist minister at Rockland had invited Bro. Foss to address his congregation. He had accepted the invitation.

Bro. Parley P. Kelley, counsel for the church in the Temple Lot case, and member of the College Board, was at Lamoni a few days during the past and present week.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, reached Lamoni on the 17th, on church business.

IN MEMORIAM.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF ELDER EPHRAIM ROWLAND.

Long years ago in meditative mood,
On a lone isle, St. John, Christ's seryant stood,
And as he meditated on the Master's love,
A voice came to him from the realms above:
"Blessed are the dead—they that die in the Lord
From henceforth saith the Spirit," their reward,
"That they may from their labors in peace rest,
Their works do follow them," forever blest!
Sweet promise to the Christian at life's close
To go from labor to calm, sweet repose!

That passage, Ephraim Rowland, was to you,
A precious one indeed; a promise true;
You marked it in your Book of books, so fraught,
With truths which you so often preached and taught;
Unswervingly you served the Master's cause,
And lived obedient to God's will and laws.

Wisely you spent your life, you stood for right,
You kept the faith, and fought a noble fight.
Well did you heed Christ's words—obeyed them all,
And held yourself e'er "ready" for the call,
And when your course was finished, passed away,
To dwell with him in that bright land for aye.
Yea; Ephraim Rowland, vacant is thy chair
Within thy home, thy loved ones miss you there;
Within the church now empty is thy seat,
No more the faithful there you'll kindly greet
And all who knew thy worth and Christian love,
Say "He is gone, to dwell with Christ above."
A Christian has gone home to his reward,
A faithful worker in thy vineyard, Lord,
He crossed triumphant to the other shore,
To dwell with Christ, the Master, evermore; Faithful through life, pure virtue's paths he trod,
And served and loved his fellow man and God.
Pure was his life, for fifty years he bore
The Master's cross, through trials keen and sore,
And at life's close in peace he laid it down
To wear the Lord's reward—the heavenly crown.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"What matter how the winds may blow,
Since fair or foul alike is best?
God holds them in his hand, I know,
And I may leave to him the rest,
Assured that neither calm nor gale
Can bring me danger or delay,
As still I toward the haven sail
That lies, I know, not far away."

DECEMBER READING FOR DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

THERE comes a time in the history of every individual, society, or people when it is well to pause long enough to inquire, Have we a definite object or aim in life, and if so are we living, laboring in a way best calculated to secure that object, that aim? To the writer it seems that the time has come for the Daughters of Zion to pause and ask these questions; ask them with the earnest purpose of obtaining all the light and information possible to be obtained. In organizing we adopted as a motto, "Our aim mankind to bless." This, then, settles definitely the first question and settles it, we think, satisfactorily to all who love the Lord and their fellow men. To do good and no evil to mankind is our object, our aim.

But the second question, "Are we living, laboring in a way best calculated to secure that object, that aim?" may not prove to be so easily answered. Many organizations exist in the world to-day, whose avowed aim and object is the same as ours, but to the mind of the dispassionate, unprejudiced onlooker, they fall very far short of that for which they aim. To see ourselves as we appear to others is a very difficult matter, but we may perhaps make ourselves better understood by a little communication, a little explanation.

When God completed his work of creation he pronounced it good. A part of that work was man. Not Adam alone, but Adam and Eve, for the allwise Creator knew and declared to us, It is not good for man to be alone. In the creation of woman, sex was introduced as the crowning, completing work of the creation. Its relations are pure, high, and holy. It is needless to say the best gifts of God can be perverted and abused. We see it done every day we live. Hence it should be no matter of wonderment to us, that the sex relation has been not only abused, but degraded and perverted to such an extent that the misery and sin which is deluging the land to-day is largely traceable to this cause. Sin is in its very nature degrading, but when sin and wrong have been indulged in for centuries, is it not to be expected that the roots will so have spread and deepened that time, faith, and patient laboring—laboring with love in the heart—will be necessary in order to uproot the evil and plant the good? God instituted the family relation and set his seal to its sacredness when he said, "They twain shall be one flesh." This is the "Holy of holies" into which none but the ordained priest and priestess must enter, and the wife or husband who speaks of this relation to a third party, certainly, to put it very mildly, makes a grave mistake, and the stranger who seeks to intrude should be repulsed with contempt. We have no terms in which to express our aversion to such meddlers with sufficient force.

But because of the perversion of this holy, sacred relation so awful are the crimes committed therein that the land is being polluted by them, and almost the first cry which comes to us from any newly organized local is in relation to our views upon this question, and we are asked, "What do the Daughters of Zion teach upon this matter?" Let us answer this question once and for all time. Unless God should reveal to us his law in regard to the relation of husband and wife and reveal it through the proper channel, the head of the church, we have no teaching to offer anyone upon a subject at once so sacred and delicate. Does it follow from this that we have no disposition to right wrong, to help to put away evil and strengthen good? Not at all, but simply that we do not believe it can be done in that way. God never interferes with our agency. But he does call, persuade, and by his Holy Spirit influence us in nameless ways to do the right and forsake the evil. So let us seek to learn from his word and from every available source of information the laws governing our being, that when the marriage relation is entered we may have wisdom sufficient to guide us, and not only this, but to teach the children God may give us to avoid the evil and cleave to the good.

In connection with this we would advise a rereading of the leaflet, "Husbands, love your wives," by Elder Heman C. Smith. They are on sale at the Herald Office, and truly, as our Business Manager, Bro. Frank Criley said, "It is one of the finest things upon the subject ever written." If this leaflet had been carefully read and thoroughly understood by those writing to us, they would have found an answer to their questions.

And now, sisters, it remains for us to stand firm and be true to the principles we advocate. By a false system of teaching for generations past, even Christians have been led into the error of demanding from women a purer morality than they do from men, and men have been pampered into thinking that their natures differed from woman's, and that immoralities in them should be condoned. This is all false, all wrong, and fathers as well as mothers must teach their sons that chastity and virtue is to them the same priceless inheritance which it is to their sisters, and girls must demand of the young men with whom they associate the same virtue and moral rectitude which the young men demand of them. Many evils are in the world and as guardians of our children we are called upon to warn them of the pitfalls and dangers along their path of life and to watch over them during the years in which their judgments are immature and they more liable to be led into temptation. This is the strongest feature of our work—the ounce of prevention worth the pound of cure. Here is the field stretching out broad and white, where we may thrust in our sickles and reap while the day of life lasts. Here we may teach, may sow the good seed with the well-assured hope of reaping a bountiful harvest. Let us not be weary in well doing, for victory awaits us if we are faithful to ourselves and our God.

From time to time we shall endeavor to send out such literature as may prove helpful, and we earnestly ask your cooperation in the way of letters and articles which may prove helpful. Let each sister bear this request in mind.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

THE article on "Plans for Using Blackboard" was read at the late Logan reunion, and, though presenting the lessons of the past quarter, it illustrates the methods so clearly that it serves every purpose, and merits publishing in full.

PLANS FOR USING BLACKBOARD IN REVIEW AND CLASS WORK.

WHEN the blackboard has a place in the Sunday school, it should be there as a tool, not as a tyrant. I mean by this that the teacher should use the board as an aid in teaching, in gaining and holding attention, in illustrating something which it is desired the scholars shall understand, or in stating concisely and briefly something that they are desired to fix in memory. Used for this purpose, the board may become a useful tool to which the skillful teacher may often resort.

When I speak of it as a tyrant I have in my mind the idea of some, which I believe to be a mistake, that, in blackboard work, there must be a display of artistic work in design and coloring. This is not a necessity in blackboard work. If there are, in the various schools of our association, those who have talent in drawing and designing, if there are those who by cultivation have acquired such ability, by all means make use of their power in that direction; but if this is lacking, as in most of our schools it is, the blackboard may still be a useful, even though homely, tool.

I agree with Dr. Trumbull in an important statement. He gives it as his opinion that a teacher, upon going to his class, should have in his mind a definite plan by which to conduct the lesson. He must have a plan, but it may be his own, and I lay stress upon the latter statement that the method he uses may be his own. Be thoughtful; be original.

"Think for thyself one good idea, but, known to be thine own,
"Were better than a thousand gleaned from fields by others sown."

I believe that many a good, capable teacher is afraid of the blackboard, would be afraid to try to use it; and it reminds me of a little girl I once knew at school who was afraid for a long time to try to write. She would simply stand and look helplessly at the board, the copy, and the chalk. But when her fear was overcome so that she was induced to try, she proved to have more than ordinary ability.

Now, it is only necessary upon the part of the teacher for him to cultivate freedom, originality of thought, and to use the board and crayon to convey his thought. Do not be bound, do not be limited by what some other brain thinks; do not be entirely dependent upon some other mind, but "think for thyself one good idea" and take courage to express yourself before the class or school as the case may require.

As a public-school teacher I have made very free use of the blackboard to interest and instruct my pupils, though the work upon the board was always quite simple and the result of my own effort to make plain the lesson. I have seen a famous chalk-talker who was so perfectly the master of the board drawing with both hands, and as he told the story you would see it enacted before your eyes. But I could not thus entertain, I could only make figures so crude sometimes that the little children laughed at my clumsy flour sacks and crooked quart measures, but I took care that those awkward lines represented correctly the main points of the lesson, and that, notwithstanding the permissible merriment, the correct statement of the problem, of whatever sort it might be, passed from my comprehension of it to the comprehension of my pupils.

Dr. Trumbull suggests the use of a class slate. I am satisfied that a large slate or a small blackboard could be used to good advantage in classes, especially in the intermediate classes and younger classes of senior grade.

As I said before, I have never been able to do elaborate blackboard work, and am encouraged at times to make my attempts in this line of work not thinking to benefit the few who may be able to do superior work but perchance some of the many who with myself have had only ordinary opportunities and ability.

I am requested to present plans for blackboard work and know of no better way than to suggest what I might do with the lessons assigned for consideration during the Sunday school work to be done at this reunion, though I should certainly be governed by the needs of my class.

In Lesson 9, "God's Covenant with Isaac," we learn as prominent points to be taught that Isaac was a quiet, peaceful man who traveled but little; that he was forbidden to leave the promised land in time of famine; and that, being obedient, he was blessed greatly and prospered and received a renewal of the covenant made with his father.

I think I should use the blackboard to show the narrow limits of the territory traversed by Isaac compared with the more extensive travels of Abraham. I should probably begin with Abraham's call from Ur, tracing his journey to Haran and then to Canaan down into Egypt and return, not pausing for many details, my object being to revive and impress the outline of Abraham's travels. Then I would trace the limited travels of Isaac and show his whole life to have been spent within a circle of a few miles. In connection with this I would show each man to have been obedient to the direction of the Lord. I would, as the lesson proceeded, point out the places where God made and repeated his covenant with Abraham, in Mesopotamia; at Shechem (Sichem), in Canaan after Lot's separation; at Hebron (Gen. 15); and again (Gen. 17) when Abram's name was changed and circumcision instituted; again when he entertained the angels (Gen. 18); and when he offered up Isaac. I would keep the promise before the class, and would show its renewal to Isaac at Beer-sheba. I would cluster all the teaching points of the lesson about this blackboard sketch and Lesson Outline in the Quarterly. By the way, I would not attempt to make a map of the country; I only place a mark or an initial letter to show relative position and distance.

In Lesson 10 we have an opportunity to bring in much work on the board if time permits.

If previous lessons have been well impressed upon the scholars it will not be difficult or require much time to show Jacob's journey from Canaan to Haran. Place a mark or letter for his home in Canaan; another for Bethel where he dreamed and vowed to the Lord; another for Haran. As we traced this I would have the teaching points brought out, the lesson narrative given. I would impress the renewal of the covenant to Jacob and the promise of the Lord to bring him back to his land. I would notice Jacob's vow and promise, and it would depend upon my class how deeply I entered into the questions of priesthood and tithing.

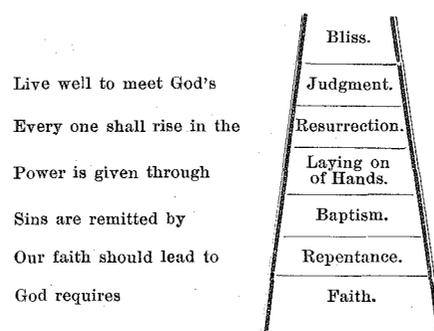

I would, if possible, economize my time and spend some time with our gospel ladder. Our assistant superintendent copied the ladder upon the board and showed the necessity of all the rounds being in it by erasing some and showing the useless condition of the ladder with any of the rounds missing.

A very instructive and entertaining lesson can be given with this ladder. Place it upon the board. Ask scholars to name instances in which faith brought blessings. They may speak of the woman who "touched the hem of His garment," of the nobleman at Capernaum, and many such where faith saved and healed. Write briefly a few names or citations at the right hand in line with the word "faith." At the left hand write in capitals the letters G, O, S, P, E, L, beginning with G on the line with the word "faith" and each succeeding one corresponding to the next higher round. Show from the word of God that he requires us to have faith, and write the words in the space between G and the word on the lowest round. Then show that our faith should lead us to repentance and write the statement in the space between O and the second round.

How sad it would be should we awake to a consciousness of sin and become repentant were there no way to become free from that which has grown so repulsive to us. He who came to save his people from their sins says that through baptism we may have remission of sins. Write in the third line, "Sins are remitted by baptism."

Cite instances where power has been given through laying on of hands and give out the thought that to "as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God," and that we receive this power not before we have submitted to the ordinance of the laying on of hands. Write on fourth line, "Power is given through the laying on of hands." Then sustain the statement that, "Everyone shall rise in the resurrection," and enter it on the fifth line and encourage all to, "Live well to meet God's judgment." Compliance with these principles will build the ladder by which we may rise "from the lowly earth" to the bliss of our Father's presence.

The ladder will stand thus:—

I once used this blackboard lesson without the ladder, beginning with the letter G on the top line and writing the words faith, repentance, etc., at the right. I wrote all the initial letters first at the left in their lines and stated that I would make the word "gospel" mean the gospel. It held attention for an hour and a half, the mind being intent to see what statement could be made from each letter.

In lesson 11 I would as in previous lessons trace the journeys of Jacob. I would remind my pupils of God's promise to bring Jacob back to Canaan and would show how evident it is that that people were designed to dwell in that land. I would show that Abraham had been directed to it; that he had gone to Egypt but had returned to it again, that Isaac had not been permitted to leave it; that Jacob went out for a time with the assurance that he would be returned to it again; and, going a little in advance of my class, would show that the children of Israel have been returned to that land repeatedly and that the Scriptures say that they will yet be gathered to that land from their present scattered condition. I would show Bethel where in vision the covenant was renewed to Jacob and call attention to the fact that at the same place God appeared to Jacob after his return to the land and repeated the promise that had been made to Abraham and Isaac.

As there are a number of persons and places mentioned in this lesson, in reviewing I might place upon the board the initial letters of all the proper names and require scholars without their books to tell me the names which I could finish out upon the board and as each was finished I would question concerning it, thus bringing out the details of the lesson. Sometimes when many numbers occur in a lesson I use them in the same way. The initial letters or the figures serve to hold attention which enables the teacher to question upon the statements of the lesson.

In Lesson 12, with classes having the Senior Quarterly, in reviewing the lesson I would follow the outline given in the Quarterly. I would write the braces and the words "Be not" and "B," leaving the space inclosed by the brace blank. I would have the scholars read or recite each couplet of the lesson text, and from them we would recall to mind the outline, which I would enter in the blank spaces. With intermediate classes it would be necessary to consider the couplets of texts, to write the word expressive of the instruction contained in them, and after it was done to erase and rewrite from memory.

Or the outline could be used in this way: Leave the words on the board and call for recitation or reading of the couplet that teaches what is conveyed by the different words of the outline.

In Lesson 13 I would begin with Abram at Ur, would question briefly on main points only, bringing in the Golden Texts and Memory Verses just where they occurred as the narrative proceeded. I would trace the journeys of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob without much comment upon unimportant things in order that I might have time to impress the renewal of the covenant and like important things. In small schools for a change the greater part of the time might be occupied by this general review, but it might not be successful in large schools.

When our lessons are carefully reviewed throughout the quarter we generally leave the whole time with the teachers on review day.

Trusting that these plain efforts of mine may suggest something better to some one and knowing that they will at least afford opportunity for discussion of the subject, I submit my paper for your consideration.

ANNA STEDMAN SALYARDS.

WITH the addition of the Sunday school department in the Herald, devoted to the interests of this work, we have another medium by which the great body of Sunday school workers may become more united, exchange their views, and become better acquainted with one another in this department of church work. Sr. J. H. Royce, of Baroda, Michigan, has accepted the work of editing this department; but she can make it a success and beneficial to all only by the coöperation and loyal assistance of those who love this work and are willing to give her their hearty assistance.

I appeal to you as loyal workers in the Sunday school to make this department yours; to feel that you have an interest in its success. This will mean that you must do your part in sending valuable and profitable material to the editor, that she may publish and all Sunday school workers thereby gain from your efforts.

The cause is moving rapidly onward and upward and we must keep pace or lose the vantage ground already gained. The reports from the various reunions show that profitable Sunday school work has been done. The work in the Sunday school department at the Logan reunion was valuable and I believe profitable to all those who took part. The workers are getting down to the real essence of this work, and true earnest work was done there.

I find upon investigation, with Manager of the Herald Office, that many, yes a great many, of the schools have neglected paying for their supplies—Quarterlies, Hopes, etc. This surely should not be, and I urge the superintendent of each school, to at once see that all the supplies for his school are promptly settled for. The figures showing the arrearages are surprising to us all. No man can hope to do a safe business in private life in this way, neither can we expect the Herald Office nor any department of the work to prosper and succeed unless we meet promptly every obligation due them from us. Just think of this, and remember that those publications are yours; and you surely want them to succeed; and every department will prosper if those of us who are behind will pay up. Men in private business know that those who do not meet promptly their obligations are the ones who ruin their business. This same principle will hold good in regard to the church publications. Then let us all show our interest in the success of our publications by promptness.

Ever praying for the triumph of truth,

The century of science triumphant is our own. The fishermen who go down to the sea in ships need no longer die of thirst when cast adrift. Before long they will be able to drink the fog right out of its own ghost-like banks. With a simple fog-condensing can which Prof. Bell has invented they may always turn fog into water by the action of the waves.—Ex.

Editors Herald:—We are always pleased to get the Herald to see how things spiritual are moving, and hail with pleasure every triumph that gospel truth makes in any part of the world, whether on the isles of the sea, on the great continent of America, or in these lands. I think I was never so struck by the total indifference of the people to things spiritual as at Leicester on the occasion of holding our district conference. The Saints there had a nice hall—new, clean, light, and in every sense inviting; they had given out bills in the district, yes a district teeming with people, and yet the gospel had no charm. I think we may ask the Lord with all confidence for the hastening time, whatever that term may strictly mean, but which I take to mean an awakening of the people for all that is good and an inquiring mind for the old paths and the way of life.

Your brother,

G. L. GREENWOOD.

ALLENDALE, Mo., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—Having obtained permission from President Joseph Smith and the president of the Decatur district, to come here with Bro. J. S. Snively and do some ministerial work, as I felt impressed that I should do, I trust that none will think me to be intruding.

We commenced here on Sunday, November 3. Have held five preaching services in the Saints' chapel, and five in the "Dry" school-house, about six miles southeast of here. But little preaching has been done by our people at this place; but of late it has been an objective point of interest with Elder T. E. Glendenning of the Advent Christian Church. Here, as elsewhere, he has exposed the dogma of Platonic philosophy relating to the immortality of the soul, challenged the world to meet him, stated that propositions had been sent to Elder Lambert, but he would not meet him, etc., etc.

Well, Elder Glendenning was present last Sunday morning for the first time, and we had a lively time of it. I would not talk debate until he made me a direct and formal challenge, so he arose and offered his challenge in the presence of the congregation, on two propositions relating to the mortality of man, his unconsciousness between death and the resurrection, and the final destiny of the wicked. He then tried hard to make the people believe that I was bound by the exact wording of his propositions, else it was a back out, you know. However, we finally agreed upon the following propositions:—

1. Does the Bible teach that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection and that the final destiny of the wicked is the cessation of their conscious being? T. E. Glendenning affirms.

2. Is the Reorganize Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the Church of God in fact? And is it in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and church organization? J. R. Lambert affirms.

The debate will consist of ten daily sessions of two hours each, commencing on December 10, at two p. m. The debate will be held in Allendale. Elder Glendenning would not affirm that his church is the Church of God in fact, and in harmony with the New Testament in doctrine and church organization.

We have had some very good meetings here, but I regret to say that the branch is very far from being in good working condition. What a pity!

Bro. C. H. Jones put in an appearance here last Saturday. He is as lively as ever. He preached in the Saints' chapel Sunday at eleven a. m., and last night.

Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

SHELTON, Neb., Nov. 14.

Editors Herald:—Bro. and Sr. Richards, of North Platte, and the writer, came here about October 14. We found about twenty-one warm-hearted Saints who received us gladly and made us feel at home. All but two or three are the fruits of the labors of Elders J. M. Stubbart, W. E. Peak, and C. E. Blodgett; and if we judge by their fruits they must be men of God.

We commenced preaching and continued until a few days ago, and one was baptized and others are near the kingdom.

We quit preaching to attend the debate between Bro. E. C. Blodgett and Rev. Pothemus of the United Brethren Church. They are debating at Shelton. The debate is interesting and the Saints all feel pleased with the way it is going. They have debated seven nights and it will close to-night. Bro. Stubbart is moderator for Bro. Blodgett. Sr. Richards and the writer furnish the music while they are debating the last proposition. We carry our musical instruments with us and we find it is a great help in the preaching services. There are are over a thousand in attendance at the debate every night; they are debating in the opera house.

The writer has baptized eight in the last two months and we are getting a good hearing everywhere we go. Have more calls than we can fill.

S. D. PAYNE.

CRESCENT, Iowa, Nov. 8.

Editors Herald:—I just closed a series of meetings last night held in the Crescent branch; baptized one yesterday, making ten in all since our reunion at Council Bluffs.

I wish to relate a vision which Sr. Dora Carstensen saw on Tuesday evening during the opening of the services by prayer. She saw a lake of water clear as crystal with a very small stream flowing out of it, and a voice spoke, saying, "This is living water." In the center of the lake stood a tree which was very dry without a leaf or anything of the kind upon it; the top of this tree was broken and hung down until the top branches extended into the water. On the right side of the lake stood a number of people looking from the water. They seemed to be ready for work, while on the left of the lake sat a number of younger people looking across the lake at the people on the other side.

This sister who saw the vision is only fifteen years of age, but is very humble and prayerful. If there is anyone who reads this that can interpret it, we ask them to publish it in the Herald.

I love to see the young enjoying the blessings of this restored gospel, and if they all only knew what a blessing it was to enjoy the power of the Spirit of God they would be more humble and prayerful.

I know I have many faults to overcome and I am trying by the help of our heavenly Father to overcome and subdue all that is not right in the sight of God. My desire is to see this gospel with the blessings of the same go to all nations. My prayer is that God may call more of the young men to the ministry, and I verily believe if more of them would study the word of God, read the church literature, and become acquainted with the doctrine of the church, there would not be such a great lack of laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. I am young in years and feel my weakness and wish to ask the prayers of the Saints that I may live faithful to the end.

Yours in faith,

JOHN LENTS.

MILTON, Fla., Nov. 5.

Editors Herald.—The work is onward here. Brn. Hilliard and T. C. Kelley were with us in September, and gave us some good sermons and much comfort, enlivening the work where they went. The Saints are very much in love with those two able servants, and will be glad to see them again.

Since my ordination as elder, under the hands of Brn. T. C. Kelley and E. Powell, I have traveled eight days with Bro. Kelley, assisting him all I could, and since his departure for Garland conference have preached with Bro. Powell each Sabbath. We have had large crowds and good attention, with the result, this far, of his leading four souls into the water, last Sunday. We are to preach at Coldwater on the third Sunday, and baptize some others. The calls come from every quarter, "Come and preach for us."

We have opened up some new places for preaching, and hope to extend the work permanently soon. Brn. Kelley and Baggerly were at Garland, Alabama, conference. We are expecting them soon with us. I feel very weak at times and ask the prayers of the brethren. The Saints are nearly all converted to the law of tithing, but obey slowly.

In bonds,

S. D. ALLEN.

LOCKHARTVILLE, N. S., Oct. 31.

Editors Herald.—My trip to the Aroostook was not without interest and good results. I was joined after a few days by Elder S. O. Foss, who proved an agreeable associate and an efficient colaborer. We were locked out of one schoolhouse; too many ministers, I understand. Were also frozen out of another; probably not enough ministers. However we had places where we could and did occupy. Somehow it does not hurt my feelings nowadays to have a door locked against me; as a rule the results are good. In this case we had better interest all around, and a number became interested, and five were baptized although one was convinced of the divinity of the work a year ago.

The baptismal services were exceptionally impressive and had a good effect upon the large crowd who witnessed them. The confirmation meetings were spiritual and refreshing. The candidates are earnest and are taking hold of the work finely. How cheering and satisfactory it is to see the new converts throw away the pipe and tobacco and begin bearing their testimony. This is right, and it counts much. Much might be said of each one, but space forbids.

A sore throat and appointments in Nova Scotia hastened my departure, leaving the work in the hands of Bro. Foss. Since returning home have attended our conference at South Rawdon in company with Elder George Robley, who is to labor with me a few months in Nova Scotia. I hope the Saints and friends will remember that the railroad and steamer men charge him just as much for tickets as elders that weigh two hundred and forty pounds.

I sometimes wonder if we all realize that the manner in which we treat those servants of the gospel is in the judgment of the Savior held just exactly as though it was himself that was present; else what force is there in the words, "Inasmuch as ye did" and did not, etc.? Our conference was not largely attended, but those who did go felt blest for making the sacrifice. One pleasing feature was the Sunday school concert. O that all the officials and older members could realize the importance of standing by the faithful little band of young people! May the kind Father bless each one of them. I am feeling well in body, also in spirit, and if I had some way of lubricating the financial machinery of the church a little I would feel first class for going away on Monday morning to stay until about Christmas. Cumberland County is the objective point where I hear Apollos is wanted before the river freezes. "So mote it be."

Yours hoping,

H. J. DAVISON.

EXCELSIOR, Wis., Nov. 7.

Editors Herald.—I left Lamoni, Iowa, May 14, in company with Bro. C. W. Dillon to come to my field of labor—Wisconsin. I went almost direct to Porcupine to labor with Bro. H. P. Curtis in Pepin and Pierce Counties, and I can truly say that the Lord was with us, for sixteen have been added by baptism to the Frankford branch at Porcupine, and a number of others said they expected to be baptized soon. The branch now numbers fifty-one.

Bro. Curtis has had poor health this summer so he could not do much preaching; but he did all he could in other ways, and preached whenever he thought he was able. He will always be remembered by the Saints and friends as one who did all in his power to promote the cause of Christ. Bro. Curtis started September 19 for his mission in the South—San Antonio, Texas, where I trust the Lord will give him health as well as success.

Bro. A. H. Smith came to Ono, July 7, to help Bro. Curtis and I to hold grove meetings there, and preached each night for a week, going thence to Porcupine, where he continued another week. The people were highly pleased with his efforts and I think he did much good. Come again, Bro. Smith.

I have been holding regular meetings during the summer at the following places: Wednesday evening, West Frankford; Friday evening, Maple Ridge; Sunday, eleven a. m., Big Cooley; Sunday evening, at Porcupine. But we had to make a change, as other openings needed looking after. When Bro. Curtis left I was placed in charge of the branch. We are getting a nice church building at Porcupine; size 24x40, also an entry on outside. The building will be a credit to the Saints. I have had charge of the building, working on it during the day and preaching nights. We now have it inclosed so that we can hold meetings in it this winter. We held an entertainment in the church October 24 to raise means to complete it, and we did well, clearing over twenty-five dollars. October 25 I came here, having sent appointments ahead, and preached Saturday the 26th, also three times on Sunday, and baptized one in the afternoon. On Sunday, November 3, I went to Sr. Beebe's, in Crawford County, Wisconsin, and preached there at eleven o'clock, then after preaching we troubled the waters again by baptizing two more. So moves the work in Wisconsin; and the cry comes from all around, "Come and preach." Truly the harvest is great and the laborers are few.

I expect to go back to Porcupine next week to resume labors, and I pray for wisdom that I may labor for the best interests of the cause of truth. Trusting I will have the prayers of all the Saints, I am,

In gospel bonds,

ANDREW V. CLOSSON.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Nov. 4.

Editors Herald.—My heart goes out in prayer daily for God's covenant children to keep the fullness of the law. O think, dear Saints, we all have a work to do! At first I did not believe in tithing, yet I prayed, "O, Lord thy will be done." Again I prayed the Lord to search my heart, and I soon became convinced that although we are honest in purpose, yet we are many times mistaken, and we must pray often and strive to know the will of our heavenly Father. Therefore we must have a teacher that is sent of God; and many of the Saints are like myself, so far away, and do not have the opportunity of hearing an elder very often. But we have the church publications and books written by those servants whom he has called. Dear Saints, let us each strive to get all the publications, and when we have read them, loan to some friend and keep them going to those that will read them.

Now that the holidays will soon be at hand, and many make some few presents, let it be a purchase from the Herald Office. Christmas and birthday or wedding presents of books, or a year's subscription to the Herald; and just think! fifty-two times a year it will remind one of your kindness.

Again, many persons when out of employment find a warm, well-lighted, and comfortable place to spend an evening at the public libraries, and as Saints it is our duty to see that our leading church books be placed there. Do not wait for some one else, but let each do what they can; and if we do that which is pleasing to God he will bless.

I am striving to live faithfully and ask an interest in your prayers that my husband and son may come to the knowledge of this glorious truth.

Dear Saints, I believe we each and all must make a sacrifice, whether we have much or little. Some seem to think it is very easy to give if you have it; and some spend more in trying to keep up appearances than they should.

It brings sadness to my heart when I read of the indebtedness due the Herald Office. The opportunity is offered to those who can to help this cause financially. Soon it will pass them by, and I hope and pray that God will bless and prosper those who are willing and disposed to lend their aid to send this gospel to every nation, tongue, and people.

A sister told me of her family experience: her husband was not a member and she paid tithing on what her husband gave her to buy clothing. So in many ways we can always find a way if we earnestly strive to come up higher. Praying that all may strive more earnestly, I remain,

Your sister,

JULIA R. SHORT.

MURRAY, Ky., Nov. 11.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you I met two of the Utah Elders. I preached in Mr. Thomas Kane's house on Saturday eve, showing the difference between the two churches. At the close I gave opportunity for remarks, and Elder Richardson arose and made a few remarks and announced his appointment for next day. I then announced that I would speak at Mr. Jerry Span's house; subject, Succession and the polygamist revelation. Quite a number were present, but the Utah elders were not.

At two p. m. we went and heard Elder Richardson, and O, what slander and abuse he gave us, such as "liars," "scavengers," "opposers of the truth," etc.! We didn't have sense enough to build a temple and redeem the dead; these Josephites had accused them of breaking the laws of the land and also the laws of God, which they had not done; and that he had heard this ever since he was a boy; and this is the reason they would not let us preach in their churches; we always tried to tear down the Church of Jesus Christ. He then proceeded to show from the Old Testament that God always sanctioned it, and how he blessed Abraham and others in the practice of it, and thanked God he was the son of a father that had more than one wife, and that he represented a people that believed in polygamy, and wound up by bearing his testimony that he knew Brigham Young was a true prophet of God and that Joseph Smith received a revelation in 1894 that was rejected by the church.

He commenced about 3:30 and talked till nearly sundown. When he closed I asked him if he was not going to let me speak awhile. He said, "Yes." I told the people that his statement in regard to the revelation being rejected was untrue. I then told them to read the first part of the sixth chapter of Genesis and they would see that it was polygamy and its kindred evils that caused the flood, and that the word of the Lord to Abraham was to hearken unto the voice of his wife and put away the bond woman and her son; also that some of the seven churches in Asia went into polygamy and the Lord was displeased with them on that account; quoted the Book of Mormon and told the people they claimed to believe the book, but in works they denied it; and when I told them what Bro. Joseph said some time before the manifesto was issued that if President Woodruff would go before the Lord and ask him what they should do in regard to polygamy, if he received any answer it would be to put it away, and when he did that and the answer came, according to his own statement, it was to put it away. Then he called on me to sit down as it was his meeting and the man of the house was in his favor, and I closed.

I have just been back there and learned that they are done there, and the progress of their work there has ceased. I challenged them, but they would not debate; no, no!

I crossed the Tennessee River and spoke in two different places, and was invited to come back again, to which invitations I expect to respond soon.

WINGHAM, Ont., Nov. 13.

Editors Herald:—My soul rejoices when I read and hear of the advancement of the work in the different missions, but it seems to me the elders when writing always make it a point to mention only such things as are favorable, so that one would almost think they meet with little or no opposition, or things to discourage; however, my own experience forces me to believe that all have to meet and contend with his Satanic Majesty in some shape.

When I measure my success by the time occupied, and the efforts made, it makes me conclude my progress is slow indeed; but I purpose plodding along, trusting in due time to see the good result that I had in view when putting forth the effort. I do not despair, though my surroundings would lead me in that way, but knowing that God will not allow his word to return unto him void, I look for eternity to reveal what time does not show. The Lord blesses me in preaching the word and enables some of my hearers to understand and see the truthfulness of our position, but about this time the enemy of the Saints and all good walks in and seemingly takes possession of the people. He assumes this right and exercises it in a very quiet way, thus hindering the seed so prayerfully sown from taking root that God might be glorified through some few persons becoming his Saints.

The people appear unconscious of his presence and influence, but he is nevertheless there, doing his usual work of blinding the mind and hardening the heart. The major part of the people brand me as a deceiver and a most uncharitable wretch; others think possibly there is, or might be, some little good in me; while I find one here and another there that have such good judgment as to think I am one of the laborers sent to call all to repentance. This latter class are exceptionally few and far between, still I do not murmur. Let things come as they may, God rules, and he will soon call us to account for the use we have made of life with all its opportunities for becoming like Christ.

In the last three places of labor I baptized three, one in each place, and since coming here a month ago I have baptized a noble sister. She has been exceptionally quick in learning, and will no doubt do good among her folks and her own family. Before uniting with the church she was badly afflicted with stomach trouble. At times it made her think her days were few it was so severe, but since the hour of baptism she has been free from pain and is now testifying to God's goodness in thus healing her.

To-night I commence meetings in Bluevale, an opening east of here. The Orangemen, after a deal of pleading have granted me the use of their hall, so with God's help I hope to be the means of some seeing the word of God more clearly. There are some there greatly interested that I hope will soon appreciate the privileges of a Saint. I have no doubt but what Satan will work also, using those that profess to be Christ's as mediums. If there were no other churches than the only one true church Satan would not be able to hide as well; he would have to work more openly and thus be more liable to detection; so as long as he can it is to his advantage to lead people to be satisfied with the religion of their fathers. Truly the angel said to Joseph that they were "all wrong." This is not because all are evilly inclined, but because the Devil has persuaded them to believe that honesty, sincerity, or ignorance makes all wrong right.

May the Lord continue his work until the truly honest are gathered into his church, the only place of safety in the great day of burning, and clothe the ministry with light and power to carry on the holy work that cost our Lord so much suffering, even death.

Your weak but hopeful brother,

FREDERICK GREGORY.

GLENWOOD, Iowa, Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—We are still alive to the interests of the work in the Fremont district. Our Sunday school convention and district conference held in the Saints' church near Thurman, October 24-27, was a success indeed. The Sunday school work was excellent; everybody was fully satisfied, both members and nonmembers, with the work done. The business of the conference passed off without a jar; we were really a unit, for which we give God the praise. Our social meetings were all we could ask; God's Spirit was with us in power. The preaching services were well attended; the preachers had good liberty, and the Saints thought we had one of the best conferences ever held in the district. Quite a number of our neighbors and friends were in attendance and rejoiced with us in the hope of the life promised of God through Christ.

We are still preaching the word, and baptizing a few occasionally, and the way opens up before us on every hand. New calls reach us for preachers to come and make known the glad tidings of joy as revealed in the gospel. Quite a number of our local brethren are doing well; and we all hope to do more in the future than in the past. Many will heartily respond to the call of the Bishop. Some have already done so.

Yours still, for the right,
HENRY KEMP.

CALIFORNIA, Mich., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—I came here last Saturday and opened the work in the town hall in the evening. One thing that reminded me of the efforts of our ministry in the Brighamite territory, was, a crowd of men attended but not a lady peeped. Sunday morning service brought both ladies and gentlemen, and the evening a still larger crowd. We have held four services here thus far. What the result will be I cannot divine. We have given the people gospel principles liberally. They appear to like and indorse them.

Bro. and Sr. H. A. Lords, formerly of Clear Lake, Indiana, branch, have located here, and through their instrumentality some were interested and we are here. One gentleman said, at the Sunday evening service, "That is the most truth I ever heard put together." A species of opposition by the Free Methodists, in appointing prayer meetings to conflict with our appointments and call the people away, again reminded us of Brighamite scheming; but as a rule, the ones thus responding to such call are those who "are partial in the law" (Mal. 2: 8, 9; Mark 7: 7), and cut a Bible sentence in two parts and play upon the half. How true "the word of God is sharper than a two-edged sword," one edge of which is life, the other death, "savor of life unto life, or of death unto death"! And it is amazing to see some folks go away from service "just killed" by the gospel.

Our recent district conference and Sunday school association, was a complete success; the district very nicely represented. South Scott, Flint, and adjacent points contributed to swell the largest gathering ever had in the district conference. As a matter of fact and news it may be well to state that thirty-four Latter Day Saints have been gathered into the fold at Flint and South Scott since "I Clark Braden" tore the turf last month a year ago, or rather, in September a year ago. The spiritual tone of the conference was pitched high. The Sunday school association has the proper person at the head and if coöperation may be had the cause will march on to a magnificent success. This was plainly written in the gathering at Clear Lake. Our numbers are augmenting, conference enlarging, duties and responsibilities increasing, work, work, work, "the latter-day work."

"Hail its progress, tongue and pen, Aid its needs, ye honest men."

Bro. Briggs is in Valparaiso to make arrangements for American archaeological lectures before the students, professors, and all people who will "come and see." We then expect to go to Seafield, Indiana, where a debate is working up with the Christian or Disciple Church. Mirabile dictu! Has that society been in it, recently? Well, new (?) experiences await us all. When I hear of the Disciples engaging in a polemic tilt with Latter Day Saints I am reminded of the little boy who, when flogged, looked up, and seeing the rod of correction lodged behind the well-known motto on the wall, "The Lord will provide," through tears looked at "Mamma" and sobbed, "I don't—don't want that sitch ahind 'at piture, I want it 'hind at un over here"—"I need thee every hour." And heretofore the Disciples have demonstrated the truth of at least one item of Bible faith, "Ask and ye shall receive."

The work is moving solidly along. Calls for the preaching of the word multiply; men are beginning to religiously consider the "shoddy" material of which their spiritual garments are composed; also that God, in enlightening their reason bids them follow where its holy light leads: "For if that light that is within you become darkness, behold, how great is that darkness."

We will continue the effort at this place for a time, and then on as the ways open.

Hopefully, etc.,
S. W. L. SCOTT.

HOLLERDALE, Wis., Nov. 11.

Editors Herald:—You and the readers of your valuable paper may be interested in the way matters are going at and around the birthplace of the Reorganization. Through urgent requests from Professor Mueller and Mr. Gregory, of Argyle, I commenced a series of meetings in the opera hall and continued with excellent interest for one week at that place. But as the hall was costing so much, and the cost mostly coming out of Professor Mueller's pocket, or would have done so had we stayed longer, we closed, with many invitations to come again.

While Mr. Gregory is not yet a member, if I can judge from appearances he is near the kingdom. Being a lawyer of no mean talent, and having favorably studied Latter Day Saintism for twenty years, I think the church may expect to hear from him at no distant day. As he is a genuine Norsk-Norwegian, and speaks and writes fluently three languages, it is to be hoped that his talent may be at no far future time at the service of the church. Professor Mueller is of Teutonic caste and an excellent young man. He and Bro. G. D. Hayes are partners in business, but at present the Professor is teaching the High School of Argyle. All he lacks of being a Latter Day Saint is the water. I might almost say that he has the Spirit already. Bro. Pender will remember his old friend who so ably presided over the Pender-Gardner discussion.

At Blanchardville—formerly called Zarahemla—I occupied the Blanchard hall for one week, with fair interest. People are not religiously inclined there. I said to my wife that I thought if I had a hand-organ and a monkey I believed I could get out the town.

She said, "Yes, but we lack the hand organ." After a moment's hesitation she heard it said, "We might use the mouth organ." But laying all jokes aside, which so many times go to smooth life's rugged road, I find that the early Saints are highly spoken of. Mr. Blanchard told me in the presence of several of the old settlers that there never was a more honorable people in any community than those who started the Reorganization. The universal opinion of the old settlers here is in harmony with his. I was glad to hear that. I had heard all sorts of stories about horse-thieves, robbers, etc., etc. Partly to satisfy my own mind and to be prepared to defend the good name of the church I made diligent inquiry into those matters, and am happy to say that stories and facts differ widely.

At Black Earth and Pokerville, in Dane County, there was another faction of the church that certainly does not bear a good reputation according to court records and they were by many thought to be a part of the Reorganization, hence the stories. I spoke one Sunday afternoon on the rise of the Reorganization, explaining the difference between us and the Strangites and Brighamites. I called upon Mr. Baker, an old resident, who showed me the exact spot where the old church stood in which the Reorganization was effected. Four feet of it stood in Lafayette County and about sixteen feet in Iowa County. At that time it was intended to build it on the north side of the line which now divides the two counties, but a more recent survey placed the line four feet farther north.

From Blanchardville we went to Postville, six miles east, and secured the Free Baptist church; but after preaching one evening on "punishment for correction," they called the church together for the purpose of putting me out. But like a gasoline torch, I was not to be "put out" by a blow. Five of the nine trustees were outsiders, so I was permitted to remain. At the close of my meetings they made me a present of six dollars. By letter since I learn that the Baptist minister arrived and told his flock that had he been present he would have "blown me so high I would never have returned." I think he must be quite a blow. At this place we are having excellent interest and attendance. The opera hall was crowded to its utmost last night. I learned that several came eight or nine miles.

The Catholic priest has been out every night but two. I preached on "the apostasy," "restoration," "punishment," "fullness of the atonement," "infant baptism," etc., all of which was squarely against Catholicism. The first night the priest was out he came to me after meeting and asked if he might ask some questions the following evening. I answered "certainly." But O, how much I wished I could honorable have said "no sir!" But, worse yet, to my surprise we were left alone in the hall with the janitor. We left the hall, not knowing where to go. Wandering down the railroad track we spied a schoolhouse where we entered through a window, and built a fire and wore away the weary hours of the night mid prayers and tears.

With the morning came a rain which we were compelled to face a mile or more to find a farmhouse, where we asked to be admitted from the rain. Once inside we were permitted to remain all day. Not to be daunted by little things like sleeping in a schoolhouse, we appeared promptly at our post next evening.

But the thoughts of being swallowed by a Catholic priest had engaged my thoughts most of the night previous, as also the day. Entering the pulpit I felt, I imagine, something like a convict entering the gallows. My opening prayer was short. Commending myself and the work to God I asked to be "blessed with the Spirit of my office and calling." Not with special light did I attempt to speak on the fullness of the atonement; but soon came the Spirit in such measure as I have never enjoyed it before. For several hours after, I was so thoroughly filled with the Spirit that sleep was impossible. At the close of the meeting, I gave the privilege of asking questions. The priest arose and in a very gentlemanly way asked if all punishment was "for correction," to which I replied, "That is the true idea of punishment; however, by man it may be improperly administered." He then referred to a murderer who continued in rebellion against God throughout eternity and wanted to know what would be the use of trying to correct him. I asked, "What good of punishing him forever, if neither he nor God could be benefited?" He said that God's justice must be meted out. I answered that God had another attribute, that of mercy; that the Scriptures said that "His mercy endureth forever." "Besides that," said I, "you cite a very extreme case, and so extreme that it is in opposition to the word of God; for it says 'every knee' shall bow and 'every tongue' shall confess, etc., and that John saw the time when every creature in heaven, earth, and hell (under the earth), would glorify God." Then said he, "You believe in universal salvation." I replied that I had faith enough in my brothers and sisters of the human family to believe that they would have the good sense to accept the gospel when all obstacles were removed. Dropping that thought he next asked about infant baptism, to which I replied by introducing first, Christ's atonement for original sin, and then the thought that little children were made our example: "Except ye . . . become as little children," etc., "ye shall not enter into the kingdom." He asked if we could grow small again like a child. I replied, "Certainly not, but there must, according to this language, be a way that we could become like children, and it evidently is in purity, that if by becoming like little children we were in or brought into the kingdom, then little children were in the kingdom and had no need of baptism." We then had some argument on baptism for the remission of sins, which he thought was for the remission of original sin, which I denied, showing that Christ shed his blood for that purpose, making little children members of the kingdom without baptism. Dropping that he asked, "How do you know that the book on the stand before you is the word of God?" I answered, "I do not know that it is; indeed I do not believe that it is;" at which he was very much surprised, and asked me to explain, which I should have done anyway. I said, "I believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God so far as it is translated correctly." "How do you know that it contains the word of God?" said he. "First, by the fulfillment of its prophecies; second, by the Spirit that often accompanies the reading of it, and third, by revelation to me," said I. "Do you believe in present revelation?" he asked. "I certainly do," said I, "or I would not profess to be called of God." Well, the matter ended here, very pleasantly, and I announced the subject of the restoration for the following evening.

Next evening I enjoyed good liberty again and dwelt largely on a comparison between the restored gospel and the old, and then compared it with both Catholicism and Protestantism, dealing in a friendly way with both. At the close the priest wanted to ask a few questions, which he did relative to the gifts of the Spirit in our church, such as tongues, prophecy, etc. We had quite a little tilt on the object of miracles, which he claimed were to convince sinners and which of course I denied, showing that Christ usually said, "Tell it to no man." He said he was a reader of the daily papers and he never had heard of any such in this day and guessed that he must be behind the times. I dryly replied, "maybe you are."

The country is all astir. Will stay here this week. Cannot say where next.

J. W. PETERSON.

HOXIE, Ark., Nov. 11.

Editors Herald:—Rev. Lawson, with whom I have been debating, is an able man in debate; he is also field editor for the Primitive Christian, and I am glad to say he is a nice man in debate. I send you clipping from the Bald Knob Signal, which is self-explanatory. He challenged me to meet him on the same propositions in the adjoining county, to commence the last Tuesday in December. I accepted, so we will renew the fight. I am on my way home for a week's rest, then I will be with Bro. J. D. Erwin and serve as moderator while he and a Missionary Baptist have a theological combat at Shady Grove chapel, only one mile from Bald Knob. Bro. Erwin is in Memphis this week.

After the debate is over I will go to Egbert, a new place where there has never been but two sermons preached by our brethren. Calls are coming, more than I can fill. Bro. Erwin has been with me for one month and I appreciate his help very much, and no doubt will be very lonely when he leaves me for his own field in Alabama, which he expects to do as soon as the debate is over at Shady Grove. We have baptized two there and several more are very near the kingdom.

On Tuesday, the 12th, I arrived home—Pomona—and found Brn. F. C. Keck and Henry Sparling holding meetings at our chapel. I am feeling splendid, enjoying good health and rejoicing in the service of our heavenly Father. Your brother, JOSEPH WARD.

SPARKS FROM OUR ANVIL.

DURING the summer months Bro. C. J. Hunt and the writer were in company, using the district tabernacle in which to break the bread of life. Experiences peculiar in themselves greeted us. We reckon not the degree of success attained by the number of baptisms, but we know of prejudice having been removed and friends won to the cause of Christ. Our hearts were warmed under the Holy Spirit's glow; and refreshed by his enlightening presence. Heartaches were soothed, darkness removed, endurance granted, for which we rendered thanksgiving.

No doubt it seems strange to the mind of a wayward world, where the mists of error dwell, to tell of special divine intervention in this epoch of the world's weird history. But our mind not only reverts to an Abraham or Noah; to a Moses or Samuel; to a John Baptist or Saul of Tarsus; but for some cause we think, and pleasantly too, of that dear boy of Western New York; and we love his memory, for when we gaze upon the divine picture of the work, the marvelous work, he was enabled to bring about under the directing hand of Him who cannot err, we are filled with joy unspeakable and full of glory; for our soul leaps with gladness and our whole being is deeply moved with rejoicing. And that blessed Moroni, hear his sweet words:—

And now I bid unto all, Farewell. I soon go to rest in the paradise of God, until my spirit and body shall again reunite, and I am brought forth triumphant through the air, to meet you before the pleasing bar of the Great Jehovah, the eternal Judge of both quick and dead.

With what calm assurance he spake; and then, to think that after so long a time had elapsed, he came to earth and by divine authority showed the humble, inquiring boy what God had for him to do. I am grieved to hear his name maligned, and the work denounced as a "lying fraud." During this last October I said in hearing of a brother, "Dear Moroni, may my rest be as glorious as yours; the story of your visit to Joseph is not a lie." 'Twas the living power of stern facts that made Joseph Smith, the man of God, fearless of the world's opposition. That caused him to brave the adverse criticisms of the intellect of civilization, and the physical assault of the rabble, the vain harangues of mediocrity. It bade him fling to the breeze of theological perversions of ancient or modern ecclesiasticism the banner put into his hand by an angel guide; and upon the promptings of superhuman power he unfurled it to the gaze of an enraged religious intolerance. But he never retracted a sentence first proclaimed, revised a principle of truth advanced. A divine certainty characterized his religious system with which he was assured that human wisdom had no part in its devising.

We are pleased with the sentiment expressed in editorial of November 6, respecting increase of knowledge and yielding of any inclination toward narrowness of mind. What good is there derived from following in narrow ruts? How anyone can be satisfied in this latter-day work without thought, and study, and reading, such as will increase their store of information is more than we are able to conceive. There has been too much transferring into the church of narrowness, prejudice, etc., simply a change of basis; Paul said: "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." If we have been transplanted, we surely occupy new ground; become surrounded by a new atmosphere; live where new possibilities are within reach of us; new ideas to grasp; new truths to be embraced; new scenes to view; new, because when outside the kingdom we had been lost as to their existence. Let us really examine ourselves, as to what extent since uniting with the church we have become "transformed," and renewed in mind.

We are pleased to observe that an interest is being awakened respecting charts, and stereopticon uses. The sciopticon in connection with Book of Mormon work we consider as excellent. You may read of temples, palaces, monuments, hieroglyphics, roadways, fortifications, works of art in painting and sculpture, and people can form no true conception of what you are talking about; but when upon the screen they behold a view of the buildings, the architectural chiselings, the beautiful works of art, etc., they readily perceive just what you mean, and an increased interest is awakened in the subject. The lecturer himself becomes enthused anew and the lesson becomes inspiring, and curiosity may give way to candid investigation.

We are interested in every department of the church work and hope for its continued prosperity; and that God's blessing may rest upon all who take active part in the same. We glory in its anticipated triumph, and feel grateful for what is offered to the world at large through its sacred channels. We know in whom we have believed. He cannot lie; his word is "yea and amen."

May blessing attend all the ministry in their good, loyal labors. What a wonderful message we bear; what a joyful story of love we tell; what happy promises are extended to the baptized believer; how bright the hope; how sure the reward to the faithful!

Believingly,

J. F. McDOWELL.

THE COMFORTER.

LET a man or woman fail to obtain the Holy Spirit, or lose it after having obtained it, and he or she will speedily lose interest in the church and get out of sorts with it. Any love for it and its institutions will be liable to turn to bitterness and fault-finding. To such a mind the work has no heaven-laden duties, no inspiring privileges, no "pillar of cloud by day," no "pillar of fire by night."

The church, when moving in its holy calling, being authorized to act for God in its sacred ordinances, and fulfilling in all its duties the purpose of its organization, is a spiritual creation, in contradistinction to churches or organizations of men. Men by the spirit of man within them are quick to perceive the material and social advantages belonging to churches of men. Friendship of the respectable elements of society, their applause and good will, as well as advantages of a still more material character, are things of apparent value to the duller comprehension; it requires no inspiration to discern them.

If any man or woman shall join the Church of Christ expecting these or similar advantages, and finding them few, failing also to obtain the Holy Spirit, they fail to discern the body of Christ, the church; to understand and appreciate its great mission and the royal and God-given privilege of membership therewith, is it any wonder that while all about them move and labor men and women with almost shining faces, rejoicing in the work, enjoying its privileges, living its high life, enjoying the Holy Spirit's comforting influence, willing to spend and be spent in its service as revealed in the gospel restored, willing indeed if need be to lay down their lives therefor, while these others are sighing for the leeks and onions of modern Egypt in the shape of churches and institutions of men, whose present advantages are apparent to their natural eyes:—

For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.—1 Cor. 2: 11.

Moral: To rightly discern, understand, and appreciate the body of Christ, the church, and thereby become prepared for our great heritage in celestial and eternal conditions, we must obtain and retain at least to some degree the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, which, being a celestial gift, may be received by obedience to God's law relating to its reception, and may only be retained by continued observance of heaven's laws as revealed in the gospel of Christ in application to daily life and practice.

Sunday School Associations.

To the Sunday School Superintendents of the Spring River District.—At our last convention a resolution, as follows was passed: That our program committee should consist of the superintendents of the district, they to have power to choose some one to assist them in preparing their part of the program for the next convention, to be held with the Angola Sunday school in December. If you can be represented in that convention you should address Charles Sutherland, Webb City, Missouri, at once, who will state to you the amount of time you can occupy on the program. We are to have a banner which will be given to the school having the best part of the program each convention. I have not heard from the members of that committee yet, and if collections have not been taken in your school for the banner, do so at once, as the time is short to do what is on hand. Let us all be up and doing and with the Lord's help the Sunday schools of the Spring River district will climb to a higher plane and keep step with the onward and upward march. To this end I pray.

Your sister and colaborer,
MINA E. HART, Asst. Supt.

Miscellaneous Department.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Mary C. Hungate would like to hear of the whereabouts of W. A. Pannell. When last heard of he was in Birmingham, Alabama. Any person knowing of the above-named will confer a favor by writing to her.

MARY C. HUNGATE.

Box 620, San Antonio, Texas.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Northern Wisconsin district conference will convene at Twin Lakes, Chippewa County, Saturday, December 7, at ten a. m. We hope to have a report of each of the branches in district. Be sure to send a correct report in full of all the changes since last report, also the official reports. There may be some new work to be done, so we want a good turnout. Everybody is invited. We have open-hearted Saints here and they will take care of all that may come. Come and bring the Spirit with you.

A. L. WHITEAKER, Pres.
J. T. HACKETT, Clerk.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

All parties wishing to purchase the above-titled book should send directly to the Herald Office for it and not to me. I do not own that book and never did, but by request of competent parties I wrote it for the church, when laboring in the ministry, and have never controlled it nor been in any way benefited by its sale. It is church property.

W. W. BLAIR.

BORN.

NEWMAN.—At Adrian, Illinois, February 23, 1891, to Mr. John A. and Sr. Ella N. Newman, a son, and named Claude A.; blessed at Burnside, October 29, 1895, by Elders J. S. Roth and W. T. Lambert.

GOODE.—To Bro. William and Sr. Emma Goode, of Tabor, Iowa, August 23, 1895, a son; blessed October 29, by Elders H. Kemp and M. Gaylord, and named Alma Walter,

ELLISON.—At Adrian, Illinois, August 3, 1890, to Bro. Thomas B. and Sr. Delila Ellison, a daughter, and named Daisy Nancy. Blessed October 21, 1895, by Elder J. S. Roth.

DIED.

BAILLIFF.—At her home in Lancaster, Kansas, October 13, Sr. Florence Bailiff, aged 33 years. She was a daughter of Bro. and Sr. D. Munns, and had been a member of the church since childhood. The remains were removed to Netawaka, the home of her parents, at which place she had expressed a desire to be laid to rest. Bro. Peak preached the funeral sermon at the Saints' chapel, to a large congregation. Sr. Flo was very patient during her long illness, and was perfectly resigned to the will of God, only expressing the regret that her mother could not go with her. She was a loving daughter, sister, and wife, and a kind, true friend, and trusting in the promises of her Savior, passed away with a look which told of the brightness of the world above shining in her eyes.

BUTTERFIELD.—At her home, Laguna, California, of typhoid fever, Sr. Jane Story, wife of Bro. Chauncy C. Butterfield, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. Glaud Rodger. She was born in San Bernardino, California, July 15, 1855; died October 15, 1895; aged 40 years and 3 months. She was a true Latter Day Saint, a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and a kind and affectionate sister and daughter. She leaves a grief-stricken husband, eight children, (two of them now lying low with the same fever), a mother, sister, and two brothers, to mourn their sad loss. She was baptized July 21, 1864, at Watsonville, California, by Elder E. H. Webb, and was confirmed by her father. Jane was loved by all who knew her, as was manifested by the long procession which followed her to her last resting place and covered her grave with flowers. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord;" "they rest from their labors."

Sleep, my daughter, no more sorrow
Shall thy gentle spirit pain;
Loved ones mourn their sad bereavement,
But for thee to die is gain.
Patient here, through toil and suffering,
God hath called thee home to rest,
Where no earthly grief can enter
To the mansions of the blest.
Not for thee, my much-loved daughter,
Do we shed the bitter tear
(For we know that thou art happy),
But for those remaining here.
Soon or later we must follow;
Thou hast only gone before;
Then, if faithful, we shall meet thee,—
Meet where parting is no more.

HER MOTHER.

DAILEY.—At Visalia, California, October 2, 1895, Sr. Nancy A. Dailey, aged 72 years, 11 months, and 2 days. She was born in Essex County, New York, October 30, 1822. She was married to Bro. P. C. Dailey October 1, 1843, and joined the Reorganized Church in 1865. She has ever lived a faithful Saint, although she has been a great sufferer the last few years. She died strong in the faith of a glorious resurrection. Two sons and one daughter mourn, her companion having died about two years previously.

DOVE.—At Omaha, Nebraska, November 2, 1895, Bro. Joseph Dove, aged 66 years and 9 months. He was born in England, where he united with the Old Church, but after coming to this country he joined his fortunes with the Reorganization of which he has been a faithful and consistent member for a quarter of a century. He leaves wife and one daughter, Sr. Ellen Beck. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. Funeral service at Saints' chapel, conducted by Bro. J. S. Strain. The body was laid to rest in the Prospect Hill cemetery.

STREET.—Hazel Pauline Street, grandchild of Bro. and Sr. W. S. Loar, was born March 2, 1894, and died October 25, 1895. Funeral services were held at the house of W. S. Loar; sermon by Elder H. H. Robinson, assisted by Elder J. W. Brackenbury.

LOGSDON.—Sr. Nanna, wife of Alva Logsdon, died August 16, 1895, at Benwood, West Virginia. Deceased was baptized November 4, 1894, at Benwood, by Priest Francis Ebeling; confirmed by Elders G. H. Hilliard and L. D. Ullom. Interment at Cameron, West Virginia; funeral sermon by Bro. J. F. A. Smith.

ROBERTS.—At Farmington, Iowa, October 30, 1895, Robert S. Roberts. Deceased was born October 3, 1822, at Merionethshire, Wales, where he made his home until nineteen years old, when he came to America, and located in Pennsylvania, where he was married to Miss Ann Evans. To them were born one son and one daughter. The mother was buried in Pennsylvania. Bro. Roberts came to Iowa in 1859 and was married to Emily Hollowell July 3, 1860. To them were born one daughter and one son. Bro. Roberts was baptized by Robert Warnock and united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ August 16, 1868. Was ordained a teacher June 17, 1869. This office he has filled acceptably to the church ever since. For thirty-five years he has been an honored citizen of our town, following the vocation of blacksmith the most of the time. His sterling integrity and moral honesty need no eulogy in the presence of those who knew him. He had an earnest and settled faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and was ever ready to do in his way whatever Christian duties devolved upon him. He leaves his wife, one son, two daughters, and one stepdaughter to bear the burden of grief caused by this parting. Funeral service was held at the L. D. S. church at two p. m., November 1, 1895; sermon by Elder James McKiernan.

BAKER.—At St. Mary's Hospital, San Francisco, California, October 28, 1895, Emma, wife of George Baker and daughter of Elder J. H. and Sr. Rhoda Ann Lawn, of Mulberry, California, aged 25 years, 10 months, and 24 days. She was baptized when twelve years old, by Elder D. J. Phillips; was married on her twenty-first birthday to George Baker. She always lived an exemplary life, and ever bore a faithful testimony to the truth of the gospel. Sr. Emma will be greatly missed at the Sabbath school, Saints' meetings, and Religio-Literary exercises, as she always took an active part in each. Husband, two little sons, father, mother, five brothers, five sisters, and a host of relatives and friends lament her early departure, for none knew her but to love her.

Funeral sermon was delivered in the Christian church, Hollister, October 30, by Elder C. W. Hawkins, from I Corinthians 15; interment in the Oddfellows' cemetery.

LOCKERBY.—At his home at Coldwater, Michigan, October 19, 1895, Bro. William Lockerby. Born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, July 27, 1834; came to the State of New York when six years of age; located in Michigan thirty-five years ago and married Miss Cornelia Ball, whom he leaves a widow. He was baptized into the Latter Day Saints' Church, July 24, 1876, and was a consistent and loving man. Was ordained a teacher and acted for the Coldwater branch a number of years. He also performed the duties of Bishop's agent for thirteen years with great credit to himself and the district. He leaves wife, three daughters, two brothers, three sisters, and a large circle of friends to mourn his departure. Funeral from the residence. Remarks by Elder S. W. L. Scott. The respect had for this good man can be determined by the length of cortege which extended over three quarters of a mile. He was laid to rest in the beautiful Quincy cemetery. Sweet be his repose! Weep not as those without hope. His rest is doubtless a glorious one.

SEVILLE.—Arthur, son of Mr. Jesse and Sr. Jane Seville, of Grinnell, Iowa, aged 9 months, died November 2, 1895. Alfred, aged 4 years, son of the same parents, died November 7, 1895. He was a bright and intelligent little fellow, much loved by all who knew him. Owing to the nature of the disease, diphtheria, short services were conducted at the cemetery.

"Wide the shining gates are opened,
For the children are at home.
Back to us comes the sweet echo,
'Suffer' 'little ones' 'to come.'"

MCLEOD.—At Cormorant, Minnesota, October 22, Sr. Mary, wife of Bro. W. W. McLeod. Deceased was born December 19, 1837, at Gatestown, New Brunswick; baptized November 19, 1884, at Cormorant, Minnesota, by Elder Thomas Nutt, and has ever been firm in the faith. Her home has always been a home for the servants of God. Nothing was kept back that would comfort their hearts and aid in making them feel at home. The many friends that were present at the funeral gave evidence of the esteem in which she was held. Husband, seven children, seventeen grandchildren, mother, and six brothers and sisters mourn her departure. Funeral the 24th inst. at Cormorant; sermon by Elder I. N. Roberts, assisted by Elder T. J. Martin.

JOHNSON.—At Kansas City, Kansas, November 1, 1895, William Ernest, son of Bro. Albert Johnson. The deceased was born June 7, 1893.

WHEELER.—At Atlanta, Georgia, October 26, 1895, by coming in contact with a live wire while engaged in his occupation as an electrician, Mr. Charles E. Wheeler, aged 30 years, 1 month, and 25 days. Deceased was a son of Sr. E. P. Wheeler, of Chicago. He was not a member of the church but bore a good reputation as an honorable, kind-hearted man. The remains were sent to Chicago and buried from the Presbyterian church; funeral sermon by Elder F. G. Pitt.

THE HYMNAL IS COMING.

left for us to do but to supply the money ourselves or borrow it, paying a good per cent- age for it.

Now these are the facts in the matter, and we ask you to consider them and ask your- selves how long an institution would stand in the world under similar conditions, and what caused the Master to say that the children of the world were "wiser in their generation than the children of light." Where in the Scriptures is it written that we have claim upon the Master before we have done our part? Let us realize that to be in touch with this great latter-day work it is necessary to be acquainted with and help every depart- ment of it.

TRACT FUND

Every mail that comes bears a request from some one of the ministry in the field to send them tracts and reading matter to distribute free to help open up new places; and thou- sands in the church can testify what these tracts have done for them; yet not one since I came to the office in July last, has remitted one cent to help pay the postage on these tracts; nor do I write this to find fault be- cause it has not been done, but to show the possibilities for good there are here with the proper help from the church abroad.

I would suggest that each branch of the church start a "tract fund," and send, every month, amounts received to the Bishop or to the Business Manager of the Herald Office. Who will be the first to make the move? God will bless the effort.

Brethren, we ask your help to move for- ward the publishing department. We call especial attention to the young who for years have been reading the Autumn Leaves, one of the best publications for the young and their advancement that is published on this broad earth. The editor of that magazine is mak- ing a sacrifice of her life to make it a success; but I am sorry to say that the subscribers are over $3,000 in arrears on their subscription, thereby causing her efforts and sacrifice of time and brain to also be a loss.

This causes me to inquire, Are we indeed a band of brethren and sisters, bound together by the ties of love? And have we one another's interest at heart as God's children should have?

Once more we appeal to the church to unite with us and stand shoulder to shoulder to push forward every department of God's work.

And, once more, and to increase our faith, confidence, and our good works toward one another, we ask and appeal for cash in ad- vance for the Hymnal; and in justice to all we will have to first send Hymnals to those who first send in their money to help get it out. General Conference directed its publi- cation when the sale of one thousand was guaranteed, so we are ahead of time, as this has not yet been done, by almost one third, as subscriptions are not guarantees, I am sorry to say, as our books are the witnesses; and the Herald Office books testify against many hundreds. So send in your cash with orders.

For the work yours,

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

Paper covers 10c.

COWDERY LETTERS.

Written on the subject of the Rise of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by Elder Oliver Cowdery. They contain valuable matter concerning the Calling of Joseph the Seer, the Discovery and Translation of the Book of Mormon, and the Angelic Bestowal of the Priesthood.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS, AND THE SEER OF PALMYRA.

BY ELDER M. H. BOND.

Modern Prophets after ancient types. Who was Joseph Smith? Was he a religious impostor? Was he a "Spirit medium?" What does the Bible say about Joseph Smith?

The Truth by Three Witnesses—Christianity in the First and Nineteenth Century—The Ancient and Modern Pharisee—The Revelations of Emanuel Swedenborg—Modern "Spirit Mediums," and Hypnotic Religious "Revival," as Against Reason and Bible Testimony, and in Contradistinction to the work of "The Latter Day Seer," Examined in the Light of Facts and Human History—A Rational and Scriptural Exposition or Explanation of Old and New Testament Prophecy and Doctrine.

A Revision of "Spiritual Gifts," with supplement and appendix.

Paper covers..... 25
Full cloth binding..... 50

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshipped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

THE RUINED GILA CITIES.

THE attention of people interested in archæology and ethnology generally has long been directed to the ruins of the cliff dwellings in Northern Arizona and Southern Colorado, but there are comparatively few persons outside of Arizona and New Mexico who know that in Southern Arizona there is a field far more interesting and of wider range. So eminent authority as Major J. W. Powell, recently of the United States Geological Survey, is quoted in support of this statement. Conservative estimates put the population of the Gila country at fully 2,000,000 when it was at its height.

The Gila remains have been but little explored because of the inaccessibility of the region, the intolerable dry heat during two thirds of each year, and the total lack of water where it is needed. The mining prospectors who have tramped for years over all the mountains and through every valley in the Territory have given no heed to this part of the Gila country, because, no water being there, it would be useless to attempt to develop a mine even on good surface indications. An expedition under Frank Cushing did some work near Los Muertos, which is known in the Southwest as the Pompeii of Arizona, but with the breaking down of his health the enterprise came to an end. The area of the country in which the remains of a prehistoric people are found is some 300 square miles. It extends from the junction of the Gila and Colorado Rivers eastward to the Superstition Mountains, and from Phoenix on the north almost to the Mexican line. Near Casa Grande the most extensive Indian remains are to be found.

The country is a ruin from one end to the other. All parts of it bear unmistakable evidences of irrigation, canals several hundred miles long and built with exactness and skill, and of cities of 30,000 and 40,000 population. One can walk for miles and find every foot of the sandy surface more or less mixed with pieces of broken pottery. The paint is still on them, and is not in the least faded, though it has lain exposed for ages. In the locality of Mesa City and Tempe an overflow from the Gila at some distant period washed against the ruins until they crumbled and were spread out level with the country. Back ten miles from the Gila River the ground is higher, and was once the site of a city. Portions of the wall by which it was protected are still standing, more than twenty feet in thickness. Inside are the mound like ruins of the houses, which, being less durable, have crumbled. The buildings must have been very large, for in some instances the mounds are 300 feet in length by 200 in width and 20 in height. The space inclosed by the wall is about fifty miles by three. Much of the country is very little higher than the present bed of the Gila, and at one time a branch of that stream must have flowed into a basin and formed a natural reservoir. There was a rise of about ten feet greater at one point between the basin and the river, and the sandstone formation shows unmistakable signs of having been cut by artificial means, perhaps with the idea of assisting the entrance of the water by enlarging the passage. Five canals lead out of the basin, all on the south and west, which confirms the belief that it was once a reservoir formed chiefly by natural causes, and used to store water against the period of drought. The prehistoric city is laid out north and south, at least, in a majority of instances the streets run to the cardinal points. The walls seem to vary a little from this rule; in fact, are crooked in places, as if they might have been constructed for the support of bastions or towers. This city and the one containing an old fort further down the river are the only ones in which the writer ever found any evidence of preparation for war. It seems as if the races who lived in this Gila country were either so numerous that they feared no attack or they had no enemies with which to contend. South of Phoenix, on the mesa, are the ruined corrals or stock pens in which their animals were kept. Many finds prove the purpose for which they were used. What the animals were is not so easily determined. On slats found in ruins south of the Salt River are splendid figures of llamas. In the ruins that have best withstood the exposure of the ages many interesting specimens of the ceramic art have been found. Ollas of all shapes and sizes, urns containing the ashes of the dead, and jars partially filled with parched corn and beans are found in a remarkable state of preservation. It seems as if the entire city had been swept by a flood and the earthen houses melted down, or they were shaken by an earthquake and toppled into a thousand fragments, giving the inhabitants barely time to escape. Few of the skeletons that the amateur diggers in the ruins have taken out show signs of mutilation or have broken bones. The people appear to have died of suffocation or some natural cause that left no mark upon the frame. In working in several spots where bones have been found, deeper digging has brought to light large quantities of bone dust as fine and light as gunpowder. In one spot near Tempe, several tons of bone dust have been found recently, lying in what appears to have once been a trench some seventy feet long and two deep, nine feet below the surface of the sun-baked earth. The edges of the deposit of bone dust were broken and uneven, so that it could not mark a place of burial. Does it consist of the remains of animals or is the dust that of human beings? If the latter, was it the results of funeral rites, or were the bodies deposited there by some great flood that came over the land without a warning? The majority of the skeletons discovered in the Gila Valley are in good condition, and it is therefore not easy to reconcile this fact with the finding of the great deposits of bone dust.—New York Sun.

1 Glad are we that now the gospel,
 Is restored to earth again,
 As 'twas said by an Apostle,
 We the Spirit may obtain;
 By obedience
 To redemption's only plan.

2 God has given us his Spirit,
 For we have obeyed his word;
 And it whispers, saints, O hear it,
 "Own him as your sovereign Lord."
 Holy Spirit!
 Unto us thy help afford.

NOTE:—The numbers in brackets indicate the number of music in "The Saints' Harmony" and hymn in the "Saints' Harp."

THE HYMNAL IS COMING !

IN about thirty days the much-talked-of Hymnal will be ready to place in the hands of the church. The committee appointed to compile it, after much patient labor, completed their work creditably to themselves and the church. It was then placed in the hands of the electrotypers to prepare plates for the printers; and the Board of Publication, to facilitate matters and get the work out promptly, and to guard against errors, placed one of the committee in Chicago to proofread and correct any errors in music or words that might be in the original, or such typographical errors as might be made by those making the plates, and for the purpose of getting it out without delay, which in their wisdom was the proper thing to do. After an expense of almost $500.00, and $150.00 additional for paper and material, it is ready for the printer. It will then be ready for binding, which will cost about $200.00 more before the first thousand are ready to mail; and it will cost from $75 to $100.00 to pay Uncle Sam before he will deliver them.

I call your attention to these few facts for two reasons: First, to answer the criticisms upon the management of the publishing department in ordering cash in advance on this book; second, to show every stockholder in this institution a part of the responsibility that in our judgment rests upon him.

Let us examine the present existing conditions. The church has found it necessary to establish a publishing department for the furthering of God's kingdom; and in harmony with law both human and divine they so organize, and it becomes a part of the church, and in which all alike have an interest and become partners to its success by the covenant they make with the church by entering its fold.

The Board of Publication, appointed by the church, having called upon your humble servant to leave home and friends and come here and take charge of the business part of the publishing house, we find the Saints divided into two classes principally, with few exceptions. One class looks upon the office as a private institution, run in the interests of the few; the other class looks upon it as public property from which they can take all they can without giving anything in return. But, thank God, there are a few who are laboring for the building up of this department in every way they can, seeking to assist this part of God's kingdom; and had it not been for the help of the outgoing Business Manager in time of need, this department would be a thing of history, of the past.

Our labor here we feel to be temporary, and it is not for glory or gain, but because of our love for the success of this glorious latter-day work in all its departments that we make this appeal through the pages of the Herald, which should be used for better purposes.

We notice in the Herald of October 7 a brother's criticism on our demand for cash in advance for the Hymnal.

We doubt the wisdom of such advice as that from a traveling minister, who is sent out to represent the interests of God's kingdom in all its departments; and this we believe to be to the hurt of the treasury of God's storehouse, and amounts to practically instructing the Saints not to pay money into the treasury until the work is done. Such teaching is equivalent to saying that if his preaching is not considered worth the allowance given his family, to let the family go hungry.

Now, we look upon this demand or request for cash in advance for the Hymnal merely as a request to the stockholders to put up the means to publish that which they have ordered done, and in return for it they get value received in the publication when completed. Is this not a reasonable demand? If not, where is the money to come from?

For the information of the brother and for the information of the church, the present management have this to say: We would rather have only five hundred subscriptions for the Hymnal accompanied by the cash than five thousand without cash,—such as are attached to other publications of the office that the management have been compelled to carry on the books from two to ten years without any return, and in the meantime, by reason of your neglect, compelled to borrow money at from six to eight per cent interest for the privilege of carrying such names. Brethren, is this just? Is it right or in harmony with present revelation which says, Saints "shall pay for that which they receive." (See Doctrine and Covenants 72:3.)

Here is a fair business statement of facts: Here is one of the departments of God's church—the publishing department, from which you as a body demand a certain work which will require an outlay of about $1,000.00, and you place a man in charge of it and place no means in his hands to do the work.

Now, there are but two ways of getting it. If his faith is not sufficient to call upon God to supply stock, and material, and food for his family, while doing the work without money and without price, or in the absence of being instructed to go fishing for it as Peter was, which we confess our faith is not equal to, he cannot use either way. But as past experience has taught us that a little faith coupled with a good deal of works has brought better returns, then there is nothing

WORK FOR THE DEAD.

THE Deseret News for October 29, 1895, contains the report of remarks made at the General Conference of the Utah Church in the tabernacle, Salt Lake City, October 4, 1895, by Elder Mariner Merrill, one of the apostles. The subject as indicated by the headline was, "TEMPLE WORK." From that published report we make the following extracts:—

... We have in operation four temples in the church. Some of them have been in operation quite a number of years, and all have had work done in them for some time. But we have not done a great deal of work yet compared to the amount that we have to do. For your information I might read the statistics of the work that has been done in the temples up to the last of last year, and you will find that it has not been so extensive as it should have been. The Salt Lake Temple has probably been well filled since it was opened; but other temples in the church have been very slimly attended, and I believe it has been a consideration on the part of the Presidency of the church whether it would be wise to keep all the temples open during all the year. I do not know that they have considered it very seriously, but I have heard remarks of that kind. The baptisms that have been performed up to December 31 of last year (1894) only amount to 773,737—a little over three quarters of a million. This comprises the work in all the temples from the beginning, not including, however, the Endowment House. Of course, there was quite an amount of work done in the Endowment House; but we have found that a great deal of that work has been duplicated, from the fact that people did not keep a record of the work themselves, and the records of the Endowment House in times past were not available to everybody. . . .

The Lord recognizes in his servants the right and the authority to advise and counsel the Saints in these matters. We quote from Peter, and we quote from James and John, and other prophets, and we have the same right to quote from the Prophet Joseph, or from the Prophet Brigham, or from the Prophet Wilford. In fact, to me the living oracles of the church are more important, if we should make any difference at all, than the written word. It is a good thing to have the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; but it is a little better in my mind to have the living oracles of God in our midst. The Lord deals with his people according to circumstances and conditions. He reveals to them from time to time his mind and will. We never have had the promise of having everything at once. But we have the promise of having line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little. Hence the importance of the living oracles of the church, who are in harmony and fellowship with the heavens. These servants of God have had the spirit of Joseph in continuing the work that was commenced by the prophet in the erection of temples, and millions of dollars have been spent by the Latter Day Saints in the building of temples, and I suppose some few non-Mormons have contributed also for this purpose. There is an object in all this, and the Latter Day Saints should consider the purposes for which the temples of the Lord are erected. We cannot get along without them now, we have had too much experience. If we had not built those temples, the Lord might have rejected us. The Saints in all parts of the land should consider seriously these matters. You want your children sealed to you; you want your wives sealed to you, and wives want their husbands; you want your folks that have gone beyond the veil officiated for. We have only just commenced this work. We have not baptized a million yet out of the hundreds of millions that have lived and died. . . .

Only a comparatively few people in the church have seemed to have much interest in this work; and I will venture to say here that there are plenty of people that have contributed liberally towards building the temples and they have not entered into them yet. I find people of this kind almost every day. They say they have helped build the temple, but they have not had time yet to go in and officiate. "But I must take time," is what they will exclaim.

The Presidency of the church hold the key to this work. They direct its affairs; and as I said to you, perhaps the Lord has not revealed everything to them yet, but he will reveal line upon line, as he did to the prophet over a year ago the propriety of extending the sealing ordinance farther than we had previously done. Of course, that added a little more work to the temples.

The subject is in itself interesting, and the remarks coming from the source they did are quite as interesting in the light of facts. The speaker is one of the latest apostles chosen by the Utah Church, if not the very latest, and is in the flush of his self-appreciation as an apostle. His memory is not burdened by any of the unfortunate things which must cloud at times the minds of some of his apostolic brethren. He was engaged in what he calls "temple work" while he was yet a bishop at Richmond, and has doubtless been so engaged since; and hence, is able to speak with knowledge as to the statistical part.

The ostensible object of building the temples at Georgetown, Manti, Logan, and Salt Lake City, was that in them baptisms for the dead relatives and friends of the devotees of the faith might be performed, the temples succeeding and taking the place of the "Endowment House," in Salt Lake City.

Those who have been desirous of passing through the "Endowment" ceremonies, for themselves, and of attending to baptisms for their dead, have been charged a certain sum for the privilege; the sums so paid passing into the general or specific funds of the church, to be used at the discretion of the church officers. From 1848-9 up to the finishing of the temples at Saint George and Logan, the ceremonies of sealing, celestial marriage, and baptism for the dead were performed in the "Endowment House," located near the Temple, in Salt Lake City; but after the completion of the temple, services in the "Endowment House" were abandoned and the people instructed to visit the temples to do work for the dead. Subsequently the temples at Manti and Salt Lake were completed and work in them begun.

For something like forty-seven years prior to last April, sealing and baptisms for the dead relatives and friends were actively taught, and as actively practiced; the people being given to understand that the system was perfect as it came from the lips of the Prophet Joseph Smith; and many thousands of those people so taught believed; and securing the requisite certificates from their bishops and presiding elders, followed by permits from the Presidency, visited the temples, received their endowments, and performed the rites of baptism for their dead, paid the fees charged for the service rendered, and went away believing the work to have been correctly done and the acts binding on earth and in heaven. Many of these must have been shocked, and possibly seriously distressed, to be told last spring at the conference by President Woodruff, as they were, that much of the work the people had been doing for themselves and their dead was unavailing, the methods having been misunderstood and the work wrongly done, making it necessary that the work should be done over in some other way; and advising the people to set about it and have their work done in as short a time as possible.

While saying nothing for or against the doctrines of sealing and baptism for the dead in this article; we are peculiarly impressed by the thought that after forty-seven years of work done under a system said to have been so grand and of such stupendous importance to the people, it was discovered by the latest "living oracle" that the work so done was unavailing and of no effect, notwithstanding all the earnest teaching of the leaders and earnest obedience of the followers, what may not the people expect, if accepting the new teaching and again repaying the charges again perform the work once done by the advice and under the direction of these same leaders, they shall be told that again their work was unavailing and must be done over again.

Is there not a limit to the credulity of even that longsuffering people?

We are reminded that once when at American Fork, Utah, in conversation with Dr. Edward Isaacson and Elder Barret, at the house of the former, the latter contended that the doctrine of plural marriage was true, but that they had not practiced it right; to which we offered that if forty years of experience in the practice of a theory so extravagantly praised as a revelation from God, and claimed so earnestly as such a wondrous elevator of human morals, should result in the discovery that it was wrongly practiced, it only showed that the dogma was wrong in its inception and in itself; as no other doctrine enunciated by the Latter Day Saints at the beginning of the work had been proved by the experience of its practice to have been wrongly conceived, or to have produced bad results. So, in like manner, in regard to the practice of our Utah contemporaries in baptizing for the dead and the sealing of persons, living and dead, to the living for companionship and family relationship beyond time. It was gravely stated last spring by President Wilford Woodruff, regarded by the church over which he presides as the present "living oracle," that they "had been practicing these things wrongly." If so, and the work is to be done over again, it shows that the conception of its practice was wrong in its inception,—started wrong on a wrong basis,—misunderstood and misapplied by the living oracle with whom it originated, or through whom it was declared, no matter who that one was. Reasoning from this possibility, one "living oracle" being heard through whom a principle has been promulgated, when he is succeeded by another "living oracle," there may be another declaration of principle promulgated, directly in opposition to the principle announced through the first "living oracle," which principle had been received as a law or rule of action, written as a law, acted upon as a law, and solemnly recorded and avowed to be a law to the church; reversing the economy and policy of the church and putting the probity, good faith, and faithfulness of the first "living oracle" into grave discredit; and jeopardizing the faith and confidence of the people in the written word. In like manner the third and fourth succeeding "living oracle," should there be such, may overrule, contravene, and even contradict the principles and records of his predecessors unto an indefinite period.

Under such a condition of things there could be no stability in principle, doctrine, or practice. The people would have no surety that the work done by them, sacrifices made, duties performed, would be of permanent value, or of binding efficacy.

It is time such policy as this should be seen and discarded by the people, the innocent people of Utah; those upon whom the burdens are laid.

How long, O Lord, how long! It would seem that stupidity itself should revolt from such an apparent imposition, to say nothing of the protest of an indignant intelligence.

MINISTERS' HALF-FARE PERMITS.

WE have been notified by the Chairman of the Western Passenger Association that the lines forming said Association have established a Clergymen's Permit Bureau, which will hereafter issue permits, and that one joint permit will be good over the following lines of road: Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Burlington Route; viz., Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Burlington and Missouri River Railroad in Nebraska; Hannibal and St. Joseph; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; Chicago, Burlington, and Kansas City; Burlington and Northwestern; Burlington and Western; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha; Colorado Midland; Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; Kansas City, Pittsburg, and Gulf; Kansas City, Ft. Scott, and Memphis; Kansas City, Osceola, and Southern; Minneapolis and St. Louis; Missouri, Kansas, and Texas (north of Denison, Tex.); Missouri Pacific; Rock Island and Peoria; Sioux City and Pacific; St. Joseph and Grand Island; St. Louis, Iron Mountain, and Southern; St. Louis and San Francisco; Union Pacific System; Wabash; Wisconsin Central Lines.

Those making application will be furnished blanks by local agents of the lines named. Two blanks are issued: one for pastors of local churches, another for traveling ministers, missionaries, etc. Those not in charge of local congregations must inclose their credentials, which will be returned after examination. Applicants must certify that they are wholly engaged in religious work. (See blank forms for particulars.) Applications must be indorsed and stamped by local agents. Every applicant is required to remit fifty cents, which is applied to the maintenance of the Bureau, which is operated at considerable expense to the association.

This is a good arrangement and will prove a great convenience to all concerned and affected by it. It has received the voluntary indorsement of ministerial associations in Chicago, and will be appreciated by all ministers granted the courtesies of said roads. It will save time and trouble by doing away with the necessity of making application to each separate road, and will also result in dropping from the lists unworthy applicants who have taken advantage of the clerical privilege, to which they were not entitled.

The question of ministerial salaries is to be inquired into and a just rule applied in granting permits. Our ministry, who give their time and talents on condition that their families are supplied actual necessities, will appreciate this feature of the Bureau's rules. They have been discriminated against to some extent, largely through religious prejudice. Investigation will prove that they have been among those deserving the half-fare privilege. We trust that none but those entitled to permits will apply. Address applications to B. D. Caldwell, Chairman Western Passenger Association, Rookery Building, Chicago, Illinois. Inclose Chicago draft or postal or express order for fifty cents. Do not send stamps.

WHO PAYS THE BILL?

ALL PAID IN.—There are six saloons in Nauvoo and the proprietors walked up to the treasurer's office and replenished the city's bank account to the amount of $750, the quarterly payment last Friday.

There are probably between 1,000 and 1,100 inhabitants in Nauvoo, which gives less than two hundred to the saloon. The area of country tributary to the city is comparatively small, as it is cut off by the Mississippi River on two sides and is passed by railways on the north, east, and southeast, within seven, twelve, and sixteen miles; so that at best it is not a heavy support that the town gets from the country. Now, an interesting question to one who has lived in the old historic town and wishes it well is, Who pays this sum of $3,000 per year for the privilege of selling stuff that takes the nickels and dimes out of the citizens' pockets, and befuddles their brains? It is not within reason to think that the saloon keepers pay this tax just for the fun of selling their goods, and without hope for its return to their own bank account; hence the conclusion is inevitable that the customers, whether from city or country, are the ones who pay this bill, as well as supporting by their drink habit the families of six of their townsmen, including the men themselves.

Lamoni has a population a little larger now than Nauvoo, and we cannot help thinking what a burden the support of six men and their families who were engaged in the selling of intoxicants would be in itself, saying nothing of the additional cost to society, the resulting rioting, crime, and its prosecution, and necessary police regulations would be.

Of course the Nauvoo paper from which this temperance pointer is taken will give the HERALD a roasting for being worried over the good, and morals of the old town; but as we fought the liquor traffic there when we lived there, and have fought it at Plano and at Lamoni, as well, it will not matter; so we can say to the Independent and Rustler, If you do not want people to take notice of the sort of business done in the "old historic town," do not publish the signs. Amen.

PERSECUTION OF MISSIONARIES.

THE following clippings are sent us by Brn. W. W. Blair and Beestrom, respectively. The first is from the Chicago Record, sent by Bro. Blair; the second from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, sent by Bro. Beestrom, of St. Louis.

MADISON, Fla., Nov. 7.—Four alleged Mormon elders, giving their names as Patterson, Young, Johnson, and Stafford, who have been working for a month past principally among women, endeavoring to make converts, they claimed, were visited by masked men last night at the house occupied by them near Greenville, a small town near here, and mercilessly whipped and then ridden on rails. It was claimed that they had women converts visiting the house occupied by them. The mob gave them twenty-four hours to leave the county and warned them that they would be killed if they took any women with them.

BLUESFIELD, W. Va., Nov. 11.—Word was received here to-day from Whitehouse, Pike County, Kentucky, of the breaking up of an evangelical meeting which was being held by two Mormon missionaries from Utah. The Mormons, whose headquarters are in Logan and McDowell Counties, West Virginia, had been warned not to attempt to preach their doctrine in Pike County, but in spite of that they had organized services in a school house. While the meeting was progressing nicely a party of twenty masked men, all heavily armed, entered the front door and ordered the people, mostly women, to leave the building, which they did in two minutes. The elders were also desirous of leaving, and tried to crawl out of the back window, but were prevented.

After the elders had been lectured by the leader of the mob they were tied hands and feet astride two rails, hoisted to the shoulders of their captors and carried five miles to the Big Sandy River, where they were ducked and sent across into West Virginia. The Mormon missionaries in the lower counties of West Virginia have been the means of breaking up many families and have sent dozens of ignorant people on wild goose chases to Utah. An organization to oppose their doctrine has been formed in Wayne and Logan Counties, West Virginia.

We do not know any of the men named as those mobbed; but conclude that they are from the fold of our Utah contemporaries. But, the fact that such things are done and suffered to be done in the South, or any part of the Republic, is a bad comment on the boast for freedom of speech and action for American citizens. If these missionaries were breaking any statute law, or behaving unseemly, they should have been punished by the proper officers of the law, not been lawlessly dealt with.

We hope the reports are not true, but fear that they are

By letter from Bro. A. McKenzie, Juniata, Michigan, we are informed that he had been arrested and taken to Maysville, on a charge of attempting to cure typhoid fever by prayer, in connection with the sickness of a sister at Juniata, who preferred administration of the church rite for healing to a physician and medicine.

He writes in relation to the case as published in Detroit News of the 15th instant, with sensational headings, that he will correct the misrepresentations of the story in a short time in the News if that journal will permit such hearing. Of the affair he writes a postscript as follows:—

When the health officer and I got to Juniata he pronounced the girl to have no fever, and was three below normal. The next day he disinfected the house and set them all at liberty, and the day following our sister attended Sunday school. We thank the God of the Saints for the victory and I hope the Saints will use wisdom; for the air is full of false reports as well as the papers.

BACK VOLUMES OF AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE Herald Office has on hand a number of back volumes of Autumn Leaves for the years 1891, '92, '93, and '94, which are offered bound complete in various styles of binding, in prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per volume, according to binding.

The volumes may be had either bound or unbound. Those wanting them bound for the holidays must order at once, to insure completion in time.

Volumes of 1891, '92, and '93, unbound, are offered at 50 cents. All volumes offered at these prices will be sent postpaid. Address orders to the Business Manager. 4t.

AUTUMN LEAVES FOR 1896.

THE readers of AUTUMN LEAVES have reason to be gratified by the prospectus for the coming year announced by the editor, in the December number of the magazine.

The Leaves, hitherto rich and entertaining in biography, is to continue to devote a fair proportion of its space in delineating the lives of those whose general experiences in the church and in the world are rich in lessons of interest and profit to those who have accompanied with them in the faith, and those younger in years whose paths in life lie largely untrod, and who in youth may profit by narrations of those whose paths have been in the more rugged and pioneer fields of the early days.

The opening number in the biographical series is announced—the autobiography of Sr. Lydia Supry, well known to the Michigan Saints. It is said to be equal in interest to any yet published.

“Prophecy and the Holy Land,” by Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith, is another feature, and one that will be looked for with anticipation, as the writings of the authors have been such as to make them interesting and welcome to readers of the Leaves.

Phrenographs of prominent ministers and church workers, by Orrin

Dudley, will also be continued. They have been widely read and will doubtless command continued attention. A fine, large engraving of Nauvoo, the Beautiful City, will be sent to every subscriber. Other attractions will be announced in due time. Herald Office agents will show sample copies of the engraving of Nauvoo.

Sr. Walker will continue as editor and will continue to make the Leaves of such value as to be practically indispensable to all—both adults and the young people. A subscription to any young person will prove useful to them and be valued by the recipients.

Autumn Leaves, published by the Board of Publication; price $1.25 per year; in combination with the SAINTS' HERALD—both—for $3, if paid in advance.

Address, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS.

BY SR. HESTER S. E. YOUNG.

This work is now in press and will be ready before the Holidays.

It is the Life of Jesus, told in a simple and interesting way, adapted to the capacities of children. This little book is a gem among the literature provided for the children. It relates the important history of the Savior's life in such entertaining style as to awaken and keep the interest of little readers. It gives them a fair knowledge and truthful picture of the leading events of the Savior's life and prepares them to appreciate the narratives of the Gospels and New Testament to be studied in after years.

Bound in cloth, printed in large type; Price 20 cents.

BRO. GEORGE MONTAGUE reports favorably of the mission work in his field.

The work done by Brn. H. H. Robinson, Simmons, and Sheppard, resulted in a debate between Bro. I. N. White and a leading Baptist minister, and about twenty baptisms in their part of the field since April Conference. Bro. R. M. Maloney was active, having held some fifty-seven preaching services, and baptized one. Prospects good in his field. In Bro. A. J. Moore's field some forty to fifty baptisms have occurred. Brn. Nunley, A. B. Moore, and L. L. Wight are doing faithful work in the Lone Star State. Bro. Montague was driven from the field latter part of the summer by sickness; but has pluckily returned to it again. May the Lord bless the fast aging soldier.

By letter from Bro. Caffall, we are pleased to learn that he was in improved health, and actively engaged, having preached three times and walked five miles the day before he wrote. He adds, suggestively, “Can any of your young men of Lamoni beat that?” That was certainly good for Bro. Caffall, and should be an incentive to the younger men. He is near if not quite at the threescore and ten waymark, and still fresh and strong in mind. God blesses the willing worker.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH SQUIRE, Brooklyn, New York, November 19:—

The Saints at Broad River and New Canaan are doing fairly well. I was with them on Sunday, the 17th, and held two preaching services and tried to encourage them by preaching the word of the gospel. They are growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. They had made up their minds to send a contribution for the Temple Lot suit, and so collected $8.50 as a manifest token of their love for the work that has brought so much comfort to them. Their Sunday school is doing well. I was pleased to see the interest manifested by those that have not as yet joined the church, and am satisfied that if they continue others will soon be added to their number.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRN. J. D. ERWIN and Joseph Ward send us items of the Ward-Lawson discussion held at Bald Knob, Arkansas, early in the present month. The points covered have so often been presented to our readers and the evidences so well known, that we do not present them again. Mr. Lawson represented the Christian or Campbellite Church. Each affirmed his church as in harmony with the New Testament, etc. Bro. Erwin commends Elder Lawson for his gentlemanly manner and Christian spirit. Bro. Ward did well and succeeded in maintaining his positions and in successfully negating those put forth by his opponent.

By card dated Denver, Colorado, November 18, we learn that Bro. W. W. Blair would start for Sterling that day via Julesburg, and would spend a few days in labor there. He reports profitable time at Denver, and that he was somewhat hoarse from much speaking.

Bro. J. D. Erwin was at Memphis, Tennessee, the 13th inst., preaching every night. He thinks some live, able man should do tent work for an extended season in that city during the summer and stay by it until the work is established there.

Marriage notices should be accompanied by a fee of one dollar ($1.00), for publication. "Whoso findeth a good wife hath obtained favor of the Lord" (Prov. 18: 22), and should send the dollar with the notice by which he informs his friends of his good fortune. We notice that lengthy wedding announcements are usually without the company of the required amount, while the brief ones often are wrapped around the ever welcome, crisp, and not-too-often-seen dollar. It is a compliment to a man's wife, an evidence that he appreciates her, to send the dollar with the marriage notice. The printer likes to see these points duly regarded, and he confesses the satisfaction realized on receipt of the currency—so essential to life, liberty, and the pursuit of earthly necessities.

Bro. Heman C. Smith went to Kingfisher, Oklahoma, to look after the interests of the work there, threatened by a Christian reverend; but found the gentleman was a hundred miles, or so, away, at or near Stillwater; and as the local brethren seemed to think the work at the latter place would suffer unless he went over there to see whether the Christian elder would meet him in debate, he with Brethren George Montague and Stephen Butler went over by team to look after it. No later news to indicate results. Bro. Heman writes: "We concluded to go over where he has been operating, and either tree this fellow, or preach the gospel in his field of operation." Bro. Heman has no special liking for discussion, but is in the field to defend the faith if necessary.

"Whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his soul from troubles."—Prov. 21: 23.—And does not harm his neighbor by unjust comment.

Pres. W. W. Blair arrived home on Friday, the 22d inst., coming from Denver and Sterling, Colorado, which points he visited enroute. Sr. Blair preceded him by about ten days, arriving from Salt Lake City about the 15th. Both are enjoying improved health as a result of their missionary labors on the Pacific Coast.

Bro. F. L. Sawley, of Wheatland, Missouri, has arranged to meet a Christian minister in debate at Wheatland, beginning December 2—particulars and name of opponent not given. It will be his first discussion. He trusts in the Lord and is preparing himself by study and by faith to gain the victory for right.

Bro. David Dancer, so long an active member of the Herald Office force as Business Manager, has again joined the ranks of the married men, having taken one of Lamoni's fair citizen daughters to wife. The HERALD forces join in wishes for the blessings of peace and happiness to the pair.

Bro. S. W. Simmons reports success in discussion with a Baptist minister at Echo, Indian Territory. Bro. I. N. White had also met and defeated one Elder Evans, at Miami, near by. The results were good to the cause in both instances, and many calls for preaching had followed. Bro. Sheppard is to meet a Universalist minister in discussion at Maysville, Arkansas, soon. Bro. Simmons reports our people as awake and rejoicing in spirit. He bids the brethren to be of good cheer and to move forward.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to rules agreed upon and published by the Herald Office, all whose subscriptions are one year overdue will be dropped from the mailing lists at the end of the year—December 31, 1895—provided, that if those who desire their papers continued and who will pay in a reasonable time, will so notify the office, their publications will be continued.

This applies to the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies.

It is desired that all will continue and so notify us, and make an effort to pay subscriptions as soon as possible.

It is our wish to increase, not to diminish the circulation of the church papers among the membership. All should read them.

Subscriptions solicited.

EDITED BY FRANCIS.

"What matter how the winds may blow,
Or blow they east, or blow they west?
What reck I how the tides may flow,
Since ebb or flood alike is best?
No summer calm, no winter gale,
Impedes or drives me from my way;
I steadfast toward the haven sail

FROM THE MISSION FIELD.

OUR brief visit there was in a very busy time with them. Prunes, was the order of the day. Look where you would on Mr. Gibbs' place and you saw prunes. They were in stacks about the yard, housed in bins, and spread over acres of ground in trays; and on Monday morning great wagonloads came, in boxes fresh from the orchards. During the forenoon of Monday we went out to watch the busy workers for awhile and gather what information we could, thinking that those who ate dried prunes may like to know something of the process they went through before being sent to market. I did not learn the names of scarcely any of the pieces that were used so will have to name them according to their indications.

An engine was kept at work to do the lifting and shake the grader. The prunes were first turned into a small compartment that lets them through on the grader at the upper end, being slightly elevated. The grader is a long tray, the bottom of which is composed of heavy wire bars. I think there are four grades of distances between the bars. The leaves, stubs, and worthless prunes drop through the first grade of bars, and as the whole are shook along, the smallest good prunes fall through in the next grade, and again a second size in like manner. The largest keep hopping and bobbing about till they get to the lower end and there drop off. Thus they are graded and fall into separate compartments beneath the grader and run out at the sides into boxes prepared to catch them. This piece of machinery is a sort of perpetual motion, kept constantly shaking, and the prunes as constantly rolling in at the upper end and out at the sides and off at the lower end. When the prunes are graded they are poured into a peculiar shaped tin basket with a perforated bottom that may perhaps be called a dipper. It is suspended from the end of a crane and swung over and dipped into a vat of hot lye, then into another vat through which clear water is kept running. Thus rinsed they are emptied into a slide and roll down onto the trays that are continually supplied by one whose work it is to do. Quite a number of men, women, boys, and girls are employed. Each has his work to do without moving out of his place of standing, and do it quickly. All must keep time with the engine. As the dipped prunes come pouring down into the receiving tray, many pairs of hands are instantly upon them, leveling them over the tray, making one smooth layer only. Then it is shoved on ahead by the empty one taking its place. Three trays are always upon the tray-table; the one that is filled, the one that is being filled, and an empty one hard against it, and the only time they are not being moved along is the few seconds that it takes the person who supplies the trays to turn and get one from the pile behind him. During these moments the tray under the slide is filled, and the one that has been shoved along receives the finishing touches, such as taking one or two off, or adding one or two to fill out a vacant corner. Then it is lifted onto the hand car just at their elbow. As that is lifted the empty one that has been taken from the pile pushes its way for a place on the table, shoving the filled one in the place of the one just removed. And so they pass on, all through the busy day. When the little car is loaded it is rolled out in the open field on a miniature track of its own where men there carry the trays and set them close together upon the ground where the sun dries the prunes. While one car is being unloaded another is being loaded, so no time is lost. If I remember rightly, Mr. Gibbs said he had eleven thousand trays in operation. I will insert an appropriate little poem composed by Mrs. E. J. Eastman, a sister of Sr. Gibbs, while at work when the dried prunes were being brought in from the field and boxed for market. It was hers to slip the paper lining in the boxes, and at snatch times she jotted down the poem upon the lining paper.

THE SONG OF THE CHEERFUL DIN.

This is the song of the cheerful din,
Where the prunes go out, and the prunes come in:
Rap of the hammer, and clang of the press,
Rustle of box in its paper dress;
Hoarse, harsh cling of the crusher's note
As the prunes are dropped in its iron throat;
Thud of the prunes as they rush away
To their place in the bin from the laden tray;
Shriek of the engine; the grader's whirr,
And all the movement and bustle and stir
Of stalwart men as they cheerfully go,
Bearing the glossy fruit to and fro,
Now to ride in the crisp, cool air,
On the quivering grader's moving stair,
Now where it plunges in mania wrath
Once, twice, thrice in its steaming bath;
Woman's soft treble, and children's gay shout,
Deep tones of men—what a wild, merry rout
Of voices that make up the cheerful din
Where the prunes go out and the prunes come in.
But other sounds than these are here,
Whose echoes are sweet to the list'ning ear.
Nature's warm heart throbs in rythmical beat,
Wild wreck of storm-clouds spreading so fleet;
Lullaby sweet of the soft falling rain;
Song of the robin, "Glad spring's come again!"
Soft airs of summer, the swift glancing stream.
Fall of white blossoms—the trees' starry crown—
Groaning of boughs by ripe fruit weighted down.
So runs the song of the cheerful din
Where the prunes go out and the prunes come in.

HOLLANDALE, Wis., Nov. 5.

Dear Sister Walker:—I will just drop a note to let you know where I am and what we are doing. We took a short vacation after storing the tent in September. Since then we have been, and Mr. P. has preached, in the following places: Argyle, Blanchardville, and Postville. Came here yesterday; commenced meetings last night in town hall.

I want to tell you of Blanchardville, or Zarahemla, as it was known at first. It was at this place where the Reorganization started in 1852. There are living in the town now a few old settlers who know all the circumstances and the people who reorganized the church. Their names are Blanchard, Sardinson, Clark, Brooks, McClines, and others who gave us some history of the people who were here, the Gurleys, Deams, (W. H. Deam's father,) McCords, Briggses, Hartshorns, Wildermuths, and others. I visited the spot where the building stood where they met to reorganize the church. Only the south bank now stands to mark the place where the protest was made against Brigham Young and all other factions with their doctrines. The building was of logs, 16 x 20, and was used as a church and schoolhouse. We made an effort to buy the ground, 16 x 20, to erect a monument in memory of the time, also for a perpetual protest against polygamy and kindred evils. The owner of the ground as yet has not set the price.

Mr. Blanchard, who is one of the leading business men of the county, told us that the people who formed the Reorganization were the most honorable people in the country. He said there was not one of them who was not strictly honest and honorable in his dealings.

The scenery of the place above the town, the river Pecatonica, is beautiful. The river takes an almost indescribable course, making such turns and crooks in all shapes, and horseshoes of all sizes. The bluffs are steep and rocky, covered with some timber, from which trees now the autumn leaves are falling and as it is Indian summer it would be a grand picture for an artist to paint; but as I am not one I could only stand and gaze upon the beauties of nature.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. SERVILLA CLAPP, of Santa Cruz, California, desires very earnestly the prayers of the Union in behalf of an aged sister that God will make clear to her her duty in a certain matter that is a severe trial to her, and also in behalf of her son that he may see the great mistake he is making and that he too may do his duty.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR NOVEMBER.

"When'er a noble deed is wrought,
When'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts in glad surprise
To higher levels rise."

Thursday, Nov. 28.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—1 John 2:15-17, 28.

The west coast of South America for about 100,000 square miles was raised in some places three feet and in other places six feet in the short period of a few hours.

Ants do not harm plants to any great extent. Indeed, they are of benefit in most instances, as they catch the insects, which, if left to themselves, would soon damage the plants greatly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Editor Sunday School Department:—In response to your request for a paper on Sunday school work, I shall endeavor to call attention to what I consider some of the first or underlying principles of that work, for the reason that first principles are foundation principles and must receive first consideration in order to guarantee the success of all subsequent, future efforts. The foundation of a building must first be laid before the frame work is erected, the structure inclosed, and the finishing process begun. The foundation must be firm, strong, durable, immovable, in order to sustain the structure to be placed upon it. Indeed, from first to last, from beginning to end, we must "count the cost;" in other words, anyone who enters upon any line of work should give it that thought that shall enable him to make the preparation to do it faithfully, intelligently, that his work may be permanent, and abide.

What is Sunday school work? How shall it be conducted? What is necessary to qualify one to work in it? The General Conference of 1890, in appointing a committee to devise methods for the execution of that work did so "with a view to making it a department of regular church work and care." Sunday school work, then, is church work; one phase or department of the work of the Master. It has been recognized as such by repeated action of the church since 1890.

Being a department of church work, the Spirit and principles governing church work must also be recognized and observed, if it is to be successfully carried out; in other words, the Spirit of the Lord must be in it, and all that is done be in harmony with that Spirit; all methods employed for the carrying out of the work be in accordance with the law of the Spirit of life.

It is the opinion of the writer that, according to the foregoing, the most important qualification necessary to the Sunday school worker is a real, sincere love of the work of God. We mean by this that kind of love for the work that prompts one to be spiritually minded, to study the word of God; to be prayerful, earnest, energetic in the work, and humble in heart and demeanor.

Some hesitate to enter upon the work of teaching in the Sunday school, and some shrink from it altogether, because they have by some means entertained the idea that considerable training and experience in the art of teaching are necessary; or that in addition to such special training one must be skilled in blackboard work and other specialties or adjuncts used in schools. Such training and experience and acquirements are all very good and their use to be commended. They are not of first consideration, however, but of secondary importance; they have their place in Sunday school work, but that place, in the writer's opinion, is not the first place.

From experience in the large school at Lamon, also in small country schools, the writer has been impressed with the idea that the chief object of Sunday school work is to teach scholars the plain principles set forth in the lessons, taken from the facts set forth in the word of God. These lessons are taught in the classes, and by the teacher. There the scholar is impressed for good and the lessons fixed in his mind. The blackboard review of the lesson is good, and very useful; but the chief portion of the work is done by the teacher, in the class.

Spirituality and knowledge of the word of God on the part of the teacher are therefore of prime importance. Jesus the greatest Teacher is the type, the true example for all teachers. His word was "with power" because the Spirit of the Lord was in it and carried it to the hearts of his hearers. The Sunday school teacher's words must also be accompanied or prompted by the same influence, if his or her work is to be what it ought to be. "Jesus prepared himself by fasting and prayer before beginning his work. Throughout his entire ministry he held much communion with God that he might be qualified, empowered, to do his work. Before choosing the twelve apostles and before undertaking any especial work he made especial preparation for it. Indeed, we may say that he did nothing without prayer. He confessed and taught that by the power of the Father within him he accomplished the work he did; not of himself. He admonished his disciples, "Without me ye can do nothing." What they accomplished as teachers was also done by the power of the Spirit.

In this dispensation the Lord has said to his church, "And all things shall be done . . . in the church, by much prayer and faith."—D. C. 25: 1.

In another revelation the elders are told that the Spirit is given through prayer; and that without the Spirit they "shall not teach." If the ministry, who are public teachers and all their preaching an educational work in gospel principles,—if they are forbidden to teach unless they have the Holy Spirit, is a Sunday school teacher justified in attempting to teach without the Spirit? If the Spirit is received only through prayer, which is the heart's desire, the Spirit's yearning for communion with and power from God to work righteousness, can the Sunday school teacher hope for success without prayer, and study, and genuine devotion to his work? Is he justified in trying to do it in any other way? We think not, and therefore answer "no" to all these questions.

We believe that the same spirit of devotion expected of the ministry of the church should be seen in the Sunday school teachers; indeed, we regard it as essential in all who labor in any department of church work, in the laity as well as the ministry. We do not mean to speak otherwise than kindly when we state that the important work of teaching, or of laboring in any department of church service, should not be intrusted to any who fail to manifest a sincere devotion to the cause or who do not labor in it in a spirit of prayerful humility. The Lord has also said in his revelations thus: "And faith, hope, charity, and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualifies him for the work. Remember, faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence. Ask and ye shall receive," etc.—D. C. 3: 1, 2.

If the possession of these virtues is necessary to qualify one for the work (and it is here so stated), he who does not possess them is not qualified as he should be.

It may be said that this sets the standard too high for practical purposes, inasmuch as no one has attained perfection in such virtues, and that it is necessary to use what teaching material is available. To this we reply that it is necessary to present the proper standard that those already engaged in teaching and those who contemplate devoting themselves to teaching may endeavor to reach the standard. We must use the material at command; the best, the next best, etc.; but we must also point out and work to the desired end, if we are to advance in efficiency and usefulness, and that which God requires, however high the aim demanded and however earnest the application necessary to reach it, is always practical. And, when we have a sufficient number of men and women who have approximately reached "the stature" of spirituality revealed in Christ—and in proportion as we move toward it, we will have greatest practical results in Sunday school work.

The earnest teacher should continue his work and seek knowledge, and to improve both "by study" and "by faith." The one who has natural ability enough to work should not refuse to teach or do other work if asked or as he sees an opportunity to do it. If he wants to work, let him go at it. The way to teach is to teach; to work, to work. Do not wait until you have had a course in normal teaching. Begin the work, and if you have the natural capacity and the necessary interest in it you will begin to see and comprehend the plain principles of teaching. Usefulness consists in the power to see and the willingness to do. Any individual of average capacity can learn the fundamental principles of teaching by teaching. He must not be a trifle however; he must mean what he is trying to do. Children and young people are close and highly sensitized observers of human nature. They are impressed by their instructors, and the impressions made are never lost. They know the manly man and the womanly woman; they know the one whose heart is in the work, as they also know the indifferent spirit who simply "runs over" a lesson and "says something" without much meaning to it. The influence of the teacher can and should be very great. Lives influence other lives; what we are and say and do, impresses and enters into the natures and principles of others, who in turn influence others; and so goes out the influence for good or for evil, like the outspreading circle of the pebble dropped in the water. The teacher's responsibility is not an ordinary one. It should not be thoughtlessly assumed, nor should it be evaded. His duties ought to be cheerfully but soberly accepted and performed.

If the teacher has not had especial training for his work he can take up such studies in connection with his practical teaching as shall more fully qualify him. Knowledge of the Bible and other sacred books is one of the most important aids. The Sunday school worker should be familiar with "the books"—with the doctrine, the history, the prophecy, and poetry of the Bible; familiar with the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants. They are the best of books. The principles they contain are the purest, highest, and noblest on record. No other reading can supply the place of the word of God. Knowledge of ancient manners and customs and countries, etc. from Bible helps is also good, but the principles of truth and the general doctrine and history of the word should be given primary or greatest attention.

The writer believes there is much talent in the church that is unused; that many possessing talents could labor in the Sunday school and in other helpful branches of work. Some are willing, some are diffident, some seem to be negligent, careless, or indifferent.

There is a place and a demand for every talent possessed. As it is used, the amount of good resulting to the Master's work is augmented; as it is unused, the work lags or fails to grow as it should, as it might do, as it ought to do. Our heavenly Father works by means. He must employ agencies or agents, and men and women are called to be vessels of honor, instruments for good in his service. They may do good, and obtain the reward.

There is a law of compensation that runs through and affects all things and all who labor; it is this: Men and women develop, advance, by making use of their opportunities, or suffer loss by neglecting them; and results for good are attained by their faithfulness or retarded by their neglect. It is our opinion that all ought to labor for love of the truth; that we should spontaneously, naturally, do what we find to do, and may make a way to do because of a love to do good, without a selfish thought,—without calculating the hope of reward. It is right to hope and labor for eternal life, for a place among the pure and perfected ones in perfect conditions of life; but as we view it, our work should not be done with that object alone in view, nor as the leading prompting to labor. Jesus, our great and loved Redeemer asked no compensation for the sacrifice he made, for the great redemption he purchased or wrought out for man by his life. All he asked was the glory he had with the Father "before the world was,"—that which he already possessed. Those who labor with him should do likewise, and as we have tried to point out, with the same devotion, the same faithfulness, in the same spirit of unremitting industry and constant humility and meekness of spirit. However, the law of compensation brought to him a greater reward. His preëminent love of righteousness had caused him to be exalted above his fellows, and afterward, upon finishing his work upon earth, he was given "all power in heaven and in earth." To all who labor with him will be given a fellow heirship with him of the things of God, and each worker may be comforted by the promise of it.

We close this paper then with the repetition in summary, that spirituality, earnestness, work, and study, are all essential to the Sunday school worker; that the way is plain and open for all who have talents and a sufficient desire to use them; that the spirit of sacrifice, of true simplicity and purity of motive, must be in the heart and actuate all who labor in Sunday school work; that no one, however much he may seem to do, can accomplish good in the work of God unless he is so actuated and is humble and free from pride and worldliness of spirit; and that there is much work that might yet and should be done if all who could would "do what they could."

For the success of every department of the work,
Yours in bonds,

RICHARD S. SALYARDS.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Nov. 15.

Editors Herald:—It is not because I have been idle that I have kept so long silent, for this has been my busiest year so far in this mission. I have preached in Salt Lake City, Pleasant Grove, Sandy, Provo, Lehi, Nephi, and Camp Floyd; baptizing nine altogether so far; most of them children of the Saints.

My experience so far is that there is no change in the attitude of the Utah people towards us, and no prospect for any change soon. They talk everywhere in the East about abandoning polygamy, but I can see no change. The windows of their bookstores and publishing houses are full of polygamous literature; and while I was at Nephi a good Mormon sister was there organizing a class in physical culture, and I learned that the class consisted of about eighty young ladies from ten to thirty years of age, and that she taught them polygamy—that it was a righteous principle and would surely prevail and that they must prepare to enter into the practice of it.

I have endeavored to keep silent upon this question because of the fact that they claim it is a dead issue, and have contented myself in telling what I believe and why I believe it, and trying to establish the superlativeness of Reorganization rather than the errors of Brighamism, and I find it to be the best.

I cannot report the mission in a flourishing condition. We lack laborers. Only three in the three States and a half that make the Rocky Mountain mission, and one of them has been absent for two months on account of sickness in the family. If I could divide myself into about six I could not fill the calls that come from various quarters—not from outsiders of course, but from Saints.

The loss of the Temple Lot suit has and will be a source of trouble to us in this country where temples are looked upon as the Mecca of the Mormon people; and to those of the Reorganization coming out from the people here it has with some, at least, proved a stumbling block. Already I have been told that among the Mormon Church there has been boasting that they are going to come in possession, if it finally goes to the Hedrickites, and that a bargain has been made to that effect. The leaders, of course, deny this, but we shall see.

We hope that the late unpleasantness in politics will result in destroying to some extent the influence of the leaders and thereby break the shackles with which they have so long been bound, and that the people may make a proclamation of intellectual independence. I am opposed to some things said and done by some of my brethren in the East in dealing with the Utah question. I noticed in a report of some of the labors of one of the brethren, that among other subjects advertized was, "The abominations of Utah Mormonism." Persons of the Utah Church reading that will have the teachings of the authorities here confirmed that we are their enemies, and those persons will be removed farther away from us. Why not, as I said above, preach the superlativeness of the Reorganization and let the people judge of the merits of the teachings? I am sure it would be best. I should most certainly preach and teach against all manner of evil, but instead of arraigning a people I should "war with principles and not with men."

I have enjoyed excellent liberty in my preaching so far, and still have an earnest desire to reach the people here with my message, and shall labor on in spite of discouragements, leaving all in the hands of God. Praying for Zion's weal, I am,

Yours,

H. O. SMITH.

BRADFORD, Eng., Nov. —.

Editors Herald:—I was for years trying to do the will of the Lord as far as I understood it and can speak to the truth that God is no respecter of persons, but blesses all who try to do right, however feebly it may be done. For years I had not been satisfied with the food dispensed by the churches, and had stayed in my own home outside any denomination, when one afternoon an old man came into our shop to buy bread, and having received it he put down the money saying, "That is yours, and this is mine—a fair exchange;" and from that point he preached the gospel according to the word. Very carefully he led us to the beginning of the gospel. He asked us did we love God; and we said Yes. He then asked what God was like. Yes, his first question startled, but we answered that God was a Spirit, and those that worshiped him must do the same in spirit and in truth. He referred us to Genesis 1:26, asking us to read carefully and prayerfully, which we did, and so day by day he came for natural bread and gave us spiritual bread. I realize now how skillfully he handled the word of God, giving us according to his office and calling those portions of meat in due season, until eventually he led us to the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ as recorded by John, 7:17: "If any man will do his [the Father's] will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."

When he brought us to this, my sister and I asked him what church he belonged to, he answered, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ." I said I had never heard of it, when he told us about the angel's visit to Joseph Smith, and that he was an elder of said church, having authority to baptize all repentant ones for the remission of sins, promising that God would fulfill his word. I then said, "It all turns on whether Joseph Smith told the truth about it. I am ready to obey the command of God, and if I don't know for myself I shall say you are a fraud." The dear old man said, "You will be justified, providing you go with an eye single to the glory of God;" and, thanks be to the eternal Father, I do know that my God is true to his promise. Praying that this glorious work may go on, I am,

Your sister,

ELIZA A. RHODES.

AYRSHIRE, Iowa, Nov. 19.

Editors Herald:—To me the letters of Brn. W. W. Blair and J. R. Lambert found in the Herald for October 16 were instructive and beneficial. It seems to me that men of God who have laboring under their direction a large number of ministers cannot help feeling anxious that all those men should develop as fast and correctly as possible. The importance of the message of truth which the church has to present to the world and the responsibility which God has placed upon them cannot but make them desirous to see every minister for Christ present the truth in the best possible way, taking only such positions as are best calculated to inspire the confidence of the people.

If, as their letters indicate to me, their desires were to bless and instruct all and injure none, why not receive such instruction through the columns of the Herald? If mistakes in theory and practice cannot even be hinted at through the columns of the Herald, how are the general readers of the church papers to be instructed? If controversy cannot be carried on in our much-beloved church paper, how are the watchmen upon the tower of Zion to warn the children of God of approaching danger? It seems to me that the safety of the church demands that the columns of the Herald, or some other church paper be open to controversy if conducted in the Spirit of Christ. I have always thought the Herald one of the most valuable publications it has been my privilege to peruse, because of its willingness to let the people read both sides of a controversy, and then judge for themselves. I should dislike very much to change my mind with reference to our church paper.

What a glorious thing it is to be a Christian if one can thereby enter into the true life of Christ and feel that indeed and of a truth he has sweet communion with God and Christ, and can feel the impress of the Holy Spirit on his mind and heart, bearing testimony that Jesus is the Christ and that he lives, and that because he lives the disciple shall live also! How sweet the words, "It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." And again: "I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."

Jesus, blessed Jesus, is our only hope of eternal life. Where else shall we go? "Thou hast the words of eternal life. Christ and his gospel and the church of the living God form the connection between the living and the dead, between earth and heaven. How glorious is the light of truth as found in the restored gospel.

A VIEW OF THE REDEEMED.

The sun is shining bright and clear,
And all God's children love him dear;
They see his glory spreading round,
And pray his grace may always abound.
Their food and drink his hands supply,
He soothes their sorrows, hears their cry;
He calms their fears, their hopes inspire,
And fills their souls with holy fire.

The veil sometimes asunder parts
And overwhelms true Christian hearts
With love, and joy, and gratitude
For their supply of heavenly food.

They see Jehovah on his throne,
And Jesus Christ their Lord is known;
His glory flashes from the sky,
And makes the servants fear not to die.

For though they die to things below
The spiritual man shall always grow,
Until like God and Christ on high,
He lives again no more to die.

They see the holy angels bright,
And view their glory with delight;
Fathers, and mothers and children dear,
Are mingling there without a fear.

For God has wiped away their tears,
And banished from their hearts all fears;
Sickness, and pain, and death are gone,
The family is now complete in one.

The kindness of the Saints to the writer while at Coalville will long be remembered, though he was somewhat afflicted; indeed, the Saints everywhere I have been seem anxious to make the missionary comfortable. On Sunday, November 17, I met with the Saints of the Union branch, who owing to their scattered condition meet but once a month. Some of these Saints must come from eight to twenty miles by team when they hold services, but it is a real pleasure to meet with them and observe the Christian spirit not only manifest in their meetings but at dinner time when they put their victuals together and have a real feast of good things.

The sacrament is administered in the afternoon at their social services each month and all seem to enjoy taking part in the exercises.

Editors Herald:—Church work is progressing some in this great city. Our Religio is doing a good work among the young, who seem to be much interested in better fitting themselves for the defense of the gospel. The Mite Society, although small in numbers, is doing a good work and helping along quite materially. They have public meetings each month. October 17 was their last one, at which time they also gave a supper and entertainment. The program finished, the audience was invited to repair to the parlor where a surprise awaited all. A very few words by Elder Richard Bullard pronounced Arthur B. Phillips and Josie V.

Gerrish, "husband and wife," and they agreed to share each other's sorrows and joys through life. May their lives be continued in the work they love to labor for, and greater blessings shall be theirs to enjoy. May God abundantly bless his people.

Editors Herald:—I am yet but an infant in the gospel work, not yet one year a member; but I cannot express my gratitude to our Father that he has led me into the marvelous light of the gospel restored to earth again. Father has been a member over fifty years, but none of his children followed him till last winter, when my sister and I attended the Savidge-Williams debate. It was not hard to discern the truth, and I determined to accept that which I sacredly believed to be right, in spite of my prejudices, so went forth according to Jesus' command to Nicodemus. Do I regret the step? No, a thousand times; although for accepting the work I have suffered keenly many times; but what are the sufferings when in the possession of the Spirit?

I can truly say that I would sacrifice my life if necessary rather than deny the work. Could others but know the blessings I have received! Many times I have wept because others whom I love could not comprehend this glorious work.

I was ordained to the office of priest last June, which place I am endeavoring to fill in the branch with humility, and God is blessing me inasmuch as I am faithful. I have had to go into the work here with a will or let it languish, as Bro. F. A. Smith, our branch president, has been called home twice for several weeks at a time, leaving the work upon my shoulders. I have preached twelve to fifteen sermons, in which I have felt the presence of the Spirit; have also assisted in many other meetings. We have been much blessed of late as a branch; several additions, some promising laborers among the young men. O may God give our young men humility, earnestness, and strength to push on this the most noble work man could undertake! Think, my young brethren, sons of Zion, what you can accomplish if you will sacrifice selfish desires, live just in the sight of God, and engage in the battle for truth with the great God of the universe to guide your lips!

We have the gifts of the Spirit made manifest among us from time to time, and quite a number are investigating the work. It is a glorious battle and if we will as individuals keep our eye singly upon the Savior, obeying his every command, we cannot meet defeat, though we meet many obstacles, many discouragements. We shall only be pure, we shall only be glorified to dwell with God where nothing impure can come, if we are tried as gold in fire. Therefore Saints think not strange of the fiery trial that is to try you, for if you do not suffer you cannot become perfect; and if not perfect you cannot attain to the glory of the celestial kingdom. Rejoice in trials, because whom the Father loveth he chasteneth.

Brethren, though strangers among men, we are not strangers in the latter-day work. Let us hold up one another and fill the measure of our opportunity in our various localities. Let us separate ourselves in every act, deed, and word from the world, that those about us may be compelled to glorify God because of our good examples, instead of saying that we profess God but disgrace the work by our daily conversation and walk. O, think upon the day when our Lord will say to those who have overcome the world and been faithful, "Well done . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," and placing the immortal crown upon our heads bid us sit down upon his throne. Then stand firm, immovable; live in holy fear of God, seeking his face at all times, and he will be with you to the end, and shortly we shall meet in that glorious rest that holy men of God have looked to from the days of Adam.

Yours for truth,

ALMA L. LIGHTFOOT.

FAIRFIELD, Nebraska, Nov. 19.

Editors Herald:—On the 22d of October I left home and loved ones, and went to North Platt, Lincoln County, Nebraska, expecting to meet Bro. J. W. Gillen. Here I visited Sr. Harriet Broffitt and her daughter Lizzie, who formerly were identified with the Saints at Nebraska City. They are still strong in the faith. From there I visited the Saints at Cottonwood Springs. I found Bro. F. E. Knapp, the branch president, on duty, but standing alone, no other branch officers; but to my mind in need of help officially. I believe there is material there available. Here I again had hoped to meet Bro. J. W. Gillen, but got word that he could not come. I spoke to the people some thirteen times and left them feeling quite well. Many were the expressions of gratitude because I came.

From there (on election day) per kindness of Bro. Gault, I was taken by team across the great Nebraska hills to the town of Curtis, Frontier County, arriving just in time to miss the train going east on the Burlington and Missouri Railroad, so I took train next day for Eustis, going from there three miles east to the home of our genial friend and brother, George W. Johnston, a former resident of Lamoni. Bro. Johnston has toiled hard here, but has succeeded in opening up one of the most beautiful farms in Nebraska. He has a half section of land and has now got it pretty well improved. I here had the pleasure of meeting three others, whom I baptized two years ago, one a young man, Frederick Hansen by name, the other two former residents of Lamoni—Bro. and Sr. Gottlieb Keller. I found these folks all rejoicing in the truth, though isolated from the church, and were letting their light so shine that others might be brought to the knowledge of the truth, in evidence of which on the 10th of November I led five precious souls into the waters of baptism, and confirmed them members of the Church of Christ, and left them rejoicing in the truth.

From here I called on Sr. Lewis and her husband, at Bertrand, who informed me that it would be an excellent time to preach south of there where Bro. Shute and I held meetings two years ago. I came to Norman, Kearney County. Here I called on Bro. and Sr. Peter B. Anderson, formerly of Plano, Illinois, and found him very sick. They thought it a Godsend that I came that way, as they had been consulting about sending for the elders. I administered to him and left him feeling apparently much better. I arrived at Fairfield at noon on Saturday, the 16th, and preached twice in the Baptist church. I here found Bro. C. E. Blodgett standing firm at his post of duty, battling for the right, making great sacrifice for the cause he loves so well. I wish we had many more men like him. He has done a good work here and the Saints speak well of him.

I expect to go to Shelton from here, thence to Hebron branch, and to Fairbury, Wilber, and Lincoln, to Palmyra branch and home by the new year. This country of Southern Nebraska has suffered greatly in consequence of the protracted drought of the last three years. Money is very scarce, crops short, prices very low, but I find some Saints who are willing to do what they can, by subscribing to the law of tithing, and who are willing to relieve the church financially as they can. That God may bless and prosper them in all their righteous movements is my prayer.

Yours for truth,

J. W. WALDSMITH.

Editors Herald:—The gospel is progressing and is good, and it will stand as long as the earth, and nothing can overthrow it; but the Devil may try to rage, and all his imps, and some members may go back on the work; but Christ said that his word, the truth, the gospel, would stand though heaven and earth pass away.

We have a small hall for our meetings, but it is large enough for us yet, and we do have some grand, good meetings in it, and the Spirit of God is with us in power. Bro. J. A. Carpenter still labors here; not only here, but in a place called Billings and another place called Butman, and he works hard every day. God knows he deserves a good reward. I feel sometimes as though our elders had so much more responsibility resting on them, for they have to carry the gospel to the four corners of the earth, but all we have to do is to live it, and then some will find fault that it is not a little easier. Well, I am glad I am a Latter Day Saint. No matter what God wants me to do if he will give me strength I will obey.

Three years ago a family came here named Cooper, and they happened to be my next-door neighbors. The howling Methodists came here to hold meetings, so we all went, and of course I did not like the proceedings, because I had been raised a United Brethren and had belonged to the same; and so I began to make complaint.

I wished some of our elders would come and preach to us, so I happened to make the remark to Mrs., now sister, Cooper and she said, "Yes, I wish one of our elders would come and talk here." I then asked what church she belonged to and she said, "The Latter Day Saints. That was the first time I ever heard the name, and dear brothers and sisters, as there is a God in Israel I had a strange feeling pass over me that I had never experienced before; and then the sister and her husband began to explain the Scriptures to me, and I began to study the Bible, and I will tell you that I left no stone unturned until I was completely satisfied; and then I did wish to hear it preached, for I believed it as strongly before I heard it preached as I do now, only now it is a knowledge. And it was over two years before I had the privilege of obeying and it seemed to me sometimes as though I would die if I could not be adopted into the true Church of Jesus Christ. My husband did not believe in the Latter Day Saints, and would not consent for me to belong to them; but, dear brothers and sisters, wherever you be, God will work out everything in his own good time.

Elder Carpenter and the other Saints have stood great trials and persecutions here, but have overcome all and live to their doctrine faithfully. But the best of it is, the rest of the people are not satisfied with themselves. Their preachers will tell them that none of them are right. I tell you there will be a great number that will come into the church yet. Remember us in your prayers, and our prayers will be for the welfare of all Saints.

Your sister in Christ,

MRS F. M. BROWN.

MT. GROVE, Mo., Nov. 21.

Editors Herald:—The writer and Elder Cather came here to-day. I opened a meeting October 29 at Stony Point schoolhouse, twelve miles southwest of Mt. Grove. I preached three times at Vera Cruz and left there on Tuesday, the 29th inst., for conference at Woodside, to begin November 1, but was impressed by the Spirit that there was work at Stony Point, and before I passed the road leading to that place I was led to understand that I should stop in that settlement and see; and when I arrived at Bro. McMurtree's I found no one there but went to the next place, and found there was a house-raising in the settlement, and I went to where the men were working and began helping them, and before night word came from the house that they wanted I should preach there that night. I said all right.

Well, I found a fair-sized audience to begin with, which kept increasing for three evenings, so that we had to move it to the schoolhouse about one mile away. The people still kept on coming, until the house was well filled with attentive listeners. Saints were edified and aliens were taught the doctrine. I preached seventeen times all told; baptized one, a young man about twenty-seven years old. Elder Cather came the next day, November 12, and confirmed this brother, and began preaching, and continued seven meetings. We removed considerable prejudice and gained many friends. Elder Cather confirmed the effort with seven noble sermons. We left the work in fair shape at Stony Point; closed Sunday night, the 17th and came to Zonker, south of Mt. Grove.

Elder Cather preached three fine sermons there and we then came to town this morning and Bro. Cather left for Sargent where he begins to-night, the writer to join him again to-morrow night unless otherwise led.

There are many places to preach and many requests. There are four places between this and Palmetto, Missouri, where they are anxiously waiting; also there at home; but we desire to go and labor in such places as the Master directs by his Spirit. This is his work, and as we are only poor, weak servants of his, we therefore desire to work in harmony with his will. We desire an interest in the prayers of all the Saints that we may do the work of an evangelist and make full proof of our ministry.

Yours in bonds,

J. P. BENSON.

BAY PORT, Mich., Nov. 18.

Editors Herald:—The work is in fair condition here. We are trying to hold our own; are having very good meetings of late, there being twenty or thirty testimonies in our Sunday morning meetings. There has been a very good attendance at our preaching meetings, on Sunday evenings especially, while Bro. J. A. Grant has been with us. He is improving, and has edified us greatly; but he has gone again to tell the gospel story to the world.

I wish the Saints could all read Bro. T. W. Williams' article entitled, "I do not like to hear him preach," and every one, both officers and members, take his part of the remedy, I think we would all improve greatly. Bro R. J. Anthony rejoiced that he had the privilege of baptizing old Sr. Hanson, and he had reason to; and I rejoice also that on the 27th of October, 1895, I baptized my aged father, he being nearly eighty-three years old; and I do feel to thank God that he has heard our prayers and prolonged his life to obey the gospel. Saints, pray for me.

Your brother,

WILLIAM DOWER.

LUCAS, Iowa, Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a two weeks' meeting near Liberty Center, Warren County. Many of the people in this country had never heard this latter-day gospel, and some of the very best citizens, who had become disgusted with sectarianism and had long since quit attending their meetings, came to hear us and told many of their neighbors that that was the true gospel. One old lady who has been a member of a church for many years was heard to say that she never had heard the gospel preached before.

We have made many friends for the truth in this place and removed mountains of prejudice. I feel sure that quite a number will obey in the near future. I go from here to the northwest corner of Warren County where they have never heard the gospel. I am traveling with my horse and buggy, as this part of the district could not be reached in any other way, as there are no Saints within twelve miles.

Yours in bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

TIPTON, Cal., Nov. 18.

Editors Herald:—Myself and Bro. Walter Scott came to this place nearly four weeks ago and commenced meetings in the Congregational church, where we continued for two weeks, the church having been secured by Bro. John Clark of this place, at which time it was thought best by the pastor to close the doors against us; but we were prepared for it, and had got permission to occupy the schoolhouse. But when it became known that we were turned out of the church we were tendered the use of the only hall in the town, belonging to Mrs. Treebaul, her son telling Bro. John Clark we could have it for a week free if we would furnish oil, which we agreed to do, and have been holding forth there the last ten days.

Yesterday we led two into the water, and more are believing. What the end will be time will tell. Last night there was not an empty seat in the hall, although there was service in the church; and this is a very small place, hardly enough to fill one house. I noticed that many whom I know belong to the town church left their church and came over to the hall. So the good work goes on.

Yours for truth,

D. L. HARRIS.

VERNON, Idaho, Nov. 10.

Editors Herald:—To-day has been quite a feast to me, though confined to the house, and have been in my bed most of the time for the past month. I was away from home at work when taken sick, and for a time feared the consequences; but thanks be to our God, I believe I am past the worst; at least I am home.

Though the people where I was sick were Roman Catholics, I was well cared for; but just here let me tell of a little incident to show the animus of some. Those people were Catholics, but as they were building a new house, they had some Utah Mormons to work for them. Now comes the touch-me-not point. When I was in such pain I could scarcely contain myself, as I had cramps both in limbs and stomach, I asked an elder in the Utah faction to pray with and for me. His reply was very forcible and to the point, "Pray for yourself, I can't and won't;" and he did not, audibly at least. His name is Ed Paul. He knew I used to be a Brighamite and had left them. When he took such decided grounds, soon after I commenced to get better. I am mending slowly, and were it not for my little ones blessing me now and then I feel I would not mend as fast as I do; but perhaps I am straying too much from what I started to tell. To-day I had a caller—yes, better say callers—a Mr. and Mrs. Heaton. I have been letting them have the Heralds after I read them and it has brought Mrs. H. to the front and she tells me she used to belong to the Josephites years ago, and Mr. H. used to be a Mormon in Utah; but both had laid down their armor, but now are ready to put their shoulders to the wheel and help roll on the good work. I feel much encouraged. I have sent the numbers containing, "Why I am a Josephite" to one F. S. Bramwell, at St. Anthony, a Brighamite, and I believe I am getting him and some others quite interested.

Bro. R. J. Anthony writes me he will be at the county seat sometime in November or December if all is well. I hope he will explode the Brighamite theory, but many are so blind they will not see. Had I some one to leave my darlings with, when I get able to ride, I would be so pleased. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom;" so I say, Not every one that says "I will care for your little ones" can have the privilege. I strive in my weak way to serve our Master, and hope in the great beyond to obtain a crown of glory. None but the isolated ones know what hardships and privations spiritually and temporarily we lonely ones have to endure. May we all remain firm and immovable to the end, is my prayer and desire.

In bonds for right,

L. L. BOOTH.

Editors Herald:—It seems that my labors in Kansas stirred up the opposition. The disciples hold regular services at Elmwood. And the following Sunday after I left Elder Shick preached. He took occasion to assail the insignificant "Mormons" with their "Golden Bible" and tendered a challenge for discussion. Bro. R. H. Davis said he would furnish a man to defend our claims. The outsiders requested that I be sent for, whereupon Shick backed out and said he would furnish Popplewell—Bro. White's friend. I have written Bro. White about the matter. We should accommodate the gentleman, as there are a number of good souls there. Much sickness here.

INVOCATION.

Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
Comforter divine;
Fill my heart with peace and love,
Influence sublime.

Jesus, Savior of the world,
Friend and brother true;
May I thy gentle Spirit have
All my journey through.

Most righteous Father, God of all,
Creator, great and wise;
Look on thy child, so weak and frail,
And hear me when I call.

Without thy help I cannot bear
My puny, earthly cross;
But by thy help I boldly dare,
And count this world but dross.

IS IT HYPOCRISY?

In the Saints' Herald of September 25, 1895, is an editorial headed Hypocrisy, containing extracts from Roberts' pamphlet on Succession. With regard to the phenomena which took place in Nauvoo directly after the death of the prophet, Joseph Smith, this is what President Woodruff says, as quoted in the Herald:—

When Brigham arose and commenced speaking, if I had not seen him with my own eyes there is no one that could have convinced me that it was not Joseph Smith speaking; it was as the voice and face of Joseph, as anyone can testify who was there and acquainted with these two men.—Roberts' Succession pp. 119, 120.

George Q. Cannon as quoted, says:—

If Joseph had arisen from the dead and again spoken in their hearing, the effect could not have been more startling than it was to many present at that meeting; it was the voice of Joseph himself; and not only was it the voice of Joseph which was heard, but it seemed in the eyes of the people as if it was the very person of Joseph which stood before them.—Ibid. p. 6.

Elder William C. Staines says:—

This was with a voice like the voice of the Prophet Joseph. I thought it was he, and so did thousands who heard it.—Ibid. p. 7.

The editor says in connection:—

We are not disposed to question the testimony of these men, but we are astounded when we think that they attributed this deception to God.

On what principle can this misrepresentation and deception be justified? If it were conceded that Brigham Young assumed to represent the person and voice of Joseph; all would agree that he was guilty of treachery and hypocrisy. But this he could not have done. He might have imitated the voice, but it would have taken such a wonderful transformation, as he was not capable of, to make him look like Joseph. Conceding this testimony to be true, there must have been a spiritual power connected with and responsible for these phenomena.

I have transcribed this much to bring it to the front, so that we can look into the matter somewhat from our standpoint.

Among those that were present on this occasion was the writer of this and we cannot describe the event in better language and more to the point than the testimony here adduced. I can say in truth that the phenomena occurred as is herein described. It was something new in spirituality that we were entirely unacquainted with, and of course, we looked to our spiritual leaders for an explanation of this event in the church. Joseph, the prophet, never failed to give us an explanation in all spiritual matters, for he truly did know something about spiritual things; but Joseph was not there to step to the front to enlighten the people.

Although we had men at the head claiming all the keys and powers held by Joseph, yet none ventured to enlighten the people by anything from the presiding priesthood; but in the meantime it began to be whispered about that the mantle of Joseph had fallen upon Brigham and that it was a testimony that he was the right man to lead in Joseph's place. This went out far and wide as an evidence in favor of Brigham's claims to his assumptions to step into Joseph's shoes, in Joseph's place to lead latter-day Israel. The effect was to draw the people to him almost to a man, and it has stayed with them ever since, all the old Saints now will refer one to this phenomenon to prove that they are not deceived with regard to the presidency of the church.

It seems that it was admirably adapted for placing the people under the powers that have ruled them to the present time. This is the Brighamites' stronghold, and it's almost impossible to convince them otherwise; and from their standpoint they are honest and sincere in their belief, and as they are taught to expect opposition, persecution, and oppression for their religion they will not hear any argument or reasoning contrary to their convictions, for they are fully established in the cause they have espoused, and it is universally accepted by all the members in good standing in the church, and it's no question of doubt or uncertainty with them.

There are some incidents that have come under my observation that I wish to notice here in reference to this phenomena, and when we come to any conclusion in one case why will it not apply in all cases of the same kind? In the absence of any other guide to come to conclusions we have to compare one thing with another; and if in one case it means so and so, will it not in all cases having a similar application, and if not, the rule will not hold good at all.

Soon after the death of the prophet, an unsettled matter was brought up in the city council and discussed, wherein Joseph was concerned. In the discussion John Scott was speaking in explanation and the same phenomenon occurred with him in the city council. I was told by a personal friend who witnessed both phenomena he spoke with Joseph's voice and the facial expression also.

Now the question is, Does this place John Scott among the immortals, was he called to fill Joseph's place by that event? No, he lived and died John Scott all the same. He was not sainted for his great testimony and it went no further than the council.

I have another case in point. I will withhold the name and give the initials—C. W. W. This was related to me by the man himself in my place in the city. He was sent by Pres. B. Young to England on a mission, and before he started the president gave him some special instruction to deliver to the council in England. It so happened that he had not an opportunity until just before sailing for home. At Liverpool there was a council called before sailing and he then and there delivered the special instruction intrusted to him. He said he felt a power resting upon him that he never felt before, and it was told him that he spoke with Brigham's voice and the same facial phenomena occurred there; but he was not sainted.

I think that these incidents I have related weaken the claims that have been made with regard to any proof that God had in any way indorsed Brigham as the successor of Joseph in the presidential office of the church, but it seems to fulfill the prophets speaking of the last days, that he would send strong delusions among the people to try them; that they might believe a lie and be damned that have pleasure in unrighteousness.

I also remember hearing the prophet while speaking on the subject of the man of sin that should arise (2 Thess. 2), that that man was yet to come; that he had not yet come, "that it would be from among the elders of this church, sitting in this stand behind me." This was in Nauvoo, and when we look over our history, I sometimes feel to ask, Are we the children of the light and have we light to know the fulfillment of these things which are taking place right before our very eyes?

But we may not be any wiser than the disciples in Jesus' day; they seemed to be entirely ignorant of what was transpiring until the eyes of their understanding were opened that they might understand the Scriptures and what was written of him. Great things are transpiring in the history of these last days now, and we seem to be as blind as our predecessors until the times are fulfilled. It so happens with all men and in every age of the world that the things that most concern us pass unnoticed, while the thing that least concerns is taking our attention and serves as a delusion and a snare to our souls. We are yet in the world and things of the world are with us, and they may have more influence with us than may be for our good. Now let us be wise and learn while we may and have the opportunity, that we may be the children of the light.

SCHLATTER—THE "HEALER."

DENVER, Colorado, has for over two months past witnessed the greatest wonderment in the line of real, or reputed healings known to modern history. The hundreds that daily, for the first few weeks, sought "treatment" at the hands of the "healer" increased to thousands during the closing weeks of Mr. Schlatter's stay in Denver.

That relief from disease came to many it were idle to deny, and that utter failure to obtain healing by the Schlatter treatment in many, if not the most of cases, none should deny. Besides this, not a few say their afflictions increased after receiving the treatment.

November 13th inst., Elder M. F. Gowell and the writer visited the scene of the healer's ministrations, in North Denver. There were probably three or four thousand people present, nearly one half of whom were "in line," steadily crowding forward to receive the coveted hand grasp of the healer or have him pass through his hands a handkerchief or some other object to be used in removing bodily ills from themselves or absent ones. Rapidly one after another passed through the narrow chute in front, stopping only a few seconds, a minute, or a few minutes, while the manipulator, with one hand on the fence board in front of him, firmly held the hands or pressed the brow (sometimes convulsively) of the subject being treated. At times as many as eighteen persons received treatment in a minute, while at other times, upon other occasions, treatment was continued for half an hour, an hour, and sometimes two hours or longer, I was informed. There was no anointing with oil, neither was the name of Jesus, of Christ, of the Son of God, nor their equivalents used, neither inaudible prayer or any other manifest way; but only the vigorous grasp of the healer or the nervous pressure of his hand was given the excited, admiring, hopeful seeker, usually in silence and in a most businesslike way. All ranks and conditions, persons of all ages, from helpless infancy to decrepit old age, of both sexes, made up the motley concourse. Holiness of life, faith in Jesus Christ, nor even moral purity or purpose were made conditions on which coveted blessings were to be obtained, but only faith in Schlatter and in his mysterious power to heal cut any figure in the business.

That Mr. Schlatter is a magnetic healer of extraordinary force I do not doubt, and that back of all this there may be spirit force is not at all improbable. For whoever is conversant with the Bible—both Testaments—also with the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and the "History of Joseph Smith," will have learned that, in all ages, spirit forces, with differing degrees of intelligence and intensity, have made men and women, and various objects and things in the material world, mediums by and through which strange and marvelous manifestations have been wrought, and will be wrought until Christ comes in glory and Satan and his hosts are bound. If expert and intelligent men and women may use the natural forces of the universe, among them electricity and magnetism, controlling and directing them for various purposes and to various ends, why may not spirits do similarly? And inasmuch as Mr. Schlatter is allowed to be a very forceful magnetic healer, why should it be thought impossible, or even improbable, that more or less of his ministrations are under the direction and control of spirit force (and that not of the Holy Ghost) operating in and through him as in the case of Simon Magus and his like, including the "certain damsel" of Acts 16:16-18?

That Mr. Schlatter's performances are not inspired of the Holy Spirit is seen in the fact that Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost are utterly ignored, scriptural methods and patterns are not observed, and the divinely provided conditions, upon which alone heavenly blessings are to be obtained, are neither complied with nor required; all of which show that his work is not authorized of God, but is entirely outside of his order.

That Mr. Schlatter's work is not directed and effected by the Holy Spirit, may be seen in the further fact that, some persons when under his ministrations "writhe and groan in agony,"—mentioned in the Life of Francis Schlatter, page 10—for the "fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith," etc., etc.

The writer has seen persons "writhe and groan in agony" under the administration of spirits professedly, among spiritualists, and has heard and read much of the same testimony concerning the work of demon spirits in the past. The Spirit of God happens, gives joy, liberty, intelligence, exaltation, and holiness of desire and purpose, and leads to heavenly "pleasures" in time and in eternity.

The movements of Mr. Schlatter and his kind tend to bring discredit upon Christ and his work by performing strange and wonderful things outside of, and contrary to, the order of God set forth in Holy Writ, whereby the ignorant and ungodly take occasion to claim that Christ and his work, and Schlatter and his like, and their work, are all of the same kind and character, thus bringing Christ and his work down to their low level. Christ's doctrine, Christ's requirements, Christ's examples, Christ's ordinances, and Christ's institutions, methods, and promises are all ignored and dishonored. This is Antichrist, even though it be labeled with the title "Messiah."

Mr. Schlatter left Denver suddenly, and secretly the night of the 13th inst., and to-day it is reported he was seen fleeing on horseback towards the mountains yesterday at a point forty miles distant from here, which is probably true. What next?

Christ has said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," and again, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up."

Conference Minutes.

SPRING RIVER.

Conference met September 10, 1895, at Baxter Springs, Kansas, President O. P. Sutherland. By invitation, Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge, presided. President appointed, as committee on credentials, Bro. W. S. Macrae, W. S. Taylor, and A. C. Hart. Minutes of last conference were read and approved, one correction being made. The following ministers reported: Elders J. W. Thorpe, J. T. Sheppard, W. W. Shumaker, S. W. Simmons, I. N. White, S. Maloney, E. W. Depue, William France, J. C. Chrestensen, E. A. Davis, W. S. Taylor, W. S. Macrea, W. S. Pender, H. H. Robinson, O. P. Sutherland, A. H. Herke, A. C. Hart, F. L. English, J. M. Richards, and W. C. Cadwell. Priests reporting: A. M. Baker, and Bro. Cantrell. Bro. L. W. McCall, teacher, reported. The following branches reported: Columbus; no changes. Angola 74; 1 died. Webb City 182; 4 baptized. Maysville, Arkansas, 45; 3 received, 3 baptized. Blendsville also reported. Bishop's Agent J. M. Richards reported as follows: Due agent last report $10.62; receipts $140.25; expenses $127.50; balance due church $2.13. Moved and carried that the account of Bro. A. Herke for sundries be allowed and paid by district. Committee to audit district treasurer's accounts reported balance of $2.42 due A. H. Herke ex-treasurer. Bro. D. S. Crawley made a written statement to the conference, with a view to carry out the decision of the arbitration committee. Statement was accepted on his part. Officers elected for ensuing term: President and treasurer, O. P. Sutherland; clerk, A. H. Herke. Bro. J. M. Richards was sustained as Bishop's agent. Adjourned to meet with Angola branch, December 27, 1895.

A bureau of aid for persons wishing country homes and small farms in the West or South is being equipped in various cities of the East. Its attorney, Guy F. Ormsby, is in Chicago gathering information of opportunities for those who would become agricultural producers. This bureau is controlled by the Temperance Reform League, which claims to further emigration for the emigrant's sake rather than for the landseller's, and as a means of getting families of growing children away from the temptations of the city.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Convention met at Bevier, Missouri, October 4, Supt. J. A. Tanner in the chair; Allie Thorburn secretary. Schools reporting: Bevier and Higbee. The afternoon work consisted of a short business session, followed by the reading of a paper by Sr. Louise Palfrey, "How to make conventions a success." Questions were then taken from this paper and discussed, but not having time to properly discuss them, steps were taken to provide for an extra session at next convention. Quite an interesting program was rendered in the evening. Thus closed the convention of the district. Hope it has proved beneficial to all. May the next be a more instructive one.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Southwestern Texas District;
Dear Saints:—I will try this evening to fulfill an obligation required of me by the Oakwood branch in a called meeting held in San Antonio, Texas. I was at that time appointed by the branch to write to the Saints of the district through the Herald and Ensign to let them know what the Saints of San Antonio were trying to do.

The Saints seem to be awaking to the fact that the time has come that they must arise with renewed energy and move on or be left in the race. It will be remembered that a petition was sent up to the General Conference for a young and able minister to be sent to labor in San Antonio. In response to that call Bro Curtis has come and is working valiantly for the truth here. He is well received by the Saints, and we think will accomplish much good. The Saints have thought it best for the good of the cause to move their place of meeting from the suburbs up near the heart of the city, though by so doing they incur a much greater expense.

Dear Saints, it looks hard to see the flag of Emanuel trailing in the dust of this the old Alamo City, while the orthodox churches are working so and making such great sacrifices to build up their cause. Shall we stand idly by and look on, or shall we arise in the strength of Israel's God, throw our shoulders to the wheel, and help roll on this gospel chariot? The Saints, cheerfully aided by Brn. Wight and Curtis, have rented a suitable house on Camp Street, where they have been holding meetings successfully the last two weeks with good attendance, Brn. A. B. Moore and Curtis doing the preaching.

At Sunday night services the house was full, with not a vacant seat left. The funeral sermon of the babe of Bro. Thomas and Sr. Lida Jett was preached on that occasion, by Bro. Moore who edified and comforted the Saints not a little. Now the Saints throughout the district know that it is expensive to keep up a place of meeting in San Antonio. As we are compelled to have it well lighted, etc., it falls very heavily on the few who live in the city to meet the expenses and keep up the credit of the church, which we must do if at a still greater sacrifice than they have already made.

Of course it will readily be seen that the entire district is interested in the San Antonio mission, as the district conference petitioned for a laborer to be sent to this place; and he will expect the district to join with him in building up the work here, that his time and labor may not be lost. Now, dear Saints, if you will not call me a beggar I will give you all a chance to share this labor with us by donating and visiting us as much as you can, be it little or much, to keep up the work in this city. All donations will be faithfully recorded. Send remittances to,

M. D. KUYKENDALL,

Treasurer and Secretary of Branch.

No. 117 Camp Street, SAN ANTONIO, Texas.

In the minutes of the Far West district conference, in Herald of October 23, in the appointment of missions the names of R. Archibald and R. Garlich were omitted. They were appointed to South Buchanan County, Missouri.

BLODGETT-POLHEMUS DEBATE.

AT SHELTON, NEBRASKA.

On February 17, 1894, I had the privilege of doing the first preaching here. I kept up the meetings for several evenings, only three Saints living here then, when Bro. Caffall came to my relief, and two of Sr. Lacy's boys were baptized. I returned in June and baptized Bro. and Sr. Lippincott and two more of Sr. Lacy's boys. Since then Brn. Peak, Blodgett, Payne, and others have kept up the interest, till now there are twenty or more Saints there, mostly heads of families, and well respected. This has caused the heathen to rage and the people to imagine vain things. Finally the United Brethren got Elder C. H. Polhemus to champion their cause. He started out in a lecture against isms, but after learning that Bro. Blodgett was present, he said but little about isms, but at the close threw out a challenge to anyone who did not indorse his position. Bro. Blodgett took up the challenge, and arrangements were made to discuss the relative claims of the United Brethren Church and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, in regard to organization, doctrine, and polity.

Bro. Blodgett knew that I had started the work there, so called on me to act as his moderator.

Mr. Polhemus affirmed that his church harmonized with the Scriptures in organization, doctrine, and polity. He read largely from their discipline and the bulk of his argument on the first question was more in support of the cause of Christ than of his particular church—points over which there was no controversy. He tried to show the continuation of the original church (though he admitted at times there could be but a mere spark seen) by claiming that a certain line of faith continued all the way down from the apostles. This he argued was demonstrated by the spirit of self-sacrifice manifest by Christ and the apostles and all true Christians, which he claimed was the mark of identification. This mark of identification, Bro. Blodgett disproved by showing that the Heathen make as great self-sacrifices as do Christians.

Elder Polhemus argued the necessity of a change in government; that organization was but temporary and human; that as man grew wiser he changed the organization and government of the church to suit his advance in intelligence. Bro. Blodgett showed the unchangeability of God and his laws to man. The organization and government of the church was God's arrangement, not man's. 1 Corinthians 12: 28; etc. Bro. Blodgett criticised the idea of following creeds and confessions, and showed by Bishop Weaver that they were about synonymous, and were merely of human origin. He also showed that the apostles had no creed; instead of a creed their faith and practice were based on the perfect law spoken of by James, and would admit of no subtractions or additions; either would make it imperfect. That law was established on the principles of faith, repentance, baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection, and eternal judgment. (Heb. 6: 2, 4.) Mr. Polhemus claimed that while creeds and confessions were human, they differed in the fact that one was the result of the other. Creeds grew out of a compilation of facts based on faith. He said that spirit could know spirit and teach spirit without the body; so the church needs no body to be identified. To this Bro. Blodgett replied that a "faith without works is dead;" so such a faith as his opponent offered was dead, not having a body to do the necessary works.

Of the Trinity, Mr. Polhemus claimed that God was incomprehensible, and that the Bible does not prove the existence of a God, but assumes that there is a God. This was answered by showing that God is definitely described as being like man in form, and that Christ came in "the express image of his person." (Heb. 1: 3.) The fact of his existence was established by the record that different persons had seen him. (Acts 7: 56; Ex. 33: 23.) Bro. Blodgett showed by the history of the United Brethren Church that it came from the German Reform Church, and was the production of William Otterbein. He was ordained by a Presbyterian minister; so he traced the United Brethren Church back through the Presbyterian Church, and Calvinistic reform to the Roman Catholic Church. Here Bro. Blodgett made splendid use of a chart made for the occasion by Bro. Payne and Sr. Richards. It consisted of a large piece of oilcloth mounted on a roller to hang like a map. The Church of Christ was represented by a heavy white line, from which seven red lines extended downward, representing the seven churches of Asia going into apostasy. This terminated in a heavy red line running to the right, parallel to the white line; the white line suddenly coming to an end at about the commencement of the heavy red line, which represented the Roman Catholic Church. At a proper distance this red line branched out into other smaller red lines, representing the various reforms, all bearing proper dates to locate their origin. The heavy white line is renewed again at the date 1830, from which another heavy red line branches, showing the Utah apostasy. Two small white lines take an upward course from the point where John received his revelations and when the man child was caught up, spoken of in Revelation 12. These terminate in a single white line representing the downward flight of the angel of Revelation 14: 6. This chart was used to good advantage all through the discussion.

Baptism was set forth by Mr. Polhemus on a very broad foundation. He said no one mode should be used to the exclusion of all others. Bro. Blodgett denied that this liberality was scriptural, and compared it to the straight gate spoken of in the Scriptures—one Lord, one faith, one baptism. (Eph. 4: 5.)

On the second proposition Bro. Blodgett read the Epitome, and showed the unchangeability of the gospel in all its relations to man. To this Mr. Polhemus objected, stating that the Bible was not a sure test on the mode of baptism. He then read several passages from the Book of Mormon to try to show a conflict between it and the Bible in regard to baptism. We failed to see the least difference between them, except that the Book of Mormon was a little more definite in regard to the mode and the effect of baptism. Mr. Polhemus objected to men holding the apostolic office who had not seen Christ, because that was necessary in order to bear witness of him. Bro. Blodgett showed that this was not true from the fact that Paul had only got that knowledge of him in a vision, and anyone might receive such a vision if Christ saw fit to grant it. Objection was made to Joseph Smith being a prophet, seer, revelator, bank president, mayor, and Lieutenant General, etc. Bro. Blodgett showed that he had a right to be a bank president or to hold any other office that an American citizen is entitled to hold; that if Moses could be a prophet of God—a seer, revelator, lawgiver, ruler, and commander in chief, why not Joseph Smith? This was thought by his opponent too much like Judaism.

Mr. Polhemus claimed that apostles were temporary and soon gave way for the more permanent organization of bishops, elders, and deacons. This was shown to be not the design of God from the fact that there was a succession of apostles to the number of about twenty; that as one dropped out of the quorum another was chosen to take his place, as was the case in the selection of Matthias to take the place of Judas, recorded in Acts 1; besides, they were to remain in the church "Till we all come in the unity of the faith," etc. (Eph. 4: 13.) The church did not continue in that unity, so they are still needed in these later times.

Mr. Polhemus affirmed that Joseph Smith received the polygamic revelation, and brought encyclopedias to prove his point. Bro. Blodgett proved by the testimony of a great many witnesses who knew the facts in the case, that polygamy was not a practice or part of the faith of the church up to 1844, but was introduced in 1852 in Utah. Among those witnesses were Emma Smith, wife of the prophet, Brigham Young, George Q. Cannon, of the Utah Church, and others.

The opponent objected to the apparent secrecy that hangs about the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. He thought the plates should have been seen by more than three men. Bro. Blodgett showed that there was not as much secrecy about those plates as about the giving of the ten commandments. Joshua alone witnessed the giving of the first tables, and no one witnessed the writing on the second tables except Moses. These were put in an ark and over five thousand men lost their lives, "because they had looked into the ark of the Lord." (1 Sam. 6: 19.) God had some secrets; he does not make a great display of his deeds.

Mr. Polhemus objected to Joseph Smith holding the keys of the kingdom and the power and authority accompanying the same. This was shown to be in harmony with Christ's commission to the apostles. He gave the keys to Peter and also to the rest of the apostles, to bind and loose. (Matt. 16: 19; John 20: 23.) Again, objection was made to the seer holding the power of the priesthood, whereby he was to be mighty in deed, faith, and works, and as the Book of Mormon declares. In reply to this Bro. Blodgett used James 5: 17: "Elias . . . prayed earnestly that it might not rain; and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months." The two prophets spoken of in Revelation 11, were to have power to consume their enemies with fire, to "shut heaven, that it rain not . . . and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will."

Mr. Polhemus tried hard to make it appear that the Utah Church was the true continuation of the church after Joseph Smith's death. This Bro. Blodgett showed was not true, from the fact that Brigham Young only led part of the church to the West, while the Saints that came together to form the Reorganization never went to the West. The presidency of the church after the death of the prophet had been provided for in the ordination of Young Joseph to take his father's place; also the priesthood was to continue by lineage. (D. C. 232.) The blessing belonging to Joseph Smith was to be "put upon the head of his posterity after him." (D. C. 307.) The decree of the court in the Kirtland Temple suit proved that the Reorganization was the successor of the church in Joseph's day and the Church in Utah a departure from said church.

Mr. Polhemus thought it altogether inconsistent with his idea of God, to admit that he permitted the church in former or latter days to be overcome and led astray by the evil one. He very emphatically declared that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it,"—the church of course as he sees it. Bro. Blodgett replied that the main thought under consideration when those words were used was, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" (Matt. 16.) "Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Christ said, "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." "And upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it"—the rock Christ revealed. He also showed by other scripture that Christ is the rock and that the gates of hell never prevailed against that rock. The apostasy of the church was also again shown.

On the last evening of the discussion, the authenticity of the Book of Mormon was attacked. We tried to rule this out, as being off the question, but did not succeed. Mr. Polhemus claimed there was no external or internal evidence in favor of it being or containing a direct revelation from God. Bro. Blodgett did not have time to answer the arguments.

The debate passed off pleasantly. The opera hall was filled every night; standing room was at a premium on the last evening. The Saints assisted well, especially were Bro. S. D. Payne and Sr. Richards helpful, not only in playing the violin and organ, but they took down a good portion of the speeches, and helped in various ways.

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. M. STUBBART.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Southwestern Mission:—By the urgent request of Bro. A. J. Moore he is hereby released from the active oversight and charge of the Texas mission. Bro. E. W. Nunley will please take charge of that part east and north of the Colorado River.

Bro. L. L. Wight will please take the active oversight and care of that part south and west of the Colorado River.

The ministry in Texas will please take notice and report to these brethren.

Your brother in bonds,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

KINGFISHER, Oklahoma, November 19.

QUORUM ENROLLMENT.

In consequence of a Herald editorial there have been received by me and by the office certain requests that the writers be enrolled in the quorums of the church, as provided for in the law. In some cases these requests have been on the same sheet with business to the Herald Office, and they were only the expression of a wish, without items in full or in part, and with no statement of what the writers are doing in the work.

What is necessary is that each applicant for enrollment should write (on a sheet of paper by itself) a statement of when born, when baptized, and when, where, and by whom ordained, and adding thereto a few words as to what duties the applicant is performing as an officer in the church, whether in branch service or preaching the gospel in any capacity.

Although the items of birth, baptism, and ordination are upon the general records of the church and can be readily found, yet it will save labor here for the applicants to write them. Besides, the quorums desire personal statements from those they receive, so that the items may go upon their records; and also an account of the service of each, that they may accept the individual with an understanding as to what active part he is taking in the work. These applications are to be drawn from the hands of the Church Secretary, whenever vacancies in quorums exist, that such vacancies may be filled.

The Church Secretary has no authority to enroll anyone in a quorum. He simply receives the applications and presents them to the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons when they are needed. It remains with the quorums to accept the individuals or not, as they may decide.

No one can apply for another, according to a rule of General Conference. Each must make his own application; and a separate sheet of paper should be used in each case, not several applications be made on the same sheet.

It is not likely that many quorums will be able to hold meetings or to receive members next April at Kirtland, but applications will be received and filed at any time, subject to the call of the quorums in the future.

Notices of this kind have been published by me at various times in the past, but the order of things seems to be readily forgotten. But by attention to these rules it is easy to make a proper application for enrollment.

H. A. STEBBINS,
Gen'l Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, Nov. 22, 1895.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Independence, Missouri, district will convene December 7, at ten a. m. at Independence. All branch clerks please send in your reports in time. We want every branch represented and a full attendance of the ministry. The election of officers will take place at this conference and other important business is expected to come up.

R. MAY, Pres.
J. C. MOXON, Sec.

Conference of the Eastern Maine district will convene with the Saints in Mason's Bay, December 14, 15. U. W. Greene and J. C. Foss of the Seventy will probably be present. All are cordially invited.

S. O. FOSS, Pres.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District:—Bro. William Lockerby, Bishop's agent for the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district of the Reorganized Church, having been released by death from the cares and responsibilities of church work in the present life, this is to duly give notice of the appointment of Bro. Samuel Stroh, of Coldwater, Michigan, Bishop's agent for said district, he having been duly authorized so to act in behalf of the church for the same.

Bro. William Lockerby, who has passed to the other side, awaiting the rewards of the Master in his own due time, was found ever worthy in his work and faithful in the discharge of duty in the office of Bishop's agent, and for which we are confident he will receive commendation on the other side.

We are pleased also to be able to commend to the Saints Bro. Samuel Stroh, the new agent, who comes with the recommendation of the conference of his district, and trust that before the close of the present fiscal year no one in the district shall have failed to comply with the law of Christ which directs that we render an account of our stewardship in temporal matters "both in time and in eternity." It is possible to render an account now, and if anything is found due him according as he has directed us to account to the Bishop of his church here, we may soon pay as we have the ability; by and by we shall not have wherewith to settle if we shall be found lacking.

Call on the agent if he does not call on you, and see that duty is fully discharged, and encourage him to see others.

Ever anxiously working for the triumph of the Redeemer's cause, I am,

Hopefully, yours,

E. L. KELLEY.

MARRIED.

DANCER—ANDERSON.—At the residence of Bro. A. K. Anderson and wife, the parents of the bride, Lamoni, Wednesday, seven o'clock p. m., November 20, 1895, Bro. David Dancer and Sr. Anna Anderson were united in wedlock in the presence of a number of relatives and friends of the contracting parties; President Joseph Smith conducting the ceremony, Bro. H. A. Stebbins offering the prayer. Owing to the social standing of the parties it was a notable event for Lamoni.

COOK—WOODCOCK.—At the home of the bride's parents, Etherly, Knox County, Illinois, November 6, 1895, Bro. James K. Cook and Miss Cora Woodcock; Elder D. C. Smith officiating. Bro. Cook is an excellent young man, and his bride is worthy of highest esteem. May peace and prosperity attend, bringing forth the fruits of eternal life to the glory of God.

DIED.

BAKER.—Michael Baker passed from this life to the paradise of rest November 15, 1895. He was born April 26, 1829, in the State of Pennsylvania; baptized by T. W. Chatburn at Kingston, Missouri, May 18, 1892. He was possessed of those sterling qualities that make noble men in this life and fit them for the more responsible positions in the life to come. Funeral sermon by T. W. Chatburn from Job 14: 14, to a large, appreciative audience, who followed him to his resting place in the Kingston cemetery at Kingston, Missouri. Bro. Baker was a respected citizen, a loving husband, and an indulgent Father. A devoted wife and two sons mourn his loss. He died in the hope of a resurrection with the just ones made perfect.

RUDKINS.—At Bevier, Missouri, November 16, 1895, Edith, daughter of Mr. Samuel and Sr. Mary Rudkins. She was born at Bevier, Missouri, March 8, 1891, died aged 4 years, 8 months, and 8 days. Services at the Saints' church and discourse by Elder J. A. Tanner.

LUCKY.—At her home, Lamoni, Iowa, Friday, November 22, at noon, Sister Sarah Lucky. She was born in the town of Pompey, Onondaga County, New York, July 27, 1809. When four years old her parents removed to Rochester, New York, and finally, after some years, her lot was cast in with the Saints; and she with her parents went to Painesville, Ohio. She was baptized in 1832, by Elder Zebedee Coltrin, and in 1833 was married to Elder Truman Wait. She and her husband went to Clay County, Missouri, and in 1837 built the first house in Far West, Caldwell County. They went through all the persecutions of the Saints in Missouri, and were among the last to leave that State for Illinois, where they remained until after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith; when with her father's family they went to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. In 1846 they moved to St. Louis, Missouri, where her husband died the year following. Seventeen years afterwards she was again married to Lieutenant Colonel Lucky, and with him removed to Sandwich, Illinois, just after the close of the war. Here in August, 1869, she united with the Reorganization, being baptized by Elder E. Banta; and after the death of her second husband came to Decatur County, Iowa, and has been living in Lamoni eleven years. Her life was an eventful one, and she was prepared for her change. Funeral from the house, conducted by Elder Samuel Ackerly and President Joseph Smith, at the request of Sr. Lucky made before her demise. Her body was laid to rest in the family lot in Rose Hill Cemetery.

BARBER.—At Grant City, Missouri, November 19, 1895, of consumption, Sr. Ada Barber, whose earthly pilgrimage was 19 years, 7 months, and 27 days. She was baptized May 17, 1891, by Elder E. Keeler. Mother, sisters, and brother were in attendance at the funeral. She had many friends, as was evidenced by the large gathering at the Presbyterian church, where the sermon was preached by Elder R. M. Elvin, from 1 Corinthians 15: 23. Rev. McReur assisted in the pulpit services, and his choir did the singing. Another Saint, who was willing to go to rest, awaits the first resurrection.

THE HYMNAL IS COMING.

left for us to do but to supply the money ourselves or borrow it, paying a good percentage for it.

Now these are the facts in the matter, and we ask you to consider them and ask yourselves how long an institution would stand in the world under similar conditions, and what caused the Master to say that the children of the world were "wiser in their generation than the children of light." Where in the Scriptures is it written that we have claim upon the Master before we have done our part? Let us realize that to be in touch with this great latter-day work it is necessary to be acquainted with and help every department of it.

TRACT FUND

Every mail that comes bears a request from some one of the ministry in the field to send them tracts and reading matter to distribute free to help open up new places; and thousands in the church can testify what these tracts have done for them; yet not one since I came to the office in July last, has remitted one cent to help pay the postage on these tracts; nor do I write this to find fault because it has not been done, but to show the possibilities for good there are here with the proper help from the church abroad.

I would suggest that each branch of the church start a "tract fund," and send, every month, amounts received to the Bishop or to the Business Manager of the Herald Office. Who will be the first to make the move? God will bless the effort.

Brethren, we ask your help to move forward the publishing department. We call especial attention to the young who for years have been reading the Autumn Leaves, one of the best publications for the young and their advancement that is published on this broad earth. The editor of that magazine is making a sacrifice of her life to make it a success; but I am sorry to say that the subscribers are over $3,000 in arrears on their subscription, thereby causing her efforts and sacrifice of time and brain to also be a loss.

This causes me to inquire, Are we indeed a band of brethren and sisters, bound together by the ties of love? And have we one another's interest at heart as God's children should have?

Once more we appeal to the church to unite with us and stand shoulder to shoulder to push forward every department of God's work.

And, once more, and to increase our faith, confidence, and our good works toward one another, we ask and appeal for cash in advance for the Hymnal; and in justice to all we will have to first send Hymnals to those who first send in their money to help get it out. General Conference directed its publication when the sale of one thousand was guaranteed, so we are ahead of time, as this has not yet been done, by almost one third, as subscriptions are not guarantees. I am sorry to say, as our books are the witnesses; and the Herald Office books testify against many hundreds. So send in your cash with orders.

For the work yours.

AN AMERICAN ON THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

THE Hon. Justice Field, of the United States Supreme Court, recently passed through Canada, and a long account of an interview with him appears in the Montreal Daily Witness. In reply to a remark by the correspondent, who observed, "You have beaten us in the race for population," the judge said, "There were special causes for that. But you are bound to prosper. Greatness will come in time. It always does where England plants her foot; and that not because of her might, but for a nobler reason. Wherever England plants her foot she at once establishes order; she makes laws; she protects life and property. And those who place themselves under that flag stay under it, assured that they can sit under their own vine and fig tree. That is the secret of the British Empire—that it stands for order, for the sacredness of human life, for protection of every interest, however humble. You have a great country and are part of a mighty empire. When I think of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and this great country to the north of us, I am filled with wonder." "Do you think this unwieldy empire will last?" "Justice and righteousness will make it last," replied the venerable judge. "These form the cement which binds nations together. If they are absent, no nation can prosper. It may appear to be great for a time, but it will eventually go down in ruin. England's rule, in the main, is for justice and righteousness, and therefore, I would safely predict permanence for her great empire."

Speaking of the relations between Britain and the United States, the judge said: "The only rivalry between the two countries, enlightened and tolerant, will be an industrial rivalry, of which we cannot have too much. English-speaking people, whether American or British, understand justice and will eventually do right. It is not their genius to do other. If there be irritation it will pass away; local acerbities will vanish. We are growing out of localism; we are taking the larger view." "Whether Canada will go on to nationhood," said the judge, in answer to another question, "or become a part of the United States, who can tell? One thing is certain—Canada can never be coerced to join us. No sane person would think of such a thing. If, after carefully considering the problem, both countries agree that it would be best to obliterate the imaginary boundary line and to become one, then I think their desires could be accomplished. But it is madness to talk of coercion. The day of force is over. We are having, and will have more and more, the reign of wisdom; and it will be wisdom and good feeling which will ultimately determine this matter."—Ex.

WHAT ALL BOYS SHOULD KNOW.

- DON'T be satisfied with your boy's education or allow him to handle a Latin or Greek book until you are sure that he can—
- Write a good legible hand.
  - Spell all the words he knows how to use.
  - Speak and write good English.
  - Write a good social letter.
  - Add a column of figures rapidly.
  - Make out an ordinary account.
  - Deduct 16½ per cent from the face of it.
  - Receipt it when paid.
  - Write an ordinary receipt.
  - Write an advertisement for the local paper.
  - Write an ordinary promissory note.
  - Reckon the interest or discount on it for days, months, or years.
  - Draw an ordinary bank check.

Take it to the proper place in a bank to get the cash.

Make neat and correct entries in daybook and ledger.

Tell the number of yards of carpet required for your parlor.

Measure a pile of lumber in your shed.

Tell the number of bushels of wheat in your largest bin, and the value at current rates.

Tell something about the great authors and statesmen of the present day.

If he can do all this, and more, it is likely he has sufficient education to make his own way in the world. If you have more time and money to spend upon him, all well and good—give him higher English, give him literature, give him mathematics, give him science, and if he is very anxious about it give him Latin and Greek, or whatever the course he intends pursuing in life demands.—School Supplement.

WIVES' AND MOTHERS' WORK.

We have all seen a goodly number of admirable wives and mothers, writes Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in November Ladies Home Journal, but we have probably scarcely seen one who could not have been a great deal larger and more accomplished than she was without its being necessary for her to have a wider territory of exertion in order to evince and exercise all there was in her. I have taken no ground against woman's doing anything and everything that the most demonstrative and high-keyed representatives of her sex aspire to. In particular I have not even uttered a word against so serious an innovation as that of woman's going to the polls. I have only tried to show the infinite stretch of opportunity that opens before her in the line of service which the general instinct and the revealed word of God shows to be primarily pertinent to her. When the sex has succeeded in doing perfectly what God and Nature evidently intended to have her do it will be time for her to think about doing some things upon which God and Nature have expressed themselves less definitely.

Pedestrians fond of strolling through the fields where they are often in the habit of chewing the tender shoots of grass that they pick up in their way, will be surprised to hear that the latter apparently most innocent indulgence is fraught with danger. According to M. Poncet the grass munchers are liable to contamination through fungus spores adhering to the blades. The parasite promptly seizes the maxillary region, its favorite site. The consequences of this invasion are sometimes very serious, leading to indurations and abscesses, to say nothing of the disfigurement; but it is comforting to learn that the foe can be easily and completely routed by a well directed treatment with iodide of potassium.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to rules agreed upon and published by the Herald Office, all whose subscriptions are one year overdue will be dropped from the mailing lists at the end of the year—December 31, 1895—provided, that if those who desire their papers continued and who will pay in a reasonable time, will so notify the office, their publications will be continued.

This applies to the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies.

It is desired that all will continue and so notify us, and make an effort to pay subscriptions as soon as possible.

It is our wish to increase, not to diminish the circulation of the church papers among the membership. All should read them.

Subscriptions solicited.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.
R. S. SALYARDS - - - ASSISTANT EDITOR.
HEMAN C. SMITH - - - CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, DEC. 4, 1895.

DEDICATION AT GREENVILLE, IOWA.

THERE is a little handful of Saints living some five and a half or six miles east of Lamoni, known to the Decatur district records as "the Greenville branch," over which Bro. Joseph Boswell, formerly of Kewanee, Illinois, is now presiding.

Some little while ago they decided that it would be to their benefit if they had a house in which to assemble for Sunday school and worshiping purposes; and so they set about the business of building one. They solicited from the Saints and their neighbors, and collected some $251.38, in money, and a donation of rock to the amount of $13, with which they proceeded to work, and this last fall, the building was ready for dedication. The brethren set Sunday, November 24, for the dedicatory services, inviting Bro. Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley to be present and take part. Accordingly, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon of that day the brethren named reinforced by the addition of Bro. William Anderson, president of the district, Brn. Frank Criley, Wilson Hudson, and a few of the choir from Lamoni, and the members of the Greenville branch and their neighbors to the extent of a houseful of people, were gathered to witness the dedication.

After a hymn was sung, opening prayer was offered by President Anderson; the sermon was by President Joseph Smith and the dedicatory prayer was made by Bishop Kelley. An itemized report of receipts and expenditures was read at the close of the sermon, showing that the labor done on the building had all been donated except three dollars, for which cash was paid. The report showed that the cost of the building had been $267.38, the land for the building site and the labor not included; as no estimate of labor had been made. The building is neat, commodious, and well located for the purpose for which it is intended.

THE PRESBYTERIANS; ALSO OTHERS.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 23.—The action of the Allegheny seminary in acceding to the request of the Presbyterian General Assembly that all seminaries of the church shall so change their charters that these institutions will be entirely under the authority of the assembly caused a stir among the Cleveland Presbyterians, many of whom belong to the liberal party.

The Rev. Dr. S. P. Sprecher of the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian church, one of the most extreme and brilliant liberals in the church, said:—

"The liberals hoped for better than this, but are not greatly disappointed, for Allegheny is most conservative. I don't believe the majority of the seminaries will accede to the assembly's demand. This question is more likely to split the church than the Briggs case. The act of the General Assembly was one of as extreme tyranny as can be well imagined."

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 23.—The trustees and directors of the Western Theological Seminary at Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, met this week to act on the question of assembly control of Presbyterian theological seminaries.

It was decided to accept the plan proposed by the last General Assembly that theological seminaries place themselves under its control, giving it a veto over elections, with the power to appoint a representative, when necessary, to enforce a faithful administration of the trust funds.

The directors also appointed Dr. Moffit and Dr. Beard to apply to the Pennsylvania Legislature for such change of charter as may be necessary to make the compact binding.

It was given out that wealthy laymen, from whom additions to the endowment are expected, seem unwilling to contribute until the change is made.

Things that are in any degree out of harmony with true principles seem to be peculiarly disturbed in the present time. It is a period distinctly one of unrest;—all things are in commotion, seemingly being overturned, subjected to frictional processes in their contact with similar and dissimilar forces, that seem designed to wear away and consume those things that cannot be corrected or made new; while those even slightly out of gear, economically, socially, and generally, are being readjusted.

In the opinion of Dr. Sprecher, a liberal Presbyterian, the action of the General Assembly, if insisted upon, will cause more trouble than has the celebrated Briggs case. We shall wait and see. It seems certain that Presbyterianism, in its present status, with its creed partly accepted and partly rejected, is by no means a definite quantity. Its confession of faith has been badly lacerated in late theological battles between opposing sides of the General Assembly, and the end is not yet. The wound has not healed; but threatens to break out and become worse.

It is useless for any religious body to expect its adherents to remain satisfied until it conforms entirely to the truth. Even great strides toward the truth will not do; for though grave errors in doctrine, policy, or polity be pointed out and such errors corrected, others will loom up demanding additional correction, and still others be made manifest and further corrections be demanded, by the ever-growing spirit of the times. If these demands be not made by members of the Presbyterian Church itself, its opponents and others—the pronounced infidel, or those engaged in the field of reform, or those in the service of truth revealed, will point out the errors of Calvinism and other isms.

God, the God of truth, is at work with agencies operating in every field of effort. He has spoken in these last days by his Son and restored the gospel, and is continuing the work of building his church. The result of its spiritual-intellectual teaching is that creeds are receiving their death-blow and truth is enlightening the hearts and minds of men.

God also spoke in a revelation of political truth when he caused this government of the people to be established by wise men, whom he raised up and inspired for the work they accomplished; and as a result civil and religious liberty is being extended in the world, and will not cease to extend until it triumphs over every monarchical and oppressive system.

In the field of science God has also been moving, hence the discovery and application of many forces and utilities for the comfort and welfare of the race; all of which are necessary and tend to equip mankind for its high destiny.

Humanity has reason for sincere gratitude in the evidences of the workings of omnipotent power reigning and overturning in the behalf of truth. The work already done and that daily being done is a self-evident guarantee that all wrongs are to be righted, that all forces are to be properly adjusted in the due time of the Lord. He is pledged to perfect all his works; to so arrange, so qualify, so adjust, that every element, every principle, every entity, shall fill the measure of its creation or existence and be made perfect in its sphere; and thus bring about the redemption, and perfection, and happiness of all things, according to the nature and capacity of every one in its sphere.

As individuals we have reason for devout gratitude in the manifest purpose of God, the Father, to exercise the principle of Fatherhood for our education, our correction, our redemption. While we see the spirit and power of correction manifest in the world, overturning and revealing what is erroneous, it becomes us as those enlightened, those occupying a center point of observation from which the whole circumference may intelligently be comprehended—it becomes us to voluntarily, individually, spontaneously make such corrections as the truth in all its various disclosures, enlightening power, and teaching, shows us must be made in order that we may become, in fact, the sons and daughters of God in this peculiar generation; in this period of the world when such wonderful complications exist and such stupendous scenes are taking place in the great struggle of world-forces and unseen elements.

All truth is self-evident when properly understood. To us it seems plain that while as a people we are required to point out the errors of systems of men, we must do so in the spirit of sincere desire to see the adherents of such systems enlightened by making such corrections as will transplant them from the kingdom of this world into the kingdom of Christ. It also appears a self-evident truth that if sincerely and intelligently engaged in the work of correction, we will, as a people, be anxious and willing to make such individual correction of ourselves as is necessary; in other words, that we shall gladly comply with the law in all its requirements—both the temporal and the spiritual law—the perfect law.

A perfect law observed will make men and women perfect. The law of God in all the realm of nature is never inoperative, never inapplicable. It is only unexecuted upon us in its progressive or higher principles because we fail to comply with its conditions. When we observe it, honor it, by applying it, by obeying it, we step up onto higher ground, enjoy a greater measure of the Spirit of the Lord—the Spirit and power of godliness, and are prepared for further progress and greater power and usefulness in the sphere of life, which is always opening and extending before those who become fellow-heirs and fellow-workers with Christ the Redeemer and leader of man.

To us it appears manifestly plain and true that it will not do for us as a people to be content with the thought that because we have the truth of the gospel by which we are enabled to point out the errors of sectarianism and by its light and power vanquish our opponents, when we are humble in asking aid of the Lord,—it will not do to rest in fancied security because we are “in the church” and have obeyed the initiatory rites by which we have been inducted into the fold. Responsibilities of a very grave character rest upon us. By covenant with God we have pledged ourselves to his service, without reserve, without withholding any phase of obedience. We are pledged to observe the whole law; to live in peace with one another; to be content to labor in our own spheres; to support one another in the sphere in which every one is called to labor; to be humble; to be steadfast; to study; to be prayerful; to become acquainted with the law of God, and to “live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God;” to honor every feature of the law pertaining to temporal and to spiritual things.

“Man shall not live by bread alone,” was the injunction of the Master. Men and women who live by bread alone, live for the things that are of this world—the bread that perishes, the pride of life that pampers to vanity, and mere social pleasure, and selfish gratification, and the building up of properties for worldly ease and gratification. Men and women who turn to these things, though they make profession of faith, are not in the faith, but in “the world.” The bread of this world “perishes;” the fashion of this world passeth away, but the doers of truth and their works live and abide and abound forever.

We are forcibly impressed with the conviction that upon us as a church lies not only the responsibility of teaching the world the precepts of the gospel, but also that teaching by example, by conformity to the law, which is the important feature, the essential property of teaching. Jesus taught not in word only; “I do always” was the word by which he emphasized to men the fact that he honored his Father in deed. Men and women and children who enter the church will largely do what they see the members of the church do. If the church is united, working in harmony, sustaining one another in peace, and observing the law of tithes and offerings, they will be led to do likewise, or vice versa. It is manifestly the purpose of the Lord that the various congregations shall be centers of light, of truth, of goodness—where truth is taught, where evils are warned against and prevented, where life in its truest, in its noblest, in its broadest, and purest phases, is exemplified, brought out, and revealed.

We believe our people who are studying and who will study the scope of church work in the branches and gathering places of the Saints will do well. They will doubtless comprehend more of the possibilities, the wide field before them as organizations for good. As one must understand his work to do it fully, effectively, so must thought, application, and devotion be given to the work “now lying before” the various local organizations of the church, as centers for good in behalf of the Saints and their children and fellow man.

As we have hinted, the work is not limited to a round of formal duties but comprehends in it all that spiritual life that shall quicken and qualify for good both old and young, and bring to all a satisfaction and a happiness not to be compared with any enjoyment that the world has to offer. We believe our young people can be brought in closer contact with the work of the branches, that they are to be so brought in close touch and active coöperation in the work—become a component, reliable portion of and support to branches; and that they can be made a force and power for good in branches if the services and privileges of branches are sufficiently comprehended as to make them what they are designed to be—places of attraction and sources of strength to all.

We refer to this important and necessary feature of church work, in connection with other general principles, in passing. Let us look forward and go forward—not backward—in every good thing; forward until we have discerned and applied every element, every method, and every principle necessary to guide us into "all truth." As a church we have never yet observed all that has been required of us; indeed we may say that collectively—as a body—we have come far short of what we have been invited and commanded and privileged to do. The Bishop's books, we understand, show that less than three fifths of the membership have complied with the temporal law; and this condition is probably an index to the general condition; for it is well known that it is the general rule that a minority or a bare majority at least are usually earnest and active in the duty of sustaining the work by work. We ought to have not only a large majority, but all active, and intensely active, in so grand a cause, so fraught with import to the Saints and to the world.

Again we say, Let us look forward and not backward. The future is ours, the benefits of the past, also the errors and limitations of the past, are ours to profit by. Having the experiences of the past we are under the responsibility of progressing beyond it and of doing better, as those who follow us must also surpass us, as the progress and development of the times make their possibilities greater. The past has largely paved the way for the present and the present is to make possible a better future. If we do not look forward we will stand still; if we look backward we will retrograde. The faithful of the past will receive their reward; so likewise all who have done what they could. All will have the glory of having tried, if they try hard enough; and all, of the past, of the present, and of the future, be rewarded for their faithfulness in the time to come when the great Redeemer reigns among his people.

We close by repeating the thought that while we discern the forces at work overthrowing and supplanting false systems in the world, we apply the lessons of the hour and make correction and advancement. We are yet imperfect, yet far below the standard. With gratitude for what has been done, with due and honorable appreciation of the good done by those who have preceded us, many of whom have done nobly, grandly, faithfully, let us improve and go forward. So shall we be the people of God and be blessed and owned to honor him and benefit our fellow man. Otherwise we will be found wanting and others take our crown.

CRILEY-DUNCAN CONTROVERSY.

THE readers of the HERALD will notice elsewhere in this issue a letter directed to the Business Manager, from Bro. C. R. Duncan.

We have nothing to write regarding the merits of the controversy between the Business Manager and Bro. Duncan, only this:—

The resolution of conference authorizing the issuing of the Hymnal is as follows:—

Resolved, that the Board of Publication be requested to proceed with the publication of the book as soon as they have a guarantee that one thousand copies can be disposed of.

In HERALD for September 11, there was a statement from the Business Manager that the office had about half enough orders and about one quarter the needed money; and asking that cash accompany orders for Hymnal. The conclusion was reached that the office could safely proceed to publish the book, there being a sufficient guarantee that there could easily be a thousand copies sold; and so work went on, the Board keeping clearly within the spirit and terms of the resolution; neither seeking to avoid it, nor to ignore it. Reflection upon the Board for proceeding with the work under consideration of the facts known at the office was unnecessary, as neither the President of the Board, nor the Business Manager, had either desire or intention to ignore the action of conference, but did desire and intend to comply with the spirit of it, and furnish the book as soon as it could safely be done.

It will be seen that the sale of the first thousand will not meet the aggregate cost of getting the work up; but there is no doubt entertained but what not only the thousand stipulated for will be disposed of, but many hundreds besides will be needed and sold.

We regret any misunderstanding and hope no further controversy will be had over the matter.

NOT TO BE DREADED.

THE Dread-Naught, F. C. Watkins, editor, an organ of the "A. C's.," or Advent Christians, as they call themselves, pays its regards to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the issue of that paper for November 7, in the following fashion:—

The Mormons are still grinding out goods at the same old stand, Lamoni, Iowa. We could not be a Mormon for several reasons:—

1. We do not believe in following dreamers. The Mormons say they believe that Joseph Smith was inspired of God; and so do the Shakers say Ann Lee was inspired. Seventh-Day Adventists say that Ellen G. White is inspired; and we ask, Why not believe in Ann Lee or Mrs. White just as quick as the martyred Mormon leader?

2. We could not believe in the Book of Mormon, as we are not taught in the Scriptures to believe in and practice any precepts, only those given in the sacred record.

3. It would be impossible for us to believe the kingdom of God was set up in 1830-35, by Joe Smith. We read in Luke 1:32, 33, that Jesus is to reign as king; and we do not find that Jesus has ever come to this world literally the second time; and for these reasons we reject the doctrines taught by Joseph the Seer.
M. S. J.

Whoever M. S. J. may be he is not likely to die of a plethora of wisdom. He sets aside an intelligent belief of a people in the principle of present inspiration, resulting from the belief that men were inspired in Bible times with an inspiration which was to be with gospel believers to the end of time; by a question that is neither a statement nor an argument. "Why not believe in Ann Lee, or Mrs. White just as quick as the martyred Mormon leader?"

The belief that Ann Lee was inspired, and that Mrs. Ellen G. White is inspired was and is just as fervent, just as sincere, and just as honest, on the part of those so believing as the belief of M. S. J. in any dogma of the Advent Christians. Nor can Editor F. C. Watkins, or M. S. J. disprove the claim of those followers of either that the persons so flippantly referred to were not inspired, by innuendo, carping criticism, or sneering allusion. The fact that M. S. J. does not believe that Joseph Smith, Ann Lee, or Mrs. Ellen G. White was and is inspired, nor the statement of such unbelief does not prove that neither of them was inspired; nor does the belief of their followers that they were inspired necessarily prove that they were. However, when otherwise intelligent men and women receive and accept evidences which satisfy them that men are inspired, and are able to state those evidences and willingly do so, it is presumptive proof of such inspiration; nor can any amount of unbelief in any number of people, no matter how strongly, or how often repeated destroy that belief, or the evidences on which it is based.

M. S. J. says that he "could not believe in the Book of Mormon," because he is "not taught in the Scriptures to believe in and practice any precepts, only those given in the sacred record."

In this statement the inference is carried that there are precepts taught in the Book of Mormon that are contradictory to, or not in harmony with the "sacred record." Is M. S. J. prepared to state what portion of the sacred record he is willing to have his faith tried by? Or what precepts taught in the Book of Mormon, he refers to? We do not believe in the Advent Christians' chief tenet, the unconscious state of the living after death, between death of the body and the resurrection. We do not say we could not believe it, but that we do not. One of the chief reasons why we do not believe it, is because we do not find it taught in the Scriptures. Our disbelief in the dogma, however, does not disprove the correctness of it; nor does our failure to find sufficient teaching in the Scriptures to justify belief in it, as we understand them, necessarily make the dogma incorrect or false; so neither does Mr. M. S. J.'s inability to "believe in following dreamers," by any means disprove the claim for the teaching of the Book of Mormon. The Bible contains the recital of several dreams, the interpretation of some of which is vitally essential to some of the positions assumed by all Adventists; and the Dread-Naught and M. S. J. are following dreamers every day of their continuance in faith in the coming of the Son of man to bring to pass the resurrection of the righteous. Nor does such inability to believe on the part of M. S. J. make any part of the faith of the people who accept the Book of Mormon to be profitless, idle, or vain.

Because M. S. J. states that "it would be impossible" for him "to believe that the kingdom of God was set up in 1830-35 by Joe Smith;" it is not proof that the Church of Christ was not organized by command of God, by Joseph Smith and others in 1830-35. It is far more consistent to believe that such church was so organized if the prophecies of the Bible are to be accepted, than to believe that the New Testament church is represented by F. C. Watkins, M. S. J., and the Dread-Naught, when such men as themselves and Elder Glendenning, who represents the same organization and doctrines, but refuses to affirm in discussion that their Advent-Christian body is the church, or identical in faith, doctrine, and practice with the church of New Testament times, as Elder Glendenning has done.

There is a controversy among the brethren whose organ the Dread-Naught is, about the propriety of the name Advent-Christians, for their church; but we see no inconsistency in the name as applied to the people and the views held by them. Their being Christians—true followers of Christ—will not be determined until Christ's coming and the resurrection; if they are then raised as being found righteous, they will then be Christ's, and thus Christians by the advent of Christ; hence Advent-Christians.

The members of the Reorganized Church are not "Mormons;" though believing in the Book of Mormon, and Elder F. C. Watkins, of the Dread-Naught knows this, whether M. S. J. does or not. It is just as proper and as Christianlike for us to call Elder Watkins and his associate believers, Millerites, Campbellites, Advents, or Adventists, or Soulsleepers, as it is for Mr. Watkins, M. S. J., or any other writer for the Dread-Naught to call us "Mormons." It would also be more commendable and Christianlike for those men to write the proper name of the men of whom they write, than to use the irreverent nickname. "Joe Smith," sounds bad, and looks bad in writing, when it is done by those professing to stand for better things among believers in Jesus as the Redeemer of mankind.

Jesus said that he did the things he was directed to do by his Father, and said what his Father told him to say. Joseph Smith stated that he did what an angel sent of God told him to do, and taught what the angelic messenger gave him direction to teach. Why not try the things Joseph Smith and his coassociates taught and did by virtue of such command and direction by the accepted word of God, rather than to attempt to dispose of them by expressions that are illogical in statement and unfortunate as arguments. Sixty odd years of conflict with the various creeds and their advocates in the religious world have only served to crystallize the original teachings of the church organized by command of God in 1830 into positions "strong as Holy Writ," and to amply fortify the present advocates of those positions behind philosophical ramparts secure as the "word of God."

THE Herald of Traverse City, Michigan, the 21st ult., has the following notice:—

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will begin meetings in the West Side chapel next Monday night. This organization has been promulgating its doctrines through Michigan for several years, but meetings have never been held in this city before.

The work widens, the field of the missionary extends, steadily, surely, substantially, notwithstanding the op-positions that have harassed from the beginning. Traverse City is another "new opening." Bro. F. C. Smith is laboring there, we believe.

BACK VOLUMES OF AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE Herald Office has on hand a number of back volumes of Autumn Leaves for the years 1891, '92, '93, and '94, which are offered bound complete in various styles of binding, in prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per volume, according to binding.

The volumes may be had either bound or unbound. Those wanting them bound for the holidays must order at once, to insure completion in time.

Volumes of 1891, '92, and '93, unbound, are offered at 50 cents. All volumes offered at these prices will be sent postpaid. Address orders to the Business Manager. 4t.

WISDOM OF THE SECULAR PRESS.

RELIGIONISTS as a rule give the secular press but little credit for wisdom, but that there is considerable of it existing here and there may clearly be seen in the following bits picked up in a Kansas City Star for November 14, sent us by a brother:—

THE PERPETUITY OF FAITH.

A strange and significant spectacle is the throng of invalids assembled at Denver to touch the hand of the so-called Messianic healer, Francis Schlatter. They come from far and near, from the East and from the West, the old and the young, the rich and the poor. For days past the Union Station at Denver has been little less than a hospital. As many as a thousand people sometimes arrive on the trains in a single day and wait patiently until they reach the wonderful physician who restores by the power of faith.

These candidates for healing are not in the mass ignorant and benighted people. A week or two ago an influential magnate of a rich railroad corporation journeyed all the way from New York to Denver to submit himself to the ministrations of the healer. He had spent thousands of dollars with the most famous medical experts in the country without benefit. But after a brief treatment from Father Schlatter, he announced himself completely restored to health, and the railroad which he represents has offered free transportation to all of its employees who may desire to visit the healer. It is among this class of people that Schlatter finds a large proportion of his patients.

The agnostics and skeptics ridicule as superstition the belief in the miracles ascribed to Christ and his apostles. They pretend to say that the records of the New Testament touching the healing of the blind, the halt, and the lame, are the inventions of the early scriptural writers whose imaginations were greatly excited. They have claimed that such "impositions" could not be practiced in these days of light and knowledge. But here is the very same manifestation of faith at the close of the nineteenth century, in a leading city in the most enlightened country on the globe. Schlatter works by precisely the same methods employed by Christ and his disciples. He gives himself, as they did, to fasting and prayer. He refuses anything in the way of reward for his services. He claims to be directed in all that he does by "the Father," and he relies wholly on him for his power.

It is profoundly significant that hundreds of people of intelligence and with the faculty of reason believe as fully in Schlatter's power to heal by the touch of his hand and by the exercise of faith as did the afflicted who followed Christ eighteen hundred years ago and besought his help.

There has been no decline in the belief of man in the unseen and in the operation of those spiritual forces which cannot be analyzed, but which humanity recognizes all the same as a ruling and dominant influence in the world about it.

The foregoing is an editorial, and shows that whether the general clergy will accept the healings said to have been effected at Mr. Schlatter's hands or not, the fact that faith may now have its work in behalf of humanity as it did when Jesus, the Great Healer, walked, and taught, and healed the sick among the fallen sons of men, will remain, and under certain conditions will result now as then to the good of those in whom it is manifest.

Read Bro. W. W. Blair's article on this movement of Mr. Schlatter's and give credit where it is due.

It is a pity that the apparent good that some received from this man's ministrations should be marred by his erratic actions in avoiding answering to the call of his fellow men to appear in court and testify, as a witness, when desired, in a suit in which he could receive no harm if he is the honest man he professes to be.

From the same editorial pen we have the following, which we think decidedly good:—

In a meeting of the Methodist Tract Society at Cincinnati the other day a brother suggested that the society publish an "answer" to Robert G. Ingersoll, whereupon another brother whose name should be preserved—it was Hurlbut—suggested with emphasis that the society do nothing of the sort; that there was no "answer" to a mere sneer or jest, and that the ministers might well discontinue the practice of advertising Colonel Ingersoll, which helped "Pagan Bob" and did not in the least benefit the cause of religion. This protesting brother was eminently right. From the proper and consistent standpoint of the Christian advocate he has no "answer" to deliver. The duty imposed upon him by his conscience, by his belief in his own "call," is to deliver a message to all men, including Colonel Ingersoll himself, and not to indulge in any "replies" about it. Having spoken the word to all men, "whether they will hear or whether they will forbear," he has performed his duty and his only duty. He is not a lawyer arguing one side of a question; he is a minister, who, according to his belief, is stating a condition to which there is but one side. As nothing that Colonel Ingersoll can say can in the Christian minister's opinion change or shake the everlasting truth, there is no need or use of "reply."

COLONEL INGERSOLL, the noted agnostic, delivered a lecture at Cleveland, Ohio, on "foundations of the faith." The effort so stirred some religious circles that the large body of local Christian Endeavorers, reinforced by many of their Canadian brethren, also by the Salvation Army, decided to set apart Thanksgiving Day as a day of prayer for the conversion of Mr. Ingersoll to Christianity. Some ministers approve the effort, some disapprove. We doubt the success of it, though we believe in prayer. If Colonel Ingersoll remains unconverted he will have another weapon in his hands to ridicule those who have made announced, public effort to reconstruct him. "Pope Bob" has not been justified in his unreasonable attacks upon Christianity, though part of his arraignment of sectarian churchianity has not been without ground. We doubt if he can be converted to modern orthodoxy. Nor do we know that he would be willing to accept "the truth" of Christianity. We believe his conversion is not impossible, but improbable.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOHN KALER writes encouragingly of the condition and outlook in Sydney, New South Wales. In a letter dated October 26, he says:—

The latter-day work is coming to the front in New South Wales. Forty have been baptized in Sydney this year and others are now investigating our faith. Bro. Wells and I have been much blessed in declaring the word. Best wishes to all.

Sr. A. B. Cochrane, Stockville, Nebraska, recent date:—

We read the Herald and loan it to all of our neighbors who will read it, and by so doing have awakened quite an interest here, and the people seem anxious to hear the word. There is an opening and a home for the elders. We have use of the schoolhouse. We live three miles and a half southwest of Stockville. He would be glad to see some of the ministry and would meet any at Stockville, if notified.

F. M. Slover, Rural Hill, Illinois, November 25:—

I have been here for some time contending with W. J. Moore, of the Baptist Church. The controversy lasted about eight nights. He came to my meeting and made an attack on our faith. He had boasted that he intended to overthrow our work in this country. However he has failed so far. I am feeling well in the good work.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. W. H. KELLEY, New Albany, Indiana, sends us an account of a case of healing under the hands of the elders that has attracted considerable attention and received notice in the Louisville Times. A fuller account will appear next week if space permits.

Bro. H. O. Smith was to begin meetings in a private house, at Nephi, Utah, on the evening of November 25, there being no public place in the city open to him. We spoke once in Nephi, in 1885, we think, in an old store room, roughly seated by Bro. Uriah Coleman, George Hickman, and others. We will not soon forget the audience we faced that night, nor the kindness shown us by the very few of the faith there, and a Mr. Bryant, a noble-minded, one-wife member of the Utah Church. We hope Bro. Hyrum O. may not feel the darkness as visibly as we did at the opening of that meeting ten years ago. It is a gratifying thought that one of the families that stood by us that night is "still in the faith." May the Lord ever bless them.

Bro. H. S. Tibbells will kindly welcome an elder at his home, Elliott, Iowa, where he is running an upholstering and repair shop; and will not be "hard to find," as he writes. Bro. Tibbells has but lately located there, and will be pleased to have an elder come and make an opening there. Elliott is twelve miles north of Red Oak, Montgomery County. Will Bro. Henry Kemp take note of this.

By letter from Bro. Heman C. Smith we learn that he was to meet Elder Fritch, an Adventist, in discussion, at Perkins, Oklahoma, beginning Monday, December 2. We hope to have an outline of the discussion to report.

The Herald Office invites attention to its Holiday Book List. Now is the time to remember relative or friend with some of the church works. No one should be without them.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?"

"If that field was mine," the farmer said,

"I'd cut those thistles down.

Hey, Dobbin?" and he went his way,

On toward the market town.

"Next year he found in corn and grain

The thistles growing tall,

Sprung from the seed the wind had blown Across his neighbor's wall."

HOW IS IT?

DEAR SR. WALKER:—It is a long time since I wrote you anything for publication; it is not because of lack of interest, but a change in my occupation has robbed me of any leisure time I may have had before, and also almost taken me from the society of the Saints. My interest in the Saints and their welfare has not abated, and it is with pleasure that every advancement is observed, and especially among the young, and my own children growing up aids to intensify it. And because of these things am I urged to write at present, hoping that in some way you may give some additional light.

To remind you of the fact that the best men and women of the past and present have taught that in the home is laid the foundation of society, whether it be good or bad, will bring the subject vividly before your mind, and the good and bad emanating therefrom will pass rapidly before you. And as a natural consequence anything that would break the influence of home would portend evil.

At the age of about six years our children leave home for the public school and except in certain communities, like your own, they are immediately in an impure atmosphere, because at present very little except what is in the textbooks is taught. And following this is the Lord's day, and among most branches of the church there are four meetings: as a result the parents and children are away from home the greater part of the day.

But it does not stop here. During the week one night for "prayer meeting," one for "Z. R.-L. S.," and another for "choir practice." Then there is the "Prayer Union," the "Daughters of Zion," and some others, the names I cannot recall. Add to this the time taken to prepare for Christmas and other entertainments, also conferences and reunions.

The above being true how can the good old home and its influence be preserved? I might give other causes that separate the members of home, but the above is sufficient for the present. Please give us some light.

PAUL PARKER.

THE query suggested by the writer of the above is one which has presented itself to many, and at a casual glance seems to be of a grave nature; but upon a closer inspection it is possible that light may be thrown upon the subject in such a way as to reveal strong points which have escaped the writer's attention.

In regard to the several meetings held upon the Sabbath day, we have nothing to say, since such appointments are by almost universal consent of the church membership. That the influence of home either for good or evil is powerful, lasting, and almost impossible to overcome, we are fully convinced, and whatever tends to break up, destroy, or lessen the influence of a good home, tends also to weaken and destroy the best influences of society. But we must take into account that man is a social being, and there are duties leading out of home. It is this very fact which makes the influence emanating from home a power for good or evil. The time comes when the children press into the highways and byways with eager, restless feet; when their nature demands and they seek recreation and amusement in social ways. The instincts of nature are right if wisely governed and directed, hence is it not good and right that mothers should take counsel together (as the Daughters of Zion do) as to the very best means of training their children and strengthening the influence of home? This meeting comes but once a month, lasts from one to two hours, and is purposely held at an hour when the children are in school. It must not be forgotten or overlooked that the strongest and most lasting influence is wrought upon the child before he is twelve years of age, and up to this time with the exception of day and Sabbath school, no demands are made upon his time which are not entirely subject to the parent's discretion. It is at an age more advanced than this that the Religio comes in with its claims. An age when the social nature begins to assert its claims and the sexes desire to associate socially. Is it not well and wise that at this critical period the church should furnish that which is elevating and instructive in its nature?

If the mother is wise will she not be likely to know if she has time to meet with other mothers or sisters once a week to spend an hour in prayer? The wise mother will never allow anything to come between her and her home duties. A mother said to us just the other day, "I make it a rule to always be at home when my boys come from school." This is the mother's opportunity, and if necessary, all other claims should be held as straws in the balance. We are fully persuaded that it is possible to so strengthen the home influence which has for six years molded the child, as to counteract the contaminating influence of school association which we assure Bro. Parker the schools of Lamoni are by no means free from. But to do this the intelligent cooperation of both father and mother becomes necessary and every home influence needs to be strengthened, and wrought into the character of the child in such a way that he will carry this influence with him and not only be strong to resist evil himself, but help others to resist it also.

Dear Sisters:—I have just come home from the schoolhouse where we were to have Sunday school, but on account of bad weather no one came. The lesson for to-day was the fifth chapter of Isaiah, and it makes my heart ache to think of the children within two miles of my home who know nothing about the Savior's words concerning intoxicating drinks. In their homes (in a small mining camp) they are taught that nothing is better for them than beer, and it, as well as whisky, wine, and other strong drinks, is given to the children as soon as they are old enough to drink it; and it does not take them long to imitate the swearing and smoking which is carried on around them. Some of these children are my scholars, and I have their good will, yet what can I do? Their parents, of course, have the greater influence over them, and when I tell them of the evils of drink the little tots will tell me how their fathers do when they get drunk. They would all like to attend Sunday school, but comparatively few are allowed to do so. One little girl, when I gave her a piece to speak at school, brought it back and said her mother would not let her learn it because it was in a Protestant Sunday school paper.

I sometimes become so discouraged, and think if I could only live among the Saints and attend our own Sunday school, church, and prayer meetings, I could feel so much like working. I know there are many others isolated from the Saints who feel just as I do, but the Master knew best when he gave us each our work, and we should be willing to "Sow beside all waters," and not wait for what seems to us to be golden opportunities. Let each of us remember that "You have a work no other can do," and "He who does the best his circumstance allows, does well, acts nobly; angels could do no more."

We must have energy to do our best, regardless of circumstances, and only in this way can the hundreds of bright-eyed children whose homes teem with evil influences be brought to see the beauty of living pure lives. Pray for me, sisters, that I may have strength to do my duty, and by teaching and example help these little ones to come up higher. Your sister in Christ,

PEARL.

English clergymen's salaries are not as high as is commonly believed. In Crockford's clerical directory for this year statements of the actual value of 8,636 benefices out of 13,243 in England are given. Of these 638 are worth $500 a year or less, 2,748 more $1,000 or less, 4,219 less than $2,000, 792 less than $3,000, 173 less than $4,000, 43 only $5,000 or less, and 23 more than $5,000, six being above $7,500, and but one of these above $10,000. The nominal value in the case of the other 4,807 benefices is, for nearly 3,000 less than $1,500, and for 1,000 more, less than $2,500. In addition to his income, however, the incumbent has the use of a house, and in the country, at least, of a garden.

The Church of Our Savior at Moscow was completed only a few years ago and surpassed in beauty any church of modern times. It was built to commemorate the deliverance of Moscow from the French, and it cost about $4,000,000.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

Let hearts with gratitude be full Unto the God of love,
For mercy, peace, and truth sent down
From the blest realms above.

Thanksgiving brings its words of cheer,
Unmingled with complaints;
Angels before thy servants go
Who preach the truth dear to thy Saints.

WHAT was the nature of your Thanksgiving Sunday exercises? We trust that you made use of such program as to make the day's exercises both profitable and pleasing to your schools. We have never yet been able to see why those who labor for good should not pursue their work with as much energy as those who labor for evil.

Inasmuch as we feel an interest in the work and desire to see it move forward from week to week, it becomes us to improve every opportunity of making the Sunday school an inviting place.

Though in many branches the membership is small, the place of worship not the most desirable, there are many ways in which we may beautify that which seems lacking in beauty. Perhaps through scenes of great sacrifice have these humble places of worship been builded, and you feel that it is right that the young should be taught to share in the sacrifice. This is right, and if the young are in the spirit of the work they will joy in such sacrifice; but the little improvements that really cost nothing but a little effort should not be neglected. A fresh, clean room with just a few changes in trifles will add greatly to the enjoyment of any gathering. House decoration is pleasing not only to the small but to "children of a larger growth." Such decoration should be varied to suit the day. A Thanksgiving decoration would not be suitable for Children's Day. The willing hands of the children prove their interest in the work of beautifying. We must never grow so old that we will look upon things as sinful or even useless simply because they are beautiful. The earth has counted off six thousand annual circuits, yet it receives a no less beautiful garb from the bountiful Giver than it did in its more youthful days. Gaudy tinsel or empty show are things of vanity and should be looked upon with suspicion; but the beauties of nature and art that refine and draw us nearer to the Author of beauty are not to be ignored. Who but the infidel can look upon the Falls of Niagara without exclaiming, What God hath done! And who can view, for the first time, an electrical fountain without exclaiming, What man hath done with the elements God gives him!

Do not the beautiful tints of the autumn leaf give you sweeter thoughts of life?

How prettily will these tints blend in mottoes or other wall decoration made of leaves! How rich the chains of red and yellow corn look in a Thanksgiving decoration! Did you try anything of this kind, or did you have something better? What did you do to make the day impressive? Did you in any way lead your class to a practical idea that "it is more blessed to give than to receive"? Which of the Psalms found place in your exercises? Are you satisfied with the day's lesson? Was it not better than to have let the day go by unnoticed, thereby leaving the impression upon the child mind that Thanksgiving is but a day of big dinners? A feast for heart and mind is a feast indeed. In the work of character building the possibilities of an hour means much.

"For the structure that we raise
Time is with material filled.
Our to-days and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build."

WHO has suggestions for Christmas entertainment?

THOSE who would teach "as one having authority" should live near to the Author of that plan of teaching.

PRINCIPAL THINGS.

AS IN preaching, so in teaching, most stress should be laid upon the "principal things." It is very pleasing, sometimes, to be told about the beauties of heaven and the glories of the redeemed, but the principal thing is to know how we may enter and enjoy these glories. It is right for us to study the maps and the histories of the towns and countries where the ancients journeyed, but the principal thing is to get out of these lessons something practical to help us in our own journeyings.

The Apostle Paul says, "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."—1 Cor. 10: 11. We need therefore to accept "these things" as ensamples; to note carefully the mistakes made and the results which followed, and thus be admonished; also the blessings, how they were obtained.

To know how to live, is the "principal thing;" for if we are prepared to live we are prepared to die; but he who is not prepared to live is not prepared to die. Teachers, try to study the lesson with the thought in mind of teaching your scholars some practical lesson that they can apply in every-day life. Constantly keep the fact before their minds that sin never pays and that righteousness—obedience to God's law—alone brings happiness.

THE CHILDREN'S CHAUTAUQUA DRILL.

Right hand raised—Lift your hands in the sanctuary and bless the Lord.

Clap hands once—Oh! clap your hands, all ye people.

Fold arms—Thy word have I hid in my heart.

Stand up—Stand up and bless the Lord your God.

Join tips of fingers over head—His banner over me is love.

Put hands by the sides—Happy is the man that findeth wisdom.

Right hand stretched out—Length of days is in her right hand.

Left hand stretched out—And in her left, riches and honor.

Clap hands three times—Her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace.

Sit down—Him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne.

GOD'S GIFTS TO CHILDREN.

Teacher—What has God given to little children?

Class—

Two little hands [1] for loving labor given;
Two little feet [2] to walk the road to heaven;
Two little eyes [3] to read God's holy word;
Two little lips [4] to praise the blessed Lord;
One little soul [5] to serve with all its might;
[6] So should we live, always in Jesus' sight.

1. Extend the hands forward with palms upward. 2. Bend forward and point toward the feet. 3. Place the forefinger of each hand under the eyes. 4. Put the same fingers upon the under lip. 5. Fold hands across the breast. 6. Point upward with both hands.—Sel.

Letter Department.

RIDGE PRAIRIE, Ill., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—I came out here to fill appointments last Saturday. Was to speak in the evening, but the enemy hindered. However, on Sunday we were invited to open and close Sunday school, also to address the school, by the M. E. superintendent. Stayed to preaching service. In the afternoon I spoke in the schoolhouse to a goodly number. Most of the people were not advised that there would be preaching in the afternoon. There were probably three times as many out, however, as at the M. E. service, including the minister, who by invitation assisted us. I had unusual liberty and strong spiritual indorsement of our work and calling. The evening found a larger turnout, as we have a good many friends at this place. Visited a lady this morning who proposes to unite with us as soon as her recovery from a severe sickness permits. Am to speak here to-night again.

Matters are progressing in St. Louis favorably. Had the pleasure of initiating two more precious souls into the Church of God last Sunday afternoon: one the result of a long and prayerful service toward God in her behalf—my daughter Bessie. The surety of our ground of rejoicing came in the Spirit's presence and power both at baptism and confirmation, and we believe that it was a proper birth in both cases. Born of God! Gladly, joyously, we hand them, through the second birth, over to God and the Holy Spirit's keeping, power, and guardianship.

These seem to be good days for me spiritually, and I have never felt uniformly better in the work than at present. Watchfulness unto prayer always, divine assistance thereby, in order to the attainment of self-denial, and a life guided by that eye that is "single to the glory of God," makes the supreme test in regard to the olden promise, "Thy whole body shall be full of light." I have never rejoiced with greater degree in regard to the surety of the work than since I came to St. Louis.

I was just illuminated in regard to the divine calling of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon as an inspired record last night. It is utterly impossible for tongue to describe this joy that comes to the soul through this knowledge of God—to know that through grace divine we are privileged to know so many and important things of which this great world with all its wisdom is ignorant.

On December 3 we are billed for Seaburger near St. Charles in company with Bro. Ivor Davis. A Presbyterian minister has made attacks of a personal nature upon the brethren and work, which will result very likely in a discussion. If he refuses honorable propositions of a mutual examination of our respective claims, we will remain a week and discuss some matters anyhow.

To-day I visited the interior of "a coal mine, underneath the ground," a mile and a half away, where many men spend the most of their lives, making riches for a few to hoard or to squander in luxury or idleness. But coal combines are not as dangerous to labor or the common people as are bad habits; no power so great, and yet so within the ability to dethrone. No tyrant that oppresses the home of the poor so remorseless or senseless as that sovereign King Alcohol. To become masters of ourselves, is largely—even in these perilous times—to obtain victory over our greatest oppressor. The divinest, best, and most practical Lawgiver that ever trod this earth said that, "Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin," that universal tyrant from whose oppressive power and debasement even the possession of wealth or earthly riches cannot free us.

Editors Herald:—I have written once to your columns since arriving at this place, and will now inform your readers of some of the trials and delights of the life of a missionary on this island. I believe much good will be done here in the future, but at present the outlook is gloomy indeed. Our meetings, at first, well attended, were gradually shunned by the people, as their missionary warned them against us. At present we find it of no use to make appointments, as no one attends. We have no Saints to supply our wants, and are obliged to pay six dollars per month for a house to live in; consequently, we cannot remain here long, though I believe that if a missionary were sustained here much good would eventually be done. It will take time and patience, but I think the way is open.

Three ministers of the London Missionary Society have written a pamphlet in the Maori tongue, against "Mormonism," using the old, threadbare, Braden yarns. This is being widely circulated, and its effect on this simple-minded people can readily be imagined. I am not sufficiently familiar with their language to reply in it, but a gentleman residing on the island, who loves to see fair play, told me to write my reply in English and he would translate it into Maori, free of charge. This I did to the best of my ability, and now my pamphlet is ready for the printer; but a still greater difficulty remains, the lack of money to pay the printer. There is a press on the island and my work would soon be done had I but the few necessary dollars. The people read eagerly anything printed in their language, so I am confident this would do great good. We wait in hope, which is all we can do.

By last month's mail we heard that the trouble at Papeete was settled for the time being and the missionaries again at work. Doubtless Bro. Devore has written full particulars.

Our health has improved since coming to this island, as the climate is somewhat cooler. Quite a business is carried on between this group and New Zealand. Orange shipping is about through with now, but coffee, cotton, and copra take the place of them.

We desire to return to the other islands in season for the April Conference, if the way opens for us to do so. We greatly need the prayers of the Saints that we may be able to endure the trials that continually surround our way. Your brother in bonds,

HUBERT CASE.

MAYSVILLE, Ark., Nov. 20.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a debate with a Baptist minister, at Echo, Indian Territory. We had a good hearing—crowded house. The Saints are in fine spirits. Some friends were made to our cause, while others seemed to imagine vain things. This is the place where they gave us eggs in September.

The people are being worked up at several places.

I acted as moderator in the Miami debate between Bro. I. N. White and James Evans, Baptist. There is some interest at both Echo and Miami. Bro. White is a pleasant companion and an able defender of the faith. I was much encouraged and edified while with him. The preachers and people are becoming restless. We will have a debate begin here, at Maysville, soon, between Bro. Sheppard and a Universalist minister. He is an able young man and seems to be fair. All are rejoicing in these parts, in gospel truth—I mean all Saints are. The work is onward. Cheer up, brethren, the struggle will soon be over and the victory won.

In haste,

S. W. SIMMONS.

SUTTON'S BAY, Mich., Nov. 22.

Editors Herald:—I have been very busy of late and have not written much for the Herald. Have been having quite a time here. About one year ago Bro. H. D. McIntyre came here and preached a few sermons, and this fall he came and preached a few more and baptized three. I came and confirmed them, and the house was full of different religionists, Lutherans, Catholics, and some Methodists; and it seems that the Lutherans had got terribly worked up and that notice had been given that Revs. J. J. Maakestad and R. Rue would give a lecture on Mormonism, and so last night they appeared on the stand with a long written sermon on Mormonism. The two occupied about two or three hours, reading their sermon and Mrs. Ellen E. Dickinson's "New light on Mormonism;" so I did not have very much time to speak; but I said a lot in a short time, and there is no harm done. The Saints and others are strengthened in the faith of the Saints.

I baptized two last Sunday and there are others nearly ready. I am thankful we have

A faith that shines more bright and clear

When tempests rage without;

and no man on earth can take the Bible and prove that what we teach is not true.

I have tried to do some preaching in Traverse City, but I do not know what the outcome will be. I have spoken twice in West Side chapel, and it is advertised in the papers for next Monday evening again. May the Lord bless his people and help them to live in harmony with his law.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, Nov. 26.

Editors Herald:—This finds the work in this locality on living grounds. I met with the Saints in Little Sioux on last Sunday morning, at which time we had a glorious good prayer and testimony meeting, in the which all the Saints present seemed greatly to rejoice. The meetings at Sloan were reasonably well attended; the farmers being busy in corn husking prevented their attendance.

The branch at Sioux City is discontinued so far as meeting together goes, some of the Saints in time past being compelled to move away on account of failure to get employment.

I preached a few times to a few persons in a schoolhouse south of Morning Side, a suburb of Sioux City. The Jones schoolhouse will receive attention again on Sunday evening next.

You will please say, that I meant to say that we had the "sway" and not the "swag" in the Jones neighborhood, when I wrote you last. I am willing to acknowledge my lack, in being a good, and plain writer; and stand ready to be forgiven for that, and all past mistakes, of a similar nature.

In hope,

J. C. CRABB.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 20.

Editors Herald:—For some time past two Utah elders, who are connected with the Utah branch here, have been making a house-to-house canvass, trying to make converts to their doctrine, and distributing cards containing an epitome of faith and doctrine almost identical with ours, and at the end of it in full-face type is the name of Joseph Smith; but the heresies they practice and believe in are not mentioned on the card. This is not all; they have been giving out the information that there is very little difference in the faith and belief of their people and the people of our church, and claiming that the church they represent is the only one that has the authority to baptize for the dead. They tell a nice little story about how the dead are likely waiting and longing for some of their living relatives to be baptized for them, and these men try to gain converts by working on the emotions and sympathies of those whose relatives have passed away.

These misrepresentations our people did not like and began to take steps to warn the public of the deception; and as Pres. W. W. Blair happened along soon after, a hall was engaged in the same building in which the Utah people have their meetings, and the following advertisement appeared in the daily papers:—

"MORMON HERESIES:—President W. W. Blair, of Lamoni, Iowa, will discuss the heresies of the Mormons to-night at 7:45 in lower hall of Pythian Castle, corner Ninth and I Streets, in the light of authentic recorded facts. Hear and then judge."

Unfortunately the Utah elders were out of town. A few persons not connected with either church enjoyed this powerful sermon with our people, and we regret that there were not more persons present. After Bro. Blair's departure the Saints concluded to continue to do all they could to counteract the misrepresentation practiced by the Utah elders, and the advertisement following appeared:—

"MISREPRESENTATION REFUTED:—Truth upheld. Utah Mormonism Unmasked. As many people of Sacramento do not know but what the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Utah Mormons) and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa), are one and the same, although the difference is as great as between the dark, cheerless, cloudy, moonless night and the clear, joyous, cheerful, sunny day, the public are cordially invited, ministers in particular, to hear this matter discussed to-morrow at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., corner Twenty-fourth and K Streets. Polygamy, spiritual wifery, Adam-God, blood atonement, and other things taught by the Utah people are heresies, and have never been nor ever will be taught or sanctioned by the true Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Seats free; no collection; everybody welcome."

The above, with the very active efforts of Bro. James Parr, stirred the Utah people up somewhat, and as Bro. Parr told them he was determined—as also were the Saints—that this misrepresentation must cease, and that he would defend and uphold the truth, he challenged them to public debate. After considerable effort had been expended by Bro. Parr and there did not appear much prospect for a discussion, the following appeared in the daily papers:—

"MUST STAND THE TEST.—Utah Mormonism and their abominable heresies uncovered; Brigham Young an imposter; The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa), cordially invite the public, and ministers in particular, to attend service at their chapel to-night, 7:30 o'clock, corner Twenty-fourth and K streets, and hear this matter discussed. Everybody welcome; seats free; no collection."

This advertisement with the others, and the efforts of Bro. Parr, and the fact that some of their own people were demanding that something should be done, the Utah elders agreed to occupy our chapel, which was unanimously granted them by our branch, and spoke upon the subject which appears in their advertisement, which follows:—

"MORMONS AND MORMONISM.—Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will speak this evening upon the subject, "Authority and the Laws of Succession." Meeting held at 7:30 p. m. at the hall of the Reorganized Church, corner Twenty-fourth and K. All are invited."

It was impossible to get them to discuss other matters, so Elder Thomas Daley, who had just arrived, filled in the spare time exposing the secrets and abominations of the Utah Church with telling effect, while Bro. Parr handled the Utah elders on "authority and the laws of succession," in a way and manner that was surprising to them and pleasing and convincing to the honest-hearted of their own congregation as well as to our people and others who came to hear. The Utah elders occupied three nights on the one subject, and Bro. Parr used but two on account of an inclination of the Utah elders to leave us in the lurch by not coming any more after they had occupied their three nights.

I wish the readers of the Herald could have heard Bro. Parr answer all their argument, use their own witnesses against them, and cause most of the authorities used by them to act as boomerangs. It was a grand victory for the truth and has done much good. One member of the Utah branch is now investigating our claims, also a person is doing likewise who was about ready to join them, and there is still another who we think is investigating and searching for the truth. These three persons are honest-hearted, we are convinced, and will see the light in God's due time.

It might seem to some that the wording of two of the advertisements above were a little harsh, but if the readers of this letter knew all the circumstances relating to this matter they would think the words not strong enough. Much prejudice has been removed from the minds of some people who have read the advertisements and heard the discussion, and they can no longer say that we and the Utah people are the same. Thanking our heavenly Father for standing by his ambassadors during the discussion while defending his cause, and praying that we may all, laity as well as elders, prepare ourselves, with his help, to defend this most glorious truth against all and every opposition, and thus with a godly walk and conversation be in a condition to receive blessings from on high, I bring this letter to a close. Your brother,

FRED A. SEVERY.

APPLEGATE, Mich., Nov. 22.

Editors Herald:—For the last four weeks it has been my lot to be on the wing continually, being sent for every few days until I have traveled over nearly the entire district. An old saying is, "A rolling stone gathers no moss," but some one must look after matters; so I shall find no fault.

While in Detroit I was sent for to come immediately to Moore's Corners, where Bro. Davis was in debate with a Baptist minister.

Accordingly I went, but before reaching the place (as it was off the line of railroad) I was told the debate was broken up, as some of the baser sort had raised a row for that purpose and succeeded in getting the hall closed so the debate could not be finished. Those that were there say Bro. Davis had far the best argument and was warping it right to Mr. Baptist.

From there I turned my attention to Port Huron, and with the assistance of some of the Saints there succeeded in getting a hall, and began meetings, only to continue a day or two, when a telephone message was received to come to Bay City; so leaving the meetings in charge of Bro. Davis I went, and on my arrival found a Baptist lady from Almont awaiting baptism; and as Bro. Kier had returned from Illinois, feeling all alive, we concluded to start a series of meetings and accordingly did so, and last Sunday had the pleasure of baptizing four more into the kingdom of God, while Bro. Davis was successful in leading three to put on Christ at Port Huron at about the same time.

The next mail brought letters from F. M. Cooper and the district president, telling me to come immediately to Applegate, as Bro. Cooper was about to cross theological swords with a Baptist preacher, Elethorp by name. Again I hurried my traps and books together and in a few hours bade Saints and friends adieu, and stepping on Nahum's chariot sped away to the battlefield to care for the dead and wounded, if any there should be. On my arrival I found I was none too soon, as the contest had already begun. The subject under discussion was, "Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ is in harmony with the Bible, in faith, practice, and organization;" Cooper affirming.

Mr. Elethorp was in a great hurry to shoot his big shells, which he had borrowed from Musser, the Beaverton apostate, which were as follows: "Joe Smith's covenant sealed with his blood;" "Jared's boats with a hole in the top and in the bottom;" "Give all your property as tithing to pay Mormon preachers;" "Missouri the Mormon heaven;" etc. He could not wait for Bro. Cooper to set up his church, but himself set up a man of straw, fired his big guns first and then sat down to see what the result would be.

Bro. Cooper took in the situation at once and told the audience he had expected to argue on the affirmative, but seeing his opponent wanted that position, he would follow him like the weasel does the rabbit, in his hole, and out of his hole, under the barn, and through the fence, and until he had driven him entirely off the premises. Well, he was as good as his word, for Mr. Elethorp did not introduce a single argument against the three books that was not dugged out by the roots when his opponent got through with it.

The debate lasted four days with eight half-hour sessions each day. Mr. Elethorp is a gentleman in a debate and said Elder Cooper was the smartest man he ever met in discussion; said he had enjoyed himself, and at the close said he would not say Joseph Smith was a bad man, or a mean man, and that if the people wanted to believe that doctrine they could do so; he would not hinder them. Propositions were then arranged for the Baptist Church and faith to go under the same critical examination, commencing the 17th of December.

Some more to be baptized at Port Huron in the near future.

In gospel bonds,

R. E. GRANT.

BANDERA, Texas, Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—I feel lonely to-day, and in order to drive some of the dull cares away I thought to write you, thinking that perhaps the Comforter would come to my relief. I have had quite a good many ups and downs with the work during my short experience. I sometimes feel like I was a kind of a cast-away, or a second fruits, or that I have been chosen and set apart to labor in this out-of-the-way and seemingly God-forsaken country for a punishment for my former disobedience; yet as I go from place to place and in almost every place find a few striving for the faith once delivered to the Saints, and meet their warm greetings, and a welcome to their humble shelters, my soul is stirred within me, and I exclaim half aloud, Is this not like it was in the time of Christ and his humble followers? and for a moment I feel like remaining and enjoying the hospitality of those good people and go no more out. Then something whispers, "Go ye into all the world;" so I take fresh courage and conclude that there is no rest for this old body; and that if I would have a claim as firstfruits, I must work on.

Only a few days ago we were holding a prayer meeting in San Antonio. The attendance was small, and in the left-hand corner in front of my position sat a stranger. I had of late felt the clouds of despondency and the need of help in these parts, and had thought frequently upon the appointment of Bro. H. P. Curtis to commence in this city on the first of November and had prayed earnestly for his arrival,—but little thought that the stranger was he, until he arose and bore his testimony to the work, and when I took Bro. Curtis by the hand the Spirit bore testimony to me that he was the man for the place.

We labored and counseled together for two weeks, and rented a house in the more central part of the city. I remodeled the rooms a little to arrange the better for meeting purposes; Miss Cora McRae furnished paint for the seats, Bro. Curtis did the painting, and the brethren and sisters and friends responded liberally with means to pay rent. I left them a few days ago in a flourishing condition with a fervent prayer to God that the work might prosper in San Antonio as it had never done before, and that Bro. Curtis might prove to be a humble minister in the hands of God in doing much good in that great city, now full of the iniquity and filth and abomination of the mother of harlots.

We held meeting yesterday four miles from this place, at Dug Springs. An excellent feeling prevailed all day. I will go from here this evening to Medina City, and commence meetings the middle of the week and hold over Sunday; from there to Crockett, then south. Let dark clouds come, let the work fluctuate, and all the missiles, thorns, briars, and discouragements be thrown in the way; yet as a follower of Christ my desire and hope is that I may be able to follow him through the dark valley of death and be numbered among those that have part in the first resurrection.

In the bonds of love toward the household of God,

Yours,

L. L. WIGHT.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 21.

Editors Herald:—When I read the Herald and see how the wonderful work rolls on I feel to praise the name of the Most High God for that glorious work, which he has restored; and indeed he loves his children who give ear to his counsel and obey his commandments.

A year ago, in the month of September I heard the first sermon preached. I knew then that I would become a member of the Church of Jesus Christ. The second Sunday evening when I sat in the prayer and testimony meeting the Holy Spirit rested upon me, and in the latter part of the meeting I arose and bore my testimony; and four days afterwards I was baptized by Bro. Earl; and from that time the Lord has blessed me; and from time to time, through visions, taught me of the wonderful work. And I do know of a surety that the work is of God.

I rejoice; my soul delights in the glorious work, and I will praise the name of the Lord forever and ever.

I am young in years and many times surrounded by the powers of darkness, therefore I ask an interest in the prayers of the brethren and sisters, that I keep faithful unto the end.

Your brother in Christ,

PETER KAUFMAN.

HAMILTON, N. S. W., Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—We are alive to the interests of the work. Reading so many grand letters in the dear Herald, how the Lord is giving his people favor in the eyes of the people, it causes us to rejoice. To see and read the editorial from the pen of Bro. Joseph, "Wiser in their generation," I truly wished that I could have responded to the call, if the word "call" is not out of place, to rally up to the standard of the Lord with help to build the much-needed college to train the young in proper literature. I felt somewhat downcast because I was not in a position to help in that way, as I am very poor in this world's wealth, not having one cent in my possession, and cannot tell where the next is to come from; but the dear Lord has promised me that if faithful and true to myself, I shall not want, and his word and his promises are true.

But, though poor, I am rich in faith, and want to be in good works, and am trying to make now and again one or two rich, having the names of four precious souls to be buried with Christ in baptism next Sabbath, if all goes well. I had the pleasure of leading one into the water three weeks ago—a noble young man of twenty-two years of age, a brother of Bro. William Clark's wife, who was baptized a few months ago, one of the

A WORD TO SAINTS.

AS I MAKE my last remittance for books received, I thought I should like to say a few words in the Herald on the subject of tithing or giving of temporal things in aid of the gospel. The history of the Jewish Church, from its formation until the dispersion, affords abundant proof of the fact that as long as they continued to give of their substance to keep up the work of the house of the Lord they prospered, and God granted them great blessings.

The Levites who attended on the service of the temple were in their places; the singers and musicians were ready to discourse sweet songs of praise; the priests attended on the altar service, and God was well pleased and his Spirit rested upon them.

But mark the change that takes place when they begin to withhold the tithes. The Levites go out to hire to the shepherds and farmers; the lesser priests of the temple service finally take their departure, and the high priest is left alone to look after the altar service. No wonder God says by his prophet, "Ye have robbed me!" as he sees the forsaken temple. No wonder his wrath is kindled against them.

The same cause will produce the same effect to-day, and produce similar results. As long as the people of God give willingly as he prospers them, his work will move on and the church gain in favor with God and men. But many persons seem to think that what they owe to God and his cause can await their pleasure, and all other debts be paid first. The church ought to be educated to give cheerfully what is the Lord's. The membership should consider this obligation paramount to all others. It almost goes without saying that Latter Day Saints are a people who pay their debts promptly, but some of them are very tardy about giving to the Lord. The temporal and material interests of the church require money, and without it must suffer.

The habit of laying by a certain amount, and to make it a constant habit to do so, would obviate all this difficulty and result in placing in the Bishop's hands and general treasury funds to meet every emergency. If the membership of the church—call it 30,000—paid five cents per capita every month it would be $1,500.00 per month or $18,000.00 per annum. What a work we could do with that vast sum. We would set the gospel machinery going in all departments of church work.

I am poor, old, and crippled, but I give the Lord something every Sunday and God has blessed me for it. Many do not feel the importance of giving, and do not study to know the needs of the church. Our papers ought to receive loyal support in their noble work of sustaining the Master's cause. Think of it, dear brethren, you who are careless in this matter, and may God help us to do all we can to carry on this good work.

Yours in bonds of love,

J. S. STRAIN.

ALL THINGS COMMON.

MEN have dreamed and poets have sung of a happy time far, far away, when all should happy be in joyful, peaceful rest, but few of them have ever understood that the happy time has always been within their reach, if they would only reach out and take hold of the plan of salvation established by God. There have been three periods in the world's history when men have enjoyed all things common: Enoch and his city so lived about three hundred years, the saints in the days of the apostles of Christ, the Nephites for two hundred years. The only reason why men should not always so live is because of selfishness and pride.

In the olden times men had their chiefs, lords, and dukes; and why such? Because they had been able to whip all the rest into subjection; this was the rule of might makes right. Many believe this is all right, that men are what they are because of the superior skill and wisdom that has enabled them to excel their fellows. In affairs of government selfishness has always ruled. Because of the blindness of men they permit such things and wonder why one should be so rich and another so poor. We find some men to-day who have millions to spend in building palaces and buying lands by the one hundred thousand acres; oth-

Lord's noble ones. When I had the honor to lay on hands to confirm her, the Spirit of prophecy was given, to the effect that if she was faithful she would help others of her family to accept the truth; and now the promise is being fulfilled.

As we cannot send help to build the college, we are trying to build a chapel here; for it is much needed, as so many of the people do not like to come into private houses. We anticipate having it ready for use by next conference, in December, if we can raise the means, as the Saints, you know, are poor. The ground has been given; also a large workshop 30 x 24 on the lot, which, when completed will be a great boon to the work. Bro. Wright has let us have the necessary lumber at a cheap rate and very reasonable terms to pay it in, and the labor is given mostly by the Saints. But there is quite a lot of other expenses attached, such as nails, paint, windows, and doors, which is just as much as we are able to do. But you know the Saints, as a rule, do not know what failure is; we press on and over difficulties.

The work is looking quite bright for an ingathering into the church in the near future, if we are faithful. Bro. Butterworth has of late led twelve precious souls into the waters of baptism in Victoria, and Bro. Wells three more in Sydney, making thirty-six since last conference; and the Saints are rejoicing in the Lord for his goodness to us. The work is onward here, though times are very hard. With love to all the Saints,

Yours in bonds,

HENRY BROADWAY.

Editors Herald:—Another victory scored for Joseph and the Book of Mormon at the Ross chapel last night. Elder Wilson of this place announced through the papers that he would deliver a lecture on the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints at Ross chapel and accordingly did so last night, to a large audience. The Saints all went, and along with the rest were Elders R. E. Grant and William Davis. After an hour and a half's talk the speaker tried his best to dismiss the meeting without giving Bro. Grant a chance to reply as he had asked for that privilege. Mr. Wilson made excuses that the people were tired, but Elder Grant is not one that is very apt to get stuck on a few excuses, so he immediately appealed to the audience for a hearing; and nearly every hand went up.

Bro. R. E. took the stand and began to show what horrible blunders the elder had made, and in less than ten minutes the audience was roaring with laughter; every one seem pleased that they were there, and at the close there were not half a dozen feeling hard toward the Saints. Some were heard to say, "If that is Mormon doctrine, we want more of it;" "Wilson got the worst of it this time;" etc.

Bro. Grant announced that he would deliver a series of lectures on the Book of Mormon in the Gospel Hall on Huron Avenue, commencing to-night. Bro. Davis baptized one more here yesterday.

VICTORIA LEVELLETT.

ers, honest as they, work hard for their dollar a day and own nothing. Why is this? There is something more here than skill or wisdom. It must be because men have not discovered a system of government that includes the whole. The old rule is still in force, one must serve and obey, the other can lord over him. Man has yet to learn he is but a part of one great whole; nay, he has always acted as if he were the whole, his fellows the part.

The brickmaker makes many bricks. Why? Because he knows they are all needed in the building. Now there is the building, it has brick on the foundation, the corners, the walls from bottom to top, some are hard, others soft, red, brown, or light colored. They are all alike, but all different, they are all necessary, though not of the same importance. You cannot take one out, for by so doing you would deface the building; if you knock out the foundation ones the rest would all tumble down. So it is with God in the creation of the human family, they are all parts of a great whole, much alike but yet different. God made them because he had need of them, and all will be useful in their places. This is the lesson men must learn, they are their brother's keeper, and his welfare must be considered as well as their own, and because of the neglect of this the world lies in sin and under condemnation for disobedience to God's justice, for without obedience to God's laws no man can live and be justified before him; hence the revealed gospel and the great need of men to hear and obey.

Few see or understand the truth of the words, "Ye must be born again," "of water and of the Spirit." Why? That the Spirit of truth might be engrafted in the soul or spirit of men, that they might grow in grace and a knowledge of the truth and be blessed by the Spirit that leads and guides into all truth, for without this Spirit they cannot live in peace and union. Some are very willing we should all be of one mind, but when all is explained, it is their mind as they understand things, anything not in accord with what they know and as they know it, is not right. Others have been great advocates of all things common when poor, but by a turn in fortune's wheel they became rich; then they were mute.

Others have said much about the oppression of the poor, but when placed in the position of managers forgot what they formerly said, and made themselves a record of being great oppressors of workmen. Others have said they were very willing to have all things common, but then there was Brother John, he was lazy, idle, thriftless; there was George, careless, wasteful, spendthrift. All this shows us that men may profess much and do but little, and before even the children of God can do much for good to themselves or each other they must learn to do God's will in all things; and until they so learn, God can do but little for them.

The children of Israel set out for the promised land six hundred thousand strong; only two got there. God was willing that all should enter, but they had been so long trained to obey their masters, they loved the fleshpots and other good things of Egypt, they did not want the new order of things God was preparing for them. Is it not about the same with men to-day? They like so well their own ways, their interests, rents, shares, and bonds, that they will not give up; they would feel lost if compelled to do it. How hard, indeed, it is for the old to become young again! Even those who have been born again and have the Spirit of promise have oftentimes to say, How hard it is to retain our first love! When we were born of the Spirit, what a love filled our souls, what joy and peace were ours! Why can't we always so remain? Yes, why not? Is it because our souls are barren and there is no place found therein for the Spirit to take root and grow? Many discover oftentimes after a long struggle and much trial that they cannot serve two masters. It must be either God or mammon, not both. Which shall they choose? And even after they have chosen God as their Father, how much there is to learn before they can be obedient in all things, and live without transgression of his laws!

Many look upon the idea of all things common as visionary and of no use to men in the common affairs of life. Is this not because they have only considered it from the standpoint of men and the falling apart of their many schemes? When we consider it on God's plan it is more than a mere vision or experiment. Three hundred years did Enoch so live, two hundred years did the Nephites; and what took place then? Because of pride they refused to have all things common and so destroyed their own happiness.

It has ever been so, and is even so to-day. Was not the word given years ago to gather? Did they then understand the great importance of the work to be done? Do they even now? I have heard men lament because the Saints had not bought the land they were commanded to buy. Why? Because it had now become so valuable. Was this not looking at it after the order of the sons of men, and not in accord with the things of God? When men cooperate in business and are successful, after all expenses are paid, the profits are divided among themselves. Then they have money to lend to banks or others. If they lend to banks the interest is small, but to private persons the interest is increased according to their need and poverty, charging at times interest from twenty-five to forty per cent. Thus they are no better than the bondholders against whom they have said so many hard things. Now the law of God admits of no such doings, not even in the days of Moses did God permit men to lend money to the poor and take increase, and since God changes not, is this law the same to-day?

When men cooperate under God's laws and all expenses are paid the profits are thrown into a common fund that they who have not may have and all be blessed in the enjoyment of their prosperity. And what is the inducement to so act? In this way they labor with God for good to themselves and their fellow men, in the other way men labor for good to themselves and oppression of their fellows and it is because of such things that one man has millions of dollars and another none. The systems of men are as shadows and shall all pass away when the rightful King shall rule. Then if we have learned nothing else how shall we stand when he comes? Shall we not be found wanting? If so can we reign with him?

Then it is of the most importance that we should live up to the laws of God in all things, for they are the real foundation of a life of true happiness. Let us suppose that the millennium was to begin to-morrow and that the present order of things was permitted to continue; then one part would soon be poor the other rich. If so, would there not be strife and contentions? The new order of things will be on the plan of justice, truth, and mercy. We say John is lazy, idle, thriftless. By what rule shall we so condemn him? To-day the rule is, the strongest man is chosen to hustle all the rest, oftentimes paid extra to do it. Hence men, as a rule, are driven beyond their natural ability, and those who won't be driven are called lazy, but we don't call this slavery; modern civilization calls it labor competition. So in matters of economy, a just rule must be had to measure the spendthrift. When the Saints truly practice, "Love one another," a great many moles and beams will disappear. It is said a hint to the wise will suffice; then let God's children be wise in the days of their probation.

"WHERE IS THE PROOF?"

A DEFENSE.

In Herald for October 16, appears an article under the first part of the above caption. It was written with a view to improvement and the better accomplishment of good by the ministry in general, and not to strike at any one or more of the ministry who might "come under the ban of the article having the above title." The scriptural cases referred to were given for the purpose of illustrating the manner in which mistakes are sometimes made, as believed by the writer. The writer himself has not claimed, nor does he now claim, to be freer from the mistake pointed out in the article, than his brethren. In the past he has been guilty of taking some things for granted, because they were frequently repeated by those whom he supposed to know; but now he is more inclined to examine and decide for himself. Because we have been guilty of mistake in this direction, in the past, shall we virtually refuse to be set right, and block the wheels of progress by throwing discredit upon a friendly effort to help others, for the work's sake, an effort which is free from personality and abuse? The idea of referring to such an effort as wholesale charges made against brethren, is too absurd to need any reply.

"Bro. J. R. L." does not "indirectly implicate the whole ministerial force of the church," as anyone may see by reading his article. The class of ministers referred to in the article is designated by the phrase, "Some elders." Does this phrase refer to "everybody in general and nobody in particular"? If it is improper and wrong to write up such an article as the one alluded to, purely for educational purposes, in what does the impropriety and wrong consist? If "Some elders" had been accused of something immoral or basely unchristianlike in its character, then there would be some consistency and force in the position that such charges should not be published in the Herald. But the idea that just because we do not know how many and who these "some elders" are, we are not permitted to mention what we deem to be wrong,—that is, if we publish it in the Herald,—is absurd, indefensible; and the brother himself cannot stand the application. Let us see. He says,

"I do not now refer to the above circumstances alone, but to all articles of a similar import."

What are these articles of a similar import? Who wrote them? Is the brother striking at "everybody in general and nobody in particular"?

Again the brother claims that it would be far better for such things to be righted "by private correspondence." Well, well! While he is prescribing for others who are supposed to be sick, why does he not take his own medicine when down with the same complaint?

He tells of a number of things which should not be done, and of some things which should be done. Is anybody guilty of the things which should not be done? If not, why mention it? And if some are guilty, why does he attack them in this "wholesale" manner, and that too, through the Herald? He criticises "J. W. W.," "J. R. L.," "W. W. B." with all those who have written "articles of a similar import"

(whoever they may be), and then sends it all off to be published in the Herald! Why did he not set those brethren right by private correspondence? I think I would be almost safe in saying that when the brother has furnished his reasons for publishing his batch of criticisms in the Herald, there will be but little if any necessity for us to publish ours.

The article referred to above does not state, nor was it intended to imply, nor do I believe it does imply, that inferential proof is necessarily worthless. Far from it. It does imply, however, that positive statements of supposed fact, made without positive proof, or based upon insufficient and doubtful inferences, are not proof; and that the practice is unnecessary, wrong, and dangerous to the best interests of the work. Surely the brother who writes up "the other side" does not mean to tell us that we are justified in affirming in a positive manner that which cannot be proved, in order to beget and retain confidence! Converts made in this way are converts made to ourselves, but not to the truth. Too many conscienceless ministers of other churches, corrupt leaders of the various factions growing out of the latter-day work, with occasionally one or more of more or less note in the Church of God, both in ancient and modern times, have recognized and taken advantage of this human weakness, and have sought to satiate their unholy ambition while engaged in the disreputable business of traffic with the souls of men.

If the "other side" could be found without such a labored effort, and without assuming false and indefensible positions, it would show far better for the one who has undertaken to hunt it up. It seems to me that the very basis from which the effort is made is faulty, and that it reveals the cause of the "other side" appearing. Here it is:—

As I have, to some extent, come under the ban of the article having the above title.

And,

The other points in the article do not apply to me, so I leave them untouched.

The pertinent question is, are the positions sought to be maintained in the article correct, no matter whom they may hit—myself, or somebody else?

The writer referred to informs us that he believes "from inference," that Nicodemus was a "coward." All right. No one objects to his so believing, if he chooses, that I am aware of. But why affirm it to a congregation as a fact? Is it an important part of the divine plan that must be delivered in a positive and unequivocal manner? Why did not the brother furnish us his inferential proof? Is it just because he feels positive that he was a coward? But he tells us that he has used due precaution, having been careful to use the word "doubtless, so as to stand on the safer basis." Well, well, here it is again! Webster says doubtless means,— Without doubt or question; unquestionably. The histories of Christ by the evangelists are doubtless authentic.

So that instead of standing on "the safer basis," he affirms in the most positive and emphatic manner.

When I say that Jesus could have lifted up his hands towards heaven and blessed the disciples without putting his hands upon their heads, the brother undertakes to make a clever use of my caption by saying,—

Where is the proof?

I reply, It is evident that he could have done so. The New Testament shows that he did many times bestow blessings without the laying on of hands. Why could he not have done so at Bethany had he desired? Jesus, the Son of God, held priesthood authority as an apostle, high priest, and prophet. The record says that "he lifted up his hands, and blessed them," but it does not say or intimate that he laid his hands upon them. Now, I suppose that when he lifted up his hands he lifted them towards heaven; though, of course, it will be the privilege of some one to cry out again, "Where is the proof?" Is it a far-fetched inference to say that Jesus could have done just what the text says he did do? And is it a proper inference to say positively that Jesus did do what the text says nothing about, at all?

The Holy Ghost was evidently the great medium through which blessings were bestowed by Jesus and his apostles, both before and after Pentecost day. It is true it was not given to dwell in them as an abiding Comforter, till after the ascension of Jesus; but Christ so received it, others received it, and it was with the disciples before his death. (John 14: 15-17.)

Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost when he prophesied concerning John. (Luke 1: 67.) The angel predicted that John would be filled with the Holy Ghost from the time of his birth. (Luke 1: 15.) Simeon was full of the Holy Ghost. By it he received revelation concerning the Christ, went into the temple and blessed the child, Jesus, etc. (Luke 2: 25-35.)

Jesus received the baptism of the Spirit after his baptism in water. (Matt. 3: 16, 17; Mark 1: 10; Luke 3: 21, 22.) Luke 4: 1 says:—

And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness.

In verse 14 it is stated that Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee.

John's testimony is very strong and quite explicit.

And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.—John 1: 32, 33.

It was through the Holy Ghost that Jesus preached the gospel to his disciples and others. (See Luke 4: 18-20; Acts 1: 2.)

The Holy Ghost is the power by which miracles are wrought, and the same is true of the healing of the sick. If not, then the power to heal and work miracles is resident in man, and not in God.

But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.—Matt. 12: 28.

If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give good gifts, through the Holy Spirit, to them that ask him.—Luke 11: 14, I. T. (See also 1 Cor. 12: 8-11.)

The above quotations and references show conclusively, I think, that the Holy Spirit was not only the medium through which Christ bestowed blessings, bore witness to the truth, and wrought miracles, but that his servants are dependent upon the same power.

For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God; for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.—John 3: 34.

This same rule applies to the ministers of Christ in all ages. They cannot represent God, neither in teaching the word nor in other ministerial work, except through the light, and power, and authority of the Holy Ghost. And it does appear to me that a man is trying very hard to find "the other side" when he feels compelled to take the position that Jesus Christ could not bestow blessings through the Holy Ghost before Pentecost day!

Nor will it do to assume that material contact is always, and under all circumstances needed, or essential, in order to receive blessings from the infinite God. Such a position is too narrow. In proof, only a few instances are needed. While Jesus was in the borders of Tyre and Sidon, there was a Gentile woman besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs. And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way: the devil is gone out of thy daughter. And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.—Mark 7: 27-30.

Next, we refer to the account of Jesus healing the nobleman's son, without going near him. He spoke the word, and at the same hour the sick one began to amend. John 4: 46-54.

Next notice the healing of the centurion's servant without any material contact between Jesus and him.

And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.—Matt. 8: 7, 8.

He did speak the word, and his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.—Matt. 8: 9-13.

The resurrection of Lazarus (John 11: 33-44) is a case in point.

The brother who writes up "the other side" concludes, before he gets through, that there is not so much that is objectionable in the "criticism of the article," after all; but "its manner, and more especially its application," are greatly at fault. Well, that may be, for it seems difficult for us "to see ourselves as others see us." But allow me to say that no effort was made in said article, that I am aware of, to bring others to a standard of my own, or to convince them that they ought to adopt my peculiar style of presenting the word. I am willing to allow the broadest latitude as to styles and methods employed, provided they are all in harmony with the "pattern," as given in Doctrine and Covenants 52: 4, 5; but the things said by all should be strictly true. It is bad policy, wrong in principle, and injurious to the work, to presume on the ignorance of the people; and no matter how strongly we may emphasize that which is not strictly true, it still remains as it was, error, and nothing more.

The ministers of Jesus Christ should be true educators of the people, both within and without the church; and in order to do this properly and well, we must teach them to think carefully, and to criticize, for the sole purposes of protection and mutual improvement. Much can be done without publishing in the church organ, it is true, but the time comes occasionally, when it is necessary for the general good, and in order that reformation may be more rapid and effectual, that the Saints should be reached through the Herald; and, in my opinion, there is no grander and nobler work to which its pages can be devoted. I can see no good reason why men of experience and intelligence should raise their hands with holy horror at the appearance of such an article as, "Where is the proof?" It is through knowledge, not ignorance, that we are to be saved, hence the great necessity of proceeding with care. If the Bible does not contain what we think to be necessary or desirable proof, let us be careful to not make a false claim in order to supply the deficiency. The gospel has been restored, and it is by virtue of that restoration that we have been authorized to teach and administer. It is enough to know that, as it has come to us, it is in striking harmony with the belief and incomplete accounts recorded in the New Testament.

As to whether my policy has a tendency to discourage and crush young and worthy beginners, all the defense I need is an appeal to all such as have traveled and labored with me in the ministry. Names can be furnished if needful. More than this, such articles are duly appreciated by both young and experienced ministers of the church. Several have told me that they have received profit, and have been set right on some points, by reading the one alluded to above.

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN WALES.

Conference convened at Llanelly, Wales, October 26 and 27; G. T. Griffiths president, A. Edwards secretary. Branch reports: Llanelly 40; 1 died, 3 baptized. Morryston and Pontyeats, no change. Ministry reporting: Elders D. Thomas, J. R. Gibbs, J. H. Edwards, E. R. Dewsnap; A. H. D. Edwards, and G. Davies; Priest J. Morris; Teacher A. J. Edwards. Bishop's agent said he had not received anything since last conference, consequently had nothing to report; but made an earnest appeal to the Saints for a better consideration of the financial health of the district in future. The following were unanimously elected officers: E. R. Dewsnap president, A. H. D. Edwards secretary; J. R. Gibbs sustained Bishop's agent. Sunday, 27th, met at 8:30 a. m. for organization of district priesthood association. Bro. L. Bishop was elected treasurer of the district. The following resolutions were adopted: 1. That we of the priesthood of the Western district of Wales be organized into a priesthood association. 2. That the association meet the first Sunday in every alternate month. 3. That we inaugurate a district association fund. 4. That Bro. Edward Williams, Pontyeats, (subject to his approval,) be appointed secretary for the association. 5. That E. R. Dewsnap and J. R. Gibbs be appointed a committee to draft rules or by-laws for the governing of the association. At 10:45, preaching by E. R. Dewsnap. Met at 2:30 for testimony meeting, when the peaceful influence of the Spirit pervaded the whole assembly. Three who had been baptized were confirmed. At six o'clock Bro. Griffiths spoke from Habakkuk 3: 3 and 4. A vote of thanks was accorded the Llanelly Saints for their hospitality to the visiting Saints. All the authorities of the church were sustained. Thus ended one of the most peaceful and blessed conferences that the majority of the Saints present ever witnessed in the district. Adjourned to meet at Llanelly, Easter Sunday and Monday.

VICTORIA.

Conference held at Hastings, September 7 and 8; Bro. McIntosh president, E. H. Davies secretary. Statistical reports from Hastings, Leopold and Queensferry approved. Bishop's agent's report: Balance due church to date £1. 19s. Priesthood reports from Hastings, Leopold, and Queensferry approved. The adjourned motion for altering times of conference from four to six months was dealt with, the vote being in favor of four months. Bro. Butterworth reported having preached 58 times and baptized 8. Bro. McIntosh and Bro. Reed sustained as district president and secretary for ensuing term. Next conference to be held at Queensferry, first Saturday and Sunday in January, 1896, or at call of district president.

Sunday School Associations.

NAUVOO.

Convention met at Rock Creek, Illinois, October 4, 1895, at two p. m. D. Tripp, superintendent, presiding, Lottie Tripp secretary. Schools reporting: Rock Creek, Illinois, enrollment 31. Farmington, Iowa, 37. Burlington 44. Montrose 16. The Ottumwa Sunday school presented a petition to the superintendent of association for admission. By motion and second they were admitted. D. Tripp, F. M. Weld, and James McKiernan were appointed committee on program for next session of the association. Adjourned to meet at 10:30 a. m. on Friday preceding the district conference at the same place.

FREMONT.

Convention convened at the Saints' church near Thurman, Iowa, Thursday, October 24, at 7:30 p. m. The evening was spent in the study of Trumbull's teaching process in charge of superintendent, T. A. Hougas. All were benefited by the knowledge gained. Friday, ten a. m., business. Charles Fry was elected secretary pro tem., after which reports of Farm Creek, Plum Creek, Elm Creek, and Shenandoah schools were read. Verbal reports were given by L. D. Frederickson, T. A. Hougas, and Charles Fry. A copying press having been purchased for the use of the association, the treasurer was authorized to pay a balance of $2.35 on it. A resolution was adopted providing for another convention on the day preceding the next district conference, and at the same place. T. A. Hougas and Charles Fry were chosen committee on program for the next convention. Bro. Hougas then gave a talk on the general condition of the Sunday school work, its past and future, and exhorted all to greater activity. The afternoon was taken up, first, with a talk by Elder H. Kemp on the advantages of the Sunday school; second, with a paper by Charles Fry on "The needs of the Sunday school and how to get them;" third, a review of the work of Thursday evening by T. A. Hougas. The evening was devoted to the "Model Sunday school" in charge of district superintendent, a large number being present and much interest manifested. Many were greatly strengthened to carry on the work, and all gained new life and energy. May the good work go on.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of the Spring River district convenes Monday, December 30, 1895, at nine a. m., with the Angola Sunday school. Do not fail to send in your school's report in time. Let us not forget the entertainment Monday eve. Come one and all, and let us awaken in the Sunday school work. Old and young can help roll it on. MIRTIE JONES, Sec.

The Independence district Sunday school convention will convene Friday, December 6, at 2:30 p.m., at Independence. Business session in the afternoon and a program will be provided for the evening. We hope to see a good representation of all the schools in the district.

NOTICES.

To the Business Manager of the Saints' Herald; Dear Bro.:—I am in receipt of a marked copy of Saints' Herald for November 13, containing your article on Hymnal, etc., in which you proceed to give me a little "combing down." Please turn to my article in Herald for October 9, and read it carefully, in connection with what I now have to say by way of explanation; and then if you still insist that your attack upon me is right and just I have nothing further to offer on the subject.

My remark with reference to the move to require cash in advance on the Hymnal was not directed at the Board of Publication, but at a resolution passed at the last General Conference. You remember that the resolution providing for the Hymnal was amended so as to require the Board of Publication to wait until one thousand subscriptions had been received before they should issue the book. I opposed that amendment in the conference at the time, believing it to be unwise to thus tie the hands of the Board. I had no idea that the Board would issue the book until the required amount had been raised, hence I wrote urging the friends of the movement to bestir themselves and raise the required sum at once.

Later developments show that the Board of Publication ignored the conference resolution, which I pronounced "unwise," and proceeded with the work of the Hymnal, clearly demonstrating that my opinion was not bad after all.

Now if that resolution had left the business entirely in the hands of the Board, to use their own discretion as to whether they would require cash in advance or not, according to circumstances, no word of complaint would have come from me had the Board found it necessary to adopt such a policy.

If the Board had honored the conference resolution, when would we have had the Hymnal? There was nothing in my article that was calculated to leave the impression that you charge me with; viz., "advising Saints not to pay money into the treasury until the work was done."

Now as there has been much said of late concerning the attitude of the Saints toward the publishing department—lack of interest, bad accounts, etc., and as I am very prominently referred to in the matter, I wish to say in self-defense that if I owe the Herald Office anything I am not aware of it. The Herald Office books will show that I have not been indifferent to the interests of the publishing department, having sold probably two hundred dollars' worth of books in the seven years of my active service as a missionary.

I have spent many an hour writing reports of meetings, debates, etc., for publication in the Herald, because I felt an interest in that department; and now to be paid in the coin that comes in the marked copy of the Herald for November 13, is certainly unpleasant, to say the least. In gospel bonds, LEBECK, Mo., Nov., 1895.

C. R. DUNCAN.

The Committee on Archæology again ask aid from all who can and will assist in the work of preparing a map of Ancient America, based on the Book of Mormon account of it. Our last call was responded to by a few, which is much appreciated by the committee.

There are several that we hear of using maps and charts but they have not responded to our request. Will these brethren please take notice. Send the location of cities, "lands," and rivers, with reasons assigned for such location. We want and intend to make a definite report at next General Conference.

All who render such assistance will be duly credited with honor to whom honor is due.

Please help at once and greatly oblige,

F. M. SHEEHY,
5 Codman Hill Street,
Boston, Mass.

WILLIAM WOODHEAD,
Barnard, Missouri.

W. H. KELLEY,
Temple, Ohio.

The Board of Health having prohibited public meetings on account of the prevalence of diphtheria, our district conference appointed for December 7, at Dennisport, Massachusetts, will necessarily be postponed until further notice.

DIED.

WILD.—October 27, 1895, at Belleville, Illinois, Sr. Sarah, wife of Bro. James Wild. Was born at St. Clair, Illinois, February 5, 1867. Her parents' name was Colson, but she was raised since early childhood by Bro. and Sr. Joseph Betts, Sen., and was known by that name until the date of her marriage with James Wild, June 3, 1886, who, with two children aged 4 and 7 years, survive and mourn her loss. She was well and favorably known; a good woman and Saint. A large audience packed the chapel at funeral service which was conducted by Elder M. H. Bond.

DAVIS.—At Birkner Station, Illinois, October 28, 1895, Sr. Sarah Davis, aged 86 years and 1 month. Was born in Carmarthenshire, Wales. Her maiden name was Evans. She came to this country in 1863; united with the church about twenty-two years ago, in St. Louis. She leaves two son, one daughters, eighteen grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, who all deeply mourn their loss, as she was a woman of kindly disposition and a very great favorite of these grandchildren. Funeral services conducted by Elders M. H. Bond and Joseph Betts, Sen.

SPARKS.—At her home at Anaheim, California, October 17, 1895, Sr. Luana, wife of Bro. George Sparks, aged 76 years. All that loving hearts and willing hands could do for her was done, but it seems her long journey was at an end, and one of Zion's noblest daughters went home to await the resurrection morn. Funeral sermon by Elder H. L. Holt.

ADDRESSES.

John Kaler, Tuncurry, New South Wales, Australia.

QUORUM ENROLLMENT.

In consequence of a Herald editorial there have been received by me and by the office certain requests that the writers be enrolled in the quorums of the church, as provided for in the law. In some cases these requests have been on the same sheet with business to the Herald Office, and they were only the expression of a wish, without items in full or in part, and with no statement of what the writers are doing in the work.

What is necessary is that each applicant for enrollment should write (on a sheet of paper by itself) a statement of when born, when baptized, and when, where, and by whom ordained, and adding thereto a few words as to what duties the applicant is performing as an officer in the church, whether in branch service or preaching the gospel in any capacity.

Although the items of birth, baptism, and ordination are upon the general records of the church and can be readily found, yet it will save labor here for the applicants to write them. Besides, the quorums desire personal statements from those they receive, so that the items may go upon their records; and also an account of the service of each, that they may accept the individual with an understanding as to what active part he is taking in the work. These applications are to be drawn from the hands of the Church Secretary, whenever vacancies in quorums exist, that such vacancies may be filled.

The Church Secretary has no authority to enroll anyone in a quorum. He simply receives the applications and presents them to the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons when they are needed. It remains with the quorums to accept the individuals or not, as they may decide.

No one can apply for another, according to a rule of General Conference. Each must make his own application; and a separate sheet of paper should be used in each case, not several applications be made on the same sheet.

It is not likely that many quorums will be able to hold meetings or to receive members next April at Kirtland, but applications will be received and filed at any time, subject to the call of the quorums in the future.

Notices of this kind have been published by me at various times in the past, but the order of things seems to be readily forgotten. But by attention to these rules it is easy to make a proper application for enrollment.

H. A. STEBBINS,
Gen'l Church Secretary.

LIGHT ON THE MAYAN RECORDS.

THE brilliant success of Mr. Joseph T. Goodman in deciphering the Maya hieroglyphics is not surprising to the friends who have known the inexhaustible patience, the tireless industry, and the resourceful ingenuity that he has devoted to the work; but it will startle the general public to learn that one of the greatest achievements of modern science has been thus unobtrusively wrought out.

Mr. Goodman, from all accounts, appears to have found the key by which all the inscriptions left by the ancient civilized inhabitants may be interpreted. Of course that does not mean that he has himself read all, even of those hieroglyphics that are available in facsimile. That will be a task for many patient students, and when it is done there will remain the still more extensive work of making reproductions of the inscriptions that remain buried in the forests of Guatemala and Yucatan, and which no camera has ever approached. But Mr. Goodman has cleared the way, and any sufficiently trained investigator can walk in it after him. The hints he has already let fall of the abysmal antiquity of the Mayan civilization will make the complete exploitation of all the surviving historical material the most fascinating undertaking that can engage the attention of anthropologists.

The condition of this Mayan problem suggests some interesting reflections about our own civilization. The Mayas had voluminous records on perishable materials, and doubtless thought that these would survive, or be copied, to the end of time. They did not reckon with the Spanish conquest, which brought destruction to almost all the writings on cloth and skins that existed at that time, and left us to reconstruct the history of the vanished native civilization from the monumental inscriptions cut in rock too solid for the indolent conquerors to destroy.

Mr. Goodman states that the chief need at present for the study of Mayan history is the accumulation of more material from the forests of Central America. The estimated cost of this work is about $10,000 a year, and Mr. Arthur McEwen makes the excellent suggestion that it should be undertaken by the California Academy of Sciences. The opportunity to prove its fitness for the custody of Lick's noble gift is one that the academy should welcome. There is no other way in which it could carve a place for itself and for California in the regard of the scientific world at so little expense.—San Francisco Examiner.

LATE UTTERANCES ON CHURCH UNITY.

IN spite of some depressing occurrences of recent date, such as the rejection of the Chicago-Lambeth platform by the Episcopal Convention, the subject of church unity remains at the front as a topic of religious discussion, both in England and in this country. The subject was given a prominent place in the program of the recent Church Congress at Norwich, England, with the result, according to report, of stirring up a breezy debate showing a wide difference of opinion among the members on the question of union. One of the points discussed was reunion with the Church of Rome according to the terms proposed in the recent letter of Pope Leo. The Bishop of Coventry made a speech in which he contended that transubstantiation, compulsory confession, and penance, Mariolatry, image worship, the celibacy of the clergy, were in the catalogue of serious differences. Lord Halifax made a diplomatic address, but upon the whole advocating reunion with Rome. Dean Lefroy followed Lord Halifax and warmly rebuked him for his alleged leanings towards Romanism. Referring to this discussion, The Christian Commonwealth, of London, says:—

“Everybody was evidently in favor of the policy of the anaconda with respect to the rabbit. Reunion was always possible if the Established Church could be allowed to swallow up all the other churches. Or, to change the figure a little, the lion was quite ready to unite with the lamb, provided the lamb would consent to be eaten. This is practically what all these conferences on reunion amount to. Every one wishes to be the anaconda or lion in the case, and none will consent to be either the rabbit or the lamb. In all that was said at the Church Congress there was not the slightest intimation on the part of any one that any concession would or could be made by churchmen. While this is the spirit we may as well make up our minds that reunion is yet a long way off.”

In this country the discussion of church unity has recently centered around the proposals framed by the Congregational Council at Syracuse, and the National Unitarian Conference at Washington. As a matter of course the Congregationalist is committed to the Syracuse Quadrilateral. It sums up its merits thus:—

“The chief value of the basis of unity proposed by Congregationalists, above those offered by other denominations, is that it offers common ground on which the great majority of Christians can stand, without trespassing on the liberties of any. Union on such a basis will not obliterate important denominational lines, but will prevent them from being used as barriers and will keep divisions of Christ's army from striving against one another. It may bring together bodies already closely affiliated, prevent wasteful competition on home and foreign fields, promote acquaintance and fellowship, and lead toward a unity which, without the danger of tyranny by any central authority, will witness to the world more fully than now that Christians love one another."

For the same reason the Christian Register (Unitarian) is inclined to think that the plan submitted by the National Conference at Washington is the best of all. It says:—

"They (the Unitarians) offer as a basis not a form of doctrine, a liturgy, a method of government, a traditional form of priestly succession, but the essence of Christianity itself, as summed up in the life and teachings of Jesus, that practical religion is love to God and love to man. This is a basis of union which is older than that offered by Episcopacy or by any other denomination. It lies at the foundation not only of Christianity, but of Hebraism and all true religion. In accepting it, the Episcopalian is not obliged to give up his prayerbook or his doctrine of the apostolic succession, the Methodist is not obliged to give up his bishops, nor the Presbyterian his elders, nor the Roman Catholic his ceremonies, nor the Baptist his love for immersion. All this matter of form and government is secondary. This is the real faith delivered to the saints, and on this basis Christians of all denominations may find a field for coöperation.

The Episcopal papers generally do not take kindly to the Congregational proposal, claiming that it is creedless and requires too few conditions. On the other hand the evangelical press, as a rule, commends the Syracuse platform as the best that has yet been offered. This feeling is expressed by the Methodist Protestant as follows:—

"To our view the Congregational platform is sufficiently comprehensive to cover every principle and doctrine that belongs to the religion of the Bible, and what is not found in that no man is under obligation to accept. We hail this as a step toward that grand day when divisions and unholy competitions will cease, and when all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and walk in his commandments will be one family."—Literary Digest, November 23, 1895.

SCIENTIFIC TEACHING AS TO ALCOHOL.

EVIDENCE as to the action of alcohol upon the human body has been collected, not by hysterical prohibitionists, but gathered from the laboratory, the autopsy room and the bedside. One series of facts opening a decidedly new field has been obtained through the works of the experimental psychologists. Through the efforts of some of these gentlemen—and we may mention particularly work done at the Heidelberg University—it seems to be established that alcohol has an effect in dulling simple mental processes, such, for example, as learning by rote, simple arithmetical calculations, and the simpler association of ideas. Another series of facts which tends to show the evident effects of alcohol is that which have been collected by students of heredity, particularly the relation of heredity to degeneration in families. The French alienists, in particular, have shown that one of the most prominent of the factors in leading to the development of mental and physical degeneration is the use of alcohol, and it is further urged by these investigators that alcohol has more than an individual or family effect, that it produces serious deterioration of the human race.

Of course, the effects thus claimed are all due to the abuse and excess of alcohol. Whether a further and more careful investigation would show that a moderate use of alcohol leads, eventually, to somewhat similar results, we cannot say. As regards the evidence against alcohol furnished by clinicians and pathologists, there has really been nothing particularly new added in late years. But if one take an unbiased survey of the position of medical knowledge and of medical men toward alcohol, and compare it with that held by them fifteen years ago we feel sure that he will see that the feeling against the use of it is much stronger. This is because there has been a gradual accumulation of facts carefully ascertained and thoroughly proved, demonstrating the ill effects of the drug. It is for the reason that the position of medical men regarding the use of alcohol has been always conservative and never fanatical that the present slight shifting of the front deserves the attention of our lawmakers and of all of those citizens who are interested in good government and in the social problems of the day.—Scientific American.

THE INFLUENCE OF ALCOHOL ON THE LONGEVITY OF MAN.

DR. CROTHERS, of Hartford, who has had long experience in the management of institutions for the inebriate and insane, says that "inebriety is the active cause of from 15 to 50 per cent of all insanity; from 30 to 80 per cent of all idiocy; from 60 to 90 per cent of all pauperism, and from 50 to 85 per cent of all crime," then asks the question, "Who can estimate the relief of the taxpayers by the removal of the perils to both property and life from drunkenness?"

Dr. Day, of Boston, in his late annual report of the Washington Home for the Treatment of Inebriates, says: "On the individual the effect of vicious alcoholic indulgence is disease of the body. Sooner or later it must succumb. Disease of the mind is not far off. It may be delirium or insanity."

Dr. Formad found in the dead house autopsies of the Philadelphia Hospital that in 250 chronic alcoholists nearly 90 per cent had fatty degeneration of the liver, 60 per cent had congestion or a dropsical state of the brain; the same number an inflamed or degenerated stomach, while not quite one per cent had normal kidneys.

To be convinced of the cause of so much pauperism in the country, we have only to examine the statistics of the liquor traffic in the United States. "According to the report of Internal Revenue Commissioner Mills, for the year 1892, the patrons of the saloons paid $609,000,000 for whisky and $617,258,460 for beer, a total of $1,226,259,460, the interest of which for one minute at 6 per cent per annum is $8,515.68." This would more than pay off the national debt, and would feed and clothe all the poor of the country.

When we look abroad over the world and take a bird's eye view of the evil effects of intemperance in its various aspects, its production of disease and death, the destruction of happiness and home, pauperism and crimes innumerable, with general demoralization, we are astonished that any thinking man, much less a physician, should come to the conclusion that drinking men and drunkards enjoy greater longevity than total abstainers.—The Medical Progress, April, 1895.

SPIRITISM IN LONDON, ONTARIO.

By letter from Bro. R. C. Evans, we learn that one Harloo Hazen is preaching spiritism in London, Ontario, to some effect. Bro. R. C. Evans had an interview with him at the house of a friend, and in conversation with him secured the following concessions:—

1. That the first medium was the Devil in Eden.
2. That the first spiritualist manifestations in this century were of a low, mean, ignorant order of spirits;—fallen spirits.
3. That a large percentage of the mediums working now are of that order; hence, all kinds of crime are found among them.
4. That he had been troubled at times by low spirits; but that if a man lived a pure life, he would invite pure spirits; and hence his mediumship would be of a high order.
5. Joseph Smith was the first, pure, good, God-sent medium of this age. Angels did appear to him. He did receive the golden plates. (This last I learn he has also stated before many hundreds of people in this city.)
6. He (Mr. Hazen) threw himself back in the chair and with awful earnestness exclaimed, "O, Mr. Evans! I would give all the city, were it mine, if I were controlled by the spirits that I know control you. I know that the Spirit of Jesus Christ and also the Holy Ghost are two of your controls. If you will only spend two hours a day in a dark room in prayer you will see your controls and will develop into one of the greatest, purest mediums, and will convert hundreds of people. You have another control. He is a large, intelligent Indian chief; his name is Talekeno. I saw him enter the room with you. He told me he was one of your guides. He it is that makes you so brave and gives you power to endure in discussion or debate and other work. He lived years ago on this land. He speaks through you at times." A lot more was said but I pass it by.
7. The medium has five controls: One a lawyer; one a Methodist preacher, who preached Abraham Lincoln's funeral sermon. He died a number of years ago. (Yet while talking through Hazen the other night, I caught him quoting a number of whole paragraphs from Bob Ingersoll's latest lectures.) He has three Indian controls. One other good thing I learned. Hazen said:—
"I have at times been determined I would not lecture, and so would go and get a pint of whisky, drink it, get blind drunk, throw myself on the bed with my clothes on, and wake up in morning, find myself on top of bed with clothes on. Then I would laugh and say to my guides, 'Ah! there I fooled you last night!' But to my surprise, when I left my room to breakfast, I was met by a number who complimented me on the great lecture delivered last night. You see I had been taken in my drunken condition, by the spirits, carried to the hall and lectured, and was carried back and thrown on the bed and knew nothing of it."

There is nothing peculiarly strange in that a man given to lecturing, not habitually a drunkard, becoming intoxicated, and while in such condition of intoxication filling an appointment, and forgetting the incidents attendant to such lecture; in a similar way that men do and say things while in a somnambulistic state, commonly called sleep-walking. But, if there are persons actually under the control of spirits in a psychological condition, or hypnotized by such spirits, then such spirit as the person has permitted to control his body while himself was in a conscious, sober, or sane condition, could easily take charge of such person's body, while apparently drunken, and assuming proper control cause him to go to the place of lecturing, control him there, and cause him to return to his room and leave him unconscious of having made the effort required to meet the lecture engagement. It is for this very reason that we see danger in the practices usually required of the devotees of spiritism. The giving oneself up to the incoming of any spirit that may be wandering over the realm of earth, watching for and seeking an entrance into an unguarded tenement in which to work the unrestrained will of an irresponsible identity, is a thing to be dreaded and studiously avoided. The Creator has said to man whom he has created, in effect, You will be held to strict accountability for the use and occupation of the body of flesh in which your spirit is tabernacled; and if you permit another spirit to enter and occupy you will also have to answer for the deeds done in the body while that spirit so occupies. What a serious and terrible responsibility it is then, for anyone to assume, that of dispossessing one's own body of the spirit, its proper occupant, to permit another, low, mean, vulgar, or great and grand, though mischievous, or evil, (who can tell?) to assume control and rule and use the body, and when done with it to toss it aside as in the case stated by this lecturer, if his statement be true. No man who values the honor of answering for himself can afford to run any such risk as is involved in such a course. Take it as stated by Mr. Hazen himself: he tried to foil his spirit control by making his body drunken, and thus incapacitate it from answering to the call for a lecture; but, his controlling spirit comes, takes possession of the drunken body, makes it go to the lecture room; keeps the inebriated condition from the knowledge of the audience; makes the man deliver the lecture, against his remonstrance and the convictions of his judgment when in a properly conscious condition; then throws the body on the bed in an ill-mannered way and leaves it in an unconscious condition. Then, notice what an exclamation as that made to Bro. Evans, "O, that I could have for my control such good spirits as those controlling you!" What a confession of painful doubt and apprehension; what a betrayal of consciousness of uncertainty and fear that the spirits which have gained access to and control of his body are evil and seeking harm to man rather than good!

Such things as these should serve as a warning to the elders and all Saints to let these "seducing spirits" severely alone; neither dabbling with, nor being controlled by them.

ANYTHING intended for the HERALD columns, except advertisements for which charges will be made, must be sent to the Editor. Anything not so sent is liable to be "pigeon-holed," indefinitely. Letters for publication, communications, articles, original or selected, newspapers, and extracts from them, notices, minutes of conferences and conventions, poetry, death and marriage notices, and everything of a literary nature, are included in the above note.

Matters of business, advertisements of all kinds for which charges will be made, subscriptions to any of the publications, remittances of money in any form for the office, inquiries about books, papers, or magazines issued by the office, orders for books, papers, etc., should all be directed to the Business Manager, to insure prompt attention.

A little thought will suggest to anyone the reasons for the above requests, and the propriety of them.

A REMINDER.

BRO. J. C. CHRESTENSEN has a short article entitled, "Pay up," in this issue, which please read.

At first we thought it not best to put this article in the HERALD, but we were reminded that several of the elders doing business with the Office, when the bills for books, subscriptions, etc., have been presented to them have made as an excuse for neglecting to pay, that they had sold books to others on credit, and were waiting for them to pay, when they would settle.

We do not doubt but what many of the brethren have thus sold books to others who have neglected to pay, and have also advanced money for HERALD, Hope, and other subscriptions; and those for whom they did it have forgotten the kindness and neglected to refund the money advanced.

This is all wrong. The HERALD plant, office, and everything appertaining to the publishing department belong to the church. One man is no more the owner than another; and every man should feel a like interest in its being sustained; and in an increased enlargement as the field grows wider. No one has the moral or the legal right to sell the papers, books, and publications, when acting as an agent for the office, on credit, expecting the office to carry the indebtedness. Every one obtaining books from the office, is in duty bound to answer to the office for all he receives, and if he sells them to others on credit he should at once pay his bill for such books, and make his collections afterwards. Anyone taking money for subscriptions to any of the publications should forward the money so collected at once, and not wait a "more convenient season," for such waiting, in too many cases, results in the money getting lost in the pockets of the receiver to the loss of either the office or the one who paid it; besides the loss of confidence sure to follow against the careless or unfaithful steward.

It is so easy to answer the demand of the office for bills due, "Why, I sold the books to brethren. When they pay me, I will pay the office; and I can't pay till then."

Coöperation and reciprocity will make success possible, where in their absence energy, thrift, and economy may fail.

The apostle wrote, "Whatsoever things are lovely," and "of good report," "think on these things."

The condition of things suggested by Bro. Chrestensen's little article is not "lovely and of good report."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Why are the two very valuable works, ("The life of Joseph Smith,") and "Orson Pratt" not allowed to be reprinted, with a few minor corrections? I scarcely recall more valuable works to the Latter Day Saint.

Ans.—A few leading ministers took exception to the Life of Joseph Smith, by Edward Tullidge, and succeeded in getting a resolution passed at an Annual Conference of such a nature that the Board of Publication did not choose to print another edition. There has always been enough of Orson Pratt's works to supply the call, until quite lately. Some of the pamphlets of which Elder Pratt was the author were quite good; others were not considered suited to present needs, and others are looked upon as a little doubtful in teaching. However the demand has not warranted a reprint.

Q.—Should not all the officers, both local and traveling, be, and seek to remain, in perfect harmony with the Doctrine and Covenants, and if any are overburdened with duties of the church that throw them out of harmony, what redress have they?

A.—Yes. God will not require that any shall perform services beyond their strength, or out of their province as laborers. The only redress available is to do what duty is nearest and most urgent at the time, and let the rest remain in the Lord's hands.

ATTENTION, MINISTERS!

ANY of the ministry who seek to avail themselves of the courtesy of reduced fare over the railroads in their fields of labor, should be careful to keep themselves within the terms on which permits are issued. No misrepresentation, or misstating of facts should be made. If permits may not be secured upon the honest basis of our organization and work, it is safer and better to get along without such permits.

We believe that the railway companies mean to treat us fairly, as a church people, and we cannot afford to secure a reduction of rates at a loss of moral worth and respect. Railway companies are doubtless sufficiently imposed upon without it being done by our ministry.

BACK VOLUMES OF AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE Herald Office has on hand a number of back volumes of Autumn Leaves for the years 1891, '92, '93, and '94, which are offered bound complete in various styles of binding, in prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.50 per volume, according to binding.

The volumes may be had either bound or unbound. Those wanting them bound for the holidays must order at once, to insure completion in time.

Volumes of 1891, '92, and '93, unbound, are offered at 50 cents. All volumes offered at these prices will be sent postpaid. Address orders to the Business Manager. 4t.

THE Creston, Iowa, Gazette, for November 28, 1895, in an editorial comment on the spectacle of the Christian Endeavorers, of Cleveland, Ohio, holding a season of concerted prayer that God would convert Col. R. G. Ingersoll from the, to them, grave errors of his thoughts and ways, reaches the following very sensible conclusion:—

We take no stock in Ingersoll's theology. His theories are barren, sterile, and profitless, but he is the most charming orator in the world to-day, a king among rhetoricians as Burns is king of the poets. Burns was not an orthodox believer by any means. If he were living to-day he would be known as an agnostic, as Ingersoll is known. It would be a most illogical and astonishing thing for one to refuse Burns' delightful and sympathetic verses because he was not sound on the Trinity. We look on Ingersoll in very much the same way.

The various attacks made in public by the preachers of the time on Mr. Ingersoll have not in the least affected him, or in any way lessened his influence with the general public. It has, however, resulted in what one sensible divine said in a convocation of ministers who were arguing the necessity of having a pamphlet written reviewing Mr. Ingersoll and answering some of his attacks on Christianity, "I protest against giving Mr. Ingersoll and his theories any more free advertising;" calling the repeated attacks upon the celebrated agnostic from the pulpit "free advertising."

There will probably be a failure attending the Christian Endeavorers' prayers for the conversion of Mr. Ingersoll to the Christianity which the Endeavorers represent, as a rule; and should there be, it will place an additional weapon of argument in his hands to use against so-called orthodox Christians and their beliefs and methods. It would be as easy for God to convert Mr. Ingersoll to the Christianity to which Saul of Tarsus was converted once on a time, as to have converted Saul; but Saul of Tarsus was a destined, chosen man for a specific work, and selected because of peculiar fitness for that work. If Mr. Ingersoll is a chosen man, destined by providence for a similar work, he will undoubtedly be led into the way of accomplishing it, in due time; but who of all the host of Endeavorers knows, or can know that such is the case? Besides, if he has been so determined upon, the Only One, who calls and chooses his instruments, knows when, and how, and where to put his Spirit upon them and cause them to begin their work; and this without any human interference, whether of Endeavorers, or others. However, the prayers of good meaning people can do no harm to any; albeit there is too much ostentatious display about this recent praying for Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. L. GOODRICH, Washburn, West Virginia, the 5th inst. :—

Debate expected here between Bro. D. L. Shinn and J. C. Moore of the Disciple Church. I find that Brn. Shinn and F. J. Ebeling have quite an interest started here. May the good work go on.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, Harlan, Iowa, December 5:—

I began meetings here November 30. Attendance not large, still some seem interested. We hope the interest will increase.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. J. CORNISH reports some excitement among the people of South Boardman, occasioned by attacks on the faith.

Brn. J. R. Lambert, Joseph Snively, William Anderson, S. V. Bailey, and others, are at Allendale, Missouri, to attend the Lambert-Glendenning debate which begins on the 10th inst.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"In the still air the music lies unheard;
In the rough marble beauty hides unseen;
To make the music and the beauty needs
The master's touch, the sculptor's chisel keen."

Dear Mothers:—One day last winter our ten-year-old boy began to be desirous of knowing why I chose to be a member of the Latter Day Saints Church, and why it wouldn't have done just as well to have joined some other one that wasn't made so much fun of (where no reproach would be to bear), asking, "How do you know this church is any better than any other?" "How do you know it is God's church?" "How do you know Joseph Smith told the truth about the angel?" "That an angel spoke to Moses, Zecharias, or Mary?" and "that the Bible is true?" and many others, each answer suggesting other questions to his mind that needed thought and caution to answer. I was made to realize the time was not far distant that "because Mamma said so" would not always prove sufficient for him; neither did I wish him to think so just for this reason; for there are grander and nobler reasons. It was my desire that he be instructed in a manner that he could understand it to be God's work,—with the divine seal upon it. So with caution each question was answered as he asked it until the story of the restoration was asked for and told as best I could on such short notice. Both boys became intensely interested, and their questions were clothed in a differently toned ring. They were filled with a desire to learn more and more about this "marvelous work and a wonder."

On our way to Iowa last spring we attended the General Conference. Of course our worthy brother, Asa Cochran, was there with a supply of church books. By his consent, the elder boy, eleven years old, went behind the counter and looked through the books and selected "Joseph Smith the Prophet," by Lucy Smith, had it laid aside, and came to me to ask if he might buy it, "as it only costs seventy-five cents." I told him to ask his papa. He did, and returned with the money, his countenance beaming with gladness; purchased the book, and with joy hugged it in his arms as a precious treasure, or as a child would a pretty toy. The younger one purchased the two cabinet sized photos of the Evanelia, for they had become very much interested in its voyage, mission, and welfare. We remained in Iowa four months. They were baptized a few days before our departure for Missouri.

Of course there was not much of an opportunity to read the book through as it should be until we became settled in our new location, when two or three weeks ago I commenced the reading of it to them, evenings; sometimes but one chapter, again a half dozen or more, and a couple of evenings none, but not because they failed to remind me of it; for they never forgot it once.

I had not read many evenings ere they said, "That little book has paid for itself. I would not take twice what we gave, for it." We completed it yesterday, it being Sunday, and they were "sorry there was no more to it." They listened with intense interest from "beginning to end," there being no more than three pages which were beyond their comprehension. But they listened through all, lest there might be something they would miss that they could understand.

We are sorry it is out of print, and hope they will reprint it, for it is just what every child above ten years of age should have. It is so simple they can understand it better than any other book, taken as a whole, that I know of for the young of the church. It does not claim to teach the doctrine and usages of the church in full; but it contains the history of the restoration of the doctrine, or gospel of Christ, and this gives them a good understanding of the necessity of obedience to the same, and also helps them to become familiar with the principle that God is no respecter of persons with them that fear him and keep his commandments, that they "be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine," and "build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, and say, If we had lived in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partaker with them in the blood of the prophets," and stone them which are sent unto them.

The Bible will then seem like a real, true history. When it says the voice of the Lord spoke unto Paul on his way to Damascus, they can realize the truthfulness of it. And when the Lord speaks to a person on this continent they will feel that he is near to them, and they are dearer to him than they could possibly otherwise realize. No room then for the conviction that God has gone so far away from us that he no longer remembers his offspring—younger offspring—but leaves them to be nourished only with the crumbs that have fallen from his older children's bounteous feast centuries ago. Ah, where would be the consistency of teaching "no respect of persons with God" if only the crumbs are left from the loaves and fishes of the favored ones? O for a living faith in God's present power and willingness to guide his children who call upon him in faith believing he is a rewarder now as well as centuries ago. I feel to exclaim with my heart full of joy, "'Tis good to be a Saint in latter days," "God is no respecter of persons!"

When we began the reading of the little book herein described we thought to take notes at each evening's reading, and formulate a little story of the restoration for the Hopes; but continuing to read we found no necessity for simplifying or condensing. Could see no better way than to recommend the book itself—unless it would be for some who cannot get the book. Get it, mothers, if you have to borrow it, to read to your children, who are old enough; it will both benefit them and you. No matter if you have read it through once. I did, over eight years ago. It was the first step I took in the investigation of this wonderful work of the Lord in the latter days. But it was new to me again, and I truly feel benefited by it. And as it seemed to be just what my boys have needed, I pen you the cause leading to, and result of the second reading of it.

May each of us realize the responsibility resting upon us in training our children for the kingdom of our God. They will then be useful in this world and we can make them useful to every community where they shall dwell. In no better way can we do this than by teaching them obedience to the fulness of the gospel,—lead them to it. See that they do it. It covers all. Let us not neglect our duty to our children for some other work because that work brings us more prominently before the church or the world. "Charity begins at home." Home duties first. (Not numerous, unnecessary things that soon perish and bring destruction to your body without any good to your soul. But God-given duties and rights in teaching, training, and caring for our families.) Aid all you possibly can in the advancement of the church aside from home duties,—it is right, and gives you rest,—for change brings rest. ### SECURING ATTENTION IN PRIMARY WORK.

IN thinking upon this subject it would seem that there was no use in trying to present any new way of dealing with children since all the phases of child-nature and all the methods of dealing with the children have been written up by our prominent educators, and sent on their missions to nearly every part of the globe; hence, what I present to you can only be ideas which I consider the most practical, which I have gotten from the study of children by actual work with them, and by the study of psychology and journals on education.

However, I realize that there are many dear girls doing primary work in Sunday schools who do not have access to any of these helps; and if, happily, we can reach their ears, eyes, or hearts, with these articles, and make them feel that they are coworkers with God, encourage them in the thought that they are aiding in the development of the budding souls of God's own creating, and leading them, all unsuspecting, into the Christ-life, then indeed is our mission a successful one.

Primary work is certainly the most important work of either the public or the Sabbath schools. It is a mistaken idea that just anybody can teach the little ones. Have you not noticed that the tiny plant needs great care or it will not develop into a strong tree? Do not the young of the lower animals need the care of one who understands the work or they perish? If you were going to build a very magnificent home you would not think of placing your poorest material in the foundation. Then, surely, you ought not to permit such a state of affairs in the education of the little folk. Let us get away from the thought that primary teaching is simply lesson-hearing.

One of the first requisites of a primary Sunday school teacher is that she be prayerful. She should so live that the Holy Spirit will assist her in her work; for without it she cannot hope to do efficient work. The Great Teacher has promised to lead us into all truth. Does any earthly teacher promise us so much? God gladly bestows his Spirit upon us if our temples are holy. Teachers, are we enjoying this great blessing? If not, will we not, from this moment, begin the consecration of our lives to this work by humble thanksgiving and prayer? I truly believe we need this Spirit as much as does the preacher. Let us ask God to qualify us in every particular. Half-heartedness will not do.

In preparing our lessons we should get such a broad knowledge of the subject as will enable us to select just such a part as will be of value to the class. First learn the lesson, then study how to present it. A lesson cannot be properly taught without the most thorough preparation. The persons and places to be presented should be decided upon before class time. A certain point in the lesson should be reached before drawing the map or picture. In short, systematize; system is the crying need of the world.

After the preparation of the lesson much of the success during the hour depends upon the manner of the teacher at the beginning. The old adage, "A bad beginning," etc., will not do here. We all know how we watch and measure a speaker, at his first appearance; and if perchance he makes a poor beginning we feel very much disappointed; but if he warms up to his subject the adult mind, by the power of its trained attention, will patiently follow him through his slow preliminaries. However, with the child mind it is quite different. Just as sure as we let the first few minutes of class work drag, will the interest of the hour be lessened; hence it is a good plan to do some concert work at first. This attracts the pupil's attention so that he has no time for mischief.

Facial expression has much to do with the success of the teacher. The child watches the teacher's face closely, and if he sees in it love, interest, and enthusiasm, he certainly will be influenced by it. A teacher of this sort is always appreciated by the class. A child is quick at reading the feelings expressed by the face, and certainly a cold, inexpressive look will repel. Let the sunshine beam in our countenances and our happiness will be transmitted to the children.

After having obtained attention at the beginning of the lesson we must work to have it continue until the close. Sometimes this is a difficult task; but it all comes with study and perseverance. We will discover that attention depends upon both the children and the teacher. If the former have a great deal of nervous energy to be disposed of, and the latter have ability to properly direct it, the end desired is easily reached; but if opposite conditions prevail results will not be so favorable.

We must remember that the tired mind cannot be easily aroused to activity. It is almost useless, in fact is detrimental, to the child, to attempt to teach him when he is weary. I recently heard a story from a prominent educator of Iowa that illustrates that this is true of the adult mind as well as that of the child. He said that at one time he took quite an extended trip through the United States in company with his wife and sister, and among other points visited was Niagara Falls. It was night when they arrived, and the next morning, he, being perfectly recruited with one night's rest because of his great physical strength, proposed that they visit the Falls immediately after breakfast. The ladies were yet much fatigued, but they consented. When they came in full view of the Falls, one of the greatest wonders in the world, while he was perfectly entranced with its grandeur, one of the ladies remarked, "Is that all!" thus showing, that although she was a woman of culture, her appreciation was entirely destroyed by her physical condition.

Continued routine tires the child. He is ever looking for novelty and change, and we must give it to him if we wish to interest him for any length of time. A forcible impression if prolonged and unvarying will finally cease to attract. People who live on car lines soon cease to notice the noise of the cars. Any noise drummed in our ears continually soon ceases to draw our attention. This is probably due to the fact that the nerve-center is dulled and ceases to respond.

This is a most excellent reason why we should use different tones in the voice. Soft and loud in music, light and shade in art, are what are required to meet our approval. The voice is a great factor in securing attention. It either attracts or repels, just as facial expression does.

New things attract our attention, because they present a strong contrast to the ordinary in life. Pictures, to illustrate the Bible lesson, are of great value. They are more real than the thought which we may present. I would be glad to see every lesson in our now most excellent Primary Quarterly illustrated by a picture. Since we are not so fortunate, we can procure a great many pictures from old pictorial Bibles and use these whenever possible. These, with our map drawings, will materially assist us.

In our work with the children let us talk to them of the things that bear directly upon their familiar games and the common occurrences in life. Give them little stories and examples of home life with a moral for them to profit by. If we can arouse their mental activity in this way we are accomplishing much toward the desired end. We must remember that it is difficult for the child to grasp anything entirely new to him. Adults always enjoy and appreciate lectures and talks upon which they are somewhat familiar; yet if we are thoroughly familiar with a subject we lose our interest to a great extent. Hence the teacher must use wise discrimination in her work; it must be neither too new nor too old. We must go from the "known to the unknown," remembering that the study of any subject when first taken up is usually uninteresting. The beauty of a poem is not felt at first, but steals upon us gradually; hence the mind of the child must be moved by a strong, mental stimulus at first and finally intellectual interest is awakened.

"One thing at a time" is a good law to be observed. Let us not attempt too much; it can only result in failure. A child's power of voluntary attention being in a primitive state, we must guard him from external objects that will divert his mind from the lesson.

What he can see with his eyes and hear with his ears of the real in life is usually more attractive than words from the teacher which draw upon his imagination. Thus we see a good reason for introducing the real objects and in this way lessening the attraction of other things.

Bright, pleasurable things awaken interest while dry topics discourage. So we must grade our work accordingly. We should study the human mind in all its phases to become able to assist in its development in a logical way.

It is not primary teachers only who need this knowledge, but mothers also.

If primary teaching is the most important work of the schools, motherhood is the most important work of life. If every girl were taught the science of the human mind and the wonders and perplexities of child-nature we would soon have a race of better men and women. This ignorance of child-training has been a great hindrance to the world's progress.

We cannot do right unless we know what is right, and we cannot know right without the proper amount of study. Are we doing what we can to mitigate this evil? Let us be active in this warfare for children and the result can but be satisfactory.

CHICAGO Sunday school just about holds its own. We have some faithful workers, but the Saints are so scattered that the expense of street car fare hinders many from coming. Not till we obtain a church of our own around which the Saints can settle can we expect our work to prosper as we wish.

Dear Sunday School Department:—Please excuse me for appearing so early in the morning, even at the very dawn of the column. I only desire to briefly express my thankfulness for the privilege of a Sunday school column in the Herald, where we may gain by others' experience and thus be mutually benefited; for surely the importance and magnitude of the work demands it. I am glad we have so many ready, willing workers, and would there were as many more.

This grand latter-day work should continually be uppermost in our minds, and we should be in tune with the Sunday school interests seven days in the week.

Your sister,

The names of Jacob and Joseph have been found on Babylonian inscriptions belonging to the time of Abram. One scarab from Egypt bears the name of Jacob who was a Pharaoh, hence the inference that the Hebrews, Babylonians, and Egyptians were at that date intimate with each other.—Literary Digest.

A special effort is to be made in Germany to induce the Protestants of that country to return to the Roman Church. During the present month eight German prelates, including the Archbishops of Cologne and of Posen, will go to Rome to initiate the movement under the guidance of the Pope.

Letter Department.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Nov. 16.

Editors Herald:—The district conference held at Llanelly, Wales, October 26 and 27 passed off very pleasantly, as the spirit of peace and brotherly love predominated throughout the entire sessions. Bro. E. R. Dewsnup was elected district president, and I am of the opinion that this will ultimately prove a wise selection, providing the officers and members rally to support and second his efforts; if they do, the result will be a radical change for the better. I would admonish the Saints to keep in memory the divine injunction, "preferring one another in love;" likewise the command, "Work . . . while it is day;" and if the above are put into practical operation, I have no hesitation in predicting that success will attend your "united" efforts.

During the last week of my sojourn in Llanelly I baptized four sisters, who I believe will be a useful addition to the church there. On the 1st inst. I arrived at Morriston and while there delivered three sermons to small audiences. The citizens in this place did not seem to have an inclination to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, as they appear to be perfectly satisfied with their men made creeds and dogmas; in fact, the denizens of all Wales seemed tainted with the same disease. I have had cause to deplore the radical change on the part of the people in Wales for the reason that the desire to investigate is not manifest as it was in the forties and fifties. In those days the ministers did not experience much difficulty in attracting the attention of the people, as they used to turn out by the thousands to investigate their claims, and, as a consequence, thousands complied with the requirements of the gospel; and the power of God accompanied the preaching of the word in a marvelous manner, so that miracles and wonders were wrought to the astonishment of the people. But alas! such is not the case to-day; for if the minister can get two or three outsiders to attend his preaching services he thinks he is highly favored. However, there are times when ten and at long intervals even thirty come, but this only happens once in a great while.

Now, I am of the candid opinion that ere the Reorganization can be effectively established in said country it will be absolutely necessary that the church send two ministers with their families from America who are conversant with both the Welsh and English languages, and that they remain from five to six years. The Western and Eastern districts respectively require a minister in their midst who can devote all his time and talent in caring for the flock and opening up new places. The command "Feed my sheep" is as applicable to-day as when first uttered. It is probable that the Bishop would be necessitated to support the families of these ministers for a short time, but I have every reason for believing that it would be but a short time ere the Welsh section of the mission would be see thousands gathered into the church within the short space of two or three years, but I have felt impressed with the thought more than once that God has a people in Wales, and that hundreds of those honest souls would be gathered into the church in God's due time. Before the above grand results can be realized those who are sent to labor in Wales will have to exercise great patience and suffer many privations. The method of operating in Wales with a view to success means "fireside preaching," "the distributing of tracts from house to house," and of engaging men on the streets in conversation in the gospel theme when opportunity affords; and the minister who has not the courage to pursue the above mode of procedure would not accomplish much good there; and that the efforts of the ministry prove effectual it is necessary that the Saints in their respective localities live up to their religion by dealing honestly with one another and those of the world and loving one another with the gospel love; for where true gospel love abounds I will vouch for the statement that hatred and evil-speaking, with their kindred evils, will not be found among God's children.

According to promise I arrived at Ant-y-moel on the 6th inst. and remained there until the 11th. I held two preaching meetings in the house of Bro. J. D. Jenkins, the president of the district. On Saturday Bro. A. N. Bishop appeared on the scene. The town schoolhouse having been procured for Saturday night and Sunday we held forth there. Saturday night it rained so hard that none but a few of the Saints turned out. Sunday morning was a repetition of the preceding night, but on Sunday afternoon and evening we were greeted with fair-sized audiences. Bro. Bishop occupied the rostrum in the afternoon, and it is said by those who heard him that he acquitted himself creditably. Having been requested to baptize Sr. Edwards I had not the privilege of hearing him. We had to go quite a distance through a drenching rain to the place of baptism. It was with the sister as it was with Israel; she was baptized in the cloud, but not in the sea, but in a very narrow stream between two high mountains. Notwithstanding the strong current and the drenching cold rain the sister went bravely forth to obey the command.

In compliance with an urgent request made of us by a number of Saints living here we organized a branch which is to be known as Nantymoel branch. Bro. J. D. Jenkins was made president, David Edmunds was made priest, and William Little secretary. Peradventure those who compose the new branch will seek earnestly to do their whole duty as prescribed in the law, success will surely attend their efforts.

Bro. A. N. Bishop is endeavoring to the best of his ability to advance the work intrusted to his charge. He is being ably assisted by the vice president, T. Gould, who is also the Bishop's agent. The Saints in the district will do well to bear in mind the fact that the work cannot develop very rapidly unless temporal means be supplied, hence we hope the Saints will remember this department of the work by giving freely of their substance as the Lord shall prosper them.

Bro. Caffall and I have been associated in looking after church matters at Hanley, also called at Stafford. Found the Saints here doing very nicely, with brighter prospects ahead; attended business session of the special district conference held here on the 16th inst. and a pleasant and profitable time was experienced. I found Bro. Caffall to be a wise minister and a noble brother, also a pleasant and cheerful colaborer. It is both encouraging and inspiring to be associated with one who has spent almost half a century incessantly in the interests of the salvation of men and to find him at the age of three-score and ten still actively engaged in the battle's front, bearing aloft the banner of King Emanuel. May the God of our fathers graciously smile upon our brother and his aged companion in the great sacrifice they are making; for surely it must be a sacrifice to be separated by over four thousand miles of land and sea, especially at their age. This is indeed a noble example for our young ministers to follow.

By the time this letter reaches the Herald Office the writer anticipates being on the soil of the "brave and the free," as circumstances at home demand my presence. I very much regret that I am under the necessity of returning before spring, but as we are all creatures of circumstances we cannot always do as we would wish; and I might state in this connection that during fifteen years of married life this is the first time I have been requested by my wife to return home. Bro. W. T. Rushton of Leeds, and Bro. Adolphus Edwards and his sister Annie will accompany me across the deep blue sea. We sail on the "Teutonic" of the White Star Line. We expect to reach New York by December 1 at the latest.

Yours hopefully,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the faith, although I cannot say I am doing any large amount of baptizing. I am trying in my weak way to get the restored gospel before the people in a way that they can understand it; but I find that in this place they are more inclined to go where they do not hear much doctrine.

I had occasion to fill a pulpit of one of the popular churches of this city and in presenting the doctrine of Christ I spoke of baptism. After I got through the pastor said that the sermon was a good one but he did not agree with me in regard to the way I had presented baptism.

I am laboring through the week for the bread that perisheth and on Sundays I try to break the bread of life to those who come to hear. I am suffering from an accident received while in pursuit of my daily work—that of a blacksmith. I got kicked by a horse. I have been laid up one week and may have to lay up another week. I ask the prayers of the Saints that I may be restored.

I want to say to those of the Fourth Quorum of Priests who have written me, that as soon as I can hear from my counselors and get their opinions I will answer. It takes a long time to get around, for one of the brethren is in West Virginia, another in Northern Missouri; so be patient brethren. Section 75 of Book of Covenants can be read with profit if put into practice. May God help all to so do.

Address me at No. 1119 Laramie Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas.

Your brother,
J. I. YOUNG.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Dec. 3.

Editors Herald:—Brn. William T. Rushton, A. H. D. Edwards, and Sister Annie Edwards, and the writer arrived in New York City, on the 27th ult., on the Steamer "Teutonic" of the White Star Line. We had a fair voyage considering the season of the year. There were about eight hundred passengers on board.

I reached home on the 28th and found my wife sick in bed, to which she had been confined for about two weeks. She is some better but still quite weak. However, she is gaining a little every day, and we have every reason for believing that our heavenly Father will bring her through safely. To this end we ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints.

I herewith desire to thank the Saints in Europe for their kind ministrations to me while laboring among them.

Yours hastily,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

LEBECK, Mo., Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—I notice a letter in Herald of November 13 from Bro. Simon Smith, of St. Joseph, Missouri, making a criticism on the position assumed in the White-Sewell controversy relative to the geography of the Book of Mormon.

I am glad the question has been sprung in the Herald as it is important that the elders see and teach alike. In order to see alike we will have to compare notes, exchange views, etc. This can be done better through the columns of the Herald than at General Conference, as time is too much limited in our Annual Assemblies. I should like to see the question well ventilated in this way; not for the sake of maintaining a position, but for information.

We have a committee appointed by General Conference to arrange a map, but when it is completed it may not meet the approval of many. Much light might be thrown upon the subject by a friendly discussion of it and the committee be very much assisted in their work.

We now have two positions before us relative to this subject:—

1. The line between Desolation and Bountiful is on the Isthmus of Panama, as assumed in the White-Sewell articles.

2. The position of Bro. Smith that said line is on the Isthmus of Tehautepec.

With the first position the River Sidon as mentioned in the Book of Mormon is identified as the Magdalena in the United States of Colombia.

Bro. Smith does not inform us as to where the River Sidon is, according to his position. Will he please explain? Again, will Bro. Smith please tell us all about the two charts mentioned by him. I confess I am unacquainted with them in every way. They may be of great value if brought before the church properly.

Come, brethren, you who may be interested in this subject, and bring forth your strong reasons why you believe either position.

Yours for truth.

C. R. DUNCAN.

WALSINGHAM CENTER, Ont., Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—We had Elder Lake with us about two weeks; we felt very lonesome after he left us. He gave us good counsel and preached some excellent sermons while here. We organized a branch to be known as the Walsingham Center branch with a full set of officers and twenty-seven members, and we expect more here in the near future. Our congregations are increasing and peace and harmony prevail. The sick are healed and the Saints rejoice in the restored gospel. I feel to thank God for his blessings toward his people here; for surely we have been blessed wonderfully.

I leave to-morrow for Norwich to finish up some work left when I came here. From there I go home for a visit. I have not been home for over four months.

Your well wisher,

SAMUEL TOMLINSON.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—I spoke just one hour by my watch last evening, in the Freewill Baptist church, in the city; the pastor inviting me several times to speak to his people. Some seventy-five or more were present; all seemed to be very much interested with what we said. I spoke on the plan of salvation. As man was a fallen being by Adam's transgression, so by obedience to the gospel through Jesus Christ we could be redeemed from sin and brought back into the presence of God.

At the close of my sermon the pastor said, "I have been very much edified in listening to the sermon preached by Bro. Foss. I can heartily indorse what has been said." He then took up my Bible from the desk and said, "I believe every word there is in this Bible; I know the gifts that were promised and once enjoyed in the church are not now among us. Why they are not, I do not know; and if I don't learn why God does not give them in this life I shall know more about it in the great beyond."

I informed them that as a church, we believed that the law of God as well as the law of the land provided for a man to have but one wife and a woman but one husband, and that our doctrine was strictly moral, and that if we ever reached the kingdom of God, it would be by living to the commands of God.

The preacher said he never heard so much Bible used in one discourse before, and that he would have to study his Bible a little more and learn to give chapter and verse. I told him I could speak to them during this week if he so desired. He said the time would be taken up this week, but that next week we will have you speak to us if we have to knock a hole through some way.

A lady said to me, "I should like to have a talk with you at my house; when you can make it convenient to call, do so." I will try and look after these inquiring friends at once.

Yours ever,

J. C. FOSS.

TEMPLE, Ohio, Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—A good spirit prevailed in our sacrament and prayer service here yesterday. The evening service was under the care of the writer and Bro. J. H. Lake and a good interest was manifest.

Things are going fairly with us. Bro. G. T. Griffiths arrived home from Europe on Thanksgiving, accompanied by Sr. Edwards and Bro. Rushton, all hale and hearty. The latter is a man of good thought and Christian spirit.

We cannot afford to stop with the Temple suit at the halfway house. Push ahead to a certainty and success. It will be sustained by the Eastern Saints. "We want no cowards in our band." We usually feel pretty good this way when there is a fight up. No danger of stagnation then, or a slow and lingering death. Of course our weapons are not carnal, but then we like to see them take effect all the same. Snow and winter at hand.

In the faith,

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—There are many cheering features in the work among us here. While there are not many from the outside that visit us, we are trying to set our house in order so that when they do come they may find us Saints indeed. The young are doing grandly, both in supporting the work of the branch, by bearing their share of the burden financially, and otherwise; also by bringing in their tithes and offerings into the storehouse of the Lord, that the work may also be sustained in the more distant fields of labor. I don't know of any better evidence of the spiritual condition of a branch than the way this part of God's law is observed.

The more of the Spirit of the Master we obtain the greater will become our desire for others to become partakers with us of this Spirit. And our experience teaches us that this precious and sanctifying influence can only be obtained and retained by a compliance with and a continuance in the restored gospel of Jesus Christ. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Then if we are partakers of the Spirit that proceedeth from the Father and the Son, will it not lead us to manifest a love for the world akin to that of our heavenly Father's, that the means prescribed by the Father, through Jesus Christ his Son, be proclaimed to the world, that they with us may rejoice in the knowledge of the truth through the possession of this Spirit given from heaven? The cry to "come up higher," wherever heeded, will point out this part of God's law as among the first steps of our ascension. Let us be honest with God, as well as with our fellow man.

I therefore rejoice to see the young, especially of our branch in Boston, willingly, cheerfully, lovingly, complying with this part of our service to God.

I do not wish to convey the thought that the older Saints have forgotten their obligations to God and the gospel in this particular; far from it, for I appreciate their long and faithful service and sacrifice for the cause they love. Two are to be baptized here on the 8th, nephew and niece of Bro. H. J. Davison—Bert Newcomb and brother.

During this year I have been especially blessed in the service of the Master; I have striven to "feed the lambs" and sheep of the flock. I have never felt the need of divine aid and never received so much as during this year. Success to the Herald.

The labors of Brethren W. H. Kelley, F. M. Sheehy, Joseph Luff, George Robley, and W. W. Blanchard are appreciated among us. Come again, brethren.

R. BULLARD.

PERKINS, Oklahoma, Dec. 4.

Editors Herald:—The first proposition in our debate was closed last night; viz., "The Advent Christian Church is apostolic in all its teaching, organization, and practice." I did not attempt to tell what the Advents believed, but allowed Mr. Fritch to tell his own story, which I believe to be the only courteous and honorable method to pursue, and is treating our opponents as we would be treated. He brought out but two points that we cared to controvert; viz., the condition of the dead, and the time of setting up the kingdom of Christ.

As we have a separate proposition on the first issue, the discussion turned almost wholly on the Kingdom question. He spent most of his time in advocating points on which there were no difference, while he entirely ignored most of my proof texts in rebuttal, and those he did refer to he touched very lightly. I repeatedly urged upon him to bring out his organization and let us look at it, but he did not, but simply declared that they were organized on the word of God, and said "If you want to know any more about it, turn to it and read it." I think public opinion is so far largely in our favor and the Saints are rejoicing. Others will perhaps write you more fully.

Judge Masterson, the chairman, last night ruled him out of the use of any but English translations of the Bible. I told the chairman I did not object to his using whatever he wished, but the chairman insisted that we were discussing for the benefit of the common people and should not go where they could not follow. I would have preferred to let him have full swing, especially on the soul question, but of course we have nothing to lose in abiding the ruling of the chair. Mr. F. submitted by saying, "I don't care; I can whip him till he squeals on King James translation." So I suppose he will not complain hereafter.

Our affirmative commences to-night, and as this is a new place prejudice of course is high; but I feel calm and trustful. The responsibility of debate is always great, and to me not desirable; but to feel the sustaining power of the Spirit of truth is sweet indeed; and it helps one to occasionally brush up against other theories and mark the contrast.

Hopefully,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

MINERAL, Ohio, Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—I came to this point on the 3d inst., and began meetings in the town house, with fair attendance and good attention so far. I just closed a twelve days' meeting at Sand Ridge, near Millfield, on the 2d inst. We had been preceded there by a "Holiness" (?) man, who had succeeded in stirring up the people to some extent and had baptized two of those who bore the name of Latter Day Saints. One of them saw the error of her way and acknowledged and forsook the same. The other still holds on to the Holiness faith. The preacher was still working in reach of that point, and on Thanksgiving Day I went to hear him, and invited him to come back to Sand Ridge and occupy night about with me and compare doctrines; he said he would see what the Lord said about it; but later said he would not come, as it would result in the overthrow of all he had done on Sand Ridge. Just about as I expected, however.

Our meetings there were well attended, and people seemed interested, and some seemed able to draw the line between the gospel and error. While none accepted the gospel, some expressed being almost ready to obey. We think to go back again and hope that good may be done. We will likely continue at Mineral the remainder of this week.

Yours in the faith,

H. E. MOLER.

C. J. HUNT.

WYMAN, Mich., Nov. 26.

MR. C. J. HUNT, Deloit, Iowa,

Dear Sir:—The postmaster of this place handed me a letter from you respecting relics which you seem to have caught onto by some newspaper article. The postmaster did not know how to answer the different points, and as I have a large collection of the finds, handed it to me to answer, so I will try to give you what light I can.

Five years ago last month J. O. Scottford was building board fence near one of the mounds and dug up some pieces of pottery. This caused him to dig into the mound, where he found more pottery and bones. These mounds had up to this time been considered by the lumbermen, with some regard, as Indian burial mounds; but by further excavation found articles that could not possibly be the work of Indians. Clay caskets varying in size and shape have been unearthed by different ones at different times up to the present; also tablets, both clay and stone, besides copper plates, copper coin, stone type, or letters by which the characters were made in the clay when soft, have been found in the caskets. A variety of cups, vases, lamps, and pipes, have also been found.

The fact that there is a written or printed language traced on these caskets and tablets, with type or letters corresponding, proves that it was not Indian work; for it is known far and wide that Indians do not use a written language, but signs and tradition handed down from father to son. I have talked with old Indians about who made the mounds. The answer was, "do not know." I asked, "Did Indians made them?" The answer was, "No, they were here when Indian came." I have some over a hundred pieces, some eighteen caskets, ranging from ten to twenty-six inches long, from five to ten inches wide, all having the characters and all differing in the sphinx on top. Have caskets that I will sell from twenty-five to two hundred dollars; tablets from five to one hundred dollars; I am not anxious to sell and scatter them. Would like to sell in a lot. Mr. Castle says he has not received any word from you. Mr. Scottford has moved away. Time will fail to write more now. If I have not answered all your questions write me again.

Yours truly,

H. J. RICH.

P. S.—I will add that the caskets when found are sealed or cemented, water tight, and have to be sawed open, when we find type, copper coin, small tablets, etc. I have three yet unopened. Write again.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—I came to Blendsville one week ago yesterday to get the gospel tent safely sheltered for the winter. The Saints desired me to hold meetings, and as Bro. English was going to baptize another of Rev. Carlian's flock that day, and interest seemed to be planted, I consented to do so. Yesterday I preached both morning and evening, on the temporal law, by request. I am happy to say that many are coming up to the requirements of the law and heeding the injunction of the Spirit to come up higher, showing their faith by their works, as it should be. Preparations are being made for a Christmas entertainment.

I would like very much to go down into Arkansas but the way has not as yet opened, nor do I know when it will; but we will hope for the best. Brn. Ward and Erwin are there doing much good. They have held several debates and arranged for several others. Bro. T. J. Sheppard and Bro. Simmons are doing battle for the cause of Christ in their field. The presence of the gospel tent in the territory seemed to alarm the sectarian friends, so that two debates have been held since, and there seems to be a general waking up in a religious way. Bro. Sheppard commences a debate to-morrow with a Universalist at Maysville, Arkansas.

There are about forty-five dollars back on the tent yet and the money will have to be raised by the 15th of next month. If all those who have subscribed would pay in we would have nearly enough to finish paying for it. I sincerely hope all the Saints and friends interested in gospel work in this part of the vineyard will do all they can to help lift the debt. I hope to be able to make a complete report at the Angola conference of all moneys received and expended. We expect the tent will be in the hands of those in charge of missionary work so that the gospel may be carried to those who have never heard it before.

Please send in your contributions to me as soon as possible. Address all letters to Independence, Missouri, Box 437.

Your brother in bonds,

H. H. ROBINSON.

GOLDEN SPRINGS, Neb., Nov. 29.

Editors Herald:—Since October 11 I have ministered the word and ordinances of the gospel near this place, having preached in five different places, except one week at home looking after matters of interest; and while there I preached two sermons in Little Sioux besides administering to the sick near Magnolia.

The first of my labor was done in the district tent, being assisted by Brn. F. A. Smith and G. M. L. Whitman part of the time, the rest of the time by the local ministry. Tent work was continued till November 3, when on account of my voice failing slightly and the weather becoming colder it was thought advisable that I rest and the tent be stored away for the winter. For a week I was attending to business matters and arranging winter supplies for my family.

The tent work was pronounced a success, though none were baptized; yet, better than that, some wandering ones were led out of darkness into the light again, and are now rejoicing that God has considered them worthy of his thought and mercy. Much prejudice was removed and privilege of presenting the gospel to some was had, and of these some were heard to say that they did not expect to hear such preaching, and were led to marvel that a church representing such principles should have been so misunderstood, and wondered where such influences would lead them. Some who were ever active in opposing the Bible, or others' belief of the Bible, were led to silence upon many points, and concluded that we were indeed a strange people in our belief of the Bible and of the Christ, but could not see wherein our ideas were contrary to the right representation of Bible teachings but could see wherein other religious bodies had misrepresented Bible teachings, and that the arguments they had successfully used against others' ideas of the Christ would not do as argument against our views; and they as yet do not know how to remodel them to use against the Bible.

Since returning to the mission three weeks ago last night I have been preaching in schoolhouses, having excellent liberty and good audiences. Three were baptized last Sunday by Bro. Whitman, all adult people. The Spirit was present in power at the confirmation.

The Saints in this part are poor and have much to discourage them, but are struggling against many inconveniences, successfully retaining their love for God and his work and receiving his approval of their efforts by the Spirit's presence at their social meetings. The Sunday school, considering inconvenience resulting from being obliged to meet from house to house, is a success, and would put to shame some schools that have a pleasant and convenient place to meet. An effort is now being made to build a place for services to accord with their financial condition and prospects. Truly there are many noble-minded Saints scattered around these parts. I began at a new point last night, and will continue here several nights.

On account of poor crops for the two years past the people at various points seem not very anxious for meetings, and hesitate about sending invitations; and when it is suggested that we might hold services, they seem hardly able to care for the ministry. It almost seems like intruding upon them to take that that they need so badly for themselves and little ones, and for these reasons I have not pushed out to some places, although satisfied I would hardly have been justified to have left the points where I have been ministering and gone to new and untried points without a direct and urgent invitation and such invitation be borne witness to by the Spirit as one to be accepted.

It cheers me to see the prosperous efforts of some of my brethren, and would that all might enjoy equal prosperity continually. How I long for the time when that greater spiritual endowment will be given to the ministry, although I am convinced this would bring added responsibility and sacrifice. I do so long for the redemption of Zion, and am trying to do my part to hasten that time.

Hopefully,

J. F. MINTUN.

GRANT'S PASS, Ore., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—I am impressed deeply this evening by being blessed with a heavenly visitor. He gave his name as Nephi the first. He was a powerful man, standing at least seven feet high with long gray hair and beard. He had a breastplate on, which was full of scars, as though it had been pierced with many darts. He showed us his arms that had been chained while crossing the deep, the scars of which still remain on those blessed arms.

He had six plates measuring about sixteen inches long, that were written in a language to us unknown. He said the people of the north country were coming very soon and would bring those plates and would reveal them to God's people here. He furthermore said that those plates, the Bible, and the Book of Mormon, were the three witnesses on earth, as the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are the three in heaven.

He told me to write to the Herald and tell of those things and to say that within the next ten years, in fact during the ten years to come, perilous times should be, weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. "But," said he, "keep the commandments" and it would be well with us.

He called a Lamanite and blessed him; told him he was one of his brethren; that he should read the plates, and should waft the good news in many places, and should be the means of turning many souls to God, and yet this Lamanite does not belong to the church and has only heard of it in the last three weeks.

This Lamanite is very anxious to see an elder. He wants to be baptized; so if any elder should be passing through or can possibly come, do so, we will give you the best we have. I would send money for expenses if I had it, but I have not.

Now, dear brethren, I have complied with the command of Nephi and have ridden my skirts of the blood of all men as best I can, though I don't know what benefit this will be to the public. God knows.

Your brother,

J. J. LEABO.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—Bro. J. F. McDowell has favored the Galland's Grove branch with a series of lectures this week and is to continue part of next week; subject, The divinity of the Book of Mormon; using a sciopticon, giving panoramic views to illustrate or prove his points. It is very instructive and edifying. Good attendance, and good order prevails with few exceptions, considering the need of the house being darkened. Some thoughtless one would say or do something to cause some one to laugh, which should not be done. These are religious services and good behavior is highly necessary if it is a "Magic lantern."

IF CHRIST CAME TO ST. LOUIS.

IF Christ came to this city, what would he find? So far as the social or political status of this city is concerned, the same evils that curse humanity which Mr. Stead, of London, England, found in the city of Chicago, we may easily believe, might have been unearthed by him in our own. But there are some things, which we, as a professed follower of Jesus Christ, have deemed necessary of attention, which Mr. Stead seems to have been oblivious to or never to have become interested in.

There is little dispute in this world that Jesus Christ was a moralist of the highest type; but he was, or claimed to be more than that. The evils of the state did, and would, were he to come to this city to-day, we have every reason to believe, receive his just criticism and disapproval, but we desire to show that Jesus Christ did not come to reform Cesar's government, on the contrary he said, "My kingdom is not of this world." To those who sought to involve him in a quarrel with the state, he said:—

Render to Cesar the things that are Cesar's, and to God the things that are God's.—Mark 12:17.

The teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles enjoin loyalty and support to that government that protects the citizen in his right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" but if the prophetic declaration that the "kingdoms of this world" are to become the "kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ," is ever fulfilled, it will not be by putting new wine into old bottles; and while the greater always includes the less, yet no excellence of man in the art of government has ever been able to satisfy high ideals; they are all wanting as viewed from the standpoint of perfection. A perfect government must proceed from a perfect source; not only that, but there must be a power and a will to execute.

"There is none good [absolutely] but God." "His ways are perfect," and his government should be sought after and sustained. Thus Jesus has instructed, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." (Matt. 6:33.) Yes, Jesus Christ was a philosopher and a moralist; but he was more,—more than moralists or even theologians will allow or perhaps discuss. Jesus Christ was a churchman; he was a doctrinarian and a dogmatist.

Against some or all of these things, not only the moralists and reformers of our day, but theologians and doctors of divinity are arrayed as being either unnecessary or impracticable so far as absolute salvation in the kingdom of God is concerned. Such a position makes the claim of authorized representation of Jesus Christ an absurdity, as we shall try to show:—

Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever.—Heb 13:8.

We are trying to locate him as he was eighteen hundred years ago and argue his unchangeability. Jesus Christ was, for example, a baptist. He enjoined baptism as a necessity; nothing clearer than that is shown in the record. Baptism was necessary in order to "fulfill all righteousness," "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Notwithstanding these and many other authoritative texts, we are taught by professed representatives of Jesus Christ, that salvation precedes baptism and thus, in reason, precludes the necessity of it. A popular clergyman, in an address before the Young Men's Christian Association, said that when the Golden Rule was added to a young man's rule of life, he is already in the kingdom of God; yet Jesus Christ said:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3: 5.

Dr. Briggs, whose orthodoxy has recently been on trial, said, "When we preach doctrinal theology men turn away from us; they turn from those doctrinal fluctuations and take refuge in the eternal religion of Christ that knows no doctrine." Indeed! The record reports Jesus Christ as saying,

My doctrine is not mine.—John 7: 16.

John, the beloved disciple, who was commissioned to represent him, says:—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.—2 John 9.

A man may have religion, be a moralist in theory and practice, may even be a member of a church, and still, according to John and Christ it may be true, that, "he hath not God." Paul says in Hebrews 6: 1, 2 that the doctrine of Christ includes the doctrine of baptisms. Evidently, then, the doctrine of Jesus Christ has something to do with a man's salvation in the kingdom of God.

If the Golden Rule includes all the essentials of Christ's teachings, and its precepts added to the rule of a young man's life, constitutes him "a member of the kingdom of God," as affirmed by the Rev. Mr. Reed, then salvation as good as Jesus Christ's was known in this world before his time, and this mission thus loses its color, character, and strength. If the doctrine of Confucius or anyone else will bring salvation, the name of Jesus Christ ceases to be "the only name given under heaven or among men whereby we can be saved," and Christ's own statement, "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me," is subject to qualification and criticism.

Neither the life nor the death of Jesus Christ alone has particular pre-eminence over the many martyrs for the truth that saves humanity. The blood of Jesus Christ was only the ratification and seal of "a covenant made upon better promises" than anything that had ever gone before, or has ever or can be substituted for it since. This covenant man is a partner to by his own volition or will, for it is only "if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another." Walking signifies action.

This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.—John 17: 3.

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine.—John 7: 17.

He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.—2 John 9.

Wherein, then, lies the objection to church, to dogma, or to doctrine, about which the religious world is so divided? Is it because of their impracticability or their fruitlessness? The once famous preacher, of Murray Hill, New York, Adirondack Murray, said in his last public utterance on religion, at Music Hall, in Boston, "We need not say that the religion of Jesus Christ was a failure, for it has never been tried; when it is tried it will be a complete success." Jesus said to a crowd of churchmen or religionists:—

But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.—Matt. 15: 9.

Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.—John 15: 9.

To substitute the doctrines of men or the traditions of their forefathers for Christ's doctrine, and then upon failure of rational fruit and fulfilled promise to ignore his law and counsel, reflects a poor following or rather no following at all. To illustrate, we are told by sincere and devout people, that baptism, as a dogma, or doctrine, notwithstanding the clearness of the record, in practice has proved more productive of dissension and disunion than of unity and practical, intellectual, moral, or spiritual growth. Are they right? We unhesitatingly answer, yes. Why are they right? We answer, for reasons that are already given.

The gospel as he delivered it was "the power of God unto salvation," and was witnessed and confirmed by and through the presence and power of the promised Comforter "with signs following," an authorized representation. "Go ye into all the world." Who is to go? Everybody? Anybody? To preach anything or everything that the imagination of man may suggest or his opinion allow, and expect the indorsement and ratification of heaven? Paul said:—

No man taketh this honor unto himself.—Heb. 5: 4.

Paul's commission also was from Jesus Christ. He neither received it nor was taught it by men. This man, Jesus Christ, "because he liveth ever hath an unchangeable priesthood," and those called by him should be sustained by him as in days of old.

Who [Christ Jesus] also hath made us able ministers of the New Testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.—2 Cor. 3: 6.

Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God.—1 Cor. 4: 1.

Christ's chosen ministry after the unchangeable order and priesthood were empowered and commissioned to teach, baptize, and to administer the Spirit through obedience and conformity to the doctrine of, and by the laying on of hands. Sprinkling, pouring, immersion is not necessarily gospel baptism, Christian baptism.

Except a man be born of water and of the [not a] spirit, he cannot ["see" nor] enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3: 5.

The fact that men or babes are sprinkled or put under the water does not prove that they are born of God or baptized according to the ancient gospel covenant.

Again, Jesus Christ was a churchman; not only a member, but he originated, formulated, and established a church of his own. "If Jesus Christ should come to this earth to-day would he attend our church?" was the theme some time ago in one of his sermons of the Rev. David Utter of the Universalist Church of Chicago. A great text, sure enough! If Christ came to this city next Sunday, what church would he attend? Which one, to be sure? He belonged to a church, or the church belonged to him. He said, you know, "my church."

Upon this rock I will build my church.—Matt. 16: 18.

That's the church he will be likely to visit. Suppose you should meet him next Sunday morning and he should ask you, where is the church of Jesus Christ? could you, my reader, in this great city show him where it is located? Jesus Christ had a church when he went away; will he find it when he comes, or will it be so changed that its own father or author will not know it? If he has a church in this city, by what tokens may we identify it? By the largest congregation? By the costly magnificence in sensual display? Because in this church they say and repeat, Lord, Lord? The Pharisees had all that, but of them Jesus said:—

Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.—Mark 7: 7.

Jesus said, "My church." He was then a church member; he founded and named a church did he not? Has it been preserved in unity and identity through "the dark ages"? Has the Reformation given it back to us? If not, is it a necessity for humanity today? Supposing, my reader, we leave the opinions of men and go back to the record, the New Testament, where first and particularly, the Church of Christ is compared to the body of a man:—

And he is the head of the body, the church.—Col. 1: 18.

Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church.—Col. 1: 24.

And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body.—Eph. 1: 22, 23.

There is ONE BODY.—Eph. 4: 4.

One body, one church, not two nor one hundred. There may be congregations of the same or the one organization, the same church; see Revelation 2: 7, but the unity of the Spirit of truth and of God was preserved only by the fellowship and the union, by being baptized by one Spirit into one body (1 Cor. 12: 13), and not into scores of protesting, warring factions. But, we are told that "in essentials all agree." Let us see. Do you not know that all professed Christians do not agree that any church or organization is an essential factor unto man's salvation in the kingdom of God? In 1 John 1: 7, we read:—

But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

Do all that call themselves Christian; Catholics, Protestants, Unitarians, Adventists, Methodists, Disciples, or what not, truly "have fellowship one with another"? Let us see. In Matthew 18: 15-17 inclusive, we read:—

Moreover if thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

My neighbor is a Presbyterian, I am a Methodist, Disciple, Catholic, perhaps. He has injured me, offended, or personally taken undue advantage of me. I undertake to follow out the teachings of Christ. I go to my church officers, or to his, or to anybody's church officers, and make complaint as Christ directs his church in the New Testament to do. What will I receive? I would be treated as a lunatic, I would be told to settle my case in the courts of men or somewhere else. They "had no jurisdiction over his church." This alone destroys the modern argument of unity or identification of all modern churches that profess to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ. Where is the Church of God and of Christ? Perhaps some of my readers have tried fellowship and communion with one or even perhaps several of these "churches," and yet are puzzled or dissatisfied.

Do you want to find the church, his church? By what kind of an advertisement would you be able to do it? Suppose you should find posted in the public highway an advertisement like this: "Lost, a child," or, "Strayed, a horse." No other description. You would be a long time finding it, for children differ in appearances or in character as do animals and—churches. My reader, will you lay aside your prejudices and preëducation for a moment, and with the New Testament for a guide, and "by the word of God that liveth and abideth forever," seek to establish a conclusion in this, to us, important matter?

Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, . . . unto the church of God which is at Corinth.—1 Cor. 1: 1, 2.

Here we have found the Church of God, have we not? Is there any doubt about the "orthodoxy" of that church? Farther:—

Now ye [this same church] are the body of Christ and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Cor. 12: 27, 28.

We have now found in the Bible, the New Testament, a partial description of some of the things that were a constitutional part of that institution which Jesus referred to when he said, "I will build my church," and of that organization which Paul refers to as the "one body." But, says the objector, Paul refers in the thirty-first verse to a "more excellent way," and that's the way we are now in. A more excellent way than Christ's appointment of not only apostles and prophets and miracles and gifts of healings, but also of teachers, and helps, and governments; all these to be dispensed with, warred against by Christians? Let us see, for "charity rejoiceth in the truth." The New Testament, this writing of Paul's included, was not divided as now, by chapters or verses until the thirteenth and sixteenth centuries, and this letter of Paul's must be taken as a whole, and Paul goes on to say,— Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.—1 Cor. 14: 1.

He then proceeds to instruct and regulate in regard to their use, and closes thus:—

If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord. But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant. Wherefore, brethren, covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.—1 Cor. 14: 37-39.

Let us again inquire concerning the purpose Christ had in view in establishing or bestowing these gifts upon all in his church and see if it confirms the modern argument of being "no longer needed." In Ephesians 4: 4-11 Paul informs us again, that Jesus Christ,—

When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. . . . And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors, and teachers.

What for? To establish the church, as we are told? Paul says that they were given:—

For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body [or the church] of Christ.—Eph. 4:12.

How long? Until the death of the apostles? O no! but,— Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.—Eph. 4:13.

Have we all got there? Has the world all got to that yet? Have not only Christians but the pagan world also arrived to “a unity of the faith?” What was the object to be attained by this unity?

That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.—Eph. 4:14.

Not now only, but henceforth, they were no more to be tossed to and fro, etc. If the world has been and is being “tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine” that has since arisen why not give the true reason as did John Wesley, that these “extraordinary gifts” were not withdrawn by our heavenly Father from his church because no longer needed, “but because the Christian world had all turned heathen again, and had only a dead form left.” As well might we say that having established the United States Government for the purpose indicated in the Declaration of Independence, having seated George Washington as president; having organized a senate and house of representatives with the judiciary, to then dispense with all these officers, change its form or laws as first founded, and still call it the identical government as founded by our fathers; or to allow, for example, Jefferson Davis or anybody or everybody else to set up any kind of an institution, frame any kind of a code or rule of conduct, institute any kind of ordinance almost—fill the office in any way that the opinion of men would suggest and still call it the government of our fathers, the government of the United States which they founded and for the purposes indicated in the constitution of this country.

Jesus Christ promised signs to follow the believer, not apostles alone, and no limit as to age or time. If all the promises of God are yea and not nay in Christ Jesus (2 Corinthians 1:20), how can we expect so great a thing as his power to raise us up at the last day, and to give us eternal life, when he cannot or will not fulfill his first promise to the believer and obedient to his gospel? How can you tell a true believer anyway? Well and truly did Paul say to Timothy and prophesy, “That in the last days perilous times shall come,” for men would have, “a form of godliness but denying the power thereof.” (2 Timothy 3:1-5.)

Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you.—Acts 1:8.

What was one manifestation of that power upon Pentecost day? Every man heard through the gift of God, bestowed upon, not only apostles, but “upon each of them.”

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.—Acts 2:4.

The practical test not only of Christ's existence, but also of his ability and willingness to identify his church, to guarantee his true believer and follower against the assaults of infidelity, and do away with the need of apology for his unfulfilled promises, belong to the necessities of our time. Thus, in “Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world,” Christ's presence through his promised representative, the ancient Holy Ghost, with its gifts adapted to the understanding and necessities of all classes, rich or poor, learned or unlearned with an authorized administration in his church to-day, proves its existence, and without these his church does not exist.

Once more, remember, the Church of Christ,—Jesus Christ; for his name was to be “called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins;” “at the name of Jesus,”—not Christ alone—“every knee shall bow,” etc. This church of Jesus Christ, remember, which is compared to the body of a man, this body has been destroyed or disorganized by the apostasy foretold by the Savior, by his apostles, and by prophets in the Old Testament also, and as certified to us by history, ecclesiastical and profane. Its eyes were gone, its members destroyed, or buried out of use since the days of Constantine by popular and man-made substitutes. The Spirit withdrawn, the body dead, so far as the life promised through the gifts of the Holy Ghost, by its great head is concerned, and while that “true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world,” still shines, while the moral excellences revealed in the letter are mingled with that of heathen philosophy, and by the eloquence of the natural spirit in man, something called the gospel is taught, something called the Church of Christ exists, but discarding even his name and substituting the name of some man or woman,—that discards his doctrine, denies his power, is being established, and as a result we see on every hand hosts of people dissatisfied with the cold and costly formality and “vain repetition” of ritualism who are seeking entertainment or satisfaction in the Salvation Army, among Faith Curists, Christian Scientists, or the signs and wonders of occultism, spirit phenomena, or what not, or perhaps becoming disgusted with everything bearing the name of religion.

I “know my sheep, and am known of mine,” said the Savior. If Christ came to this city to-day, how would you know him? You will need to know beforehand, my reader, for “when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ,” it will be too late to rectify mistakes. If Christ came to this city, would you expect to recognize him by the clothes he wore, by rich association, or will you be likely to find him anywhere in the popular crowd that throng the broad way?

Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever.—Heb. 13:8.

Are you willing to take up his cross and follow the Christ of the first century? Are you willing to recognize the one body, his church, if indeed you do find it? Are you willing to become a “lively stone” in that building which the Jews once rejected and whose example Gentiles are prone to follow? But one fate awaits all who reject his counsels and his law,

He that . . . climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.—John 10: 1.

On the plain of Shinar, they built a tower, heavenward, but God confounded their language and the place was called Babel. Modern Babel, "Babylon, the Great" (confusion) is building her towers. Are you thus engaged?

Come out of her, my people.—Rev. 18: 4.

In contradistinction to this modern Babel we call the attention of those who have eyes to see and ears to hear, to the fact that as "it is written," and according not only to the old, but the New Testament Scriptures also, God, not a council of men, acting as he always has in the past, has restored, not reformed, but restored the gospel and church of Jesus Christ. If Christ should come to this city, to his church, it would be that church, his bride, the Lamb's wife despised though it may be by the rich or haughty who throng the "wide gate," and the "broad way,"—it will be that church that though now absent from in body, he still owns and blesses according to his covenant made when he went away; the everlasting, unchangeable, and now, angel restored gospel of Jesus Christ. Are you ashamed of this gospel?

A CASE OF HEALING.

FAILURE OF THE FAITH CURE.

SEVERAL weeks ago Mrs. Nathan Yates, a most worthy woman living in the Silver Grove suburb, was attacked with typhoid fever, but the malady appeared to be yielding under the treatment of one of the most skillful physicians of the city. About one week ago, however, when the physician called at the house to see the afflicted woman, he was informed by her mother that his services were no longer needed and that another practitioner had been secured for her daughter. Upon being asked who the new physician was the old woman replied, the Lord Jesus Christ. Inquiry developed the fact that the sick woman had been induced to try the noted "faith" cure, the medium by which it was applied being one of the leading members of "The Saints," a religious sect holding forth at Mooresville, a small hamlet five miles north of this city, and that she takes no medicine, but was depending entirely on "faith" and the laying on of hands.

Yesterday after the sick woman had been under the exclusive care of the "Saints" for five days, the physician was called in, and found the patient in a most critical condition with but small prospect of recovery. Mr. Yates, husband of the woman, was stricken by the same malady about one week after his wife was taken down. He had no confidence in the faith cure, but stuck to the regular practice and is doing well with every prospect of speedy recovery.—Louisville Times.

NEW ALBANY "SAINTS" MAKE A DENIAL.

Elders and members of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints object to an article that appeared in the Times several days ago in reference to the alleged failure to cure Mrs. Nathan Yates, of the Silver Grove suburb, who is critically ill of typhoid fever, and who has been under the treatment of an elder, a resident of Lamoni, Iowa, who is here on missionary work.

They claim that the sick woman, when the elder came to her bedside, had been having hemorrhages every hour, and that her extremities had taken on the rigor that precedes death. She was anointed with oil and hands were laid on her by the elder, as directed by the law (see Mark 6:13, Mark 16:18, and James 5:14), and during that day she was able to be up for a few minutes while her couch was being rearranged.

This sect was confounded with "The Saints" who hold forth at Mooresville, while they are in reality separate and distinct, having nothing in common in their religious beliefs.—Louisville Times.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed you will find clipping from the Louisville Times concerning a remarkable case of healing that took place here under the law and is attracting considerable attention in this place. The sick lady, Sr. Anna Yates, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Perkins, who lives near Galena, was healed by the power of God, and the Times published a squib under the heading of "Failure of the faith cure," and accordingly I sent an answer to it under the heading of "A correction," and they published another squib in lieu of my reply, which I inclose. If you see proper, use it, as there is considerable inquiry concerning this case; for it is a clear clean case of healing without any drawbacks.

I have waited until now to write for publication, for fear there might be an error in nursing the sick lady and a relapse might occur; but, thank God, she is getting along so nicely, both her and her husband, that we feel it a duty. It makes us feel good when we see those manifestations of the goodness of God to us. I send you the article I wrote for the Louisville Times just as it should have appeared in that paper. We are not surprised at disappointments, though we argued the matter with the editor at length, but of no avail.

As ever in hope,

WM. H. KELLEY.

CORRECTION.

Editors Times:—Will you permit me to correct an article which appeared in the Times of Monday, the 11th, under the heading of "Failure of the faith cure;" in which reference is made to Mrs. Nathan Yates, who lives in the Silver Grove suburb. The article stated that the fever was yielding under the treatment of a skillful physician; when the facts were the reverse. The physician referred to, after doing everything he could for the afflicted lady, told the relatives, who were attending the afflicted family, that Mrs. Yates was beyond human aid and that she might be kept alive with the aid of stimulants until her relatives, who live in the country, could be summoned; he also told two gentlemen, who are neighbors of the family, the same. Then a messenger was sent after the relatives and elders of the Church of "Latter Day Saints," whose headquarters are at Lamoni, Iowa, and not at Mooresville as stated; neither do they hold forth at Mooresville, a hamlet five miles north of this city.

At the time of sending for the elders she was having hemorrhages every hour, and she was cold up to her body. It is not true that when the skillful physician called to see the afflicted lady he was informed that his services were no longer needed, for he dismissed himself; and that he called to see Mr. Yates, who is also afflicted with typhoid fever. Also it is not true that when this skillful physician was called in, the sick lady had been under the care of the Saints for five days, he found her in a most critical condition and without hope of recovery; for he was informed that she had been up, while the nurse made up the bed, that she has not had a hemorrhage since she was administered to by the elders. The physician gave the sick lady up on Thursday night at eleven o'clock, and on Friday morning she was anointed with oil, and hands were laid upon her by the elders as directed by the law. (See Mark 6:13 and 16:18; also James 5:14.) And she was that day out of bed, while it was put in order. It is true she has not taken any medicine since, from the fact that she does not need any.

Mr. Yates may not have any confidence in the "faith cure," for he is not a believer in the faith, as it is taught by the Latter Day Saints; but Mrs. Yates is a member of that body.

There is a church at Mooresville, a hamlet five miles north of this city, called Saints, or Sanctified People; but Mrs. Yates and the elders who administered to her do not belong to that church, but to the "Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints," over which Joseph Smith (son of the Prophet Joseph Smith) is Presiding Elder. The old woman referred to in the article, is an estimable lady, who lives near Galena, Mrs. Perkins, who is also a member of the same church.

This case of remarkable healing by the power of God may seem strange to some, but to those acquainted with the faith of the Latter Day Saints it is not strange.

A desire for the truth has caused me to write this.

OLIVE OIL.

DR. REMONDINO says that much "olive oil" is sold which has nothing of the olive about it save the name. Much genuine olive oil is of an inferior grade. A good, pure oil is valuable, all others worthless. Pure olive oil has been well known and freely used by the members of the Continental medical profession in all forms of chest trouble, but in this country apparently it does not receive as much attention as its valuable properties and its successful use would seem to merit. From the earliest moments of infantile life—and we might add, as early as its first bath—olive oil will be found a valuable application for the new-born infant, soothing and nourishing the delicate skin.

One of the most important things to have always on hand in the nursery, therefore, is a bottle of the best olive oil.

In a large proportion of the diseases of infancy and childhood it will be found of the greatest value. It is especially useful in all forms of bronchial disease, whether acute or chronic. It relieves the congestion of the mucous lining of the air passages, maintains an equable temperature, affords a soothing warmth, and is, without doubt, highly nutritious. The oil should be slightly warmed, then the patient's chest should be bathed profusely with it. Afterward a strip of clean, old, and soft shirting, large enough to completely envelop the whole chest, and thoroughly saturated with the oil, should be carefully applied. Over this a larger piece of dry cotton cloth must be firmly, but not too tightly, adjusted. —Homeopathic Envoy.

Conference Minutes.

FLORIDA.

Conference was held at Santa Rosa branch, near Milton, Florida, November 22-24; an organization was effected by electing T. C. Kelley president, and S. D. Allen secretary. Appropriate remarks by T. ## Sunday School Associations.

NOTICES.

To the Sunday school workers in the Far West district I will say that the reason the minutes of the last district Sunday school convention held at Kingston, Missouri, have not appeared in the Saints' Herald yet is this; that on my way home from Hamilton, Missouri, on October 7, 1895, I caught a heavy cold in my eyes; the result of that and other troubles was that I have since lost the sight of my right eye; but will attend to it as soon as my eyesight will permit.

BUSINESS NOTICE.

Herald Office agents and the ministry are requested to take notice that no commission can be allowed on sales of the fifty cent edition of the Saints' Hymnal. The General Conference fixed the price of the book at about actual cost, hence it is impossible to pay a commission. Those remitting may deduct the cost of making remittances—the postage and cost of postal orders.

The usual commission to agents and the traveling ministry will be allowed on sales of the higher priced binding—no commission on the fifty cent edition.

Those who first subscribed will first be supplied. The first edition has been bought and now is being mailed. Others will be ready in two weeks.

Send in orders for the Saints' Hymnal. See prices on Herald cover.

FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager,
Lamoni, Iowa.

PAY UP.

Readers of the Herald and Ensign, have no doubt taken notice of the earnest appeals made by the Bishop of the church to the church on the finance question;—and as quite a number are indebted to me for church books, sold from two to six years ago; and as some of said number have moved away, their whereabouts not being known to me; I take this method of asking the ones thus indebted to please forward amounts due to my address at once, so that I can make a settlement with the church, to whom the books belonged, as I feel unable to pay the debts of others out of my own pocket. Kindly respond and oblige.

NOTICES

The committee on Archæology again ask aid from all who can and will assist in the work of preparing a map of Ancient America, based on the book of Mormon account of it. Our last call was responded to by a few, which is much appreciated by the committee.

There are several that we hear of using maps and charts but they have not responded to our request. Will these brethren please take notice. Send the location of cities

"lands," and rivers, with reasons assigned for such location. We want and intend to make a definite report at next General Conference.

All who render such assistance will be duly credited with honor to whom honor is due.

Please help at once and greatly oblige,

PASTORAL.

To All Whom it May Concern; the Nebraska Mission Field in Particular:—For reasons best known to himself, Bro. C. H. Porter has resigned his charge as sub-missionary in charge of above field, and the General Conference mission year is so far advanced we have not deemed it necessary to appoint a successor. Therefore the Saints of that field may report direct to the missionary in charge, A. H. Smith, Lamoni, Iowa, for the balance of mission year, who will attend to all necessary business referred to him and will make an effort to visit the mission ere the end of the year.

A. H. SMITH,
JOS. R. LAMBERT,
Associates in Charge.

To the Saints Throughout Idaho; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—We know not how to reach you all better than through the Herald columns. I have been laboring to the extent of my ability, mostly in new fields, covering a portion of the country from Weiser River to Malad City, and my experience appears to justify the conclusion that seems to be forcing itself upon me that the opportune moment has come for a united, earnest effort on the part of the Saints to spread the "glad tidings of great joy."

In all the openings I have made there is demand for more labor. Many are investigating and some are convinced. The Spirit seems to be moving upon the hearts of the people, and though we encounter much prejudice, it readily gives way where we are permitted to remain a little while.

Now, dear Saints, why have we embraced this cause? Is it because of its truth, because the promises it has offered are sure, and that we have hope therein? Then we should remember our duties. Can we shirk our responsibilities in this work and escape the consequences? Do we presume that because we have been baptized our salvation is insured? Our Savior said, "He that will not take up his cross and follow me, is not worthy of me." What sacrifice did he make and what would be our reasonable service? Will the Saints please answer these questions candidly for themselves, considering that the Master said that when they were warned they should warn their neighbors? Again, in the revelation of 1887, we read, "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that tolleth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all." If we are not united in the accomplishment of this great work how can we be one? And, Except ye are one ye are none of mine, is the divine edict. Will we rejoice together in the final victory if we are unwilling to share together the toil and heat of battle? Saints, have you ever made a sacrifice for the work that you regret? If it be true, could you do so, and if in doubt about it is there a sacrifice too great to prove it?

Can we afford to sit idle while the fields are widening before us and a golden opportunity to win crowns is presented us? But two missionaries were appointed this field from General Conference, and we have permitted the hands of one to remain tied, while I have been crippled in the work for want of means. Bro. R. J. Anthony expects to be with us awhile and his labors are needed in some of the new fields recently opened up, where it is difficult to prosecute the work without means. Can and will we assist to retain him in this part of his field awhile? Our missionary force ought to be many times increased. Can we hope to have our garments clear of the blood of this generation if we do not at least try to loosen the hands of present appointees?

Means for this mission can be sent to the district treasurer, William Johns, Samaria, Idaho, or to missionaries. Tithing and such should perhaps be sent to H. R. Evans, Bishop's agent, Malad City, Idaho. The Saints ought also to remember the Bishop's appeal for Temple Lot suit funds. Means sent to our district treasurer or Bishop's agent for that purpose would be forwarded by them.

Friends to the cause, and more especially those holding the priesthood, let us again appeal to you buckle on the armor and come to the rescue. I should like to hear from any and all parts of the State of the condition of the work. My present address is Hagerman, Idaho, where I have been called by the death of Sr. Sarah Secor and illness of Sr. Addie Condit.

In bonds,
S. D. CONDIT,
President Idaho District.

SMITH-FRITCH DEBATE.

The debate was held in Perkins, Oklahoma, beginning December 2. First proposition: Resolved that the Christian Advent Church which I, W. H. Fritch, represent, is apostolic in organization, doctrine, and practice. H. C. Smith denies. Our people have been rather slow to answer a challenge from Mr. Fritch, until he became quite noisy, when our representative came to the place of challenge. He learned that Mr. Fritch was advertising the debate a hundred miles away without informing our prother if the propositions were received in detail or not, and without his consent as to date and place, or having signed any rules to govern the debate. At last, when found, he signed propositions, rules, etc., but objected to the King James' Translation as standard of evidence, inserting the word "Bible" instead.

Mr. Fritch never so much as tried to show any organization, but argued strongly that it was not necessary, saying, "If I prove that what we teach is apostolic, that settles it." He quoted a passage to prove that the Christian graces were of their faith, and added, "The word 'practice' should not have been in the proposition." He endeavored to prove that the kingdom will never be set up until after Christ's second coming, and he made that his hobby to ride throughout the debate. He only mentioned that they had elders, deacons, and missionaries when he was pressed to it, and then said they had "apostles," giving the last of five meanings, which is "a public expounder." When Bro. Smith showed his trick he retorted, "I gave the meaning which suited me."

Bro. Smith showed so plainly that the kingdom is likened to various small things that would grow and increase without notice at first, but in the end would become great. The corn mentioned in Mark 4:26-28 and the mustard seed which is the "smallest of all seeds" mentioned in the following verses; also that the stone at the feet of the great image would roll forth crushing out the great powers until it filled the whole earth. Other things would germinate and begin unnoticed, continue to grow, increase, and spread as the leaven in the three measures of meal, etc., as found in Matthew 13:24-52. He also showed that the kingdom could not suffer violence from the days of John the Baptist (Matthew 11:12) unless it was set up prior to Christ's second coming. He proved that it was there, in their midst, "within you" or "among you" at the time of Christ. (Matt. 23:13.) He proved that the kingdom existed while it was breaking in pieces other kingdoms; that some were entering, others hindering, and still others being hindered from entering the kingdom in Christ's time.

Mr. Fritch affirmed that it would not be set up before but after Christ had put all things under his feet, having destroyed all other kingdoms and powers, then Christ would bring the kingdom already fully developed and complete. He made a labored effort on the image mentioned in Daniel, and finished with a sermon on the second coming of Christ.

We came here by request of missionary in charge, having just baptized two ladies in the Indian Territory, both of high respectability in their neighborhood, one a full-blood Indian. Sr. Tate is the only Latter Day Saint in this place. Her husband was once a class leader in the M. E. Church. They have done all in the way of supporting the meeting and us during the debate. Mr. Tate got a large room when we came and fitted it up with seats, stove, organ, fuel, etc. After preaching there awhile I got the use of the M. E. church for a week and our crowds increased gradually until the close.

Since writing the above, one more proposition has been discussed. Bro. Smith affirmed that the Latter Day Saints are in harmony with the Bible in organization, doctrine, and practice. He was wonderfully blessed. An outsider remarked that he spoke by inspiration. His first speech was a continued stream of eloquence, beautified and perfected by inspiration, logic, and truth. Our organization, doctrine, and practice were set before the large assembly while they seemingly marveled in eager delight. All the chief features of the glorious plan of redemption were invincibly set before them in a half-hour's speech. His thunder tones, rapid, yet with distinct and calm assurance, seemed to hold the awestricken assembly spellbound in anxious delight. We felt thankful for God's blessings and the truth.

Mr. Fritch agreed with our organization so completely in that proposition that it left him very little to object to—revelation, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, with baptism for the dead. The one thousand years reign of some, while others should not rise, seemed to weary him. He was very much confused. The points he raised were a medley of the most frivolous objections I ever heard from a public debater.

His fight against continued revelation, miracles, tongues, etc., was so trifling and commonplace that references are not worth their space in your columns. He was so very sorry we were deluded and deceiving almost the very elect; and yet he promised to believe and make no fight with us if Bro. Smith would work one miracle.

We have just got word to-night from one of his members, near Kingfisher, that but very few if any thought him worthy or able to meet our people, hence they had objected to him debating there with us.

We are all thankful for the blessings of God, and believing success will follow all faithful and humble efforts.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Western Maine district will meet with the Mountainville Saints at Deer Isle, Maine, December 28 and 29.

W. G. PERT, Pres.

There will be a conference held at Byrneville, Harrison County, Indiana, January 25 and 26, at ten a. m. Every official in the district is requested to report in person or by letter. All reports, branch or others, should be addressed to M. R. Scott, Jr., Wirt, Jefferson County, Indiana, district secretary. A resolution on district record, to the effect, "That all members whose names have been dropped from branch record, who had not been dealt with according to law, be placed back on the branch record." As this resolution is in harmony with the laws of the church I hope it will be honored.

M. R. SCOTT, Dist. Pres.

MARRIED.

POOLE—REHFELD.—At the home of Sr. S. A. Poole, near San Bernardino, California, Wednesday, November 27, 1895, at 11:30 a. m., Elder J. W. Gilbert officiating, Bro. William Poole and Miss Alice Rehfeld, both of San Bernardino. After the ceremony and congratulations, all partook of the sumptuous repast that was spread. Many valuable presents were presented by the guests, after the festivities. The happy pair departed for a short stay in Los Angeles. May peace and joy be with them.

DIED.

BEAL.—At Beal's Island, Jonesport, Maine, November 16, 1895, Eva B., daughter of Elihu and Sr. Lucinda Beal, aged 2 years, 10 months, and 18 days. Funeral sermon at the schoolhouse by J. N. Ames, to about all the people on the island, who seemed to want to show respect to this very remarkable little child. The angels came to claim their own, and carried her to the paradise of God.

BERRY.—At her home in Marshalltown, Iowa, November 12, 1895, Sr. Louisa Berry, whose maiden name was Griffith. She was born at Evansville, Indiana, December 1, 1841; was married December 28, 1875, to W. T. Berry at Marshalltown; was baptized September 7, 1872, at Newton, Iowa, by Elder John H. Lake. She had been afflicted with cancer and confined to her bed over eleven months, during which time she displayed Christian resignation as becomes a saint of God, her faith in the latter-day work remaining firm and unchanged. Short services were held at the house; remarks and prayer by Rev. Ward, the M. E. minister; interment in Riverside cemetery.

COFFMAN.—Charles Emro Coffman, son of John T. and Susan A. Coffman, was born September 20, 1861, in Appanoose County, moving with parents to Harrison County in 1865; united in marriage to Barbara Thompson in 1884 by Elder J. C. Crabb; died November 27, 1895, leaving a wife, three children, mother, four brothers, and a sister to mourn the loss. He was not a member of any church, but had expressed desires of serving God, and was honored by his neighbors and friends. Funeral services from L. D. S. chapel, Magnolia, Iowa, November 27, at eleven a. m. Sermon by Elder A. M. Fyrando, to a vast number of acquaintances.

HARVEY.—William O. Harvey died November 2, 1895, at Hampden, Ohio. His death was caused by a fall from a staging about eight feet high, which broke the neck bone. He was baptized at Kirtland, Ohio, some eight years ago, by William H. Kelley. He was 39 years, 9 months, and 2 days old at time of death. He leaves a wife. Funeral services by William H. Kelley.

DEREMER.—Bro. Joseph Deremer was born August 8, 1828, and died November 23, 1895, after an illness of not quite two days. Bro. Deremer has lived at Greenwood, Steuben County, New York, since he was a small boy. He accepted the restored gospel and was baptized by Bro. C. G. Lanphear, May 25, 1890, and has lived a consistent Christian life since then, always ready to do his part in the Master's work. His home has long been the home of the traveling elders who chanced to pass that way. His companion and three daughters, who still survive him, are all members of the church. Funeral sermon by Elder Isaac M. Smith, in the Disciple church, in the little town of Greenwood. He was a good man and will be sadly missed.

DO NOT MAKE THE BABY SHOW OFF TOO MUCH.

"Doctor, advise your young mothers and fathers against talking too much to their babies. The effects for harm of the constant activity of the infantile mind are incalculable. It should only unfold or develop gradually, and then, only as does the blood supply of the brain and body. A proper equilibrium between the body and mind should always be maintained. If the mind be developed too rapidly dangerous sequences may follow. Caution fathers and mothers, and save sons and daughters."—Medical Gleaner.

A great manufacturing company in Massachusetts recently paid their workmen, on Saturday evening, seven hundred ten-dollar bills, each bill being marked. By the following Tuesday, four hundred and ten of these marked bills were deposited in the bank by the saloon-keepers of the town. Four thousand and one hundred dollars had passed from the hands of workmen on Saturday night and Sunday, and left them nothing to show for this great sum of money but headaches and poverty in their homes. Well might these men cry out to the State: "Save us from ourselves!" and their hapless wives and children: "Save us from our husbands and fathers on the Lord's Day at least."—Father McSweeney, in Catholic World.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to rules agreed upon and published by the Herald Office, all whose subscriptions are one year overdue will be dropped from the mailing lists at the end of the year—December 31, 1895—provided, that if those who desire their papers continued and who will pay in a reasonable time, will so notify the office, their publications will be continued.

This applies to the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies.

It is desired that all will continue and so notify us, and make an effort to pay subscriptions as soon as possible.

It is our wish to increase, not to diminish the circulation of the church papers among the membership. All should read them.

FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS.

BY SR. HESTER S. E. YOUNG.

This work is now in press and will be ready before the Holidays.

It is the Life of Jesus, told in a simple and interesting way, adapted to the capacities of children. This little book is a gem among the literature provided for the children. It relates the important history of the Savior's life in such entertaining style as to awaken and keep the interest of little readers. It gives them a fair knowledge and truthful picture of the leading events of the Savior's life and prepares them to appreciate the narratives of the Gospels and New Testament to be studied in after years.

Bound in cloth, printed in large type; Price 20 cents.

HESPERIS

The poetical works of David H. Smith, youngest son of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It contains upwards of one hundred of the author's best compositions, many of which are excellent poems of a high order of merit; all containing sentiments of exalted type, and of true religious spirit. The author was gifted as a hymn writer and employed his talent in the production of sacred psalms and other sonnets of an elevating, inspiring nature. His sacred numbers are general favorites, and much used in the song services of public worship.

The book contains 194 pages. Elegantly printed, bound in cloth, stamped, gilt edges; price $1.50—a excellent birthday or holiday gift book.

THE GRADUALNESS OF REVELATION.

MUCH of the popular misunderstanding and perversion of the Scriptures can be traced to a failure to recognize the gradualness of revelation. Nine tenths of Colonel Ingersoll's diatribes upon the Bible are seen to be incorrigibly stupid when this principle is firmly grasped. He puts the whole Bible, as regards the present-day reader, upon one level of authority, and argues, for instance, that if we lived according to its teachings we should allow polygamy and slavery, or adjust our jurisprudence to that of the primitive Hebrews. Christian people, even Christian theologians, have not always been guided by the true principle in their interpretations of the Scriptures. It is assumed that if a thing is in the Bible that is the end of debate. It is not necessary to inquire to whom or in what circumstances a command was given. And because of this false theory the Scriptures have been held to teach a great number of things which they strongly condemn.

Now the Scriptures themselves explicitly, and over and over again, repudiate this principle of interpretation. They tell us that all the light did not come at once, but as men were able to bear it. Revelation broadened and brightened. The question at issue is not whether one part of the Bible is more inspired than another; the question at issue is as to the method of revelation, and that is simply a question of fact. Did God give Enoch or Abraham all the light he gave Paul or John? Are we to construe the civic and social and moral ideals that God allowed and legislated for, in the early ages, as authoritative for us? Why, the very words in which we describe the Christian revelation, when we speak of it as "the new dispensation," are a sufficient answer. To be sure, it is vastly easier to treat the Bible as a Statute book, any part of which is equally applicable to present conditions. But, unfortunately, not only the Bible's account of itself, and the plain facts which we cannot ignore, do not allow us to treat it in this way, but the moment we do so we are landed in contradictions which the Christian mind repudiates.

Take, for instance, a single example. In the last book of the Proverbs we read: "It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes to drink strong drink; lest they drink and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted." That counsel is in full accord with New Testament teaching. The ruler and the judge must have clear heads. But what are we to make of the next sentence? "Give strong drink to him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink and forget his poverty and remember his misery no more." That last exhortation is about as bad counsel as could be given. The worst thing that a person in affliction can do is to resort to drink. How shall we explain it? It is not difficult to see. The writer set up a barrier against the intemperance of magistrates; his vision did not go far enough to discern the evil effects of strong drink for others. But the New Testament writers see further, and no man can to-day honestly quote that counsel in the Proverbs as God's permission to indulge in intoxicants.

The Bible is a temperance book. And it is not our own ideas of right and wrong that are to interpret the Scriptures, but the final revelation is to interpret the earlier. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Public Opinion.

CARNEGIE ON THE USE OF WEALTH.

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE, in his speech at Pittsburg, on Tuesday at the dedication of the magnificent public library that he has presented to the people of that city, made certain statements about the value and uses of personal wealth that are worthy of serious consideration both by those who like Mr. Carnegie are rich and those whose tendency it is to berate without discrimination the possessors of independent means. After declaring that one of the most difficult problems with which mankind has to deal is the doing of genuine good and not mischief by the giving of money, he asserted that under existing industrial conditions, not to be changed in modern days, but which may be modified in the course of centuries, surplus wealth must sometimes go into the hands of a few. However, the number of these, he declared, will become less and less under the present conditions, which are rapidly causing a more general distribution of wealth. Then he expressed his deep pity for those who possess wealth and nothing else and who fail to see in the surplus that fortune has given them a splendid opportunity for bettering the physical, moral, and mental conditions of the poorer classes. He drew a sharp distinction between the philanthropy which helps the masses to obtain a greater enjoyment of the physical appetites and that form of giving which contributes to the intellectual elevation of men and women whose conditions prevent their early education. The library which Mr. Carnegie has given is a magnificent example of well-directed charity and philanthropy. Its architectural beauties and the specimens of art which it contains are wholesome influences, and the thousands of volumes which it will eventually offer Pittsburg's people cannot fail to prove a medium of enlightenment and development. Mr. Carnegie creates and Pittsburg supports by taxation this library.—Washington Star.

Thos France 5 96

BREACHES OF TRUST.

THE extent of the defalcations of persons holding positions of trust and responsibility in this country is not generally known. Such cases are reported in the newspapers from time to time, but many more are not made public, and so the aggregate amount of losses in that relation does not become a part of our business statistics. But since the advent of those insurance companies which guarantee the fidelity of employes, the figures have become more accessible, and they reveal a degree of dishonesty of this sort that has not been suspected. According to a circular recently issued by one of these companies, it appears that the defalcations for 1893 amounted to over $19,000,000, and in 1894 to more than $25,000,000. Including the very small losses which were not recorded, it is estimated that the total sum of money misappropriated by faithless custodians of other people's funds during the last year was not less than $30,000,000. This great loss was distributed generally among the various kinds of business, and there does not seem to have been an exceptional proportion of defalcation in any one line. The banks suffered most because they handle the most money, but other corporations were correspondingly defrauded, and individual merchants and manufacturers of all classes had a similar experience in the order of the importance of their operations.

It is urged by the "fidelity guarantee" companies that some remedy should be found for this grave evil. The defalcations come largely, they claim, from the carelessness of employers in allowing trusted employes to have practically full swing in the management of finances, and in reposing such unlimited confidence in these employes that there is no regular or thorough examination of accounts. It is taken for granted that a cashier or treasurer is honest, and he is left to perform his duties without proper supervision. The fact is notorious that when breaches of trust occur, the employers are greatly surprised, and declare that they never had the least suspicion that they were being robbed, although the circumstances are usually such that suspicion would certainly have been aroused if reasonable care had been taken in the protection of their own interests. These companies insist that if all employes had practical demonstration that they are subject at any moment to a rigid inspection of their books and papers, or to a sudden change from one position to another without notice, the chances are that three fifths of the thefts which might have occurred would be averted. The lack of such safeguards is a standing temptation to dishonesty, and men often fall who would remain faithful if they knew they were closely watched and in constant danger of detection.

There is much force in the further suggestion that persons occupying places of trust, in which strict honesty is demanded, should be required to conduct themselves in a generally reputable and prudent manner. The employer has a right to say that an employe who handles his money shall not attend horse-races, or visit gambling houses, or engage in bucket-shop speculation, or be known as a man who lives beyond his means. It is through these loose practices that men forfeit their sense of integrity and become capable of taking what does not belong to them. They are not harmed, but helped, when their tenure of service is made to depend upon adherence to the rules of ordinary morality and propriety, in the regulation of their conduct at all times. It is unreasonable to say that a man may do as he pleases when he is released from his daily duties in a bank or a store where he holds a responsible position. His obligations do not stop there, but extend to all of those proceedings which affect his reputation in the community.—Globe-Democrat.

The fruit-growing industry in Oregon is growing very rapidly. The State Secretary of Horticulture estimates that this fall there are 565,000 acres of pears, peaches, apples, and such kinds of fruit in the State; 35,000 acres of prunes, and 1,500 acres of berries.

LATE LITERARY NOTE.

TWO very important facts in connection with the new era of magazines are illustrated in the December Cosmopolitan. Its fiction is by Stevenson, the last story written before his death, "Ouida," Sarah Grand, Zangwill, and the beginning of James Lane Allen's new Kentucky realistic story, "Butterflies." Probably no stronger array of fiction has ever been presented in any magazine—money could not buy better. Nor has any magazine ever had a larger number of really distinguished artists engaged upon the illustrations of a single number. The reader might be puzzled to know how such a number can be made at the price of ten cents. But the magazine itself affords the solution. It contains 139 pages of advertising, which, as the publishers announce, is from $4,000 to $8,000 more net cash advertising than was ever before printed in any magazine, of any kind, and in any country. It breaks the world's record in the publishing business. Moreover, the cost of the artists and authors who appear in this number is divided amongst 400,000 copies, bringing the cost per copy proportionately low. The Cosmopolitan thinks that the ten cent magazine, bringing as it does, the best in art and literature into all classes, is an educational movement second in importance only to that of the public schools.

LITERARY NOTES.

THE Review of Reviews for December, in its "Progress of the World" department, plunges as usual into the discussion of important current topics. The assembling of the Fifty-fourth Congress, at home, and the disturbed condition of Turkey and some of the European powers at this moment present questions which call for extended comment this month. The editor also devotes several paragraphs to the boundary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, and the results of the recent elections in various states are reviewed and summarized. But this department of the Review is by no means confined to its range of political or governmental affairs; it "covers" such subjects as the foundation of the Luther League of America, the doings of Schlatter, the so-called "Healer," in Denver, noteworthy events in the educational world (Mr. Rockefeller's latest gift to the University of Chicago, the inauguration of a new president at Colgate University, etc.) and biographical notes on important men and women who have died during the month (Eugene Field, Signor Bonghi and others).

The metric system has been adopted by compulsion in Germany, Norway-Sweden, Switzerland, Italy, and many other countries, and in a comparatively short time and without serious inconvenience or opposition. It is approved by all classes and no attempt has been made to return to old methods. A committee appointed by Great Britain recommends its adoption and teaching in public schools. The United States Congress has made its use compulsory for pharmaceutical purposes.

The number of citizens in the United States liable to military duty is given at 9,945,043.

"THE SPIRIT GIVETH LIFE."

WE are asked to explain the passage from which the words of the caption above are taken, occurring in Paul's second letter to the Corinthians, third chapter, sixth verse. The apostle was writing to a people upon whom the work of the gospel economy had had a great and salutary effect; and the apostle gave the proper credit, not to the letter of the Old Testament in which the things of the new had been foreshadowed, but to the Spirit, which in verse seventeen he declares to be the Lord, "the light that lighteth every man," as declared by John. We may not be able to comprehend all the nice distinctions that may have been in the mind of the apostle; but, it is clear that he meant to say this, at least, that there was no life in the mere word or letter of the command, but that if the command was obeyed, the Spirit of him by whom the command was given gave to the obedient disciple the power of life; and so long as he remained obedient he continued to have life, as Christ had come that whosoever believed on him, might have life, and that "more abundantly."

The letter when heard or read is intended to be either a "savor of life unto life, or of death unto death;" to life for them who hear and believe and obey; but to condemnation equivalent to death unto them who, hearing, neither believe, nor obey.

The apostle seems to make this meaning clear when he explains below the text that "when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart;" that is, upon the hearts of those, who claiming to believe Moses, yet believed not Jesus; notwithstanding Jesus declared expressly, "had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me, for he wrote of me." This was under the ministration of the old covenant, which Paul argued in his Galatian letter was from Mount Sinai, and "gendered to bondage," but that the "Jerusalem," which was above and mother of them all was free (alive), and was the "free gift," as stated in Romans 5: 15.

The fact that the Spirit of life was the accompanying power attendant upon the preaching of the word, the letter, when obeyed, is shown by the same apostle when writing to the Romans 8: 2, he states:—

For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.

And again, the same apostle writing to the Romans, 7: 9, 10, declared:—

For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died. And the commandment, [the letter,] which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.

From this death inflicted by the failure to comprehend and obey the commandment obedience to which brought to the apostle the "Spirit of life," he was made free from the law of sin and death by a confession of the justness of the law, the letter, by which he was condemned, and an acceptance and obedience to the commandment,

And now why tarriest thou? Arise; and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.—Acts 22: 16.

From all these considerations we conclude that the letter of the gospel of the Son of God brings condemnation upon those who believe not and obey not; and that the Spirit of him who authorized the preaching of that gospel gives life to those who hearing it believe and obey it; the letter killing because the word is not obeyed, the Spirit giving life when the word is obeyed; according to the statement of Jesus:—

My words they are spirit and they are life.

BRO. A. H. PARSONS sends us a copy of the Times, a Philadelphia daily, containing an account of an exhibition of historical relics from a Colorado Cliff Dwellers' village, which is of interest to the Saints and readers of HERALD:—

There has been lifted out of the mist and fog of the dark ages and set on pedestals in the library building of the University of Pennsylvania a village estimated to be two thousand years old. At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the curtain surrounding it was drawn aside and the public was invited to inspect the exhibit. The occasion brought together under genial influences and in one room the modern type of man and the crumbling relics of the people and things existing in this country almost before time began. It was a reception tendered by the men and women of America, who died before the remote ancestors of Christopher Columbus were born, to their sons and daughters of the present generation.

The meeting was fittingly celebrated by a distinguished crowd, which gathered in the auditorium to take part in the exercises which were to open the exhibition. The latter takes up nearly all of the top floor of the building, and consists of relics of all sorts found in an ancient village of Cliff Dwellers in the canyons of the Mancos River of Montezuma County, Colorado. The collection is by far the best of its sort on earth, and was dug up out of the recess of the Rocky Mountains by a couple of brother ranchmen named Wetherill in 1888. They discovered the village by accident, and after two years of hard work succeeded in bringing to the surface nearly every vestige of a prehistoric civilization which existed under the grounds they were exploring.

A VERY REMARKABLE COLLECTION.

After a partial and unsatisfactory showing at the World's Fair the purchaser of the relics, a wealthy man by the name of C. D. Hazzard, of Minneapolis, consented to loan the entire collection to the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Stewart Culin was intrusted with the work of arranging the exhibit, and he, aided by Frank Hamilton Cushing, Chief of the Bureau of Ethnology at Washington, spent many weeks in putting it into shape for public inspection on the top floor of the library building in West Philadelphia.

They completed their work last week, and yesterday the doors of the museum in which the collection is exhibited were thrown open. The exercises which marked the opening were held in the auditorium and were both dignified and appropriate. Charlemagne Tower, Jr., presided, and speeches were made by Mr. Cushing, Ex-Provost Dr. William Pepper, Professor Edward D. Cope, and Professor Culin. Several hundred well-dressed people listened attentively to all that was said before they went upstairs to inspect the mummies, the pottery, the stone weapons, the faded tapestries, and the other relics of a prehistoric civilization which were on view.

WHAT OUR ANCESTORS WERE LIKE.

Mr. Cushing's address was a very plain and intelligent description of the collection about to be opened for public inspection, and he did not hesitate to say that it was the finest of the sort in the world. He told how the Zuni Indians, away back in the remote centuries following the flood, had taken to the Rocky Mountains for refuge against the hostile tribes on the plains, and how they had lived up to a few hundred years ago, in a state of civilization almost beyond the comprehension of the modern man.

Professor Cope analyzed the physical remains of these curious people, and told his audience what big brains they had. Dr. Pepper complimented the University on having so rare a collection to offer in its museum, and told of the efforts made to secure it. Then Professor Culin invited everyone up to the top floor, and the rest of the afternoon was spent by the fashionable crowd in looking at the pictured life of a race which occupied this country before the ancestors of the great-grandfather of the man who built the Mayflower had been heard of.

To-day and every day hereafter the museum will be open to the public. It is a show worth seeing.

COLLEGE, COLLEGE!

THE winter term of Graceland College will begin January 2, 1896.

The fall term has been a success, so far as the work is concerned; the students having done well. The faculty are well suited to the emergency, and the duties required; the students of excellent habits and studious, determined to win in the race.

It must be understood that Graceland is but a beginning, small in numbers and feeble in means, but yet "rich in faith" of success. It cannot compete in completeness of paraphernalia with Chicago's Armour Institute, nor the Northwestern, nor with several other richly endowed institutions of learning; where millions, or hundreds of thousands have been given by public spirited men who had them to spare; but in grasp of purpose, ability to teach what is advertised, and in the advantages of healthful and morally beneficial surroundings, it will rank with any anywheres.

It has not been expected that Graceland would suddenly become a great institution overflowing with students and a self-sustaining affair; but it has been hoped, with reasons for that hope, that those with whom it began, and others who might be attracted to it, would rally to its support by every means in their power. Its success is guaranteed if all will stand by it, and helping to build it, send their children to it, and give it a moral as well as a financial standing.

We hope the Saints will consider the matter well, and not make a common mistake in thinking that the larger institutions are necessarily the best, and the safest places for students to get the better education. The comparison is in favor of the smaller, other things being equal.

Send the children along.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—What are we to understand by the angel ascending from the east—Revelation 7: 2? What is the meaning of the sealing of the different tribes?

Ans.—A messenger sent of God to stay the process of destruction till the accepted children of God can be properly designated, chosen, and so identified that they shall receive no hurt from the elements of destruction.

We are of the opinion that the "sealing of the tribes," is intended to convey the idea that there will be a selection of the priesthood in its various orders from the various tribes of Israel, who shall be sealed (chosen, acknowledged, and ordained) to preside and represent Israel among the "innumerable host," from all the nations, converted and transformed from nature's darkness into the light of the kingdom of God—engrafted, or adopted Israel in its triumphant condition, under the rule of king Immanuel.

An angel is one sent, or a messenger. Who this one with sealing power may be we have no idea; nor does it seem to us essential that we should know now. It will be enough for us, if through obedience to Christ we shall be found worthy as engrafted members, or as members of the original vine—the household of Israel under the King.

Q.—A branch appoints a regular time for preaching and prayer meetings. Is it proper and right for the president to change the prayer meeting into one for preaching without asking the will of the members present? Does the law, "The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God" justify him in so doing?

A.—The presiding officer of a branch is but an integral part of the branch, and is chosen for the purpose of looking after the spiritual affairs of the congregation and to carry into effect the agreements, and orders, and rules of the branch. This does not give him the right to disregard any specific rule of the branch, of which he has knowledge, unless for justifiable causes, which he must give if his action is called in question. A presiding officer of a branch could, for proper reasons, so change an appointment, by the tacit consent of the members present at the meeting; but in case some members present should object, such change should be by vote. No self-respecting elder would consent to disregard the rights of the people in a case where the presiding officer should attempt to change a regular appointment for the purpose of such elder preaching, against the protest of any number of members, without a vote of the membership present at such meeting.

The "conduct" of the meetings does not necessarily define the kind of meeting to be held; but refers rather to the proceedings, or what is done in the meetings after they are begun. If the object, or kind of meeting to be held, is not stated, or already agreed upon, the presiding officer may determine at the time of assembling, or take an expression of the membership present; but if it is a stated meeting, it is safer to observe the rule agreed to by the branch, if there is one.

The law referred to does not warrant an infringement upon the rights of the members, or a disregard of the voice of the branch properly obtained.

The brother sending the foregoing questions states that they are asked for information only; and this means that he does not ask for controversy, or to use the replies as "goods" to discipline somebody with; all of which we trust is correct.

OKLAHOMA DEBATE.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH left Lamoni, last month, for Kingfisher, Oklahoma, to look after an attack on the faith made by an Elder Fritch, of the Advent Christian faith. Of that debate we have received some reports, which have been published. Of the last phase of it the following from Bro. Heman himself, dated December 9, will give the readers of the HERALD a good idea.

Bro. Heman is not fond of debate, as he himself confesses, but if there is a need for defense, he does not hesitate, and yields no point of vantage, no matter what the odds or who the challenger. He relies on Christ and the cause.

The last proposition; viz., "The Bible teaches that man is wholly mortal, and unconscious between death and the resurrection," was closed last night. It was one of the most complete and signal victories we ever witnessed. We have captured the fort so far as the influence of the people is concerned. It is generally estimated by outsiders that there are about ten to one in our favor; this not only on the last proposition, but throughout.

Of course there are some on our side because they felt that they were getting revenge for drubbings the Advent had given them. However, the thinking part of the community see that the evidence and argument are on our side. Just now since writing the last sentence of this, Mr. D. W. Tate, one of the prominent citizens of this place and a man of excellent character in the community, came in the room and asked for baptism. It will be attended to this afternoon. God be praised! Mr. Fritch, on this proposition, broke over the former ruling and quoted Greek and Hebrew copiously. We waited until we saw that the chairman was not going to enforce the rule, and then we met him on the Greek and Hebrew. Of course we do not know very much Greek and Hebrew, but we happened to have enough at hand to completely snow him under, and from that hour Bro. Fritch talked English, and English only. The few Saints here are rejoicing, and we feel profoundly grateful to God.

THE CHURCH IN PEORIA.

OUR folks in Peoria, Illinois, now meet in their own hired house, corner of Adams and Fulton Streets.

But on Sunday, December 8, the brethren met with the Peoria Sunday Lyceum, when Bro. A. J. Keck gave an address on the "Writings of Daniel." After the reading of Bro. Keck's paper the subject was discussed by several, Brn. J. A. Robinson and William Stead among them. The Peoria Transcript for the 9th has the following note of the meeting:—

THE SUNDAY LYCEUM.

ELDER A. J. KECK OF THE LATTER DAY SAINTS MAKES A TALK.

Mr. A. J. Keck, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, yesterday afternoon addressed the Peoria Sunday Lyceum on the subject, "The Writings of Daniel." He began by saying that early in the week a morning paper had stated that he was to speak on next Sabbath to the Lyceum on "The Writing of Daniel, from the Standpoint of Mormonism." That, he said, was just the thing he did not intend to do. He was not a Mormon, and did not wish to be so considered. The people he had the honor to represent were too often, in the public mind, connected or associated with the Utah or Brigham Young schism, who practice polygamy, and had done other things that had received and richly merited public censure. His church, the speaker said, was earnestly endeavoring to teach the life, the light, and the way as taught by Jesus of Nazareth, and that it affiliated in no way with the Utah element.

According to Mr. Keck, the prophecy of Daniel will soon be fulfilled by the establishment of God's kingdom on earth, and that it will begin in this, our country, the land of all others on earth most blessed by God on high.

In concluding his talk, Mr. Keck was given a hearty vote of thanks, and the wish was expressed by several that he and his people would become regular attendants at the Lyceum meetings.

Many interesting remarks were made in the general discussion for and against the theory of the speaker on "Daniel." Among the participants in the discussion were: Mr. Hiatt, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Hiram Brown, Jr., Mr. White, Mr. Stead, Mr. Burton, Mr. Mc-Alpine, and several others.

Next Sunday Rabbi Maurice Eisenberg is to address the Lyceum on the same subject, "The Writings of Daniel." The attendance at the meetings is increasing and the public is heartily invited to come. The hall is at 303 Main Street, over Reen's drug store, and the time for meeting is 2:30 p. m. every Sunday.

DAVID H. SMITH VISITED.

ELDER EDWARD STEVENSON, of Salt Lake City, and of the church there, lately visited Bro. David H. Smith, youngest son of the Martyr, at Elgin, Illinois, and reported his visit to the Deseret News, in a letter dated September 22, 1895. We quote from the closing passages of this letter:—

The Prophet's sons, all of them, have the good wishes and sympathy of thousands of the best people who grace the earth, especially David in his apparent affliction. His numerous friends will be pleased to learn that he is not suffering any serious illness. In answer to questions he said: "I enjoy very good health; I read, and play on the organ; well I play Old Hundred and some other familiar tunes, and I very much enjoy this amusement; we have our walks twice a day and I attend the flower beds and work them some." We proposed a walk in the park, but here came a little embarrassment, as the doors were locked. He said they were governed by rules. I reminded him of a promise of a walk and a visit of this kind. Our time was now up, and by permission of the doctor Mr. Smith went to his room for his hat and had a thirty-minutes' walk before dinner. He enjoyed the ramble among the beds of flowers and shrubs. He picked flowers from the beds he had helped to cultivate with a degree of pride. Mr. S. was engaged with the flowers, placing them one by one together, while I took a picture of the beds and the dwelling in which David lives. I proposed taking one with him in it. "O, no," he said, "take the building without me," and walked away quite fast, to get out of range. He walked quite erect, looked well dressed, was a fine specimen of a man—tall, over six feet, and will weigh two hundred and forty pounds. He is quite well proportioned.

I was thinking that he was much larger than King David of old, as we learn from the Bible that David of old was, when young, only a stripling cupid with Goliath the giant. I long for the time, if it should please God, that this, the youngest of the three living sons of the Prophet, may be touched by the power of the eternal Master and be released from these bands. Nebuchadnezzar of old was released only by the power of the Lord, and why not he?

The thirty minutes had passed and our walk among the evergreens, shrubs, flowers, and a rustic bridge over a spring branch in which was a water wheel (a miniature one), which David said he had aided in constructing. We all drank from the beautiful spring. A warm shaking of hands with thanks for our visit and hoped that it would not be long before another visit, and to be sure to kindly remember him to his friends in beautiful Utah.

There is such a thing as a person being comfortably sick. We were pleased to find David enjoying so much liberty and so good a degree of health. In conclusion, we believe all is well with David, for God rules in his own way, his purposes to fulfill. The case of the younger is, to my mind, far preferable to the older ones who the Lord will hold more responsible. I fully believe he is at the present time in the right place, and would not disturb him, for he is comfortable and sins not. Our meeting was pleasant and agreeable and our parting quite satisfactory.

When Bro. D. H. Smith was first sent to Elgin for care, there were some who harshly criticised his brothers for the fact of his being sent there; and these persons were found both in the Reorganized Church and in the Utah Church; it being charged by some of the latter that the elder sons had him placed under restraint because that he favored the Utah side of the controversy after his visit to that Territory, etc. So far as such idea was held it was an error; as neither of his brothers ever heard him express any such preference or conviction. What was done by them was done because it was the only available means to his proper care and comfort open to his relatives and friends. Had he retained his faculties unharmed, he would have been absolutely free to have followed his convictions, no matter what they were, so far as his brothers were concerned. These brothers concluded at the start just what Elder Stevenson concedes at the close of his letter, evidently the result of his interview, that the younger son of the Prophet Joseph Smith was in the hand of God, as any and all of the good and unfortunate of all the ages past were.

Elder Stevenson and all others who affect to believe the same thought are welcome to the opinion that the condition of the younger son is preferable to that of the elder, for the reason that these elder ones will be held to a stricter accountability than the younger. However, these elder ones seek not to excuse themselves for the choice they made in religious convictions, which has led them to antagonize the positions held by Elder Stevenson, and the leaders of the church to which he belongs. They knew at the time they made the choice what they know now, that God would hold them accountable for that choice; and what they would do under it. This condition of responsibility attaches to Elder Stephenson, President B. Young, W. Woodruff, and all others who chose to accept the dogma which the sons of the Martyr oppose and denounce; and these sons are assured by the facts in the case, the logic of the argument and events, that they will stand fairly in the day of accounts, judged in reference to their action with regard to the principle of plural marriage; the word of the Lord to the church being a criterion to indicate the action of the Judge.

We thank Elder Stevenson, however, for his kindly expressed sympathy for the sons of the Prophet; and especially for the expression of the impression that he is comfortable and well cared for.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. N. STAMM, writing from Runnells, Iowa, says:—

We had good meetings here. Bro C. Scott preached in Runnells, and on the 8th baptized two. He has now gone to Grinnell. I have been preaching near Adelphi, all the week, and there are warm friends to the cause there who will come by and by.

Bro. T. L. Sawley, Wheatland, Missouri, the 12th:—

The debate with H. I. Alexander of the Christian Church is over. An immense crowd was in attendance. The people are all awakened; some say the Campbellites received their deathblow. Right after the debate closed I baptized four intelligent parties and others are to be baptized next Sunday. We announced that we would hold a few meetings right after the debate. One of the Campbellites said that if we did we would talk to empty seats, but a large crowd attended right through. We rejoice in the truth and give praise to the Lord for a grand victory for the truth. I have never enjoyed such a degree of the Spirit as in this discussion; not to brag—God forbid. When I would rise the congregation would remain as still as it was possible to do, paying close attention. When Elder Alexander spoke there would be such murmurs and confusion he threatened to prosecute them. Many friends were made to the work.

Bro. C. Scott, Grinnell, Iowa, the 13th:—

Some splendid meetings lately at Runnells, baptized two there last Sunday; others investigating. Go to Leighton, Mahaska County, to-day to begin meetings this evening. Pray for us.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. W. W. BLAIR preached at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Sunday, December 8, twice. Had good hearing.

Bro. J. A. Currie, Sr., writes of his labors in Lee County, Texas, in which he reports himself blessed of the Lord and strengthened to continue his efforts. He exhorts Saints and ministry to keep themselves free from division and strife, that the blessing of the Spirit may attend them. He commends the suggestion that a tract fund be established in the branches.

If we fail to note the arrival, departure, or some feature of labor of any of the brethren, such as it is customary to mention, we trust no one will think himself slighted. Some may be overlooked or their presence or work not brought to our attention. It is comforting to know that the Master neither overlooks, forgets, nor fails to appreciate. We believe he knows the worth of all; also that he neither overlooks nor overappreciates any; and, all true men and women will be fully satisfied with that kind of an estimate, no doubt. We try not to miss mention of any item of value to the work.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, who has been laboring at Grant City, Missouri, and elsewhere in the Decatur district, was at or near Lucas, Iowa, at last advices, preaching the word and pushing the work.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, which overruled the decision of Judge Philips in the Temple Lot suit, has declined to grant a rehearing of the case, hence the action stands at present adverse to the Reorganized Church. Future developments will doubtless be given the HERALD readers as they may occur.

Elder I. N. Roberts arrived in from the Minnesota field, in improved health and full of the ardent fire of the missionary spirit. He reports many demands for ministers, but few to break the bread of life, in the field over which he has charge—Minnesota and the Dakotas. The faithful laborer can only do what his own powers and the limited forces working under his supervision are able to do. He can only pray the good Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into the vineyard and that the good Saints will be good to the Bishop and his agents that the work intrusted to all may be prosecuted. The elder in the field with heart, soul, and body consecrated to the service of God and man feels the impulses of the divine love urging, pressing him forward to carry the gospel to the people. He shares the spirit of sonship in common with the Elder Brother, and, like him and ordained to be a coworker with the Master, seeks to proclaim repentance unto life. He is satisfied only when laboring to proclaim abroad the good tidings of great joy. The spirit of his calling rests upon him, and though compelled to be content to labor and wait, he constantly desires the work to move rapidly and spread more widely. He feels as one has expressed it, that "it is hard work to preach the gospel, but harder still not to preach it." God bless and strengthen the ministry in the field. They deserve the hearty good will and prayers and material coöperation of the Saints.

The offer of the Autobiography of Elder Joseph Luff at fifty cents is withdrawn; also that of the work "From Palmyra to Independence," in combination at reduced price. The price of Bro. Luff's book is, cloth $1.25; leather, gilt edges, $1.75. "From Palmyra to Independence" is sold at $1.25.

The Baptists in Saxony protest against the legality of an order issued by the Government threatening them with a fine without appeal for "baptizing or doing anything which might disturb the peace of the Lutheran Church."

Original Poetry.

CHRIST'S BIRTH.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

Winter and night in the world;
Snow upon mountain,
Snow upon plain;
Ice in the desolate souls of men;
Snow on the heart of the world.

And only the tremulous
White light of a star
Far in the East;
Only an infinite soul allied
With weakness and flesh and youth.

Then seeth the world in this Murmuring Jordan,
Gethsemane;
Calvary sad, Calvary sublime;
Pure water, then tears, then blood!

Winter and night in the world,
But dawn cometh soon,
Beautiful dawn;
Light of the star leads up to the sun,
The cross a glorified crown.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"A little bit of patience often makes the sunshine come,
And a little bit of love makes a very happy home."

HIDE NOT.

Chide not the young and tender heart
For love that it has given,
As if it were not that sweet part.
Our Master sent from heaven.

Is it then that thou hast forgot
How thy young heart once beat
In glad response to some true love,
Exalted, pure, and sweet?

They do not know all Cupid's ways,
Nor have they power to close
Their hearts to him, though they should bid
Adieu to all repose.

Then chide them not, but let them feel
Thy kindest sympathy,
To thine own heart let memory bring
Thine own youth glad and free.

SEEING and reading much of how idle thoughtlessness brings grief and sadness into many households, I wish to present a few thoughts and facts as to how the same result may come through unkindness.

Did it never occur to you, my readers, how different are the inner feelings of a young girl just growing into womanhood, or a youth just springing to manhood, from those of an older and more experienced person?
My writing will be particularly of the gentler sex, as I then speak more knowingly.

As I write there comes to my mind an instance of my personal knowledge, of a young girl, one of the sweetest and brightest in the town. Like all who are just ripening into that which is looked forward to with eagerness and impatience—sweet, shy womanhood —she would liked to have partaken of the social enjoyments that others had; to have received the attentions of some of her young gentlemen acquaintances at home; but any such thought or expression was repulsed and harshly treated by the mother, until that young heart was made to feel lonely and forsaken. Seeing other young people thus enjoying life, that gentle spirit was made to more keenly feel the loss and want of such companionship, and in time a feeling, though perhaps not of rebellion but a sense of the injustice of her mother, crept into her heart, and through that very feeling the young girl was led to take the first wrong step—meeting young men away from home; and that one step led her on and on until her ruin was wrought by a man many years her senior, and he a husband. This brought criticism and condemnation on the young girl which, had her home life and influence been different, need never have been. That mother forgot that she had ever had the desire for social enjoyments and the companionship which we all feel the need of in our youthful days, and often when we are older. She evidently thought that her daughter should be satisfied with the staid and uneventful life she desired, herself, to lead. I believe that God will hold her responsible for the wrecked life of her daughter.

Again, it may not go so far. A young lady may have a gentleman friend, they may be attracted to each other, and, in being thrown into each other's society, that friendship finally ripens into love. Perhaps he is a good, steady, well-meaning young man, but the mother thinks her daughter ought to "do better;" she ought to have a better position than he can give her; and if she has an admirer who has been favored in the way of accumulating wealth, no matter if he has not a high sense of honor, or if his habits are not as they should be, the mother takes a dislike to the former with the sturdy, manly heart, and makes her child's life unpleasant by constantly referring to him in an unjustly sarcastic manner; and sometimes her actions and the expression on her face are more disagreeable than her words. All this causes the young heart of a tender, confiding nature to become hardened, when it should, in truth, be the most cheerful, the most loving in all the years that are past, or that are to come. She feels and knows that Mother has no kind sympathy for her in this, so there is none of that sweet confidence which would be so heartily and happily given; no home enjoyment of the love she knows is hers, and which she reciprocates. Many happy hours are denied her which should not be. She learns to become reticent, and, many times, cheerless. There is a shadow over her life which dims the sunshine of that love, and causes sorrow where there should be only happiness. It sometimes causes the child to deceive the mother, because she dare not tell of the love that exists and the plans for the future, knowing that she will receive only harsh words and cause an unkindly feeling, in return.

I have written only to try to show mothers that they cannot expect their daughters to see just as they would wish to have them, and that a kindly means will, many times, be more effectual than one so harsh, for the young heart is tender with love to give which calls for a return and if that return does not come from you, mothers, your child will more closely cling to the one it may be your desire that she forget. Be in sympathy with her, and do not judge the subject of her affections too harshly; you may be wrong.

As I have already taken up more of your valuable space than I feel I should, I will close my feeble attempt with a prayer to our heavenly Father for all overanxious mothers, and young and tender hearts.

[THE above letter was written for the Autumn Leaves by a sister who does not wish her name to appear. Feeling that it is calculated to benefit every mother who will give it a careful reading, we have taken the liberty of using it in the Home Column instead of the Leaves, hoping that we shall hear again and often from so thoughtful a writer. God in these latter days has commanded that the aged shall not forget the "gladsomeness of their youth," and as we enter the years in which we bend beneath many cares and the added sorrows and crosses which have met us on life's journey, we are forcibly impressed with the need of such an admonition.

"What is the plan you adopt, the means which you use to produce such harmony in your family, and make of your children such perfect models of thoughtful, helpful, loving gentleness?" we asked lately of a brother whom (should we name) many of you know.

"We always respect their rights and feelings as sacredly as we do our own. Always from the time they are old enough to comprehend, strive to make them feel that they are a part of the family and responsible in a measure for the happiness of the family.
That they are interested in all which interests us," he answered, and the answer left a lasting impression on our mind. We have pondered upon it much and often, asking if this is not the principle upon which our heavenly Father works, and if it is not the meaning of the words, "We are workers together with him," and also their full interpretation. Love must be the law of home if ever the best results obtain, and love is a giver, always seeking the good of its object.
Looking at it in this light, the injunction, "Parents love your children," comes with added force.]

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

IN case our Sunday schools intend leaving Christmas trees we give some suggestions clipped from other papers.

"A series of Christmas bells can easily be prepared by using half bushel peach baskets inverted and covered with evergreen or gilt paper, using an orange for a striker. A group of these bells hung over the altar, covered with differing materials and, if you please, lettered on their faces with a text, words, or even single letters, can be nicely fitted into an exercise. They can be made of greater interest by having ropes attached and having the bells rung in unison with the chorus of some Christmas hymn."

"With a little practice real bells, rung out of sight, can be utilized" in harmony with the artificial bells.

"A very pretty exercise carries the idea of a Christmas garden where presents grow." Plant a number of little trees from which the presents may be gathered by little girls dressed in white."

A revolving tree is very pretty. "A tree was made very instructive as well as pretty by trimming with flags of all nations. These were made by friends and were explained as they were taken off."

In large churches each class may have its own tree.

"A model school is not made up of model scholars."

"Get more ideas than you can give. It will give you fluency. 'Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.'"—Sefton.

THE subject of entertainments for the Sunday school is of interest to us who wish to keep ourselves unspotted from the world. There are bright allurements on all sides to those who seek pleasure; hence the necessity of a watchful eye over the so-called harmless amusements.

We often meet earnest, sober-minded people who look upon all entertainments as sinful; then again we find the opposite extreme—persons who want to do right, but the love of pleasure makes every day to them a play day.

If the objects for which an entertainment is given are right, and its effects upon the school are wholesome, then we may give it sanction.

There are good reasons why three or four entertainments per year for the Sunday school may be profitable.

We cannot present truth to those who do not come within our reach; hence we must employ various plans to attract those whom we wish to influence. Those who put in an appearance on general parade days and absent themselves when actual duty calls are not apt to make very valiant soldiers for the Lord; but many, who are first attracted by the parade, soon put on the full armor and are henceforth ready for duty.

In a well-planned program there is a connection in the trend of thought throughout. The responses, the recitations, the music, and the prayer all point in one direction. At Christmas time they center around the birth of Christ; at Easter, his resurrection; at Children's Day, his love for the children and the work they may do for him; at Thanksgiving, the many reasons for giving thanks to the Giver of "every good and perfect gift."

We are all interested in those things that we help to push on to success, and when the young people know that they are to do the work; that the success or failure will be attributed to them, they are not only interested but they feel individual responsibility, which feeling is ever productive of strength of character.

Another object to be gained is the discipline that is received in the preparation for an entertainment. Not only the discipline of the voice, of behavior in public, etc.; for, while these are necessary, there is a broader field for discipline. The teacher has spent many an hour in trying to impress the lessons of meekness, patience, forbearance, charity—that charity which suffereth long "and is kind," and other points dwelt upon in Paul's talk upon etiquette; but now she comes to a practical application of her teaching, to a point where teaching merges into training. If the lessons taught in the Sunday school do not manifest themselves in the home, in the day school, on the playground, and elsewhere that child meets with child, then is our teaching in vain. In the school she has seen them on their good behavior for an hour, and sometimes she forgets that she has not seen them tempted, and that their spirits may not all be under subjection to the laws of right; but when she attempts to prepare them for an entertainment and the spirit of envy, of jealousy, and of hateful rivalry crops out, she finds that there remains something for her to do. 'Tis then that the faint-hearted teacher fails. How often do you hear her say, "Well, I never want to try to get up anything again if they are going to act like that." Why, dear teacher, that is just the time that you are needed, and if you labor according to the Spirit of the Master, the discipline will benefit you as well as your class.

When we enter the service of the Lord and accept the position of teacher we ought to make up our minds that we cannot retreat at the appearance of every cloud. Our generalship is not tried during the harmonious march with no enemy in view; but when the noise of battle begins, an exhibition of both valor and discipline is necessary.

As teachers we may listen for the noise of battle when we attempt to train in the application of the virtues we have been teaching. These opportunities of learning the strength or weakness of each member of her class are needed by the teacher; for it is easier to fortify against an enemy if we know from which side he is coming.

With the Spirit of God to direct we need not fear going wrong in one department of work more than another, and as Sunday school workers let us never lose sight of the one object of our work nor the one great source of our help.

Whatever we do let us strive to do well.

We may plan a Christmas program that will contain a great lesson for the young, or we may plan so that the chief thought will be lost sight of. If scholars are allowed to choose what they please and speak as they please, the results are not apt to be beneficial. If we have no higher object than to amuse, let us not call it Sunday school work. If we make the memory of the birth of Christ our objective point, is it not well that we, as leaders, give the subject sober thought ere formulating a program? Study the word of God carefully and prayerfully till your whole soul is filled with a realization of what such tidings of joy mean to you. You will then be in the right spirit to impress the truth upon your class in such a manner as to aid them in distinguishing between Christian joy and worldly merriment.

CARTHAGE, Illinois, Dec. 8.

Editors Herald:—Elder J. S. Roth, of Grinnell, Iowa, has been preaching in this county for the last month with considerable success. He held forth to crowded congregations at Rock Creek church for over two weeks and baptized eighteen adults. He preached one week in the M. E. church at Burnside and for the last two weeks in Ferris.

Ferris is an entirely new field. The only church there is the M. P., which the Saints failed to procure for Bro. Roth; but Brn. Salisbury and Terry own the Good Templars' Hall there, so he preached in it. Elder Roth, by his able way of presenting the truth, completely won the hearts of all who went to hear him, and the hall was crowded every night to overflowing, many being turned away. Several brought Bibles and took down the texts to investigate for themselves, and the sermons were the principal topic of the town talk during the day.

Elder Roth was entertained by G. A. R. comrades of Ferris Post, feasted by Methodists at family reunions, invited to the homes of the Campbellite-Christians, and favorably mentioned by local correspondents to county papers. He left Ferris last Friday for Montrose, Iowa, via Rock Creek church. It was regretted that he could not stay longer and get a larger building. I went out to Ferris last night to see what the condition was. I found some almost ready for baptism and all anxiously investigating. One Methodist deacon said, "Elder Roth builds solidly as he goes." A leading Methodist lady said, "I think it is a pity they did not let him have our church;" he had all denominations helping him that last evening when he preached on "church union," "He had a Methodist organist and a mixed choir;" "He almost converted me that evening." Many other commendatory things were said, but this will give you an idea of the condition.

The cause is prospering and religious toleration gaining ground in Hancock County. The Carthage Republican and other county papers often publish articles very favorable to us. Gay Davidson, a Carthage editor of note, recently contributed an article on the history of Carthage to the Souvenir of Carthage College, and city of Carthage, in which he condemned, in the strongest terms, the past harsh treatment of the Saints in Hancock County. He says: "The killing of Joseph and Hiram Smith [not 'Old Joe Smith,' as formerly] was a foul murder and the blackest crime in the history of the county." He also says many other fair things about us. I shall write him a letter of thanks for this fair treatment.

There are four Latter Day Saints attending Carthage College now, to gratify the curiosity of students from afar. The Saints throughout the county have been working hard the past year, and have contributed liberally in time and money to carry on meetings and assist at the reunion at Park Bluff, Iowa. The Pilot Grove branch, though in straitened circumstances, responded promptly with ten dollars to the Temple Lot suit fund. I do not know whether the other branches did or not, but all have certainly done well. Altogether the outlook is hopeful.

Yours in faith,

HERBERT S. SALISBURY.

DAKOTA CITY, Iowa, Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—Many times when reading in the Herald the letters of the isolated ones, my heart has gone out to them in sympathy. Now that I am one of their number I can more fully realize their loneliness. How many times I fairly hunger for the fellowship of the Saints. Sometimes I close my eyes and try to see in memory the faces and forms of the different elders I have heard preach. Recalling some of the beautiful lessons which they have taught, my heart is led to rejoice and I feel to praise our dear Father who has so mercifully given us the true gospel in these latter days.

Last evening we went to the Baptist church where a Baptist missionary from Salt Lake City lectured upon the subject of Mormonism. To my delight she did not couple the name of Joseph Smith with the polygamists. All she said was true. She seemed a very just woman. She had with her a number of photographs which she invited all who desired, to examine at the close of the lecture. We, with some others, went up to look at them. Among them was a picture of Joseph the Martyr and also one of Brigham Young. They were all looking at Brigham's picture when some one spied Joseph's likeness in my hand. "O, there's Joseph Smith!" said one. "Yes, but he was no polygamist," I answered, still keeping possession of the picture. I listened quietly for something more to be said. I was determined that if they polluted his name with their tongues they should not pollute his dear likeness with their hands. One young girl in answer to my statement finally said: "No, I know he wasn't." To her I surrendered the picture. A good-natured fleshy lady standing near said: "There was a young lady in our town who married one of Joseph's sons. 'What! married a son of that man!' exclaimed one. I looked up at her quickly, and I'm afraid my eyes flashed as I asked, or rather demanded, "And why not marry a son of that man?"

The fleshy lady spoke up, "O, they were very nice people. They were Latter Day Saints, not Mormons, you know." I smiled and replied, "Yes, I understand the difference. We are Latter Day Saints ourselves," referring to myself and husband. Maybe its wrong to be proud but I did feel proud as I made that statement, loud enough for all to hear, and saw the wondering eyes turned toward me. The fleshy lady answered, "Yes, I knew you were, and my husband is all but one, too."

Turning again to the pile of pictures I saw Brigham and Joseph side by side on the stand. I seized Brigham with "intent to do great bodily injury" and shoved him underneath the pile. Reverently I placed the picture of our beloved prophet on the very top. One of the girls, laughing, said, "Anyone could see that you are no Mormon," (meaning Brighamite).

The pastor of the church in which the lecture was held is a good friend of ours and we intend to try in every way to obtain the use of his church for one of our elders. There has never been any preaching here and we feel certain good could be accomplished were an opening made. We shall do all we can in that direction.

Yours in the faith,

O. F. GUNSOLLEY.

MONTROSE, Iowa, Dec. 8.

Editors Herald:—I opened a new place at Ferris Illinois, and continued for two weeks to a large crowd every night; and some nights there was a jam, and I was told that if the hall had been large enough there would have been as many more there; for many had to leave for want of room. I believe there are many honest souls there.

A Christian minister from Nebraska (Elder Evans), opened the meetings three nights for me. He expressed himself well pleased with the way I presented the gospel, and I assure you I did not spare his theories, which are not according to the Scriptures. I left many warm friends at Ferris who invited me to come again. May the Spirit lead them into the light.

I began meetings here last Saturday night. Will continue for a time. I can see no let up yet.

In bonds,

J. S. ROTH.

CLARKSDALE, Mo, Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—I believe the Lord has given me the true interpretation of Sr. Dora's vision. It is this: The lake of crystal, living water is the kingdom of God (the church on earth; the straight, narrow stream of water running out of it, is the straight and narrow path unto everlasting life; and the old, dry tree is the power of Satan in the church.

The top being broken signifies his evil power partly overcome by the faithful workers of the church. They stand on the right side of the lake with their backs to the tree, with Christ's armor on; that is, ready for work, ready to strive in the regions round about the church to win souls to Jesus.

The ones sitting on the left side of the lake looking across at the workers are the idlers in the church. It remains for them to come up bravely and do battle with the evil in their own hearts and natures that makes them idlers and go to work in earnest and by so doing overcome Satan's power by finishing the breaking-down process of that old, dry tree; then catch up with the true laborers and strive, by God's help to fit themselves and others to travel this narrow, crystal path that leads to God.

I saw a request in the Herald for an interpretation of this vision. Hoping and believing that the Lord has favored me with the true explanation, I am,

One in the faith,

SR. L. PARKER.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, Nov. 20.

Editors Herald:—We have had Bro. William Thompson with us for several weeks past. He baptized three here and two at What Cheer. We feel the loss of his presence very much since he left.

I saw some reading in the Herald on tobacco. I may let you all know that I was a tobacco chewer for thirty years and on the 20th of August, 1894, Bro. F. A. Smith baptized me and I have never used it since; and will say to all who indulge in such that if they will go to God in earnest prayer, that God is faithful and just in answering prayer.

Our aged sister, Sr. Swalm, celebrated her seventy-fifth year to-day, and as the snow fell fast to-day, I took her out for a sleigh ride. She is enjoying the best of health since Sunday. She was administered to on Sunday by Elder Thompson and received a blessing long to be remembered.

The Oskaloosa branch is growing slowly under the circumstances. We meet in private houses but pray earnestly that we may be able to get a church before long, and that the door of the churches in this city may be opened for God's servants. We rejoice that the only daughter of our family has gone down into the waters of baptism in her youth.

Yours in gospel bonds,

JOSEPH SMITH YOUNG.

INDUSTRY, Kan., Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—Bro. A. J. Hagar and the writer came to this vicinity on the 3d inst., and began preaching at the Kirby school-house. I believe we have succeeded in removing some prejudice and have made friends for the cause.

It seems hard for the people to understand the necessity of obedience to every commandment of the Lord. It is no wonder that infidelity is spreading rapidly all over our land, with the people continually heaping to themselves teachers having itching ears, who turn their ears from the truth, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. Any thinking mind can readily see that religion like that cannot be relied upon; that there is no certainty about it; hence all is rejected and the God of the Bible becomes to them a myth.

When I behold the people earnestly and devotedly seeking salvation under such teachings my soul is stirred within me and I feel to cry out as did Paul—when he stood in the midst of Mar's hill, as he beheld their devotions and found an altar with the inscription, "To the unknown God," "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you."

Come worship the God of the Bible who made the world and all things therein, whom to know is life eternal. Without this knowledge of God and the attributes of his divine character we cannot have eternal life abiding in us.

Our district conference, held at Goshen branch, Clay County, November 30 and December 1, was a success. Quite a number of Saints came in from different parts of the district. Truly it is good to be a Saint in latter days. All business was transacted without a jar; peace and harmony prevailed, and when we clasped the parting hand we felt to say in our heart:—

"O how happy are we who in Jesus agree,
And expect his return from above;
We sit 'neath his vine and delightfully join
In the praise of his excellent love."

L. F. JOHNSON.

LAMAR, Mo., Dec. 10.

Editors Herald:—I have been busily engaged in the Master's service, with the exception of a few days at home after the death of my dear sister. While life's pathway is beset with trials, in the darkest hours we have felt like saying, "Lord, thy will be done."

On December 3 Elder C. R. Duncan and I bade loved ones at home farewell and took our departure for Southwestern Missouri; and as we left the Saints of Coal Hill and Veve branches my prayer was that God's blessings might rest upon them. Through the influence of Sr. Keck the Saints contributed money for my special benefit, for which I am thankful. Let the good work go on. And while the church is suffering from the lack of finance, the traveling elders may see a hard time unless the Saints come to their rescue; for their families at home will have to be supported and cared for first.

While at home a few days ago I had a warm reception from the Baptist brethren. I went over with my father, near Roscoe, to help him finish a well. At night we attended a business meeting at the Baptist church. The people did not know who or what I was. They were all sitting around the stove talking when I arose and told them that if they desired I would talk to them awhile about the gospel, as that was my business. One brother spoke up and said, "Yes, we would be glad to hear you." After singing and prayer I selected my text—1 Thessalonians 1: 5. I did not say anything about Latter Day Saintism, but before I finished they knew to what pew I belonged. After I had talked about half an hour I took a seat with the congregation. For about a minute there was perfect silence, but finally one brother jumped up and said, "Let us pray; if there ever was a time when we needed it it is right now." After prayer and song an old Baptist brother named Jones commenced to talk about business. He said: "Before I sit down I must refer to the brother's sermon. I am just confident that the young man will be doubly damned for the doctrine he teaches.

I know where he belongs; he is a Mormon, and the Roman Catholic Church is a credit beside the Mormon Church, I know all about Joe Smith," etc. When he had finished I arose and commenced to make an explanation, and before I sat down I said, "I will put Joseph Smith's character against that of any man before me to-night." Bro. Jones exclaimed in thunder tones, "You sit down;" but I didn't obey just then, but told the brother not to get excited. "You sit down or I will lick you on less ground than you can stand on," said he. Well, as a matter of course I sat down. My father desired to say a few words also and asked Bro. Jones the privilege of speaking, but Bro. Jones decided that it was contrary to law and order for anyone to speak but these "Christlike" (?) Baptists.

I have heard since that Mr. Jones' course was condemned by his own brethren, and parties told my father "Jones wouldn't have harmed that 'boy.'" I find that wherever we go and preach the "Bible" straight we can get these theological hirelings stirred up every time.

At present we are located at Lamar, stopping with Bro. Souders, who lives about one mile and a half northwest. We commence meetings to-night in their home district. I do not know what the result will be; the creed-bound people generally stay at home.

Bro. Duncan's health has been very poorly the last few months, but is now improving, and I think we will be able to accomplish some good in the hills of Barry and McDonald Counties this winter. We trust the Saints will remember us in their prayers, for the prayers of the righteous avail much.

Yours in the faith,

A. M. BAKER.

PALMETTO, Mo., Dec. 7.

Editors Herald:—I arrived home last Tuesday to look after temporal affairs, and will perhaps remain around home until the new year.

I joined Bro. Cather at Sargent, Missouri, November 22. The rain put off the meetings on Saturday night, but on Sunday the 24th, we held preaching services morning and evening. On Monday a snowstorm closed the meeting, though Bro. Cather spoke of beginning again Friday night, the 29th.

Everything looking dark and gloomy, I started back west on Wednesday, the 27th inst.; took Thanksgiving dinner with Bro. and Sr. Schofield and family, and on Friday, the 29th, left for home, stopping on my way at Stony point schoolhouse and preaching to the Saints four times, teaching and admonishing them to a humble obedience to the requirements of the whole gospel law in order to attain to the celestial glory.

I delight in this glorious work, as well as to preach the principles of the doctrine of Christ. I hope to be in the field soon; but we must not neglect our families. I hope and trust, however, that the time may soon come when I may be cut loose from cares of a temporal nature and their incumbrances and be permitted to go forth and defend this marvelous work and a wonder; for I delight in the law of the Lord, which is perfect, converting the soul, and to walk in all his statutes blameless, which if adhered to will make the simple ones wise.

As I journeyed toward home, wherever I found lodgment among strangers I took the liberty of sowing some of the seed of the kingdom preparatory to opening the work in new fields, which are many in this district, where the people say they never heard of this restored gospel. God being my helper some of them shall hear it as soon as I can take the field again. Yours in the faith,

J. P. BENSON.

BEAVER, Texas, Nov. 8.

Editors Herald:—For the benefit of those in charge of this mission permit me to state through the Herald, that Mr. Sewall stated at the close of the debate held at Manchester, Texas, in September, that he wanted to discuss with an apostle, and of course carried the idea that he gained the victory when he met Bro. I. N. White in July. Mr. Chisholm stated that he would give twenty-five dollars to pay expenses, etc. Mr. Chisholm also stated that he would like to get hold of Bro. Kelley.

Of course these gentlemen showed their defeat in this, but inasmuch as an apostle was challenged, I believe one of those gentlemen ought to be met by an apostle.

I will say that I never felt better than I did while defending the Prophet Joseph Smith, and I did so conscientiously. I was sick during the debate, but when I was in defense of Mr. Smith my sickness would cease. At first the people would laugh at Mr. Chisholm's abuse, but it got old after awhile, and when they would laugh at some of the arguments brought against Mr. Chisholm, Mr. Sewall, Mr. Chisholm's moderator, said, "You must not laugh at arguments."

I left feeling satisfied, and hope and pray the good Lord to bless what was said, to the convincing of the honest of the restored gospel.

Your brother,

A. J. MOORE.

LEWISTON, Ill., Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—While reading the article from the pen of Bro. Leabo, of Grant's Pass, Oregon, speaking of the people of the North Country coming very soon, brought to my mind a vision I had when Bro. Gurley, Sen., was living, in a prayer meeting in Abingdon more than thirty years ago. I saw a vessel start for the North Country with no one on board but the crew, enough for the working of the ship, and two elders and the writer of this; a beautiful vessel, clean as clean could be.

We sailed directly to the ice bound regions, reaching all in safety. The vessel was guided through the different openings that seemed to be made for her especial benefit, and finally came to a wall of ice so high that I could not see the top. The vessel came up to the wall of ice head on, so that the end of the bowsprit touched the ice, and stopped, as if the vessel was alive and knew what was wanted of it. The two elders then took their stations, one on the starboard and the other on the larboard on the forecastle. The one on the larboard raised his hands and commanded the wall of ice to open a passage in the name of Jesus Christ.

As soon as the command had gone forth a tremendous crack with a very loud noise accompanying it was seen from top to bottom, and the ice parted and continued to do so, 'till a passage opened plenty wide enough for the vessel to pass through.

I had mounted the fore-castle and was looking to see what I could see beyond the wall. I saw a very large body of smooth water, and on the shore as far as I could see was an immense multitude of all ages, and they seemed to be expecting us; for such clapping of hands and gestures of joyful display I never saw. We landed and they were informed that the time of their return had come or would come shortly. They received the word readily and rejoiced to know that they were not forgotten.

T. F. STAFFORD.

P. S.—My brother Edwin and William A. Moore were present at the time.

HATMAKER, Mich., Dec. 8.

Editors Herald:—Here I am on new ground; but, how pleasant. To-night we delivered the fifth sermon to nearly three hundred people, including the silver-haired sires and the gay and gladsome youths. I have never seen the enthusiasm manifested in any locality as it is in this. We were promised the use of the Congregational church at this point and then refused it. The schoolhouse was procured through the instrumentality of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, who are believers in the doctrine since hearing at Dimond, and a grand success they have seen in the meetings here. The people wished to hire us to preach for the year at the Congregational church, telling us what they would give, severally; but we modestly declined, turning our possibility over to the man who preaches for money. So far the people drink the doctrine down as "pure water to a thirsty soul." Such crowds we haven't had since our meeting last winter at Flint. I am twelve miles south of Coldwater, and west, just fourteen miles north of Flint, Indiana. My impression is that a work will be done here.

I am due at California next Saturday evening to begin a series of discourses; announced to lecture on "Mormonism" on Sunday evening. So goes the battle.

Hopefully in the conflict,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

CENTERVILLE, Iowa, Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—Since I wrote you last I have endeavored to encourage the Saints and warn sinners. I have labored chiefly in Mahaska County. I baptized two at What Cheer and three at Oskaloosa who had been convinced of the gospel by the efforts of the resident Saints. At both these places I find the Saints alive in the work.

My last efforts were at Youngstown, near Des Moines, commencing on the 5th inst., with about fifty in attendance, about eighty the next night. This is a place where much evil exists, beer apparently being more acceptable to the majority than religion. I am sorry I could not stay with them longer, but just before going to meeting on the 6th I received the intelligence that my companion was lying dangerously ill with appendicitis, so I had to close my meeting. At present writing Mrs. Thompson is very low; the doctor is doubtful of her recovery; a change is expected soon for better or worse.

As there are several places I promised to go and preach where there are isolated Saints, I take this method to inform you of our condition at home. It is quite possible that I shall not be able to go away from home any more this winter; a few more days will determine. But I shall still hope and pray for the success of this latter-day work and I hope to have grace to bear all things and let the Lord's will be done. Peace be to all of God's children.

Your fellow servant,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

WILLIAMSTON, Mich., Dec. 9.

Editors Herald:—I came here in answer to a letter from Elder T. Horton stating that the Saints at Webberville desired that I labor there. Bro. Horton fitted up a vacant store and I have been holding forth in it, also laboring some at Webberville. There is a good interest manifested. Three heads of families have obeyed and several others seem to be very near the kingdom. An Advent elder and his wife at Webberville are investigating.

We have had several spiritual feasts since coming here, for the Lord has blessed us in power—in such a way that it was felt by those not of the faith.

Yours in bonds,

LEVI PHELPS.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 6.

Editors Herald:—Our October conference was a good one, being blessed with the presence of Brn. F. A. Smith and J. F. Mintun, of the Seventy, and C. H. Porter, missionary in charge. Brn. Smith and Mintun continued meetings for a week after the close of conference, with good interest.

Leaving conference for home, I met Bro. Porter at Blair, and after one night at home we passed through to Springfield, where we held meetings for nearly a week in the Christian Advent church, Bro. F. C. Watkins, pastor. We had fair attendance and interest, but no additions in membership. From there I went to Cedar County, where there had been no preaching done except a few sermons by Bro. W. M. Rumel three years ago and a two weeks' stay last fall by the writer. Our stay this fall was cut short, being called away as one of a court of elders, but while there I had the pleasure of baptizing the wife of Bro. D. W. Albertson. They are very nice people and workers for truth.

Reaching Lake Shore branch I found Bro. J. F. Mintun hammering away, manfully striving for the Master. We have hopes of ultimate victory. Having adjusted the difficulty without trial, on November 24, we had the pleasure of baptizing three precious souls, one a fine young man, the others husband and wife, the wife being formerly a Catholic and a very nice appearing lady. These, with the two I baptized at conference, make six during October and November.

Returned home for Thanksgiving; had the pleasure of opening Sunday morning service for Bro. F. A. Smith in the Saints' chapel, December 1; also of meeting Bro. A. H. Smith. May the Lord preserve him for many a year to come. On December 2 I was called to Blair to administer to the sick.

FLINT, Ind., Dec. 11.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday's mail brought a letter stating that Bro. Daniel's financial affairs will prevent him from joining me ere Christmas. Brn. Briggs and Scott are elsewhere in the district, but the latter is expected here soon.

Most of my preaching has been done alone, and very often I have acted as chorister, assistant preacher, and sometimes janitor, as well as dispenser of the word; which partially removes the disadvantage of being left without ministerial aid. While the God-appointed rule that the elders should go "two and two" is one with which we should endeavor to comply, yet like all others it has exceptions under certain exigencies, as it is clear that Philip was alone on his mission to Samaria.

A series of twelve services closed here last night with good results we hope. I shall begin preaching to-night in the hall at Appelmanburg, a small town a few miles distant. Bro. Scott preached there once last winter.

My efforts have been successful in a degree since I came to this district, but I am harassed with the thought that a number of points in the southern part of this State where I introduced the work need my attention. Others could look after them were it not that they already have more than they can do. I would send a number of Ensign subscriptions to parties in those regions if lack of means did not prevent.

My work has been scattered considerably this year, but I notice that I have delivered one hundred and sixty-three sermons.

Yours in Christ,

A. C. BARMORE.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, Dec. 10.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Wm. Thompson came here in September and labored here and in the regions round about for some five or six weeks. His labors with the Oskaloosa branch were very beneficial to us, as were his labors among Saints who are scattered some distance around this place. During his stay he organized a Sunday school, which is proving a very beneficial factor. I have come to believe that no branch is thoroughly equipped for effective work without a Sunday school. Bro. Thompson's labors also bore fruit among those outside, he baptizing three here besides some, I believe, at other places in this vicinity. Brn. Miller and Batten of What Cheer, Iowa, have also labored some here.

We all feel well in the work with a growing desire to more fully come up to all the requirements of God's law. As one who has the responsibilities of presiding over a little flock I wish to express my humble thanks for the valued aid of my brethren and sisters, and above all do I prize their humble prayers for me. We are few in number and seem but a drop in the bucket in this city of some nine thousand inhabitants, with no place to meet but from house to house; yet we are hopeful that some day we shall have a house of worship and see the work built up here.

In bonds,

C. B. BROWN.

MORRISON, Ok., Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—Please say to the Saints and ministry of the Southwestern mission that my address till further notice will be Norman, Oklahoma.

All is peaceful since the debate and Saints are rejoicing. Bro. Maloney and I are holding a series of meetings here with fair prospects.

Yours in bonds,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

ALLENDALE, Mo., Dec. 13.

Editors Herald:—The Glendenning-Lambert debate commenced here last Tuesday at two p. m. with fair attendance for the place. Elder William Williams, of Leon, Iowa, is moderator for Elder Glendenning, and Elder J. S. Snively for Elder J. R. Lambert. The usual position was taken by Elder Glendenning that God made man of the dust and that made him wholly mortal; while Elder Lambert took the position that God made man first spiritual and that he was made a little lower than the angels.

Elder Glendenning persistently claims that anything but the dust man is not a part of man proper, and illustrates it by saying that a man may put an overcoat on but it does not become a part of the man. Elder Lambert as persistently maintains that the "inner man" is the main part of man, and supported his position by many Scriptural quotations.

Elder Glendenning acted quite gentlemanly the first day of the debate, but as it progresses he is drifting into the usual tactics of ridicule and abuse, such as when Bro. Lambert referred to Jesus having been put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit, by which he went and preached to the spirits in prison, as stated by the Apostle Peter, Elder Glendenning supposed that Jesus went to hold a revival in hell; and when he made the statement that eternal life is not immortality, he turned to Bro. Lambert and said, "Let that sock in," notwithstanding in a former speech he had argued that immortality was eternal life.

Your readers will be at a loss to see where "Joe Smith's blunders" come in in proving that man is wholly mortal; and yet Elder Glendenning is just that kind of a gentleman to inject such statements in with his argument in floundering to prove that man is wholly mortal.

We have had preaching every night since the debate commenced. Bro. J. W. Gillen preached Tuesday night, Bro. J. S. Snively on Wednesday, Elder Roberts of the Christian Church last night, and Bro. S. V. Bailey is preaching to-night while I am writing.

Bro. Lambert is doing good work, whatever may be the result; his health is not very good, but as usual, when the time for the conflict comes he waxes strong, until it is over at least. The Saints are feeling well and we are hopeful of good results. To-morrow will finish the first proposition and the second will be commenced on Monday afternoon.

Mr. James Hunt is acting as chairman and is not identified with any church. He seems to be a gentleman and a lover of fair play.

In gospel bonds,

WILLIAM ANDERSON.

"WHERE IS THE PROOF?"

WERE it not that a very grave misapplication of my so-called "labored effort" has been made, I would make no effort whatever to further continue the controversy, from the fact that there is too much animus begotten by such efforts as a rule.

Labor as we will, in at least nine out of every ten cases it is safe to say that a desire for the "mastery" rather than the truth is apparent on the part of both sides, and expressions harsh in their nature are used which it were much better had been left unsaid.

To illustrate my meaning more fully, and for this purpose only, a sentence used by the brother in his article in Herald of December 4, is given as a case in point, and is as follows:—

If the "other side" could be found without such a labored effort, and without assuming false and indefensible positions, it would show far better for the one who has undertaken to hunt it up.

Did I not know the brother personally, I would be constrained to believe this to be an exhibition of animus, however it may appear to others. To me it seems an uncalled for statement and a reflection on the user, from the following reasons: First, if true it is harsh; second, the one making it imposes on the intelligence of the readers or the auditor, as the case may be, in assuming that they need to be told about it; third, clause three couches an innuendo, and to resort to that does the user more injury than anyone else. But I wish it distinctly understood that I do not wish to implicate Bro. Lambert, for I know him sufficiently to believe it to have been his manner rather than his intentions; and I have given this partial analysis more to illustrate as well as demonstrate my objection to such controversies than to involve anyone, and more especially one whom, outside of controversy, I esteem as highly as anyone in the church.

No, the "most" positive manner would have been to say, "Nicodemus was a coward!" But to use the qualifying expression "doubtless" would necessarily imply that in the mind of the user it was "without doubt or question, unquestionably," but not that he necessarily knew it to be a fact only as it appealed to him and him alone. This at least was what I meant to convey when I used the term "safer basis" in contradistinction to the "most" positive basis to be assumed.

I infer the man to have been a coward or he would not have chosen the night rather than the day to visit the Master, hence there is neither doubt nor question in my mind.

It was not with a desire to make a "clever use" of it, that I used the brother's caption, but to call attention to the fact that in my mind he was doing the very thing that he had set out to condemn—making a positive statement while the proof of the same was lacking. I am as yet unconverted.

If by holding "priesthood authority," etc., etc., Jesus could have bestowed blessings without the laying on of hands, or by contact in some way, so could and can every "apostle, high priest, and prophet." Does not such a statement really infer that the laying on of hands is, after all, a non-essential, so far, at least, as these officers are concerned?

To lay hands on would have required him to lift "up his hands," and thus far, at least, the inference is in favor of his having laid hands on them. A still further inference is found in the forty-ninth verse:—

Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you.

By comparing verses 36-40 of this chapter with John 20: 19, 20, it will be seen that the occasion and time are the same. In fact none will deny this. John records that after having "breathed on them" he said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." These words clearly infer that this was an act of confirmation; and that this is accomplished by laying on of hands none will deny. These facts seem to quite clearly "intimate that he laid his hands upon them."

My statement "that he was not as yet given," was meant to apply to the disciples, and them only, and had I been a little more explicit it would have saved the brother the trouble of writing out all those texts about Zacharias, Jesus, et al. receiving it. It were folly for me to deny its existence in Jesus and "holy men" of God in "old time."

It is quite true that it (the Holy Ghost) was with the disciples (John 14:17) because Jesus was with them and it wrought in him; but that it had not as yet been in them is evident, for Jesus says,

He dwelleth with you, and SHALL be in you.

Verses 5-11 of this chapter clearly show that neither Thomas nor Philip had received it or it would have given them a knowledge of Jesus.

By comparing the commission of Jesus to the apostles and seventy, with 1 Corinthians 12:8-10, it will be discovered that he conferred upon them none of these gifts, unless it was that of "healing;" and I am of the opinion that even that, in the sense implied by Paul, was not given, but they were given official or priest-hood authority over all manner of diseases. Where do we read of special miracles wrought by the disciples till after Pentecost? Healing was and is more dependent on faith than authority, as witness the case of Jesus in his own country where himself "could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. And he marvelled because of their unbelief."

That ministers, since Christ's ascension, "cannot represent God . . . except through the light, and power, and authority of the Holy Ghost," I believe; but that they did do so for some two years of his ministry, at least, is positively evident from John 7:39:—

But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.

The reader will notice that it says nothing about "as an abiding Comforter." To me this very emphatic statement is wanting in "positive" proof, and the making of it is just as reprehensible in a writer as in a pulpiteer.

Where did I "assume that material contact is always, and under all circumstances needed, or essential, in order to receive blessings from the infinite God?" Nowhere! Why try to make me the author of such a thought when I had not so much as intimated such a thing, but stated directly the opposite? Here is what I did say:—

I am satisfied that he [Jesus] could have asked God to bless them [the apostles] while in the occupancy of such an attitude [standing with his hands raised], but very doubtful that he [Jesus] could have blessed [them] without contact with their person.

Does that teach, or even so much as intimate, that these disciples could not "receive blessings from the infinite God?" No; but it does not teach that I then believed that Jesus—do you wish to convey that Jesus was the "infinite God"?—could not have blessed them by simply raising his hands, for under this condition there would have been no means of conveying the blessing from the giver to the recipient; whereas, had the hands been laid on, the positive and negative, so to speak, would have been in an opposite condition, a complete circuit formed, a means of transmission at hand, and the blessing of and from Jesus been conveyed without let or hindrance.

The cases cited, the Syro-Phenician woman, nobleman, and centurion, seem rather to infer that they had such faith as to "have power with God," by which he did the work, instead of Jesus conferring the blessing. "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel," was the Master's statement. If Jesus could have healed thus separated, and did do it, why did he say to the centurion, "I will come and heal him"? That Jesus knew, inspirationally, that the blessing had come by the operation of "so great faith," seems the more reasonable inference. And the statement of Luke (4:40) strengthens this inference materially.

Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.

In recording the same instance Matthew says:—

He cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick.

Mark speaks of the same incident as follows:—

And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils.

The silence of two out of the three witnesses, as to contact, strengthens the inference that Jesus could have laid his hands on at Bethany, and yet Luke remain silent.

In comparing the testimony of the same three with regard to Peter's mother-in-law, it will be seen that Luke is the silent one as to "material contact," while the other two testify in its favor.

If it were granted Jesus to bless without contact, so could every man holding like priesthood. Why did he lay "hands on every one of them"? And why did he say "they shall lay hands on the sick"? If it be argued that it does not necessarily comprise every instance, then is established—if such argument be true—the theorem that you don't need to baptize every one, or that some might pass muster without a confirmation!

In the case of the widow's son in Nain (Luke 7:11-14) "material contact" was "essential," hence inferential evidence that the same was true of Lazarus, though John is silent. The ruler's daughter (Matt. 9:18, 25) and Eutychus (Acts 20:9, 10) are cases in point and serve to strengthen the inference.

I am not aware that any have raised "their hands with holy horror at the appearance of such an article as, 'Where is the proof?'" To me, in the main, it was good, and by a perusal of "The other side," it will be noted that the first portion thereof was a "defense" of myself, and that but two criticisms of "Where is the proof?" were offered, the material one being against his very positive statement that Christ could have blessed by simply raising the hands. This statement I then thought, and still believe, was just as much wanting in proof as the very things he condemned in his article. It therefore appears to me that his own interrogation in his reply to Bro. Crabb will fit his case admirably,

While he is prescribing for others who are supposed to be sick, why does he not take his own medicine when down with the same complaint?

If to criticise is to "block the wheels of progress" and throw "discredit upon a friendly effort," then is not the brother himself reprehensible for criticising the positive statements of those aimed at in his article? Or does he wish us to infer that theirs was not "a friendly effort to help others, for the work's sake?" He surely does not wish us to infer that his effort was beyond the pale of criticism.

Trusting that the prolixity of this article will be excused on the ground that the necessity arose for becoming more explicit, I remain,

For truth,

J. W. WIGHT.

TARDY JUSTICE.

It will be gratifying to the readers of the Herald to know that historians have been led to avoid giving the old false representations of the rise of the Church of Christ in these last days, which fact I have discovered by reading three new histories of the United States named in their order below, full statements of which I give verbatim:—

Utah has a population enough for a State. It was settled by people professing the Mormon religion. This religion allowed the practice of polygamy, and some of the Mormons had more than one wife apiece. For this reason Congress has hitherto been unwilling to admit Utah to the Union.—"A History of the United States and its People for the use of Schools, by Edward Eggleston," p. 369.

The Mormons.—A religious sect called Mormons had settled at Nauvoo, Illinois, (1840). Here they built a city of several thousand inhabitants and laid the foundation of a costly temple. Having incurred the enmity of the people about them, their leader, Joseph Smith, was taken from the custody of the authorities, to whom he had intrusted himself, and killed. (1844.) The city was bombarded for three days, and finally the inhabitants fled to Iowa. (1846.)

Foot Note.—Joseph Smith, while living at Palmyra, New York, claimed to have had a supernatural revelation by which he was directed to a spot where he found buried a series of golden plates covered with inscriptions, which he translated by means of two transparent stones (Urim and Thummim) found with them. The result was the Book of Mormon, said to be the history of a race favored by God, who occupied this continent at a remote period of antiquity. The Mormons accept the Holy Bible as received by all Christian people, but believe the Book of Mormon to be an additional revelation, and also that their chief prophet receives direct inspiration from God. They practice plural marriage, or polygamy, claiming that the Scriptures justify, while one of their revelations directly commanded it. After the death of Smith and their expulsion from Nauvoo, a company under the leadership of Brigham Young crossed the Rocky Mountains and settled near Great Salt Lake, in Utah. They were followed by others of their sect, and after great sufferings succeeded in subduing the barren soil and establishing a prosperous colony. They founded Salt Lake City, where they erected a large temple for worship. Their prophet, Brigham Young, who died August 19, 1877, is still remembered by his followers with the greatest reverence.—"A Brief History of the United States, by Joel Dorman Steele, Ph. D., F. G. S. and Esther Baker Steele, Lit. D." (Barnes' Historical Series.) pp. 182-83.

The Mormons.—A peculiar sect called the Mormons settled at Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1840. They began the erection of a fine temple, and the place grew rapidly in population. The people about them, however, became so incensed that they attacked Nauvoo, in 1844, killed Joseph Smith, the leader, and drove out the Mormons. They fled to Iowa, and finally founded Salt Lake City, Utah, where they are most numerous at the present day.—"A School History of the United States, by Ellis," p. 159.

On page 250 of the last work quoted is recorded the passage of the "Edmunds law."

From the foregoing extracts from those several histories we see a laudable desire, if not to correct former errors, to at least avoid them, for which I am glad. They make no reference to the Reorganized Church, but they have avoided the former false representations, which is praiseworthy.

OUR HEROES.

OUR heroes have not worn the helmet and harness of knighthood. They have not ridden spirited horses and worn gay colors into joust, and tournament, and tilt, while fair women and brave men cheered them on. They have not sat at the round table under the glamour of glory to drink the red wine and eat the king's meat; but they have gone forth upon a noble quest to right the wrong.

They are the more heroes because they are the more unknown. They have stood for their King in the dark byways where no voice was lifted to cheer, no hand wound them about with the scarf of victory. Perhaps no friend save one ministered to them in their hour of need.

Many of them came from the field where they had followed the plow and harvested grain from youth. Some were found in stores, some in factories, some on the sea, some upon the plains where they have ridden the broncho and swung the lariat. Their King found them, and while they kneeled to repent he touched them with the palm of his hand upon the heart until the soul became greater than the flesh; then he washed them with pure water and knighted them, often with sorrow and persecution, and sent them forth to fight for the gospel, for the oppressed, the imprisoned, the bound of Satan.

They went forth bearing their weapons, three books and the Spirit of God. They followed their quest into Europe, Australia, Asia, and the islands of the sea. When they bade good-bye to wife, and child, and home, their integrity was tried; when they followed their devious way in sorrow, persecution, hunger, their heroism was proven.

They shed their blood in Missouri, at Carthage, upon the plains, until the land, and sea, and the islands everywhere are the unmarked sepulchers of holy men of God.

Some of them were called to remain at home and in the humblest of toil prove the excellence of their King by the excellence of their lives, and these were perhaps the greatest heroes of them all. Better for the husband who went into the activity of the strife than for the wife who remained at home to mourn.

Some of them like Lancelot the highest have sinned and gone aside. Others like the good Bedivere have stood by their King when he seemed wounded to the death. They have seen his cause overthrown and trampled into the dust, and have waited for years until he sent another leader; then they rallied instantly, and up from their midst came but one cry, "Glory to God, and on with the work."

Shall these heroes remain unhymned, unsung, who have inscribed upon their shields, "We have no resting place, our home is all the world"? Perhaps, to the world; but they are ours. We love them; they are our heroes, and we write their names over against the greatest. Our every family nearly has given to their number; our every family pays them tribute. Those who have given up husbands, or gone without a father's care, know what it is to sacrifice for the gospel's sake.

When Christ their King shall come he will find some of them waiting, striving, laboring; he will anoint them and dress them in fine linen. Then he will search for his dead heroes and find them every one, though their graves be unmarked and covered with the long grass. Unsought save by the dog violet and the wild rose, he will open each grave, and lift each cold form out to life, and crown each brow with laurel, and whisper, "Victory won," to each ear that has heard so often the groan of defeat.

He will lead his knights home to dwell in his hall and eat at his table round, and all the joys they have foregone for his sake shall be returned doubled, and trebled, and glorified. A special glory shall be theirs who have led souls from darkness into sunlight.

Conference Minutes.

FREMONT.

Conference convened at the Plum Creek church, Thurman, Iowa, October 26, at ten a.m. The president being absent, the secretary called the conference to order. Bro. H. Kemp was appointed president of the conference; T. A. Hougas secretary. Reports were received and read of the Glenwood, Shenandoah, Union, Elm Creek, Farm Creek, Hamburg, Plum Creek, and Keystone branches. Written reports were received as follows: Elders D. Hougas, J. B. Cline, W. Leeka, W. W. Gaylord, J. Comstock, O. B. Thomas, Henry Kemp baptized 6, S. Orton, N. L. Mortimore, W. D. Ledingham, A. Badham, G. Kemp, T. A. Hougas, G. W. Walling baptized 1, and J. C. Moore; Priests L. C. Donaldson, R. S. Hillyer, W. H. Walling, H. F. Durfey, L. D. Frederickson, D. Comstock, A. J. Davidson, F. G. Dungee; Teacher S. Dike, Jr.; Deacon C. C. Case. Bishop's Agent's report: Received since March 1, 1895, $250; paid out $345; due agent $95. Audited and found correct. Missions were assigned as follows: McPaul and Shady Glen, J. C. Moore and H. F. Durfey; Fairview, A. Badham; McKissie Island, N. L. Mortimore and Frank Becksted; Elm Creek, Bartlett and vicinity, S. Orton and George Kemp; Glenwood and vicinity, W. H. and G. W. Walling; Plum Creek and vicinity, A. J. Davidson and L. D. Frederickson. Moved to pay return freight on district tent. Carried. Moved to hold our next conference at Shenandoah, Iowa, at call of the district president. Carried. Motion obtained sustaining the present officers of the district. They are, D. Hougas president, T. A. Hougas secretary, and W. Leeka, Bishop's agent, Sunday at 9:30 the Plum Creek Sunday school held its regular session. A black-board review was given by T. A. Hougas. Preaching by Brn. H. Kemp, A. Badham, and T. A. Hougas. Adjourned as per resolution. The conference was well attended, and well enjoyed by all present.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Conference convened with the Nebraska City branch, October 13 and 14; J. W. Waldsmith president, M. H. Forscutt assistant; J. L. Diefendorf secretary. District president reported work failing some in the district, especially financially, on account of the hard times brought on by the failure of crops for the last three years. Branch reports: Brownville 20; 2 absent. Cottonwood 35; 9 baptized, 21 absent. Fairfield 55; 18 baptized, 5 absent. Haigler 40; 2 baptized, 13 absent. Lincoln 43; 3 removed, 33 absent. Nebraska City 134; 7 baptized, 1 received, 1 removed, 2 died, 36 absent. Palmyra 35; no change. Blue River 160; 1 baptized. No reports from Snowflake, Hebron, and Union branches. Ministry report: Elders C. H. Porter baptized two, J. W. Waldsmith baptized 1, R. C. Elvin, M. H. Forscutt baptized 17, P. C. Peterson, J. Thompson, C. E. Blodgett baptized 11, E. D. Bullard baptized 3, W. M. Self baptized 1; Priest F. D. Bullard baptized 2; Teachers R. O. Self and O. A. Savage. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $80.59; received $262.89; expended $335.54; on hand $7.94. The following resolution was presented and laid over till next June conference: Whereas the General Conference has decided that the business of the church should be done by the conferences and that the conferences should consist of delegates properly chosen by the bodies to be represented and by the elders in charge, therefore be it resolved that hereafter the branches of this district be requested to send delegates to the several district conferences according to the rules constituting them representative or delegate conferences. Matter of disorganizing the Lincoln, Brownville, and Snowflake branches laid over for four months. Brn. M. H. Forscutt and M. J. Schafer were appointed as committee to regulate matters in Union branch. District officers sustained for the next four months; J. W. Waldsmith sustained as Bishop's agent. Next conference at Wilber, Nebraska, February 23 and 24. Preaching by Elders M. H. Forscutt and W. M. Self.

TEXAS CENTRAL.

Conference convened with Texas Central branch, November 23, at ten a.m.: E. W. Nunley president, W. G. McIntosh secretary. Branch reports read and approved: Texas Central 62; 4 baptized. Cook's Point 35; 1 removed. Ministry reporting: Elders J. W. Bryan, W. W. Squires, S. R. Hay, W. G. McIntosh, E. W. Nunley baptized 4; Priest C. A. Shuster. Voted that when this conference adjourns it does so to meet with Cook's Point branch third Saturday in March at ten a.m. Preaching by Elders S. R. Hay, E. W. Nunley, and W. G. McIntosh. District Sunday school report read and adopted by the conference. Adjourned as per resolution.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS.

Conference convened with the Goshen branch, November 30 and December 1, at ten a. m.: A. Kent president, C. D. Carson secretary, L. F. Johnson assistant. Some encouraging remarks were made by A. Kent pertaining to the condition of the district. Ministry reporting: Elders A. Kent, H. Resch, M. Smith, A. Smith, H. Hart, J. S. Goble, T. E. Thompson, and V. F. Rogers; Priests L. F. Johnson, F. M. Dennis, and A. Hagar; Teacher C. D. Carson. Branch reports: Blue Rapids 76, gain 6. Goshen 74, gain 3. Solomon River 15, loss 7. Elmira 41, no change. Voted that this body appoint A. Kent to compile from the district records as shall be for our guidance at our district conferences. Voted to restore A. J. Hagar's license as priest. Bishop's agent's report read and accepted: August 16, 1895, on hand $21.57; receipts $5.25; total $26.82; expended $25; on hand November 30, $1.82. Sister Landers, of Concordia, spoke very encouragingly of the Prayer Union at that place; believed that a great deal of good had been done. Voted that this conference request L. F. Johnson to labor as missionary in the Northwestern Kansas district this coming quarter, making Goshen branch the objective point. Adjourned to meet with the Blue Rapids branch the second Saturday and Sunday in March. Preaching by Brn. C. D. Carson, A. Hagar, and A. Kent.

BIRMINGHAM.

A special conference was held by request of Apostles James Caffall and G. T. Griffiths at Birmingham, November 16, 17, and 18, 1895. Conference was called to order by Elder C. H. Caton, who explained the reasons the conference had been called together, and proposed to vacate the chair in favor of the missionaries. Brn. Caffall and Griffiths were voted to preside. G. S. Greenwood secretary. Bro. J. Caffall then proceeded to speak to the conference in regard to the business to come before the conference. He gave in a report of action taken by himself and Bro. G. T. Griffiths in a case of long standing in this mission. The report reads:—

To the president and elders in special conference assembled at Birmingham, Nov. 16, 1895:—"Where cases of difficulty are of long standing, the council may require local authorities to adjust them; and in case of failure to do so, may regulate them as required by their office and duty."—D. C. 120: 7. Thinking the law supreme we felt authorized to act as hereinafter stated.

From documentary evidence it is made to appear that Andrew Thompson and Lovina Shaw have lived together as husband and wife in Hanley, Staffordshire, since 1869, in opposition to revealed and accepted laws of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and from said documents we learn: First, That a council of officials was held at Hanley, December, 1869, and said council entertained an appeal case, Bro. A. Thompson being the appellant. Second, That the aforesaid A. Thompson, having been suspended from church fellowship for alleged cause of separation from his wife and associating with another party. Third, That the council decided that evidence presented by the Saints showed that the wife was the offending party; that she was a determined opposer of the latter-day work and had in several instances by improper conduct brought upon him embarrassment and temporal difficulties. Fourth, That Bro. A. Thompson had always provided well for his family, keeping them in comfortable circumstances, but the conduct of his wife was unreasonable and insufferable, and that the separation of his wife was by mutual agreement, upon the condition of his allowing her a maintenance, which he had hitherto done. Fifth, That upon inquiry no counter testimony was offered. On the other hand, when the whole case was presented the brethren were unanimous for his continued fellowship. Sixth, The court upon evidence presented, and understanding of the law of God relating to like case, 1 Corinthians 7:10 to 15 inclusive, decided that Bro. A. Thompson's condition in life compelled him to have some worthy person associated with him, and that agreeable to the law of God he was no longer in bondage in the case, as the wife had departed repeatedly and finally at her own instance and accord, and had agreed to a final separation. Seventh, The testimony showed clearly that peaceful relations could not be maintained as man and wife, and that his temporal circumstances were repeatedly destroyed by his wife's unreasonably bad conduct. In view of the above we notified Bro. A. Thompson to appear at a designated time and place on the 12th of November, 1895, for a given and stated purpose. But as he failed to appear, we on the morning of the 13th of November, 1895, proceeded to his private residence, St. Johns Street, Hanley, Staffordshire, and were respectfully received. The presentation of the above documents fully explained the object of our visit. Referring to the laws of the church, the order of marriage as laid down in the Doctrine and Covenants, we respectfully but positively informed them that they had been living in adultery since 1869, which they did not deny. Moreover, Bro. A. Thompson admitted that according to English law governing marriage he could not marry so long as his wife lived; and if she was to die he would marry. We then essayed to perform the grave and to us unpleasant duty of informing them the course they must pursue in order to enjoy fellowship in the church. This Bro. A. Thompson positively refused to do, saying he would prefer to go into eternity as he was, and very emphatically informed us that he did not wish to submit to any further investigation on the matter. We were respectfully treated all through the investigation. In view of the foregoing facts, we recommend that the conference take action against Andrew Thompson and Lovina Shaw, all of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES CAFFALL,

G. T. GRIFFITHS,

Missionaries in Charge.

P. S.—We are of the opinion that our predecessors have failed to execute the law.

Had it been carried out, different results would have obtained, much trouble avoided, and the fair fame of the church would have been fostered, but as it is she has suffered shame.

J. C.

G. T. G.

Elder C. H. Caton asked the liberty to speak on the matter now before the conference. He made a clear and definite statement in regard to this question covering the greater part of the last twenty years; when it was resolved, That we indorse the report of Brethren James Caffall and G. T. Griffiths and approve their action; and, Resolved, That Bro. Andrew B. Thompson and Lovina Shaw be expelled [from] the church. Carried.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths having to leave the conference enroute for Liverpool and thence home, bade the conference adieu in a few well-chosen remarks. The good wishes and earnest prayers of one and all go with him across the deep, and every heart responds to the God bless you farewell. "God be with you till we meet again."

Bro. James Caffall said he wished to make a few statements in regard to ministerial labor. He went on to speak upon the duties of elders (traveling) and also elders laboring in branches, explaining the duties and responsibilities of each. He also advised the district president to allot a field to elders and priests in the district not otherwise provided for. C. H. Caton, district president, also spoke, and several of the brethren; when it was resolved to adjourn the business portion of this conference to Monday night, eight p. m. Services were announced for Sunday, 17th: Preaching by Elders G. S. Greenwood and J. R. Greenwood. Evening, preaching by Apostle James Caffall. Congregations good and attentive.

Monday, November 18, eight p. m.—The conference again assembled, Bro. James Caffall presiding. Resolved, That Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths be elected delegate of this the Birmingham district, England, to represent us at the forthcoming Annual Conference of the general church authorities, to be held at Kirtland, Ohio, in April next, and that the district authorities are hereby authorized to prepare the necessary papers for his appointment and forward them when duly signed. Carried.

A MITE.—One of the young gentlemen in the senior class of Columbia College wears a "widow's mite," surrounded with diamonds, as a scarfpin. The "mite" is a tiny bronze coin, about the circumference of a green pea, bearing the medallion of Cæsar Augustus on one side and some undecipherable tracery on the other. It is such a coin as the poor woman dropped into the box of offerings at the temple when she gave "her all." The only clue to the value of this smallest of Roman coins is offered by St. Mark, who is made to say in the King James translation: "Two mites make a farthing." A mite, therefore, represents a quarter of a cent of our money. There is said to be only one other specimen in America, and that is in the museum of the mint at Philadelphia.

INDEPENDENCE.

Convention convened at Independence, Missouri, December 6, at 2:30 p. m.; A. L. Newton superintendent, Abbie A. Horton secretary. Twenty-five, including delegates and visitors, present. The superintendent's report, on being read, was adopted. Treasurer's report: On hand September 6, 1895, $7.61; paid for blanks and stationery 25 cents; paid to literary exchange $1; on hand December 6, $6.36. Literary exchange report: Sent out during the last quarter literature as follows: 54 Heralds, 58 Ensigns, 36 Hopes, 54 tracts, 6 sermons, and 3 Chronicles. On hand September 6, 1895, 3 cents; received from association $1; paid for postals, stamps, etc., 50 cents; on hand December 6, 53 cents. These reports, also the school reports, being read, were adopted. School reports: Mt. Zion, Independence: Sessions 13, enrollment 384, average attendance 226, total number classes 26, officers 8, in treasury $4.99, Hopes taken 140. Armstrong: Sessions 13, total enrollment 103, average attendance 65, number of classes 9, number of officers 7, balance in treasury $20.15, Hopes taken 40. Kansas City: Sessions 12, enrollment 65, average attendance 35, in treasury $6.48, classes 5, officers and teachers 13, number of Quarterlies 35, Hopes 20. Pleasant View: Sessions 12, enrollment 237, average attendance 21, number of classes 3, officers 4, in treasury $1.33. Hopes taken 10, Quarterlies taken 20. Holden: Sessions 12, enrollment 33, average attendance 18, number of classes 3, officers 4, in treasury $2.46, Hopes taken 16, Quarterlies taken 17. Lee's Summit: Sessions 8, enrollment 32, average attendance 16, number of classes 4, in treasury $4.01, Hopes taken 7. The subjects of the afternoon's discussion were, "What is the object of Sunday school conventions, and how can the teacher obtain the cooperation of the parents?" The evening exercises consisted of singing from Winnowed Songs, reading of a paper by the secretary of the association on "Sunday school work in this district," also a discussion upon the subjects, "How can we teach children to pray?" and "How can we obtain the attention of the class?" The discussions were full of profitable instruction, and entered into with much zeal and interest; and the work of both sessions was gratifying to all present.

TEXAS CENTRAL.

Association convened with Texas Central branch Sunday school, November 22, at eight p. m.; E. W. Nunley superintendent, W. G. McIntosh secretary. The superintendent reported: "Have visited nearly all of the schools in the district. The interest is onward." Assistant superintendent, F. C. Gough: "Have done some Sunday work and discharged my duties as best I could." Secretary and treasurer: On hand last report, $3.15; now on hand $3.10. Reports from Texas Central and Shady Grove were read and approved. The following Sunday school superintendents reported: F. C. Gough, James Cox. Shady Grove, New Hope, and Bethel Sunday schools were discontinued. The following brethren made short speeches on Sunday school work: W. W. Squires, C. A. Schuster, W. Sherrill, F. C. Gough, S. R. Hay, W. G. McIntosh, and E. W. Nunley, which were very instructive. Adjourned to meet on Friday night at 7:30 at same time and place of next conference.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Massachusetts district Sunday school association will convene in Roxbury Hall, No. 67 Warren Street, Boston, Massachusetts, January 11, 1896, at 7:30 p.m. Superintendents of schools and delegates will please have written reports.

ORA HOLMES, Secretary.

Miscellaneous Department.

RAILWAY PERMITS.

As some of the missionaries who were appointed by General Conference last April have received word from Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger Association that their names are not on "the official list" of our denomination, and hence permits could not be issued to the brethren,—this is to say that, at the time when Mr. Caldwell's letters were written he could not have had any "official list" of the Reorganized Church, for no request from the Western Passenger Association for such a list was received by me until December 9, of this year. It is possible that they have a list from the Utah body, or else have got us confused with some other religious society. Even if there had fallen into their hands a copy of the printed minutes of last April they would have there the names of brethren whom they have refused now.

Upon receiving the request for a list I prepared one, giving the names of all brethren who hold appointments in the West, making one hundred and sixty-six names; also the post office addresses of the brethren and the name of the fields to which they were appointed then or to which later appointments by the Presidency have assigned them.

This was sent to Mr. Caldwell on December 11, and we hope that the brethren named will have no trouble in securing permits from this time on.

In the letter (which was signed by both the President and the Secretary of the Church) it was stated that there were local ministers who received no financial support from the church, but who did considerable ministerial labor, and that such, we believed, should receive permits, with the understanding that they should not use them except when traveling in ministerial service, and that any information that we could give upon the duties and rightful privileges of the local ministers we would give, if called upon for such information as we might have.

It is to be presumed that none of the brethren, whether missionaries or local ministers, will in any manner abuse the favors issued to them by the railways, nor take advantage thereof by using them for business purposes, nor dispose of them to others, nor in any manner misrepresent in the filling out of the applications.

This would not only be dishonest, but it would also bring the church into bad repute.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Secretary.

SMITH-FRITCH DEBATE.

Editors Herald:—The Smith-Fritch debate closed here last night. As you have report of first two propositions, I only report the third—"Does the Bible teach that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection?" The question was well answered—No. Among other things Elder Fritch said: "Don't think we are wrong because we are in the minority. Genesis 2: 7: 'God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.' Genesis 3: 19: 'In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; . . . for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.' What does 'thou' refer to, the inner man or the outer man?" The "breath" in man, according to Elder Fritch, is just like the steam in the engine—when the breath is gone all is gone back to dust. Ecclesiastes 3: 19, 20: 'For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast: for all is vanity. All go unto one place, all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.' Here is evidence that man returns to dust; so there is no more left of him than of a beast." For further proof that man is wholly mortal and unconscious after death he read Ecclesiastes 9: 4, 5: "For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion. For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten." Elder Fritch also referred to Job 3: 17, 18: "There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest. There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor." Also Job 14: 10: "But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" These references are used to prove that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection.

They were answered by Bro. Heman C. Smith in a manner that caused rejoicing, both by the Saints and those of other churches. The fact that man, according to science, is composed of carbon, oxygen, nitrogen, hydrogen, sulphur, phosphorus, lime, and iron, as is also the beast, was referred to by Bro. Smith; but that there was something within him (man) that lives on—something that will appear before the judgment bar of God, something that will obtain a reward for good works and be punished for evil deeds, is evidence that man—the man complete—is composed of more than earthly substance and in possession of something that is immortal. Adam was not complete until God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. If the words in Ecclesiastes 9: 5, "The dead know not anything," means that the dead are unconscious. Then the words in Timothy 6: 4: "He is proud, knowing nothing," also in 2 Samuel 15: 11, and with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were called; and they went in their simplicity, and they knew not anything," also means that the living are unconscious.

Ecclesiastes 3: 19, where it says, "One thing befalleth them [man and beast]: as one dieth, so dieth the other," etc., is no evidence that man is wholly mortal. It says in verse 2 that man's spirit goeth upward, but the spirit of the beast goeth downward; but death claims both.

Matthew 4: 4 says: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Mortal man needs mortal food, but our immortal nature needs immortal food—the bread of life.

Mr. Fritch concluded that because surgeons had failed to find something immortal in man, while dissecting him that that proved man to be wholly mortal. A man may have severe pains so that he die because of them and the surgeons dissecting him fails to find the pain, so the conclusion is he didn't have any. Elder Fritch urged that the blood was the life or soul of man, so when Jesus was crucified his blood was shed; hence his soul went from him. Bro. Smith thought the rule ought to work both ways so in the case of the child mentioned in 1 Kings 17: 20, 24, where it says in verse 17 "that there was no breath [soul, life, or blood, according to Mr. Fritch] left in him;" but when the man of God prayed, then the life or blood came back into him. The facts are, as Bro. Smith gave them, that there is something more in man than mere blood or breath. "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."—Job. 32: 8. Who ever heard of inspired breath, or inspired blood? Ecclesiastes 12: 7 says, "And the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it." That didn't mean the blood. In Acts 7: 59 Stephen said, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit."

In this earthly kingdom we see all species begetting after their kind—the law of transmission is made quite plain. Then as God is our Father, and he in full possession of immortality, "For we are also his offspring" (Acts 17: 28), why should not the law of transmission hold good with us, and we be in possession of at least a germ of immortality? Then man is not wholly mortal; but the very fact that earthly food will not sustain his entire nature, the fact that schools and colleges and education of all kinds are necessary, together with the great message of life, the gospel of Christ, is evidence that there is something within man that is more than mortal—something that reaches out to grasp the higher and nobler threads of life so he can be drawn nearer and nearer to the goal where he can bask in the sunlight of God and enjoy the full measure of his hope.

In the philosophy that man is wholly mortal, and no more of him after death, is a conflict with justice; for then, at the resurrection it would be needful that another man be created or formed, to answer for the sins or be rewarded for the good that the first man had done.

Those who may be in doubt concerning this question, that man is not possessed of immortality, and have believed him to be wholly mortal and that death ends all with us, may find assistance in the following references: Romans 2: 7; 2 Timothy 2: 10, 11; Matthew 17: 1-9. Moses had long been dead, yet here it says he was on the mount. He had not yet been resurrected for Christ was "the firstfruits." So Moses was conscious between death and the resurrection. (2 Cor. 4: 16; Rom. 7: 22; 1 Peter 3: 4; Eph. 3: 16; 2 Cor. 12: 3, 4.) Here we may conclude that a man (Paul) may be out of the body, yet be conscious—hear and speak words. In Philippians 1: 23, 24 Paul infers that after his departure (death) he would be with Christ, "which is far better" than to remain in the flesh. If man is wholly mortal and unconscious after death, why did Paul desire to "depart and be with Christ" when he (Paul) would be unconscious? What good would it do him? This is the language in substance used by Bro. Smith to refute the theory that man is wholly mortal.

This debate was a sweeping victory for our cause, especially on the last proposition. The little town of Perkins is all astir and the shepherds are jumping around looking after their flock. "By this" they "have" their "wealth." So we should, as a people, remember that if our only hope should vanish, if our confidence should be shaken in the latter-day work, we would discard the whole system of religion; so in meeting our friends we may remember that their hopes are dear to them. The Saints here rejoice in the assurance that they have in the work, for the able manner in which it was maintained, and the encouragement received by being with one of the apostles of Christ.

This afternoon Bro. D. W. Tate was buried with Christ in baptism. The confirmation held at the home of Bro. and Sr. Tate was a very peaceful one. Bro. S. J. Hinkle was ordained an elder. He is promising, and will, if humble and faithful, become a noble defender of the work. Many calls are coming in for preaching; more, many more than the force here can respond to.

Oklahoma is yet a good field and promises a good harvest in the future. For all the good received, the assurance we have in the divinity of the work, for the cheering hope of its final triumph, let all praise and honor be given to God, who has brought us and kept us thus far in the faith.

Yours hopefully,

R. M. MALONEY.

PERKINS, Oklahoma, Dec. 8.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The conference for Eastern Iowa district will meet with the Brush Creek branch, Fayette County, on the 29th of February, 1896, instead of the 14th of March; Sunday school convention on the 28th. Those coming on the train from the south will be met at Brush Creek and those from the north and those from the east also, will be met at Wadena. Those coming on the train must write a card to B. F. Miller, Brush Creek, to meet them, or they may get left. Branch officers and all, make a full report so it will be ready for General Conference. All come who can. Bring the Spirit of peace with you.

J. S. ROTH, Pres.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

I desire to call attention to the fact that a conference of this district was ordered for Saturday, December 28, and we hope that those voting for it will not only endeavor to be present at the day and hour appointed, but that presidents of branches and all properly interested will urge an attendance and representation of local and general church interests. Business of importance to the district is liable to be presented, and the people should be there to look after their interests.

Remember the day and hour—Saturday, December 28, at ten o'clock a.m., not p.m., and don't let us have to adjourn until Sunday for want of some one present to do business. Elder M. T. Short is to be with us. Entertainment for all who come will be provided. Let us wake up to our duties and privileges, and make an effort at revival of our church interests.

M. H. BOND.

The St. Louis district conference will convene in the Saints' meeting house, 2518 Elliott Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri, on Saturday forenoon, December 28, 1895, at ten o'clock, for business. Local elders are invited, and expected to report. A committee will see to the welfare of visitors, that they are provided for.

J. G. SMITH, Sec.

The conference of the Nauvoo district will meet at the church on corner of Twelfth Street and Locust Street, Southwest Burlington, Iowa, at 10:30 a.m., on Saturday the 7th of March, 1896. Sunday school convention on Friday the 6th, at 10:30 a.m. All come, and let us have a time long to be remembered because of the blessings received. All branches send in full reports.

J. S. ROTH,

Missionary in Charge.

BUSINESS NOTICE.

Herald Office agents and the ministry are requested to take notice that no commission can be allowed on sales of the fifty cent edition of the Saints' Hymnal. The General Conference fixed the price of the book at about actual cost, hence it is impossible to pay a commission. Those remitting may deduct the cost of making remittances—the postage and cost of postal orders.

The usual commission to agents and the traveling ministry will be allowed on sales of the higher priced binding—no commission on the fifty cent edition.

Those who first subscribed will first be supplied. The first edition has been bought and now is being mailed. Others will be ready in two weeks.

Send in orders for the Saints' Hymnal. See prices on Herald cover.

FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager,
Lamoni, Iowa.

BORN.

ROUSH.—At Fulton, Iowa, September 26, 1895, to Sr. Jennie Roush, a son, and named Walter Elsworth. Blessed December 1, 1895, by Elders John Hide and J. R. Sutton. The child's father, Bro. Roush, died one month and eight days before the birth of the child.

STEVENSON.—At Adrian, Illinois, October 19, 1889, to Bro. and Sr. Frank Stevenson, a daughter, and named Ethel Edna. Blessed December 6, 1895, by H. T. Pitt and William Lambert. (This child is very bright, yet is deaf and dumb, and the parents desire the prayers of the Saints, and especially of the Prayer Union, that she may be restored to her hearing, if it is God's will.) At the same place and to the same parents: Vessy Odessa, a daughter, September 19, 1893. Blessed December 6, 1895, by Wm. Lambert and J. S. Roth. Delbert, July 14, 1895. Blessed December 6, 1895, by J. S. Roth and H. T. Pitt.

DIED.

LADD.—At Arroyo Grande, California, Bro. H. C. Ladd. Deceased was born February 6, 1820, in Milton, Vermont. In 1850 he went to Utah, and two years later moved to San Bernardino, California, near where he has since resided. He united with the Reorganized Church after Joseph Smith took his father's place. Services were held at the home December 1, 1895; sermon by Rev. I. N. Smith, a Presbyterian minister.

BILYNE.—December 3, 1895, Floyd M., only son of Bro. Marcus M. and Mrs. Mary M. Bilyne, of Blair, Nebraska, aged 1 year, 7 months, and 15 days. Funeral service and opening prayer by Rev. Stricklett, of the U. B. Church; sermon by G. M. L. Whitman.

AN EXCELLENT DEFINITION OF WHAT AMERICANISM IS.—It seems to me to be, first of all, a consciousness of unfettered individuality, coupled with a determination to make the most of self. One great force of the American character is its naturalness, which proceeds from a total lack of traditional or inherited disposition to crook the knee to anyone. It never occurs to a good American to be obsequious. In vulgar or ignorant personalities this point of view has sometimes manifested itself and continues to manifest itself in swagger or insolence, but in the finer form of nature appears as simplicity of an unassertive yet dignified type. Gracious politeness, without condescension on the one hand or fawning on the other, is noticeably a trait of the best element of American society, both among men and women.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Hungarian Rabbis, without the fear of the Western Pope before their eyes, declared, with one dissentient only (and he should emigrate to America), that they could not bless mixed unions, either by marriage ceremony or other religious form.—The Hebrew Standard.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to rules agreed upon and published by the Herald Office, all whose subscriptions are one year overdue will be dropped from the mailing lists at the end of the year—December 31, 1895—provided, that if those who desire their papers continued and who will pay in a reasonable time, will so notify the office, their publications will be continued.

This applies to the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies.

It is desired that all will continue and so notify us, and make an effort to pay subscriptions as soon as possible.

It is our wish to increase, not to diminish the circulation of the church papers among the membership. All should read them.

Subscriptions solicited.

HOLIDAY GIFT BOOKS.

The Herald Office, in pursuance of a policy that will result in substantial good to its patrons, offers the following list of Holiday attractions.

Every one of the articles advertised is a thing of merit—something both intellectually and materially substantial—rich in the subject-matter contained, durable in workmanship and attractive in style.

The publications advertised are "things that remain" and abide. A friend or relative is benefited by gifts of such valuable character.

Moral, mental, and all lines of spiritual development are the aims sought by all works issued under the supervision of the publishing department of the Church of Christ.

We do not offer catchpenny premiums in cheap silverware or other gaudy ornaments.

The list of attractions offered is presented on its merits.

The Descriptive Catalogue, mailed on application to any address, describes all works in our list.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S MAGAZINE.

Published by the church; edited by Sr. M. Walker, assisted by Department Editors—Sunday School, Zion's Religio, and Daughters of Zion work are treated in departments specially devoted to those features of work.

The same energy that has been put forth to make the magazine a source of good to our young people will be continued by the editor.

Among the special list of attractions for 1896 are the following:—

The Autobiography of Sr. Lydia Supry, who is well known to the Michigan Saints. It is to be furnished by Sr. Zonie Stephenson, who estimates it as equal to any of the very interesting biographies hitherto published.

"Prophecy and the Holy Land," by Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith—a companion series to "The Bible and the Christian Religion," already published in the LEAVES from the pen of Bro. Smith.

Phrenographs of prominent ministers and church workers, by Orrin Dudley, Phrenologist.

A fine engraving of Nauvoo, the Beautiful City, taken during the late Montrose reunion and engraved by the Electric Light Engraving Company.

Other features too numerous to mention will make the magazine a companion and counselor to our young people and continue to furnish them opportunities for literary and general development.

Price $1.25 per year.

FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS.

BY SR. HESTER S. E. YOUNG.

This work is now in press and will be ready before the Holidays.

It is the Life of Jesus, told in a simple and interesting way, adapted to the capacities of children. This little book is a gem among the literature provided for the children. It relates the important history of the Savior's life in such entertaining style as to awaken and keep the interest of little readers. It gives them a fair knowledge and truthful picture of the leading events of the Savior's life and prepares them to appreciate the narratives of the Gospels and New Testament to be studied in after years.

Bound in cloth, printed in large type; Price 20 cents.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

PATTIE; OR LEAVES FROM A LIFE.

A story from real life, of the experiences of one led from the partial light of Protestantism into the fullness of the Restored Gospel.

A book for Sunday school libraries and the home. Cloth $1.15.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER JOSEPH LUFF.

The former offer of this work at 50 cents is withdrawn. The low price was made on a Job Lot, which has been disposed of.

The prices of the work are: Cloth $1.25; Leather, gilt edges, $1.75.

HESPERIS.

The poetical works of David H. Smith, youngest son of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It contains upwards of one hundred of the author's best compositions, many of which are excellent poems of a high order of merit; all containing sentiments of exalted type, and of true religious spirit. The author was gifted as a hymn writer and employed his talent in the production of sacred psalms and other sonnets of an elevating, inspiring nature. His sacred numbers are general favorites, and much used in the song services of public worship.

The book contains 194 pages. Elegantly printed, bound in cloth, stamped, gilt edges; price $1.50—a excellent birthday or holiday gift book.

TRAINING WOMEN FOR DOMESTIC SERVICE.

SWITZERLAND, probably, leads the world in the number and the excellence of her household schools. The pupils in general come from the farms and the mountains, so that awkward and unsophisticated girls are initiated into the graces of household ways; and from another class, the daughters of rich merchants and manufacturers who attend to take a course in "ideal housekeeping," in order to be able to direct the mechanism of their homes most easily and advantageously. I believe Switzerland is the only country where the industrial educator bears the mistress quite as much in mind as the servant. Another striking characteristic of these schools is that the ethics of work and of every detail of work is studied as carefully as its performance.

France, with her thrift, her industry, her patience, is hardly second to Switzerland in her earnest interest in this matter. The municipality of Paris has a superb course in domestic economy which begins with the kindergarten and continues for eleven or twelve years; and the same is true in many of the cities, especially throughout the northern departments. A girl is taught as much bookkeeping as is necessary to keep the household accounts accurately and neatly. She understands taxes. She knows how to lease a house and what are her legal responsibilities as a tenant. She learns to estimate the cost of every article to be used and how best to provide for a given number at a given price. She is taught to be prudent and economical—O rare American traits! Great attention is given also to detail and thoroughness. It is not merely a question of washing and starching linen, and passing it under the iron; it is a question as well of stains and their proper treatment, of soaps and their merits. It is not merely a question of the cost and the freshness of food, but of its nutritive qualities too. It is a question of the sanitation of a house as well as its tidiness. The result of all this is that there is no finer housewife in the world than the French housewife. As for French needlework and French dressmaking, every woman knows that the geographical adjective is the only adjective necessary to express their superlative excellence. Italy has the most thoroughly nationalized system of industrial education for women, although as a national system it embraces but one branch of women's work. That is lacemaking, that exquisite craft which a few years ago people were beginning to put into the category of "lost arts."

In the United States about all that has been done in this direction is of very recent growth. There are some fine private enterprises, of which the women's department of Armour Institute is the newest and completest. Wisconsin University is experimenting with a course under the direction of Mrs. Helen Campbell which is commanding general interest, and which, if it proves a success, as it undoubtedly will, and becomes a regular part of the curriculum, will probably be the most scientific and enlightened effort of the kind in the country. The most important and general results have been achieved in the negro schools and colleges of the South. There is hardly one in which domestic training is not a very notable and very beneficial feature. Probably one reason why we are so far behind Europe in this work is the almost total absence in our country of convents, which foster and control very many of these schools abroad. The question of funds is a very serious one in a country whose newspapers decry "fads in the public schools" and sometimes with good reason. Most of our flourishing schools have been supported partly or wholly by the State or the municipality. The State of New Jersey, notably, duplicates any sum under $5,000 per annum, which may be given to found or maintain any manual training school. In Massachusetts and elsewhere such schools have been largely dependent upon individual munificence. A few have been endowed. Often it has been found that a school pays its own way; exhibitions are held and goods produced by the pupils are sold; these exhibitions are very profitable, and the running expenses of the school are reduced by the fact that no servants need be employed and fed. In some cases there is a fee for instruction.

The advantages to the State of a general manual training system of women's education would be fourfold: 1. Skilled workers would be produced who would fill the places that are now empty, and women would be able to gain a livelihood by other and better means than those that are possible to a vast number of them now. 2. An enormous amount of the misery caused by poverty and by crime would be avoided. Expert criminologists have assured us that it is indeed for idle hands that Satan finds mischief. 3. Housewives would be trained to a proper understanding of the business which they profess to carry on. Woman has been divinely appointed to be a home-maker. In an age when the most trivial processes of life are being put upon scientific bases it is not consistent that the most sacred and beautiful of callings should be left to the hands of any bungler. 4. The relations between employer and employee would be put upon a rational business basis. A sense of the dignity of labor would be inculcated, and so most of the friction which so wears upon our domestic life would be avoided. There is no logical reason why a housewife should not receive from a person in her employ the same unflinching and unquestioning service that a merchant receives from his clerk or a banker from his cashier. And there is no logical reason why the rights and the limitations of a domestic servant should not receive from her employer the same courteous and conscientious consideration that obtains in other similar relations. The cause for the present unfortunate conditions appears plainly. Domestic service has never been dignified as a profession or trade, and until it is recognized as such there is little hope for an improved state of affairs. The manual training school distinctly insists upon and inculcates the idea that cooking, washing, nursing, sewing, are trades in exactly the way that horse-shoeing and cabinet-making are, and that they are to take the same stand in the commercial world; to be subject to contract, and to be thoroughly performed as agreed, without extortion and bullying on the one hand, and shirking and insubordination on the other.

A report made by Dr. H. H. Belfield to the United States Commissioner of Labor includes this testimony from the officers of manual training schools all over the country. The effects of manual training upon the character are that it develops judgment, earnestness, readiness, independence, self-respect, enthusiasm, accuracy, steadiness, persistence; the will is disciplined, the mind is broadened and made more logical, with a tendency to original investigation, and habits of industry are formed. Above all it teaches the nobility of labor and inculcates a love for it. So it is seen that in addition to the material advantages to the community in which it plays a part the manual training school raises its moral tone, and so has a distinct ethical value.—G. Vrooman, in the Arena, Boston, October. Condensed for Public Opinion.

PRIZE POEMS.

FROM three thousand songs received in competition for the Higginbotham prizes for "People's Songs" the judges, Henry D. Lloyd, John Vance Cheney, and Hamlin Garland, have chosen two as worthy of the first and second prizes, $100 and $50 respectively. The recipients of the prizes are Miss Mary A. Lathbury of East

Orange, New Jersey, and Miss M. S. Paden of Denver, Colorado. The productions winning these prizes are as follows:—

FIRST PRIZE SONG.

A SONG OF HOPE.

Children of yesterday,
Heirs of to-morrow,
What are you weaving—
Labor and sorrow?
Look to your looms again;
Faster and faster
Fly the great shuttles
Prepared by the Master.
Life's in the loom,
Room for it—room!

Children of yesterday,
Heirs of to-morrow,
Lighten the labor
And sweeten the sorrow,
Now—while the shuttles fly
Faster and faster,
Up and be at it—
At work with the Master,
He stands at your loom,
Room for him—room!

Children of yesterday,
Heirs of to-morrow,
Look at your fabric
Of labor and sorrow.
Seamy and dark
With despair and disaster,
Turn it—and lo,
The design of the Master!
The Lord's at the loom,
Room for him—room!

Following is Miss Paden's song, winner of the second prize:—

AMERICA'S BEATITUDE.

O, hark! for the hour is coming when your ears shall anointed be!
Aye, listen! 'tis rising and swelling o'er populous land and sea!
The morning stars began it, at the dawn of creation's birth.
And the circling spheres go swinging and singing it unto earth!

And earth shall forget her groaning,
And learn the song of the spheres;
And the tired shall sing that are moaning,
And the sad shall dry their tears.

Chorus: Blessed are they that work! For they shall inherit the earth, in the dawning day!

For the song of the spheres is motion, and motion and toil are life;
And the idle shall fail and falter and yield at the end of the strife.

As the stars tread paths appointed and the sun gives forth his heat,
So the sons of men shall labor, ere they loiter in leisure's seat;

And Kings are to serve the people,
And wealth is to ease the poor,
And learning to lift the lowly,
And strength that the weak may endure.

Chorus: Blessed are they that work! For they shall inherit the earth, in the dawning day!

Lo! The burdens shall be divided; and each shall know his own;
And the royalty of manhood shall be more than crown or throne;
And the flesh and blood of the toilers shall no longer be less than gold;
And never an honest life shall be into hopeless bondage sold!

For we, the people, are waking,

And high and low shall employ
The splendid strength of union
For life, liberty, and joy!

Chorus: Blessed are they that work! For they shall inherit the earth, in the dawning day!

A baby alarm, or means for signaling the crying of an infant which has been left asleep in a distant room, is one of the recent boons offered by science. A sensitive microphone, connected to a battery and to the primary of an induction coil, is placed near the child's cot. The secondary of the coil is connected by two wires to a small electro-magnet at the place where the alarm is to be given, and on the crying of the child the microphone sets up an undulatory current in this circuit, causing the electro-magnet to deflect a delicate steel balance and close an electric bell circuit.

THE GOSPEL QUARTERLY.

SENIOR GRADE.

This popular lesson quarterly has already related the life of Christ and the Book of Acts. The present quarter covers the Book of Genesis from the Call of Abraham to the Death of Joseph. The quarter beginning with January, 1896, commences with the oppression in Egypt and the Exodus under Moses.

For the individual home study of children and families the Gospel Quarterly occupies a special place.

A suitable and useful present to Sunday school scholars, or to children located away from school privileges.

Price 25 cents per year; 8 cents per quarter.

INTERMEDIATE GRADE.

The same lessons as in Senior Grade, simplified for intermediate class study.

Price 15 cents per year; 5 cents per quarter.

THE PRIMARY QUARTERLY.

A separate series of lessons, by the Primary Lesson Committee.

The present series is the Life of Christ, adapted to the capacities of very young children, with special aids to teachers and scholars.

Price 15 cents per year; 5 cents per quarter.

ELDER'S DIARY.

Every minister should keep a concise record of work done, and of localities visited. This has been provided for in brief, comprehensive form in our New Elder's Diary.

It contains pages for general memorandums, also every item in the line of ministerial work—sermons preached, number baptized, etc., etc. The plan of the book is designed to insure completeness in recording items without a burdensome arrangement. A cash account for receipts and expenses is also included.

The minister using the Elder's Diary can with very few notes keep a record of his daily whereabouts and labors from year to year.

Convenient in size, for the pocket, well bound in black or red leather; attractive in style. Price 50 cents.

Our catalogue also contains the following works: Abstract of Evidence Temple Lot Suit; The Instructor, The Compendium; Joseph the Seer; Braden-Kelley Debate; Presidency and Priesthood; What Is Man? Objections to the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants Answered and Refuted; The Christian Sabbath; Ruins Revisited; Sunday school supplies, including King James' Bibles for scholars and teachers tracts, etc., etc.

We fill orders for other books and publications, and solicit general patronage.

QUESTIONS.

PLEASE explain the principle of "common consent," as used in the Doctrine and Covenants and as understood by the church, also the following difficulties:—

1. Is not "common" consent complete consent? Would the will of the majority be the "common consent" of the body? If so, would the bare majority of one be sufficient and safe reason for final action in church issues? and in this latter case does not the consent rest with only one who holds the balance of power—is that common consent?

2. Might not the minority be right quite as often as the majority? If so, is not the "majority" interpretation of the principle faulty and unequal, as well as unjust to said minority? The minority is sometimes right,—what then?

3. Inasmuch as we are commanded to be "one" of the "same mind," should not a matter at issue be submitted to a temporary or test vote, and if there be only a majority consent, then defer the matter (discussing it at intervals) until there is complete consent or unity thereon? Is it likely that He who commanded oneness would give a law calculated to defeat that end? (This is based upon the fact that the result of majority consent is often "division," and the supposition that the majority method is common consent).

We all want to build right and safe in church governmental matters. The world has had enough of imperfect government. Civil laws and principles are being submitted to crucial tests, and what wonder that principles having a divine claim should come under the same category. We have a right to expect a perfect system from such an omniscient source.

COMMON CONSENT.

The government of the church is of a twofold character and may be said to be a theocratic-democracy. Power of direction and decision originates and rests with God primarily. Any commandment or rule given of God must be obeyed. In all the business matters the church is left to the control of the majority, the voice of the majority being obtained by any method that may be agreed upon or obtained among the church or churches. The common consent is supposed to be in the expressed will of the majority when so obtained. All may not be present when the question is up on which common consent is desired, but all having an opportunity to be made acquainted with the subject matter upon which such consent is desired or agreed in the consent of the majority of those present when the expression is taken or had.

The citation to common consent in Sec. 25, Par. 1, Doctrine and Covenants, has reference to the matter pending in the church July, 1830, and the church referred to was evidently the whole organization then existing. The references in Sec. 27, Par. 4, Doctrine and Covenants, shows that it is only done by the church when properly gathered together, either in local or in general assemblies, and must then be done in order and according to rules of the church. "Neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by the common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith."

There is no reference in Sec. 41, Par. 1, Doctrine and Covenants, except that they are to agree as to how the law may read and affairs in the church be governed thereby. The reference in Sec. 101, Par. 3, Doctrine and Covenants, in regard to a local social organization supposed to be existing, provides only that it shall be done by the order according to the voice and consent of the united order. Similar reference occurs in Par. 12 of the same section with regard to moneys and the treasury of the order.

Common consent is not complete consent in the sense that all the church have spoken, for the reason that it is impossible to obtain such complete consent. The right to speak and by a vote consent the many has delegated directly or indirectly to officers and members in the church who represent those not present, their voice and consent, or, with voice and consent, is an expression of the common consent of those whom they represent. Such consent, though the majority may be of but one in the assembly, would carry the common consent of the whole. Nor does it rest with the one, but with the whole; nor is it correct to say that the balance of power rests with the one that makes up the final vote. He is but the turning point on which the vote hinges and is affirmed or denied; all voting with him are to be counted and it is his vote that makes the tone of the majority. In practice in the church, in our experience, it very seldom happens that the question is decided by so close a vote as one.

The minority may be right, but it is not likely that in the course of general business the minority will be right as often as is the majority. "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety," evidently contemplates the idea that in a collective and deliberative assembly where a proper freedom of action is accorded to all the oversight and decision of the many will be the safer for all.

There are those who are of the opinion that our present system of obtaining the common consent is not effectual; and by some it is thought that the absolute decision of the graver matters should rest with the few, and that common consent is a myth and a mistake. We are not of this class, however; for this reason, the intuition of the Spirit is vouchsafed to all, under like conditions; and when acting in an assembly the unity of the spirit should more than compensate for any difference of mere opinion, or the influence of self-interest and personal influence exercised upon the part of individuals. It may sometimes be that a wave of erroneous understanding may sweep over an assembly and lead the majority astray; but this will seldom occur; and in a body like the church, acknowledging the supremacy of God and the right of Christ to rule, and the absolute governing of divine intervention, there is an assurance, almost amounting to a guarantee that a mistake made by a majority will not be permitted to fatally injure the work for the intended good of the whole.

When personal influence, ambition, and private interest secure the popular voice and assumes the control the majority may be led astray; but it will be a minority influence that leads. Where such a thing occurs there are safeguards in the law whereby the rights of the minority can be preserved and with them the liberties of all be preserved. Such a case as this has already occurred, and the minority are slowly forging their way to the front against almost overwhelming odds in numbers and power. That the truth, in this case represented by the minority, will prevail, we have not a doubt.

That the "majority principle" may sometimes work an injury to the minority is conceded; but that it is so in reality as a rule cannot be held. But, if the majority principle at times works an injury to the minority, and for that reason the principle ought not to obtain should destroy and make void the principle, should the rule of the minority be assumed to be right and prevail? For it is equally certain that the minority principle would work an injury to the majority, the greater number. What other rule then could be accepted than the principle that the voice of the greater number should prevail, in the absence of the direct expression of the will of the Master? We confess to ignorance of any better method of decision. The minority may sometimes be right. "What then?" We answer, then patience must have its perfect work, and the minority abide, if the wrong be bearable, until the wrong is demonstrated, when there will be an opportunity to correct; and the majority should and be pleased to retrace its steps.

From the complexion of most questions, and the character of the men forming assemblies, there is small probability that such a course as is suggested in clause three would be either popular or successful. And in many questions arising before an assembly would be utterly impracticable; for the reason that decision, either one way or the other, is demanded by the emergency; there being no time for the delay, and the possible indefinite postponement such a course might effect.

Were such a rule to prevail it would lie within the power of a factious minority to defeat any measure that the emergency might require, or the better sense of the well-meaning and trustworthy might suggest, and discussion with its real or supposed harmfulness be made interminable.

It is not to be held that the Master would command what was impracticable, or impossible; but, "Be ye one," is susceptible to similar suggestions of difficulty that "Be ye perfect" is. Both involve the bringing of the will of the individual into unity, oneness, or subjection to the command or will of the one great head; or the expression of understanding of the greater number, or the recognized interpreters of the word, rule, or opinions recognized as of worth or weight. One object of assemblies is to discover this tone of the mass that the divisions of the few may coalesce with the unity of the many. If the refusal of one, or the fewer number is to block the progress of the whole until those few, or that one chooses to be reconciled to the larger number, or the latter turn to the view of the objectors, there would be little if any definite and conclusive deliberation.

The "fact" referred to in the parentheses after the question in this par. 3, is a mistake in statement. The "division" stated to be the result "of majority consent," is the result of minority refusal to consent. There would be no "division," were there no minority; or if the minority would consent to abide the operation of the rule, when against them, as they would expect others to do when themselves were in the majority. This rule works well both ways, hence, by evidence is a good one.

There are some who either cannot or will not bring themselves into any sort of harmony with those whose opinions may differ from their own. These, as a usual thing, deplore the great lack of oneness and throw the blame of being at variance on those who differ from them, themselves being in the right, of course. As a fact, however, it is no further from the man who differs from his neighbor than from his neighbor to him; and if absolute oneness is essential, it is possible that the exercise of the same assiduity and desire to be at unity upon the part of the first that he expects to be manifested on the part of the second would greatly lessen the difference between them. It frequently occurs that "I will" and "I won't" contend for the mastery, and "I won't" wins where "I will" should be the victor.

There may be serious faults in the method of securing common consent now obtaining; and the way suggested in paragraph 3 might secure a greater oneness. We have seen it suggested in specific cases, but never as a rule before; and it is possibly worth a thought. In the meantime, we shall be under the necessity to accept the situation and do the best we can to assimilate the various elements there are in the body until the degree of unity desired is effected. This will come in time, but it is likely there will for a long while be "many men of many minds."

JOHN SHERMAN ON MORMONISM.

IN the December Review of Reviews, E. Benjamin Andrews gives this from John Sherman's story, as told by himself:—

Mr. Sherman's catholicity is very broad. Commenting on Mormonism, he says:—

It is to be hoped that the government and people of the United States will let the Mormons severely alone, allowing them to believe what they will, and to do in the way of worship what they choose. In this way only can their confidence in alleged revelations be shaken, and Mormonism will disappear among the many vain attempts of humanity to explore the mysteries of life and death. Persecution never weakens delusions, nor disturbs faith, however ignorant and groundless.

It is fortunate for the reputation for good sense that Mr. Sherman has had that the estimate of the future to be made of his story, on the point presented in the foregoing, will turn upon the fact that a plurality of wives is not an act of worship, but a domestic practice absolutely incompatible with American institutions and the conditions forced upon society in all so-called Christian countries by the inexorable fact that the sexes by ordination of the laws of creation and demand and supply, are nearly equal in number, the men slightly in excess, as an evident compensation for the ravages of war and the dangers of pioneer life. The census shows some few hundreds more of men than women in Utah. So it is to be hoped that the conservative element in the American nation will insist upon the keeping of this law inviolate in Utah, as well as in all other States of the Union.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—1. Is it necessary for a deacon to be married?

2. If not, would not marriage qualifications make him better fitted for his duties?

3. If he must be married, can an officer who holds a higher office, such as teacher, priest, elder, etc., act as deacon providing said officer is not married?

Ans.—1. We know of no rule of law requiring that a man be a married man to be a deacon; except the instruction of the Apostle Paul in 1 Timothy, third chapter, which is easily susceptible of being construed thus; that no man having more than one wife is fit to hold the deacon's office, or if a married man is chosen let it be one who has but one wife; and is not necessarily to be construed to mean that it is prerequisite to the holding of the office of deacon that he should be a married man; or that if a deacon be married and his wife dies he is for that reason disqualified to act.

2. Yes, the fact that a man is a married man is a sort of guarantee unto the church and to society of his good behavior in the deacon's office; as it is expected that such a man will maintain the dignity of citizenship in a more satisfactory manner than a single man, having no such ties to pay heed to.

3. We have answered that we know of no rule of law requiring a deacon to be married, hence must answer to the third clause that if a man not married may serve as deacon, then any man holding the higher office may also serve without being married.

"GREATER WORKS."

Q.—John 14:12: "The works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do; because I go to my Father." What are the "greater works" that the disciples did or may do?

A.—We cannot answer this question in the sense in which it is asked: for we do not know what specific works that might be done by the disciples, or the believer in Christ, may have been in the mind of the Savior at the time—the works, the specific works, that he meant. However, some of the works that Jesus did were to be done by the disciples, the believer, after his departure, "because" he was going unto the Father. It must be that these were the works appertaining to his mission, the redemption of man from the grasp of sin, rather than the works done in relieving the ills of the flesh, or the casting out of devils. It is easier to believe that the works of Jesus in fulfilling the prophecies of the centuries before him so accurately, as he did; the complete knowledge of the sin-cursed condition of the world, and the extent and kind of grasp that the enemy of man, Satan, had of the human race, together with his knowledge and use of the means to thwart the evil designs and overcome the designer, all declare his works done in the interests of mankind for salvation and the future life to have been the greatest works of his life. These, the disciples, the believers, should do after his departure; and the works so done by his ministry of the same kind would be the greater because of the additional weakness of the men who should do them; doing them as they would be in the absence of the Savior in faith—in his name, but not by virtue of his all-powerful presence in their midst,—being greater works by comparison of those who did them. They would also be contending against forces of which they would feel the power, but not be able to see the mover whom Jesus knew, and who knew Jesus. He fought those forces knowingly, by sight; his disciples and the believers after him would contend against them, by faith not by sight. They would do also a different work, or do the work of their ministry under different conditions, which in their nature would enhance the difficulties, and as a consequence enlarge the degree of greatness. Besides this, Jesus answering before Pilate did a great work, showing the absolute greatness of his charity and love; but Paul, answering before the council, and afterwards before the Cæsars, did a greater work; for the reason that Jesus knew that he would lose his life; the life of the flesh, but had in himself the power to take it again; Paul did not know that he would lose his life, but did know that he might; and with it did not know that he had any power to take it again, but was impressed that though he should lose it the Lord of Life, Christ, would give it to him again. In this sense Paul's work was the greater.

The work done by a principal, in command of all the forces and powers by which the work can be done, is great; the same work done by an agent by virtue of delegated powers that are not resident in the agent nor controlled at his will, but are exercised in confidence is a greater work, in the sense in which Jesus meant to convey the instruction. As an instance of this, the healing of the blind man by the anointing of his eyes with clay moistened with spittle, by the Savior was a great work; but the healing of the impotent man at the gate, by Peter and John, was in them a greater work. In the first case there was an absolute possession in himself of the power to heal; in the last case it was an act performed by agents having no power in themselves, to command the healing forces, or give life. And while the act was theirs as agents, the wisdom which directed the forces which gave healing, and gave the renewed life to the unhappily afflicted were exercised and commanded by the Lord; it was a greater work.

Again; Jesus did not go into all the world in person. The house of Israel was to be saved, the apostles were the ones to whom devolved the task of enlightening them, they and their successors in the ministry. It was a spiritual work and was to flow through their ministry unto the Gentiles and to remote regions and times. The believers were to perpetuate the message; the disciples were to endure for a season and give up their lives to the malignant hate of their brethren with the great work of redemption only just begun. Yet that work was to spread among the nations of earth, like leaven hid in measures of meal, until the world was leavened. Jesus had set the work in motion, but to the believers was to be confided the labor, care, anxiety, and burden of the work, and to them was to be confided the authority to minister unto men in the name of their absent Lord, and to them should the glory be given, if faithful. Surely theirs was a greater work indeed. The same is true of their successors, whether in line of direct succession or in the line of a gospel restored, an authority re-conferred in the dispensation of the fullness of times.

We often wonder why so many are so unnecessarily worried over questions of this sort; where nothing is found in the word to designate what the thing inquired after is, and of which no knowledge can be had unless it should be given by revelation.

AMERICANISM IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND sent a message to Congress on the 17th December, on the question of the dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela, in regard to the boundary between that republic and British Guiana, a dependency of the British Empire lying east and south of Venezuela in South America.

The message is a clear statement of the question so far as known to the President, and is an affirmation of what is known as the "Monroe doctrine," a political theory peculiarly applicable to the United States, and necessary to its present wellbeing and future progress, development and national existence, peace and security. That doctrine is in effect that further acquisition and control of territory on the Western Continent by any European, or other foreign government is detrimental to the wellbeing of American institutions of free government, and a menace to the existence and successful progress of the United States, and should be resisted.

This doctrine or political dogma was enunciated in 1823 by James Monroe, hence its name. It has had more or less to do with shaping the direction of the diplomatic intercourse of the United States with other nations ever since. When stated by President Monroe it was but the formulated sentiment of the patriotic statesmen of the times; and has been and is thoroughly believed in now by all true Americans. The absence of the wish, or will to enforce this doctrine in those who have occupied the White House at Washington, has been the source of uneasiness, distress, and disgust in the great band of patriots with whom the country is filled; and when occasions have occurred when there should have been an unswerving fidelity to the Americanism couched in the doctrine, and there have been wavering and hesitancy in those who should have declared the theory to be the true policy of the government, patriots have been shamed; and respect has been lost to the Nation.

We do not know the merits of the contest between Great Britain and the republic of Venezuela regarding their boundary; but we do know that the history shows the constant greed for conquest and the absorption of territory that has characterized the British Empire, and the universal fate of smaller states when England has set foot on their lands. There is reason to fear that England has been encroaching on Venezuelan rights of territory; and it is known that the larger power has refused the request of the United States to submit the matter to inquiry by an arbitration; and proposes to keep what has been grasped. Upon this knowledge and the fact that Venezuela is an American state, the disturbance of whose rights by England would prove an injury to the United States, to the disregarding of the principles of the Monroe doctrine, President Cleveland has been compelled to protest to England against her aggression, and on the refusal of that government to respond to the request made for a settlement by an arbitration, to report the matter to Congress and ask that body to appoint a commission of inquiry to ascertain the facts; and if it shall be found that England has been encroaching on Venezuela by wrongfully enlarging the territory rightfully hers, to then take necessary measures to prevent such encroachment on American soil and institutions.

It is justly considered by statesmen that this may possibly make war between these two great English-speaking nations, England and the United States; but, as there was a time or times in the past when the United States had to put a stop to British aggression, and did so, such a thing may happen again. For as it is the destiny of this latest experiment in national government, a "government of the people, by the people, for the people," to confound and bring to naught the monarchical (the divine right of kings, so-called), there can be no backward step taken in safety to the principles upon which the nation was founded and must continue.

Supineness and hesitancy to enforce the laws in favor of those entitled to their protection on the part of those called as leaders of the nation, has created distrust and want of respect for American institutions at home and abroad; and a sort of contempt for such institutions in some of the foreign nations, especially so in Great Britain, there being with Englishmen a large esteem for all things English. Fear to provoke national anger unnecessarily, and hesitancy to demand rights incident to Americans not applicable to monarchical governments have, doubtless, conspired to create the conditions referred to above; and it is a healthy sign which we hail with pleasure when an occupant of the White House takes such strong ground as President Cleveland has in his message on the Venezuelan question. We deprecate war and desire peace, but the success and perpetuity of our national existence are essential to lasting peace; and the powers to secure such success and perpetuity resting in the people, are to be exercised by their representatives, the Congress, which is supreme in its sphere. And we are pleased to know that Congress has responded cheerfully and patriotically to the request of President Cleveland in the existing emergency. It is such an expression of Americanism as has not been witnessed in a long time in the United States, and whether the end is reached by the arts of peaceful diplomacy and arbitration, or the dread arbitrament of war, lasting impression will be made upon the men of other nations that the American nation is a divine experiment and must not fail.

This is not written in the interest, or subject to the spirit of partizanship, but from the standpoint of an American citizen imbued with love of his country and its institutions.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. J. HUNT, from Harlan, Iowa, writes, December 17:—

Meetings progressing nicely. Good attendance and interest. Saints aiding us nobly. Expect to reach Pocahontas County by February 1.

BRO. T. F. STAFFORD writes from Lewiston, Illinois, December 12:—

I had a talk with an old man that taught school in New York State, where your father and his father and mother lived, and all the family, and the five younger members of the family went to school to him. He told me the names, and I knew he was correct. He said Lucy was the best girl he ever saw. And when I told him where she lived, he started over with a team purposely to see her at or near Colchester, as I had heard she lived there. His name was William Proctor.

Late, but good.

Bro. J. F. Mintun, Decatur, Nebraska, the 18th inst.:-

Last Sunday I led two young people into the waters of baptism near Decatur, Nebraska. The Saints of the Lake Shore branch have been passing through a severe trial in the nature of an epidemic of sore throat and membranous croup, associated with the chicken pox, so that no services have been held in the branch for two weeks past. Only two deaths have occurred, the two youngest children of Bro. and Sr. Gosset. While this was a severe loss to the parents, yet the consolation of the gospel was sufficient for them, and they endured it with Christian fortitude. Only one other case of sickness among the Saints that is anywise serious, and it is to be hoped that God will in his kindness restore this one to perfect soundness.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. WILLIS BOWLBY writes that the Los Angeles branch is prospering under the presidency of Bro. Nelson Van Fleet, who though residing twelve miles away, is always at his post and on time. The Saints are growing and the work moving.

The Saints at Ozark, Missouri, hold regular meetings to an increasing number of hearers. Bro. Carrow and Wedlock are the preachers there; so writes Bro. Quincy Henderson from that point, late date.

Sr. Belle Crippen, Cherokee, Iowa, writes of the spirit of unity that prevails among Saints there and the blessings that come to them because of that unity. They rejoice in the good things of the gospel of peace.

Bro. C. C. Reynolds reports a demand for the return of Bro. James McKiernan to Andalusia, Illinois, where his preaching greatly pleased the people, who say that if it represented Latter Day Saintism they want more of it.

Sr. Susan Matthews, of Shullsburg, Wisconsin, renews for the HERALD and expresses her appreciation of the good news of the work written by the brethren. She was baptized in England in 1840. She is aged in years and as anxious as ever for the progress of the church.

FOUNDATION STONES—CHILDHOOD IN THE BIBLE.

"THE divine commission coming to Moses made him great. The divine commission coming to any human soul, and receiving recognition, infuses strength to execute it. To every parent with the birth of every child comes the command, 'Take this child and train it for me.' In God's blessed economy this command brings with it power to obey. When, through the mystery of conception and birth, God entrusts a human soul to any man and woman, this entrusting is the highest call to train that soul aright. No other call is so distinct and unmistakable as that which comes through parenthood. The conviction that God has entrusted to you a work no one else in the universe can accomplish, that upon you he lays a sacred and endless responsibility must lift you out of sordid thoughts and motives into that calmness and greatness of soul befitting those called to be coworkers with God. The commands of your great Leader are your marching orders; unlike the orders of earthly generals they are instinct with omnipotence that bring with the commands the power to obey.

"In God's mind stands an ideal of every human life, and this ideal is the highest possible development of all its faculties, physical, mental, spiritual. To realize this ideal, parents must be coworkers with God in a very exalted sense. To them is entrusted in large measure the working out of his plans; on them depends whether God's ideal of manhood or womanhood shall be realized by that soul, or whether, dwarfed by neglect, deformed by sin, it shall become only a maimed, distorted caricature. Impress upon all parents a sense of the solemn responsibility as well as the glad privilege which the coming of each child brings them: and neglected childhood—whether neglected through the frivolity of fashion, the pressure of business resulting from undue haste to be rich, or from overburdening care and labor for the meat which perisheth—will cease to be. The life will be recognized as more than meat and the body than raiment."

The above truthful and impressive words we have copied entire from a book entitled "Childhood, its Care and Culture," by Mary Allen West. It is a book which we wish could be placed in the hands of every mother, whether young or old. But as it is a large and expensive volume, we know that only a few can afford to get it, hence we propose to condense from its chapters for the monthly readings of the different local organizations, and to add to each reading a few questions which, if properly discussed, will awaken thought and prove helpful to all who have the care of children.

In her first chapter Mrs. West goes to the Bible—the fountain head—showing God's care over and provision for childhood. In the thunders of Sinai, in the vales of Galilee, when teaching his disciples, or when rebuking their unholy ambition, little children are lovingly remembered. Children form a part of the pictured millennium, and the prophet describes the time when "the streets shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets."

In his many promises of peculiar favor God also shows his care for children. "A father of the fatherless and a judge of widows is God in his holy habitation." "Ye shall not afflict any widow or fatherless child." . . . God seems also to have implanted in animals an instinct which leads them to an intelligent care of children. (a.) Of such care the author cites many examples. But the crowning proof of God's interest in childhood is given by his sending his Son into the world as a new-born babe. (b.) Would human wisdom have allotted to the work of redemption so few years to manhood, so many to infancy, childhood and youth? Christ was the sanctifier of parenthood and childhood.

"God inculcates the right training of children, not alone by his example but by direct command. He takes especial pains that the children should be taught his law. When the great congregation gathered, as on many historic occasions, to hear the reading of the law, it was not alone the fathers who were convened by the command of God, "but your wives and your little ones" were also commanded to stand before God and hear his word. "Take heed to thyself and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life, but teach them to thy sons and thy sons' sons; specially the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb, when the Lord said unto me, Gather me the people together and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children." (c.)

After passing on and noting what careful provision is all along made for children, provision which required their instruction in all points of the ceremonial law, she adds: "Moses in his final address in which he sums up the most important commands of God, three times reiterates—as if to emphasize its importance—the command to teach God's law to the children. 'And thou shalt teach it diligently to thy children, and shalt talk of it when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up.' This is as explicit a command of God and as authoritative as 'Thou shalt not kill.' The Lord will not hold guiltless any parent who disobeys it; or tries to shirk the responsibility of its fulfillment by laying it on a Sabbath school teacher."

"God's special blessing rests upon those who thus train up their children. In the early dawn of history, he called Abraham away from his heathen kindred, and made with him a covenant in which all the nations of the earth were to be blessed, and whose blessing we now enjoy. The great reason given for choosing him was: 'For I know him that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord to do justice and judgment.' The obverse of this picture teaches the same truth by an example of warning. The bitterest punishment was meted out to Eli, godly old man that he was, and to all Israel because 'his sons made themselves vile and he restrained them not.' Commands, restraints, and corrections are just as prominent in God's family government as love." (d.)

"This has been called the children's century; certain it is that in no previous century did children receive so much attention. Never before were so many hands busy in ministering to them in the manufacture of toys, of books, of clothing; never had they so large a place in literature; never did their education both secular and religious, command so much attention. We are obliged to confess that some evil results from this prominence given to childhood, but it is greatly overbalanced by good. It demonstrates that the hearts of the fathers are being turned towards the children, and now as in the days foretold by Malachi this is an omen of good."

"God has made home life the type of his spiritual kingdom, by teaching us to pray, 'Our Father which art in heaven' It is only when home life becomes purified and elevated by interpenetrating it with God's ideal of parental and filial duty each correlating the other and both transfigured in the light of God's love, that the thing typified can be discerned through the type, or the type becomes worthy to typify it. Into an unruly household in which the hearts of parents and children are not turned to reach other, it is very hard for even the Sun of Righteousness to shine when he arises with 'healing in his beams.'"

A. Is there anyone present who can give an instance of this?

B. What reasons present themselves why Christ came as a child?

C. Of what are the Jews living monuments?

D. Let this point be thoroughly discussed.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

AN exercise or an entire program can be derived from the word "Christmas," which would be instructive as entertaining. Nine children represent the letters of the word, and the letters would be appropriate, made of green, dotted with red berries. Evergreen and cranberries make a good imitation of the holly. The letters, placed on stars made of silver paper covered over cardboard, would be new, the star being an emblem of Christmas.

The letters serve as word texts for subjects, or suggest central thoughts for essays and recitations; and the treatment of them should bring out the origin and object of Christmas, as well as the teachings, truths, and lessons so closely connected that they present themselves in considering the theme.

The idea, outlined, is as follows:—

- Luke 2: 11.
Christmas comes from Christ.
Origin of the first Christmas.
Story of the babe in the manger.
- C—Christ. When the first Christmas presents were given.
Story of the wise men and the star of Bethlehem.
- H—Happiness. Happiness, the gift that Christ brought.
His mission was to make men happy.
Luke 2: 10.
His teachings tell us how we may become happy.
- R—Redemption. Christ came to redeem mankind from sin.
Titus 2: 14.
How he redeemed us.
The story of the cross.
- I—Immortality. Christ brought to us the gift of immortality.
2 Timothy 1: 10.
There shall be no more death.
We shall live forever.
- S—Salvation. Acts 4: 12.
Salvation is the plan Christ gave whereby to secure pardon from sin and eternal life.
The first principles are Faith, Repentance, Baptism, and Laying on of Hands.
Psalms 117: 2.
All Christ's teachings are truths for us to obey.
Truths for us to observe after having obeyed the first principles. From the sermon on the mount:—
"Blessed are the peacemakers," etc.
"Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you," etc.
"Lay not up treasures on earth," etc.
- M—Mercy. 1 Corinthians 13: 1.
Mercy, charity, love. What does it mean? Sympathize, have patience, and pity, and make allowance for the faults of others.
- A—Action. 1 Samuel 2: 8.
Worshiping God means to act as well as to believe.
How we may please him at Christmas time.
Make others happy.
Should remind us of the real meaning of Christmas.
Of the great blessing God gave to men.
- S—Song—of the Angels. Of our mission, as expressed in the angels' song, to do, "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Some of the subjects may be treated in essay or recitation. (I like essays, even for children, as the effort required on their part stimulates their interest, increases their knowledge, and develops their ideas as no amount of teaching can do.) The program should be varied by both.

Some beautiful selections are found in "Saints' Harmony" that accord with the subjects and bring out their points perfectly. About the essays, they are very simply written, as they must be, of course, and the teacher or parent may assist the child with ideas and points; or, in some cases, an older one may write a simple paper for the child to read, but the first plan is preferable.

Songs should intersperse the essays and recitations.

The superintendent should call upon the children, one immediately after the other; thus: "C, H, R, I, S, T, M, A, S." Then the children, standing in a line towards the front of the platform, bow, smile, and salute the audience with, "We wish you a Merry Christmas," in concert.

As it would be too long for the children to remain standing till the program is carried out they are seated in a row at the back of the platform, and after each recites his or her part, is seated. Each speaker should introduce his subject thus: "My text is Christ from C"—indicating the letter. "My text is Happiness, from H," etc.

When all have performed their parts, the class rise, march together to the front of the platform, stand, and join the school in a Christmas song, after which they bow, smile, and again wish the audience "A Merry Christmas," and retire to their places.

By using merely quotations, or rhyme couplets, this idea may be shortened to a brief exercise. LOUISE PALFREY.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 11.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I labored in Arkansas; held a four days' debate with J. T. Doyle with a complete victory for truth. Returning to my field of labor—Alabama—December 1, I attended conference at Three Rivers, Mississippi, where I met Bro. T. C. Kelley.

Leaving conference I came by Moss Point and preached once, thence on to this place, Pine Tucky, twelve miles west of Mobile. I announced meeting for Sunday morning, and, lo and behold, two Utah elders turned up. I preached and announced that I would preach at night for their special benefit. I spoke to a full hall for one hour on the latter-day apostasy and presented some of Brigham Young's false doctrine to the people. After I finished I gave way to them to speak if they wished to do so; Elder Ricks arose and said he believed the most of my chart work was true, and that polygamy was dead, and that he would raise his hand and swear they had quit it; and he wished that the people could go out there and see what a prosperous people and country they had. He sat down, when I informed them that the Catholics outnumbered them in people and wealth; that if they had quit polygamy I was glad they were making some improvement, and hoped they would continue to improve and come out of their institution and accept the truth. I offered to debate with them, but they utterly refused. I showed the people the great necessity of discussion.

Elder Hardy preached on Monday at eleven a. m. I was present. The poor fellow could not preach because he had no authority, but he tried. I answered him and offered to debate again and announced preaching at night; but the Utah Elders failed to come any more. They pulled the wool over one poor woman's eyes and she joined them some time ago. I went to see the lady they had duped, yesterday, in company with Mr. Morris, one of the citizens, and found the two elders at her house. We bearded the lion in his den and I never in all my ministerial labor saw Satan's power manifested any plainer. But we rebuked them and they cooled down. I told the lady she was duped. I invited them to come out to hear the gospel at night, but they remained in their hole and would not come.

If all of them are like these I do not wonder at elders having no better success among them. They boast very loudly of being persecuted. I informed them that they were persecuted because of polygamy and Brigham Young's dirty work, and not for righteousness' sake; while the Savior, Joseph Smith, and the Saints are persecuted for truth and righteousness' sake. I will continue here until Friday, then go to Bay Minette, Alabama. In bonds,

IRVING, Minn., Dec. 9.

Editors Herald:—I am trying to tell the gospel to others. I have been here about two weeks and am having good congregations and a very good interest. I have a special interest in this place because of that which has been revealed to me while here, also because I and my wife have many friends living here. I am quite sure that a branch of the church will be raised up here in time if wise labor is done.

I had the privilege on Sunday of hearing a Methodist preach, and I imagined that I felt some as the Apostle Paul did when he was at "Mar's hill," when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. He said that his spirit was stirred within him; and mine was too. I had the privilege of speaking at the same place in the evening and I think that those present at both services could see the difference in the preaching. The Spirit was present in power to aid in presenting the truth and my friends were delighted and thought it would be a good thing to have the M. E. preacher come back before I spoke again. Well I was made glad too, for I asked the Lord to aid me in presenting his word, while I was listening in the afternoon. I speak again to-night upon the judgment. Some requested that I present our views upon that question and they have invited some of their friends to hear, and they live about ten miles away.

In some respects this has been a very peculiar year to me. I have passed through some of the most severe trials of my ministry, but am now feeling more like myself again, and shall try and push the work all I am able to. I had the privilege of being with Bro. I. N. Roberts about two weeks last month doing work in the city of Minneapolis, and I am glad to say that it was both a pleasure and a comfort, as I have been alone most of the time for the last two years. The work is moving in this State, but there is great need of more laborers being sent here—men with push and snap, and men of wisdom and sound judgment; those that will aid in building up the work, instead of throwing water upon the fire that has been kindled by others. This is the Lord's work, and we must work in harmony with his will, if we would have his aid. We must honor the law ourselves, then we can tell others what they must do that they may receive the blessings promised to those that do honor and obey the law of God. I feel confident of the final success of the work and hope to be able to continue in the right way until the end.

For truth and right,

E. A. STEDMAN.

AMHERST, Nova Scotia, Dec. 11.

Editors Herald:—I left home on Oct. 21, and was soon whirling away toward Boston. I was entertained there by Bro. Bullard, and next day took passage in the steamer Yarmouth for Nova Scotia. The city fades from sight; we are out on the ocean, bound for a foreign shore; not very far away, however; that is one comfort. The night passes away, the morning dawns, and as I step ashore I see the English flag floating on the steamer, reminding me that Uncle Sam's farm fence was put up sometime during the night. A lurch on the dock and a walk through a small part of the town of Yarmouth filed in the time until the train started for Halifax and way stations. Now we are off, but not exactly with the rapidity of lightning, still it is better than walking.

As the shades of night were settling down over nature the train slowly rolled into Hantsport. I step on the platform and look for a familiar face, but none greets me. Soon, however, a gentleman asks me if I am looking for some one, and I say yes, tell him whom I am looking for, and find that he is Bro. Lawrence, who has come to the station for me. A drive of two miles or more brings us to our stopping place, where the writer is made to feel at home. Bro. Davison lives in the next house, so we go down to visit him and his family.

Next day we started for conference. We boarded the train at Hantsport and left it at Ellahouse (something like that, anyhow). A walk of five miles brought us to Bro. Dimock's, where we received a gospel welcome. After lunch next day we started on the road again, this time behind a good horse. We called on several of the Saints and friends and met in conference at 2:30. The business passed off nicely and in the evening the writer preached to the people; also on Sunday morning and evening. The Sunday school held a concert in the afternoon, which the writer enjoyed very much. I remained at South Rawdon until November 2, preaching several times to small but interested audiences. While here I found a pleasant home at Bro. and Sister Wood's.

November 4 found me at Lockhartville, where I preached for the Saints and friends. On Monday we took passage in a small steamer bound for Parsboro. The sail was fine, the weather delightful, the scenery grand. How many legends cluster around the Minas Basin: not only when the French held undisputed sway along these shores, but even in our own times. Some, however, have not been printed. I am constantly tempted to go into details, but must remember that space in the Herald is valuable. One night at Parsboro, entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Lylons.

Our next objective point is Amherst, where we find a home at Sr. Quigley's. Held two meetings in Amherst, then went to Williamsdale and were made welcome by Bro. and Sister Johnson. For about three weeks we preached in the schoolhouse; that is, when the weather was suitable. The roads were in a very poor condition most of the time. While here I enjoyed good liberty, had many kindnesses shown to me, and in fact have nothing but the kindest feelings for Williamsdale and her people. The Saints and friends here are building a neat church, and have it nearly completed, and when completed will be entirely free from debt. Bro. Davison's name should be mentioned in connection with this, as he is the moving spirit in this whole Province, and the people have unbounded confidence in him. Reluctantly we bade the Saints good-bye, and in company with two of the brethren went to Glenville, where we held two meetings. I forgot to mention that before leaving Williamsdale two noble souls were led into the water by Bro. Davison. May God's blessing attend them!

A hall had been obtained at Spring Hill, a coal mining town of some five thousand inhabitants; so on Sunday, December 1, we held forth at that place. A good audience came out to hear and we left appointments, providing a hall could be obtained. We returned to Glenville, and next day we went to Amherst again. On Tuesday evening we held forth to an audience of six, and Wednesday held prayer meeting at Sr. Etta Fillmore's.

Thursday I went over to Ft. Lawrence, where Sr. Louis Graham teaches the young idea to shoot, and made arrangements for meetings. Friday night found me preaching the first gospel sermon in the above place; that is, the first time anyone of our faith has preached there. Have continued meetings up to present writing and may stay some days yet. I have good liberty, good audiences, intelligent people. What more can a man ask? Am entertained at Mr. and Mrs. Thompson's, good Methodist people, where every kindness has been shown me, also at Mr. and Mrs. Glenie's. Noble people these. May God reward them. Still, every picture, I presume, has its shadows, and I learned a long while ago that the Devil was not dead, so it does not surprise me when I hear that evil reports have been circulated around the place concerning our faith. I sometimes think that if a man was to preach to the stones in the desert of Arabia that some bird of prey would come along and whisper, "He is a Mormon," and fly on out of reach.

Amherst is excited just at present over a Mr. and Mrs. Black and a Miss Glassey, who are to go to Africa as missionaries. They claim to have received marvelous revelations and spiritual manifestations, the gift of the African tongue being among their attainments, given to them, they say, by divine power. Strange, however, the spirit that leads them does not recognize the law as revealed in Jesus Christ.

Bro. Davison left me last Saturday for Spring Hill and other points. I felt sorry to part with him. He is a genial companion and a good fellow.

Hopefully yours, as ever,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

WOODBINE, Iowa, Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—The town of Woodbine is in the throes of a religious revival, Evangelist Pierson from the East is conducting it. The sectarian churches here are all united in it, and have dubbed themselves "Evangelical," advertising that, "The Evangelical Churches of Woodbine," would unite in the work; but as no hint to unite with them was given to the Latter Day Saints, it was plain that they did not consider us "Evangelical," and hence not worth notice in the matter. This was no more than we expected, hence it did not hurt us to be ignored by them; but the writer thought it a good opportunity to express his individual gratitude to God for the fact that while ignored by those who profess to be his worshipers, we are acknowledged of him; and we requested the publication of the inclosed items in the papers of this town, clippings of which we inclose to use as you please. The Twiner published the "Cause for gratitude" all right, except one word which you find corrected in the margin. The second piece I handed to the Sentinel with Epitome of our faith, which latter, I regret, was left out as the editor said, "for want of space," but promising to give it in a future issue.

Having permission from the missionaries in charge to labor in Little Sioux district, I thought it proper to preach in Woodbine every Sabbath while their meetings were being held. We have fair congregations, though, of course, not so large as the "Evangelicals," yet we are minding our own business and holding our own. Our people attend their meetings when there are none at our church, but I am glad to say conduct themselves as become Saints. We are in no danger of being swallowed up by the "Evangelicals." Their methods are entirely new even to the "Evangelical" world. Yesterday I preached twice in Woodbine to fair audiences and once out in the country, six miles away.

Yours in g spel bonds,

CHARLES DERRY.

CAUSE FOR GRATITUDE.

Ed. Twiner:—Will you kindly grant me a little space in your paper to express my individual gratitude to God for the pleasing knowledge that, while the church to which I have the honor to belong,—(The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints)—is ostracised by the professedly orthodox churches of Woodbine, and declared by them to be "non-evangelical," it is acknowledged by the almighty and just Judge of the universe; and its humble efforts to evangelize the world by the preaching of the pure gospel of Christ are graciously accepted by him, as witnessed by the fulfillment of his promises as recorded in Holy Writ. It is true its numbers are small and its membership is not generally drawn from the popular class. Neither was the Church of Christ in former days, but Jesus has said: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." It is also true that that church was hated by all classes of men; so was Christ and his followers in former days, and he left his people this legacy: "Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake."—Matt. 10:22. "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John 15. I am thankful that God has counted us worthy to suffer with him, for if we endure it patiently he has promised we "shall reign with him." I rejoice in the knowledge that "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and to day, and forever."—Heb. 13; that "with him there is no respect of persons," "but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him."—Acts 10. I thank God for the glorious truths revealed in these latter days, which gloriously confirm the truth of Holy Writ, and are irrefutable evidence of his infinite love and faithfulness to his promises, proving that these promises are yea and amen to them that believe.

With good-will to all mankind, I am very respectfully yours,

CHAS. DERRY.

An Elder in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

—Twiner.

Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Evangelical? Examine and then judge.

Webster defines the word Evangelical thus: "1. Contained in or relating to the four Gospels; as, the evangelical history. 2. Belonging to, agreeable or consonant to, or contained in, the Gospel or the truth taught in the New Testament; as evangelical truth or obedience. 3. Earnest for the truth taught in the gospel; fervent and devout; strict in interpreting Christian doctrine." In order that the public may judge for themselves whether the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is in harmony with the New Testament I inclose an Epitome of the faith of said church and ask your readers to compare it carefully with the teaching of Christ and his apostles. Let your examination be without prejudice and in fear of God and at the same time let it be thoroughly and honestly done. And as every one must give an account, individually, before God for his own agency, I beg of you to do your own thinking and live out the honest convictions of your hearts, remembering that "with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged," and "with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." (Math. 7:2.) Very respectfully,

CHARLES DERRY.

We do not have room for the inclosure this week but will if possible publish it next. ED. —Sentinel.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 13.

Editors Herald:—Bro. F. M. Sheehy arrived here from East Pharsalia, New York. He preached three or four times for us and baptized and confirmed four more young people. This makes eight in all. There were six others to be baptized, but as he had to go home because of some very important business, we had to put it off. We expect him to call upon us again soon. It can truthfully be said that he is indeed a worker and is never easy unless he is doing something in the interest of the Master.

Bro. Adolphus Edwards is now with us and he has preached quite a few times. He came from Wales the same time as Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths came. Your brother, JOHNNY MORGAN.

TURIN, Iowa, Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—This finds me still in the faith and hopeful for the future. We had a profitable conference at Little Sioux on the 7th and 8th although not as well attended from abroad as we would have liked.

There were two things that happened that disturbed our peace to some extent. One was the resignation of Bro. Chambers, as president of the district, and the other was the calling away of Bro. Fyrando, to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Emro Coffman. Bro. Chambers has served well, as president of the district for nearly the last six years; his good work showing forth in that line. It is to be hoped, that he will in the near future be prepared, both in body and mind, to renew his former work.

Our meetings at Whiting were quite well attended, and a good feeling prevailed throughout. There never had been any of our ministry to preach there before,—in fact no opening seemed in sight until Bro. and Sr. McKinney moved into the town. Whether we shall be able to hold meetings in the future in the Christian church, as we did this time, may be a question, as we learned that some of their members opposed our occupying in the first place. The minister, however, favored our occupancy, and so we held the fort for one week, he taking charge, and opening by leading the singing and prayer. Some, we learned, wanted us to stay longer.

I came to this place and preached last evening to a good-sized audience, notwithstanding a quarterly meeting was going on within fifty yards of our place of meeting. Shall hold here, should the interest justify, until Jan. 4, at which time I go to Moorehead. Well! well! well! so many slaps, and slams, at a small portion of one of my recent letters in the Herald both in the Herald, and Ensign; I can't help but wonder what would have been the result had I written an article. Well, it seems the part of nature, that animals should kick in the throes of death. The thing to which I referred, is going to die, sure and complete; if not before, at the coming of the Master. However, let the returns all come in. Still in hope,

J. C. CRABB.

KINGSTON, Mo., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—I opened up a new place eight miles northeast of this city; obtained the Christian church; preached six sermons; divided the congregation almost to the "scrapping" point. The minister sent for, he came, met the enemy, and we are "hizen." He challenged us for a discussion on "That old fraud, the Book of Mormon." Our interests are of such a character there that we thought it wise to accept, so on the 27th, two p. m., we commence. Our opponent is one J. H. D. Tomson, of Richmond, Missouri, reputed to be a profound scholar. Remember us to the prevailing One.

T. W. CHATBURN.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 19.

Editors Herald:—On the 4th of October last I reached Carson City, Nevada, and tarried over night with Bro. Wm. Ridler and family, and on the 5th came Elder T. R. Hawkins and took me by carriage fifteen miles to Genoa, where I preached in the M. E. church to a small but attentive audience. While here, Sr. Mary Hawkins, trusting in the promises of God, was healed speedily of serious illness under the hands of the elders and rode the next day twelve miles to Fairview conference, and then on next day fifteen miles to Diamond Valley. Preached twice at Diamond Valley, four times at Fairview, once at Mottsville, and again at Genoa. I then visited Dayton with Bro. David R. Jones and spent an evening profitably visiting with the little band of Saints at Bro. and Sr. Walmsley's. On the 16th inst. started for Utah via Carson and Reno, reaching Ogden at 5 p. m. the 17th.

From what I saw and heard while in Nevada I am confident a very important work may be done for the church all the way from Reno to Diamond Valley, if patient, spiritual labor is done by one or more wise, faithful, well-informed elders, who would continue in that field a year or more and push their efforts with energy. The elders residing in that field are good and influential men, but their temporal conditions forbid their laboring away from home far. There are noble Saints in Nevada, and more to be.

While in Utah I preached five times in Salt Lake City chapel to rather small congregations—a great shrinkage since 1879 to 1884. At Pleasant Grove, thirty-five miles south of Salt Lake City, I preached five times, besides the dedication sermon of the new chapel on Sunday, Nov. 3, at eleven a. m. at that place. I was greatly pleased to meet the few Saints remaining in these places, as also at Ogden, Willard and Plain City, but my heart was sorrowful to see how little progress the Reorganized Church had made during the past eleven years. And yet I have hope. Utah was in a political upheaval during my stay there, and if no other good comes of it, the people are freer to think, speak, and act now than ever before. The people are pretty evenly divided between the two chief political parties, and many of the ablest men and women of the Utah church gave unmistakable evidence to some of their priestly leaders that they rejected priestly dictation in politics and other civil matters, and warned them to "keep hands off." This is good.

I am confident a great work will yet be done by the Reorganized Church in Utah and vicinities. The people need to be kindly shown the true doctrine and order of God set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, as explained and applied by Joseph the Seer, the Moses man called of God to lay the foundation and build up the Church of Christ unto the most holy faith, a history of which is found in the Evening and Morning Star, the Messenger and Advocate, the Times and Seasons, and Millennial Star. Joseph's official teachings and ministrations found in Church history, carry full measure of weight with the genuine Latter Day Saints in all places that must not, will not be ignored. And until the Reorganized Church appeals to such history in their labors among the Utah Mormons, a serious want will be experienced in the work of restoration. They have great veneration for the teachings and ministrations of the "Choice Seer," and what is needed by them is the genuine teachings of that "Moses" man. In the political contention going on the past fall, Joseph's teachings were freely quoted on the platform and by the press, but no quotations from Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, or John Taylor were offered. This shows where their confidence rests as between these men. They greatly prefer the teachings of Joseph before those of other men, and it is well.

Leaving Utah the 7th of November I reached Denver, Colorado, the evening of the 8th, and was welcomed to the very pleasant home of Mr. Charles E. and Sr. Mary Everett, who spared no effort to make my ten-days' stay with them cheerful and satisfactory. I preached five times while in Denver to fair-sized and very attentive audiences. Here is an excellent field for steady, intelligent, spiritual labor in the gospel. Bro. Shupe presides with earnestness and wisdom over the branch, and Bro. Gowell renders valuable aid in preaching the word and visiting the people from house to house, as the order of God requires of the missionary. I was much pleased with the deportment of the Saints, and am confident Denver will yet see a large body of faithful Saints there.

On the evening of the 18th of November I took train for Sterling and was met the next morning at three o'clock by Bro. Geo. E. McConley and taken to his hospitable home. The next night I preached to a full congregation of earnest listeners in the Baptist church, and had my voice held good and I not called home, it is probable I would have remained preaching in that city two or more weeks at least. I regretted deeply the need for my leaving so soon and hope I may yet return there and sow the seed of life and immortality through the gospel of Christ.

My five-months' trip to California, Nevada, Utah, and Colorado was a most busy one, and the outlook seemed good everywhere nearly, and I found much inquiry for the history of the Church, both that under the first Joseph and that pertaining to the Reorganized Church. There is positively a dearth among the Saints and inquirers as to modern church history, and when questioned as to why no such history can be had, my reply has been that a history was prepared in 1878-9 under the advice of the First Presidency, but that because of opposition to it by some of the ministry no late edition of it had been issued. Shall this condition of things continue? I sincerely hope not.

Very truly,

W. W. BLAIR.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—It is with pleasure we write you a few lines, having a good report to send of the work in this city. We feel that God has indeed answered the prayers of the Saints in Grand Rapids by directing Elder R. E. Grant to come here, who arrived at noon on the 12th inst. and commenced a series of meetings on the night of his arrival, and is continuing them every night with large, increasing crowds and excellent interest. We have already enlarged our seating capacity twice and expect to have to do so soon again. The people who come out to hear almost invariably come again and bring their friends and neighbors with them. They seem very much interested and pleased with the bold, masterly manner in which Bro. Grant presents the truths of the glorious gospel of Christ, which has made many friends for the cause, as well as his pleasant, congenial ways. We hope for some baptisms soon.

The Saints are happy and rejoicing, and while everything is running very smoothly, we have commenced to realize that his Satanic Majesty is neither asleep nor gone on a vacation, but that he is the same old devil he ever was. There will no doubt be further developments in his direction soon.

Ever praying for the advancement of the cause, I am,
Your sister,
ZONIE M. STEPHENSON.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 17.

Editors Herald:—I came to this place on the 12th ult., and on my arrival found the Saints were all alive and had made arrangements for me to commence meeting at once, there being an appointment given out for that same evening. Since that time I have preached six times to what seems to be a deeply interested people. The audience is increasing rapidly, and many say, "That is the truth."

As many as four preachers have listened to me at one time; several of them have bid me "Godspeed," and as yet no serious objections have been raised anywhere along the line. There are between eighty and one hundred thousand of a population in this city. It affords three daily papers to which I have free access, and in which I advertise my subjects for each evening. What a comfort it is to the minister to go where the Saints have been living their religion and letting their light shine. Thus far this seems like the grandest opening the writer has experienced in the line of city work in all Michigan; what the outcome will be the future must tell. If Bro. S. W. L. Scott by chance gets the news, it is hoped he will pardon me for crossing the lines and entering his mission field without first obtaining permission.

In bonds,
R. E. GRANT.

NETAWAKA, Kan., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I returned home on the 11th inst. for a few days' rest, as I have not been enjoying very good health of late, but am glad to be able to say that I have enjoyed more than usual of the light of the Spirit in my work. The Saints at Brownville are having many of the trials incident to life, but seem firm in the work and willing to give a helping hand for its advancement. The few Saints near Auburn seemed cheered by our recent labors. These comprise the members, as far as I can learn, in the territory assigned me by our sub-missionary in charge, excepting Sr. E. Fletcher, from whom I recently received a kind and welcome letter, stating that for good reasons given it was not best to commence meetings till after the holidays.

If any Saint sees this that lives in either of the four southeastern counties of Nebraska that desires some missionary work, I would be pleased to hear from him. Address as above.

I have labored some in my own district of late, according to the request of our sub-missionary in charge and district president; but will say by way of explanation that I passed over the line in this mission while I was waiting for an answer from Saints whom I supposed lived in my field.

A co-laborer,
WARREN E. PEAK.

DOT, Texas, Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—I was sick when the papers containing articles on finding the twenty-four golden plates of Ether, by myself and Elder White, came to hand, and am still unable to write my reply. If those interested will have patience and it is the Lord's will I hope to be able sometime to give my reply.

Yours truly,
C. W. SEWELL.

Mirror writing—that is, reversed writing which must be held before a mirror to be read—is said to be cultivated by many persons for private correspondence by postal cards. It is not difficult to do, especially with the left hand, and left-handed persons sometimes write in this way naturally. An English physician, Dr. C. Clapham, mentions the case of a partially paralyzed female, who taught herself to write with the left hand, and who toward the left—or mirrorwise—at first, and afterwards learned at school to write in the usual way. In moments of forgetfulness she would write one line toward the left and the next toward the right.

TRUE AND FALSE MANIFESTATIONS.

THESE signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils.—Mark 16: 17.

Have we any proof that any except those that were authorized by Jesus Christ have cast out devils from the human tabernacle? See the statements and evidences given to the early apostles. See Matthew 10; Mark 3; Luke 9. See also the command renewed to the elders and apostles of this dispensation. (Section 83, par. 11, D. C.)

The statements handed down to us in the sacred books may have been disputed, but they have never been disproved, and the testimonies given in our own times are of like character, true and beyond dispute. The promise, like its Author, never fails, and whenever the gospel is preached by the authority of Jesus Christ, these signs that have been, will continue to be evidences of its divinity; and though these signs or tokens may in some instances be counterfeited by designing men and devils, yet they will always be to the true believer as evidence of the divine mission of Jesus Christ.

It is further stated, "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover;" and numerous instances, both in ancient and modern times, bear witness to the truth of the promise. Many have received positive assurance of miraculous cases of healing by the power of God.

They shall take up serpents.

Experiences similar to Paul's on the island of Melita (see Acts 28) have been given in our own time, thus verifying the truth of God's unchanging plan. I might relate a circumstance that happened to David Patten, one of the first apostles of this dispensation. He had been in the woods and was bitten by a deadly viper. The limb swelled up and became so painful that he was at a loss to know what to do, being alone. However, he thought of the promise made, and calling upon God to verify his word and heal him, he was soon made to realize that God was true to his promise. He was so overjoyed with his relief from pain and suffering that he ran home to tell his friends what had occurred. He saw a brother approaching him and he shouted out: "There is a God in Israel and I know it!" and then related what had happened.

I might relate numerous cases of remarkable healing in the early history of the church, also many of later date, showing that God is no respecter of persons. It may be asked, Why are not all the sick healed? We answer, The promise was not made to heal all the sick; it was given as one of the unmistakable signs, to all true believers in the gospel, that God is the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever, and his purposes and promises fail not. The decree had previously gone forth,

It is appointed unto men once to die.

Hence the promise was not intended to conflict with what had been before decreed. Man had forfeited his claim upon God because of disobedience. The gospel was given as the means of his restoration and redemption; and these evidences brought about by obedience to and belief in the gospel are assurances that God is still willing to bless the race of man.

It was not intended to entirely remove the curse, but to assure those that believe that God, who has promised, is faithful. I believe that a willing obedience to the plan devised by our heavenly Father and taught in the gospel, as represented in the sacred books, will bring restoration to favor with God and freedom from the ills that afflict humanity. Our heavenly Father kindly begins by distributing these blessings among the believers, to each one severally as he thinks best. Not because they seek or desire these signs, but when they begin to do his will he graciously manifests to them the truth of the gospel by giving these signs or tokens, so that they can see with their eyes and hear with their ears the wonderful works of God, and thereby become witnesses for God and his truth. These I conceive to be some of the reasons why God has promised these signs shall follow them that believe and obey his commandments.

Are there any other evidences or signs given on which the believers may rest with safety in assurance of the divinity of the gospel message? Yes, the Apostle Paul, who was called by revelation to preach and teach the gospel plan and to be a witness of its truth, says God hath set in the church, first apostles, then prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. He also gave gifts unto men; to one is given the gift of wisdom, to another the word of knowledge, to another faith, to another the gift of healing, to another different kinds of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues. All these gifts are given through the operation of the one Spirit, the Holy Ghost, dividing to every man severally as he, the Lord, will.

Though all do not have these outward manifestations, such as speaking with new tongues, prophesying, etc., yet all are entitled to wisdom, faith, and charity, which is the greatest of all gifts.

Is there any danger of being deceived or misled by any of these gifts or outward manifestations? We answer, Yes; and it is not always those that we may think are weak or illiterate that are overcome by these deceptive influences. Some allow a spirit of pride or desire for vain show, a desire to excel, to take the place of a meek and humble spirit and by this means the bars are let down and the seducer comes in like a flood and appears so much like an angel of light that we almost forget the admonition:—

Some are of men, and others of devils.

There is spurious coin as well as genuine,—and, gentle reader, don't be startled if we say that some of these gifts are easily counterfeited and very often pass as the genuine; though not from the same source, they are manifested in much the same way, and many apparently good things are said and startling revelations given in the name of the Lord, or, Thus saith the Spirit. The emotional nature of some is stirred to overflowing while others witnessing its effects conclude it must be of God.

Let us illustrate what really occurs in nearly all bogus manifestations. Take a man or woman in depressed circumstances, financially hedged up, body worn by sickness, an apparent friend comes in to sympathize with and help him, and after hearing of his distress gives him a five-dollar bill to help him out and cheer him up. The man is elated, overjoyed, tears of gratitude flow from their fountains, the man goes to purchase some things he needs to relieve his wants, when, lo, as he presents the bill for payment, that which had caused him to shout for joy and from which he had expected so many comforts, turn out to be a bogus bill, a counterfeit of the worst kind, because so much like the genuine. So it is not safe to judge by outward appearances; and here let me say the healing power as manifested in many places and by different pretenders is not of God although apparent good appears on the surface. The good employed is used only to more effectually mislead and darken the mind against truth.

I admit it is a good thing to heal the sick and afflicted in body, but what shall it profit to heal and restore to health for a time the outer man, if the inner man is by that means blinded, perverted, and deceived; and however charitable I may wish to appear I cannot close my eyes and say that I believe that those persons that are so zealous and persevering in imitating some of the signs that were to follow true believers,—I am not ready to believe or admit the good there is with them comes from God. I believe the men or women who are trying to mystify the plain written word of God in order to build up churches to themselves are not of God. The good arising and growing out of such corrupt and unauthorized teaching and practice is a snare and a trap that all true believers should avoid.

The Saints will do well to carefully study the revelations of God to the church and follow the advice there given. We are told in section 46, Doctrine and Covenants, to do all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that we may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men, for some are of men, and some are of devils.

That ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefited, . . . and not for a sign that he may consume it upon his lusts.

This admonition evidently refers to a desire for vain show or display, to boast. These are some of the devices by which some of the Saints are overcome, led captive by their own lusts, and thus become the victims of seducing spirits. We should carefully heed the advice of John the beloved:—

Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

We find them in the world to-day, manifesting their wondrous powers to lead captive the many that are inquiring, "Who will show us any good?" In the preface to the Book of Covenants the Saints are there advised:—

Search these commandments, for they are true, and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

The law of God is our only safeguard. It is the only guide on which we can safely rely, because it is in perfect harmony with the divine Spirit. Man is fallible, easily deceived and turned aside. Our only hope is to cherish a meek and humble spirit, and honesty of purpose in order to win the prize. We must have these very important qualifications and they come to us through observing the law, and the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, will guide us into truth just in proportion as we follow the law of God. Let no man deceive you. Do not deceive yourselves, follow the admonitions given; they are just as applicable to us as to the Saints of the past, just as valuable and important.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

GEORGE DERRY.

LAMON, IOWA, Nov. 24, 1895.

The telephone newspaper, which has been in successful operation over two years at Budapest, has become almost indispensable to its 6,000 subscribers. The service has a main wire of 168 miles, which is connected to private houses and various public resorts. Between 7:30 in the morning and 9:30 in the evening 28 editions are spoken into the transmitter, ten men with loud, clear voices acting as speakers, in shifts of two. The news is classified, and given in accordance with a regular programme, so that any subscriber knows when to expect the kind of items of interest to him. A short summary of all important items is given at noon and again at night, and subscribers are entertained with music and lectures in the evening.

A reason for doubting that oxygen is an element has been given to the London Royal Society by Mr. E. C. C. Baly. Under the silent electric discharge, the gas that goes to the cathode with long sparks is less dense than un electrified oxygen, while with short sparks it is more dense.

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Conference convened at Little Sioux, December 7; J. C. Crabb was chosen to preside, A. M. Fyrando and Nellie Ballantyne clerks. Branches reporting: Magnolia, Woodbine, Persia, Little Sioux, and Logan. Ministry reporting: Elders C. Derry, J. C. Crabb, D. Chambers, G. M. Scott, S. B. Kibler, R. Gunsolley, J. C. Johnson, F. Hansen, W. Chambers, D. A. Hutchings, A. M. Fyrando, and M. Jensen; Priests R. A. Ballantyne, F. E. Cohrt, W. T. Fallon, and W. Bullard; Teachers E. C. Outhouse, G. Shearer, and C. Vredenburg; Deacons J. Beecham and E. Vredenburg. Spiritual condition of branches "generally good." On motion C. Derry was requested to labor in this district as much as he could consistently with other duties. On motion W. D. Bullard was accorded the privilege of preaching in the district, subject to branch presidents. On motion ordered that Union Center branch report be forwarded by branch secretary to secretary of district. Report of committee on Missouri Valley branch was made by W. D. Bullard. He spoke of needs in spiritual work and organization, and these were necessary to accomplishment of the financial needs. After much discussion the committee report was on motion adopted and committee discharged. By motion the Missouri Valley branch was placed in hands of district president. The resignation of D. Chambers, district president, was read, and as the reasons given for same seemed imperative resignation was accepted. J. C. Crabb was chosen district president to fill vacancy for three months. Adjourned to meet first Saturday and Sunday in March. A quiet, peaceful, hopeful time was had.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Convention was held at Nebraska City, Nebraska, October 12; M. J. Schafer superintendent, Emma Nelson secretary pro tem. Schools reporting: Nebraska City, 68 enrolled; average 30. Palmyra, 16; average 15. Treasurer's report: Amount on hand, $4.63; nothing received, nothing disbursed. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that we as an association recommend that the various Sunday schools hold weekly teachers' meetings to review the lessons for the succeeding Sunday, and to discuss methods of teaching and points to be brought out in the various classes. The evening session consisted of a literary and musical program which was very entertaining, a part of which consisted of an address by Elder M. H. Forscutt on "How shall our children be taught? What should the Sunday school accomplish? and How they should accomplish it," which was not only entertaining, but was quite instructive. Adjourned to call of superintendent.

Miscellaneous Department.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The Herald readers will doubtless be glad to learn further about the work and condition of the publishing department of the church, especially since this is a matter in which all are, or should be, at least, financially and personally interested.

At this time I propose to call up some of the adverse things that hedge up the way to success, that the Saints may consider them first, which if they do and remedy, the chief obstacles to the department will be removed.

First and foremost among these is the enormous delinquent list, reaching the sum of TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SUBSCRIPTIONS. What to do in this is apparent to all without multiplying words. Let us pay the amount we owe and at once. If you find upon looking at the label on your paper that you are already paid up, just take a glance at your neighbor's Herald wrapper and see if he is paying attention to the necessity of prompt action in the matter; and, if he is not, stir up his mind, and if he does not have the money, help him raise it and forward and see that the debt is cancelled. It may be asked, Why should each member thus take a personal interest in such a matter? The answer is this: The interest of the Publishing House is yours, if you are a member of the church. You are blessed in its success and lose with its failure. Why, then, should not each one personally interest him or herself in the work and insure the lifting of this burden at once?

Second of importance in hindering the work are the arrearages on book accounts amounting to nearly four thousand dollars. Now there are no true Saints who will stop and cavil over the drawbacks to the Herald Publishing House and dispute as to what is the cause of its cramped condition when they learn these facts. There is no institution that could run and live with such enormous sums taken out of its earnings as these lists show. The wonder is that the office has thrived as long as it has under such a burden.

The remedy, if not a strictly cash system, is a strictly honorable and prompt payment of dues. No Latter Day Saint can hope in any event to discharge his or her duty and do less than this.

Third, Another misunderstanding on the part of many, both among the ministry and members, if we may judge by the letters received, is as to the Herald being sent free to the ministry.

The action of the Board of Publication in making the paper free lies in the fact of the minister or missionary acting as agent for the Herald as missionaries have been so authorized to act; and when they so fully act and discharge their duty, then they should have a copy of the paper. Are there any so receiving the paper who do not labor for its success as a part of the general church work? Inquiries come to us saying: "Am I not entitled to the Herald free? I am a missionary." The last part of the statement is not a sufficient reason. It should be, "I am a missionary and working diligently for the interest of the Herald as other church work."

All will be able to see that in this way the Herald can be sent free to such and the HOUSE succeed; but not the former.

The subscriptions of the Herald and Hope to the ministry and poor who are not able to pay would amount to ELEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS A YEAR, and all must readily see that this loss must be recovered in one of two ways; first, by the missionaries pushing the work as agents, collecting and extending subscriptions; or, second, by cutting off the free list and extending it to none but the poor.

Now, brethren, after carefully considering the matter, can there be any difference of opinion between us as to what should be done?

Many of the ministry and the poor ask that we send them the Herald, Autumn Leaves, and the Hope—all three publications—free. To send the Herald and Hope alone free to such would take ten per cent of our profits from those two publications. It will therefore be apparent at a glance that to send the three publications free is an impossibility; that no business enterprise could live with such a drain upon it. We shall send the Herald free to the ministry and the poor, but must have the help of all in pushing the interests of the publishing department, as stated heretofore.

The letters heretofore sent out by me have met with various criticisms and commendations according to the knowledge I have found had by those writing of the circumstances and conditions of the office; and I have thought that if I let the people know the true state of things we would have little difficulty in seeing eye to eye touching the work to be done to move the church publishing interests ahead where they should be.

I am glad to be able to state that the Hymnal is out and on sale, gotten up in the manner outlined by the committee at the last General Conference. The only trouble is that the character and cost of the work as recommended by the committee are all too good for to be sold at fifty cents a copy. It will require the sale of 2,000 copies at these prices to bring anything into the office. But the work is in hand and all should have one. To have your order filled soon, send at once, inclosing the price. See price list for gilt and morocco binding.

We especially request the traveling ministry to help us in subscriptions and sales of books, and are thankful to say that some of them are helping us very much.

Ever laboring for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

FRANK CRILEY,

Business Manager, Herald Office.

NOTICES.

After diligent search we find the following names enrolled upon our branch record. We have been unable to find any trace of their present whereabouts, and should we not hear from them by the 29th of January, 1896, we shall enroll them on our record as scattered members and report them as such: Margaret Agenstien, Gustave E. Balchen (teacher), Joseph Carr (priest), Hannah V. Clark, Emma Clemmens, Maud Clemmens, Elizabeth Gillette, Emma Hailey, Oxford Jonason, Anna Marlin, Lars Larsen Rask, Frank Sullivan, Jense P. Thyngensen, Louise Thyngensen, Josephine Ticehurst, Owen W. Williams, Mary E. Wilson.

Any of the Saints knowing the whereabouts of any of the above parties will confer a favor by writing to the officers of the Omaha Branch.

Yours in gospel bonds,

FREDERICK A. SMITH, Pres.,

TO THE MINISTRY.

The mission work of the church is assuming such proportions and the experience of the past has been of that character that we are convinced that a change must be made to avoid distress, and unwarranted complaint and censure of the Bishopric and those having in charge the finances and mission forces.

It is a fact that needs no argument that when there is no money in the hands of the Bishop he cannot pay out to maintain the families of those appointed to labor in the mission field. This for the past two years has been a source of anxiety and trouble to the Bishopric and a matter of more or less distress to the missionaries and their families. The Quorum of Twelve became aware of the growth of the mission force and the struggle imposed upon the Bishop in consequence thereof. Being warned by the Bishop and experience, they sought to correct the difficulty and drafted a resolution to recommend the sending of a less force as missionaries, whose families should be dependent upon the church, and so notified the church through the Herald. Such action should have obtained at last spring's conference, but the work seemed to be opening so grandly and so many eligible ministers presented themselves, so many urgent calls came from the field, that the quorum felt it might be possible to pull through another year, and thus failed to comply with the letter of their own resolution; and acting upon the principle of faith, rather increased than diminished the list of appointees.

My attention has repeatedly been called to this matter this mission year. Some distress has resulted from our action because of the inability of the Bishop to meet in full the demand made upon him. Two years' failure of crops in some fields, and the general depression of finances in all the world, we think, lies largely at the root of our present distress. And now to prevent the repetition of the present and past inconveniences, and get ourselves straight on the record, we notify the ministry at large that at the next spring conference the quorum expects to be governed by their resolution and recommend for mission work in keeping therewith. The resolution is in harmony with the law. See section 104, paragraphs 16 and 43, and section 122, paragraph 8.

These items of the law may not have been understood or construed right in the past.

An over-anxiety to see the gospel spread and become universal may have led to too broad a construction, and thus to an enlargement of the missionary force to the injury of the local work and ministry: and hence we see a more explicit commandment and arrangement of the work of the ministry than heretofore given in section 122. Our action is based upon the law and necessities of the work, and we hope and trust that all the ministry will do all they can in the good work, and heed the injunction given in section 104, paragraph 44, "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence," etc.

And again, I wish to call attention to the reports to be made in the last quarter, preparatory to the coming conference, and possible change desired in field of labor, and ask the ministry to remember the rules published, and report to missionaries in charge; and let them report to the quorum, and thus save time, labor, and confusion. A little exercise of memory and consideration of order will save for the quorum valuable time for conference work. Asking of all a cheerful unanimity in the great work, I am,

Your colaborer,

ALEX. HALE SMITH

Pres. of Quorum of Twelve.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 13, 1895.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

TO BRANCH AND DISTRICT CLERKS.

Nearly all clerks of branches and districts have done well during the past year in making and forwarding statistical reports, and in answering inquiries about differences and errors in records.

But from some districts no statistical reports of branches have been received since those for March, 1895, or for the previous September or December. They are as follows: Nova Scotia, Central California, Southern California, Idaho, Florida, Fremont (Iowa), Pottawattamie (Iowa), Spring River (Kansas), Northern Michigan, Central Nebraska, and the Ohio.

Perhaps a portion of these have been mailed, but, through loss of mails, or by reason of insufficient postage stamps, the packages have failed to arrive. At times packages come through that have on them only the stamps that pay for printed matter only, and it may be that others are thrown away by postal clerks because not stamped as first-class matter by the senders.

Aberaman, Cardiff, and Llanelly in Wales, and Lydney in England, are the only branches in those countries from which reports have arrived within the time named.

Quite a number of branches in America have not reported to their conferences, even in districts where the majority of them have done so. But every branch in the world ought to make a report to the winter conference of its district, so that the general Church Record may contain an exact account of all gains and losses prior to the making out of the Annual Report of the total church membership on March 20. Let this be especially borne in mind by branch and district officers.

In connection with this will say that I would like to receive reports direct from the branches which have no district conferences to report to, such as from Drew County, Ingleside, Shady Grove, and Silver Hill, in Arkansas; Cedar, Coal Creek, Denver, Fairview, and Rocky Mountain, in Colorado; Gallatin and Deer Lodge, in Montana; and from the branches in Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, and Washington.

Also will district clerks kindly forward the December, February, and March reports as soon after their conferences as possible, as soon as they can write out their minutes and hasten to copy the reports upon their district record, wherever such copies of names and items are kept upon the district books. And, without doubt, that is the best method of keeping trace of district membership.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.

DIED.

BAGLEY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, December 12, 1885, of consumption, Bro. James Bagley, son-in-law of Bro. Thomas France, aged 41 years, 1 month, and 17 days. He was a good and worthy man. He obeyed the gospel January 31, 1878, while living in Kewanee, Illinois, being baptized by Bro. John S. Patterson, and he continued faithful. His wife survives him, also two children. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. He was assisted by Bro. J. W. Wight.

CARLIN.—At Omaha, Nebraska, December 10, 1895, Ralph Carlin, aged 2 years and 7 days. He was the grandson of Sr. Esther Carlin, formerly of Iowa. Funeral services at the residence; sermon by G. M. L. Whitman.

CHESHIRE.—Sr. Elizabeth Cheshire was born in Whipsnade Village, Bedfordshire, England, June 14, 1831; was baptized in the Moselle, Missouri, branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, September 8, 1878, by Priest A. S. Davison, and confirmed by Elder Abraham W. Reese, September 15, 1878; died at her home near Moselle, Missouri, December 1, 1895. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder A. S. Davison, in the Presbyterian church, in Moselle, December 3, 1895. Husband and a host of friends mourn. She was a faithful worker in the latter-day work.

LEMBURG.—At the home of his friend, Mrs. S. C. Dunclee, Shellsburg, Iowa, November 30, 1895, Charles C. Lemburg, aged 29 years, 7 months, and 7 days. He was born at Schleswig, Germany. He graduated from the Iowa College for the Blind in June, 1885. He was a strictly honest and moral man with a high sense of honor. His musical talent was of a high order, as was manifested by his compositions. Funeral services in the Baptist church, December 2, Rev. D. Bancroft officiating.

KEEN.—In Liberty township, Lucas County, Iowa, December 10, 1895, Mr. William Keen, who was born in Jefferson County, Kentucky, September 14, 1812. He was one of the old settlers and highly respected. To live a moral life and do good was his religion. His aged life companion survives him. Funeral sermon from Job 14: 14, by Elder R. M. Elvin.

COFFMAN.—December 7, 1895, Barbara Alice Coffman. She was born November 21, 1864, in Jefferson County, Indiana. Was a member of the United Presbyterian Church; came to Iowa in 1883, and in 1887 was united in marriage to Charles Emro Coffman. She leaves a mother, three sisters, two brothers, and three small children, youngest five months, the eldest four years old. The peculiar sadness of it all is, the husband was stricken with typhoid fever and died. We preached his funeral Thanksgiving Day, and ten days later his wife followed with same disease. Funeral services at Latter Day Saints' chapel, Magnolia, Iowa, Sunday, December 8; sermon by A. M. Fyrando. The large congregation and tears all bespoke the sympathy of friends. May God bless the babes that remain. A. M. F.

MONTGOMERY.—At Parker, Colorado, December 1, 1895, William S. Montgomery, aged 75 years. Bro. Montgomery was ordained an elder at Flintville, Wisconsin, in June, 1867, soon after he became a member of the church. The Saints and friends familiar with his life bear witness to his faithfulness and steadfastness in the gospel. His end, which he was forewarned of as being near, was peaceful and happy, provoking the thought expressed by one of old, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my latter end be like his." Funeral sermon at the home of his son, F. L. Montgomery, by the writer. M. F. GOWELL.

HART.—At Bloomington, Idaho, December 2, 1895, Bro. John Hart. He was born June 29, 1806, in Henningford, Huntington County, England. He accepted the gospel of Jesus Christ as taught by the elders of the Utah Church in London, England, in 1858, being baptized by Elder John Banks. Emigrated to America in 1850; came to Utah in 1852; but finding certain doctrines taught and practiced by the church in the valleys of the mountains which he could not conscientiously accept, he renounced his allegiance to said church, and in 1864, on the 20th day of August, he was baptized by Alexander McCord into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He was ordained an elder August 27, 1864, by Elders R. Atwood and Alexander McCord. Many of the elders will always remember him and his dear wife and their blind daughter Alice; for while they lived in Ogden in the sixties the elders sent to the Rocky Mountain mission often shared their hospitality. Our beloved brother lived to a good old age and was ready and willing to go when the summons came. He closed his eyes as in peaceful slumber and thus passed away. Funeral services in charge of the bishop of the Mormon Church at Bloomington. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder A. J. Layland, of the Reorganization, to an attentive audience of relatives and friends.

GOSSET.—James Wesley, youngest son of Bro. John and Sr. Anna Gosset, died December 6, 1895, aged 4 years, 8 months, and 26 days. Edna Almeda, infant daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Anna Gosset, died December 8, 1895, aged 2 years, 7 months, and 16 days. Funeral services of both children conducted by Eld. J. F. Mintun. These two little bodies were laid away in the Decatur cemetery, awaiting the morning of the first resurrection:

WILSON.—At Yule, Crawford County, Kansas, October 31, 1895, Sr. Jane S. Wilson (of the Caseyville branch, Illinois), aged 78 years, 2 months, and 26 days. Cause of death not stated. She accepted the gospel while living in England, in 1850, and came to America in 1864 expecting to go to Utah. But, becoming convinced that the Reorganized Church was the one acknowledged of God, she united with it, and remained faithful to Christ and his work. Her son, Elder J. W. Thorpe, and her three married daughters, mourn her departure.

At the present rate of increase this country will have a population of 190,000,000, in 1940.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

According to rules agreed upon and published by the Herald Office, all whose subscriptions are one year overdue will be dropped from the mailing lists at the end of the year—December 31, 1895—provided, that if those who desire their papers continued and who will pay in a reasonable time, will so notify the office, their publications will be continued.

This applies to the Herald, Autumn Leaves, Hope, and Gospel Quarterlies.

It is desired that all will continue and so notify us, and make an effort to pay subscriptions as soon as possible.

It is our wish to increase, not to diminish the circulation of the church papers among the membership. All should read them.

Subscriptions solicited.

Business Manager Herald Office.

HOLIDAY GIFT BOOKS.

The Herald Office, in pursuance of a policy that will result in substantial good to its patrons, offers the following list of Holiday attractions.

Every one of the articles advertised is a thing of merit—something both intellectually and materially substantial—rich in the subject-matter contained, durable in workmanship and attractive in style.

The publications advertised are "things that remain" and abide. A friend or relative is benefited by gifts of such valuable character.

Moral, mental, and all lines of spiritual development are the aims sought by all works issued under the supervision of the publishing department of the Church of Christ.

We do not offer catchpenny premiums in cheap silverware or other gaudy ornaments.

The list of attractions offered is presented on its merits.

The Descriptive Catalogue, mailed on application to any address, describes all works in our list.

THE SAINTS' HERALD.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE CHURCH.

It contains news of the progress of the work in all the world. The general movements of humanity are noted that our people may be kept in touch with the relationship of events to the development of God's purposes among the nations. The Editorial, Mothers' Home Column, Sunday School, Letter, Original Articles, Selected, Miscellaneous, and other departments indicate the ground covered.

Price $2.00 per year.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S MAGAZINE.

Published by the church; edited by Sr. M. Walker, assisted by Department Editors—Sunday School, Zion's Religion, and Daughters of Zion work are treated in departments specially devoted to those features of work.

The same energy that has been put forth to make the magazine a source of good to our young people will be continued by the editor.

Among the special list of attractions for 1896 are the following:—

The Autobiography of Sr. Lydia Supry, who is well known to the Michigan Saints. It is to be furnished by Sr. Zonie Stephenson, who estimates it as equal to any of the very interesting biographies hitherto published.

"Prophecy and the Holy Land," by Bro. and Sr. Heman C. Smith—a companion series to "The Bible and the Christian Religion," already published in the LEAVES from the pen of Bro. Smith.

Phrenographs of prominent ministers and church workers, by Orrin Dudley, Phrenologist.

A fine engraving of Nauvoo, the Beautiful City, taken during the late Montrose reunion and engraved by the Electric Light Engraving Company.

Other features too numerous to mention will make the magazine a companion and counselor to our young people and continue to furnish them opportunities for literary and general development.

Price $1.25 per year.

FOOTSTEPS OF JESUS.

BY SR. HESTER S. E. YOUNG.

It is the Life of Jesus, told in a simple and interesting way, adapted to the capacities of children. This little book is a gem among the literature provided for the children. It relates the important history of the Savior's life in such entertaining style as to awaken and keep the interest of little readers. It gives them a fair knowledge and truthful picture of the leading events of the Savior's life and prepares them to appreciate the narratives of the Gospels and New Testament to be studied in after years.

Bound in cloth, printed in large type; Price 20 cents.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

PATTIE; OR LEAVES FROM A LIFE.

A story from real life, of the experiences of one led from the partial light of Protestantism into the fullness of the Restored Gospel.

A book for Sunday school libraries and the home. Cloth $1.15.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER JOSEPH LUFF.

The former offer of this work at 50 cents is withdrawn. The low price was made on a Job Lot, which has been disposed of.

The prices on the work are: Cloth $1.25; Leather, gilt edges, $1.75.

Fancy bookbinding done to order.

Address all orders and remittances to
FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager,
Herald Office, Laramie, Decatur Co., Iowa.

HESPERIS.

The poetical works of David H. Smith, youngest son of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It contains upwards of one hundred of the author's best compositions, many of which are excellent poems of a high order of merit; all containing sentiments of exalted type, and of true religious spirit. The author was gifted as a hymn writer and employed his talent in the production of sacred psalms and other sonnets of an elevating, inspiring nature. His sacred numbers are general favorites, and much used in the song services of public worship.

The book contains 194 pages. Elegantly printed, bound in cloth, stamped, gilt edges; price $1.50—a excellent birthday or holiday gift book.
