Pursuant to action of the last convention have assisted what we could in editing the Program. Conditions have been such that we have not accomplished what we could wish for along this line. In our judgment, however, the effort in this direction has been all the circumstances warranted, we acted as instructed by the convention, and though may have fallen short of the mark, did the best we could. Owing to the depressed condition of financial affairs, together with other circumstances well known, believe it to be to the best interest of all concerned to discontinue the Program in its present size, not that the end desired should not be reached, but believe it can be reached by other means with less effort. Opinions are so diversified as to what course should be pursued in the event of its discontinuance, do not think it wise to offer any suggestions in this report.

While the financial part of our work is covered by our treasurer's report, it is so closely allied with the Program work we mention it briefly here. Financial matters have been close during the past two years, but in our judgment not so close as our reports would indicate. The financial support received in behalf of the Program is somewhat in the same nature as the number of our membership, where we had expected least we received greatest, and where we had anticipated substantial help secured disappointment. We do not make this as a complaint, merely a statement of facts.

During the two years have written and mailed about 900 letters. This includes some circular letters. In September, 1895, prepared a circular letter addressed to all our missionaries asking that they look after our work in their mission. A great many appeared to be interested, and several have assisted very materially in forming and carrying on societies, (but the fact that less than fifty per cent even replied at all, shows that a great many are not interested.)

The demand for our working is becoming greater daily, the reports from our missionaries through the Herald certainly indicate the want of such work. Something that will enable us to educate ourselves after uniting with the church, until we can tell what we believe and where we stand, something that will interest our young people, keep them within proper bounds, and teach them to walk in that way that leads to eternal life; viz., being spiritually minded.

We have learned some lessons from experience, our needs are better understood now than four years ago, and though we may not be able to fully satisfy them just at present, it is to be hoped some improvement may be made. We should carry out our motto "Onward and upward." J. C. HITCHCOCK.

St. Louis, Missouri, March 30, 1897.

A petition was read from a local society at Miller, Illinois, asking that provision be made for the wearing of a distinctive badge by members of the Religio. The petition was denied, there being a strong sentiment against the widespread tendency now generally prevailing among so many organizations in the world.

The President then outlined the business to come before the convention: A proposed amendment to the by-laws, changing the time of election of local officers; character of work to be entered upon in aiding the spiritual and general development of the young people by the Religio, and the methods to be devised for its execution; and the election of officers.

The session then adjourned, to meet at 8:30 a. m. in prayer service, that direction concerning the work to be provided for might be realized. A good spirit has prevailed throughout.

Friday, the 2d.—The assembly met at 8:30 a. m. and devoted about two hours to prayer, as provided for in yesterday's session.

Following this, short addresses were made by those who look with decided favor upon the Religio movement. The general trend of the statements made was, in effect, that the society had a mission, that it should learn just what it was, and then occupy to the best possible advantage.

A brief intermission was then had, which was occupied in informal conversation, after which the transaction of business was resumed. A committee of five were then appointed; viz., Brn. J. A. Gunsolley, J. F. Mintun, M. H. Bond, and Srs. Louise Palfrey and Maggie Blair, who were instructed to consider methods of procedure for the coming year's work, to report as early in the afternoon as practicable. A resolution was adopted providing that rules for the expulsion of members be provided for by the general officers.

Business resumed at 1:30 p. m., the usual opening exercises. The report of the committee appointed at the morning session was read, and adopted by sections, as follows:—

Minutes of committee to draft plan of work. . . . First a general discussion was had, resulting in the following resolution:—

Resolved, that our programs be published in the Autumn Leaves, and if needs demand, print duplicate copies at the expense of the locals desiring them; and we further recommend that a copy of Autumn Leaves be furnished free to such locals as are found, on satisfactory evidence furnished the executive committee, to be unable to pay for them.

Resolved, that there be one superintendent appointed to represent each department into which this society is divided, they given entire jurisdiction of said department, subject to the advice of the Executive Committee.

The above superintendents be requested to outline a continuous course of study under his department.

As a suggestion under Religious, Book of Mormon archæology; Literary, Travels and such other matters as may be required; Temperance, Music and temperance in all things; Historical, that the Church History have especial consideration.

We have in mind many important matters which have not been given time to properly consider; hence we ask the convention a continuance that we may mature in our minds a course of action to be suggested, and made known through the proper departments of our publications for consideration during the coming year.

J. A. GUNSOLLEY,	} Committee.
J. F. MINTUN,
LOUISE PALFREY,
M. H. BOND,
MAGGIE BLAIR,

A further action provided that the selection of an editor of Department of Correspondence in Autumn Leaves be left with the officers and editor of Autumn Leaves.

A fund, accumulated for literary distribution, was ordered loaned to the Presiding Bishop for one year, without interest.

The constitutional provision for the election of officers of local societies was so amended as to fix the election time the second meeting in January and July.

The election of officers was then proceeded with resulting in the reelection of the former incumbents; viz., J. A. Gunsolley President, F. E. Cochran Vice President, J. C. Hitchcock Secretary, Russell Archibald Treasurer.

A vote of thanks was tendered those who had superintended the general work, including issuance of the Program, since the last convention adjourned.

The evening exercises concluded the convention. The program was well rendered before a large and appreciative audience. It is as follows:—

1. Octet, R. W. Scott, F. M. Smith, V. Blair, Alta Gaylord, Roxanna Gaylord, Audie Anderson, David Anderson, and Oscar Anderson.
2. Invocation, Elder F. G. Pitt.
3. Address of welcome, J. A. Gunsolley.
4. Song, "I want to play ball with you, Papa," Master Willie Pitt.
5. Response, F. M. Sheehy.
6. Duet, "Evanelia," Myra Brackenbury and J. Cole Moxon.
7. Pantomime, "The Voice of Spring," Ruth Lyman Cobb.
8. Essay, Religious and Historical, Louise Palfrey.
9. Vocal solo, Mrs. V. Blair.
10. Essay, Temperance and Literary, R. B. Trowbridge.
11. Duet, "Evanelia Lost," Myra Brackenbury and J. Cole Moxon.
12. Music, Le Petit Orchestre.
13. Recitation of an original poem by Elbert A. Smith. "The Hill Cumorah," Ruby Stedman.
14. Song, congregation, "God be with you till we meet again."
15. Benediction, Elder J. F. Mintun.
16. Music, Le Petit Orchestre.

The Religio workers enter upon the work of the coming year feeling that prospects are brighter for them in the arrangements that have been made to more perfectly develop the features of the work to which they are giving attention.

THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

THE seventh convention of the General Sunday School Association of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints opened its sessions at three o'clock on Saturday, April 3, 1897, in the lower auditorium of the saints church, at Lamoni, with Superintendent T. A. Hougas in the chair, W. N. Robinson, the Secretary. Many had come during the day to be present at the opening session, and the large number of ministers, and of brethren and sisters of the laity, witnessed the widespread character of the interest in the proceedings to be entered upon. The basement was quite well filled when the audience was called to order. The excellent spirit manifest among delegates and visitors was apparent. A more friendly spirit could not well be realized, for it was a unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace—one which furnished substantial ground for the expectation that results far-reaching for good would be realized in the business transacted.

The hymn, "Am I a soldier of the cross?" was sung, followed by prayer by the Superintendent, another hymn followed, "Gospel bells," and the convention was opened.

The Superintendent in his opening remarks dwelt upon the necessity of dependence upon the One who only was able to inspire and direct aright. The chairman being so authorized, appointed a committee on credentials: Brn. M. C. Fisher, of Boston, Arthur Ballard, of Omaha, and T. W. Chatburn, of Independence. Bro. J. F. Mintun and Sr. Belle Robinson James were appointed by the chair to assist the Secretary for the time being. Addresses were called for, pending report from the credentials committee. Responses were made by Bro. F. G. Pitt, Sr. M. Walker, Brn. T. W. Williams, J. H. Lake, Srs. Anna Salyards, C. B. Kelley, Maggie Blair, Brn. F. M. Sheehy, J. F. Mintun, R. C. Evans, Sr. Mina Hart, Bro. G. W. Robley. At this juncture the credentials committee brought in its report, which was quite lengthy, showing a large number of delegates appointed. The report was received, the committee continued. The report showed 1,027 delegates appointed already, representing 10,606 pupils, 38 districts, and some schools.

The Secretary was authorized to select his assistants. He continued Bro. J. F. Mintun and Sr. James. Bro. A. M. Chase was appointed chorister, he to select an organist; Bro. S. M. Bass, janitor of Lamoni branch, to continue in charge.

Reports of officers were the next features of business. Bro. T. A. Hougas reported verbally. We give the substance of it, as follows:—

The Sunday school work had passed the experimental stage; some had once regarded it as an experiment but it was now an established feature of church work. Live schools and live branches go hand in hand. The schools are forces that aid to strengthen the work everywhere. Schools started in private houses had caused the work to extend with prospects of branches of the church being organized. Many similar occurrences could be mentioned of the good done by the Sunday schools and school work. The work in general is onward. In the East they are hopeful, doing well, and building; in the South, where before comparatively unknown, one district had been organized and work rapidly advancing. In the Central States—great progress and much being done; Canada is flourishing; Far-off England has caught the spirit of the work, and while not fully in line with the association methods there, they contemplate use of our Quarterlies; will try them. From the society Islands Sr. Devore at the late Woodbine reunion, reported an interesting and glowing account of work established there. It is hoped Sr. Devore will be present to speak of it more fully. During the past year had visited seven district conventions; some well established, some comparatively new—a greater determination we have never seen expressed; great improvement is being made, also visited three other schools. Have visited three reunions in the interest of the work—at Thurman, Woodbine, and Montrose, Iowa; at all of which workers were found ably qualified, all of whom were strengthened and generally aided by association with one another.

An innovation, it might be termed, was the Sunday School Institute at Council Bluffs, during the holidays. It was, briefly stated, a three days' gathering for study of the methods and general features of Sunday school work; about seventy-five visitors present from various States, districts, and newly organized territory who took home a greater measure of the spirit of the work. At last convention the officers were empowered to act on blackboard work. Were disappointed in this regard; full report of efforts later. As superintendent conducted sixty sessions of Sunday school, and been connected with about fifty other sessions in general work. Had written about four hundred letters, answering questions requiring much thought, and some research. Had furnished free Quarterlies to but two schools, all others being able to pay.

For benefit of school literature found in HERALD, Hope, and Leaves, had tried to make improvement. Believing there was much undeveloped talent, had issued circular letter asking for names of those who could contribute as writers for the papers named. Responses had not been as numerous as anticipated. The work may be continued. A demand for a Christmas program for the schools had been apparent. The Primary Committee had prepared one, the Senior and Intermediate Committee another, which were published gratis by the association. The measure of success of this movement has not yet been fully learned.

A feature that it is believed would be beneficial is that the Superintendent have all his time to devote to the association. The time may not be now; but it should be kept in mind and one selected who can devote his entire time if the present superintendent cannot.

Work at reunions should be continued, that children be benefited and devote some of their visiting time to improvement, with the adults. Why not three or four session be held out of the many for school work? It should be done.

Provision should be made for more than one year's issue of the Quarterlies. Committee to select editors should be authorized to appoint editors for a term of five quarters—to keep the work ahead.

Another necessity, what we might term a "Home Department." There are many isolated families denied church and school privileges. Something should be done to keep these people alive—to introduce school work in single families if necessary. The ministry could aid in this. Our brethren in the ministry cannot show too much interest here. Think the good of the work demands the constant interest and aid of the ministry. They are very busy, but could do much here to advantage, while among the isolated families would find many who would take hold in the homes. It has been done in many instances.

Glad to be able to do what we can do; glad to see the work move, and prayer is for its continued growth.

The Assistant Superintendent presented a written report as follows:—

To the Sunday School Convention:—I cannot report work done by extended travels, as my duties do not permit me to be absent from Lamoni much of my time. I was therefore compelled to forego the pleasure of responding to the invitation of the Superintendent to be present and assist in the Sunday school work done at the various reunions accessible to the saints of these States. I cannot therefore speak advisedly of the Sunday school work done there, of which, however, I have heard excellent reports.

My one visit of the year, however, was in attendance at the Council Bluffs Sunday School Institute. Of the nature of the work done there I can speak my hearty indorsement. It was in consideration of the practical work to be done in our ordinary Sunday school work. In my opinion it is very necessary that attention be given to work of this kind and that it cannot but result in good. Whether or not such work is being done or can be done at our reunions, or whether the Institute for this purpose is necessary, I cannot say; but I repeat that such work as was done in the Institute is necessary to be done.

The General Association has done another little piece of work this year that may have more importance attached to it than a casual glance might discover. It issued programs for the Christmas entertainment. I mention this because I remember that three years ago I was requested to prepare a paper on the subject of the character and object of Sunday school entertainments, from which I gather that some one saw that unworthy performances were brought into Sunday school entertainments, antagonistic to the spirit of our Sunday school work. I have heard of such things also through district officers, from traveling elders, and have noticed letters upon the subject in our columns. Well-arranged programs issued by the association in ample time for adoption in the schools, could exert an educating, refining, uplifting influence. I believe that the issuing of the Christmas program for our Sunday schools was an advance step that should be maintained, and I also believe it is one of the apparently small factors that will exert in time a widespread and good influence in the church. I hope the time may speedily come when the the character of the entertainments we offer to the public shall speak the purity of our tastes, our love of the good and the beautiful, the noble and the true.

I have another suggestion to make—a suggestion, not a complaint. Some simple system of reporting seems to me to be necessary by which the general officers should be regularly informed concerning the condition of the field of our Sunday school labor. This seems to me to be necessary in order to maintain an intelligent oversight of the work. So far as I know there is at present no provision for this, and though I have been two years in the office of Assistant Superintendent, and my predecessor was four years in the same position, I have very little knowledge of the general condition of the field of labor, and am satisfied that this was true also with the previous incumbent of the office; further, it will continue to be the case until there come at stated times reports that shall give the necessary information. There can be no intelligent conception of the needs of the work, and in consequence attention cannot be given, without a system of reporting, simple as it may be. The simpler this can consistently be the better.

I offer you now my plan of work as Editor of the Senior and Intermediate Quarterlies, as it may not be amiss to consider it in connection with some of the questions to be discussed at this convention.

Five years ago the Quarterlies took up the life of Christ. Two years were spent upon that and one year upon the Acts of the Apostles. Two years ago, after consultation with others, I took up the study of Hebrew History. We have traced it down through the Patriarchal Period and the Period of the Judges to the establishment of the kingdom of Israel. If this study is not interrupted and I should be continued, the history of the Hebrews will be traced down to the coming of Christ, which, with the Acts of the Apostles, will then be taken up and revised, after which, if the association deemed it advisable those revised lessons could be stereotyped for permanent use in the schools. Junior classes could then study in the New Testament or in the Old Testament, as deemed wise by those having work in charge.

But there should be a progressive course of study for advanced classes leading out into new fields, and I am satisfied in my own mind that the Senior Grade lessons should go on, briefly covering the apostasy of the primitive church and the period of the reformation, and leading up to the restoration of the gospel. Here with propriety may be introduced a study of the prophecies pointing to the restoration; and can you not see the field of knowledge broaden and widen as we advance? Can you not see how we may all labor together as coworkers? Can you not see that when the committee on American Archaeology have completed their work they give to us an invaluable aid? Do you not see that in a time to come we shall study the Book of Mormon as we study the Bible? Do not regard this as the dream of an enthusiast. It is but the height we may attain by careful, protracted effort. Five years ago the doubtful ones looked for failure when our Quarterlies were an experiment. By the blessing of the Lord their success exceeded the expectations of the most hopeful. And, our work is but begun. A broad field invites us. Steadily, carefully, trustingly we should go on. God chooses weak instruments, but he gives grace and strength sufficient for the day, for the hour, for the duty at hand.

When this plan of study unfolded to my mind the question immediately following was, How far then may we have uniformity of lessons? I submit the question to you.

One year ago, without previous intimation, the subject of uniformity was presented to us. My first thought was that it should prevail. I have expressed to you the question that has arisen in my mind since then, and I have told you my mental outline for future work, if it is not interrupted.

I am reliably informed that some effort (I do not know how strong a one) is contemplated to interrupt the plan of the Senior lessons, and to bring about uniformity, by putting us all into the New Testament; and I desire to ask, How long will you keep us all there? And if we ever get out again, will uniformity still prevail and take us all into the Old Testament? If so, it would be wiser to study there now; for the seniors are interested there and the primary children have been five years on the life of Christ.

But, since the question of uniformity will come up for discussion in its proper time and place, I leave it to be decided by the wisdom of this body.

I have presented my plan of study and have suggested that it should not be interrupted. I remember, however, that I am but one among you, and when this question has been carefully canvassed and a decision has been reached, I shall cheerfully submit to that decision, whatever it may be. And I do not think we shall be wise or just in impugning the motives of any if the sentiments expressed in debate do not accord with our own. Progress and development are in the pathway of that free man or woman who says in independence of spirit: "I will say what I think to-day, if I contradict all I said yesterday." Shall we stand where we did yesterday if we see more clearly to-day? This I say in defense of those who may honestly think differently and express themselves differently from what they did last year.

With a hope and confidence that an overruling Hand will be made manifest in our work, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ANNA STEDMAN SALYARDS.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 3, 1897.

Adjournment was had till the evening hour.

The evening session opened with the usual exercises, prayer being offered by Bro. Columbus Scott. After an additional report from the credentials committee, the business announced for special consideration at this session the proposed amendments to the Constitution and By-Laws, published in the HERALD of January 6, 1897, was taken up. The first, providing for the appointment of one or more assistant superintendents, was adopted; also another providing for the office of Librarian; another providing for election of officers at every general convention; providing for reports from the secretary at every convention, in place of the provision for "Annual" reports, as conventions will probably be held regularly preceding General Conferences; and changing the duties of the secretary into those of a twofold character, of Corresponding and Recording Secretary; also changing the statement of the duties of the Superintendent. Besides these other amendments were adopted, which we will not attempt to report in detail, as they will be duly published in the revised Constitution. The amendment granting authority to the Superintendents to place others at work in the field in Sunday school work, also to furnish funds to meet their expenses, caused considerable discussion, and the question coming to a vote resulted in a call for the yeas and nays. The vote was in the negative and the amendment was denied. As the execution of one of the amendments adopted was dependent upon the adoption of the one denied, the situation was rendered somewhat complex, for the time being. However the hour being late, adjournment was taken until the opening of the regular Sunday exercises, leaving it to later sessions to solve the problem.

Sunday, April 4.—The First and Second Seventy, about forty present, held a prayer meeting at eight o'clock. The season was one of satisfaction to all present.

At 9:30 the regular session of the Lamoni Sunday school was held in the lower auditorium, in charge of local officers. Another Sunday school was held in the upper auditorium in charge of Bro. Wallace N. Robinson. Visitors were formed in classes and taught by ministers and other workers. The local Book of Mormon class was held as usual in the gallery in charge of the regular teacher, Bro. E. L. Kelley; so that there were three stories of Sunday school classes in session—from basement to gallery.

The General Association resumed its sessions at eleven o'clock, the Superintendent in charge, Bro. A. M. Chase, chorister. After the regular opening exercises of song and prayer, an item of routine business was transacted, it being necessary, under the circumstances, to facilitate the transaction of business; viz., a committee of five was appointed to whom was referred all the proposed amendments to the Constitution—those adopted and those to be considered: Brn. E. L. Kelley, T. A. Hougas, F. M. Sheehy, J. F. Mintun, and Heman C. Smith. The music and literary program was then rendered as follows: Music; Paper, "Can the Sunday school work be graded?" J. A. Gunsolley; Music, solo, Grace Cobb; Paper, "How can we reach new and remote fields?" F. E. Cochran; Paper, "How can the opening and closing exercises of Sunday school be conducted?" Sr. Louise Palfrey; Music. The blackboard work feature was omitted, Bro. William Faulds not having arrived.

At 2:15 the saints met in sacrament meeting, in which many took part. One, baptized during the day, was confirmed. Prayer was asked for a number of sick, who had sent requests to be remembered by the conference.

The evening exercises were of a musical and literary character, Bro. W. N. Robinson in charge. After a number of excellent renditions by the choir, Bro. F. G. Pitt offered the opening prayer. Sr. Devore being absent, Bro. J. W. Gilbert made an address on the work in the Society Islands. After another musical number, Bro. T. A. Hougas addressed the convention, his subject, "Where are we at?" A vocal number by Sr. Viola Blair, followed by a recitation "Vashti," by Sr. Ruth Cobb, closed the evening program, Bro. M. H. Bond dismissing the audience.

Monday, the 5th. — The morning session was opened at about 7:30 in the usual manner, Elder G. W. Robley offering prayer. Minutes of previous sessions read, approved. Additional report from committee on credentials.

The report of Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, the industrious secretary of the association was the next feature. It was listened to with close attention. It was general and statistical. Its leading general features will appear in full in our next issue. It showed 40 district associations and 8 schools in the General Association; new districts added during the year, 5; new schools, 2; total membership, 12,310; net gain 1,805.

The report of Sr. C. B. Kelley, treasurer, was read, also report from the auditing committee, which found it to be correct. The report "summary" is as follows:—

The report of Sr. J. H. Royce, Editor of the Sunday School Department of the HERALD, was next read. It will appear next week, with other proceedings.

A letter from Sr. Devore explained her inability to be present, as announced for Sunday evening's program.

The committee of the Sunday School Institute presented a petition for continuance of Institute work.

A resolution asking appointment of committee to revise minute and record books and provide them at reduced cost, was read; also one providing that the incoming Superintendent be elected with the understanding that his whole time be devoted to the work. Also resolution providing for creation of a general library to be located at Lamoni;—these matters and others to be considered in their turn.

Three o'clock was fixed upon for the consideration of the "uniformity" question.

The committee on amendments reported as follows:—

*To the General Convention of the Sunday School Association:—*We, your committee, appointed by your body to examine the proposed amendments to the Constitution and

By Laws and to suggest legislation necessary to meet present exigencies report as follows:—

After prayer was offered by Heman C. Smith, E. L. Kelley was selected as permanent chairman, and J. F. Mintun, secretary.

The committee first examined into the legality of their appointment and concluded that while we were not fully satisfied that our appointment was made in the regular order, but as the matter was presented as an emergency question the committee thought proper to proceed with their work, the result of which is at the option of the convention.

E. L. KELLEY, Chairman.

J. F. MINTUN, Secretary.

Report of Committee on Proposed Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws, as to the work done:—

We your committee suggest that the number of assistant superintendents as provided for in Article 4, Section 1, as amended, be limited to two.

We further suggest that we strike out "if more than one is elected," and pluralize the word Assistant Superintendent where it occurs in Section 2 of Article 5.

We suggest that in Section 3 of Article 5 the word "assembly" be stricken out, and the word "convention" inserted in its stead. He shall draw all orders on the treasurer.

The committee is of the opinion that Section 4 of Article 5 is sufficient as it stands, except omitting the word "annual," for the reason that each convention may make appropriation for the expenses of the ensuing year as thought expedient by the convention.

We recommend that Section 2 of Article 6 be reconsidered and amended so as to read, "The expenses of the association shall be provided for, as found necessary, by the association."

We recommend that Article 8 be amended as proposed.

We suggest that the first three lines of Article 13 be amended to read "District associations shall, so far as practicable, adopt both topical and general," the remainder of the section remaining unchanged.

We recommend that Section 1 of Article 4, page 10 be amended as proposed; also Section 3 of Article 4 on same page be amended as proposed.

We recommend that Sections 1 and 2 of Article 5 on page 11 be amended as proposed.

We recommend that Article 8 on page 12 be amended as proposed.

We recommend that Article 9, as proposed, shall read as follows: "All acts or resolutions passed by any District Association in conflict with or contrary to any of the laws and rules of the General Association shall be inoperative and void."

We suggest the adoption of proposed amendments to Sections 3 and 7 of Article 11 on page 13.

We suggest that Article 3 on page 14 be amended to read, "Persons may become members of the Sunday school by enrollment, but they shall have no voice or vote in the affairs of the school until they shall have been in attendance four consecutive sessions, except in the organization of new schools,

All members of the school under eight years of age are prohibited from voting. An absence of three months without sufficient cause will forfeit membership and thereby lose right to vote."

We recommend that Article 4, page 14 remain as it is except the change of "must" to "should" in the first line.

We recommend the adoption of proposed amendment to Article 6, page 15.

We recommend that Section 4 of Article 7 on page 16 be amended by adding, "pertaining to the duties of their office"—also add the following paragraph:—

"Special business meetings either of the schools, or of the 'officers, teachers, and visiting committee' may be called at any time by the superintendent, or shall be called by him upon request of five voters of the school."

We recommend the adoption of the proposed amendments to Sections 5 and 6 of Article 7 on page 16.

We recommend that Section 9 of Article 7 on page 16 be amended by inserting, "When assessments are made" before "Each" on first line.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. L. KELLEY, Chairman.

J. F. MINTUN, Secretary.

Briefly stated, the recommendations of the committee were adopted; also other amendments of the list published in HERALD of January 6 which do not conflict with the committee's report, and adopted as a whole. They will be published at an early date in the revised Constitution and By-Laws. Our report is necessarily abridged because the HERALD is printed on Monday.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—What is the full meaning of verse 36 of chapter 7 of First Corinthians?

Ans.—We would not answer this question were it not that there is quite a difference between the text in the King James' Version and the Inspired Translation. In the Holy Scriptures the text reads as follows:—

But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin whom he hath espoused, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he hath promised, he sinneth not; let them marry.

The Apostle Paul, who wrote the epistle to the Corinthians, stated in the 29th verse of this chapter, as we have it in the Holy Scriptures, that he wrote it to the ministry:—

But I speak unto you who are called unto the ministry. For this I say, brethren, the time that remaineth is but short, that ye shall be sent forth unto the ministry. Even they who have wives, shall be as though they had none; for ye are called and chosen to do the Lord's work.

The "full meaning" of the text is, that if an unmarried man who is engaged to be married is called unto the ministry, and the young woman to whom he is engaged shall be of full age, and request him to keep his promise of marriage he should do so and would be blameless in marrying his promised bride; notwithstanding the admonition of the apostle that such as were called should remain unmarried.

Advantage has been taken of the passage as it is found in the King James' Version, as if that verse sanctioned a species of loose moral dealing. But the passage should not be so construed, even as found in King James' Version; for the apostle's whole writings are opposed to such construction. The Inspired Version, however, shows that it was written to the ministry, those who were actively engaged in preaching in the field. To them the apostle wrote enjoining abstinence from marriage because it was calculated to hinder men in their itinerant work. But, in order that a man who had become espoused to a woman should not fail in proper duty to her, by failing to keep his promise of marriage, he should be subject to the woman's condition of life and request, and they should marry. There is no warrant in the passage for even the shadow of sanction for wrong doing.

TO FIND THE ORIGIN OF THE INDIANS.

THE following will interest many if not all our readers:—

THE JESSUP EXPEDITIONS TO INVESTIGATE THEIR ALLEGED CONNECTION WITH ASIATIC TRIBES.

Cambridge, Mass., March 13.—Details concerning the expedition to be sent to North-eastern Asia and Northwestern America show that it promises to be the most important to modern science since the days of Livingstone and Stanley. Morris K. Jessup, President of the American Museum of Natural History of New York City, is the originator of the expedition, and will pay all the bills connected with it, which during the six years of its continuance will reach considerably over $50,000. Prof. F. W. Putnam of Cambridge, who is curator of the anthropological department of the American Museum, and also of the Peabody Museum at Harvard, has the general direction of the expedition, but his work here prevents him from going himself.

The principal point to be determined by the explorations is whether or not the primeval American Indians and Esquimaux came from Asia originally. This is a question of the greatest importance to the ethnologist, and has been superficially treated by many writers, who hold that the American race is very closely allied to the Mongolian. The expedition which will undertake to solve this problem will be in two parts, one to go to Asia, the other to investigate the American side.

The latter section will start about the 1st of May, with British Columbia for its first objective point. Dr. Franz Boas has been chosen to lead this party on account of his long continued investigations in that vicinity, his wide knowledge of ethnology, and his special attainments. His chief assistant will be Harlan I. Smith of New York City. With them will go several specialists in various branches of research.

The Asiatic branch of the expedition will not start from this country until September, and its leader has yet to be selected.

The collections to be made by the expedition will all find their way to the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, and will make the institution the center of interest to the world's anthropologists and ethnologists for many years, until the problems they illustrate shall have been satisfactorily settled.

GREEK VALOR.

In the Peoples' Column of the Chicago Tribune for March 27 occurs the following which pretty fairly represents the feeling of the average American as regards the struggle for human liberty and political freedom now going on in Crete, Greece against Turkey. England has withdrawn from the union of powers of Europe and her example is now followed by Germany. Which next?

THE CRETAN WAR.

Chicago, March 23.—It looks like war in Europe. Let it come. The cause for which the Greeks contend appears the most just of any casus belli in Europe for the last hundred years, and if Christianity and its aims be not a gilded sham it's worth of fighting for. Let that pest-house of brutality, the Turkish Empire, be wiped out, or let so-called Christian Europe burn its Bibles and close its churches, and turn its attention to the old-time human sacrifices of the Roman arenas. There are times when men should fight, and die if need be, for the right, and if this world has grown so full of dollar-chasing cowards that they cannot get up enough courage to right this wrong the sooner war is forced upon them by this brave Grecian King the better for the race of men. It is a sight for gods and a study for students of history to see Europe threatening the Greeks in their attempt to suppress this butcher of the Orient. It begins to look as though public opinion might yet force some of these knee-spavined royal bulldogs to take sides with the Greeks for the safety of their own positions. If war does come it must be looked upon as the will of him who has waited in vain for his children to do their duty, and his acts in their ultimate results are just.

THE FLOODS.

EXTENSIVE rainstorms continue throughout the Middle States and the Northwest. Rivers are rising and general damage is reported, caused by swollen streams, ice gorges, and washouts. News to date from the Lower Mississippi is given in the following dispatches:—

Greenville, Miss., March 31.—Last night the levee broke at Sellas Landing, running wild in Bolivar County, between Rosedale and Gunnison. The levee there is about fifteen feet higher and the crevasse is now over 1,000 feet wide. This crevasse will submerge a number of plantations. There are now four breaks on the Mississippi, pouring torrents into this fertile valley. Thousands of live stock are drowned and in some instances the fleeing people had narrow escapes.

Passengers arriving here by boat from Rosedale report that town now under water. All telegraph and telephone communication above and below is cut off.

Gunnison was under water when heard from last and nothing new can be heard from there. The flood has already submerged nearly all towns between here and Australia north, and Rolling Fork south.

The following towns are now under water: Australia, Round Lake, Deeson, Concordia, Perthshire, Stafford, Gunnison, Bolivar, Mound, and Huntington, in Bolivar County. Below here Avon, Wayside, Pettit, Refuge, Glendora, and Swift Water are all under water, and the water is in sight of Arcola, Cooks, Estelle, and Hallondale.

In order to comprehend fully the area of country threatened by the overflow take a point just south of Rosedale, Mississippi, on the east bank of the river in Bolivar County, and thence south to the Yazoo River and west as far, and in all probability, beyond the main line of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad. This large scope of country, the finest cotton lands in the world, and containing estates or plantations rivaling in extent many small kingdoms of the world, is seriously threatened and already an immense amount of damage has been done.

The scene is one of great desolation, the only signs of life visible being flocks of poultry gathered on the roofs of the houses or upon such floating debris as remained in the humble little places, horses, mules, cows, and pigs having sought refuge on the levees and followed pedestrians about to all appearances mutely begging protection and shelter.

The plantations which are inundated up to the present time by the crevasse in Lake Lee levee are Deerfield, Refuge, Hollywood, Swift Water, Glen Mary, Belmont, Hartford, and La Grange, all very extensive tracts of rich lands and under a high state of cultivation.

The water is spreading over the territory from Perthshire, Mississippi, to a point ten miles north of Vicksburg and back from the river thirty or forty miles. Already the loss of cattle has been enormous. The corn that was planted and growing is under water and preparations for cotton planting were well under way. The plowed earth will be swept into the Yazoo and thence into the Mississippi. It is difficult to estimate the loss. A thickly settled country containing an area of about 4,000 square miles, dotted with farmhouses, negro cabins, and small villages will be flooded. Labor will become demoralized and negroes cannot be secured in sufficient numbers to cultivate the crops when the water subsides. The Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad will have 150 miles of track under water before the flood is over.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. F. MINTUN, Laurel, Nebraska, March 25:—

I am enjoying a perfect pioneering experience in this part. Some of the roughest experiences I have ever endured, but now the clouds are lifting. Friends have been made to the cause.

Paul Tremblay, Owyhee, Malheur County, Oregon, March 19:—

Do you suppose you could send an elder into this part of this country? We are in need of an elder very badly. I have had a visit from Bro. Levi Wilson for a little while, which I very much enjoy. I would like to see some more of that kind of work in this part of the world. I was baptized by Bro. W. W. Blair, February 23, 1871, and Bro. Levi Wilson is the first Latter Day Saint I have seen since Bro. Blair left me. I am still a Latter Day Saint, and if it is God's will, shall be until the end of time. I have had a hard road to travel, but my Redeemer has helped me throughout, so I am still a Latter Day Saint.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

CONFERENCE arrivals have been too numerous to mention. Many are already present attending the Religio and engaged in preparation for the Sunday School Convention and General Conference.

The clubfooted man is still abroad in the land, swindling those who accept his pretensions and trust him with loans. Bro. T. F. Stafford joins others in eloquent descriptions of the swindler. See his letter.

Bro. W. W. Blanchard, of Maine, was taken with the measles while on the train enroute to Lamoni. He is now confined to his boarding house, though resting as comfortably as his condition permits.

General Ruis Rivera, the well-known Cuban leader, has been captured by Spanish troops after being seriously wounded in an engagement. It is supposed that he will be executed by the Spaniards.

Washington advices dated March 30 state that Spain is again making overtures for peace in Cuba through the United States government; offering the insurgents practical autonomy under a merely nominal Spanish suzerainty. Negotiations are again on foot at the State Department to this end. The Spanish government is hopeful of success through the present effort, but it is thought that the insurgents will reject anything but entire independence.

Frost has done great damage to California fruits during the past ten days.

The town of Chandler, Oklahoma, with a population of 1,500, was struck by a cyclone on the night of March 30, and almost completely reduced to ruins. Twenty were killed outright and fully 170 injured. Of the latter it is thought ten will die, while others are in a very serious condition. The storm came suddenly, without warning, demolishing the business and residence districts, fire adding to the terrors of the visitation, in a general conflagration. Many could not be rescued or taken from the ruins until the morning of the 31st. Adjoining towns have rendered aid.

The Cretan situation, up to the 31st, remained practically unchanged. On that day the Cretans advanced against the Turkish outposts near Izeddin, determined to drive them back. At this juncture a Russian war ship opened fire on the insurgents. The British and Austrian ships also took part in the bombardment, each taking turns, and occasionally all firing together. Shells exploding in the insurgents' ranks forced them to haul down their flag and abandon their position in haste. Letters received from Col. Vassos' camp state that the Greek troops intended to storm Fort Soubashy the very day it was occupied by the international force. In consequence of to-day's proceedings the admirals no longer consider it necessary to place European troops in Izeddin, but will improve the defenses of the fort on the land side.

The shelling of the Cretans is declared by newspaper correspondents to have been pitiable in its inhumanity, after their surrender of the fort, at Izeddin, and while the white flag still waved from it.

German sentiment is said to be strongly against the Kaiser's policy of action with the powers.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"A cup of water timely brought,
An offered easy chair,
A turning of the window blind
That all may feel the air,
An early flower bestowed unasked,
A light and cautious tread,
A voice to softest whispers hushed
To spare an aching head,—
Oh, things like these, though little things,
The purest love disclose,
As fragrant atoms in the air Reveal the hidden rose."

THE INSTRUCTION OF YOUNG BOYS.

I WANT to give you some thoughts that have come to me about the care and instruction of young boys, for I feel that many are not careful enough to keep them from evils that will surely ruin their young lives. I think that boys, as a rule, are not watched over as carefully as they should be; at any rate there is not the attention paid to them that there is to little girls.

Physicians agree in saying that the boy as well as the girl needs great care during the developmental period, Dr. Daniel R. Brower in a recent article in a Chicago paper having said that he advises parents every day to take out of school children from the age of 12 to 15, and if he had his way neither boys nor girls should go to school then. They would, however, need occupation and exercise for mind and body.

Dr. Mary Wood-Allen says: "Parents usually comprehend that the girl at this period needs especial care and watchfulness, even if they do not give her special instruction; but few parents recognize that the boy needs as much sympathy as the girl, indeed even more, for the internal forces are stronger, and work with greater energy, while the temptations from without are more numerous and powerful. One can scarcely wonder that the boy falls into immorality, when we recall these two facts, and add to them the fact of his ignorance, and the common idea that he is not to be held to the standard of absolute purity that is raised for girls.

"To the boy trained according to the ordinary methods, the endowment of virile power means only an added means of personal enjoyment, and he is led to believe that he is most the man who can soonest call into activity the new power. He has never heard of the sacredness of manhood. No one has ever suggested to him that the new forces are his as a trust for future generations; and that upon him, and his use of his manly powers depends any part of the honor, virtue, health, courage, and value of the race. In his mind the whole question of sex is covered with a veil to be lifted by unclean hands, its mysteries to be investigated with impure thoughts and glances."

A pure, innocent boy is just as pure and just as innocent as a pure, innocent girl, and his purity should be guarded just as carefully.

I read of a beautiful young boy being ruined by a woman, wealthy and esteemed by his parents, he having been put to sleep at the foot of her bed when she went there to visit, in consequence of which he never took any more pleasure in school and innocent amusements, and lived a long life of wickedness and debauchery. This made such an impression upon my mind that I thought I must warn mothers to be more watchful. Do not leave them alone with anyone whom you do not thoroughly trust, and never put them to sleep with a girl or a servant girl, as is sometimes done when there are visitors, and there is scarcity of sleeping room.

We should take our boys into our confidence when they are very young, telling them the things they ought to know, answering questions that they ask, so far as we can, and saying that when they are older they can understand better and can be told more. But that they must always come to Mamma and Papa for information, and not go to other boys. Then when they are older, reading and talking with them, and warning them that there are evils in the world that must be shunned. Thus may we hope to keep their young feet in paths of right.

I handed some good books to a mother to read to her boy. When she brought them back she said that she had read them but that she did not feel that she could give them to him to read. If not the parents, who then shall instruct the boy in things that shall benefit him all his life long?

I take this from the "Philanthropist":—

"The close sympathy which ought to exist between parent and child, will enable the father to know how to deal with his son, especially if he recalls his own early experiences, and continually seeks the guidance of the Holy Spirit, as to how and when he should speak to him on this peculiarly delicate subject. (James 1: 5-8.)

"Bearing this caution in mind, we desire to express our conviction that it is almost always the duty of a parent to overcome his natural reserve, and to speak plainly to his children individually, at a very early age, so that they may learn from him the main facts concerning the formation and functions of their own bodies, and concerning the manner in which they were brought into the world. In some cases it may be better that boys should learn these facts from their mothers; but we are persuaded that, unless one of the parents undertakes this duty the information will very speedily be communicated to the child by a sensual companion, and that the very fact that these things are spoken of in secret, will increase the virulency of the poison tenfold, besides at once creating a barrier of reserve which must hinder or even destroy that intimate friendship between parent and child, which is one of our heavenly Father's choicest gifts.

"The early age at which evil is thus imparted, even to those who live in guarded Christian homes, is astonishing and painful, and it is partly on this account that we would encourage parents to take the matter into their own hands without undue delay."

I think that the parent who does not follow this very excellent advice, is falling far short of his duty, in withholding from his child a knowledge of those things which it is his right to know; and without which he may some day be a wreck, body and soul.

God help us all to do our duty by our children.

LUCAS, Iowa, March 27.

Editors Herald:—Bro. J. S. Roth preached three discourses here; closed last night. The attendance was large and increasing. His efforts gave good satisfaction; his forceful and entertaining manner impressed many very favorable to his preaching. He left here this morning with the good wishes of all.

Bro. W. H. Kephart will preach here to-night and to-morrow night, it may be that services will continue into next week. The branch will observe the fast day to-morrow.
E. B. MORGAN.

Editors Herald:—On page 152 of the Herald of March 10, I have read a reference by "Albert" to secret societies, to which it is my desire to make a brief reply; not specially a defense or condemnation, but rather to call attention to a few facts that are generally overlooked.

Whenever the saints are so far advanced in righteousness that we approximate the manner of life that Jesus designed we should live, there will be no necessity to censure any brother because he belongs to a secret society, for none then will join them, because the motive that now impels many will not then exist.

It is God's will that his saints should contribute of their wealth in tithes and other offerings in such abundance that the families of the ministry and the poor of his people should never lack for any of the necessities of life. The poor and unfortunate Christ showed a special care for, and so did his early followers, and especially his ministry, of which there is abundant proof in both the New Testament and Book of Mormon; and so long as many of the saints spend more money for tobacco, beer, and whisky than they give for the church, as directed in the law of God that they should give, to expect his blessings and waste both time and money in other useless ways, many of his people will continue to join secret societies. It is a matter of protection for themselves and families in times of distress.

The writer does not belong to any society save the church of Jesus Christ, but my observation teaches me the reason why some of the saints do. A few circumstances might make the matter clear to those who have not given the subject very much thought. I recall to my mind the sad condition of a sister whose husband died and left her three girls to care for. She did her best by washing and sewing to provide for them, but was unable to do so; they could no longer attend school, but must go out into a cold and heartless world to battle for life. The youngest was unfortunate in that she fell among those who cared not for her welfare, but only that they might profit by her ruin. God only knows the sorrow and aching heart of that fond mother when she knew that her child was ruined. And how often when she had toiled at the washtub and ironing board all day she had been put off with "I will pay you next week;" and "next week" never came.

Another one with a small home; her husband is sickly; he goes the way we all must go; the home soon passes away; sickness and death have borne heavily on their finances, and she too must leave many of her pleasant associations and go wherever circumstances will make it possible for her to find shelter and food to eat. Another family, father, mother, and children doing all they could to pay for a small home, always helping the church and Sunday school, and would not join any secret society because he could not make his mind satisfied on the subject. Sickness comes, it makes extra expense in the home, extra care for wife, no money comes in because the father is sick and cannot work, and thus for several years he may have to toil incessantly and go without many comforts in his home; saint or sinner has no special interest in him, and the "sick committee" does not call with a weekly allowance because he does not belong to the "lodge." And these are samples of every-day occurrences.

But let us turn to the other side and see what these awful secret societies do that some of the saints seem to have such a dislike for. A fellow laborer is returning home; he meets with an accident, his leg is broken. A wife and children are dependent on him for support; winter is just ahead, and he works no more for about five months. Extra expense and extra care for his wife. How shall the family be provided for? The societies to which he belongs pay him his weekly allowance, and thus every expense is met, and when springtime comes and he goes to work again, he is free from debt, and all have been well provided for.

Again we call to mind the case of a young woman with three children. Her husband is a railroad man, exposed to all the dangers incident to such a life; but he does not forget to make provisions for those dependent on him, and he joins a society to which men of like occupation belong. He is killed while in the performance of his duty. His companions bear the burden of all funeral expenses and, according to the stipulation of the order, she receives in money three thousand dollars.

One more circumstance will be sufficient; a sister with several children. Her husband does not belong to the church, but goes to "lodge" and pays his dues. He becomes afflicted which results in his death. His brethren pay all expenses for the funeral and his widow receives a sufficient sum of money so that if any debts on their home are unpaid there is sufficient and some to spare.

Let us not be too harsh in our criticisms of our brethren in these matters, but rather seek to remove the cause that makes it necessary for them to protect those dependent upon them. Many of the members of such societies very seldom attend the meetings, showing thereby that it is more from necessity than from choice that they belong.

PAUL PARKER.

BAY PORT, Mich., March 26.

Editors Herald:—We are alive in this branch yet, though there are some that do not show much life, for it seems that with all we can do we cannot get them out to church. Bro. C. E. Grant and the writer have visited the branch or nearly all of it, and tried to get them out to the meetings, and to have them take the church papers; but it don't seem as though we accomplished much, in fact nothing in the way of subscriptions.

We had a good conference last fall, and as the minutes do not show the number of baptisms I thought I would give them now. On Sunday the writer led three precious souls into the waters of baptism; and on Monday Bro. David Smith baptized one more.

This winter I visited my parents at Akron, Tuscola County, Michigan, and found them quite well and still in the faith. They are quite old, Father being eighty-four and Mother eighty-two years of age; and while there I had a long talk with some of my old schoolmates and friends on the gospel.

I have not done much preaching this winter. I went with Bro. J. A. Grant one week, and was called home on account of sickness in my family; and again went to the Baker schoolhouse, two and a half miles south of Elkton, and commenced meetings and was well blessed in presenting the gospel; and Bro. C. E. Grant came to assist me, but the roads were so bad we were compelled to take our grips and take a thirteen miles' walk through the mud to our own firesides. But by the way, while we were in the above-named place we had quite a battle with an old man by the name of Scott, of the Swedenborg faith, and of all the men I ever met he is the cap, and I think Bro. Grant is of the same opinion. Mr. Scott was well pleased that the roads got so bad that we could not teach the people such foolishness, but as some of his family and others are believing the work I expect to go back there soon; and, dear saints, I hope you will remember us in your prayers. I wish the time had come that I could spend my entire time in the field.

Since writing the above our branch has been caused to mourn the loss of our beloved sister, Sr. Wyman. She passed away leaving a husband and six children, the youngest three weeks old. On account of the bad roads the funeral sermon was preached in the M. E. church, near her home, J. A. Grant officiating. Your brother,
WILLIAM DOWKER.

GREEN'S LANDING, Maine, March 23.

Editors Herald:—I came here on Saturday, and found General Lagrippe laying the people low by his mighty power; nine have passed away. It is prevailing all over several towns along the coast of Maine, and the doctors have more than they can attend to. There are scarcely enough well persons to care for the sick. Brother U. W. Greene is in bed. Uncle Tom and Aunt Chat feel very much better. Bro. Asa Candage is out in his store again. I administered to his wife twice. She said to-day, "I slept well last night, and I feel so much better; by the help of God, I am going to try and live better." It may be a very good thing that the grip calls around occasionally and says to professed saints and sinners, "Do your duty."

I have administered to several with very good results. Bro. Henry Robbins' and Grandmam Ames' families have been very sick, but better to-day. I shall stay by the sick a few days longer.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 19.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference was held here about a month ago, an account of which has already been published in the Herald. Since then we have been doing what we could in the way of preaching, Sunday school work, and prayer meetings, Sunday school and prayer meetings in charge of Bro. J. P. Neal. A district priesthood meeting having been appointed by our worthy president, Elder J. A. Currie, Sen., was held on the 13th inst., the object of which was to discuss the interests of the work in this part of the vineyard. The tithing question received attention, also the duties of the priesthood of the district. We had a good and interesting meeting. The president contemplates holding a priesthood meeting once in every two or three months, or as often as practicable. This is the first district priesthood meeting that has been held since Bro. Currie has been president of the district. We see the need of these meetings more than before.

Bro. H. P. Curtis, ye scribbler, and Bro. Crowfield Jackson, have been breaking the bread of life for those that came to hear lately. Bro. Jackson preached last Sunday morning, Bro. Curtis at night. This latter-day work is not in as prosperous a condition in this part of the vineyard as ought to be desired; something seems to be out of joint; but we hope ere long for a moving out and a renewing or building up, as it were, of waste places.

The more I see of the true workings, the inwardness of this great work, the better I am satisfied with it and the better I can see the fallacies of "Churchianity," as Churchianity and a desire for popularity seem to walk hand in hand and agree that the Latter Day Saints are not orthodox, while Latter Day Saints know they are in harmony with God's revealed truth.

Yours in hope,

W. H. DAVENPORT.

CORRECT, Ind., March 20.

Editors Herald:—Quite frequently I am interogated as to why I don't write to the Herald often. While it is a pleasure for the saints to hear from the elders how the gospel wins its way, I don't understand it to be a duty to report debates, baptisms, new openings, how many miles we have walked, etc.

The work of the ministry is not all sunshine; the gospel is not accepted by all who hear it; we are opposed nearly everywhere we go. This is true of Southern Indiana; for me to report all is well and the work prospering would be beyond facts relative to the status of the work in this district. When I reflect over the past and think of the work under the management of W. W. Blair, W. H. Kelley, T. W. Smith, C. Scott, and J. W. Gillen, and consider how the work prospered under their labors, then compare the past with the present, I am forced to the conclusion that the work is retrograding. At our district conference held with the New Marion branch only four branch reports were received by the secretary of the district, showing a gain of six in the New Marion branch, and seven or eight branches failed to report, while four of the elders and one priest reported. What is the matter? Where is the wrong?

I have been well cared for by saints and friends where I have labored this conference year. I was well pleased to note the interest taken while I was at the city of Louisville, Kentucky. It was encouraging to see the preachers and others of the congregation use their Bibles and follow me. This made me proud to think I was representing a work which could be vindicated. This called to mind, "That system which is too secret to investigate is too ridiculous to believe;" "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good;" "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob." This I did with liberty and plainness. The pastor informed his congregation that what I had preached was "biblical" and that he believed God had sent me to enlighten them. I hope Bro. J. T. Scott will continue his good begun work in that large city, and I am satisfied good will accrue therefrom.

My religious combat with the Seventh-day Adventists in the person of Rev. M. M.

Kenney, at Plainville, encouraged me. The scholastic lore and egotistical epithets of Babylon is not doctrine. "Evangelical" or "orthodox" is not gospel in its ancient purity or simplicity and will not stand the test against that which is received by revelation. This fact is demonstrated when saints send word, "Come back as soon as possible. Some are ready for baptism!"

I am holding forth at Correct churchhouse. This is where we were shut out when T. F. Wheeler and M. R. Scott, Sr., came to Ripley County to the Scott-Sherman debate and witnessed the Campbellite "fizzle." I will continue evenings till the 24th. I go tomorrow to speak at the courthouse in Versailles. On the 25th, nothing preventing, I will open up at a hall in Osgood, which is furnished for four nights by friends to the cause. I am well and at work.

M. R. SCOTT, JR.

TIFF CITY, Mo., March 22.

Editors Herald:—I was called to this place on the 14th to preach the funeral of our young brother, Isaac Depue, son of Bro. and Sr. E. W. Depue. He passed quietly away, leaving an encouraging testimony of his acceptance with God to console those who mourn. The Methodist brethren kindly gave up their regular eleven o'clock hour and the use of their chapel for our benefit; house full and splendid attention.

By invitation I have remained over here, preaching every night since to small but attentive audiences. I shall return here within a few days and continue the effort. May God bless his servants and his work.

Yours in hope,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 19.

Editors Herald:—I am, in my weak way, trying to do God's will, but find it very hard sometimes, for I am very weak in spirit; but I pray that God may give me of his Holy Spirit to guide me through this world of trials. O how I long to do the Father's will.

I have had many blessings from God, and, dear saints, how I long to be of some service to him. I have come far short of doing his will, but my desires are that I may ascend the ladder and not stop until I have reached the top.

I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints in my behalf; I am striving to overcome the weakness of the flesh, and I know that the latter-day work is true, and I have a testimony of the work. I know it is true, thanks be to God for his loving kindness and the gift of the gospel.

May the blessings of God be and abide with each of his dear children is my prayer. Pray for me that I may not faint by the way but that I may put my trust in God, the giver of all we enjoy.

MRS. IDA POST.

VASSAR, March 29.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday was a day of rejoicing as well as of fasting with us, as I led four more precious souls down into the sparkling waters to be buried with Christ by baptism. We are having a little persecution; just enough to keep things moving along nicely. The roads are very muddy and bad just now, but we feel that every sacrifice we make in this world will bring to us good rewards in the next.

Our Church History contains a feast of good things. I wish every lover of truth had one. Our little Alma, only ten years old, every evening as soon as supper is over will say, "Now, Pa, you read the Church History;" and I believe if I was to read until midnight his eyes would sparkle. This is a grand work. Surely it turns the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers.

I should like very much to attend General Conference. I think I will sometime. May the Lord bless all. Yours,

E. DELONG.

HARTFORD, Mich., March 29.

Editors Herald.—I am here in the midst of a series of interesting and largely attended meetings; prospects for ingathering, good. Weather, mild and beautiful. Yesterday (Sunday) we wended our way to Paw Paw River and while the brightness and warmth of day lent cheerfulness and peace, we baptized a young man of good promise into the fold. Others are near.

I am in the peach belt, and there are prospects of a big crop, nothing preventing, newspaper reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Truly in hope,

WE will now pass to another point which will also in a measure strike the Tehuantepec idea. The author of the article we are now considering, in writing of the approximate nearness of Manti to Nephiah, says:—

Here the writer speaks of Nephiah as being east of Sidon, not much north of the boundary line, and as if not so very far.

The article concedes that Zarahemla and Manti were west of the river Sidon, and that this river was the boundary line on the east of Manti, which agrees with the record. The land of Gideon lay upon the east side of the river Sidon parallel with the provincial land of Zarahemla. (See Alma 4: 2; 1: 10.) The land of Manti lay south of the land of Zarahemla, and the Sidon was the east line of both these lands, the Sidon being also the west line of the land of Minon, which lay along that stream parallel with Manti. (See Alma 1: 9-11.) In this we find that after the battle which was fought upon and near the "hill Amnihu, which was east of the river Sidon, which ran by the land of Zarahemla," and was therefore in the land of Gideon, and the Amlicites fled and the Nephites pursued them all that day, and when they could pursue them no farther they pitched their tents in the valley of Gideon and Alma sent spies to follow and watch them. On the morrow the spies returned and reported that "in the land of Minon, above the land of Zarahemla, in the course of the land of Nephi," etc. This last clause, "In the course of the land of Nephi," I understand as meaning that the southern line of the land of Minon was on and ran parallel with the dividing line between the national lands of Zarahemla and Nephi, the "narrow strip of wilderness," and therefore lay in its course. I understand then that the land of Minon was bounded on the west by the river Sidon, on the north by the land of Gideon, and its southern line was bounded by the "strip of wilderness," giving the land of Minon a right-angled triangular shape. Nephiah must then have been still east or northeast of the lands of Minon and Gideon.

We will now see if we can locate the lands of Nephiah, Lehi, Morianton, Omner, Gid, and Mulek. I understand that these cities and their lands were located upon the land which before Moroni drove the Lamanites out into their own lands, which were south (not west) of the land of Zarahemla, was then known as the east wilderness and that these lands lay side by side in the order in which they are named on the east borders by the seashore (Alma 24: 8), or at the time of the building of Lehi it was said,

And they also began, in that same year, to build many cities on the north; one in a particular manner which they called Lehi, which was in the north, by the borders of the seashore.—Alma 22: 3.

This particular city, Lehi, was one of those captured. This point of the compass would be correctly made by a person in the city of Zarahemla and the expression above, "The east borders by the seashore," would also be correct of Lehi, either from the land Bountiful or Panama, or under the same rule hereinafter explained.

It will be remembered that the people of Ammon were located upon the land of Jershon (Alma 15: 7), and that the land of Jershon was on the east by the sea, and that it also bordered upon the wilderness south (Alma 16: 11); also that this people departed out of the land of Jershon and came over into the land of Mulek to give place to the armies of the Nephites (Alma 16: 31). This land of Jershon occupied, I believe, the same location which was afterward known as the land of Moroni. The first city we will notice is the city of Moroni and its provincial land. Its location is given as follows:—

And it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.—Alma 22: 3.

Methinks I hear the Tehuantepec idea repeat this quotation and tell me it was the south (not north). We will see if there are any reasonable reasons for that mode of expression. If the wording of the record upon this point as we have it abridged by the Prophet Mormon be the same as used by Alma in the full historical plates of Nephi (and Alma had his home in the city of Zarahemla.—Alma 10: 16), then the point of the "strip of wilderness" being upon the "east sea," as heretofore explained, I find that it lay northeast from the city of Zarahemla; but "in the south" is the trouble. The "strip of wilderness" I find is thirteen hundred and seventy-five miles long "from the sea east, even to the sea west." I also find that eleven hundred and fifteen miles of this was south of the city of Zarahemla, and the Nephites knew this "strip" as the "south wilderness." How natural then for Alma to have written, "And it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites."

But we will try again upon another line. The Book of Mormon is an abridgment of the original records written by Nephi and others, and this abridgment would be written, in good part at least, in Mormon's own style and language. In reading Mormon's own book I discover that at the time he was ten years old he and his father were living in the land northward, or North America, and a prophet named Amaron came to him and commanded him that when he should attain to the age of twenty-four years he should go to the hill which should be called Shim where he, Amaron, had deposited unto the Lord all the engravings concerning this people (the Nephites). At the age of eleven years Mormon was taken by his father to the land southward (South America), even to the land of Zarahemla. At the age of sixteen he was placed in command of the Nephite armies. This was in the year A. D. 326. In the year 327 the Nephites were driven toward the land northward, and finally to the land of Joshua, which was in the borders west by the seashore, which would be not far from the entrance to the present state of Panama, and here they gathered in their people that they might get them into one body. In the year 345 they, the Nephites, began to flee again, and Mormon could not stop them till they came to the land of Jashon, which was near that land where Amaron had deposited the records unto the Lord, that they might not be destroyed. The evidence is plain, to my mind, that this was in the land northward a long distance. However, there is other evidence sufficient to show that this was the case, but I shall not stop now to produce it, as it would extend this article too much. And Mormon went and got the plates of Nephi upon which he wrote the record of his times as he had been commanded to do. The same year they were driven again by the Lamanites. In the year 346 a war commenced which lasted until the close of the year 349 in which the Nephites drove the Lamanites until the Nephites had obtained possession of their own land again, the land of Zarahemla. In the year 350 the Nephites made a treaty with the Lamanites in which the Lamanites gave to the Nephites the land northward; yea, even to the narrow passage which led into the land southward, (not eastward,) and the Nephites gave to the Lamanites all the land southward. After this treaty there was no more war for ten years, but the time of Mormon was occupied employing his people, the Nephites, in preparing their lands and their arms against the time of battle. During this time also by command of the Lord, Mormon had done a great deal of preaching among his people. In the year 360 from the coming of Christ the king of the Lamanites notified Mormon that the Lamanites were coming to battle against him.

In the year 361 they came and the Nephites beat them back for two years. Their success so elated them and stirred up their pride that they swore by the throne of God that they would take the aggressive and go up to battle against their enemies. When this occurred Mormon gave up the command of the Nephite armies. This took place in the land Desolation, in the year 362, and he did not take command again until about the year 377. Between the year 362 and 379 the Nephites were continually being slaughtered and driven forward toward the place of their final destruction around the hill Cumorah. Mormon seeing that the Lamanites were about to overthrow the land, went to the hill Shim and took up all the records which Amaron had hidden up unto the Lord.

I have drawn these notes from the record to show that it was in the land northward from the "narrow neck of land" which united the two continents that the hill Shim from which Mormon obtained the plates of Nephi was located, and also to show that after he had obtained the plates of Nephi until the time of making the treaty dividing the continents his mind and the great part of his time had been absorbed in war, and after the treaty and they had settled themselves in their new home in the land northward he had been so much occupied during the ten years of peace in superintending the preparing their lands and getting his people fully armed against the time of battle, and keeping up his records upon the plates of Nephi and preaching unto his people, and also building up and fortifying a large city in the land Desolation near the narrow pass, then war again for two years, so that we can readily understand that he had but little opportunity to commence and write much of the abridgment from the plates of Nephi which we now possess until after he threw up his commission as commander of the Nephite armies, and that the fifteen years during which he was out of the command was his opportunity to take observations of passing events, keep up his record upon the plates of Nephi, and write up this abridgment; and whatever was written of this abridgment was written in the land northward. (See B. of M. Chap. 1.)

TACTICS OF DISCIPLES.—NO. 3.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

THE following sentence of Mr. Taylor follows the one I last quoted in No. 2 of this series, where he denied that Alexander Campbell reestablished the "institution of Jesus." Speaking of the "restoration" Mr. Campbell did, we have this from him.

Taylor.—"The restoration was the calling apostate men and women back to the primitive teachings of Jesus and his chosen apostles. Was that a reestablishment of the institution of Christ?"

Comment.—Let me respectfully remind you again that Mr. McDowell did not make any such an admission, that Mr. Campbell reestablished the institution of Christ. On the other hand he disproved it, but shows it to be the claim of your leading authorities by copious extracts he produces from their writings. He shows that they claimed to do what they did not. In your utter powerlessness to prove that he missapplies those extracts you set yourself up as authority in preference to your brethren. Why do you ignore them in telling their own claims, speaking their own minds?

Taylor.—"They invited men to forsake their creeds and doctrines and accept the word of God as their rule of faith and practice—stand on the word of God and it alone—accept it as the truth unmixed with error and the traditions of apostate men."

Comment.—By the "word of God" I suppose you mean the Bible; as the motto of the paper containing your article reads, "Where the Bible speaks we speak; where the Bible is silent we are silent." Also, "We are built upon the Bible, and the Bible alone;" as one frequently sees in your writings, or the publications of your people.

But whoever authorized Mr. Campbell to stand on the Bible and it alone? The Bible contains many laws for the government of the church, but it nowhere informs us that it contains all, or that no more were to be given. If it were to be the only rule for us to stand on, why does it not say so? It is infinitely important to find out. In view of the importance of such information, the fact of its silence in regard to it is a denial of its sufficiency.

"Truth unmixed with error and the traditions of apostate men." How do you know it is unmixed with error and traditions? Think a moment, and see what your answer would be—if you have any. In fact, you do not know it; you only assume it. Apart from all evidences it is certainly not an impossibility for the Bible to have been mixed with error. Although originally written by inspired men, it has not been in the hands of such good men ever since being written. On the contrary, it has been for many centuries in the hands of those whom you people are always ready to denounce as apostates.

There are many ways by which error might creep between the lids of that sacred book since written. The original manuscripts are not now in existence, not even claimed to be in existence; that is, they are not accessible, not known to the religious world. And of course those now in existence, none of which antedate the third century, must have been copied from the originals or perhaps from some that were copied from them. Upon learning this the question immediately arises, "Who were the copyists, and were they honest men?" It will not do to say "yes" unless you know it to be true. Neither will it do to beggingly assert that God would not permit his holy book to be mutilated. We have no record of any certain display of his power to protect it during the last eighteen hundred years that I am aware of. Those possibilities, I suggest, upon these alone if we were to reason to an end which is not called for here, we would surely involve the faultiness, yea, the fallacy of your theology. Let me here tell you, sir, that there are voluminous evidences that the Bible has been perverted to a certain extent. Some of those I may bring forward farther on. A disputant is not bound in following the retreat of bare assertions of his opponent, to disprove them, when not the phantom of an effort is made to substantiate them.

Taylor.—"This is the kind of restoration Mr. Campbell advocated."

Comment.—Yes, a restoration of something which had its origin with Mr. Campbell, and never existed before he did. Such a thing as "standing on the word of God and it alone" is entirely unknown to the Bible.

Taylor.—"Not another establishment of the kingdom of Christ, which thing, according to God's word, is impossible."

Comment.—Because "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," I suppose, as you have already quoted and misapplied! It is not necessary to repeat the reasons here which I gave for dissenting from that position.

Taylor.—"But the Latter Day Saints claim a reformed church of Jesus Christ."

Comment.—"Reformed" has more than one meaning. It is used to denote those who separated from Luther on the doctrine of substantiation. It may also be properly used in the sense of formed anew, etc. Without surmising I pass on.

Taylor.—"In order for such a reformation as that it would sure enough take a new revelation, and we have no record of any revelation being given to fallible man direct from God since the days of the chosen apostles of our Lord Jesus, who were to be witnesses of him."

Comment.—Yes, we have; there are records certifying that revelations have been received direct from God as late as the nineteenth century, by one Joseph Smith. There are also records in existence which purport to have been written during the first two or three centuries after the apostles' days, which bear testimony that revelations direct from God were still received. Notably among these are: Justin Martyr, who wrote about fifty years after the apostles; Irenaeus, who wrote somewhat later; Cyprian, who was beheaded in 259 A. D. Hence you are mistaken about the nonexistence of such records.

Taylor.—"Therefore the founders of Mormonism could not be witnesses of Jesus because they never saw him and talked with him."

Comment.—You have not yet proved that what you call the "founders of Mormonism," did not see and talk with Jesus. You base this on your other assumption that there is or that "we have no record of any revelation being given to fallible man direct from God since the days of his chosen apostles," which I have shown to be untrue.

Your statement is equal to a direct admission that there is no need of any "witnesses of Jesus" in these days.

Having examined No. 2 of Mr. Taylor's articles, I now pass on to the next one, No. 3. He starts out by stating that his preceding article was a "slight review of how Mr. McDowell thought the Church of Christ would have to be supplied with an official compact," and charges Bro. McDowell with trying to maintain the idea that the Church of God had apostatized, which he declares to be an impossibility. He then, evidently to fortify himself against the doctrine of apostasy, refers to Ephesians 5: 25-27 to show that Christ sanctified and cleansed his church, and that he is to present it to himself without spot or blemish; to Hebrews 12: 23 to show that the "general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven;" to Revelation 21: 9, and says: "The church of the Lord Jesus Christ is his bride, his wife."

Whatever those passages to which this author refers inculcate, they are surely foreign to the result he used them to accomplish. Not one of them gives the shadow of a denial of the doctrine of the apostasy of the primitive church. This author continues as follows:—

Taylor.—"His institution was 'built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.' (Eph. 2: 20.)"

Comment.—Yes, very much unlike a modern institution "built upon the Bible and the Bible alone." Inasmuch as it is necessary for a real foundation to continue with a building, those officers are still necessary in a living condition. Dead ones will not do. If you say they will, then I reply that the institution which was built upon their foundation will do now in the same way. The apostles and prophets of that day died; so did the members of what you call the "institution," with the exception of some who were possibly translated. Now if the former is sufficient for us today, why not the latter? Many passages of scripture might be cited in this line, but yet I withhold them.

Taylor.—"He sent the Spirit of truth, another Comforter which the world could not receive, and this Spirit was to guide into all truth, and was to abide with the apostles or their word forever. (John 14:16, 17; 16:13.)"

Comment.—The portions of scripture you refer to do not say that the Spirit was to abide with the apostles' "word" forever; it says it was to abide with them. I call attention to this, not to be too technical, but because some of you people have a vague notion about the Spirit existing in the written word of God.

Taylor.—"Then, if this Spirit was to abide forever with the apostles, it is dwelling in the Church of God to-day, guiding us into all truth when we are willing to hear his words and obey his commands."

Comment.—Just so. Indeed, it is dwelling in the Church of God to-day and guiding the obedient into all truth. A very liberal admission, sir. But I fear you do not understand what you said. It does not harmonize with your other teachings; for, you say, if the Spirit abode with the apostles forever, it is dwelling in God's Church to-day, guiding them into all truth. Then I say, Will it not guide them by the same method and means that it did the apostles, which was by supernatural "gifts" and impulsions as described in 1 Corinthians 12 and in other places? If not, how then? It must be by revelation. You are not strictly in accord with Mr. Campbell, who said, "There is a special impulsion, or operation of the Holy Spirit, which all the apostolic or ambassador class felt, that no man on earth now feels or has felt."—Millennial Harbinger, series 4, vol. 4, p. 309.

Taylor.—"This is why the disciples of Jesus Christ do not believe Joe Smith's revelation, because it is in open violation to the word of God."

Comment.—The revelations which you vulgarly call "Joe Smith's revelation" are the revelations of Jesus Christ given through Joseph Smith. The disciples of Jesus Christ do believe and obey them. Those revelations are true, and those who believe them not are not the disciples of Jesus.

Taylor.—"Next in order we will consider the question of ordinances and religious rites as found practiced in the New Testament according to Mr. McDowell."

Comment.—Very well; we await with intense interest your consideration.

Taylor.—"1. 'Faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins.' This is in harmony with God's word."

Comment.—Of course; the Disciples believe that.

Taylor.—"2. 'Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, as taught in Matthew 28, as found in Acts 2, Romans 6, Colossians 2.' Not one word is said about the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit in the Scriptures referred to above."

Comment.—Here, Mr. Taylor, I charge you with downright trickery. It is so visible that no one can mistake it for anything else who reads Mr. McDowell's tract after or along with your criticism which equals anything I ever saw for unfairness. I produce Mr. McDowell's language as found in the tract.

McDowell.—"Faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, as taught in Matthew 28; as found in Acts 2; Romans 6; Colossians 2; Acts 8:15-17; 9:17; 19:6; 1 Timothy 4:14."

Comment.—You reproduce the first four references and then exclaim that there is nothing said concerning the laying on of hands "in the scriptures above referred to." It is true that ordinance is not mentioned in those passages; but why do you stop so soon? Why do you not, like an honest man, quote his references to those passages in which it is mentioned? Mr. McDowell does not say that laying on of hands is mentioned in the scripture you refer to. He argues that laying on of hands with faith, repentance, and baptism are principles of the gospel, and gives a collection of references to where they are taught, just as your own writers do. He neither says nor means that one of those principles is taught in all the portions of scripture he refers to; nor does not specify the portion which teaches any specific principle. He refers to them in a general way, leaving the reader to ascertain what is taught in each. Then you put a period after the third principle, where he has no period, and then quote the fourth one, laying on of hands, separately, attaching to it the part of the references which do not relate to the laying on of hands, and then with the unprincipled work of a trickster say, "Not one word is said about the laying on of hands . . . in the scriptures above referred to." You knew you were writing to your own paper where comparatively few of your readers, if any, would detect your misrepresentation. I had occasion to call attention to a similar method of yours in a preceding number, but it was not so glaring as this. I wish I could account for it in some other way than I have, but I cannot. I do not desire to believe anything bad about you or any of your people where I can avoid it, neither do our people.

I wish Mr. McDowell or I were permitted to reply to you through your paper. In justice to him, after treating him as you have, will you not repentantly intercede? I am sure I have no objections to you or any of your compeers rehabilitating your smirched character through our paper, if our editors see fit to honor you in that wise. But no danger of you making such an attempt. I hope, however, that you may see this, read it, and repent. I intend to continue following you.

WONDERFUL THINGS THAT ARE NEAR.

Flying is solved. The principle is known. A mechanical expedient is all that is now needed to make it successful. Practical flight is to-day not more than five or ten years off.

A glow worm makes light with about one three-hundredth part of the force used in ordinary artificial light. When men know how to make light as cheap, streets and homes will be as light as day for a mere fraction of what light now costs. This is near. Vacuum illumination without incandescence is already in full operation, and in a year or two should cut down the price of light to a sixth of its current cost, and in five or ten years light may be, like water, turned on in every house at will.

Compressed air has long been known to be the best way, theoretically, to store force for use in transportation. There is no waste and no deterioration. The need is a cheap and efficient motor to apply compressed air to city transportation. If this can be done, first the trolley poles and wires will come down, next the horseless, compressed air motor carriage will do all the work of city delivery.

When these come the only use for gas will be for cooking—if this is not done by electricity. Factories, also, before many years, will be run by transmitted electric power. This has begun to be done and in five or ten years will be completed, and the factory fire and boiler will be a thing of the past.

The city of the future, and no very distant future, will have no trolley poles or wires and no horses. All movements will be on rail by silent air motors or by horseless carriages equally silent. All pavements will be asphalt. Unlimited light will be as cheap as unlimited water is to-day. No coal will be delivered at private houses and no ashes taken from them. With no horses, no coal and no ashes, street dust and dirt will be reduced to a minimum. With no factory fires and no kitchen or furnace fires, the air will be as pure in the city as in the country. Trees will have a chance; houses be warmed and lighted as easily and cheaply as they are now supplied with water.

A city will be a pretty nice place to live in when the first twenty years of the twentieth century are passed.—Scientific American.

COLLEGE FUND.

The following-named brethren contributed to the college fund at the time of the college dedication, the amounts affixed to their names, but by some oversight their names did not appear in the published list of contributors:—

COMMITTEE.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 30, 1897.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large.—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about $1,000 short,
Herald, about 4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about 1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preëxistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

CHRIST AND THE OLD TESTAMENT.

IMPELLED, doubtless, by the effect of Dr. Abott's series of sermons on "The Bible as literature," Rev. Dr. A. J. F. Behrends (Congregationalist), also of Brooklyn, had been delivering a series of addresses designed, apparently, to counteract the effect of Dr. Abbott's conclusions upon the public mind. Dr. Behrends is credited with occupying a position midway between the literalists and the liberals in Bible interpretation, and though he was of those who united in passing a resolution deploring the effect of Dr. Abbot's teachings, he deplores equally the wholesale charges of irreverence and infidelity with which some have assailed the "higher critics."

In a sermon preached by Dr. Behrends and revised for publication in Christian Work (February 25), he defines the terms "lower criticism," and "higher criticism," and regrets their use. The "lower criticism" should properly be called textual criticism, its object being, by comparison of manuscripts and versions, to reproduce as nearly as possible the original text. The "higher criticism" should be called literary and historical criticism, its object being to determine when and by whom the various books of the Bible were written and whether they are independent treatises or drawn from older sources.

The first criticism made by Dr. Behrends upon the "higher critics" is that in many cases they depend too much upon mere literary analysis, being wanting too often in exact and comprehensive historical knowledge, and minimizing the results of archeology. The treatment accorded by them to the Pentateuch, tradition being entirely silenced, leaves us in a hopeless muddle. There is always a kernel of historical truth in tradition, and it must be given due weight. The burden of proof is upon the one denying. He must show that in detail and as a whole the traditional view is false.

Dr. Behrends is impressed with "the industry, learning, sincerity, and reverence" of many of the higher critics, but impeaches them as often lacking in the judicial temper. He hails with joy the return to this temper shown by Professor Buhl, of Leipsic, in an extract quoted in the sermon to the effect that the Jews must be held the best authority on the question of the Old-Testament canon, and that the frequent charges of serious corruption are discredited by the acceptance of the books of the present canon not only by the scribes but by the people themselves as a true reflection of their spiritual life. Dr. Behrends then comes to the attitude of Christ toward the old Testament, which he treats as follows:—

"There is one fact which remains fixed and historically assured in the bewildering debate, and which is of supreme and decisive importance to the Christian believer. Canon Driver is most emphatic in the statement that the same canon of historical criticism which 'authorizes the assumption of tradition in the Old Testament forbids it in the new,' and that 'the facts of our Lord's life on which the fundamental truths of Christianity depend cannot be anything else than strictly historical.' But the New Testament, and even the first three Gospels alone, will give us the present Old Testament with our Lord's indorsement of it as Scripture. That will be enough for the plain Christian. He will conclude that he cannot do better than to use his Old Testament, as Christ used it, and that he need not hesitate to do so.

"The substantial identity, I am prepared to say practically absolute identity, of the present Hebrew Old Testament with the Old Testament as Christ knew it, is one of the clearest outstanding facts in the critical controversy. The debate for the most part concerns the period between Ezra, 450 B. C., to Moses, 1491 B. C., a little over a thousand years, whose contemporaneous memorials have perished in the ruthless wars of the captivities and in the destruction of the temple by the Roman soldiers. But it is equally clear that long before the birth of Christ the present books of the Old Testament were regarded as Scripture and inspired; were read regularly in the synagogues; were classified as 'Law, Prophets, and Psalms,' bound up in rolls and jealously guarded, and were studied with a veneration bordering upon superstition. The evidence is ample, massive, and overwhelming. Soon after the destruction of Jerusalem the learned Jewish rabbis established a colony and organized a famous school at Jamnia, which continued in existence for sixty years; and here, soon after the year 70, the present number and names of the books of the Old Testament were formally and officially promulgated. The list names twenty-four books and includes every book in our present collection; and it includes only these. The difference between our list of thirty-nine books and the Hebrew list, which contains only twenty-four, is accounted for by the fact that in the Hebrew list I. and II. Samuel appear as one book, I. and II. Kings as one book, I. II. Chronicles as one book, Ezra and Nehemiah as one book, and the twelve minor prophets as one book. The difference is purely one of numerical notation; the actual contents are identical.

"Josephus, writing sixty years after Christ's death, about the year 90, gives the number and the classes of the Old-Testament books, and speaks of them as long recognized and inspired. The passage has often been quoted and is found in his tract against Apion, the eighth chapter of the first book. . . . The passage is worth inserting.

"For we have not an innumerable multitude of books among us, disagreeing from and contradicting each other (as the Greeks have), but only twenty-two books, which contain the records of all past times, which are justly believed to be divine. And of them five belong to Moses, which contain his laws, and the tradition of the origin of mankind until his death. The interval of time was little less than 3,000 years. But as to the time from the death of Moses till the reign of Artaxerxes, King of Persia, who reigned after Xerxes, the prophets, who were after Moses, wrote down what was done in their time in thirteen books. The remaining four books contain hymns to God and precepts for the conduct of human life. How firmly we have given credit to these books of our own nation is evident by what we do; for during so many ages as have already elapsed no one hath been so bold as either to add anything to them or take anything from them, or to make any change in them; but it is become natural to all Jews, immediately and from their very birth, to esteem these books to contain divine doctrines, and to persist in them, and, if occasion be, willingly to die for them. For it is no new thing for our captives, many of them in number, and frequently in time, to be seen to endure racks and death of all kinds upon the theaters, that they may not be obliged to say one word against our laws, or the records that contain them; whereas there are none at all among the Greeks who would undergo the least harm on that account; no, nor in the case if all the writings that are among them were to be destroyed.

“Josephus here speaks for himself and for the nation. He certainly could not be mistaken on that point. He was the most learned and influential Jew of his time, and he was anything but a strict constructionist. It may be that the Bible is a forgery, and it may be that the Declaration of American Independence is a forgery; but the statement of Josephus proves conclusively that our present Old Testament was regarded in his day with such veneration that men were prepared to die for their faith in it, and that for many generations before his time it had not been tampered with. The nation, according to his testimony, as early as his own birth in the year 37, accepted the books as we now have them, regarded them as inspired, and affirmed the integrity of the text. “We can go back fifty years beyond Josephus. Philo, a learned Jew, writing during our Lord's life and immediately after, quotes from nearly every one of our present books, and accords them inspired authority.”

The Greek translation of the Old Testament (the Septuagint), made by the Jewish colony in Alexandria, was finished 150 years before Christ and was “accepted and authoritative.” None of the present books are missing in it, though others (Apocrypha) are included. Dr. Behrends quotes Professor Sanday in a passage which is termed an impressive “concession,” as voicing “the verdict of sober scholarship” on this point. The passage is as follows:—

“The canon of the law was practically complete at the time of the promulgation of the Pentateuch by Ezra and Nehemiah, in the year 444 B.C., and that of the prophets in the course of the third century before Christ. As to the closing of the third group, there is perhaps more room for difference of opinion. A common view is that the recognition of these books as Scripture would be no later than 100 B.C. All the books are quoted as authoritative in recorded sayings from Hillel onward.”

And Hillel, Dr. Behrends adds, died four years before the Christian era. This makes incontrovertibly clear that the Scripture to which Christ appealed is our own Old Testament, which was read in all the synagogues then as now, spoken of as Scripture, regarded as inspired, accepted and quoted by Christ as authoritative. And Dr. Behrends adds:—

“The so-called higher criticism is mainly popgun business. I simply want to emphasize the fact that if men will use their Old Testament as Jesus Christ used His, which was the same as our own, to find their way to God and heaven, they may go on their way rejoicing, while the critics fight over their endless and profitless task. It is safe to follow him who gave his life to save us.”—Literary Digest.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 14, 1897.

AN exchange furnishes the following expressive of its opinion of some movements in Utah:—

The resolution for investigation of the methods by which the new Senator from Utah was elected has been defeated in the Legislature. It was openly charged, and the evidence is convincing on that point, that the opposing candidate was defeated as the outcome of resentment by the Mormon Church, which he left some time since, and that it used all its influence in favor of the successful candidate. There was ample cause for investigation, but the church had sufficient strength in the Legislature to defeat the resolution. All of which goes to show the folly of admitting Utah to Statehood while the Mormon Church still retained its power over politics. The folly of that proceeding will appear in still clearer light in the future, when the Mormon church regains control of Utah, as it will, slowly but surely. The snake was only scotched.—Ex.

THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

MONDAY, April 5.—The report, general and statistical, of the Secretary, Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, is given herewith:—

My report for the past year is that I have been working most of the time that I could spare from business duties in the Sunday school work, and from various sources have obtained the information that the work is progressing rapidly and has become a strong factor in the general church work where branches and schools are organized. During the past year I have written several hundred letters, and besides devoting considerable time to the clerical work have attended two reunions and the Sunday school Institute at Council Bluffs. At the Bluff Park Reunion I assisted Bro. Hougas in holding meetings every day, and found there that reunion work was very profitable. Our meetings were very well attended and on every hand there seemed to be a spirit of inquiry for more perfect methods of work and a general desire to be engaged in it. At the Woodbine Reunion we found Bro. Mintun in charge of the committee on arrangements and I assisted him and Bro. Hougas. There was the same enthusiasm that was noticed at the first reunion mentioned shown in attendance there, notwithstanding the fact that on some days we held two meetings which took up about all the time that was to be found between the prayer meeting and the preaching. These meetings were carried on with enthusiastic workers present.

Perhaps the greatest success of the year was the Sunday School Institute, held at Council Bluffs during the holidays. This meeting was arranged for Sunday school workers especially, and during the three days that we were in session we covered in a general way most of the work of the Sunday school, both in the school and district and the General Association; and while we were in session almost continually from nine in the morning until 9:30 at night, still at the close there was an unflagging interest and unanimous expression for another to be held this year.

The report of Sr. J. H. Royce, editor of the Sunday School Department of the HERALD, is as follows:—

Coworkers of the Sunday School now in Convention Assembled; Greeting:—It is natural to us, on the eve of the close of any period of our labors to pause and look backward to measure the ground of our progress. No doubt every one of you has asked, "What have I done for the work since we last met?" And what fallible opinions of our own labors we are often possessed of! Premature fruits are the natural heart's desire. Too often are we found searching for ripened fruit simultaneously with our planting. We forget that days and days of cultivation must follow, that the ground may not lose its power of capillary attraction; that the roots may reach out in all directions to gather the elements of life and strength; and that possibly just on the eve of maturity we must protect from the blighting frosts, or much of our labor is lost. So, too, we do not always arrive at a proper analysis of the ground or of the conditions of the plant below surface. We fear there is a lack of root and instead of loosing the ground we pull at the plant to see if it has strength below ground.

To-day, let us not ask ourselves so much concerning the fruits of our labors as "what of our efforts?" "Were they well directed?" "Have we studied to know the true principles of cultivation?" "What are we seeking for, a forced hotbed plant or a healthy growth?" Have we kept to the row or worked a little all over the field?" As for me my work has been promiscuously directed. Many letters have assured me that some help has been gathered from our department. One writes, "I always open to the Sunday School Department first." Another says "The Department is appreciated by us all." Another says that so many long articles have appeared that very few read. Nor is the criticism an unkind one. Oftentimes it takes some space to contain just what we wish to say but where we can arrange by subtopics the editor can paragraph and publish all at one time or at several as wisdom may direct. The experience of us all has taught us that we sit down for a minute and look over the short paragraphs, and often one short paragraph leads us to read another and another where we would not attempt it were it all one solid article. In many ways are we convinced that our workers are anxious to preserve the life of our department. The recent discussion has shown that they are thoughtful of the best plans for enhancing the interests of the work. Individually, your editor does not favor uniformity. Years of experience in the International work as primary teacher, intermediate teacher, Senior teacher, and as superintendent all went to convince me that I did not favor the system. But, whatever my preconceived notions of right may be I am open to conviction and I have taken pleasure in publishing arguments pro and con. I can see mistakes that your editor has made during the past year, and no doubt she has made many others that others see and she does not. Should the convention desire a change of editors rest assured that it can be made with no offense to me. I desire simply that which is best for the work. I do not wish to shrink from any duty that the convention may deem mine to do, nor do I wish to do poorly what some other might do well. It rests with you and I pray that wisdom may be given according to your needs. I desire to thank all who have so kindly assisted me in my labors. Though we have not met face to face there is a bond of union between us that we trust will grow stronger and stronger until we see eye to eye in the kingdom of Him for whom we are now trying to labor. Yours in bonds, MRS J. H. ROYCE.

The Monday afternoon session was opened promptly at two o'clock. The prayer was offered by Bro. G. H. Hilliard. Minutes were read; credentials committee reported.

The regular order—the election of officers—was then proceeded with. Brn. F. E. Cochran, T. A. Hougas, and W. N. Robinson were placed in nomination. At this juncture a motion was offered, providing that a superintendent be elected with the understanding that his entire time be given to the work and expenses met by the association. The motion was tabled. The vote resulted in the choice of Bro. Hougas. The choice was made unanimous.

Bro. F. E. Cochran, Sr. Anna Salyards, Bro. M. C. Fisher, Srs. Pearl Price of California, and J. H. Royce, of Michigan, were placed in nomination for First Assistant Superintendent, the choice resulting in the election of Bro. Cochran, the choice being made unanimous. Brn. M. C. Fisher and W. N. Robinson, and Srs. Anna Salyards and Pearl Price, were nominated for Second Assistant Superintendent. The first vote did not elect; the second resulted in the election of Bro. M. C. Fisher. Bro. W. N. Robinson was declared the choice for Secretary. Srs. C. B. Kelley, and B. C. Smith, of Independence, were nominated for the office of Treasurer. Sr. Kelly was elected and the choice made unanimous. Nominations for Librarian were next in order: Sr. J. H. Royce, Bro. B. M. Anderson, Bro. A. H. Mills, and Sr. Belle James, of Independence, Bro. Samuel A. Burgess, of St. Louis, Sr. Rudolph Etzenhouser, of Independence, Sr. Mamie Allen, of Lamoni, Brn. M. H. Bond, Robert Winning. Bro. Anderson declined. Sr. Mamie Allen was elected and the choice made unanimous.

The leading question before the convention, "uniformity of texts," was then taken up.

A resolution providing for uniformity of texts in all grades of lessons was moved and seconded:—

Resolved, that we believe the use of the same lesson text in each of the three Quarterlies now being issued is practicable and advisable.

A motion to defer till next convention was lost; also one to limit the speeches to three affirmative and three negative. Speeches were limited to five minutes. After lengthy and spirited discussion, it was moved to refer the matter of improving the Quarterlies to a committee of five, to report to the evening session:—

Resolved that a committee of five be appointed to consider the question of improvement of Quarterlies, and that to them be referred the question now before us, and they requested to report the first thing at the evening session.

It was sought to amend this by providing for report at next convention. The amendment and motion to refer were lost, and the assembly proceeded to vote on the original motion. The yeas and nays were called, and the delegations gathered to conclude upon their votes. The result of the vote was 521 for uniformity to 264 against, hence it prevailed.

The evening session of the convention was opened at 7:30; Bro. John Chisnall offered prayer. Minutes were read.

The revising committee made report, as follows:—

To the General Sunday School Association:—We, your Board appointed to select Editors for Quarterlies and to revise lessons, beg leave to report:—

Board met on May 7, 1896, members present R. S. Salyards, J. A. Gunsolley, and Duncan Campbell, the latter being appointed by Superintendent Hougas, upon suggestion of the other two members, to fill the vacancy caused by death of Pres. W. W. Blair. Board organized with Salyards President, and Gunsolley, Secretary.

Board continued editors of Primary Quarterlies Sisters Lucy Lyons Resseguie and Viola Blair, allowing them one hundred dollars each as compensation.

Sister Anna Salyards was continued editor of Senior and Intermediate Quarterlies at thirty-five dollars per month.

May 9, the following communication was received:—

"Brethren of the Revising Committee: I wish to voluntarily offer a reduction of my salary to thirty dollars per month. Christiana Salyards, Editor."

This reduction of five dollars per month by

Sr. Salyards was willingly allowed by the Board.

The Board has tried to do the revising as best they could under the circumstances.

Committee, { R. S. SALYARDS.
DUNCAN CAMPBELL.
J. A. GUNSOLLEY.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 3, 1897.

The convention then proceeded to choose the Revising Committee for the coming year. Brn. Heman C. Smith, E. L. Kelley, R. S. Salyards, Duncan Campbell, J. A. Gunsolley, J. M. Terry, and Columbus Scott, were placed in nomination, and Brn. Smith, Kelley, and Salyards were chosen, the choice being made unanimous.

The Librarian's report was read and adopted:—

To the General Sunday School Association:— At your last session I was appointed to act as Librarian of the Association.

Previously thereto I had secured three complete files of each of the three different grades of Quarterlies, also one of the Teachers' Helps. Have since that time kept on file eight copies of each.

Respectfully,

B. M. ANDERSON.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 3, 1897.

The Music Committee reported:—

To the Sunday School Association in Convention Assembled; Greeting:— We your committee on Sunday school music, respectfully report, that we have received no additional contributions during the last year. Some parties have requested their contributions be returned to them unless there is some prospect that they be published in the near future. Upon this point, we your committee would be pleased to have some instructions.

F. G. PITT,

L. L. RESSEGUIE,

LAMONI, IOWA, April 5, 1897.

The committee was continued and authorized to return such music as had been requested returned and to use their judgment as to publishing music contributions in the Quarterlies or Autumn Leaves such music in hand that would be suitable for use in the Sunday schools. Bro. Arthur H. Mills was added to the committee.

A resolution was offered providing that fifty dollars be set apart to be used as the superintendent and executive officers may see fit, for the good of the work.

It was sought to amend by inserting "one hundred dollars" instead of the amount named. Further consideration deferred till bills were presented and passed upon.

The following were, on motion, allowed, and the secretary instructed to draw orders for the several amounts: Sr. J. H. Royce $5.00; T. A. Hougas $34.00; Sr. C. B. Kelley $1.50; College City Chronicle $2.00; W. N. Robinson $29.50.

A motion to allow W. N. Robinson amount expended for railroad fare to the Institute at Council Bluffs and to the General Convention—$10.77, was adopted.

A substitute was then adopted fixing the annual appropriation at $125; also a resolution "that it is the understanding of this body that traveling expenses are included in the appropriations just made." The sum of $7.50 was allowed Sr. Anna Salyards, expense of attending the Institute in answer to call of the other executive officers.

A motion was adopted that in future traveling expenses of those attending the Institute be not paid hereafter. A petition from a committee of the Institute was read:—

To the Officers and Delegates of the General Sunday School Association in Convention Assembled; Greeting:— We the committee appointed by the late Teachers' Institute held at Council Bluffs hereby petition your honorable body to consider the propriety of holding future Institutes and that provisions be made for the same, believing as we do that this is one of the best means for developing teachers and officials and securing general coöperation.

Respectfully submitted,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

J. F. MINTUN.

Consideration was deferred till next convention.

A communication from the superintendent of Pittsburg Sunday school was read, spread upon the minutes, and referred to the Revising Committee:—

As one of the Sunday school workers, interested in all that will be for the advancement of the Sunday school cause, I wish to make some suggestions that probably have been thought of by others present and perhaps may have been presented, but being unable to meet with those engaged in like precious cause, I wish to present some views in regard to the Quarterlies that I hope are shared in by those who are alert as to the present requirements of the work.

The excellent, systematic work the Quarterlies are accomplishing, the influence they are exerting toward Bible study, and the masterly manner in which they are edited are sufficient reasons why they don't need to be apotheosized; but it is not a question of their being good, but can they be better. I don't think they are fulfilling their high, holy mission. It seems to me there are two general views that can be taken as being the object of the Quarterlies. First, they are to be an aid in studying the Bible as a whole. Second, they are to assist in teaching the gospel as found in the three standard books and teach the young to revere the three books jointly.

If the first view is correct I think the Quarterlies are fulfilling very successfully their mission. If the second view is right, they are not the instrument in the hands of the association they should be. I believe the second view is correct and think they, especially the smaller ones, should have more of the gospel of Christ in them as taught in former and latter days, and believe they should be edited with a view to teaching clearly, and persistently the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We have the truth as found in the Bible; Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. As the time of the teacher in the Sunday school is so limited and there is so much that is of eternal importance to accomplish in the few moments often only weekly given, this precious time should largely be devoted to teaching BASIC PRINCIPLES and not so much to generalities.

These basic principles are found in the three books and the Quarterlies should teach from these books the gospel direct.

What have the young people learned about the gospel from the Quarterlies in the last ten or twelve months? In our school here at Pittsburg we have scholars who, at the close of the school, immediately proceed to a sectarian school. So far as the Quarterlies are concerned, what are they taught different in the one school than in the other? Both are teaching from the Bible along the same general lines. Our Quarterlies should be distinctively Latter Day Saint Quarterlies. As parents too often neglect teaching their children heaven's most important truths, the Quarterlies should give no uncertain sound. Of course I don't for a moment think they should continually harp on the first principles but they should deal with the broad principles of the gospel and its mission and results. The mission of the school should be more to make gospel believers than Bible students. It should be the place where the young will have indelibly stamped upon their minds and hearts, lessons that will have a tendency to create reverence for the all three books. The Quarterlies can do this and I believe under the present editorial force.

This latter-day work must not be treated as a side issue in the Sunday school and the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants should be given place with the Bible.

Instead of putting advertisements on the cover of the Quarterlies, would suggest that the epitome of our faith, as arranged in the booklet of "What we Believe" be placed on the cover.

The suggestions offered are more especially for the Intermediate Quarterlies than the Senior Grade but would like to see the latter-day work taught more in both. The lack of this in the Quarterlies has been so keenly felt by the writer that he takes from five to ten minutes at the close of the school and teaches, with the blackboard, what the church believes and teaches.

We have an artist in the school which makes this possible and he is the means of entertaining and instructing by his pictures.

C. ED MILLER,

Supt. Pioneer S. S., Pittsburg, Pa.

The assembly then adjourned. Benediction by Bro. Hougas.

Tuesday, the 6th.—Met at 7:30 a. m., prayer by Bro. F. G. Pitt. Minutes read, approved.

The following, as to the time of beginning uniformity of lesson texts, was adopted:—

Resolved, That the time at which to begin the use of uniformity of lesson texts shall be left discretionary with the editors of the three Quarterlies with the advice and counsel of the General Superintendent, Assistant Superintendents, Secretary, and revising board.

J. F. MINTUN.

F. G. PITT.

A motion prevailed in effect that the action providing that future expenses to Institutes be not allowed be understood as not applying to officers of the association.

A balance of forty-one cents reported by the treasurer of the late Institute was on motion turned over to the Institute officers.

A resolution to provide Book of Mormon Quarterlies was referred to the revising board for their consideration, the Book of Mormon Quarterlies to be published if they deem advisable.

A resolution providing for a library, and for purchase of books for sale to the schools, was laid on the table.

A resolution providing "that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to consider the propriety of revision of Sunday School Record and class books and the lessening of the cost of Sunday school supplies," was adopted; Brn. T. A. Hougas, F. E. Cochran, and J. A. Gunsolley so selected.

It was provided that the program committee for next convention consist of Superintendent Hougas and two others to be appointed by the association officers; also that next convention convene prior to next General Conference, the time to be named by the general officers.

The following on entertainments also prevailed:—

Resolved: That while as an association we favor enlivening our entertainments with that which will attract, entertain, and please, as well as educate; we do not favor such renditions or exercises on the Sabbath day that would have a tendency to lead us from a proper appreciation of the sacredness of that day and the class of matter that should engage our attention and thought according to the revelations given to us.

H. O. SMITH.

M. H. BOND.

The assembly then adjourned, singing hymn 212, the benediction being pronounced by Superintendent Hougas.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THE morning of Tuesday, April 6, dawned clear and bright, after a succession of cloudy days and cold. The air was bracing and invigorating, yet not too cool for the season of spring, which seemed to have dawned with the day and to have asserted her lawful right to possession. April 6 was official, therefore, in a twofold sense; and as Nature prepared to enter upon a season of vigorous growth, to end we trust in abundant stores of rich fruitage, so the church entered upon what we trust will prove a marked year's work in the hastening time of the spiritual development that is to advance the interests of the work of God. The attendance at the Sunday school convention had been very large and subsequent arrivals had so increased the throng of ministers, delegates, and visitors that it was probably the largest gathering that ever assembled at an opening session of the April General Conference of the Reorganized Church.

Promptly at ten o'clock President Joseph Smith called the assembly to order and the audience proceeded to quietly find seats in the lower floor or in the gallery, as preferred. The auditorium was well filled above and below.

A permanent organization was effected by the choice of President Joseph Smith, and Alexander H. Smith of the Twelve Presidents, R. S. Salyards Secretary, authorized to name his assistants. The favorite hymn, "Redeemer of Israel," was sung, and with spirit and life, and Bro. W. H. Kelley offered a fervent prayer for the blessing of God upon the conference, in which the entire audience manifested a hearty assent.

The President, so authorized, nominated a committee on credentials: Brn. J. W. Wight, J. B. Roush, A. C. Barmore, who retired with the list of credentials to make up their report.

President Smith offered some words of counsel to the assembly, advising the exercise of care that none be wounded; also to avoid taking offense at whatever might be said or transpire. The session was likely to be taxing because of the nature of some of the business. He then formally made the usual opening address, which we present herewith:—

The year has been a fruitful one in good fortune as well as misfortune. Death has been busy in our ranks and stricken from them some of the ablest and most foremost of the workers. And at the same time there has been an influx of element that is encouraging, young, and strong, and spiritual, and from all parts of the field there comes, too, the testimony that, at no period of the ministerial career has there been a greater acknowledgment of the Spirit in presenting the truth. It is not hard to perceive from the experience of the year, as well as the experience of other years, that the position we occupy is calculated—and I believe I speak advisedly when I say largely calculated—to make even spiritual men heady. The contemplation that a man occupies a secure place in his confession of faith and in his profession of religion is calculated to make them austere, in one sense of the word, to intrench a man in his own good opinion. The very fact that he recognizes a degree of invulnerability against that that is brought to bear upon him as affecting his faith is sufficient to excite in him over-confidence. While it is a fortunate thing for us that the Master has so ordered that he does not tolerate at any great length of time a self-sufficient man, he manages in some way to discipline him, and the disciplining is hard; it crushes some so that they scarcely rise again, while others it improves. Just like the polishing of the silver and the gold make them shine, so does this disciplining make a true servant of the Master increase in usefulness and make him shine. And I believe we are told somewhere that the servant that returns with his sheaves shall shine as the stars in the firmament. Now we ought to be warned, sincerely warned against the possibility of becoming too self-assured and thereby causing the loss of spiritual power. As we gain prestage, renown, and place we ought at the same time to gain in spirituality and meekness. And though we may feel self-approval because that we feel the Master's approval, his approval should be the first in our consideration.

I do not pretend to say what the year may bring forth, but I anticipate a busy one in the field, a busy one in the home ranks. Conditions point to them, and in running over the reports of the ministry as published I notice that there are 1,840 baptisms in the ministerial reports alone, saying nothing of the increase at the branches, under local ministrations; and I presume that there may be as many more. That, however, will be shown by the Recorder's report, when it shall be read. This indicates that the word is being received, and it is being received in places where hitherto the ministers were excluded; that circumstances have been controlled in such a way that in places where ministers were not received cordially they are now being welcomed. There may be places, and in the experience of some of the ministers I doubt not there are in fact, where effort has fallen fruitless, where the doors are closed. Now where this occurs to any extent in the field of any man after he has made a faithful endeavor, he should leave it, as suggested more than once by President Blair, and pass on to some place where they will hear, where they wish to hear.

Another item of interest to us all, and I think one that we should take cognizance of: Our friends in the West have been having an active ministry abroad, in some places quite a number of them. And our people have met them of course, in a more or less hostile attitude, but as a rule with cheerfulness and good will, a kindly spirit; still with no disposition to compromise what we believe we have. What may have been the result upon some of these we do not know, but we have discovered that many of those who are sent out are ignorant of the church history; they do not know what the books contain and as a consequence they are not prepared; and as one brother has represented it, "The authorities cautioned their ministry not to debate with us, they assign it as a reason to them, 'You are only boys in their hands.'" I do not know how you may feel about it who are in the field, but I will tell you how I feel: I never played a game with any body in my life, of any sort, whether it were in sport or reality, but what I always liked to see my opponent make a good fight. And if he beat me fairly I could take it good-naturedly; if he did not resort to undue and improper measures to defeat me, I always gave him the credit for his victory. I feel just this way now, that I would like to see that people make a good defense, the best they can—make a good fight, and if we cannot stand it we will be content to be defeated.

I have been told, and I apprehend that it was approximately true at all events, that it is the intention of the authorities in the West to send out something like ten or eleven thousand ministers this spring. They are probably convening in conference at the same time we are; their methods are different from ours, and it is not only possible but probable that they will send out a great army of them, and we will be under the necessity of defending our works against them aggressively; because I doubt if they will be any better prepared or any more willing to enter into the field of discussion now than they have been in the past. I hope, however (though sometimes it is said, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick"), I still hope that they will be compelled by some power, by some condition, to meet the issue. It seems to me that they ought to do it. And, I don't see how they have so long escaped it; and I hope that their younger element coming up among them will crowd that spirit of distrust and fear, if there is fear, to measure swords with us as antagonists on the fields of discussion.

I believe it to be due us not only from our numbers, but more especially from the position that we have occupied in this controversial field.

I congratulate the brethren upon one thing, and that is, that during the year past we have been under no necessity for revising or retracting any of the positions taken by the church. I have heard some things of individuals that I would not defend; but if they can, from their standpoint, as an individual worker, I ought not to object; but if they have assumed to defend from grounds that are not taken by the church, and have presented individual views as the views of the church, they must necessarily recede from them; the church will expect it. While the largest liberty is accorded to individuals, private opinions the church has nothing to do with; men must answer to God. Ministerial presentations the church has a right to inquire into, and if men presume to say that this is the faith of the church, and present their own opinion as such faith, the church has a right to inquire into it; from the President down; and if they fail to do that, they fail to take advantage of the means of defense which is given to the church to prevent undue encroachment, undue liberty.

So far as the treatment of the church to me as its presiding officer during the past is concerned, I have no complaint to make at all. I have tried to labor as I could, and have been very cordially received everywhere, where I have been, and have been strongly supported by my coworkers. I have labored under some difficulties, as you must all be aware; but that is neither here nor there. A man that has not, I would like to look at him and see how he has stood it. I know how some have stood it; they have been surrounded and environed by difficulties and burdens hard to bear; I know it because I have become acquainted with them, and know something about their conditions, and the manner in which they have conducted themselves under these trying circumstances; and I certainly feel to congratulate them upon the spirit of regard for men and love for God and humanity they have exhibited.

There is ample room for the exhibition of the finest qualities with which man is possibly endowed in this work of ours. While it is calculated to increase the hope and enhance the value of the human soul in the eyes of the proper thinker, I am sorry to say that it also has a faculty of revealing man in the lowest and most contemptible phases to which humanity can sink, until sometimes a sensitive man is almost ashamed that he belongs to the human race; and were it not for the hope that bye and bye all these untoward environments will be removed and men be emancipated from them, there is many a one that would simply say, "I have failed of the object to which I set out," and quit work and become a hermit in sentiment if not in fact. I hope, however, that this will not be the case with any of us during the year that is to come. I hope that the axiom, "He that endureth to the end," will become the secondary watchword of the ministry; to the ministry and the men at home—"He that endureth to the end." While we adopt the maxim of the society, "Onward and Upward," grand in its character, I believe that supplemented by this, "He that endureth to the end," will fortify us very largely against conditions that we are compelled to meet.

I may say that I have been under feelings of—I cannot say apprehension—but of mental distress for months, as to the issue of the present conference; but within the last ten days that has been removed, and I feel that whatever may transpire so far as any dealing of God with us is concerned directly, or whether he leaves us alone to plod along as we have and may do, the issue will be a good one to the main principles of the church and for the great body. I am aware that men disappointed frequently make mistakes in attributing their disappointment to somebody else beside themselves; but if we will as individuals and as a collective body reflect that the work is the Master's, and if after that we find fault with conditions that are controlled by him alone, it is finding fault with him; and as the history of the past has shown, he does not allow any human instrumentalities to intervene between him and the accomplishment of his purpose, whether the men are with you or with me, so we ought to understand he will continue his work; and while we would praise him for anything which might be given to us by which we should be enlarged or helped, at the same time we ought to be willing to say, "Thy will be done," and bow even to the stroke of the rod, if he has need to apply it; and I presume he knows whether he has such need or not.

I have always been averse, was when I was a boy and am yet, to casting my failure to accomplish what was expected of me upon somebody else, making him to bear the burden of my fault; and I did not when I was a boy shirk from the rod when the schoolmaster applied it when he thought it was necessary, by endeavoring to place the rod upon somebody else; and I feel in this work a good deal as I did when a boy. I remember a circumstance that occurred when Howard S. Corey was teacher—I do not know but what some present may know him. I had a comrade by the name of Allred, commonly called Jack—I don't know as he ever had any other name. He and I were tardy one day and when we got in the master sent us out into the swamp to get a hazel switch for the purpose of inflicting punishment upon us; and we went out into the brush, and I remember that I got a good, fair-sized hazel stick such as I thought I would like to use if I were the master. Jack hunted around and found one of the slender sprouts, very tender, and he cut that. When he got into the house the master examined them, and he took my switch and whipped Jack, and took Jack's and whipped me. The result of it was that I had to answer to Jack outside for having cut the bigger stick. That is only a boyish incident, but it had its influence upon me. It is the same principle that made the Psalmist say that he would rather fall into the hands of an offended God than to trust his enemies. I believe that is just the position we should occupy, that we would rather place ourselves, faulty as we are, without attempting a single excuse, into the hands of Him that knoweth the motive as well as the deed. Many of our motives are all right, and if all are we shall have no especial fear that we shall be submerged in the consequences, whatever they may be.

I feel now to ask you, as it is probable there may be some change in administration in the year to come, and some possible change in methods, that we shall be prepared for them. The financial conditions call for some change, and it is probable that they will have to be met. It is best for us to be cheerful, all of us, and do the best that we can; and if for the time we are hindered, let us take it as within the providence by which our work shall be finally made more possible and our good conserved.

The President then called for addresses from the brethren named, to which each responded. We also give their addresses herewith. W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve:—

It affords me great pleasure, as it does to you, to be here this morning under such favorable circumstances, and inspired with the hope and the faith that is planted in us in the gospel, and the gospel hope. In viewing the work so far as it has come under my observation during the last year, there is a hopeful side to it, there is that to encourage all the time rather than discourage. Although there are burdens, they have not been greater than they have been in the past, so far as my experience has been, taking it as a general rule, and in point of prejudice there has been a means to retard our work greatly in the past; but it is not so great to-day as it was many years ago. The work is really making friends. People that didn't use to consider us scarcely worth noticing begin to think that there is something good in our organization and people. It is not an uncommon thing to hear people say that our folks are good citizens, that the believers in this faith are good neighbors, endowed with good principle. While we have been aware of that all the time the world is learning that and they are beginning to feel that we really have a place in society, a right to existence where we are best known, so far as my observation goes. And in regard to representing the work personally, when called to defend it or speak in its favor, I do not know as I have ever been sustained better than in the past year. I think that is a hopeful sign, and that is true in regard to my co-associates. They have felt well in their ministerial labor. As I understand it in the proclamation of what we call the latter-day work, which is the latter-day gospel as well as the former-day gospel, which is to be preached under the inspiration of our heavenly Father, the specific statement is made that they should preach by the inspiration of the Spirit and not without it; that so long as our heavenly Father is with us in our ministerial labors, emphasizing and sustaining the word presented by the laborers that go out and cheering and comforting those that are home, we can well afford, it seems to me, to be content in holding up the banner and going forward whether our expectations are met in time or not. Where there is a great light it is turned on under some circumstances that we cannot solve. Of course, being in the East, there are not so many people belonging to the church as there are in the West, not so many laborers. A few years ago there were but few places comparatively speaking in the East where we received a welcome. Now we have so many openings that we cannot fill them: The constant cry is "More laborers." Now it is a good thought, especially when we contrast it with many larger organizations in the world that have more laborers than they can sustain; some of them scarcely know what to do with them. We have not enough. So this indicates a growth, an enlargement, not only sustaining the few identified with our organization, but interesting others. As long as we grow and develop in the right direction, there is no question about our success. It seems to me that we are making friends, that we are gaining. The indications are that the work is to triumph and accomplish that for which our heavenly Father has sent it into the world. I believe in the work. I am hopeful of its success; and I believe confidently, as much so as a person can, that God intends that this work shall win, and all that we have to do is to keep in harmony with it. If in our conferences or meetings, or Sunday schools difficulties arise we should remember that we all belong to one household, and so settle difficulties there. We should stand on deck on the old ship, and when we get wrong, get right. There is no greater light, there is no better school, there is no place that has ever presented itself to my mind where an individual can get a better understanding of what he ought to do in this world, to be a proper citizen, to be a Christian and to be prepared to enter heaven when he may be called upon, than in this work, and that is the reason that I am in it. There is discipline here, and there is light. There is a chance for every man and woman to use all of their powers, an opportunity for them to use their talents and ability in the best way possible and to the accomplishment of the highest and grandest results.

God bless us and his work, is my prayer. Amen.

E. C. Briggs, of the Twelve:—

I am glad to meet with you. Since sitting here and hearing the speeches of the present hour, indeed it is gratifying. Perhaps I feel as much moved upon in gratitude to my heavenly Father for the present hour and the circumstances surrounding us at this hour, as any man in divine presence. This work is everything to me. It is one I have been interested in all my life since I can remember anything touching God or his work from the standpoint of truth and holiness, and there has never been a time when the work and its progress seemed brighter and more glorious than to-day. I had the privilege of attending the first conference in 1852, and have attended a great many since, and have looked down to this very time in which the work should have such a glorious presence as it now seems to open before us. If ever I felt glad and hopeful in the triumph of the work, it is to-day. The obstacles that have been in our way to me have long since passed away, and the difficulties that now confront us are matters that do not agitate me to feel so much wrought up in feeling that I am afraid that there will disasters get in the way and stumbling-blocks that will retard this work. I have no such fear. This work is onward and upward, as affirmed in 1852. God holds the reins in his own hands, and he will continue to marshal on the hosts until Israel is made free. I believe he to-day has the reins in his own hands, and that he will work wonderfully to the development of this cause. The position that we have occupied in the past, etc., are matters of but little importance in comparison with the difficulties that may be in the future, and if we are prepared, and I feel to meet those issues frankly and plainly, these oppositions to the work are matters of little importance if we stand together, united and strong. And the spirit that moves in opposition is the same spirit that moved upon those members that fought their father Nephi, and Samuel, you remember. That same opposition is now abroad in this apostasy. That we may have to meet, and as the Nephites were, I trust we may be, more devoted, united, and engaged, realizing that God and his work will be onward and upward, until the final triumph and this Reorganization will be known and celebrated throughout the entire earth.

May God bless you.

Joseph Luff, of the Twelve:—

The past year has been, to me, one of study rather than of actual work. I have been so conditioned physically that it has been impossible for me to do more than a tithe of what was in my mind to do when I attended the last conference. My faith in the work is stronger than it was then. I thought then it couldn't become much stronger than it was; but I think I have reasons for saying that I feel safer to-day than then. I attribute this feeling to the experiences that have come to me while I have been under severe trials, though to others they might have been but trivial had they been called upon to endure them. I have been made to understand that God's disciplinary program, as ordained for individuals, is best, and, if accepted, in its details as it comes to us without any ability to foresee its coming, will do more towards our perfecting than anything else. When regarding the general work and its outcome, I entertain no fear whatever. If God in his wisdom should ordain that the ending of my physical career to-day would be a better contribution to the building up and extending of his cause than for me to live for twenty years, I feel more like putting forth my hand and welcoming the decision than ever before. It is the work that concerns me most, and I am satisfied in my mind that God makes no mistakes, and though fears have been entertained by me that sometimes there was a little more of the human than of the Divine in some of our proceedings my mind has been relieved in that regard, and I have been made during the past year to feel sorry, numbers of times for attitudes that I have assumed, though not for the motives that prompted me to assume and maintain them; but for the awkward way in which I assumed them, by reason of which I have failed to voice my motive in my attitude, and there have been times in the year, when thoughts running along these lines have come to my mind in quiet and solitude, and I have felt even glad at times that the conditions were such as to compel me to think a little deeper than I had before thought, and to take my soundings and measure myself. There have been times during the year when I have gone to my knees and asked the Lord why he had forsaken me, and I feel that even these experiences have been sanctified even in the short time that has followed since, to my spiritual good.

My sympathies have been deepened; my hope in the gospel and assurance in the wisdom of God have been confirmed and my comprehension of the character of God and his work has been widened to some extent at least. I cannot say, like the majority of the brethren, that I have experienced in my preaching work a greater measure of the Spirit than ever before. I have labored under a disadvantage but notwithstanding this, am able to report truthfully what I have already stated. I feel hopeful as to the future, but I have been led to believe that when the enemy marshals his forces more strongly, directs his attacks more ingeniously, and adopts new methods of attack, that he is making the discovery that that which he is attacking is stronger than it used to be. When I find him adopting new methods in reference to me, I feel that he has found the old ones won't succeed any longer, and that I have at least so far outwitted him. If we can be but faithful and retain our humility, put our trust in God for the exigencies of the ever present, we will under the grace and favor of God compel the adversary to be continually adopting new methods.

I have felt to repeat frequently since coming to the town, what I have heard from several of the brethren, "It is good to be a Latter Day Saint." Those who live in harmony with God will always be satisfied with this work and only in departing from Him will doubt concerning the work come into our mind. I want to perform so far as I may, the work that belongs to the office I hold, that when the answering time shall be ushered in, I shall, without fear, be able to stand and present my life course and work to divine inspection, simply asking that the motive that prompted my service shall be considered alongside of it, and I believe I will be contented with the judgment that shall come.

I feel anxious that while we are together in these conference sessions, we shall not only enjoy, in an ordinary sense, the peace and blessing that comes as a rule from such association as this, but that we shall have such tokens of Divine favor as shall inspire us in the effort to double our diligence and push us along. May the Lord so bless us that each of us may be able to answer at last for the privileges that were ours while here, occupying in the space allotted or appointed us in the wisdom of God in such way that the space assigned us may not fail in evidence of love and consecration on our part. If we can but at last present before the Lord a life rounded out, a character well filled with good motives and works of love for humanity, we shall need no better certificate to offer to God than that we love Him.

My experience of the past year, as a consequence of the work I have been engaged in, has been so different from that of the years that have passed that it seems impossible for me to make a comparison. As you all know I have not been in the active ministry, but engaged in other work, and it is quite possible that I may not be as much alive to present issues as others are. I have become more acquainted in my work with individuals who were prominent in the work in the beginning, than I have been conversant with the labors of my brethren at the present time. But even in this, I have received strength and I am more thoroughly convinced than ever before that our fathers builded better than they knew; and that the work they did was of a more permanent character than they thought. I have also become more thoroughly convinced than ever before that the destinies of the work have been ruled and overruled by divine providence. I do not believe that mistakes have not been made. I am convinced that they have; but even when we become impressed with the fact that men have made mistakes, and that notwithstanding those mistakes the work has been directed higher, and into better conditions, it is more evidence than ever before that God is in it. There have been mistakes enough made, not only by ourselves, but by those who preceded us, to have overthrown any work in which God was not engaged; and the very fact that the mistakes have not had the effect to overthrow the work is evidence that higher power than our own has been governing and directing in this matter. I have no doubt when I look over the past and see how God has overruled, and that out of every emergency he has found a way of escape and has led his people through all the difficulties which we may be placed in, that in the present or future, if we are only faithful to the truth as we have received it, they will be equally as triumphantly met and that this work will go on, whether you and I continue in it or not. We may fall out as others have done, but the work is of God, and it will triumph.

As has been expressed by my brethren before me, I am yet in the faith. If there is anything better than this latter-day work, I do not know what it is, nor am I competent to appreciate it. All the good there is in me is the product of this latter-day work; all the failings that I have are simply the efforts of the adversary to hinder the progress of the work. We have heard some of the brethren say they would have been this, that, or the other, if it had not been for this latter-day work; that they would have been unbelievers, skeptics. I frankly confess that I do not know what would have been my destiny, what would have been my path, further than that it was the vicissitudes of the work that caused my father and mother to meet and I do not know where I would have been or what I would have been without it. I am satisfied as I said before that all we have to do is to be cautious, and careful, and to maintain our integrity in the work. The work is going on whether we do or not, and either here or hereafter we will witness its triumph; and I trust we shall all be faithful to what will be required at our hands. As to the future, I have but little anxiety. As an individual I do not care what capacity I may fill; I do not care what work God may appoint me to do; if he finds that there are others better capable to occupy the place that I now occupy, and he wishes me to do something else, just so he approves of what I do is all I ask.

E. L. Kelley, Presiding Bishop:—

The year just passed has been one of anxiety in the department where I work not only with myself, but I believe with all the agents that are working directly in the interest of church temporalities; and there have been a number of times during the year, had it not been for the fact that I knew that I could trust the Master that I would have felt like, and would have thrown up my hands and said, "It will not do to risk going forward any farther." From a worldly standpoint, considering the critical times, no individual would have undertaken to accomplish what has been done; and in doing what has been done in the department in which I work it has been only from the standpoint that believing without doubt that Christ sent these ministers in the field and that he would meet the issue sooner or later. He has done so, and it has not been your speaker, nor any individual. It has been Him who has promised to sustain if they go forth and trust in him. While this is true, it has required on the part of the ministry, and in many instances on the part of their wives, on the part of the Bishop and the Agents, the exercise of constant and continued trust in Him. And those who have done so have not failed to my knowledge in any place.

By reason of this added evidence I am confident in the work; confident in the future of the work; and I stand to-day as I have throughout the year, and have repeatedly so stated to my heavenly Father, that if I can work another place better I will be thankful to him to place another where I have been standing. He knows that I do not ask to stand where I am when I am not properly performing the duties of the office. I prefer to work where my work will be approved and knowing that the Lord knows this I have been content whatever may have been the criticisms of men, to risk the results in his hand. No one knows the perplexities of the past year more than our President. We have had burdens by reason of the undertaking of this body some three years ago of raising means for the building and starting of a college; this that we may have an educational institution where our children might have access to the ways of knowledge without being placed in the paths of sin.

We have had the burden of building the Home which was also ordered by the body; and the other numerous cares have been such, that I have not been able to attend to personal matters during the year, preferring not to leave my post of duty for personal business. These matters in the end, however, were adjusted by others, so all are safe.

I have confidence in the work, in those who are engaged in the work, and trust that none of us will put forth a slacking hand in the undertakings for the ensuing year.

Charles Derry, President of the High Priests' Quorum:—

I am glad to be with you. It does me good to hear the testimonies of my brethren with respect to the work. I am glad to tell you that I still am in the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ. When I put my hand to this work it was with the intention never to take it back. That determination still remains. I have been blessed in the little labors I have performed, but I have not done as much as I would have been glad to have done, but I realize that God has been with me to bless me in my efforts. I have seen times when it seemed to me as though I could serve the interests of the cause of God better to let some one else tell the gospel story than myself; also for the development of those who are entering into the work, hence have not occupied as many times perhaps in declaring the truth of God as I might have done. As for my faith as to the issue of this work I am glad to say I am with my brethren. I realize that this work is in God's hands, and while I have not perhaps the most implicit faith in the wisdom of humanity, I have an abiding faith in God. I realize that he will accomplish his own purposes, and that there is power in this work to make men better, nobler, and lift them nearer to God. I thank him for that. May God help us all to continue faithful to this work, willing to trust Him where we cannot trace him, is my prayer in Christ's name.

J. C. Crabb, of the High Priests:—

I will say that I have implicit confidence in the triumph of this work. I have been at ease so far as disturbances might arise touching the progress of the work. During a conference held at Independence years ago, I was fully convinced that this work was in God's hands, and that he would take care of it.

During the last year, I cannot say that I have always been made to rejoice, that is, at all times. I have had some dark hours. Yet while trying to present the gospel, I believe that my mind has never been clearer than during the past year. I, therefore, ask an interest in your prayers that I may continue in the work; having been made to realize, as remarked before, that the work is of God. And therefore ask the blessings of God upon this conference. I am of the opinion that we will receive blessings during the sessions that lie before us.

May our prayers be to this end in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Duncan Campbell, Senior President of the Seventy:—

I am in the faith to-day, and my hope is stronger and brighter than it has ever been before as I learn more of the latter-day work and my brethren every day. I am confidently looking for its final triumph and I feel assured that my triumph will be such if I continue faithful. My hope is in it; otherwise I would be nothing.

William Anderson, of the High Priests:—

I have been thinking while I was listening with pleasure to my brethren that I have tried in the past and expect in the future to be myself. In some respects the work never appeared brighter or better. I don't think I was ever more satisfied in my mind that God is in the work. The past year has been a very busy one with me, and in some respects very satisfactory; in others very trying. I cannot say that everything has looked as prosperous and promising as I have seen in the past, yet I am conscious that I have had a better understanding of the work and better opportunity to know the work than I have in the past. I have felt though that there was a good deal of humanity manifested by us as a people in carrying on the divine plan; that God has blessed me while he has permitted me to be tried, and severely tried, and to-day I might repeat the sentiments that have been expressed here to-day, that God is in the work and that he will bring it to a triumphant end; and I believe that there is a great deal of room for improvement.

It seems to me that my mind has been led to realize that we have greater opportunities than we have taken advantage of, but I can say I have been led to test the promise of God, that I have had to have faith and trust in God when otherwise I have seen my way clearer. I have no disposition to murmur or feel that that I have not been blessed and sustained by my heavenly Father and my brethren and the church in a general sense. I can say of course that in the present as in previous years I have not done a great deal of preaching; that I have tried to be useful to this church wherever my lot has been cast. I never had greater evidence of God's Spirit caring for me and being with me in my efforts, weak though they may have been, to represent the work, than in the past conference year.

I feel satisfied in my mind the plan of work for me; that is, to do the very best I can to cast in my mite to represent this truth and to let God take care of the consequences.

R. J. Anthony, President of Seventy:—

It has been stated here and at other places that a man laboring in a certain line always has his mind fixed there and can hardly refer to anything else. There have been some thoughts presented here this morning that have caused me to look back over some of the years of the past, and I think I may state right here that all have known of some of the bad things that have grown out of this latter-day work or what the people are pleased to call "Mormonism." And the experience of all who have labored in the field is that those things have been the means of raising up stumblingblocks. Since I have heard some things that have been expressed here this morning I am almost converted to the fact that it has been a good thing. I believe that out of all of this wrong good will come to the work.

The President in his remarks stated his hope and belief that the issue must be met. In looking over the past history of the work I remember that the idea was to preach the gospel to the people that were once Latter Day Saints, I mean to the people in Utah. And somehow or other it was thought that I ought to go there with some others to talk, and we had great hopes we could talk kind words, and all these things would accomplish a great deal; and it was said that the gospel was the means to accomplish all this. I have been told by some good brethren that I have pursued the wrong course. We have talked plainly, there have been a great many things done that the Reorganized Church believed were wrong, and I was of the opinion that it was proper under certain conditions and at the proper time to tell the people and explain to them where the wrong was; but others differed from me and were of the opinion that we should present the gospel just like we were preaching it to people that have never heard of the latter-day work.

I found in my work that the only course for me to pursue was to meet the condition that confronted me right there. I know that people can stand away off sometimes and guess upon something and see it, O, just as clear as the sun! But if they were placed right directly there where they had to come in direct conflict with the issue, the probability is that they could not see quite so clearly. When a man is fighting the battle let me tell you that right there are his energies, and there is where he has got to meet the conflict.

It was said that the church should be organized agreeably to the law of the country. I discovered in my warfare there that it was just as necessary to call the people's attention to the fact that Latter Day Saints should be the best citizens in the world as it was to preach faith and repentance and a belief in God and Christ—just as necessary to get the people to know that they were under obligations to the authorities and powers that be as they were to worship God; and I feel proud of it that the Reorganized Church has been the means and the power in the hands of God in giving the nation light in regard to this wonderful work. I know that it was through the ministration of the elders calling the people's attention directly to the laws of the land that the gospel should be in harmony with them, and that their lives should conform to all that is good. I know that the people, when they come to see this, had something then upon which they could fight the battle.

I remember writing a number of articles in my weakness for the benefit of those who were fighting the political issues there. Governor Thomas, of Utah, at one time invited me to his office, laid the case before me, and asked me to make a clear statement to him in writing of all the difference that existed between the Reorganized Church and the church in Utah. I did it to the best of my ability and that was put in the hands of the senators of the United States and of congressmen, until with that that others had presented the people began to know something of this latter-day work; and it was through this and by these means that finally the people were compelled to abandon one of the chiefest dogmas of the church.

When Bishop Kelley was in Utah and took the depositions from the people of the Utah church for the Temple Lot Suit, it caused people to see again and understand more clearly the relation the church held to the government, and to all that was good, and was the means of reflecting light everywhere throughout the land. And right here the fact indeed is presented that there is going to be an army of missionaries coming up from the Utah church in that land all over the country, the United States, and Europe; and it will be just as necessary that elders should be prepared to meet the issues as it is that the work should go on. Good will come from that. I can see in my own mind, and my way of looking at things that it is one of the grandest and best methods for the Reorganized Church that they could possibly make. The more sent the better; the line must be drawn clearly. People can't help but see, and themselves doing this will force the issue sooner or later. It cannot be avoided; it will come just as sure as the world stands.

I am not prepared to say that we are going to make converts from that people by the thousands or anything of the kind; but it will remove stumblingblocks, it will be the means of preparing the way for the preaching of the gospel everywhere. To my mind it is a good thing. I believe that good will come out of all this. I think now that the people are in better condition to fight the battle with what is published, and with what they can gather; and the work that has been presented to us in the Church History that is now before us is one that will strengthen the defenses wondrously. The history is going to be a good thing, and we can use it in a way that will be very good.

We have all talked about our hope and confidence in the work. I am confident that the work will roll on. We can all look back a good many years when we were only a speck on the earth; that is about all that we are to-day, but the influence is widening. I discovered in my field this last year that people feel more kindly to us than ever before; they know and understand that there is a difference between the people yonder and here; and one thing I want to say is this: When the elders talk plainly to the people they accomplish the most good, that is a fact when they told the story just as it was. I know I heard one of our ministers in conversation with a man from Utah, about the first thing he said to him was, "Adam-God and Blood-atonement." He was a young man and he didn't know anything about it. It has been said here that they don't know anything about the history. That is true. The young man was hurt; he didn't know anything about it; he didn't believe that anything of the kind had ever been said. I have never charged them with that directly, but when I get into the fight and that comes up, then I tell them about it. I want to say this; I don't know whether my saying will be of any benefit to anyone or not: You meet these men, and just as sure as you live they will draw you right in, and bring out all that you need to say; they can't keep out of a certain channel to save their lives. I don't care what you talk to them about, they will tell you that they believe in polygamy, before they get through. That is a sure thing, and when they do that, then you have a chance to tell them about all the bad things that came along; and polygamy was the very root and foundation of "Adam-God and Blood-atonement." It means the very thing that a man pledges himself to; that rather than divulge anything of the kind he will have his throat cut from ear to ear. It means what it says; and as he doesn't like to do it himself, consequently somebody had to be set apart and ordained to do it, under those principles taught in Utah.

I believe in the gospel of Jesus Christ; it is the best that there is in the world. It is good. But now I believe that that work out there should be represented with the largest defense that we can engage to get people to see. Every once in awhile you will find a man that begins to see. It helps the cause a little anyway. So far as converts is concerned, it amounts to nothing. I feel proud of the work that has been done, it has been the means of removing prejudice everywhere.

I feel glad when the brethren tell me about the good that has come to the work abroad. I am satisfied the Lord will continue with his people. I am confident that the work will accomplish all that God essayed to do.

All received the close attention of the audience who had hearing ears and, we believe, understanding minds, being in close sympathy with the speakers.

The presiding officers were authorized to fix the time and character of meetings and appoint speakers and those to have charge.

The President stated a wish to expedite business, but not to hurry it, and appointed the time for business sessions at two o'clock. He urged promptness, as one of the chiefest of the virtues, and announced the sessions to open at the tap of the bell.

Prayer meetings were fixed for nine o'clock in the morning, or earlier if found better to so arrange; brethren in charge to allow twenty minutes for changing audiences at the close.

Preaching services were fixed at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

The organization was completed by choice of the following additional officers; Choristers, Brn. B. M. Anderson, F. G. Pitt, A. M. Chase, T. A. Hougas—they to choose organists; ushers: Brn. C. F. Church, John Gillespie, J. L. Williams, R. C. Elvin, C. B. Bergersen, and E. S. Allen.

The doxology was sung and President Smith dismissed the assembly.

The afternoon business session was opened at two o'clock sharp. "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning" was sung, the choir comprising the entire audience, and Elder M. T. Short offered prayer.

The committee on credentials made their report. It was quite lengthy, showing a large list of delegates appointed. Several brethren requested their names stricken from some district delegations that they might represent others not so strongly or not at all represented. The chair granted the requests, there being no objection. A number of districts were stricken from the delegate list because of failure to appoint delegates.

Sr. Belle James was appointed stenographer for the conference.

Bro. J. S. Snively was added to the Southern Illinois district delegation. Brn. J. W. Wight and J. W. Gillen were authorized to represent the Australia districts. Further changes in the credentials list were referred to the committee.

The Quorum of the Twelve reported the following action on the death of President William W. Blair deceased:—

To the General Conference:—

Resolutions on the death of Pres. W. W. Blair. Adopted by the Quorum of the Twelve, Lamoni, Iowa, March 22, 1897.

Whereas, in the providence of God the removal by death of our esteemed brother and colaborer, President William Wallace Blair, has been permitted, during the past year; and

Whereas, the life and labors of our departed brother have held a conspicuous place in the history and development of the Church of Christ since its reorganization; and

Whereas, his literary, moral, and social qualities, and the untiring zeal with which he employed his powers in helping to advance the church from its conditions of feebleness to those of prestige and power in the world, under the blessing of God, have won for him our respect and admiration;

Resolved, that in his death we recognize a loss to the church of a man of intellectual ability and moral worth, a brother loyal to the faith, and a minister whose delight was to serve well the great cause which had secured the consecration of his energy.

Resolved further, that while we deeply regret the need for his removal from the church militant, we nevertheless bow with reverence to the will of our heavenly Father, and record our expression of profound sympathy for the widow and family, so terribly bereaved by his death, together with the assured hope that the church triumphant has gained to the full measure of our loss, and that our brother has found deserved and eternal rest.

Resolved further, that a copy of these preambles and resolutions be presented to Sister W. W. Blair, also that our action be submitted in Quorum Report to the General Conference, at as early a period after its convening as possible.

Presented in behalf of the Quorum of Twelve,
HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec.

The action was unanimously adopted by a rising vote. The report of Bro. R. S. Salyards, Church Secretary, was read. It contained, among other matter, lists of applications from elders, priests, teachers, and deacons for enrollment in quorums, and will appear in full in the regular minutes. The Secretary was authorized to receive and insert information concerning subsequent changes in the applications sent.

The report of Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Church Recorder, was read, and will also appear in full in the regular minutes. We extract the following figures from the statistical list: Total membership in 1896, 34,814; baptisms since last report 4,161; number "received" 1,637; number "removing" by letter 1,260; expelled 368; died 635; gain 3,564; net gain 3,538; new ordinations 398; marriages 352. Total membership to date 38,352. The largest net gain of any previous year was 2,400. Over one third of the losses by death and more than one half of losses by expulsion were reported from the Society Islands and from reports covering a period of several years. Largest gain from Society Islands branches, because some reports, forwarded through Bro. Devore, cover periods as long as six and ten years. Iowa is next with a gain of 371; Missouri 353, Michigan 303, Illinois with 272, etc. The sisters had rendered valuable aid as branch and district clerks, taking the lead in efficiency. Many of the brethren had done well as secretaries, and work in that department was becoming better, improving upon the difficult times of the past when efficient clerical help was not so readily obtainable. Forty new branches had been organized and reported.

The auditing committee on Herald Office accounts next reported; Brn. R. M. Elvin, F. M. Weld, and J. M. Terry:—

Summary:—Total receipts $24,262.76; expenditures $22,560.66; cash in hand February 27, 1897, $1,702.10. Assets, present value $37,727.00. Liabilities $23,740.19. Net loss past year $6,249.01. During the past year there had been a falling off on subscriptions to HERALD, Hope, and Autumn Leaves; also on sales of Harp, Harmony, Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, Scriptures, and Voice of Warning. There had been an increase in sale of Hymnal. That with the sale of Church History made the business done equal that of the previous year. The heavy net loss reported was because "the estimate placed upon machinery and tools of the bookbindery, the machinery, tools, and type of the press department, are invoiced at present actual value, while electro and stereotyped plates are invoiced at less than the original cost and some . . . at their metal value."

The committee also urged that the duties and privileges of the auditing committee be defined.

Brethren appointed in 1896 to ordain various brethren to the office of high priest reported having so ordained.

The President stated the action of a council of President, Twelve, and Bishop in appointing Bro. J. F. Burton to the Society Islands mission; also recognition by the council of Pres. A. H. Smith, President of the Twelve by his appointment as Acting Counselor in the Presidency; which were indorsed by the body.

A request from the Little Sioux district, requesting "the General Conference to authorize each district to issue letters of appointment to the missionaries laboring in the several districts who are spending their whole time in the ministry but who are not under General Conference appointment," was adopted.

The following concerning fasting and prayer was adopted:—

Resolved, that we record our approval of the action of President Joseph Smith and others, in appointing a day of fasting and prayer for the entire church, prior to the convening of conference.

Resolved further, that as a body, we continue our earnest supplication to God regarding the objects by them placed before us, and that we thus uphold our President in seeking further revelation bearing upon the present needs of the church.

Two reports from ministers not under general appointment were referred to the presidents of their respective districts.

Brn. F. T. Bradfield, G. V. Brown, and E. Weedmark were added to the list of ushers. Srs. Roxanna Gaylord, Nellie Chatburn, and Belle James were appointed organists. Adjournment, benediction by President Smith.

The evening service was in charge of Elder J. M. Stubbart, Elder E. C. Briggs preached the sermon.

Wednesday, the 7th.—The Sunday school district officers met at eight o'clock in the basement and participated in an hour's session in institute work. The meeting was reported as very interesting and instructive. This work is to continue every [morning while the workers remain. Various quorums also announced sessions at different places throughout the city.

The prayer service at nine o'clock was in charge of Brn. J. M. Brown and L. D. Ullom.

At the eleven o'clock preaching service Elder M. T. Short addressed the assembly, Bro. W. A. McDowell assisting.

At two o'clock the usual opening exercises were held. The prayer was offered by Elder Charles Derry, an earnest plea for divine wisdom necessary for the work before the conference.

The credentials committee further reported.

A report was read from Bro. Frederick M. Smith, Church Librarian. The report was adopted with an amendment that instead of the amount mentioned, the sum of seventy-five dollars per year, already provided for purchase of books, be hereafter expended by the Librarian with the advice and consent of the First Presidency. The report will appear in full in regular minutes.

Bro. Smith also reported as Church Historian, stating progress to date. For full report, see minutes.

The committee on revision of the Voice of Warning reported; in effect that after due consideration it was not deemed advisable to revise that work, and radically change the work of P. P. Pratt, the writer; but that if another work of the kind be needed, it should be prepared.

Two reports were read from the Board of Publication:—

To the General Conference in Session:—The Board of Publication to which was referred the matter of getting out Church History at last General Conference would respectfully report that early after the adjournment of conference we took the matter under consideration and arranged for the work by securing the services of Brn. Joseph Smith and Heman C. Smith to write and compile the History.

These brethren entered upon their work at once and the result has been the issuing of the first volume, which is now in the hands of a great many of the saints.

The manuscript of the work entire is now almost complete and the second volume is of such importance to the church and the work as an aid to the saints and missionary force, that in the judgment of the Board it should be issued at the earliest practicable time.

The Board of Publication further report that they selected as Historian under the resolution referred to us, Bro. Frederick M. Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, at a meeting of the Board May 1, 1896.

Very respectfully submitted,

LAMONI, Iowa, April 7, 1897.

The Board of Publication respectfully present the following as their report. During the financial year just closed, the periodicals, HERALD, Hope, Autumn Leaves, and Sunday School Quarterlies have been published; the first volume of the Church History has been published and placed on sale, and the manuscripts for the second volume are ready to place in the hands of the compositors as soon as we can see the way clear financially to do so; the boiler and engine and steam heating apparatus have been changed for a gasoline engine and stoves; the Board, in connection with the Auditors, have made a new inventory of the book plates, machinery, and type used in the Herald Office and Bindery, and placed the value of the same much lower than heretofore.

The plates for the Tullidge History to which the attention of conference was called by the Auditing Committee in their report under date of March 17, 1892, together with the steel plates from which the cuts in it were printed were reduced from $2,080, to $50, the supposed value of the metal they contain. To this reduction, with that on the Harmony and other plates, and machinery, and type, and depreciations of values, is attributable the decrease in the amount of assets as shown by the auditors' report for the past year.

Notwithstanding the fact that the receipts for books and publications for the past year have been $1,000 less than for the previous year, had former values been maintained and additions for new History plates, and type, and gasoline engine credited, the gain would have reached fully $500 for the year.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 3, 1897.

The action of the Board in appointing a historian, also the compilers and writers of the Church History, was adopted.

President Smith announced the names of members of the High Council present, stating the existence of a vacancy caused by the death of Bro. David Chambers, and that Bro. C. E. Butterworth, of the High Priests, had been selected to act with the Council in cases to be considered during the present conference.

A resolution authorizing the Secretary to permit Zion's Ensign representative to have access to conference matters passed upon, was adopted.

Manuscript for a German edition of the Book of Covenants, translated and prepared by Bro. Robert Garlich, of the Far West district, was referred to the Board of Publication. This, if found worthy of publication and issued in its time, will prove a necessary and valuable addition to our literature; and for which our German brethren will look, with desire for the interests of the truth among the German speaking people of the world, so largely represented in the various missions. No doubt their anticipations will be realized as the Board finds it possible and expedient.

The report of the archaeological committee was made the special order for Thursday at 2:30 p. m.

The President answered some questions; one that if the State Legislature of Iowa had passed a law against the "faith cure," it did not affect the practice of the elders of the church in administering, but should it so be claimed, the courts must determine the matter.

President Smith also announced that President A. H. Smith would act as Acting Counselor to the President in cases to come before the High Council during the conference.

Announcements were made and the assembly stood adjourned; benediction by Bro. James McKiernan.

Preaching at 7:30 by Bro. W. H. Kelley, Bro. J. C. Clapp assisting.

Thursday, the 8th.—Prayer service, now appointed at 8:30 a. m., in charge of Brn. F. J. Ebeling and S. W. Simmons.

Preaching at eleven o'clock by Bro. A. M. Baker, Bro. I. N. Roberts assisting. The writer has not yet been privileged to attend the prayer or preaching services, hence cannot well do more than state that they were held.

The business session at two o'clock was opened with the hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' name;" prayer offered by Elder J. H. Lake; President Joseph Smith in the chair.

After the minutes were read the President stated the time limit for introduction of new business—the next day, two o'clock.

A letter from Elder James Caffall, now in Great Britain, was read, and ordered spread upon the minutes. It urged sufficient sacrifice to admit of financial aid to the Board of Publication, that it be relieved of present conditions caused by neglect of some to pay accounts on subscriptions, orders, etc.; also that General Conferences and reunions be less frequent, because costly, and that the conference adjourn to meet at headquarters April 6, 1901, or subject to the call of the President.

The special order of the day was the report of the committee on American Archaeology. Elder J. W. Gillen was called to the chair by President Joseph Smith. The remainder of the session was occupied in reading a lengthy report from the committee. Bro. F. M. Sheehy pointed out the localities referred to, on two large maps provided by the committee, on which Book of Mormon lands, cities, migrations, etc., were indicated. The report—that read and an additional one yet to be presented, were ordered published in the minutes. They will also be published in special pamphlet form. We will not dwell at length upon the excellent report of the committee. It will speak to the reader as to its worth, and for the labors of the brethren who prepared it.

The hymn, "Book of Mormon," No. 741 was sung, and Bishop Kelley dismissed the assembly.

Bro. J. H. Lake preached at the evening service, Elder J. T. Davis assisting him, in charge.

Friday, the 9th.—Prayer meeting was opened at 8:30 in charge of Brn. G. E. Harrington and George Kemp.

Preaching at 10:30 by Elder L. F. Daniel, Bro. G. W. Robley in charge of the meeting.

Business was resumed at two o'clock,

Pres. Joseph Smith in the chair; prayer by Elder J. W. Wight. Minutes read, approved.

The Third Quorum of Elders and Third Quorum of Priests reported.

A matter involving boundary lines of the Pittsburg, Kirtland, and Ohio districts was referred to members of the Ohio district delegation present for report to this conference.

Items of new business were read.

A resolution fixing the final adjournment to meet April 6, 1898, followed by an amendment naming 1899, was deferred till Monday afternoon—the 12th.

In answer to question President Smith stated that Doctrine and Covenants 17:13 was understood by the church to refer to district conferences.

A resolution providing for a convention of the ministry of the General Conference, to discuss tent work and other matters connected with general missionary and local labors, was disposed of by a motion providing for such a meeting on Monday, the 12th, from eight a. m. to noon.

The requests of the priests, teachers, and deacons for ex officio rights was taken up. A resolution with a view to amend the Book of Rules to so provide was presented and discussed.

Pending consideration adjourned.

Preaching at 7:30 p. m. by Elder Heman C. Smith, Elder C. P. Faul assisting.

Saturday, the 10th.—Morning prayer meeting at 8:30 in charge of Elders J. T. Kinnaman and H. E. Moler.

At 10:30 preaching by Elder S. W. L. Scott, the minister liberally endowed with initials as well as ability to preach well, and commonly known as "Leonard," who was assisted by Elder Andrew Barr.

The usual business session was presided over by Pres. Joseph Smith. Prayer was offered by Elder John Hawley. The minutes were then read and adopted.

Privilege to correct its report was granted to the Third Quorum of Elders.

The Secretary's ex officio list was read and completed by adding the names of all such present.

The Fourth Quorum of Elders reported. A report from the First Quorum of Elders was next presented.

The matters deferred from yesterday's session, the motion "that priests, teachers, and deacons be allowed voice and vote in General Conferences when present," and the substitute therefor, "Resolved, that the Book of Rules, page 158, chapter 16, section 175, be amended by inserting after the word 'elders' in third line from the bottom, the words 'priests, teachers, and deacons' was taken up, and speeches limited to five minutes.

The first paragraph of the first draft of the Rules of Representation, reported to the General Conference of 1881, was called for and read, and later, the second paragraph. Discussion followed, and an incidental motion permitting priests, teachers, and deacons to take part in the discussion, was adopted.

A motion providing that instruction on the matter be sought through prayer and revelation was laid on the table.

A motion to defer until next General Conference, that districts and branches might instruct their delegates upon the matter, was also lost.

The substitute was then placed upon its passage and lost; also the original motion, the vote being 61 for to 138 against on the latter.

President Smith made the following statement concerning the representation question, in connection with past and present actions thereon:—

I suppose it may be accounted an unfortunate thing that the history of the past is not familiar to the greater number of those present; and you will some of you be surprised when I make the statement that I have never been heard in discussion on this proposition and was ruled out by a good large minority at the fall conference of which one of our brethren spoke. Therefore I have kind of kept quiet. I have done this because it has been said by some inconsiderately, "I think that Pres. Smith had too much power and that men voted because he was in favor or against a proposition." But I believe that has been exploded, however, by the action of the bodies of the church in the past; but I would dislike to see what I fancy sometimes I have seen that some men think it a virtue and that they are entitled to credit for voting against Pres. Smith without the merit of the case being taken into their favor.

It is just as broad as it is long, in my thinking, and you ought not to think that a man of my temperament would keep from being now and then touched at either of these propositions because I believe, in my official and private acts and character, I have never denied the right of a human being to his speech and his action untrammelled by any action of mine. I have never attempted to hypnotize a man, I do not know that I know how, I know that I could not many that I see before me; neither have I ever asked a man to yield his manhood on my account, I would not do it before God or before the Devil. I believe my history bears me out in this statement. I am wonderfully pleased at the good nature of the representation here. I believe, as was stated by one brother, that we have never met in conference with a better spirit prevailing than we have now.

The following memorial on the death of Elder David Chambers, was presented by a committee of that body. It was adopted, and a copy ordered sent to his widow.

Whereas, it has pleased God in his good providence to remove from our midst our worthy brother and co-laborer, David Chambers; and

Whereas; in him we recognized a good and efficient member of the High Council, as also an efficient, faithful worker in every department of the church wherein he was called to act, be it

Resolved, that we as President, and members of the Standing High Council of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints take this means of expressing, so far as our meager language can, our deep regret at the loss from our number of this our departed brother; but while we mourn our loss, we rejoice in the blessed assurance afforded in the gospel that our heavenly Father doeth all things well, and that our brother has, in infinite wisdom, been taken to the paradise of God, preparatory to his receiving a glorious reward, which is laid up for all those who love the appearance of the Lord Jesus Christ; and we hereby extend our deepest sympathy with his bereaved but faithful widow, praying that God may bless, comfort, and sustain her through life, and in the end give unto her an abundant entrance into the rest that remains for the people of God.

ASA S. COCHRAN.

CHARLES DERRY.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 10, 1897.

The following from the High Council, nominating Bro. Charles E. Butterworth to fill the vacancy in that body, was unanimously adopted:—

LAMONI, Iowa, April 10, 1897.

To the General Conference; Greeting:—A vacancy having occurred in the High Council through the death of Bro. David Chambers, this is to give due notice that the President of the High Council has nominated High Priest, Charles E. Butterworth, to fill the vacancy. The Council ratified the nomination and requests that you provide for the ordination.

In gospel bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN, Sec.

The Ohio district delegation to whom was referred the question of boundary lines of the Pittsburg, Kirtland, and Ohio districts reported; recommending that it be referred to the Ohio district for approval, or action of committees appointed by each district.

This was denied, as were various motions growing out of the question, and the Pittsburg and Kirtland district's committee report was finally adopted.

The Daughters of Zion were granted an evening session in which to present their work to the conference.

Appointments were made and the assembly adjourned.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard spoke at the evening service, Bishop E. L. Kelley assisting.

Sunday, the 11th.—The Sunday services were largely attended. Preaching at the church at eleven a. m. by President Joseph Smith, Bro. J. A. Robinson assisting. At 2:30 p. m. a prayer and testimony service, Brn. F. G. Pitt and G. M. Scott in charge.

At 7:30 p. m. preaching by Elder R. C. Evans, assisted by Bro. I. N. White.

Services were also held in the chapel at Graceland College; Brn. W. H. Kelley, G. T. Griffiths, Heman C. Smith, and J. W. Gillen being appointed to provide therefor.

College meeting at 11:00 a. m. Preaching by Elder T. J. Sheldon, Bro. W. H. Kelley assisting. At 2:30 p. m. preaching by Elder A. C. Barmore, assisted by Bro. G. T. Griffiths.

Overflow meetings were held in the basement of the brick church. Preaching at eleven o'clock by Bro. W. A. Smith; social meeting at 2:30 in charge of Brn. Roderick May and C. H. Jones; preaching at 7:30 by Elder W. S. Pender.

Monday, April 12.—As the HERALD goes to press immediately we state very briefly the leading feature of the day's business. A full report will appear in next issue or in the regular minutes.

The meeting for the discussion of tent work, methods of preaching, etc., was held at 8:30 and continued till near noon in charge of President Smith.

The afternoon business session was a memorable one in the history of the Reorganized Church. The revelation received by President Joseph Smith was presented and unanimously adopted, by a rising vote and the brethren named were ordained according to its provisions. The scene was solemn and deeply impressive throughout, the Spirit of God resting in rich abundance upon the large assembly. The revelation is as follows:—

1. To the Brethren of the Twelve, the Seventy, the High Priests, and the Elders and all the Holy brethren in Conference assembled; Greeting:—

2. By the Grace of God and the Lord Jesus Christ I am permitted to write unto you and the Church, in answer to Prayer.

3. On the night of the seventh of April in the year of our Lord 1897, and on the morning of the 8th, I was in the Spirit and was commanded to write, and say unto the Elders and the Church:—

4. Thus saith the Spirit of your Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; Your fasting and your prayers are accepted and have prevailed.

5. Separate and set apart my servant Alexander Hale Smith to be a counselor to my servant, the President of the Church, his brother; and to be Patriarch to the Church, and an Evangelical minister to the whole Church. Also, appoint my servant E. L. Kelley, Bishop of the Church, to act as counselor to the President of the Church, for the Conference year, or until one shall be chosen to succeed my servant W. W. Blair, whom I have taken unto myself; he to sit in council with his brethren of the Presidency and act with and for them and the Church; though he shall still be and act in the office of his calling of Bishop of the Church with his brethren of the Bishopric.

6. The Quorum of Twelve, my servants, may choose and appoint one of their number to take the place of my servant Alexander H. Smith, and if they shall choose William H. Kelley, from among them for this place it will be pleasing unto me; nevertheless, if directed by the spirit of revelation and wisdom they may choose another.

7. And, that the quorum may be filled and be prepared to stand as a unit in the councils of the Church, in equality with the Presidency and the Seventy, choose and set apart to act as apostles in the Quorum of Twelve, my servants I. N. White, J. W. Wight, and R. C. Evans, for they are called unto this office and calling. And, if these will accept this appointment and remain humble, faithful and diligent, they shall with their brethren be greatly blessed in ministering the word and bringing souls unto me. Let the Quorum be not doubting but believing and I, the Lord, will bless them.

8. My servants, the Presidents of the Seventy, may with the consent and approval of their brethren of the Seventy sitting in council together, select from their brethren one to take the place of my servant I. N. White, if he accept the appointment to the Quorum of Twelve, and his choosing be approved by the Church; and in like manner they may fill any other vacancy that has or may occur; such selection and appointment to be made in the spirit of prayer and supplication and wisdom, and to be approved by the Church.

9. It is according to the vision that the Seven Presidents of the Seventy shall preside over the whole number of the Seventy when assembled in council together; the senior, or chosen President of the Seven Presidents, shall preside over the six other presidents in their councils as presidents of the Seventy; and when either quorum is sitting in council as a quorum, then its chosen president shall preside over its sittings. When any quorum of the Seventy may be sitting, any one, or all of the seven presidents, may at their request, or by invitation of such quorum, be present and take part in the deliberations of such council, but the president of such quorum only shall preside, except by consent of the quorum obtained by vote properly taken.

10. The sons of my servant the President of the Church, the sons of my servant William W. Blair, whom I have taken to myself, the sons of my servant the Bishop of the Church, and the sons of my servants of the leading quorums of the Church are admonished, that upon their fathers is laid a great and onerous burden, and they are called to engage in a great work, which shall bring them honor and glory, or shame, contempt and final great loss and destruction; as they shall in uprightness, faithfulness and diligence discharge their duties acceptably to God, or shall in carelessness, slothfulness, or wickedness fail in their calling and ministry therein; and to their sons shall come honor, or shame, as they shall approve, or disapprove themselves to God. These sons of my servants are called, and if faithful shall in time be chosen to places whence their fathers shall fall, or fail, or be removed by honorable release before the Lord and the Church.

11. The Spirit saith further unto the Church, Be of good cheer. It has pleased the Father to accept many of the sacrifices of his people; and, notwithstanding some have fallen while engaged in their work; some have been tried, and are still tried; some have been and are afflicted, yet the Lord has seen the affliction and trial and will accept and bless, and no man shall lose his reward.

12. Brethren of the ministry and members of the Church; my soul has been cheered, my spirit and body have been strengthened and my heart made exceeding glad by the blessed and holy influences of the Spirit which was with me, and still is with me as I write; causing me to give praise, honor, and glory to God and the Lamb, to whom honor and glory belong, and with whom are might, power and dominion evermore. Amen.

JOSEPH SMITH,

President of the Church, your servant for the Christ's sake.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 9, 1897.

Particulars and other business in next week's issue. The HERALD now goes to press.

BELIEVED IN IMMORTALITY.

THE following incident, related by Governor Charles Robinson, the first Governor of Kansas, we clip from an account of the life of the narrator, published in the Kansas City World, of January 31. It adds to the long list of evidences in favor of immortality and of consciousness of the spirit when separated from the body:—

Governor Robinson was a firm believer in the immortality of the soul and one evening a short time before his death related to General Sears the following remarkable incident which confirmed him in his belief. While he was in California a serious conflict arose between the settlers and the local authorities of Sacramento. A pitched battle ensued on the streets one day, in which Governor Robinson was shot through the breast, near the heart. He was left for dead by his friends, but later some people living near by discovering him to be alive, carried him into the house. He laid there several days lingering between life and death, but at all times in the full possession of his senses. About the fourth day he began sinking and he experienced all the sensations of death. At last he felt that he was leaving his own body and finally appeared to be completely separated from it. He expressed to General Sears the sensations he experienced as follows:—

"I stood beside my dead body and looked down upon it as it laid there cold and stiff and white. I remember everything as vividly as if I had been looking down upon the dead body of some other person. Suddenly the thought came to me that this was death and I realized that I must get back instantly or it would be too late. By a supreme effort I rushed back into the body and the two identities immediately became one person and I revived. From that moment my recovery was rapid. This experience left a vivid impression upon my memory and convinced me beyond all doubt of the immortality of the soul."

PLAGUE IN INDIA.

BOMBAY, March 31.—According to the official list published to-day the total number of deaths in this city for the week ending last Friday was 1,111. Of these 455 were due to the bubonic plague.

BRO. JAMES FARLEY, of Bisbee, Arizona, sends us a clipping from a local paper containing an editorial account of a man named Samuel Donnelly, an expelled member of the Salvation Army at Los Angeles, who has by dint of preaching and persuasion, or intimidation secured a following of some twenty or thirty persons, and has established himself in Sawmill Canyon, in the Huachuca Mountains, fifteen miles from Fort Huachuca.

Donnelly claims to be a prophet, the only one who understands the Bible, and the only one authorized to interpret it. He rules the camp by force, and has control of the men, women, and children, and uses his powers of control to his benefit.

The editor thinks that the camp should be investigated; as Mr. Donnelly says that he will soon have power to command the sun and moon. The editor says:—

We are in favor of visiting the camp at once ere Mr. Donnelly stops the sun in mid-heaven and makes our working days of many hours duration.

WE are in receipt of a piece of music with words, "If she would only come back to me," from Lyon & Healy, Chicago, Illinois, successful dealers in music and musical instruments:—

The prettiest little song of all is "Sweet Eileen." Castel Brydges, the wonderful tenor, introduced it, and now hundreds are singing it. If you want to make a really fine addition to your collection send 20 cents to Lyon & Healy, Chicago, for an introductory copy. (Regular price 40 cents.)

CORRECTION.—In HERALD of April 7, near top of third column, page 220, "land of Mulek" should read "land of Melek;" Bro. William Hawkins' article.

Letter Department.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, March 26.

Editors Herald:—Bro. G. H. Hilliard has just closed one of the best meetings that has been held here for years. He had good interest and good congregations all the time, in spite of bad weather. On account of bad roads we got the time that was allotted to the New London branch, which gave us sixteen grand sermons. The branch has been greatly benefited, and we certainly know our duty now, whether we do it or not; we will be left without an excuse.

Some of the outsiders told Bro. H. that if he would stay another week there would be five or six join the church. We think the weather and water kept them out, but if they are honest they will come in. We had several baptisms of the Holy Spirit during the meeting.

Our conference also convened during the meeting which added greatly to our pleasure. Dear old Sisters Salisbury and Newberry gave us grand testimonies on Sunday afternoon.

Bro. Evans also held a series of meetings here early in the the winter, which we shall not soon forget; he was paving the way for Bro. Hilliard, and got the minds of the people in a condition to receive the truth. We feel that much good has been done.

We must not forget our worthy president; he is doing all he can, but he must earn his bread by the sweat of his face, so his mind must be occupied during the week with worldly things, so he cannot give as much time to preaching as he would like; yet he will certainly receive a great reward for keeping this branch together for so many years.

I hope the Lord will ever keep and protect such men as Brn. Hilliard, Evans, and Johnson, for they have done good work here. The people here think that Bro. H. surely is a teacher sent from God.

I love this work and hope to be faithful to the end, that I may be permitted to live with the pure and the good. We have over one hundred members and a good many young people. We hope to gain soon. We have a very nice Sunday school. It has been a long time since you have heard from the Burlington branch, but it is still alive and we have some good workers.

M. S. WRIGHT.

TWO SUGGESTIONS.

Editors Herald:—With the present system of providing for the families of the missionaries, some receive their monthly allowance promptly, while others go two and even four months without. In conversation with two of the missionaries on their way to conference, I learned that the church was behind six months. What is the cause of this? The answer is, No funds. How is it that some are supplied promptly? Why not all the families be served alike? I answer, Too many paymasters. If the families were all supplied directly from the Bishop the above injustice would not exist. Let all the Bishop's agents remit monthly to the Bishop, and let him alone send out the amount due each family. It seems to me that no one will object to this. If the Bishop had charge of this matter alone, it would not be needful for the Bishop's agents to write to the Bishop for funds to supply the demands made on them. I presume that all the agents try first to supply those placed in their charge; and if the district does not furnish sufficient means, then they call on the Bishop not knowing that the Bishop is short of means to help. As one that has served as Bishop's agent in Far West district for years, and with very few exceptions have been able to take care of all in charge, and send some to the Bishop, while it is pleasant to act as Bishop's agent in a district that comes to the support of the work and be able to pay promptly the amount due the families I would prefer to remit to the Bishop monthly, so that all families be treated alike. The Bishop's agent could still have the care of the poor, and have an understanding with the Bishop as to the amount to be paid.

Again, I believe that if the Bishopric will appoint traveling agents to labor in harmony with the local agents that much good would result from those labors. This department of the work must be kept constantly before the minds of the saints; and before this is done we see the result. Well, says one, if we have traveling Bishop's agents and they come into the district where there was an agent he would think that the Bishop did not have confidence in him; hence it would not work well. That kind of reasoning will not do; for the district president and all the local elders might say the same to General Conference when they appoint missionaries to those respective fields. There is another objection to traveling agents; no provision in the law. Let me say to those that hold to this idea that it is traveling Bishop's agents the church wants, not standing agents, that will get out and visit all the branches in his district. If this was done, there would be much more means come in to the treasury. If we had traveling Bishop's agents they could consult the local agent as to the best plan to proceed; and, if convenient, let the two go together. If any means is paid in to the traveling Bishop's agent let him turn it over to the local agent. Well, says one, why not send it to the Bishop? My reason is, that if turned over to the local agent, the district, as well as the party paying, will get proper credit and will be so reported at the district conference; whereas, if sent direct to the Bishop it would only appear to the credit of the person paying. And as the Bishop's report gives all the districts credit for all moneys received, it seems to me that the local Bishop's agent should have a record of all money paid in his district; whether it is paid to the Bishop, or his Counselor, or this traveling Bishop's agent. Again to my mind, all persons living in a district where there is a Bishop's agent should remit to him for the reason given above, and that he be honored in his calling.

I read in section 117, paragraph 10, Book of Doctrine and Covenants that the "Bishop of my church may also choose and appoint Bishop's agents." As a rule the district chooses or removes, but here is a statement that the Bishop may appoint, and, if he so wished, he could appoint any of the traveling missionaries or others to labor as Bishop's agents, local or traveling. In this same section and paragraph we read that when "it is wisdom in me to ordain other Bishops in the districts and large branches." I have reasons to believe that this time is even at our doors. "Well," says one, "if that time comes, will it not be in conflict with the suggestion offered above?" I answer, No. For if we had to-day six bishops, there would be a head and that the present one, or his successor, and they would have a proper understanding of all matters pertaining to their work; and all would move along to the advancement of this cause.

Again, I say that in order that the work may continue to move on this department must be kept abreast with the other. Unless it is, there will not be the success that there should be. To my mind, it is the keynote to the redemption of Zion.

Respectfully,
WILLIAM LEWIS.

Editors Herald:—Will the Herald and Ensign kindly warn the members of the church of another fraud, calling himself a saint and professing to know so many of the prominent ones in the church, and claiming to live in Keokuk, giving his name as Patterson and having one club foot. He borrowed five dollars of me last Saturday with the promise of returning it on Monday. Since he left I have found him to be a fraud. Let the saints look for a club foot and that will be enough. He was so sorry at Bro. Blair's death, and that Bro. Joseph and Alexander had been afflicted. Beware of him, for he is about as complete a fraud as can well be found. He has made the business of swindling the saints a study and has his lesson well learned.

It may cause trouble for an honest man coming this way, unless one we are acquainted with.

Yours as ever,
THOMAS F. STAFFORD.

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.
—NO. 3.

WHEN Mormon had advanced in his abridgment and came to write of the location of the city of Moroni and its lands he wrote,

And it was by the east sea.

But as the east sea or Atlantic Ocean and its tributary was an east sea to both the land northward and to the land southward, he wished it to be understood by us when those writings should speak to us out of the dust which of those lands he was writing of, and he wrote,

And it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.

That line is described by Alma as running in a straight course from the "east sea, even unto the sea west," and "by the head of the river Sidon." And I believe "it does not require an educated man to see clearly" that this second expression used by Mormon is the proper one associated with the above considerations by which we can understand the quotation we are considering; and it appears to me to be more fully established by the use of the semicolon dividing the two sentences:—

And it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.

Accepting this as the true solution we will now proceed to locate the city and land of Moroni.

And the Nephites began the foundation of a city, and they called the name of the city Moroni; and it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.

If the line I have before given as the north line of the "strip of wilderness" dividing the lands of Nephi and Zarahemla be correct, then the land and city of Moroni occupied what had been before the land of Jershon and what we now know as the Gulf of Maracaibo, and the best proof I have to offer is found in the Book of Nephi 4:6, where it is written,

And behold, that great city Moroni have I caused to be sunk in the depths of the sea, and the inhabitants thereof to be drowned.

And following again I read:

"And behold, the city of Gilgal have I caused to be sunk, and the inhabitants thereof to be buried up in the depths of the earth; yea, and the city Onihah, and the inhabitants thereof, and the city of Mocum, and the inhabitants thereof, and the city of Jerusalem, and the inhabitants thereof, and waters have I caused to come up in the stead thereof," thus forming a lake, which I believe to be Lake Maracaibo. The city of Gilgal escaped the watery element perhaps because of occupying higher ground and was located where once was the city of the Zoramites, and the land of Gilgal had been what the Zoramites called Antionum, bordering upon the "strip of wilderness" and south of the land of Moroni as Antionum had been south of Jershon.

I am aware that I am liable to be met with the idea that Jerusalem was in the land of Nephi. To this I answer, 'Tis true there was a city called Jerusalem in the land of the Lamanites, but to my mind it would not be strange to find a city in the land of Zarahemla by the name of Jerusalem, seeing that the two nations sprang from the same family and from the same city Jerusalem in the land of their fathers. If then the city of Moroni occupied the site where I have placed it, then the cities and lands of Nephiah, Lehi, Morianton, Omner, Gid, and Mulek lay in the order named from the land of Moroni to the mouth of the state of Panama "on the east borders by the seashore," the city of Melek being located in the entrance to the now state of Panama and having its western bounds upon the eastern side of the range of wilderness named upon the map as S. Del Darien (see Alma 24: 9), the then provincial land Bountiful occupying the greater part of what we now know as the state of Panama.

I wish to throw out a few ideas farther and hope I won't intrude. In regard to the location of "the land of Melek," the article states after quoting Alma 6: 1, 2,

This shows that the land of Melek was west of the land of Zarahemla, and the wilderness was west of Melek.

We quote the text:—

And it came to pass in the commencement of the tenth year of the reign of the judges over the people of Nephi, that Alma departed from thence [Zarahemla] and took his journey over into the land of Melek, on the west of the river Sidon, on the west, by the borders of the wilderness.—Alma 6: 1.

From the reading of the article the conclusion arrived at is badly strained. If when Alma went over upon the east of the river Sidon into the valley of Gideon is sufficient to convey the fact that Zarahemla lay west of the river Sidon, then it was superfluous to tell us that Melek was also west of the river Sidon if it occupied a position west of the land of Zarahemla. Better far for Alma to have stated that fact rather than what we now have. But I do not so read the quotation; let us examine it:—

Alma . . . took his journey over into the land of Melek.

The article says "over into," (over the mountain range). My idea is that he went over the river Cauca into the land of Melek, and also that the land of Melek lay north and northwest of the land of Zarahemla; that is, the east end of the land of Melek was partly bounded by the river Sidon, and that the western end rested in the borders of the wilderness formed by the Sierra S. Jeronimo range, which extends northeast to within fifty miles of the Magdalena River, thus the land of Melek was "on the west of the river Sidon, on the west, by the borders of the wilderness."

Again; that the land of Ammonihah to which Alma traveled three days upon the north side of the land of Melek was bounded upon its northern end by the land of Melek, its north-west side by the river Sinu, and its southeastern side by the river San Jorjie; that when Alma and Amulek departed from Ammonihah they "came out even to the land of Sidom" and when they had finished their labors in the land of Sidom, "Alma took Amulek and came over to the land of Zarahemla and took him to his own house." (See from Alma 6:1 to 10:16.) Thus then I gather that the land of Sidom was bounded on the west by Ammonihah, the river San Jorjie dividing them, and upon the east by the river Cauca, and that this river was that over which Alma took Amulek into the provincial land of Zarahemla to his own house; and thus the land of Sidom, instead of Melek, lay west of the provincial land of Zarahemla.

There are two other cities mentioned in this western part of the national land of Zarahemla; they are Noah and Aaron. Of the first, Noah, it is said:—

They [the Lamanites] had destroyed the people of Ammoniah and also some around the borders of Noah, and taken others captive into the wilderness.

Of the coming in of the Lamanites it is said:—

There was a cry of war heard throughout the land; for behold, the armies of the Lamanites had come in on the wilderness side into the borders of the land even into the city of Ammonihah.

This city then was their objective point and, as we have seen, the land of Ammoniah lay in a northwesterly direction from the city of Zarahemla. The Lamanites coming in and destroying the city and going out as they did is proof sufficient that it was down the Pacific coast they came, and returned in the west wilderness; which is further shown by their crossing the river Sidon in the south wilderness and being met by the Nephites upon the east side of that river. The land of Noah then adjoined the land of Ammoniah on the southwest, its borders being on the Lamanites' route from the latter on their way to the wilderness west or Pacific coast.

In regard to the city of Aaron, I gather from the record that this city and its lands lay southwest of the land of Sidom, bounded on the east by the Cauca River and on the west by the land of Noah. The direction in which this city lay I gather from the following: He (Alma) departed thence (from Ammonihah) and took his journey towards the city which was called Aaron. After Alma had received his message from the angel of the Lord he returned speedily to the land of Ammonihah and he entered the city by another way, which is on the south of the city of Ammonihah. (Alma 6: 4-6.) I presume then that Alma, having traveled on the north side of Melek, entered the city of Ammonihah upon its north side, and when he left it was also upon that side, and traveled in a southward direction toward the city of Aaron, but returning he came by another way and entered the city on the south. This would show that he traveled in a southward direction, and that the city of Aaron lay in that course. But I am aware that some one will say the city of Aaron adjoined Moroni. Granted; there was a city and land of Aaron that adjoined the lands of Moroni and Nephiah. The land of Moroni was by the east sea, and Nephiah was upon the east borders by the seashore and adjoined Moroni. The expressions used in regard to the location of these two lands, although they adjoined each other, is material proof of that which I have before stated, that after rounding Point Gallinas the Caribbean Sea was considered an east sea by those living in South America; and especially would this be so by the Nephites whose home was in the northern part of that continent. The lands of Moroni, Nephiah, and Aaron which adjoined them, all lay northeast from the city of Zarahemla, while the cities of which we have been treating—from Melek to Aaron—lay from north to southwest of the city of Zarahemla and upon the Pacific side of the continent, and several hundred miles distant from the city of Aaron whose land adjoined the lands of Moroni and Nephiah; so that there must have been two cities of the same name in the national land of Zarahemla.

And now I will leave this for the brethren to study.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preëxistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

LINES OF CLEAVAGE AMONG THE BAPTISTS.

"The Distinctive Principles of Baptists" is the general title to a series of articles which The Standard, of Chicago, has been publishing from the pens of leading Baptist divines. In the issue of February 27 appeared, as one of the series, an article on "The Baptist Outlook," by Rev. Dr. Eri B. Hulbert, dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, and in the issue of March 13 appears a reply by Rev. Dr. J. B. Jackson. The subject of both articles is, in a word, the inroads which the "higher criticism" has made in the Baptist denomination.

Dean Hulbert has been regarded as fairly conservative; but he recognizes that rapid changes are taking place in the church, and that in future time "Baptists will differ from us even more than we differ from our fathers." This transformation, which he obviously advocates, is "breaking our Baptist brotherhood into parties" and "already the line of separation is becoming so definite and fixed that preachers and churches are arraying themselves or being arrayed on one side or the other." The line of separation does not, he thinks, divide the church on what are commonly accepted as its distinctive principles, nor on the great fundamental, saving, and moral truths of Christianity; nor is the line as marked as in some other denominations. Nevertheless it is real, and the names already assigned to the two parties, Conservatives and Progressives, indicate the nature of the division. The following is his diagnosis of the trouble:—

"The marvelous progress in the domain of natural and physical science, the recently promulgated theories of evolution, the philosophical and theological speculations imported from Germany, the reconstructed apologetical literature adapted to present-day exigencies, the discoveries in the ruins of ancient Oriental dynasties, the studies in comparative philology and in comparative religion, the new way of conceiving and writing history, the new canons of literary criticism, the new outlook in the realm of ethics, the new science of sociology, and the new humanitarian activities—this new world of new thought in the midst of which we are living has profoundly moved some of our Baptist brothers. It has not merely changed their point of view, given them a new center of observation, it has well-nigh revolutionized the very substance of their thinking. They do not look at things as they once did. Mere modification of conception has passed over to radical transformation. They are notable to analyze the process by which this change has come about. It certainly has not been in the main by a conscious, deliberate dropping of old ideas, but rather in the main by an unconscious passing over into a new world in which the old ideas cannot survive. Notions for which they would once have laid down their lives are notions for which they would not now lift a finger. . . . There is not a time-honored belief which must not submit itself to fresh scrutiny."

That Dean Hulbert does not look upon this change as regrettable is apparent from his further description of the Progressive:—

"They have a new conception of God, of his goodness and glory. His sheer sovereignty and decrees fall into the background, and his moral excellence, beauty, and common Fatherhood fill the vision. They have a new conception of Christ as the express image of his Father's person and the perfect revelation of his thought and love; and of Christ's work in man's behalf as designed to meet the necessities and aspirations of his entire being—body, mind, soul—for time and eternity, in earth and in heaven. They have a new conception of man, of his creation in God's image, and his boundless possibilities of growth in the likeness of his Creator, Father, and Savior. They have a new conception of the Bible. They have ceased to believe that it was dictated in a mechanical way, and that its chief design was to furnish proof-texts in polemical theology. They have parted with many of the traditional notions of the authorship, structure, and purpose of the sacred books. They maintain that no theory of inspiration has yet been advanced which covers the facts, and that their reconstructed Bible is a book more human and more divine, more consistent and rational, more helpful and inspiring than the traditional volume."

Nearly all the rest of the article consists of a plea for a tolerant spirit between the two parties. If they are to "fight" out their differences, "Satan will deservedly get them both in the end, and, perforce, the denomination will go to the devil." If the evil spirit is exorcised and a Christly spirit to take its place, each party can help the other to reach the fuller truth. He wants free discussion and open debate, but each side should recognize the honesty and ability of the other; and the result of such controversy will be a better Bible, a better theology, a better education, a better ecclesiasticism, a better missionary endeavor, a better sociological activity, a better young people's influence.

Dr. Jackson, in his reply, expresses very considerable surprise over the description given by Dr. Hulbert of the Progressives and of the radical nature of their purposes. While repudiating for himself the title of Conservative, "in the sense of feeling called upon to hoot at everything new and to make a fetish of everything old," he does believe that the past is "the mother of us all," and that "any scheme which breaks abruptly with the past must prove ephemeral." He calls Dr. Hulbert's article an irenic, and predicts for it the fate of so many other irenicons which lie stranded on the shores of time. "Not peace," he writes, "but a sword." The chasm cannot be closed.

Quoting a part of the first extract we have given above from Dr. Hulbert, he calls the statements therein disturbing as first read and startling on a second perusal. The Progressives are therein described as having "the very substance of their thinking well-nigh revolutionized." Then Dr. Jackson asks a question or two:—

"The question arises, and it is of profound and most practical moment: If there is not a time-honored belief which must not submit itself to a fresh scrutiny, to be of course cast aside if it do not bear the test of the 'new learning,' what are our progressive ministers meanwhile to preach? Can they in consistency deal out to their hearers anything but negations? Yet these never saved, and never can save, a soul from death."

Continuing in the same strain he says:—

"How long, I say, will it take for the old gospel to be displaced by the new? In other words, how long will the Progressives need to abide in the theological quarantine wherein, poor souls, they now find themselves? Pitiable indeed is their present state; and pitiable it must remain, until they can with safety pass to the terra firma of a brand-new set of positive and working beliefs. However rapid the transformation now going on—a transformation that takes in the entire creed, and extends to its very roots—manifestly quite a period must elapse before that 'better theology than we now possess,' which we are kindly informed, nay, assured, the Baptists are to have, will get fairly on its legs. Meanwhile, souls are passing by thousands into eternity, with no hope but that which is held out by the gospel of Christ. At least so the Conservatives think. And so likewise thought our progressive brethren, until seized by the 'new theology,' or the 'new learning'—it makes but little difference which; for each, though extremely nebulous, perhaps rather because it is so, seems to have a wonderfully hypnotic power over those who dally long therewith. But this conviction respecting the doom of unrepentant and unbelieving sinners is itself a belief, and therefore must be tested anew before even to it our friends in quarantine as aforesaid can subscribe, Credo."

The genesis of the new movement as given by Dr. Hulbert (in the same extract), Dr. Jackson observes, makes scant reference, in fact no explicit reference at all, to the Scriptures, which Baptist authorities have held to be the one paramount source of Christian doctrine. He dwells upon this point:—

"Neither the decrees of councils, nor the teachings of church fathers, nor the unverified theories of scientists, nor the philosophical speculations of theologians, nor the wild conjectures and crude inferences of critics, higher or lower, must be allowed to usurp the throne hitherto occupied in our Baptist kingdom by the word of revelation. Yet no one can fail to notice, as already remarked, how small a place, in fact no distinct place at all, is assigned to the Bible in Dean Hulbert's account of the influences and forces which have instigated and pushed forward the stupendous revolution, with whose fortunes so many of our ministers have seen fit to identify themselves. In this he is, I begin to fear, only too well justified as a historian. But his complaisance toward the movement as thus set forth is a different thing."

"I repeat, I do not fear for the ultimate and glorious triumph of Christ's kingdom. But I do fear, and I fear greatly, for the well-being of souls now alive, and for those who may come immediately after us. On this point, if it is proper for me to make such a personal reference, I confess I have thoughts that move to tears."

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

MONDAY, the 12th. — The meeting provided for by action of the 9th for the discussion of tent work, methods of preaching, missionary, and pastoral work, was held from eight a. m. to about the noon hour, in charge of President Joseph Smith. The main points presented by the brethren, so far as the writer was able to obtain them, are given herewith:—

1. Best modes of preaching; 2. The best way to carry on tent work; 3. The best way to carry on city work; 4. The best way to carry on work in rural districts; 5. Debates; 6. The attitude we should assume toward the world; 7. The use of slang; 8. The use of sensationalism.

1. Best modes of preaching. The speaker should be humble and secure the Holy Spirit. The Spirit will guide the same person to present the same idea in different ways. Be sure to present the doctrines of Jesus Christ. Show that Jesus Christ is the author of the work we represent. Do not treat upon speculative ideas, or spend time in presenting your own opinions. Treat principally upon the first principles of the gospel with the associate truths of the existence and character of God. Preach affirmatively as a rule, using but little negative argument. Present at least two scriptural evidences to sustain each point advocated. Do not present a point unless you have the evidence at hand to sustain it. Use simple language. Appeal to the intellect. Speak in a humble, loving manner, not boastfully. Seek to build up, not tear down. Predicate what you preach upon the truths, and present needs of the people where you labor, seeking to ascertain their condition by proper inquiry with prayer. Sarcasm and ridicule should not be resorted to; avoid offending. Present ideas with seriousness, thereby impressing the people with the sacredness of the truth; use but little levity. Refer but little to your personal conditions past or present. Be original, and thus show your individuality. Do not speak of the unpopularity or the dark side of the church. Make it plain that we have no sympathy with Utah Mormonism. Avoid politics as a theme. The use of charts and blackboards is commended. Show in a humble yet a firm way that the work represented is defensible. It is a mistake to take the corpse at a funeral service for a text from which to preach a doctrinal sermon. There should be a systematic and definite manner of conducting funeral services.

2. Tent work. Seek a pleasant and attractive location near some thoroughfare for the location of the tent. Locate the tent where it will get the morning sun. Make it look cleanly and homelike without and within the tent. Arrange the seats neatly, having backs to them. Advertise with printed circulars well distributed, and a large notice on outside of tent. Be present at the tent most of the time to converse with inquirers, and to invite their attendance at the services. Two brethren of nearly equal ability, one of whom should be a married man, whose wife will travel with her husband, should be associated in labor. It would be well if the sister was an organist, and one who could and would defend the work in meekness. The people should be visited and tracts distributed to them. The tents used should be well made, and not too large. Some one should be with the tent night and day to care for it, and that which is associated with it, so that neither designing persons nor storms would do so much damage. It would be well at times to publish the subjects to be treated upon ahead. It is well to have a small tent to sleep in and keep books, etc. Every district should have at least one tent. Should be well secured with strong guy ropes, and should have double blocks in hoisting tent on center poles. Two ropes should be used at each side pole, one longer than the other, and the stakes to which they are attached fastened together at the top with a strong wire. Tent should never be taken down when damp. In transportation the tent should be protected so as not to come in contact with any substance that will wear holes in it.

While some thought that tent work was expensive and required much work, yet it was generally conceded that it was a benefit, and could be made very successful in reaching people who could not be reached by other means.

3. The best way to carry on city work. There should be a located pastor who could spend all his time in religious work. Men selected for city work should be adapted to such work; a man should thoroughly inform himself on current events, and seek advice to give relating to them when necessary.

4. The best way to conduct work in rural districts. One should be common, plain, willing to adapt himself to circumstances, and not too critical. Should be sociable, and visit and converse with the people at their homes. Study to adapt language to the understanding of the people. Show ourselves helpful.

5. Debates. We were advised by the word of the Lord to "confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest."—D. and C., page 203, par. 2, hence concluded that at times debates were necessary, and result in good. Should not make assertions unless proof is at hand. Always be courteous to opponents.

6. Our attitude towards the world. We should be discreet, and not too critical. Give them credit for all truth believed.

7. The use of slang. It is questionable whether slang should ever be used. There might be an exceptional case when a point could be understood better, or made more impressive by the use of a slang phrase in common use.

8. The use of sensationalism. Is permissible in calling attention to time and place of service, and subject to be treated in special cases. Should not be used as a rule, as it does not appeal to the intellect.

One brother who had once been associated with the errors of Utah Mormonism, but had been saved therefrom, said that we should treat that people kindly and seek to show them their errors. He further said that the representatives of that people were very ignorant of the standard books of the church, even the Bible, and cited as proof that at one time in conversation with one of them he cited evidence to prove a certain point and said it was found in the book of Jeremiah or Nicodemus, he did not know which.

The session was quite beneficial, and better qualified many of the ministry for their future work.

J. F. MINTUN, Secretary pro tem.

The usual business session opened at two o'clock, in charge of President Joseph Smith. The hymn, "O for a faith that will not shrink," was sung, and Elder Charles Derry offered prayer. The minutes of previous sessions were read and approved.

The principal item of business before the conference was the revelation presented to the church by President Joseph Smith. Bro. F. G. Pitt, of the High Priests, was appointed by the President to preside during its consideration.

The revelation was read by the Secretary. After receiving the formal reports of the Twelve, the Seventy, the High Priests, the Bishopric, the Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, they all arose to their feet, as did also the delegates and the entire assembly, in token of their acceptance of the revelation. The vote was from the assembly entire and was unanimous. The whole congregation was deeply moved by the Holy Spirit, which was poured out richly in attestation of the truth of the communication given to the church. The congregation then sang, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

A motion providing for the publication of the revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants was adopted.

Following this a resolution making provision for inserting the revelation of 1894 in the Doctrine and Covenants, was also adopted.

President Smith was authorized to provide for the ordinations of those named in the revelation.

The brethren named, with the exception of Bro. W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, each made a statement; action concerning the ordination of Bro. Kelley as President of the Twelve being deferred until the changes provided for by the revelation were made in the Quorum of Twelve.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith's statement is given herewith:—

In answer to the question of Pres. Joseph Smith, "Brother Alexander, do you accept the appointment?" Bro. Alexander Smith said: "I accept the appointment and will say that to me the appointment was not altogether unlooked for, for intimations of the past for a number of years have directed my mind in that direction. I wish to say that I have never felt to fully give myself into the hands of the Lord for this appointment until this spring. There was that bond of affection for the quorum over which I presided that I felt that I wished to remain with them; but since it has been made known that it is the Lord's wish that I should labor elsewhere, I am willing to do the very best I can, using my powers in doing the Lord's will so far as he shall give me strength, leaving the result in his hands. All that I have, all that I am, all that I ever expect to have or to be, is put into this work. I have given myself wholly to the Lord.

Bro. Edmund L. Kelley's statement is as follows:—

I can say to the conference that having always stood ready to do whatever the Lord shall call me to do, I am ready to perform what is my duty so far as I am able to do so in the present calling. I have ever been willing to work in whatever position my heavenly Father wanted me to work; that being my belief of duty with reference to the position of all workers in the church; and when I was working in the Priest's Quorum, I was just as earnest and satisfied with my work as I have been since I have been in the Bishopric, and possibly I shall be no better satisfied with the new work placed upon me than I have been in the past.

Possibly some of you may wish to know whether this matter has been before brought to my attention; and I may state in this connection that seven years ago there was presented to me in vision President Smith with a revelation in his hand and the statement was that I should act as one of the counselors, and then the question was asked, "What about my work in the Bishopric?" and the statement was made that I was to act also in the Bishopric. I never made this statement to any individual or person in the world, until after this revelation was presented. I was puzzled because I never heard tell before of one individual acting in both places at the same time. I suppose it is something as an emergency, and I only present this to show that God is like himself in his revealments. He gave the evidence, I suppose, so that I would be satisfied when it should come.

Bro. Isaac N. White stated as follows:—

I realize what an important position this is, and how much wisdom it demands above that which I have had in the past in other quorums of the church. I am not at sea in reference to the added responsibility that will be imposed upon me by accepting the position in the church that this revelation calls me to. A revelation amounts to nothing to me unless I have faith and confidence that it is from God. This revelation says: "And, if these will accept this appointment and remain humble, faithful, and diligent, they shall with their brethren be greatly blessed in ministering the word and bringing souls unto me." I am prepared to believe this revelation is from God, with all my heart. I have good reasons for so believing. When I was at the Kirtland, Ohio, conference one year ago I had an open vision while Bro. Luff was at prayer during a prayer service participated in by the Quorums of Twelve, High Priests, the two quorums of Seventy, and the Bishopric in the upper room of the Temple. In that vision I saw a fountain and was told that from that fountain God would send forth a revelation to fill some of the important quorums of the church. I was given to understand that at this General Conference it might be expected. One or two very important things have been fulfilled that were shown to me in that vision; things, too, that were least expected by me.

Some three years ago the Lord showed me that I was to go to the Quorum of the Twelve. It passed into my daily journal, and that journal was carefully stored away in one of the drawers in my secretary, among private papers where few hands but my own find their way. I was aware of the occasional "crank" trying to climb into "Moses' seat," and for the good of the work and to protect myself I kept my own counsel, not even revealing what I had received to my own wife, who generally knows all my secrets. I left home on March 5 to visit my sister who was lying at the point of death. While there on the night of the 25th of March, 1897, I had very peculiar feelings before retiring; I felt to pray and did so at my bedside, and the room seemed to fill with the Spirit of God. I plead with God to pass by all my imperfections and fit and qualify me for the work that was before me. I retired, and presently I was wrapped in vision. In the vision I was aboard a large ship headed towards the north. On my right or to the east no land could be seen; but on my west I saw we were close to the land. Presently I perceived Bro. Joseph Smith standing in the front end of this immense ship, seemingly directing her movements. Three large windows were in the front there for the purpose of light or places to look out to see how to direct the ship's movement and from which to see the breakers that might lie in the way. I was standing about midway of the ship and noticed that Bro. Luff was tipping my elbow on the right. I noticed that Bro. Joseph Smith was the only man in the front and he was pacing backward and forward in the front; first passing this window then that. Presently he stopped and looking towards us said in a loud voice: "I. N., do you know that there had been a revelation received regarding filling the quorums?" I turned to Bro. Luff and when catching his eye saw at once that he knew something about it. Joseph cried out again: "Don't reveal this until it is presented to the General Conference." At once I saw a canvas hanging from the lower part of one of the three front windows and on that canvas were three names. The first was "President Joseph Smith." Then I perceived a window on either side of the ship about midway, right where Bro. Luff and I stood. On one of these windows was a similar canvas to that I had just seen in the front, only the first name on this last one was, "I. N. White;" then followed two other names. At this juncture I heard a voice saying, "Your responsibility will be increased in place of being lessened;" and the voice of the Spirit said: "Look out for breakers!" My duty was to watch from this side window and also look ahead through the front windows for breakers, and I felt the responsibility so heavily and my anxiety for the safety of the ship seemed to be magnified a hundredfold.

During this anxiety the vision passed away. I cried out to God: "O Lord, I am not worthy to be called even a servant of thine; drop me back to the office of an Aaronic priest and I shall be satisfied and will promise thee that I will not even make one complaint." But the Spirit of my office was upon me.

This revelation that is now before us is as much a revelation from God as it was a revelation from God when he spoke to Moses in the calling of Aaron. It would not be any more a revelation of God to me if Christ stood by me to-day like he did when he stood upon the shores of the lakes of the eastern continent and spoke to his brethren there saying: "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." This revelation is the voice of God to me. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established." These witnesses have testified to me that this revelation is of God. Under these circumstances I cannot reject this call without jeopardizing my salvation. I accept the situation and ask the earnest prayers of my brethren and sisters that I may be qualified for the important office and its duties; and that I may live humble and faithful, and never betray your trust. Amen.

Bro. J. W. Wight made statement, as follows:—

Were I simply consulting my own feelings this afternoon I would refuse to accept the position, but did such refusal come from me it would be virtually saying one of two things; either that I did not believe the revelation to be from God, or else that I refuse to labor where he calls. On Saturday just before retiring to rest there came into my soul, by the Spirit's power, the evidence that the revelation that would be given to the church would affect me; but as to how I did not know, neither did I know until I heard it read in the quorums yesterday morning. In 1880 when Bro. J. C. Crabb pronounced the ordination ceremony of an elder over my head, he predicted what is being fulfilled to-day, with many other things that have been fulfilled along the line on different occasions. The predictions have come concerning the position I am thus called to occupy; the inspiration of God's Spirit made it manifest to me when I was in far-off Australia; and before leaving that country to come here I felt the prompting of that Spirit, impelling me to come and prepare myself; and I believe that had I not come when I did to meet with the conditions I have met since coming during the three last years of my life that I would not now have been prepared to have been called. These conditions have been of that sort that I believe God has been preparing me for the position, and yet I say honestly before God that I shrink from the duties I am thus called to assume, and ask that your prayers shall ascend to God in my behalf that I may remain humble, faithful, diligent, and earnest in the work whereunto he has called me.

Bro. R. C. Evans stated thus:—

Mr. President and Brethren:—I may say briefly that when I was confirmed into the church in 1876 by Joseph Luff and J. J. Cornish it was then presented through Bro. Cornish that I would occupy a prominent position in this church. For years I struggled on, and finally in 1882 was ordained to the office of a priest under the hands of J. H. Lake, and under the Spirit's influence then, he predicted that I would yet fill a position in one of the leading quorums of the church. I was ordained an elder in 1884 and again the promise came. In 1886 I was ordained to the office of Seventy and once more the promise was given that I would occupy a position in the Quorum of the Twelve. Since then from several the prediction has come, so that I have not been altogether surprised. During this convention it has been presented to me through others that I would occupy a position in this quorum, but I can say to you this afternoon that when I was called to the Seventies meeting yesterday morning to consider the revelation and when I heard my name read for the first time, notwithstanding all these predictions, I could hardly believe that I heard aright. All I can say is that I try to feel the weight of this great responsibility that is thus placed upon me.

For some two years I have felt a change coming over my life, and I know that God has been assisting me and helping me to improve along lines wherein I needed improvement; and I here and now say that I fully believe that God has spoken, and while I recognize that my acceptance of this office at his hands may call from me the sacrifice of a life, but before you, my brethren, and before God this afternoon, I wish here to say that I willingly consecrate my life to his service. I know to some extent what this may mean, and shall pray that God will help me and ask you to remember me that I may in deed and in truth do the work intrusted to my care with an eye single to his glory. Amen.

The brethren named were then called forward for ordination. President Joseph Smith selected Brn. William H. Kelley, Joseph R. Lambert, Edmund C. Briggs, and John H. Lake, of the Twelve, Brn. Charles Derry, President of the High Priests' Quorum, and Bishop E. L. Kelley, to act with him in ordaining. Bro. Alexander H. Smith was ordained Counselor, Patriarch, and Evangelical Minister to the whole church, by President Joseph Smith and the brethren named. Bro. Edmund L. Kelley was appointed and blessed to act as Counselor to the President for the conference year, or until a successor to Bro. W. W. Blair is chosen, by Bro. Edmund C. Briggs and the brethren named.

Bro. Isaac N. White was ordained an apostle in the Quorum of Twelve, by Bro. Joseph R. Lambert and the brethren named; Bro. John W. Wight was ordained to the same office by Bro. William H. Kelley and those named; and Bro. Richard C. Evans was ordained to the same office by Bro. John H. Lake and those named.

Following these ordinations President Joseph Smith assigned the newly ordained apostles to places among their brethren of the Twelve.

President Smith then addressed the assembly at length, his statements receiving the close attention of the assembly. He said:—

It may be advantageous for the ministry to know certain things before they go from here, in connection with what has taken place to-day. There has no one among you realized to any greater extent the broken or fragmentary character of our organization more than I have. There is no one among you that has been more anxious; and I need not remind you that the opportunities that were presented to me for years of surrounding myself with certain classes of men have often and always presented themselves before me; and one of the strong pleading causes was the fragmentary condition we were in. I realized that among what was called latter-day Israel to a certain extent, whether this was a proper name or otherwise, we were laboring under a disadvantage; but I had no reason of my own to serve, and I thought that if God through Christ could not take care of his work, I could not; and if he was willing to bless us in our fragmentary condition, it was because of the faithfulness of the people rather than the completeness of their organization; and the language of the law which says that the majority may act where it is impracticable or impossible that there should be a whole, has been our shelter; and whatever God has commanded to do, that he has always given in his command the enacting clause or what is called the empowering or enabling clause; and for this reason we have gone forward. No man has mourned more than I the disadvantage that was put upon my brother. It would have been an easy thing for me to have followed him to his grave in comparison with what I have borne in reference to his condition now; and when I was charged with unkindness and with want of spirituality as the leading reason why the church was thus visited, or he was visited (because it cannot be accounted a visitation to him when he does not realize it), it was grievous.

Prior to the receiving of this document which you have accepted (and I believe it was given for the purpose of overcoming my objections arising from conditions that it is not necessary for me to recite) I saw the organization. I realized what was said in the vision. I saw the quorums of the church marching, and I may state the order in which they moved; it may aid some of you and may overcome some possible objection, mental objection. I saw in the lead of this army the Twelve in line, and next to them the Seventy, the two quorums, each Seventy moving by itself, its president in the lead. Then came the Presidency, three of them, the Bishopric and then the High Council; after that, the High Priests, then the bodies of elders, each in their organization, and so on until the whole army, priests, teachers, and deacons followed.

It seems to me that this was typical, and I realized that whatever may have been my prejudice or objections against filling these quorums thus leaving vacancies provisionally for what might take place, we should have the opportunity for filling; and for the first time the leading quorums of the church can act as a whole through the providence of God, the Bishop acting as a Counselor. I cannot say why there was a reservation in this, though I believe I have reasons satisfactory to me. It is not necessary now that I should state them, for it is possible that they may be suggested to you from the language of the document itself in one particular.

I am pleased, I am more than that, for as I told you not long ago, I had looked forward to this conference with some degree of regret, but no fear; for I believe that fear of consequences has but little to do with the man who is thoroughly impressed with the thought that he will do his duty and let the consequences take care of themselves; but, we have passed through a great number of peculiar exigencies which have happened to the church, and it has only been by the intervention of God's providence, through the ministration of his Spirit, that we have been more than once kept from being overcome by internal dissension among ourselves. This was as I predicted to you years ago, and some of you will remember it, that which the adversary purposed as the entering wedge—that he would create dissension in the councils of the church, and thus prevent our onward progress. And you will bear me witness that I warned you against it time and again, that that which we had so desperately fought would not again entangle the elders of the church; but if there was a disruption it would come from dissension among ourselves.

The last year has given us an ample token of the acceptance of God in our labors, and whatever of prejudice I may have had hitherto against the entire filling up of the quorums, so far as I am personally concerned they are set aside, and I welcome these brethren gladly.

I may state that last spring while at the conference at Kirtland I had a dream or vision that I told numbers of the brethren. Bro. Griffiths will remember me telling it at his dinner table. I found myself with some few of the brethren near a heavily-loaded wagon, having a pair of horses hitched to it and climbing a difficult hill; it seemed to me that it was loaded with matters pertaining to the church, or materials belonging to the church. Right near the crest of the hill was a very difficult place, one of the horses seemed to be weaker than the other, and all at once he faltered in his steps and came near falling; the other horse pushed on and did the best he could. I was walking on the left hand side of the team and I looked around me and just up at the right of the hill I saw Brother Alexander and Brother William Kelley, and just to the left of me and a little back I saw the Bishop; but I could nowhere see Bro. Blair. I said to them, "Boys, we'll have to give this team a little help." Bro. William Kelley, Bro. E. L., Alexander, and myself got around the wagon to push. I got hold of a wheel and the weaker horse struggled to his feet with the stronger one, and we got over that difficult pass and up the hill. I told this and it was interpreted by Bro. Griffiths. I did not accept the interpretation, but unfortunately it proved afterward to be true.

I may say further than this, that I should have been warned, but was not. While Bro. Blair and myself were in the office, and the day before we started to Independence, he to go to St. Louis, I to return and then go on to conference, which occurred in April (this was in March), in discoursing about his condition and laying out, or trying to lay out the work for the year, he was purposing to take one direction and I another; part of our route to lie together; he was telling how well he felt. I said to him I could not see but what from the circumstances he had twenty years of life and labor yet in him, and he said that he felt strong; that he came of a long-lived race, and that he purposed to do what he could. He spoke of something he was thinking to do, spoke of it quite confidently, and all at once the room turned dark before me, and I heard a voice speaking to my spirit, saying: "You will not live to accomplish it; it will not be done." I turned it away as I have sometimes done; I would not receive it, and hence when Bro. Lake and myself passed the door of Bro. Steffe's house in Kirtland and were called in to see him as I well remember, we found Bro. Blair suffering; and then and there while administering to him I suffered all the pangs of separation from him that it could be possible for my friendship to suffer. It is an unfortunate trait of the family so far as I know, to have these peculiar prescient feelings concerning our own relatives and near friends, and we frequently mourn for them ere they are departed, and with all the poignancy that it is possible for grief to have; and so when those conditions occur by which death ensues and we are separated from them, for some reason a portion of the shock is taken away, because we have already suffered it. I speak this in explanation.

I have labored under extreme difficulty during the past year, such difficulty as you may imagine, and I hope that no one of you has ever experienced the like. I feel that to many of you the way will open this year brighter, give you a more successful ministration than you have had the year past. I foresee that some of you will suffer a great deal, but God will give you grace and power to come off conquerors.

The brethren of the Twelve expressed a desire to extend the right hand of fellowship to the new members individually. Bro. E. C. Briggs arose and addressing the brethren on behalf of the Twelve, said:—

I congratulate these my brethren that have been chosen to occupy the place in behalf of these my brethren, and as one, too, that has looked forward to this great time for forty years and more. I feel to congratulate you and in the name of Jesus Christ welcome you—welcome you not only to this quorum, but to the great work that lies before you. May God, the Infinite One, who established the sacred office to which you have been called, give his angels charge concerning you! May you realize that your strength lies in humility, and meekness, and longsuffering, patience, and diligence; and we will give you the right hand of fellowship in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen. May God bless you; may he be your help, your high tower and your deliverer!

And we say to the Patriarch of the church, O, may God the Infinite One who hath ordained that Israel's good shall be carried on, his people shall be recognized by the Most High, may God bless you, dear brother! And we welcome you in the name of Jesus Christ and in behalf of this great work in which you are now engaged.

The brethren of the Twelve then followed, greeting their newly ordained fellow ministers and extending the right hand of fellowship. President Smith in greeting them said:—

We welcome you on behalf of the church.

President Charles Derry arose and said:—

The brethren of the High Priests' Quorum greet you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Bro. Columbus Scott, of the Presidents of Seventy, said:—

I desire to say in behalf of the Seventy, we congratulate these our brethren, believing they are called of God; and they have our prayers for their success, and we hope to always be able to trust them for their integrity and honesty in the service of God and in behalf of his church.

The entire assembly then arose and sang one verse of the hymn, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet."

The entire proceedings were attended by the spirit of love and solemnity, in keeping with the character and importance of the occasion. It was an era in the history of the Reorganized Church. The people of God rejoiced and worshiped before him.

The conference proceeded to consideration of matters before it. A request for the organization of another quorum of Deacons, together with applications for enrollment in quorums, in the Secretary's hands, from elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, was referred to a committee consisting of Bro. Heman C. Smith and G. T. Griffiths, of the Twelve, and Charles E. Butterworth, of the High Priests.

The committee on credentials reported.

The Presiding Bishop's report was read:—

To the President and Saints in Conference Assembled.—In submitting my annual report I would respectfully call attention to the following items which it seems might be remedied to the advantage of the church.

First: I suggest that the reports of Bishop's agents be settled the first day of January of each year instead of the first day of March, as at the present. And that the Bishop's report close the first day of January instead of the 15th of March, as under the present rule, so that ample time will be had to complete report and have same audited by the first of April.

Second: The printing and sending out circulars known as "Ministry Reports" has, together with the publishing of conference minutes for the year, amounted to the sum of $197.12. It is a question of whether we can afford to pay for this matter each year an amount almost sufficient to keep an elder in the field for a year. If the reports necessary to the transaction of the business of the conference were made by those in charge of missions, with the provision that in case of any dissatisfaction on the part of any laborer in the field he should have the privilege of presenting his objections to the President of the Church or General Conference for consideration, it would answer the purpose as completely as does the present, and save the expense to the church.

Third: Besides being expensive, it is of doubtful propriety at the present time to publish an itemized account of the receipts and expenditures of the Bishop and agents. Many who contribute to the fund request that no publication be made, or if so without the use of their names. Tithes and offerings for the present year amounting to more than $3,000 have been made in this way. With a careful auditing committee there is no more danger of loss than if items are published, and each member can send and get statement in writing of his or her account at any time; and this many have to do when the account is published. The publication of such report for last year cost $113.21. Each year the expense increases instead of diminishing. I make the statement touching the matter so that all may at least think over it during the ensuing year.

Fourth: It is necessary in order to properly keep the accounts of the department and preserve the books and papers of the office to have another room at least in which to do business. It is hoped that action may be taken at once to supply this need as it will save sufficient to the church in a short time to more than meet the outlay now required; besides, make it possible to have the work better done.

This may be accomplished by addition to present building, or erecting a new one on the church lots adjoining.

Owing to the illness of the bookkeeper, Elder M. H. Forscutt, we have lacked help in preparing the report for the auditing committee to pass upon, and the committee has been compelled to take the items and help make up parts of the report. While this gives it a good opportunity to find errors, if any exist, we recognize the fact that the members have done much work which we could not in propriety have asked them to do. Trusting however this has been a freewill donation, we take this opportunity of extending to them the thanks of the office.

Very respectfully submitted,
E. L. KELLEY, Bishop.

The auditing committee's report and the summary of the Bishop's accounts were also read, but permission was granted to withdraw them for a time. The summary showed receipts for the year, including balance at last report, $31,650.38, expenditures $30,538.16, balance $1,112.22; assets $54,951.90, liabilities $16,875.24; net assets $37,876.66. The figures may be slightly changed after final report from auditing committee. For complete summary, see regular minutes.

The Board of Trustees of Graceland College made its annual report:—

GRACELAND COLLEGE.

During the past year Graceland College has been completed. January 1, 1897, it was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies and about $500 was donated by the visitors in attendance as a dedicatory offering.

Since then school has been held in the new building with about fifty students in attendance, and more are needed.

Graceland Addition, upon which the college is located, consists of sixty-six acres. These acres are surveyed into 145 beautiful residence lots, with drives and shade trees bordering them.

In building this institution of learning the Board of Trustees have had to run in debt, and it is from the sale of these lots and private donations that they expect to pay the debt.

Prices have been placed within the reach of all; and it is to every family of Latter Day Saints that we appeal now, to purchase one or more lots, that Graceland College may be free from any incumbrance. Prices of lots are from $150 to $250.

There are two trustees to be selected to succeed Pres. Joseph Smith and William Anderson, whose terms of office have expired.

WILLIAM ANDERSON, Treasurer.

D. F. NICHOLSON, Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 10, 1897.

The First and Fourth quorums of Priests and the General Sunday School Association reported.

The following additional communication from the Church Recorder was read:—

Brethren in General Conference:—After long consideration of the matter I have decided to ask to either be entirely released as Church Recorder at this session, or, if I am continued for another year, that some one be placed in the office during the last part of the year (at least), both to assist and to learn the routine order needful before he takes the entire charge of the office. It is with the conference to release me in full or as suggested. My health has failed so much that I can no longer endure the close confinement of the office; and though I do not think that the work of the coming year will be as tedious as that of the past one, yet I would be glad of some arrangement for partial or entire release, after twenty-three years of labor in this department.

Respectfully yours,
H. A. STEBBINS.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 10, 1897.

The following was then adopted:—

Resolved that we accede to the request of the Recorder that one be appointed to assist him.

The selection was left with the Bishop and First Presidency.

A rising vote of thanks was tendered Bro. Stebbins for his past services as Church Recorder, and for which he expressed appreciation.

The Third Quorum of Priests reported. The chair announced that Tuesday evening would be occupied by the Daughters of Zion in a program presenting their work.

Announcements were made and the memorable session was brought to a close by singing the following hymn, composed for the occasion by Elder Joseph Luff:—

A SONG OF GLADNESS.

(TUNE: "Rescue the Perishing.")

Hark! from celestial spheres
Comes a glad message,
Filling our hearts with a heavenly flame;
It is the voice of God,
For the blest Spirit
Bears solemn witness in Christ's holy name.

CHO.—Hail to the truth divine—

Praise to its Author—

Glory to God on high! loudly proclaim.

Darkness no longer reigns—

Doubt has departed—

Light! Glorious light! shines in splendor around;

Now let all fear depart,

Dread apprehension

End, and the notes of our triumph resound.

CHO.—Swell now the anthem loud—

Sing hallelujah!

God and his people in union are found.

Behold the Quorums now

Stand in their places

Filled with the men whom our Lord doth approve;

Ready to bear abroad

Salvation's tidings—

Glorious message and mission of love.

CHO.—Angels before them go!

God be their rearward!

Jesus upon them pour life from above!

See now the spacious field,

"White unto harvest,"

Waits for the sickles now glistening here.

Thrust in with might and main,

Reap while the day lasts,

Gather the sheaves ere the night doth appear.

CHO.—Forward! for hast'ning time—

Swift day of warning,

Tells that the coming of Jesus is near!

Church of the living God,

Rise now in grandeur—

Welcome the signal that waves from the skies;

Prophet and Patriarch—

Quorums and Councils

Answer the summons; Arise! Saints, arise!

CHO.—Israel, thy light behold,
God gives thee glory,
Rise in thy majesty—Zion arise!

President Joseph Smith then pronounced the benediction.

The sermon at the evening service was delivered by Elder T. W. Williams, who filled the appointment first made for Bro. James McKiernan, the latter being excused because of quorum business. Bro. F. G. Pitt assisted.

Tuesday, the 13th.—The young people held a prayer meeting at 7:30 a. m. in charge of Bro. A. W. Ballard, of Omaha, Nebraska. The regular prayer meeting at 8:30 was held in charge of Brn. J. H. Peters and J. S. Snively.

At 10:30 a. m. Bro. F. C. Keck preached the sermon. He was assisted by Bro. J. R. Sutton.

Business was resumed at 1:30 p. m., Pres. Joseph Smith in the chair, assisted by Counselors A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley. The minutes were read, when the following communication from the Twelve was presented:—

To the Conference:—The quorum met at the residence of Elder A. H. Smith at 7:30 p. m. April 12, 1897.

Bro. John H. Lake was chosen to preside until a permanent organization should be effected. Bro. William H. Kelley was unanimously chosen president of the quorum, and a resolution was passed requesting the conference to provide for his ordination at as early a time as practicable.

Bro. Heman C. Smith was unanimously re-elected secretary of the quorum. Bro. Joseph Luff resigned as Assistant Secretary, and Bro. John W. Wight was chosen to succeed him.

The following resolution was adopted regarding Bro. A. H. Smith our retiring President:—

LAMONI, Iowa, April 12, 1897.

Resolved, that we tender to President A. H. Smith our thanks for his excellent service as President of this quorum; and that while we regret our loss of his services as a member and quorum President, we nevertheless rejoice in the fact of his promotion to the offices of Patriarch, and Counselor to the President of the Church. And further: That we hereby assure him that our love for him shall continue, as well as our prayers, that God may graciously bless him in his new relations and inspire him unto service therein as acceptable to God and the church as his work with this quorum has been.

Attest { JOHN H. LAKE, Pres.
HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec.

The ordination of Bro. William H. Kelley as President of the Twelve was approved and ordered provided for.

The matter deferred from the 9th concerning the time of holding the next conference was taken up. The amendment inserting 1899 for 1898, was considered. A motion to further amend by adding "or at the call of the President," was offered and discussed at length. Both amendments were defeated and the motion to meet April 6, 1898, was adopted.

The place of meeting was then provided for. Independence, Missouri, Boston, Massachusetts, Lamoni, Iowa, Sacramento, California, and Sydney, Australia, were placed in nomination. An invitation from the Independence delegates to meet at Independence was read. The vote was in favor of Independence and was made unanimous.

The committee to whom was referred applications from elders, priests, teachers, and deacons reported. The report was received, spread upon the minutes, and the Church Secretary authorized to enroll in proper numbers and publish in the HERALD. A number of additional applications were also so provided for.

The Fifth Quorum of Elders reported.

A joint council of the two quorums of Seventy reported. The report presented the nomination of Bro. F. M. Sheehy for ordination as a President of Seventy, which it had approved. It also reported a form of license for the Seventy and asked that the Church Seal and attestation of the Church Secretary be ordered affixed thereto.

Consideration of business was suspended at this juncture, announcements were made, and the assembly dismissed.

The evening hour was occupied in presenting a program of the work of the Daughters of Zion, Bro. F. M. Sheehy in charge. The program consisted of music, addresses, and an essay read by one of the sisters.

Wednesday, the 14th.—Young people's prayer meeting at 7:30 in charge of Brn. C. P. Faul and H. W. Belleville.

prayer by Bro. John Shippy. Minutes read and approved.

The item deferred from the 13th—request that church seal and attestation of Church Secretary be affixed to licenses of the Seventy—was taken up. A motion to refer to the Presidency and Twelve was lost. A motion striking out of the joint council's report that portion referring to the seal and attestation of the Church Secretary, was adopted. The form of license presented was then approved. That portion of the report referring to the ordination of Bro. F. M. Sheehy was indorsed, and the President authorized to provide for the ordination.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported: 67 members, 38 present, 65 reported; 604 baptisms. Three ordained to the Quorum of Twelve, one selected for a President of Seventy. The following named, selected for seventies by the presidents, were accepted for quorum membership, and their ordinations asked: Hubert Case, David Smith, A. V. Closson, W. H. Kephart, George Jenkins, and Gomer Reese.

Ebeling, selected by Presidents and approved by the quorum. Resolutions on the death of Bro. William Thompson and Bro. M. P. Madison and wife were also presented. See complete report in minutes.

The Second Quorum of Elders reported.

Ordinations asked for in quorum reports were then taken up, and approved, and provided for, after those named for the Seventy present had signified a willingness to accept, all of whom had received intimation of the call to the office of Seventy. The list of requests for ordinations approved, in addition to those named in the reports of the First and Second Seventy, are as follows: Bro. H. N. Snively, Second Counselor to President First Quorum of Elders; Bro.

Sheehy as a President of Seventy by Brn. Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, E. L. Kelley, and Charles Derry. Bro. Charles E. Butterworth as a High Counselor by Brn. A. H. Smith, Joseph Smith, E. L. Closson a Seventy by Brn. R. J. Anthony and Joseph Luff. Bro. John Wahlstrom First Counselor in Second Quorum of Elders by Brn. White, Griffiths, and Scott. Bro. A. C. Barmore a Seventy by Brn. Briggs and McKiernan. Bro. J. M. Brown First Counselor in Fourth Quorum of Elders by Brn. Luff and Anthony. Bro. O. P. Sutherland Second Counselor in Third Quorum of Elders by Brn. Scott, Griffiths, and White. Bro. J. W. Gilbert Second Counselor in Fourth Quorum of Elders by Brn. Anthony and Luff. The first named was speaker in each instance.

Bro. William H. Kelley, as President of the Twelve, made a statement as follows:—

I have very little to say in assuming this position this afternoon. I try to feel its importance and realize its worth; at the same time I cannot conceive that it is very far removed from the responsibility that has been upon me hitherto, and that borne by my associate brethren. What I wish to say is that in the performance of the duties of this office I hope to have the confidence, faith, and prayers of my brethren and sisters, for I need them. I shall endeavor to do right, and if I do not do perfectly so, it will be an error of the head instead of the heart, and I will be open all the time for correction, and willingly so.

My experience teaches me that the higher one goes the worse it is for him if he chances to fall. I don't mind falling off a stoop, that doesn't hurt; but when we climb up pretty high and then chance to fall, it is apt to hurt. I don't want to do that, or to do anything that will bring reproach or disrespect upon me or my colleagues or upon the work in any form, and shall put forth effort not to do so. I have already been admonished, as I conceive, that I may expect darts and criticisms from sources that I would least expect; that I will be more a target for others than hitherto, and some trusted ones may be among them. I hope this won't turn out to be correct.

There is one thing about it. If I know myself, I never aspired to any office in this church but one. I wanted to be an elder and preach the gospel away back here when I was in the State of Iowa. I don't think I would have been satisfied without that, and I was satisfied with that; and I think the Lord knew it, so at my first ordination they didn't ask me anything about which I desired, but they ordained me a seventy. I never asked for anything else. So far as aspiring to this position, or to a position in the quorum, I can safely say I believe that I never had the least aspiration for it. I recognize that it is one of worth and one that an individual may well be proud in filling, and such as that. I appreciate that and that if it be properly filled a person is entitled to credit, and that the church is willing to give him credit for it. I believe that and hence it is an incentive that whatever may be the position, that one shall discharge the duties of the office acceptably to God, and when it is acceptable to him it must be acceptable to the church.

I crave an interest in your prayers and fellowship; and may God bless us together in our work in the few years that is still allotted to some of us, that all may be well in the end, is my prayer. Amen.

The following appointments of the

The Board of Directors of Graceland College reported:—

Report of the Board of Directors of Graceland College to the General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, convened in Lamoni, Iowa, April 6, 1897.

A college faculty was hired by the Board for the current year, consisting of the following: M. H. Forscutt, Dean; T. J. Fitzpatrick, Professor of Mathematics, Botany, and Geology; J. T. Pence, Professor of Greek and Latin; Mrs. T. J. Fitzpatrick, Professor of German and French; J. A. Gunsolley, Principal of Commercial Department; Miss Ruth Lyman Cobb, Professor of Elocution; Miss Nellie Davis, Professor of Instrumental Music; Mrs. Viola Blair, Professor of Vocal Music.

The enrollment for this year has been as follows: Collegiate department, 17; Preparatory department, 10; Commercial department, 20; total, 47. Deducting those counted twice which is four, leaves a net total of 43. This does not include students in music and elocution.

The cost of running the college this year has been approximately $2,760. This includes only the salaries of professors and janitor, and the cost of fuel.

It is estimated that the cost of running the college next year will be at least as great if not greater; and hence it will take at least one hundred students each paying full tuition to make the institution self-sustaining.

Within the current college year, there have been expended for library purposes $93.33. One hundred and eighty-three volumes have been added to the library by purchase and donation since June 15, 1896, making the total number now in the library 824. There are also in the town ready for delivery to the Librarian, the complete works of the later Bancroft, consisting of thirty-six volumes, which will make the total number 860 volumes, a very acceptable beginning for what it is hoped will some day reflect honor upon the college and all who have assisted in building it up. Many of the volumes in the library are the gifts of those who have taken an interest in founding this indispensable adjunct of successful college work; and we beg leave to respectfully state that donations of this character are always held to be in order, and are always thankfully received.

An election will be needed to fill vacancies occurring in the Board by the expiration of the terms of office of Alexander H. Smith, J. R. Smith, and D. F. Lambert.

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH SMITH,
President of Board.
D. F. LAMBERT, Secretary.

Remaining items of business were stated, and adjournment followed; benediction by President Joseph Smith.

Bro. W. H. Kephart addressed the congregation in the evening hour, assisted by Bro. F. M. Slover.

Thursday, the 15th.—Prayer meeting by the young people at 7:30 a. m., in charge of Bro. G. W. Robley; regular prayer meeting at 8:30, Bro. George Montague and J. R. Evans presiding.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 15, 1897.

The report was adopted and the appointments approved.

The Second Quorum of Seventy presented an additional report. The first portion of the report was concurred in by the First Seventy, and was adopted by the conference. It is as follows:—

Whereas, the action of yesterday's business session regarding the license of Seventies leaves them without anything to show that we are general officers of the church; and

Whereas, their ordination is by direction of the General Conference; therefore be it

Resolved, that we petition the body for a license signed by the President and Secretary of the church showing our ordination and authority as Seventies in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The second portion of the report referring to appointments made by district presidents was amended by striking out the word "presidents" in the preamble. The following substitute was then moved and adopted:—

Resolved that districts be required to consult with and secure the consent of the missionary in charge before making such appointments.

A resolution that the Board of Publication be instructed to compile and publish a complete concordance of the Book of Mormon as speedily as possible, was adopted.

The suggestions in the Bishop's report were taken up.

Suggestion No. 1, amended, was adopted. It provides that the reports of Bishop's agents be closed December 31 of each year, instead of March 1, as at present; and that the Bishop's report close December 31 instead of March 15 as at present, that ample time may be had to complete report and have it audited by April 1.

No. 2, providing that the publication of ministry reports be dispensed with, and that those in charge of missions make necessary reports; with the provision that in case of dissatisfaction on the part of any laborer in the field he have privilege to present his objections to the President of the Church or to the General Conference, was also adopted.

No. 3, referring to dispensing with publication of Bishop's itemized report, was deferred to next conference for consideration.

No. 4, concerning providing additional room for the Bishop's offices, was referred to the Presidency and Bishop, with power to act.

The report as amended and clause deferred was adopted.

The Bishop was authorized to provide blank forms for financial reports of the ministry.

A recommendation from the auditing committee, that funds deposited by the Bishop be indicated as church funds, was denied, after a statement made by the Bishop.

A committee was appointed to define duties and privileges of the auditing committee on Herald Office and Bishop's books; viz., Brn. J. M. Terry, R. M. Elvin, F. B. Blair.

The missionary division of the State of Illinois was referred to the First Presidency.

Announcements, and adjournment to nine o'clock in the morning followed, benediction by Bishop Kelley.

Preaching at 7:30 by Bro. J. F. Mintun, Bro. J. S. Roth assistant. Three baptized during the day were confirmed.

Friday, the 16th.—Young people's prayer meeting at 7:30 a.m. in charge of Bro. J. W. Peterson.

Business session opened at nine o'clock, President Smith presiding, prayer by Bro. J. W. Wight. Minutes read, approved.

A resolution providing that vacancies in the quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons may be filled by unanimous action of quorum officers, applications for quorum membership to be obtained from the Church Secretary, and members so enrolled to be subject to ratification of members of quorums, was adopted.

A motion providing that parties committing criminal offenses whose whereabouts is unknown be cited to trial through the HERALD, was denied.

The following, from the First Presidency, concerning the mission division of the State of Illinois, was adopted:—

The Presidency, to whom was submitted the matter of the Nauvoo district and the boundary line between the Northern and Southern Illinois districts, hereby report:—

That the Nauvoo district has never been considered as belonging to the Northern Illinois district, although the line of division between it and the Southern Illinois district runs south of Hancock and Adams Counties in Illinois, which counties are in the Northern Illinois district, as are Brown and Pike, the latter being in the Southern district.

Part of the Nauvoo district lies in Missouri; the larger part of the district, however, lies in Iowa. We therefore recommend that the district be under the joint jurisdiction of the missionaries in charge of the Missouri and Southern Illinois, the Northern Illinois and Wisconsin and the State of Iowa; the three to confer and agree as to which one of the three the authorities of the district should report to, and have immediate charge; and in case the three fail to agree, the Presidency will then decide; and appoint accordingly, subject to conference action and approval.

JOSEPH SMITH, } Of the ALEX. H. SMITH, } Presidency.

The following, defining duties of auditors, was adopted:—

We your committee to whom was referred the defining of "the duties, powers, and privileges of the auditing committee," beg leave and report as follows:—

In our opinion it is the duty of the auditing committee to examine carefully all accounts, compare the several entries with the corresponding vouchers, and to determine as to the real possession of the balance on hand, if any. If accuracy be found to so certify; if otherwise, to point out errors to the body appointing.

It is the privilege of such a committee to determine the value of all stock, machinery, tools, and other appurtenances of the Herald Office plant, bringing to their aid such expert help as may be required to insure correctness, so far as possible. It is expected that they treat with courtesy the employees of the Herald and Bishop's offices, as they may expect from them the same, with such aid as can be bestowed by them without undue interference with duties otherwise imposed.

The time and place of the work be left discretionary with the committee; provided, however, that the work be completed in time, that the duly certified report may be presented to the ensuing General Conference.

Respectfully submitted,

J. M. TERRY.

R. M. ELVIN.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. I. M. SMITH wrote from Fremont, Indiana, March 31. He was laboring for a time in that region of country where he had labored in former years. He reports well of the labors of Brn. Barmore, Daniel, and others.

Bro. W. M. Keck reports a Sunday school at Joy, Illinois, with an attendance of forty to sixty, with prospects for growth. The HERALD publishes statistical reports as sent, hence those reporting should be looked to for corrections.

Bro. George Green preached at the Sunday evening service of late convention and conference of Chatham, Ontario, district; not Bro. R. Coburn; error in report. Four baptized of late at Ridgetown and much good accomplished.

Bro. George McKnight writes from Au Gres, Michigan; Bro. David Smith had been laboring there with good effect among the people generally. Bro. McKnight relates manifestations that confirm the truth of the word he has obeyed.

Turkey has declared war against Greece and several severe battles have been fought in Macedonia. The Turks are the strongest in land forces; the Greeks have a superior fleet. It is expected that the struggle will prove a desperate one and that it will involve some of the great powers in the conflict.

"Dig channels for the stream of love,
Where they may broadly run;
And love has overflowing streams
To fill them every one.

"For we must share if we would keep
That good thing from above;
Ceasing to give we cease to have,
Such is the law of love."

WHEN?

When will he come?
Will it be when April's laughter
Rings in the song of the woodland brook
And the gusts that follow after?
When the apple-boughs are like pale, pink flames,

And in wooded field and fallow
The dandelions' stars of gold
Shine in each dimpled hollow?

When will He come?
When the tremulous summer skies
Are braided with tangled wreaths of stars,
And all the dusky, odorous gloom
Is a-glitter with fire flies?
Through the darkness and the dew
Shall I hear his solemn voice—
"Lo! a message I bring to you, Lift up your heart, rejoice!"

When will He come?
When the autumn leaves are falling,
Through the drip, drip of the rain on the pane
Shall I hear Him calling, calling?
Will He come alone to me then,
Or will come also those Whom years ago I kissed with anguished lips,

Whom neither suns nor snows
Nor any fear or doubt shall vex or grieve,
Over whose calmed souls,
All sweet tranquillity shall brood in peace,
Though years eternal roll.

How will He come?
As a deliverance from days of pain
Or nights of anguished throes?
A touch of healing, or a breath of balm
To hearts surcharged with woes?
Or, in an instant like a swift, sharp sword
Sudden, and sure and keen,
A quick transition from this world I know,
To that new world unseen?

When He shall come
It matters not, nor can our doubts or fears Change, or make smooth the path that He hath made.
I am content, if, gazing on His face
He fills my spirit with His wondrous grace
That I be not afraid.—Union Signal.

HONOLULU, Hawaiian Island.

Dear Sisters.—Allow me to write to you who are in the faith of our Savior Jesus Christ; showing the grace of our Lord, how I came a member of the true church. Many years ago, I was a member of the Protestant Church (Calvinist) with my husband. In July 15, 1889, he was ordained to be a minister under contract with the Protestant Church for three years. When the Queen of our island was "dethroned" many of our members joined in different religions. But for myself I stay at home and did not go to my church. While I was thinking to join in the other churches, I was afraid they will not preach like the church I was taught in. October 3, 1895, that evening I was worrying for myself to get the true church, asking with tears to our Lord to have mercy on me, to show the way of truth and righteousness. By asking with faith I was showed in a dream to be baptized. After my dream I went to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. While I was listen Elder G. J. Waller preaching, my husband came in and sat beside me. I have not heard the starts of his preaching, but I heard his voice of warning to his members to have faith in the gospel of Christ so as to have eternal life for their souls, explaining the immersion in the water of baptism, and he spoke so many precious words in that service. I was pleased to hear him preaching, and thank God of showing me the truth church. After the service was over Elder G. J. Waller came right to us and shook hands. We were very pleased, because in the other churches I have seen the pastors do not come and shake hands with their members. When he was standing with us I told him I like to become a member of the church. He was not in a hurry to answer but afterwards he warned me in the Scripture of our Savior. That day I was baptized. I thank the Lord for his kindness and mercy, to show me the way of truth and righteousness in his blessed gospel. After I was a member of the true Church of Christ, my faith was tried in different sickness, but through laying on of hands by Elder G. J. Waller the Lord save me in a short time from my afflictions.

From seeing all my trials and afflictions in sickness the laying on of hands of the elder, my husband who was sick with rheumatism at the same time (he had that sickness for fifteen years) came to understand the verses in the Epistle of James 5: 14, 15. He told me to send for the elder to come and lay hands on him. By laying on of hands of the elder he got all right and he came in a member of our church. He is more than a year in the truth Church of Jesus Christ. I have not seen him lying in bed of sick for more than seven times, but before he had it three or four times a month, but now he is all right. His father and mother both came into the church afterwards.

This is a great change to him in his afflictions in the true light of the gospel. I am happy that we are in the same pasture of Jesus Christ, enjoying the work and obeying the teaching of our church. The works of our Savior among us natives are improved by the strength and faithfulness of Elder G. J. Waller, showing the gospel and telling us members to have faith in the Lord, and ask him to have more laborers in our field. Praying with faith before our Lord, our desire was granted by our Savior Jesus Christ. Two of our brothers called and ordained to help the work of our church, Bro. Ed Ingham for an elder and Bro. G. Poepoe a priest. When our presiding elder was absent in United States, for nearly three months, the work was left with our younger brothers, laboring with us in harmony and love. I love the works of our true church and desire to help my brothers, sisters, and children in the true work of our Savior. I have stronger faith and light from the teaching of our church, Sunday school, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, enjoying myself to read in Saints' Herald, Zions' Ensign, Autumn Leaves, and Zion's Hope, seeing the work of our Savior published in all these papers in different places of the world.

Remember us Hawaiians in your prayers.

With greeting, your sister in the faith,

Editors Herald:—The white wings of your ever-welcome little bark come floating towards us once more from across the "vast deep," freighted with a precious cargo of spiritual aid and moral and mental encouragement in the eternal, never-ending strife against Satanic powers. Week by week, as the welcome mail arrives, your pages are hastily scanned to find either old and familiar names, like some well-remembered faces looming upon us from the fire and warmth of the social and joyful hearth; or new and unfamiliar names, but evidencing plainly enough, the old and soul-thrilling Spirit of bygone days so comforting to my dear wife and myself.

The London branch has never forgotten and will never forget the debt of gratitude she owes her beloved American brethren who so nobly and so generously responded to her appeal for needed funds to raise a house of prayer and of gospel propaganda in this, the Babylon of the eastern hemisphere, where alas! it and many more such tabernacles are supremely needed. Money is very scarce in this end of the town indeed; and the committee are but themselves working men who find it very hard to make ends meet; but I understand an installment is on its way to Bro. Woods, or is about shortly to be dispatched to him. My deepest and most painful regret is my inability to help in any other way than by giving the branch my services as organist and clerk.

Bro. Caffall left us last Friday for Leeds, as I understand; and I can with confidence assert that the day will be far distant when we shall as a branch, forget his lucid and masterly discourses upon the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith. Strangers too were appreciably edified and permanently enlightened. Discourses of this character tend to cement the brotherhood, not simply of men but of nations; while books, whether scholastic or otherwise, which by willful and deliberate suppression or distortion of facts tend to alienate from one another those whom Almighty God has "made of one blood for to dwell on the face of the earth," are in no small degree responsible for the terrible and disastrous wars which from time to time ensue as the direct result and outcome of years, nay generations, of mutual misunderstandings and baseless assertions. For instance, the eloquent and learned Dr. Page Hopps, in his eclectic and world-renowned treatise upon America and the Americans, after paying a high tribute to the "sterling worth and noble qualities of the American people" (which I will not here reproduce, for fear of flattering my readers), proceeds to wonder at and deplore their "widespread spirit of acerbity and animosity towards the English as a people, so completely at variance with the" brotherly and cordial sentiments manifested towards the Americans during his entire lecturing tour in Great Britain. He was "intensely puzzled to divine its cause, till happening, upon his American tour to hear a class in school reading from an almost universally used American compendium of national history, he was equally pained and surprised at the numerous perversions and distortions of fundamental facts which he then heard for the first time in his life!

The most glaring and prominent, not to say distinctly mischievous distortion and fabrication was a statement attributing the entire war of independence in America to the "hatred and oppression of the Americans" by the "British nation," as such, when any English child in the first grade of political economy at school, could have informed the writer of that book that the English people, (as such) had no more to do with the affair than the Yahoos, or the Cannibal Islands; the matter being entirely forced upon the English people by the king and his cabinet ministers. "But even supposing," says Dr. Hopps, "merely for the purpose of the argument, that a bare majority of the English nation were talked or cajoled into an acquiescence, where is there either sense, justice, or righteousness in still fanning and perpetuating the flames of discord and animosity against the present generation of English men and women who never had the question placed before them, and who, had it been, would have unquestionably and strenuously opposed it?"

Your brother in the hope of truth's final triumph,
F. R. TUBB.

DOWNES, Oklahoma, April 5.

Editors Herald:—People here are considerably agitated over the terrible work of death and devastation of a cyclone which visited the city of Chandler, Oklahoma Territory, Tuesday, March 30. In the short space of a few seconds a town of 1,500 was completely destroyed, only two buildings being left. To add to the horror, fire broke out in the debris, and many who were confined and unable to extricate themselves, perished in the flames. Neighboring towns are coming nobly to the rescue, and sending relief in money, etc., to the distressed.

The prospects are encouraging for the work in Oklahoma Territory. As a result of labor at Nicely, with the assistance of Bro. T. P. Powell who lives there, and Bro. E. A. Pratt who is traveling with me, two were baptized and a promising saints Sunday school organized. Notwithstanding Bro. Powell is farming and practicing medicine, he has appointments nearly every Sunday.

We next visited Blain County where the mother and two brothers of Bro. W. E. Peak live, and held a two weeks meeting. Rev. J. M. Austin, of the Disciple Church, was present at a few services and thought it his duty to give us a "rounding up." We answered him, and the congregation manifested their approval of our position audibly. The skirmish ended by him challenging to discuss the differences of our respective churches. He affirms the Christian Church (now called Campbellites) was established on the first Pentecost after the Resurrection A. D. 33, and is in harmony, etc. We to affirm a similar one.

Leaving there for Downs, we stopped at Okarche, where Bro. H. K. Rowland, the genial president of the Oklahoma branch, and Miss Anna Ratcliff were made one. We find Bro. and Sr. Geo. M. Hiles, who live near Downs, alive in the work, but living where a great deal of prejudice exists, and few come to hear.

Would like to hear from Saints in Oklahoma, who want preaching in their localities.

Have felt the Spirit to a marked degree in my labor here, which encourages me to continue.

My permanent mission address is Nicely, Oklahoma.

In bonds,

W. S. MACRAE.

BEDISON, Missouri, April 5.

Editors Herald.—Another church year has to-day its end, and not having written the Herald for some time, I feel like expressing to some extent my thoughts, looking backward over the past as well as forward hopefully to what the future may develop, having the assurance that God has done and will do all things well. But my experience has, to a great extent, been one of peculiar trial; not that I would now complain at all, but rather rejoice in the refining process, and in the fact that I have been enabled to endure to accomplish some good by the way, and by the grace of God to gain something in spiritual strength.

Leaving Colorado the latter part of November, I have labored in the Nodaway, Missouri, district during the winter past, and have realized that God has blessed me to a greater extent than in any previous experience, though I am yet far from realizing my own ideal or being perfect in my sphere of action. And while I have felt to rejoice much in the degree of the Spirit which has been granted me of late, especially since coming into this field, my labors ended yesterday with one of the saddest of sad experiences, the dread but undefined premonitions of which had been hovering over me for several weeks.

The death of Bro. M. P. Madison by lightning stroke last August will be remembered by Herald readers. He was at his post of duty when so suddenly called away, and was making every effort to promote his Master's work, which as a seventy he seemingly gave every promise of being useful in.

And yesterday the young wife whom he left to mourn was laid away beside him, meeting her death also through a most shocking accident.

At about noon last Friday, the 2d inst., and while at Bro. Ed Fannon's house, I heard some one cry out, "There's a woman in the road on fire!" and presently Sr. Fannon came in crying and saying it was Hannah Madison. Ere I reached the spot, Sr. Hannah had been taken into Bro. Froyd's, whither she had run for succor, her clothing having been completely burned off from her body, excepting a few shreds, and, as a brother said, she was not simply burned, but roasted, much of her flesh being a complete crisp. She had been heating varnish on the stove; it had run over and got afire. In trying to take the varnish off and put the fire out her clothing caught.

She ran out and down the road, the blaze flaming upwards, and being fanned by the wind. When opposite Bro. Froyd's, and just ready to drop, she was met by Mary Froyd with a blanket and shortly by others. Though at first she implored Bro. Fannon to kill her, when placed upon the bed, she determinedly resigned herself to God and her fate, whatever it might be, and without screams, outcries, or murmurs endured the suffering, which she said was impossible for tongue to describe, until death ended all about eight hours after the accident.

Knowing something of her zeal and devotion to the church, her burdens and trials in being left alone to care for and manage the home and farm which had been left her, and of her brave spirit in the midst of afflictions unmentioned by the writer, her ending seemed unspeakably sad and calculated to try the faith of some.

She had been blessed of the Lord from her fifteenth year with the gift of prophecy, which she often exercised to the edification of the saints. But three weeks before the accident I was present in one of the best prayer and testimony meetings which I ever attended, and she spoke by the Spirit to several, the writer included, then to all present, saying that trials and dark clouds were hovering over, and exhorting to stand in holy places.

She was a great help in the Sunday school, and a veritable pillar in the work at Bedison, though not twenty years of age. To say that she will be missed expresses it mildly. I leave for conference with sad reflections, yet kind and pleasant memories so far as this part of the vineyard is concerned, and filled to some extent with that love for the brethren which is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost. Like others I can realize that I have made some mistakes in the past, but if at any time I have thought unkindly or judged harshly of others, I have no such feelings now, and hope to be able so to walk in love that it may be sufficient for enemies, if I should have them, as well as friends. I would fain make mention of many who have assisted and encouraged me in various ways whose zeal and devotion to this good cause I admire and wish to encourage, but I must not trespass too far on your space but leave other thoughts relative to the work for another time. Desiring to press onward and upward, and ever be in line of duty, I remain,

Your brother,

M. F. GOWELL.

GIFTS AND CALLINGS.

THE gifts and calling of God are without repentance.—Rom. 11:20.

The above is an axiom with God, as Paul here lets us understand, hence Israel may be saved irrespective of repentance without any injustice to the Gentile world.

With the foregoing view before us it is easy to account for the manifestations of supernatural power, healing, visions, etc., outside the Church of Jesus Christ, and still retain the idea that every good gift cometh from God. Jeremiah had the gifts and callings of a prophet before birth, surely rather early for repentance. Officers in our church are ordained according to the gifts within them.

Now if this position be correct, we can also account for the seeming inconsistency in spiritual manifestations among our own people. We often see persons exercising gifts of tongues, prophecy, or healing, whom we have good reasons to believe are not so moral, or penitent as others who seem to have little spirituality. All this is because those gifts are inherited the same as the gifts of music, and come from God, the author of all good, although it does not necessarily follow that God is going to prompt their use on every or any occasion.

If a saint who is ill sends for an elder and is healed through administration, it of itself is no proof that God directly had anything to do with the healing. It would simply show that the saint had within him the gift of faith to be healed, or that the elder had the gift of faith to heal, or that both had their gift, and that Satan, who was the prime cause of the disease and every evil, did not prevent or had not the power to prevent the healing.

The gift of healing comes from God with life itself, and is born in all persons in varying degrees, universally as is music; but while we see few expert musicians, so we rarely meet great healers; though as there are many dabblers in music, so in proportion as it becomes a fad we see dabblers in healing.

Just now healing is becoming popular under the renown of Francis Schlatter. Healing is always a goodly work, but that he is healing through the warrant of the Holy Ghost we cannot concede. He is just exercising the power that God gave him with life, and Satan in many instances cannot interfere, or for certain reasons will not interfere with the healing.

We can now see why even Spiritualists number healers in their ranks. Satan knows the efficacy of healing under the auspices of the church, and in order to duplicate it he allows the virtue of the inherent gifts in individual Spiritualists to develop. This gives an impetus to his own ranks; and besides he zealously contests every case of administration in the church, hence even in the exercise of their own rightful ordinance, Latter Day Saints are handicapped, unless they get the Holy Spirit to offset the opposing influence of Satan when healing would naturally result; but in extreme cases of disease, where even nature itself is exhausted, healing would be impossible without the power of God.

The Rev. Spurgeon had the gift of healing to a remarkable degree, yet he never understood it and could not safely advise others of his own faith concerning it. Christian scientists practice faith-healing with some success, yet they fail to properly explain it.

We notice that on visiting the sick some persons will make the patient feel almost well while others make him worse, yet the former may never discover that they have the gift of healing. Again, we see many persons whom disease affects but slightly, while others are prostrated for days or weeks, yet the former may never discover that within them and irrespective of repentance, there lies a gift which if properly brought out would be faith to be healed.

The gift of tongues in a person indicates a very fine sense of the hearing of spirit voice word for word, as does the gift of prophecy show the faculty of imbibing spirit ideas, oftentimes word for word; yet here again are we struck with the varying degrees in which they are found, and how much slower they develop in some than others.

Occasionally these gifts are found in an almost abnormal condition, and such subjects are liable to become the medium of deceptive spirit communication. In the world they often become mediums of spiritism and retrograde as they are controlled by bad spirits; but in the church, if carefully protected, they become the mouthpieces of the Holy Spirit, inasmuch as they purify themselves unto repentance.

In all ages the world has produced persons remarkable for prophetic and inspirational powers, such as Confucius, Buddha, and Mohammed, though perhaps the brighter example of a natural prophet was Swedenborg. He was not only a man of exceptional inherent prophetic genius, but was also an example of a learned man with an almost inexhaustible fund of knowledge before there was turned upon him the dazzling vision of a spirit world. Who can wonder at the mistakes of the man, great and good though he was, as he vainly endeavored to reconcile his preconceived ideas with the myriads of deceptive spirits in their mazy circles around the world yet unseen by the ordinary mortal.

John the Divine knew of the precocious aptitude in some to interpret spirit mind, hence he gave the rule to try the spirits by the record established by the carefully approved and tried prophets.

Jesus knew that those gifts were natural and the liability of some of them to be cultivated by the world, therefore he never applied them as a means of conversion.

TACTICS OF DISCIPLES.—NO. 4.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

MR. TAYLOR after omitting Elder McDowell's references from their proper place, as charged with in our last number, does manage to give them further on. He then proceeds to comment as follows.

Taylor.—“If Mr. McDowell only knew how to rightly divide the word of truth, he could then understand how to place it.”

Comment.—How to “place” the references which you have taken the liberty to garble from him, I suppose?

Taylor.—“The gift of the Holy Spirit was only imparted for a special purpose. This one special purpose was to forever shut out the lights of all false and deceptive seers, and the new revelation of fallible men.”

Comment.—You assert that the Holy Spirit was imparted and what it was imparted for. We allow that it was imparted, but cannot allow that it was imparted for the purpose which you assign to it, exclusive of any other. Even were you correct in the purpose which you assign to its impartation it does not follow that it is not needed now. On the contrary, it is absolutely necessary to enjoy that blessed influence to-day, even if your assertion in relation to its object be true. “False and deceptive seers” are not altogether a thing of the past. If it was by the enablement of the Holy Spirit that ancient saints detected the imposition of certain ones, by what other means are they to be detected now? The Holy Spirit was promised to all who would believe and obey the gospel.—Acts 2:38. This promise was confirmed.—Acts 5:32; 8:14-17; 9:17; 19:1-6; 1 Cor. 12:3. A description of its office work is to be found in the following passages: John 14:26; 15:26; 16:13; Romans 8:14, 16; Ephesians 1:13.

Taylor.—“I would love to see Mr. McDowell manifest his power of the gift of the Holy Spirit imparted to him by the laying on of hands.”

Comment.—Perhaps you would. You are not the first one to express that desire. Suppose you were permitted to see the manifestation you ask for, what better would be your condition? We have a few instances in the New Testament where similar expressions were made, but it happened, however, that they were invariably made by a very inferior class of people. The first one is described in the fourth chapter of Matthew and his name is said to be Devil. Another notable character who would liked to have Jesus show a sign for him to behold was Herod. Luke 23: 8. In the former of these two cases the Devil was rebuked; in the latter Jesus refused to answer Herod in anything he asked of him. Of course we can scarcely disprove your statement—that you would love to see a miracle. We only call attention to the company you put yourself in when you express yourself thus.

McDowell.—“We refer the reader to Acts 2: 37-39. Therein is the promise of the Holy Spirit as a gift by way of being an abiding comforter and instructor to the baptized believer without limitation as to time, or age, or place.”

Taylor.—“Let us see if there is any difference in the promise of the Holy Spirit as a gift, and the promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit. The first makes the Holy Spirit the promised gift, while the other is something promised as a gift of the Holy Spirit.”

Comment.—We notice the distinction you are endeavoring to make between the gift of the Holy Spirit and the Holy Spirit itself. The gift of the Holy Spirit, however, may be either the effect of the Holy Spirit or it may be the Spirit which produces the effect. In either case it is necessary for the Spirit to be present with or rest upon the one who has the gift. In the twelfth chapter of 1 Corinthians Paul enumerates some nine different things which he characterizes as “spiritual gifts” or gifts of the Spirit. They were the several effects which the Spirit had upon those possessed with it. But let me call your attention to the fact that when they enjoyed those gifts they had to be in possession, in actual possession of that holy influence whose operation effected them. Hence, when Peter said, “And ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost,” whether he meant the effect of the Holy Ghost or the Holy Ghost itself, helps your case not the least; for in either case those who received the gift had to receive the Holy Ghost. Though it is more than probable that Peter in using the above language meant more particularly the Holy Ghost as a gift as we shall see further on.

Taylor.—“For instance, a man has some present he wishes me to have. I receive that gift of the man, and not the man received as a gift.”

Comment.—Your inference is that the man represents the Spirit, and the gift of the man, that which the Spirit gives or produces. This comparison does you poor service; it is only another way of assuming that the gift of the Spirit is not the Spirit itself. You could receive both the man and his gift as a gift or gifts if they were given to you by somebody—and that is possible. If the man were to be given to you he would be as much of a gift as anything that he might afterward give to you. It would have been well if you had defined what you understood or misunderstood to be the gift of the Spirit as distinct from the Spirit. This you neglected notwithstanding the pains you have taken to show that the gift is not the Spirit. Whether Paul's definition which we have cited would suit you we are uncertain, but consider it extremely doubtful from the effect it would have upon your argument if admitted. Its validity, let me say, is not dependent on your admission. A truth is no more true if believed by everybody; and it is none the less true if believed by nobody. A little more on the subject.

Taylor.—“So Peter expressed himself, ‘Receive the gift of the Holy Spirit,’ and not, ‘Ye shall receive the Holy Spirit as a gift.’”

Comment.—But did not Peter receive the Spirit on the occasion of his discourse from which you quote? You admit that he did. And was it not given to him? Yes. Then it must have been a gift to him. If Peter then received it as a gift it is proper and in keeping with good usage to speak of him as receiving the gift of the Spirit. We commonly speak of a gentleman making a lady a “present or gift of a nice gold watch and chain,” etc. And such phraseology is not foreign to the scriptures. In Acts 2 we have an account of the descent of the Spirit upon the apostles and the marvelous effect which it produced. In Acts 10 is contained a report of the sermon Peter preached to Cornelius and his household. I quote verses 44 and 45:—

While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Here we find, first, that the Holy Ghost fell on all those who listened to Peter's sermon; second, that the Jews who accompanied Peter were astonished to see the “gift of the Holy Ghost” poured out on the Gentiles as well as themselves. Notice it is called gift. Then in verse 15 of the following chapter we have these words:—

And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.

Also verse 17:—

Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, etc.

These statements were also made by Peter. They were made to them “of the circumcision” in Jerusalem who called in question his work in the case of Cornelius and household. He says God gave the Gentiles the like gift—speaking of the Holy Ghost—as he did unto them (the apostles.)

The above ends our criticism on No. 3. We will now begin with No. 4. He begins by making a quotation from Elder McDowell relative to 1 Corinthians 12, to which he devotes, I believe, all of the present number. The quotation is rather long, but I reproduce it for the convenience and satisfaction of the reader who may not have the tract in which it was originally contained.

McDowell.—“We call attention, in this connection, to 1 Corinthians 12. This chapter is a portion of a letter written to the Christian Church at Corinth, and if the Bible alone is to be a rule of faith and practice, and we are asked to accept and stand upon the Bible, and the Bible alone, for Christian teaching, what is there to hinder the acceptance of the instruction herein contained as necessary for the direction of Christian people today? For have not their chief authorities informed us that they were aiming at the restoration of pure, primitive, apostolic Christianity, in letter and spirit, in principle and in practice?”

Taylor.—“I would have Mr. McDowell to understand that the Apostle Paul wrote this letter as a reminder of what it took then—the time of which he was speaking—to perfect the saints, and to thoroughly establish in the minds of men the institution of Christ's.”

Comment.—It is a pity that you did not give your readers some information relative to how you found out the above which you assert. You should not expect intelligent and candid critics to believe what you say on so important a matter simply because you say so. Turning to 1 Corinthians 1: 2 we read these words:—

inth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord.

This passage of scripture shows to whom the epistle under consideration applies. Not only to the Corinthians is it addressed, but to the sanctified, with all that in every place who would call upon the name of Jesus. The epistle in general applies to all the people of God under whose observation it might come. That there are portions of it which are specially directed to the Corinthians is admissible, but such portions are to be determined or distinguished to be such by the context or by the portions themselves. I may address a letter to a firm or company in whose interest I may be acting; in that letter I may write a few words to a particular one of the company which apply not to the others. In this case it would not be right for them to apply it to them all. Why? Because it is perceptibly directed to a particular one. But if there is nothing by which it can be shown that there is any portion which applies not to them in general, it would be disorderly for one to apply to himself or to another one any portion of it. So in the epistle of Paul. The first chapter contains a reproof which he administers to the Corinthian church for certain of their misdeeds. He said he had heard by them which were of the house of Chloe that there were contentions among them. And he goes on and reproves them because some of them said they were of Paul, others of Cephas, etc. Now all Christians are not necessarily guilty of that mistake, hence we know that it is not applicable to all. But with the twelfth chapter of this epistle it is quite different. There is nothing in it, after it, or before it to indicate that it is exclusively applicable to the primitive Corinthians. Paul is there dealing with a principle which was universally believed in and enjoyed by the church at that time.

We will follow you up in our next installment and dissect your interpretation of that verse in the following chapter which says prophecies, tongues, and knowledge would fail, cease, and vanish away.

Promptness is one of the leading virtues, and its possession the exception.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Convention met in Nebraska City, February 12, at 7:30 p. m. House called to order by district superintendent, M. J. Schafer. Teachers' meeting with General Superintendent, T. A. Hougas, instructor. Saturday 9:30, E. D. Briggs was appointed secretary pro tem. Superintendent Hougas then gave the successful plan of conducting a Sunday school. A thorough understanding of the proposed amendments to Constitution was gained and delegates instructed to favor same. Reports of superintendent, assistant superintendent, secretary, and treasurer, were adopted. Four schools reported: Zion's Hope, of Nebraska City, 55; Fairbury 30; Union Band, Wilber, 65; Prairie Flower, Palmyra, 20. The question box was a very interesting feature of the afternoon session. Martin J. Schafer, Union, Nebraska, was elected superintendent for next year, Edwin D. Briggs, Nebraska City, Nebraska, assistant superintendent and secretary, Walter M. Self, Bennett, Nebraska, treasurer. Jacob Anderson and Emma Nelson were chosen delegates to General Convention. At 7:30 p. m. a very interesting literary program closed the convention, to meet in Wilber, Nebraska, June 11 and 12.

OKLAHOMA SAINTS.

Oklahoma saints, look! read! respond! We want to reach one hundred thousand people with the gospel this summer. Only two missionaries in the field. Will you assist them? When? Now. How? There are thousands of copies of Heralds, Ensigns, Autumn Leaves, Hopes, sermons, etc., which the saints will send just for the asking.

If you had them, could you not distribute them among your neighbors, or when you go to town take a roll of them and put one in the farmers' wagons? In ten minutes you can distribute a hundred. Do this every time you go to town for one month or as long as your supply lasts, and you will reach as many with the gospel as the elder in a series of services. Will you not help us in this way, and also help those in darkness? The writer was brought to the light by a tract given him by Bro. John Kaler. If you will assist in this scheme, drop me a card with your name and address, and you will be supplied with literature. Don't put it off, now is the time to act.

BORN.

ANDERSON. — December 18, 1896, to Bro. Dan and Sr. Annie Anderson, of Lamoni, Iowa, a son, and named Andrew Kenneth. Blessed April 14, 1897, by Elders H. Kemp and T. J. Bell.

MARRIED.

MOSER—SCHRUNK.—Sr. Ella C. Schrunk was married March 31 to Mr. John Moser, at the home of the bride's parents, in Osterdock, Iowa. It was a happy time for all present. Many of the guests were fine musicians, so both the piano and organ did duty on this memorable occasion. Mr. T. F. Schrunk favored those present with his favorite song, and many others followed in song, and such a time of rejoicing one seldom sees. May God bless them with a long, happy, and useful life, is the wish of all their many friends. Mr. Moser and wife started south on their wedding trip, intending to stop at Marion, Iowa, a day or so to visit Srs. Hills and Cator, also to visit Lamoni during General Conference.

DIED.

TURNER.—At her home near Deloit, Iowa, on the morning of April 4, 1897, Sr. Sara C., wife of Bro. James T. Turner. Sara Catharine Childrees was born in Waterloo, Missouri, February 8, 1844, where she grew to womanhood, and July 31, 1861, was united in marriage to James T. Turner. They removed to Deloit, Iowa, in 1871, where they have since resided. The deceased united with the Latter Day Saint Church February 1, 1877, since which time she has been an earnest, consistent worker, and was at times wonderfully blessed with the gifts of the gospel. Her patience and gentle kindness during her last lingering illness of eighteen months showed forth the true Christian spirit which characterized her life. Ten children were born to Bro. and Sr. Turner, eight of whom, with their father, are left to mourn the loss of wife and mother. A daughter, Maud, died January 26, 1890, at the age of twenty years, at Deloit, Iowa, and one child died in infancy.

MONROE.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, April 3, 1897, Anna Elnora, infant child of Bro. Isaac A. Monroe, aged 4 months and 15 days. This sweet little bud has gone to join the mother in the spirit realm of rest. Sermon at the residence by R. M. Elvin from Revelation 22: 1, to an attentive audience. Interment in Rose Hill Cemetery.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

SHOULD MINISTERS HAVE A COLLEGE EDUCATION?

BISHOP JOHN H. VINCENT, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, founder and sustainer of the Chautauqua schools, is urging now, with characteristic zeal, a scheme for "A Non-Resident School of Theology." In The Methodist Review (March-April) he presents a four-year curriculum for such a school, and follows it with a vigorous plea for an educated ministry. In the course of this plea he uses some vigorous language about uneducated pulpit boors and vulgar lay officials which he has before used in addresses before conferences, and which has at times aroused intense indignation. He begins his plea by claiming that the early apostles were trained from boyhood in the best literature of the world—that of the Old Testament. They had a special course of training under the greatest of all teachers—Christ. They had "the highest result of a thorough education," and, unlike the rabbis, had "a vital knowledge of Old-Testament history."

The early Methodist preachers "were not unlike the early apostles in their preparation, their power, and their effectiveness." They "did not gain their power by being students, but because of power they became students." The apostolic and early Methodist method has, the Bishop thinks, been perverted. He says:—

"There are young men in the ministry of the church who have come from farm and shop with little or no knowledge of the English language as to its construction, its value as a vehicle of thought, and the enlarging and refining contents of its literature. Such men are neither readers nor thinkers. Under the pressure of a 'revival,' through an ambition to be ministers, and to be at once in the field 'saving souls,' they drop plow or plane and seek, by the shortest possible route, professional recognition. . . . Once in the annual conference they are in for life, to receive to the day of death something toward personal support—not much, but often too much, in view of what they are, and of what they do, and of what they have failed to do. This low standard in the conference results in the filling up by these 'pastors' of official boards with men of their own comparatively low type, who as stewards, class-leaders, and trustees degrade the church by their lack of taste, unworthy ideals, narrow prejudices, and parsimonious spirit. We cannot expect cultured men and women, nor even the schoolboys and schoolgirls of the day, to be interested in a church where boors pretend to preach and where such laymen as we have indicated have official place and control; where sensational devices are resorted to for filling up and building up the church; where sentimentality of a very weak sort is substituted for spirituality; and where ecclesiastical authority becomes a humiliating tyranny."

Bishop Vincent does not, by any means, assert that men can be educated only through the seminary or the college, but he dwells upon the advantages of the college course for all ministers, whether they enjoy seminary advantages or not. Among the considerations urged by him are these: the college man commands the increasing respect of society; every minister should know, through college training, just what science does and does not teach: the college-bred man can better inspire the youth of his congregations to pursuit of an educational course. He continues as follows:—

"There is also a type of manhood fostered by college training which the ministry needs for the sake of its greatest social influence. Why is it that in so many universities students in the theological department are looked down upon, sometimes with ill-concealed contempt, by the academic students? Making all due allowance for the prejudices which spring from what is called 'the natural heart' against the spiritual kingdom and its representatives, there is too often something in the typical minister and in the 'theologue' which repels strong, stalwart, genuine men in college and in society. The theological student is often a dependent, educated by charity. This itself is not at all ground for his disparagement; but there are a few ministers who were once theological students supported in this way, by individuals or by societies, who up to this day have never paid even the interest on the loan by which they were able to take their theological course. What is still worse, they seem to have no conscience about it. They marry, they have children, they buy books, they ride bicycles, they take summer vacations, but seem to have no ethical sense which makes imperative the restoration of the funds by which they were educated for their profession. There is among a certain class of ministers and of candidates for the ministry a tone of servility which perhaps these processes of professional education promote; a readiness to accept gifts of money; the habit of soliciting discounts because of their office; and consequently the cultivation of the tramp spirit and habit among men whose office stands for the highest, most independent, most manly type of manhood. Life in the modern college tends to prevent this false and unfortunate estimate of the ministry.

"The theological student who has never taken a college course is always at a disadvantage. The foundations of his culture, have been neglected.

He is all the while in danger of building on the sand. He is doubly in danger of overemphasizing certain branches or departments of truth. The man of limited education is, other things being equal, in greatest danger of being a crank and hobbyist. He sees in part the world of learning. He studies a little New-Testament Greek, but he knows nothing about Greek as Greek. He studies Hebrew a little, but he knows nothing about the Semetic languages in general, their relations to history, and the underlying forces in the Semitic civilization which have affected the historic development of the world at large. Men thus hurried into the ministry too often marry in haste. They lack the power of wise discrimination. Their wives, picked up in the immature years, are in many cases unqualified to fill the parsonage and help the pastor.

"We plead, therefore, for a symmetrical training of the men who are to represent the Christian Church in this enlightened age, and who are to impress society with the nobility of Christian manhood. Let men wait before entering the ministry. There is plenty of time. Jesus at twelve years of age astonished the leaders in the temple. In our time, if we could, we would have made him a 'boy preacher' and sent him through the land as a flaming herald. He, with divine wisdom, retired to Nazareth and remained in its quiet for eighteen years 'subject' to his parents, a student of nature and of the Holy Scriptures, and waiting for the ripening of character which should prepare Him at thirty years of age to go forth on his mission. The ministry of the age may learn wisdom from His example."

The Bishop then proceeds to speak appreciatively of the many organizations for non-resident theological students, such as the Itinerants' Club and summer schools of theology, and expresses the hope that the church colleges may institute a sort of university-extension plan for the especial benefit of young ministers.—Literary Digest.

The April number of the North American Review contains among other noteworthy features an article from the pen of The Marquis of Dufferin and Ava on "How India Fights the Famine." Lord Dufferin, formerly Viceroy of that Eastern Empire, describes the famine as being as dire a calamity as ever visited the human race. Three millions of the population are being kept alive through the efforts of the Indian government, which, however, can only provide its clients with just sufficient nourishment to keep body and soul together. The work left to be performed by public charity is almost illimitable, and Lord Dufferin makes an eloquent appeal to Americans in behalf of the sufferers. The editor of the North American Review announces that he will take pleasure in receiving for transmission any contributions sent him for that purpose. Even a shilling, Lord Dufferin says, will keep a poor widow or an orphan for a week.

A noteworthy feature of the May issue of The Church Union will be an article by William DeWitt Hyde, the President of Bowdoin College, on the progress made by a practical federated union of denominations in the State of Maine. Dr. Hyde shows how, by the formation of an interdenominational commission, work in the rural districts of that State has been conducted systematically and unitedly.

MIXED DIET A NECESSITY.

FLOUR AS NOW MADE IS ROBBED OF PART OF ITS BEST PROPERTIES.

Mrs. S. T. Rorer, the famous instructor in the science of cooking and domestic economy generally, in the Ladies' Home Journal (for February), for which magazine she will hereafter write exclusively, gives this advice concerning mixed diet, etc.: "As all things have been given us by Nature for some good purpose I have always advocated a mixed diet. If Nature had intended us for meat eaters only we would have had meat teeth alone, but we have grinders for the masticating and the grinding of grain, which teaches us at once that a mixed diet is necessary.

"People are rather conservative in matters of change, especially regarding food, looking back upon what their grandmothers did and upon what they lived, forgetting that their grandmothers were much more active in domestic duties than they are, and were obliged to take such food as they had at hand.

"Bread was then the staff of life, and rightly, too. It was made from Nature's wheat, containing all the phosphates, the muscle-forming food, and heat and force food necessary for feeding. Now, this wonderful grain, in our manner of preparation, has been robbed of the phosphates and a portion of its muscle food, and as the poorer classes depend more upon bread than the middle or upper classes, they have suffered most."

HEMAN C. SMITH - CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 28, 1897.

THE CONFERENCE.

THE intervening of the annual April session of conference, with its attendant care and labors, has prevented the editor from acknowledging the receipt of the many letters addressed to him, as also from attending to the various matters sent for HERALD consideration. We hope that no one has been seriously inconvenienced by the delay and lapse of time, which will necessarily make replies to some letters out of date, and displace former matters for the HERALD by later ones. This will be inevitable, and we hope no one will take offense because of it, as none is intended.

We congratulate the saints upon the remarkably harmonious passing of the session of conference. No more peaceful and, we think, profitable session has even been held by the church; and it is to be hoped that those of the fellowship who were not at the conference were visited by and enjoyed the presence of the good spirit which was with those assembled to do business for the Master, and in behalf of the cause dear to all alike.

The business sessions were marked by a unity of feeling and a decorum worthy of praise. No hasty, or indecorous speeches were made, and no bitterness engendered, that came under our observation.

The preaching services were well attended and the Spirit was with the speakers in an excellent and marked degree, the sermons quite up to the standard of those delivered at the annual sessions. The prayer services were, most of them, seasons of spiritual refreshing, though the large number in attendance did not give so good an opportunity to all as many would have wished. The gifts were manifested in some of the prayer and testimony meetings, and seemed to leave good results.

There were fewer sick during the session than is usual; which is notable because of the almost continuously bad, damp, and windy weather experienced nearly the whole time. We heard of no very severe cases, and no deaths occurred.

The baptisms reported for the year aggregate in number about one eighth of the whole membership, leaving a net gain of nearly thirty-five hundred; a most remarkable and gratifying result for the year's labor. It should form a strong incentive to increased activity and persistent effort for the present year.

Let us all take renewed courage and with energy and devotedness "press onward."

"MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING."

IN the hopeless contest being made against the Reorganized Church, by many in and out of the several factions, portions, or fragments into which the church was broken at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and those which after that date sprang into existence, much use has been made of statements made by Pres. Wm. Marks and Elder Isaac Sheen, and published in the first number of the HERALD, issued January 1, 1860. Our purpose now is to present the points claimed by those who use these statements as being proved by them, and offer some comment; for the reason that the arguments hitherto made with these statements as a basis are being revamped in certain quarters, with animus in those using them.

About the first of June, 1844, (situated as I was at that time, being the Presiding Elder of the Stake at Nauvoo, and by appointment the Presiding Officer of the High Council) I had a very good opportunity to know the affairs of the Church, and my convictions at that time were, that the Church in a great measure had departed from the pure principles and doctrines of Jesus Christ. I felt much troubled in mind about the condition of the Church. I prayed earnestly to my Heavenly Father to show me something in regard to it, when I was wrapt in vision, and it was shown me by the Spirit, that the top or branches had overcome the root, in sin and wickedness, and the only way to cleanse and purify it was, to disorganize it, and in due time, the Lord would reorganize it again. There were many other things suggested to my mind, but the lapse of time has erased them from my memory. A few days after this occurrence, I met with Brother Joseph. He said that he wanted to converse with me on the affairs of the Church, and we retired by ourselves. I will give his words verbatim, for they are indelibly stamped upon my mind. He said he had desired for a long time to have a talk with me on the subject of polygamy. He said it eventually would prove the overthrow of the Church, and we should soon be obliged to leave the United States, unless it could be speedily put down. He was satisfied that it was a cursed doctrine, and that there must be every exertion made to put it down. He said that he would go before the congregation and proclaim against it, and I must go into the High Council, and he would prefer charges against those in transgression, and I must sever them from the Church, unless they made ample satisfaction. There was much more said, but this was the substance. The mob commenced to gather about Carthage in a few days after, therefore there was nothing done concerning it.

Whatever else has been charged against the prophet Joseph Smith, we do not recollect that he was ever charged with being a fool. "Knave," "charlatan," "mountebank," "impostor," "fanatic," "blasphemer," "enthusiast," and "deceiver," have all been loaded on the memory of his name, but "fool" was never applied.

Let us see. William Marks was noted for upright and direct dealing; and fearless discharge of duty, in the day when it is said that this occurrence took place. He was president of the High Council of the stake, and of the stake (the branch at Nauvoo) as well. As such officer he had an opportunity to know something of the affairs of the church, as he states. Whatever he knew, and however wrong it was, his personal knowledge of it was not of sufficient definiteness to implicate the wrong-doers. In his distress of mind, his want of definite information as to who and where the wrongdoers were, he sought the Lord who revealed to him that the "top or branches had overcome the root," and his convictions were that it

(the church) should be reorganized. After this he met the prophet and that now celebrated conversation took place. In this talk the prophet stated to President Marks that unless "polygamy was put down" it would prove the "overthrow of the church." Nothing is stated by either one as to the extent of the evil spoken of nor of the persons implicated in it. It does not appear that President Marks knew who the wrong-doers were, nor does Joseph Smith state who they were. The latter, however, does state that measures should be instituted to "put it down;" and he himself pointed out the methods of procedure. They were; First, that he, Joseph Smith, the President of the church, would present accusations to the High Council against those of whom he had information that they were transgressors in the evil complained of, and that William Marks, the presiding officer of both the stake and the council should "sever them from the church," unless they "made ample satisfaction." Second, that he, Joseph Smith, the Prophet and President of the church, would "go before the congregation and proclaim against it," that it was a "cursed doctrine."

If Joseph Smith was the originator of that "cursed doctrine" and one of those "in transgression;" the methods proposed by him for the purpose of putting that doctrine down, were the very ones calculated to betray his connection with such atrocious doctrine and such evil practice, if they existed. For, if he was known to Pres. Marks and to others as the chief of sinners in such "transgression," those who had been misled by him into such evil belief and practice would have been the first and surest ones to denounce him and show his connection with both teaching and practice. Can any sensible man believe from the statement of William Marks that Joseph Smith would have done a thing so foolish as that? Not even a "knave," shrewd as the world gives Joseph Smith the credit of being, would have shown such an exhibition of folly as that would have been. A man who knew himself to be in transgression of the kind referred to, and also knew that others knew it, proposing to go before a council over which a man like William Marks presided and make charges there against other men involved in like wickedness as himself. No man in the exercise of common sense would so far forget the commonest measures of safety to himself if he was guilty.

Again, no man would dare to openly go before a congregation and there declare against a doctrine and practice so evil as the ones referred to, himself being a guilty teacher and practicer of them while he knew that there were men in that congregation who knew that he was a partner in their crimes, if they were guilty. Such action would be moral and religious suicide, if not worse. For if they were guilty all knew that the laws of the State had been infringed and broken, and that open prosecution in the courts of the land would bring out all the facts and make punishment sure, for Joseph Smith as well as others. Whatever the connection of Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith with the teaching and practice referred to may have been, it is not shown by this statement of Pres. William Marks. Nor does that statement implicate Joseph Smith as a participator in either teaching or practice of the evil complained of. All that can be taken from it is that whatever the teaching and practice may have been he had some knowledge of them and who were the persons involved in it; that it was a "cursed doctrine" and must be put a stop to. That is all that the strictest rendition can make of it.

The Reorganized Church has not shown any fear of the truth as to the question at issue. The Publishing Committee at the time HERALD number one was issued, was composed of William Marks, Isaac Sheen, and W. W. Blair; and the fact that these men, or any one of them, permitted such a statement to appear is evidence that they held no fear of the truth of it. Neither could have supposed that those who preferred to believe evil of a man rather than good could possibly have so distorted what Pres. Marks wrote.

We had no connection with the HERALD at the time, January 1, 1860, and was not identified with the church until April, three months after the issue, and therefore cannot be made responsible for the statement, be it good or bad; we have a right, from long and intimate acquaintance with the men, to know what the estimate was that they put upon the statement. Had those men had the least idea that because of that statement, they and the church were to be held as indorsing the origin, practice, or continuance of spiritual wifery, plural marriage, or polygamy in any sense, they would have guarded against it, by leaving it out, or by personal explanation.

In examining this statement of Pres. William Marks we do it on its merit, without either denying, or affirming guilt, or innocence as those who attack the Reorganization affirm. The statement as evidence proves nothing claimed for it by them. Those who make the affirmation that it does, either willfully misstate it, or are ignorant of the plainest rules governing evidence and so misapply them.

The claim based upon the statement of Isaac Sheen in same issue of the HERALD, made by this same class of men who attack the Reorganization is even worse, and has less foundation than the other.

The statement is a contributed news item first published in the Cincinnati, Ohio, Saturday Evening Post, for October 9, 1852, and written at that date by Mr. Sheen, not then connected with any faction of the church. He had not been at Nauvoo during the Prophet's lifetime, and had not known him, having united with the church sometime in 1844. He knew nothing personally about the subject on which he wrote. That portion of the statement which those who attack the Reorganization take as the basis of their argument is as follows:—

The Salt Lake apostles also excuse themselves by saying that Joseph Smith taught the spiritual-wife doctrine, but this excuse is as weak as their excuse concerning the ancient kings and patriarchs. Joseph Smith repented of his connection with this doctrine, and said that it was of the devil. He caused the revelation on that subject to be burned, and when he voluntarily came to Nauvoo and resigned himself into the arms of his enemies, he said that he was going to Carthage to die. At that time he also said, that if it had not been for that accursed spiritual wife doctrine, he would not have come to that.

From this statement it does not appear what Joseph Smith's "connection" with the doctrine was, whatever that doctrine may have been; but, if entitled to any consideration, the statement at the least should be allowed as a whole, and not portions only be given credit. This would not suit these extremists, however, because that whatever the connection of Joseph Smith with the doctrine referred to was, the statement is that he repented of it, and said that "it was of the devil." Further, the statement gives the title of the doctrine that was in question, and it was "that accursed spiritual wife doctrine," and not polygamy.

There is something peculiar in the reasoning of those who so misuse this statement of Elder Isaac Sheen as proof of the guilty connection of Joseph Smith with Utah polygamy as teaching and practicing it. If he "caused the revelation to be burned," no better evidence of hostility to the doctrine which might be in the revelation could have been given by the man. But, Pres. Brigham Young declared on August 29, 1852, that it was Emma Smith, the wife of the prophet, who burned the revelation, not Joseph Smith. If Joseph Smith burned or caused the burning of the so-called revelation then Pres. Young was wrong; if Emma burned it, then Isaac Sheen was wrong. Which these men will have as correct we do not know. If they were as honest in using the statements as they assure others that they are, they would quote the editorial following the statement of Isaac Sheen on page 24 of the HERALD for January 1, 1860. The opening of this is as follows:—

It therefore seems that the Salt Lake Mormons, if Mr. Sheen be correct, and he quotes the very words of the "Book of Mormon," are acting not only in opposition to common decency and morality, but to the explicit commands of their own "holy book," and to the dying testimony of Joseph Smith, their founder.

The effect of the statement upon men outside of the church, who had no faith in Mormonism of any kind, was that it exonerated rather than implicated the Prophet in the guilt of teaching and practicing the evil referred to. It remained for whilom believers to distort the statement to suit their own notions; and in the lack of direct evidence to use implication by presumption, the lowest and most suspicious sort of evidence known.

The Reorganization has neither feared, nor hesitated to give the whole of the statements as they were made; leaving those who hesitated, feared, or were malicious enough, to either misunderstand, or misinterpret them as they might see fit to do.

ENGLAND TO RETURN THE LOG OF THE MAYFLOWER.

LONDON, March 25.—In consequence of the efforts of the Government of Massachusetts, the American Antiquarian and Massachusetts Historical Societies, the Pilgrim Society of Plymouth, and the New England Society of New York, backed up by the desires of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of London, the Consistory Court of the Diocese of London assembled to-day in the old chapel of St. Paul's Cathedral in order to determine the question of the restoration of the log of the Mayflower to the United States.

The Chancellor of the diocese, Dr. Thomas H. Tristran, Q. C., presided in wig and gown.

The Chancellor asked if New England was part of Massachusetts, and counsel and Mr. Lee were unable to answer the question.

Thereupon the Chancellor said:—

"Is there nobody present able to answer that question?"

The question was then answered by a representative of the Associated Press, who said that Massachusetts was a part of New England.

The Chancellor asked if Plymouth was in Massachusetts, and the Associated Press representative assured him it was.

Later the Chancellor said, after hearing the arguments:—

"I order, on the undertaking given by Mr. Bayard to place the log in a fit place where persons concerned can have access thereto, and a proper certificated copy being deposited at Fulham, that the original be given up to Mr. Bayard for transmission to the President of the United States, and that the copy of this judgment under seal be sent with the book whenever Mr. Bayard or some one else of the United States Embassy can attend. In the meanwhile it will remain in the diocesan strong room."

After these proceedings Dr. Temple said: "I am glad the book is returning to America. It will be another evidence of our sincerity, admiration, and love for America and our desire to draw the two nations closer together."

The Bishop of London will deliver the book to Mr. Bayard personally.

FINDS ACRES OF MAMMOTH'S BONES.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 28.—D. P. Mumbroe, United States Deputy Mineral Land Surveyor, who is now in Northern Montana at work on government lands, has sent a box to Surveyor-General Neill of a most interesting character. It includes many bones of mammals that during prehistoric ages roamed over the country.

From what he writes it would seem that that section must at one time have been the battle field of mammoths. In the high prairie country of Choteau and Teton Counties where Mr. Mumbroe is now working, there are acres of land covered with the same kind of bones he has sent to the Surveyor-General.

Among the bones was one thirty-two inches long and at the largest end three feet in circumference, evidently the thigh bone of a creature which, if it stood upright, would have been able to look into the third story windows of houses. Besides this are a score of others, from the size of a hat to a man's fist, evidently vertebrae.

It can be seen that the substance is really petrified bone, and in some instances the pitted structure, particularly noticeable in partially decayed bones, can be plainly distinguished. One of the vertebrae has a small clear moss agate firmly attached to it.—Chicago Tribune.

AUSTRALIAN COLONIES ARE UNITED.

LONDON, March 27.—The work of binding the Australian colonies together is in full progress. The Australasian federal convention met at Adelaide this week. The colonies of Victoria, New South Wales, Tasmania, South and Western Australia sent delegates. C. C. Kingston, Q. C., M. P., the Premier of South Australia, was elected President. At the invitation of the conference the New South Wales delegate, Mr. Barton, submitted resolutions embodying the principles of the new constitution, which provides that the powers, privileges, and territory of the various colonies are to remain intact. The exclusive power of imposing and collecting customs and excise duties and military and naval control is to be vested in the Federal Parliament.

Trade intercourse between the federated colonies is to be absolutely free. The Parliament, which will be established, will consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The executive will consist of a Governor-General, appointed by the Queen, and the Supreme Federal Court, which will also be the High Court of Appeal of the colonies.

WE notice in the San Remo Times, sent us from Australia, a notice of our church service there, as follows:—

Divine service will be held at the hall, Queensferry, every Sunday at 2:30 p. m. by the elders of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. All are welcome. No collection.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. M. MORAN, Hillman, Michigan, April 15:—

Bro. Titus, of Alpena, has been here for the past month and preached several excellent sermons and married two couples, not of the Latter Day Saint Church. Bro. Titus is always welcomed by the Hillman saints and does good whenever he comes, and sometimes has the pleasure of making the sectarian preachers feel restless.

The brethren of the ministry have gone from the conference session prepared for a renewal of the conflict against error and in favor of the truth, in renewed courage and strength.

The brethren who remained in their fields feel the impulses of renewing life, and are responding cheerily to the good news that reached them.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, that indefatigable soldier, wrote us a card dated April 19:—

We were anxiously watching and praying for the blessings of God to come to the church and were all made to rejoice on receiving the last Herald which contained part of the minutes of the conference, also the revelation. May God help us all to move on more faithful and with renewed energy. I have been battling away up in this part, and Kalkaska, also Fife Lake, back of Kalkaska. Musser has succeeded in having the school-house closed to us, but open to all others.

Bro. Alvin Knisley, from Selkirk, Ontario, April 18, wrote:—

My heart has been gladdened to read of the successful convention our people are having in your town. No doubt some changes have taken place and new conditions necessitated by that grand and comforting revelation, which are only peculiar to this latter-day work. All, however, will be well with the trustful, believing, and obedient. My faithfulness is indeed encouraged to observe what God is doing for his people; and my ministerial power of late I think is increased.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. W. W. JONES, of Plymouth, Pennsylvania, offers to give fifty dollars towards the purchase of a tent for the work in the Wyoming Valley the coming summer. See letter.

Bro. L. P. Hansen, of Manti, Utah, writes that he has been laboring as circumstances permit, on the Sabbath and other days, among the Utah people. He had baptized two since Bro. H. N. Hansen left; others were believing; but much prejudice existed. He desired the saints to remember the Scandinavian people in the United States and in the fatherland.

Bro. A. E. Woodworth, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes, expressing the opinion that membership in fraternal organizations does not interfere with lines of duty in the church; this in answer to a statement in a recent article signed Albert. We state his expression of opinion without opening up discussion on the subject of "secret societies."

"In lawful pursuits, whatever you do—
Building a mansion or mending a shoe—
Be honestly earnest in all of your work,
Never attempting plain duty to shirk.
Do everything well; as well as you can,
No more is expected by God or by man.
No less will suffice for your own self-respect
Or save you from sting of willful neglect.
The purest of pleasures can only be found
In virtuous effort, healthful and sound.
This trust of maxims cherish and nurse—

FROM THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

JANUARY 3.—Dear Sisters:—On this first Sunday in 1897 I find myself perched upon a pile of pulu pillows crosswise of our bed on board the Teavaroa, bound from Papeete to Hickueru. Left Papeete last Sunday morning, leaving many tearful faces behind us. The saints meet at eight o'clock for meeting, and since that was the hour we were to leave the house they met at our house a half hour or so previous and had singing and prayer before we left. On Wednesday morning, early, we were off Makatea where we made the saints a short call of about three hours. I will tell in the Hope what a wetting we got in landing. According to instruction we brought our bedding along, and expected to have slept on the cabin floor or on deck, but have been very agreeably disappointed. One of the owners, who goes with the vessel on account of her valuable cargo, very kindly gave us his room and put his mattress on cases of goods, extra sails, and various other things in the storeroom off the end of the cabin, the walls of which are lined with dry goods, and on the floor are no less than six new sewing machines. The room we have is larger, cooler, and far more commodious than those on the mail packets that go from San Francisco to Papeete. We do not sleep in a berth under decks as usual in a vessel, but on a bedstead out in the clear air with the cool breeze blowing on us from two windows all the time. But the bed is not soft by any means. The bottom is smooth boards like the floor; and one of those thin mattresses from the Evanelia—well flattened—is not much of an improvement on wood. But when one side aches too badly we turn over and let the other side take a turn at it.

We do not seem to be getting used to it very fast; in fact, I ache worse every night. But I dare say we will get over that in time. The only really unpleasant feature is the copra or bufa weevil and roaches that line the walls and do not keep out of a person's bed nor off their body. Their bite is not so bad, but their crawling is unpleasant. But those are not all that is in this room. We are surrounded by unseen wealth. There is no less than eighteen thousand dollars of money boxed up and deposited in this room to buy pearl shells with when they get to the islands. Besides this there is twenty thousand dollars worth of other goods. So there is a valuable cargo on this vessel—ourselves included. We have had cool, lovely weather; that is, cool for these parts, and if the same continues that we have had we will reach our destination on Tuesday. The cook has given us quite a variety in the way of food. For each meal we have had canned beef, both hot and cold, and canned salmon. But we were informed at breakfast this morning that there was no more canned salmon, so after this we will only have one change. The captain and all the crew are natives. But Mr. Railton, who gave up his room to us, is a white man and speaks both languages.

January 14.—We arrived here at Hickueru on Tuesday, the 5th, as we expected. Found Bro. and Sr. Case quite well, but looking rather thin in comparison with the numerous fat natives that were all around them. The natives are here in swarms. There is a large lagoon about this island where the pearl shells grow, and when it was open to the public they came from all the surrounding islands to share in shell gathering. There are about two hundred of our church members here, some from nearly all the branches. The merchants give them a good price for their shells but charge them a bigger price for all they have to buy. One of our brethren gave fifty-two dollars for a cane hat for himself and wife. The same hats could have been bought for eight or ten dollars each in Tahiti. Of course they could have gotten cheaper ones, but these natives do not deal in cheap articles, especially when they are getting a good price for shells.

As I look out from the uplifted sides of our small niau house on the lagoon I see a large sail boat just starting across for the pearl-fishing ground. A good fresh breeze fills her sail and she is fairly bounding over the waves, making the white spray fly far out from each side as her bow strikes the water. It looks very pretty and I would like to have some of the breeze. We are so surrounded by niau houses and cocoanut trees that we only get the breeze from one direction. Sr. Case's house is in a much cooler location than ours. The natives had the frame of this one put up for themselves, which frame consists of six-foot stakes driven in the ground, making a room of perhaps 12 x 14, and a lumber frame for a roof. When they heard we were coming they made the niau matting for walls, roof, and floor. Each house has two or three feet of dry branches off the cocoanut trees, stripped of their leaves, and nailed on the stakes two or three feet up from the ground to keep hogs and dogs from coming in. The dogs here are well educated. I have never known one to come in the house though the door sill is only two feet high, and there is no door. I like my little niau house if it were not so public. We have to have all the air possible, and when our "trap doors" at the sides are raised, there is no nook or corner in the house but what is as plain to view, as the outside. One of the brethren made us a nice large table,—Joseph furnished the material, and another had just purchased a new box-mattress, a rare luxury, and he brought that for us while here. I have a goods box on one end of the table for a dish cupboard, and the few pretty dishes we brought from home arranged in it, with a nicely fixed up bed gives the place a home look.

This niau village is located on the margin of the lagoon, in the prettiest cocoanut grove I ever saw, for the trees are all young and quite bushy. The lower branches of many can be reached while standing on the ground. But under foot is not nice at all. It has the appearance of not being long out of the sea, and is one continuous mass of charred and broken coral rock. It is like walking over strewn burnt bones, and is most destructive to shoe leather. There are also all the little troublesome insects that make life uneasy, flies, flees, mosquitoes, ants, and roaches. The saints here have been very kind to us, have provided liberally for us, and the sisters have made me several nice presents in shell work. Sr. Case has given the charge of the sisters' meetings over to me, and I find it very, very disadvantageous having to speak through an interpreter and not knowing what is said in reply. So my many dear friends in America must not feel slighted by not receiving personal letters, for I must give more time to studying the language. So far, my writing, entertaining, and packing and unpacking and sewing have occupied all my time.

Bro. Burton will tell about the new church when he writes. Day before yesterday he married two couples in the roofed over yard our people now hold meeting in. The brides both looked real nice with the exception of one having rather too much pink ribbon. Her dress was made by one of our nearest neighbors and she was dressed at their house. Each bride had three bridesmaids, but there were no "best man." They first went to the Governor's house and were married according to the French law, then came to the "pure fare," and were married according to the law of the church. Notwithstanding the thin, gauzy dress and rich white lace that the bride that was dressed near us wore, when she left the house she was barefoot, but had nice slippers when she got to the church. Expect she bought them on the road and put them on in the shop. It is their custom here to collect money from whoever will give, to make the wedding feast. They had a barbecued hog and some fowls and bread enough to feed a small regiment of soldiers. Only the select ones are or were invited to the feast, and all the provisions that is left of the feast must be equally divided among those who contributed to it. One table was set separate from the rest for us five white folks. Some of the leading native men were already seated on one side of the other table when we went in and the bridal party sat themselves down on the ground outside, but were called in to eat at the table. At first both the brides and grooms sat down, but when the six maids came in the two bridgrooms were crowded out of their places, since that side of the table would only hold eight and none that were seated offered their places, so they had to wait till the rest were done. They wandered about looking as forlorn as you please while the wedding feast was going on. They were not at all at home with the knives, forks, and spoons. One of the brides let them alone and ate with her hands as usual, while one of her maids tried to eat soup with a fork. She ate all that could be lifted with the fork and took up her plate and drank the rest.

Last Saturday evening our people gave a grand concert. I believe it is the order of every Saturday night. There were five branches represented. The singers of each branch sat in separate groups on the ground right here near our house and no two branches sang together, though one director served for all, but each branch had its own chorister. It keeps us out later than I like to be on Saturday night, and the singing tires me dreadfully, but we must always be there and stay till it is over, for it is to the missionaries they sing, and if there was not something to keep them together they would be apt to get off to some of the gambling tables or somewhere where their money would be gotten away from them. Saturday night is the only evening that there is not meeting of some kind. There is a fine gathering at church on Sunday and a large, interesting Sunday school. All do not remain beneath the roof, I think only two classes. The others sit in small groups in the shade of the cocoanut trees near the meeting place. It was a good work to get those Sunday schools organized, and there is still much work for Sr. Case to keep them going and do the amount of copying lessons for them, but she is a ready writer and does it much more quickly than many another one could.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. ROBERT SEXTON, of Kingsley, Michigan, asks your faith and prayers on his behalf that if it please God his health may be restored to him; and Sr. Saxton asks that she may have from God the special blessing her heart desires, if it be his will to grant it to her.

Sr. Minda Slavins, of Foster, Oregon, asks your prayers that she may be able to overcome the desire to use tobacco. The habit has a very strong hold upon her and she feels that only God can enable her to overcome it.

Bro. John B. Roush, of Illinois, requests your faith and prayers in behalf of Sr. Emma M. Johnson, of Mission, Illinois, that God may relieve the terrible pain which she is suffering. All human aid has failed and she earnestly asks that you will plead with God on her behalf.

Letter Department.

DUNKERTON, Iowa, Feb. 25.

Editors Herald:—I have not seen any word from this part of the district for a long time. We belong to the Grove Hill branch, Eastern Iowa district, although we live in Blackhawk, County, which is in the Des Moines district. All the work ever done in this part of the district has been done by Eastern Iowa missionaries, as we are just over the line.

Our branch is in a very scattered condition, but we meet once in two weeks for prayer services. We do not have the privilege of hearing much preaching, but are trying to put our trust in our heavenly Father, and do the best we can. I cannot tell how much comfort the faith I have in my Savior is to me. Before I heard the gospel preached I was always afraid to die, even the idea I had of heaven was not much comfort, but ever since I heard Elder Roth preach the first Latter Day Saint sermon I ever listened to, I have felt as though all will be well with me if I only try and do my part, and I am sure God will never fail in fulfilling his precious promises to me and all who put their trust in him.

I would like to say to some of the brothers and sisters, that when everything goes wrong and you are discouraged, just try to do the best you can. Remember that God will be sure to try us, and be patient; go to him in prayer, and then trust it all to him, and all will be well. I have found it so, but it is very hard at times to follow the advice I have given you. But it always turns out best in the end.

We would be glad to have any of the elders who can call on us, and give us a few sermons if they can. My prayer is that all may be brought to enjoy the blessings of the gospel of Christ. Your sister, MRS. BELLE GOODRICH.

HAYWOOD, Neb., March 29.

Editors Herald:—The first and second days of the new year I held forth in the Howley schoolhouse. This is eight miles southeast of the town of Belmont, Dawes County, Nebraska. Then I returned to the Evergreen and held two services; then obtained the Baptist church in Belmont in which four services were held, Bro. Rudd speaking one night. I returned to Howley and held four services, and on January 12 baptized three in Willow Creek, three miles east of Howley. Went to the Bacon schoolhouse and held three services, thence to the Clure and held one service and Marsland station on the B. and M. railroad and held five services, when I returned to Hay Springs to administer to the sick. I remained two days with the Elkhorn saints and went thirty-five miles to Bro. Haywood's and held eight services. While here the "grip" took hold of me and I guess be found a tough stick, for I am all right and have lost no time. My friends here sent me to the railroad with Bro. Russ. Haywood, with strict orders for me to take the train for Crawford, and I will tell you how those orders were obeyed: I went to the station and found I had to wait four hours for the train and I took the track and paced off sixteen miles, and somewhere on the road I lost the "grip" or the "grip" lost me,—it is hard to tell which,—but this I know: that I saved enough cash to get me a nice lot of certificates of baptism and confirmation which I needed. I arrived sound and well at Crawford, but did not get a house to hold forth in; so I returned to Howley and on February 18 baptized George Hollibaugh, Susan Hollibaugh, and Birtis Hollibaugh, in Willow Creek. Then by request of Bro. Rudd I took a flying trip to Minatare and Bayard. While there I spoke four times in the Redtop schoolhouse and seven times in the Grout schoolhouse and eleven times in the Bayard schoolhouse, and on the 17th of March I baptized Ada L. Hanson, Nancy Rutter, Mary Lyman, Wilburn Roberts, and James C. Hanson, and with those named I confirmed Philip O. Knapp who was baptized by R. M. Elvin March 1, 1875; certificate of baptism was given in Nebraska City, March 29, 1875. Bro. Elvin will remember the circumstance.

Bro. Rudd did a good work while here, and the people were anxious to hear when I arrived, and I left them in great excitement.

On the 18th I formed the saints into a temporary organization, D. W. Shirk as elder, J. L. Detrick priest, and Wilburn Roberts teacher. It is to be known as the Bayard branch. This step was taken by advice of the saints here interested and because of the apparent necessity for the good of the work. What was done can be sanctioned by the missionary in charge or changed as the Spirit may direct him.

While at Bayard a minister of the Methodist persuasion delivered a rousing discourse on false prophets and "Joe Smith" got his share of the mud. He gave notice of his intentions in the newspaper published at Bayard. I invited my congregation to attend and hear him which they did, and I was there also. Then I took two nights to straighten out his crookedness, the house being crowded to excess.

On the 19th returned to Howley and held four services, then one in Evergreen, and on the 24th baptized Elizabeth J. Shove and Minnie M. Hollibaugh in Willow Creek. On 25th assisted the Evergreen branch in its business meeting, in which George Hollibaugh was ordained teacher; then returned to Bro. Haywood's where I held two services, and now for home. I have been treated with the greatest respect and kindness by both saint and sinner, and I feel truly grateful to those who have assisted me in the work done, and shall ever pray that the good Master may bless the saints for their kindness to me.

DENVER, Colo., April 3.

Editors Herald:—The worst storm of the season visited this locality last Tuesday and Tuesday night consisting of wind and snow; the railroads were blocked in all directions, and still more snow yesterday, making it very bad getting about.

By letter from Lyons, Colorado, I learn that the brethren can have the use of a church for preaching if an elder could go there. I would have gone up for Sunday, the 4th had I got word in time.

We will change our place of meeting about the 10th inst. We think we have struck the right place this time. We have secured the entire control of a church building on the corner of 2d and Arapahoe Streets at a very low rent, and taking all things into consideration we think it a very desirable change. It being a church and on a corner, and a good deal nearer to the city, I think it much better than the hall where we are at present.

The Religio Society will give an entertainment in the Plummers' Hall some evening soon to increase the finances of the society.

Last night the two noted fighters, Fitzsimmons and Corbett, gave exhibitions in the different theaters of the city and I suppose drew large crowds; anything, even to a dog fight, will draw a crowd in this city except the preaching of the gospel. People must have pleasure, but their future welfare is of little consequence.

One of the popular ministers of the city, Rev. T. A. Uzzell, is running for alderman this spring. I wonder if he will be able to improve the city government if elected; there is surely room for improvement.

RIDGETOWN, Ontario, March 29.

Editors Herald:—It being a long time since I have written to your columns I thought I would try and do so once more. I have felt comforted and cheered by Sister Thayer's letter in late Herald and it reminded me of the time when we in our feeble way first tried to teach them the gospel. And now I must tell you of the grand times we have been having here. Our Sunday school convention of this district met here on the 13th and we had a spiritual and profitable time. Elders lead the Bible class, and the preaching was by Elders Coburn, St. John, and Green. Elder Shields has been with us since, and last Sunday my father and mother were baptized by him; my father was one of the most prejudiced against this work in Ridgetown. The saints came together in fasting and prayer that morning and we had one of the most spiritual meetings we have had for a long time, and several bore testimony who had never spoken in meeting before, and last Wednesday we had another good prayer meeting and all who had been in transgression apologized and now our branch is in the best condition it has ever been in from the first. On Monday evening last another was baptized by Elder St. John. We have had good outside attendance since our meetings begun and more are coming out all of the time and we expect more to be baptized. We had full house three times Sunday 28th and good meetings. Bro. Shields baptized a young lady and another woman wanted to be baptized, but her husband forbade her and some who would be are still hanging back. The branch desires Bro. Shields to remain another week as the interest is still good and more strangers coming out every meeting; but he has so many calls he hardly knows what to do. I feel to rejoice more than ever in the gospel.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., March 1.

Editors Herald:—My wife and I are all the saints there are here, and we feel very lowly at times and long to hear a good sermon. We are trying to live as saints should live, but sometimes I think we get more blessings than we are worthy of, and we are trying to live more humble and be more worthy of God's blessings in the future than we have been in the past. We would very much like to see an elder come through here, but the Lord will send one in his own good time, and we pray that it will be soon.

If any of the elders do happen anywhere near here they can find our latchstring hanging out, no matter what hour they may happen along, or any other of the saints. Fagundus is on the county line between Warren and Forest Counties, and one and one half miles from railroad. W., N. Y., and P., is the name of the road, and Trunkeyville is the nearest railway depot. If some of the elders going from Ohio to Brooklyn, Philadelphia, or New Jersey, would look over the map I think they could see a route that would not be much out of their way, and not cost much, if any more; for it is only about fifteen miles from here to the P. and E. road, running from Philadelphia to Erie. We are very anxious to have an elder here, for the people have never heard a Latter Day Saint, and do not know anything about them, only what we have told them and what they have learned from reading our papers.

The saints from different parts have sent us quite a lot of papers, which we have scattered, and I tell you we ourselves did enjoy the sermons that came; and all that have read them think them very nice.

I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints that we may prove faithful to the end, and we will remember you all in our prayers.

Yours in bonds,

GEO. H. PARKER.

Editors Herald:—It is with an earnest desire at all times to do the will of my heavenly Father that I may have his Spirit as an abiding Comforter.

Some of the leading ministers of our city are agitating the Sunday question. When I was asked what we as a people thought of the Sabbath, my reply was that we believe in a prophet at the head of our church, and that when we went humbly in fasting and in prayer to our heavenly Father, he would reveal his mind and will to us through our prophet; quoting from section 92, first verse: "I give unto you a commandment, that you should call your solemn assembly; that your fasting and your mourning might come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, which is by interpretation, the Creator of the first day; the beginning and the end."

Again in section 95, paragraph 1, we are given to understand "in everything give thanks, waiting patiently on the Lord."

On April 11, 1887, section 119: 7, "The church is admonished that until further revelation is received, . . . the saints are to observe the first day of the week commonly called the Lord's day, as a day of rest; as a day of worship, as given in the covenants and commandments."

I do not feel I am capable to discuss this question, but I will express the thought that came to me. We read in Deuteronomy, chapter 28, of the blessings that God would bestow upon the Jews if faithful, and the curses for disobedience, and now we are living in the age that from history informs us that most of all these curses have been fulfilled; and the teaching of the Apostle Paul are accepted by all Christian churches. If Paul observed the first day of the week to preach and break bread, and our heavenly Father suffered it to be kept as a day of rest, surely why need we contend and trouble ourselves when Paul says he was taught by no man, but by the Spirit? In reading Josephus we observe that the Jews were very strict to observe the seventh day, and our Advent friends lay great stress upon the keeping of the seventh day; but the thought comes to me that when the times of the Gentiles are come in there may be a change. But however hard man may try to bring about a change, all efforts will fail, until our heavenly Father in his own due time will bring about the condition that people may worship in peace the day they choose to observe.

And in conclusion perhaps we may see the day of rest restored again when the Temple is built and Zion redeemed?

RAVENWOOD, Mo., March 7.

Editors Herald:—Our little branch has been almost dead, on account of a few bad fish that got into the net, seeking offices which they were not capable of filling; but, thanks be to our heavenly Father, the hindering cause is removed and our branch is reviving, and we think it will prosper in the future as it never has before, if all will attend strictly to their business.

The people of Ravenwood have been treated to something new of late in the way of a series of lectures by a Catholic priest, in which he completely demolished Protestantism.

Notwithstanding the M. E. had their minister stationed in town, they came for Elder Jas. Thomas to reply, paying all expenses of hall. Bro. Thomas accepted, was blessed with great liberty, and held the people spell-bound for one hour and twenty minutes.

His lecture was very highly commended. One old gentleman (a Catholic) said he had known Mr. Thomas so long and loved to hear him speak so well that he had to come to hear him speak that night; also a Methodist lady was heard to remark, "You need not fear about a crowd, the house will be packed if Mr. Thomas is speaker;" and a great many more commendable remarks.

The people are after him again to deliver a series of lectures in the hall, free of charge, which he has promised to do sometime in the near future. It seems he has removed a mountain of prejudice, and the people are getting interested, and we believe good will result from the lectures.

Your sister,
SOPHIA POWELL GUNSOLLEY.

Editors Herald:—Our heavenly Father has given us a gift and all should seek diligently to live worthy to receive that gift; and in order that we receive those gifts we must be diligent, faithful, humble, and watch ourselves, in order to receive those gifts, and I believe it is the desire of all the saints to have those gifts and exercise them to the praise, honor, and glory of our heavenly Father; but how often do we grieve the Spirit in many ways. Paul says (1 Thess. 5: 9, 20), "Quench not the Spirit," and "Despise not prophesyings;" and, dear Saints, do you realize how often you persecute Christ afresh when you criticise the gifts of prophecy and do not take heed to the admonitions that the Lord's Spirit sees fit to say through those who are striving diligently to love him and keep his law?

Our little branch has been greatly blessed, and scarcely a meeting passes but what we have those gifts manifested; and how the Lord speaks to us in our sisters' prayer union and where two or three are gathered together! Dear saints, this gospel is worth living and making a sacrifice of worldly pleasure for. And I will tell you, that I was told to do a certain thing, and after considerable doubting I did it, but felt I had done wrong; but the Lord's ways are not our ways, and I was greatly blessed, for I was spoken to by three different sisters within a week that what I did was pleasing to the Lord, but to be more watchful; therefore I realize if we are not living very faithfully to keep our heavenly Father's commandments, we are very apt to doubt ourselves, and by doubting we grow careless or indifferent to what the Lord would have us do; so therefore let us ever be watchful and come often in prayer that we may exercise those gifts pleasing to our heavenly Father, although our relatives or neighbors may call us cranks on religion. But let our conversation be a godly one; for the Spirit of God cannot dwell in unholy temples, and if our thoughts are of gossip and worldly scandal remember what Paul says in 2 Thessalonians third chapter and especially verses 7 and 8.

SARGENT, Mo., April 13.

Editors Herald:—For about six weeks I have not been able to travel and preach the glorious gospel, being troubled with nervous prostration, as I suppose. My love for the truth, however, does not fail, and I sincerely hope that by the time I learn of my appointment for this year my health may be much improved. I have already learned some good things by reason of my sickness, and hope to profit by them. I find that by patiently enduring the bitter things of this life we are better prepared to enjoy its sweets.

Though changing the subject somewhat abruptly, I wish to say that Abe Carlin, who made such a failure in his endeavor to lecture against so-called Mormonism, at Ozark, had a better attendance at Sargent. Bro. Ward took notes after him at this place. It seems not to please the Baptists of Sargent because none of the saints were converted by the lectures, as it rather strengthened their faith. Carlin next stopped at Willow Springs, where we have some good saints. Although he got a large hall in which to lecture and only charged twenty-five cents, admittance, only about three persons came out to hear. Carlin has a slick way of perverting the truth. May God have mercy on him, and help us not to fret because of evildoers, is my prayer, in Jesus' name.

I ask an interest in the prayers of the saints that my health may soon be good.

Editors Herald:—When I wrote you last I was at Hartford in interesting services, and had baptized one, a very promising young man. On Wednesday we again wended our way to the river and baptized another bright young man. We have hopes for a useful future before them. A number seem almost ready to step over in the fold, at that point. Saints in line and hopeful. East winds tearing up wheat on the sand plains.

JONES MILLS, Ala., April 4.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well, busily engaged in the work of my life. I ran into a Utah Mormon church near this place last Sunday night, preached five times, and lo and behold, they closed me out, after promising the church to me for a certain time; went back on their word and closed me out. Poor, deceived people, they are in a bad fix. They had two preachers here. I challenged them to debate, but they refused to discuss with me; but every night after I would finish up my meeting they would call the people together and keep them quite awhile, trying to answer what we said. The last night I was allowed to use their church they called the people together and detained them three hours, until midnight, to shut me out from all chances at them. I left a challenge for any man they would bring forth.

They have about twenty members at this place, or their settlement near here. They picked up some of our former members who had been excluded from our church. They claim two hundred men in Alabama. They go into the backwoods, among the uneducated and ignorant, to get their converts. I find them to be the most noted liars we have in this age of the world, some of them at least. I don't say they are all bad people. The last night I preached in their church they all got mad and left the house and would not listen to me in my closing remarks.

The elders run around and tell the people we are coming over to them fast and that our church history says that William Smith taught polygamy, that Joseph Smith taught polygamy; but they have quit it. I gained many friends by exposing their false doctrine. Several told me that they would never do anything more. Some of their flock said I ruined their church.

I find a great work to be done in these parts. Brethren, post yourselves on Utah Mormonism; look out for them. I will continue in these parts for a week or two. I want to attend the Utah Mormon conference in May, if I can. In bonds, Editors Herald.—Has the "club-footed man" the Herald warns us about one club foot? and does he call himself Mouton (I think)? If so, he has been here and got quite a bit of money from the saints who had not read of him in the Herald. The saints who don't read the Herald carefully should be warned of him in some way, as what money we have to give should be given the worthy.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, April 8.

Editors Herald.—We took in a little of the conference Sunday and Monday at the afternoon meetings. On Sunday hundreds were not able to gain admittance to the Tabernacle, or to the Assembly Hall where an overflow meeting was held. On Monday afternoon President Cannon very forcefully deplored the present division in the church and emphatically urged the awfulness of the thought that the priesthood could lead the people astray. The fact remains, however, that the people are not at perfect ease. On two occasions of late we have witnessed their chafing under the order that they must not discuss. On each occasion we were challenged to discuss the issues, and of course accepted, as they were representative men. The only alternative then was for them to disobey counsel or withdraw the challenge. They chose the latter, one man giving the reason as above, but insisting that they were not in bondage. However, there was something restraining them that was a little galling.

We wish to say that we have seen the good resulting from the kind treatment of their missionaries from our people; on more than one occasion we have been hospitably entertained and had a good hearing in consequence. We would suggest to our people that they continue to treat them hospitably, but not to forget to feed them the bread of life as well.

Editors Herald.—Since I last wrote I have been engaged in the work in the regions round about. Since the receipt of the letter of which I sent you a copy, there have been great "ructions" among the "very good" people of the Blackwood. The Rev. Densley, by using his influence to have me debarred from preaching in the private house of which I wrote, simply made a rod for his own back, as he has only been allowed to occupy one Sunday since; and after a regular bit of Billingsgate having been indulged in, he was told not to go back again, in language, I have been told, more forcible than polite.

I got permission from the Board of Advice to use the state school on the 28th of February, and from the teacher for the 7th of this month. Not many turned out on the 7th, but it rained all day, and in such rough country it is not to be expected the people can come out in such weather, although some rode six miles in the rain and mud to be present. I found that although we were few in number the Lord was present by his Spirit, and that to bless. I have arranged to hold meeting there once a month, or rather when possible every fourth week. There are some kind friends about there who pulled all the posters I had put up off the trees they were tacked to. I rather take that to be a hopeful sign than otherwise, as it shows there are some on whose religious corns I must have trodden, or the trouble would not be taken to remove them. So far from doing harm that piece of meanness has been bruited abroad far and near; so the party or parties have defeated their own object; another proof to me that God is quite able to defeat all the machinations of the enemy, no matter how cunningly the archenemy goes about his nefarious work.

I intend going to Melbourne in a few days to remain there about three weeks. The work moves slowly, but it moves.

Your colaborer,

DAVID MCINTOSH.

Editors Herald.—On page 218 of Herald for April 7, Bro. Paul Parker seems to try to excuse the saints for joining secret societies. I would like to offer a few remarks on the subject.

In Genesis 5, Inspired Translation, we find where these secret combinations were first instituted, and it says, "Their works were abominations." In Book of Mormon, Nephi, speaking of our times, says: "And there are also secret combinations, even as in times of old, according to the combinations of the Devil, for he is the foundation of all these things."—2 Nephi 11: 14. Also Mormon, speaking of the time when the Book of Mormon should come forth says: "And it shall come in a day when the blood of the saints shall cry unto the Lord, because of secret combinations and the works of darkness."—Mormon 4: 3. And there are many other passages I might quote, but where is any excuse for saints joining anything of this kind?

Again the brother says: "Let us not be too harsh in our criticisms of our brethren in these matters, but rather seek to remove the cause that makes it necessary for them to protect those dependent upon them." Now which is the better way, to pay our money to these societies and take their promise of help in time of sickness and death, or pay our money to the Lord's work and take his promise of "a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it" (Malachi 3: 10)? This is a command in temporal things, and I understand that the blessing will also be in temporal things.

And also in the Doctrine and Covenants, in the Word of Wisdom: "And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen."—D. C. 86: 3.

Which is the best promise, help in time of sickness and death, or help with health, and strength, and life?

Let us exercise more of the first principle of the gospel—faith, and have more confidence in God and his promises, ever striving to observe all his commandments and instructions, and we will never need to look for help from any other source; and let us go to with a will, whether minister or member, and do what we can to help roll this work along, and God will bless us. ALBERT.

ROXBURY, Va., April 12.

Editors Herald.—I am trying to do what I can for the work in this part of the vineyard, but I cannot write very encouragingly for this field. I have spent three weeks in Hampton; tried to get a place to preach in, got a hall and could not get anyone to speak to. They are set in their ways and will not come to hear. I came to this place and have spoken twice to small crowds. Those who are interested are western people; none of the eastern people are interested.

It is very good for the saints to talk, "Do not get discouraged;" but I am certain if they were in my place, and could not get anyone to preach to, and then read of the calls for preaching in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio—I am sure they would say as I feel, "Let me go where I can work." There are no calls for preaching in Virginia. The saints in the valley are going west, to Missouri or Iowa. Bro. Landes and Bro. John Moneymaker have sold and are going in September. Bro. and Sr. Herrick are going soon to Boston, and Bro. Barnett's folks are going as soon as they can get rid of the place. The children are having chills and fever this soon in the spring, also Sr. Barnett.

I feel glad to hear of the onward progress of the work in other places, and am sorry people are so stiff-necked and prejudiced against the truth in this part.

OPPRESSION OF THE POOR.

MANY prophecies of the Scriptures indicate that the times immediately preceding the second coming of our Lord will be marked by oppression of the poor and the meek, the hireling and the stranger, the widow and the fatherless. Some of them are here presented:—

"And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts."—Malachi 3: 5.

"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."—James 5: 1-8.

"But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked."—Isaiah 11: 4.

"Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, and that write grievousness which they have prescribed; to turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless! And what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation which shall come from far? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory? Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain. For all this his anger is not turned away, his hand is stretched out still."—Isaiah 10: 1-4.

"The Lord will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and the princes thereof; for ye have eaten up the vineyard; the spoil of the poor is in your houses. What mean ye that ye beat my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor? saith the Lord of hosts."—Isaiah 3: 14, 15.

We learn from John 12: 48 that the word of the Lord is to be the standard of judgment at the last day. The same word clearly defines the relations which men sustain to each other in God's sight, the obligations under which he has placed them to one another, and the duties imposed upon them because of the order of things established from the beginning. That which was from the beginning is stated in the following texts:—

"Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning."—1 John 2:7. "For this is the message [margin, commandment] that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another."—Ibid 3:11. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth."—Verses 17, 18.

These quotations show us that the commandment to love one another is an original one, is from the beginning. They show us, further, that love, the love of God, is more than a mere word of the tongue. It is attended and marked by active benevolence, when such is possible. It is a spiritual principle with an outward and substantial manifestation. It is like faith. Faith without works is dead. That love without works is dead, is equally true. Dead love is not acceptable with God nor profitable to men. Love is cold and dead when the hand that is able to do so, will not relieve the brother's need. Such an one's faith is dead likewise.

James says:—

"What profit is it, my brethren, for a man to say he hath faith and hath not works? Can faith save him?"

Yea, a man may say, I will show thee I have faith without works; but I say, Show me thy faith without works, and I will show thee my faith by my works. For if a brother or sister be naked and destitute, and one of you say, Depart in peace, be warmed and filled; notwithstanding he give not those things which are needful to the body; what profit is your faith unto such? Even so faith, if it have not works is dead, being alone."—James 2: 14-17. I. T.

Living faith and living love are known to be present when the hand is opened freely to minister to the neighbor's need. When the hand of compassion is shut up the love of God is not there. "And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also."—1 John 4: 21.

One of the questions that confront us at this stage of our discussion is, How am I to determine when my brother's or my neighbor's need is such that I am called upon to relieve it? To what extent does responsibility rest upon me to grant succor? By what standard shall I measure the demand upon my assistance? What rule shall I observe in order that I may be acquitted in the day of reckoning?

We have already observed that the word of the Lord is to be the standard in the judgment.

James says:—

"If ye fulfill the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well; but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors."—2: 8, 9.

I am, then, to love my neighbor as myself. The degree in which I love myself, is to be that in which I love my neighbor. The estimate I place upon my own needs, is the estimate I am to put upon his. The things I consider necessary for my good, I am to consider necessary to his, or an equivalent thereto. I am to regard him as entitled to as much of this world's good as I think desirable for myself. In this as in other things there is no respect of persons with God. The text just quoted says,

"If ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors."

It must be kept in mind that we are considering this subject in the light of God's law. We are not looking at it in the light in which men regard such things. It is by the law and word of God that we are to be tried by and by; not by the standards that men set up. The principle upon which the judgment is to proceed is thus laid down by the Savior:—

“With what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.”—Matt. 7: 2.

“For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.”—Luke 6: 38.

“The Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work, and measure to every man according to the measure which he has measured to his fellow-man.”—D. C. 1: 2.

It is very important, then, that men should be careful how they treat and deal with their fellows, for it is this that will determine their award in the judgment.

The different relations and conditions which lead men to show respect to one above another, will cut no figure at all with God. With men of the world it is thought to be the correct thing that there should be quite a difference made between master and servant, employer and employee, in the matter of compensation for service as well as in social consideration. Such respect of persons does not obtain with God. Paul thus discourses of that relationship: “Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ; doing the will of God from the heart; with good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men: Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free. And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening: knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him.”—Ephesians 6: 5-9.

Let it be noted that servants are here enjoined to be as faithful, true, and conscientious in their service as if it were to Christ himself. The service is to be rendered “as to the Lord, and not to men.” The masters are exhorted on their part to observe the same rule; that is, they are to render to the servants as unto Christ, “do the same things unto them,” exercise equal faithfulness, truth, and conscientiousness as required of the servants. They are to remember that they have a Master in heaven with whom there is no respect of persons. A Master who will deal with them as they deal with their fellowmen, even if they are but hirelings.

The wants and the needs of the hireling and servant are just as precious in the sight of the Lord as the wants and needs of the master. The food, the clothing, the shelter, the general good of the servant and hireling is just of as much interest to heaven as that of the man who employs him. If it is a want and need of the master that he be possessed of and have access to books, magazines, newspapers, and the general means of enlightenment and information, it is equally so with the servant. If it is a need before God that the master's children be educated, developed mentally, morally, and spiritually, so with the children of the hireling. The minds, the hearts, the souls, the spirits, and the bodies of the one are just as precious, just as valuable, just as worthy as the other. If these advantages are for the best good of the one, in this world and the next, so they are for the other; and the master who takes the means needed to give these advantages to his own family and withholds them from his faithful servant defrauds that servant, and will be held accountable therefor in the day of judgment.

The apostle uses much the same language as above-quoted in writing to the Colossians, only that his words are more expressive as to the duties of the master. He says:—

“Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal: knowing that ye also have a master in heaven.”—4: 1.

Justice and equality are inseparably linked together in the Christian economy.

Let us carefully consider the latter quotation in the light of God's righteousness. And let it be remembered that the righteousness of God is altogether different from that of men:—

“Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.”—Matt. 5: 20.

Paul enjoins masters to give their servants that which is just and equal for the reason that they too have a Master in heaven; that is, they are servants of Christ, and, hence, must consider themselves on an equal footing with his other servants. What they decide as being just and right for the other servants, they are bound to accept as being just and right for themselves, for there is no respect of persons with God. This first verse of Colossians 4 must be studied in connection with verses 22-25 of the previous chapter.

Paul is here addressing the church of Christ. In Christ all are brethren:—

“One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren.”—Matt. 23: 8.

Brethren ought to fare alike.

“For behold the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man, for food, and for raiment, and that he might have in abundance, but it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another; wherefore the world lieth in sin.”—D. C. 49: 3.

The law of God does not permit one man to possess above another in the sense of personal appropriation, even if one is an employer and the other a hireling. The stewardship of one may be vastly more extensive than that of the other, because of the great difference of ability, but their needs must decide what shall be taken for the personal use of each. Because of the differences in appropriation the world lies in sin. Those who have the goods of this world in possession forget the fact that the only right they have in relation to them is that of stewardship. The real owner is God. When we say God is the real owner, we do not mean it in some vague, sentimental way, but in a sense that gives him the absolute right of saying definitely how the goods shall be disposed of and appropriated.

A steward is “a superintendent of another's affairs,” of the goods or property of another man. He is justly entitled to the wages agreed upon between himself and his principal, if he is faithful. He has, however, no other claim upon the estate or property. If he takes for his personal use more than this he is considered guilty of embezzlement and liable to the punishment prescribed in the law for such offenses. God will hold men strictly accountable for their stewardship.

The following passages show the claims of God upon temporal things:—

“The earth is the Lord’s, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.”—Psalms 24: 1.

“For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee; for the world is mine, and the fullness thereof.”—Psalms 50: 10–12.

“The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts.”—Haggai 2: 8.

“For the earth is the Lord’s and the fullness thereof.”—1 Cor. 10: 26, 28.

“And if ye judge the man who putteth up his petition to you for your substance, that he perish not, and condemn him, how much more just will be your condemnation, for withholding your substance, which doth not belong to you, but to God, to whom also, your life belongeth; and yet ye put up no petition, nor repent of the thing which thou hast done.”—Mosiah 2: 18 (large edition).

“I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine.”—D. C. 101: 2.

As the logical sequence of these claims we have the following strong words in the paragraph last quoted: “Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.”

We have good reason, then, for thinking that the Lord will hold men to a strict account for their stewardship.

The question may be asked, How much does the Lord allow a man to take for his hire in his stewardship? The answer is, Enough for his support.

“Thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship; thou shalt not take thy brother’s garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my storehouse, that all things may be done according to that which I have said.”—D. C. 42: 14.

And what rule shall guide the steward regarding the amount that he shall take for his support? The answer is, Just the same as is allowed the poor man, the minister, the laborer with an equal family.

“Think of your brethren, like unto yourselves, and be familiar with all, and free with your substance, that they may be rich like unto you.”—Jacob 2: 16 (large edition).

“And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself; for what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter to them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one, be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here, and to the other, be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there, and looketh upon his sons and saith, I am just. Behold, this I have given unto you a parable, and it is even as I am: I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one, ye are not mine.”—D. C. 38: 5, 6.

“And let every man deal honestly, and be alike among this people, and receive alike that ye may be one, even as I have commanded you.”—D. C. 51: 2.

“Verily I say unto you, the time has come, and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion, or in other words, the city of Enoch, for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven, that you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heav-only things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things; for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.”—D. C. 77: 1.

From the foregoing it is clearly to be seen what the Lord requires of every man, and what he is justly entitled to for his hire in the service of his stewardship. The Seventy is to receive for his family just the same proportion for his family as the Apostle under whose direction he labors, receives for his. The manual laborer is to receive for his household an equal benefit with the steward of the property and under whose direction he labors, their families being equal.

If the proceeds of the property or stewardship will not permit the laborer more than a specified amount, the receipts of the steward for personal use must be restricted to an equivalent. This is the law of God; it is eternal justice. The poor and the needy who are not able to labor must also enjoy an equal benefit, but all must labor to the extent of their ability.

In the following words we have a comprehensive statement of the law of God regarding stewardships and temporal benefits:—

“Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent; who keepeth the Lord’s store-house; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things; he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship, to administer in temporal things; yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld.”—D. C. 70: 3.

This is to be understood in the light of the paragraphs going before, in which it is said, "An account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment;" and also, "Inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants, it shall be given into my storehouse. This residue "shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants."—D. C. 42:10.

Moreover, those who have thus paid the accruing residue into the storehouse of the Lord and wish to covenant with the Lord by sacrifice, "shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually," or in other words, one tenth of the hire of their stewardship.

This is the law of the Lord in regard to temporal things. These are some of the conditions to be observed in seeking a place in the celestial kingdom. They are the conditions as to temporal things. "He who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, cannot abide a celestial glory." Those who fail to observe these conditions must suffer the consequent loss.

By transgressing these holy laws, men become carnal, sensual, devilish; they oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow and the fatherless; they defraud the laborer of his hire, grind the faces of the poor, turn aside the needy from judgment, and take away the right from the poor; they nourish their hearts as in a day of slaughter, heap treasure together for the last days, and prepare slaughter for their children.

God has winked at the ignorance of past times, but he now commands all men everywhere to repent. He commands the elders to go forth with the warning voice, "to reprove the world of all their unrighteous deeds, and to teach them of a judgment which is to come," "setting forth clearly and understandingly the desolation of abomination in the last days," "the days of wickedness and vengeance," the days "that shall burn as an oven," when "all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble," it is promised that,

On the other hand, "He who doeth the works of righteousness, shall receive his reward, even peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come."—D. C. 59: 5.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL.

THE JUDGMENTS OF GOD.

REJOICE, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment.—Eccles. 11: 9.

These words of the preacher reveal the truth that unto every man God has given freedom; before him is placed that which cheers the heart; of many trees he may eat; good and evil he may choose. One is sweet, the other bitter; one brings joy and peace, the other, while it may appear to bring great joy, is in reality the beginning of sorrow; and for all these things God will bring man into judgment. In that day those who have done good and desired good in the days of their probation upon the earth, will have good measured out unto them; on the other hand those who have desired evil all the days of their probation will have evil meted unto them, thus all will have a just recompense of reward and every man will receive joy according to his capacity. Those who obeyed the gospel and were true to the covenant made with God in the waters of baptism will receive a fullness of joy and abide with the Savior in his kingdom.

The preacher in his talk of judgment says unto the youth:—

Therefore remove sorrow from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh: for childhood and youth are vanity.—Eccles. 11: 10.

The youth who will have faith in God and repent of his sins may have them remitted in baptism and thus put away sorrow and evil. In childhood and youth many know not the gospel, but in later years hear and obey; then cometh the evil one to overthrow and destroy, the struggle is then to put away the evil thoughts and desire that crowd upon them. By the prayer of faith they are delivered and receive strength to overcome. These are they who having passed into life before the judgment, have no fear of condemnation.

Blessed are those who in childhood are taught the principles of the gospel of Christ and obey the same, they will have knowledge to escape many of the evils that befall the young.

More blessed will they who have charity, be in the day of judgment, for charity is the pure love of God and cometh only unto those who have been strict to keep the commandments. Charity will abide when faith is lost in knowledge and hope gives place to sight.

Beside the judgment that cometh at the last day, there are judgments of the Almighty that fall upon men in the days of their probation in the shape of floods, winds, fire, earthquakes, pestilence, and famine, because of their iniquity, and to awaken them from their sleep of death that Satan may have no more power over them; and also that they may repent and the Lord heal them, and they be restored to their proper order as the sons and daughters of God.

The wicked and rebellious who will not hearken to the voice of God nor his servant, are cut off when their iniquity is full, and their spirits are confined in prison to await the final resurrection and judgment.

There is a judgment that cometh upon the church:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit meet for their Father's kingdom,—otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay.—D. C. 83: 8.

The word of the Lord says further:—

Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land; for, verily, I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out.—D. C. 64: 7.

The children of Zion did not repent and because of this judgment came; the few who were "willing and obedient" remained to "eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days." The word of the Lord to Israel as recorded in the first chapter of Isaiah will apply to latter-day Israel in her wanderings from the Lord.

We must remember the success of the Reorganized Church in the years to come depends on each individual doing his part whether great or small. It is a truth we should all remember, In unity there is strength; if we are of one heart and one mind, the pressure of the evil one from without will only make us more firm and steadfast in keeping the commandments of the Lord, and as a church we will avoid the rocks upon which the old church was wrecked and the judgments that came upon her leaders.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Rocky Mountain Mission; Greeting:—After consultation and deliberation I have concluded to address you relative to matters of general interest to the above mission.

It is thought best to divide it into the following subdivisions, or "missionary fields": Montana, R. J. Anthony in charge; Idaho, J. T. Davies in charge; Utah and Western Wyoming, James McKiernan in charge. Of the others of the missionary force Gomer Reese will labor in Montana, J. C. Clapp in Idaho, and Brn. H. N. Hansen and S. D. Condit in Utah. Any special work desired or required can be reported to those in immediate charge or to me at Salt Lake City.

In all cases one of the peculiar facts to be considered is that the railways will not carry these brethren free but are sufficiently generous to do so at half price. If you need their labor be at least as generous as the world and supply the means for the other half. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

"The work now lying before" us is of sufficient magnitude to require sacrifice on the part of all that we may become "laborers together with God." And the conditions incident to that field are such as to require an extra sacrifice on the part of all who labor and dwell there.

Something like half enough funds for the purchase of a tent to be used in that mission are already in hand, and it is to be hoped that by additional subscriptions this enterprise will be accomplished and will prove effectual for good. Doing rather than saying will accomplish the work.

The ministry will please observe the following resolution adopted by the Quorum of Twelve: "All ministers who are not in charge, are required to report on or about the first day of the months of July, October, January, and March, . . . to the minister who is in charge of the 'field of labor' where the work is performed. All who are in charge of such 'fields of labor,' are required to report on or about the tenth day of the above named months, such reports to be made out and sent to the general missionary in charge." The March reports of all should be for the year. Your financial reports go to the Bishop and hereafter conclude with the year.

With a Patriarch now in the church and the leading quorums filled we are better qualified to prosecute the work in that mission than ever before in the history of the Reorganization. In view of such fact let us put forth extra effort, and pray as well as labor to the end that the accomplishment thereof may be in harmony with God's will that divine approval may be had.

I am in hopes of reaching you not later than the 15th prox. May peace abide.

Yours in bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 20, 1897.

WESTERN NEBRASKA, NORTH AND SOUTH DAKOTA, MINNESOTA, AND IOWA MISSION.

Having been duly placed in charge of the above-named territory, and feeling keenly the grave responsibility thus placed upon me, I earnestly request the prayers and coöperation of all the ministry and saints throughout the mission.

Should my health permit me to travel and preach, I shall only be too glad to occupy as time and ability will permit; but should conditions continue as they now are, this part of my work will have to be omitted.

Bro. James Caffall has been appointed to the same mission with the understanding that after his return to America we are to make such division of territory and other arrangements as we deem necessary and advisable. I am pleased to make this announcement.

The spiritual influences which characterized our late conference, together with the filling up of the first two quorums of the church, also the calling and setting apart of a Patriarch to the whole church, will, we trust, give additional impetus to the cause we love, and prove to be a strong incentive to duty upon the part of all saints. And in this connection, I may be pardoned for the expression of the thought, that we might have received a much greater blessing had we been more worthy and better prepared.

The ministry, local and traveling, cannot be too anxious to fulfill the duties of their calling as outlined in the law, "Preach the word," "Warn, expound, exhort, and invite all to come to Christ;" but do not overpersuade, or baptize hastily without due regard to fitness and that preparation demanded in the gospel. True faith and repentance precede baptism, and these two words faith and repentance are both significant and comprehensive. (See D. C. 17:7.)

In harmony with the instruction given to our quorum in 1888, by the First Presidency, and renewed again this spring, also our practice for the past nine years, we divide our missions into "fields of labor" over which we place others as our assistants in charge. You are therefore asked to acquiesce in the following appointments:—

Southeastern Nebraska, W. E. Peak; Northeastern Nebraska, J. F. Mintun. The dividing line between these two fields will be the Platte River, which, I am informed, is also the line between the Northern and Southern districts. As before, the longitudinal line No. 99, will be the dividing line between Eastern and Western Nebraska. All things considered, so far as known, these divisions are thought to be the best; but I trust the brethren will not be too fastidious about lines. If you see a piece of work that needs to be done, and you can do it, and there is no one else to do it, do the work by all means and report it to the one in charge of the "field of labor."

Minnesota and the Dakotas will be in charge of I. N. Roberts; Little Sioux district, Iowa, H. O. Smith; Galland's Grove district, Iowa, C. E. Butterworth; Pottawattamie district, Iowa, T. W. Williams; Fremont district, Iowa, Henry Kemp; Des Moines district, Iowa, C. Scott; Eastern Iowa district, J. W. Peterson and C. E. Hand; reporting to be done to Bro. Peterson and through him to me. Bro. Hand is acquainted with the situation, has done good work, and will, therefore, it is hoped, be a valuable help to Bro. Peterson.

The Nauvoo district contains eight counties in Iowa, six in Illinois, and three in Missouri. By agreement with Brn. J. H. Lake and I. N. White the district will be considered to be in the Iowa mission. Should Brn. Lake and White desire to perform any labor in the district within the conference year, they will, of course, meet with a hearty welcome and due respect in their office and calling. F. M. Weld in charge. Ministers located where no assistant in charge has been appointed will report direct to me. All are supposed to be familiar with the rules governing ministerial reports; but if any are not, they are referred to the supplement to the Herald containing the conference minutes for April, 1893, page 68.

When public debate is thought to be necessary (and it should not be engaged in unless it is), let the framing of propositions, time and place of holding the debate, who shall be the disputants, etc., be referred to the one in charge. This we have found to be necessary, and it does not cripple anyone inasmuch as the work can be defended, when necessary, without a joint discussion; and in case a proper challenge should be made it can be accepted in a general way, and upon the true issues, without naming them, referring all to the assistant in charge for final arrangements.

Let us hope, and labor, and pray that the coming year may be one of success to the great cause of truth, notwithstanding the fact that in our midst, and all around us, "all things" are "in commotion," and men's hearts are failing them with fear. May God help the saints to be pure, and full of faith.

Your coworker in Christ,

J. R. LAMBERT.

Brethren and Sisters of the Lake Mission; Greeting:—Through the grace of our blessed Master, we are again permitted to be associated for another year in the great work of the Lord. And with the view that this may be our last year to gather in the golden grain before us, what is the question for each to answer? A new page is disclosed in life's history. Shall it be filled with bright letters attesting our loyalty, and that we have all done the best we could, with not a single erasure, nor stain to mar its fair, priceless purity? This is the question each one should answer, and be moved to a determination nerved by the inspiration of holiness and prophecy, that will give us the aspiration and sacrifice necessary to consecrate our lives entire, in following Christ, in being helpers with God in the "Restoration of all things" spoken by the prophets of old. I congratulate and praise you for earnest, faithful service to the cause of truth, during the last two years or since I saluted you and called for a united effort. You have done well. Praise the Lord, O, my soul. Lights and shadows have succeeded each other over your horizon, until now the Lord of Israel has again spoken from on high, to gladden every heart of the hosts of Jacob's children saying: "The Spirit saith further unto the church, Be of good cheer. It has pleased the Father to accept many of the sacrifices of his people." This is spoken to the church, collectively. Can we each say in truth, "I have sacrificed so I can appreciate the foregoing word of the Lord to me." If so, all can indeed say: "I am happy, O, so happy, and I will do more the coming year than even before for surely the Lord Jesus, who never lost a battle, is our commander and leader."

For nearly forty-five years, or since the church was reorganized by the command of God, we have watched and prayed to see the leading quorums filled with apostles, prophets, evangelists, bishops, elders, teachers, and deacons, as we were promised that it surely would be done, in the due time of the Lord. I can say indeed for one, I have not "fainted," nor have I doubted the promise during these long, weary years of toil and anxiety. It is now accomplished. Praise the Lord, O, my soul!

It is with pain I observe how few there are of those who began in the Reorganization that are now with us. Like Joshua and Caleb, there were only two of us at the late conference that assembled with the scattered remnant at the first conference of the Reorganization, June 12 and 13, 1852, at Newark, Rock County, Wisconsin, near the beautiful city of Beloit. Some have fallen with armor on, shining brightly. Others have grown weary and sleepy, and some, I fear, have lost all interest in the work of God, and will lose their reward.

But all of these things should assure us, like the wheel within a wheel as seen by Ezekiel. The experiences of both the outer and inner wheel, says, "Truth is mighty, and will prevail," or in other words, The rejected church and the Reorganized Church attest the fact that righteousness alone will be sustained, and ultimately crowned at the end of the race. Will we be there to share in the great day, when all the pure, the upright, and the good will receive the "Welcome home," and "well done, thou hast been faithful"? Count the cost quickly now, my dear brethren; decide at once, on which side are you enlisted, for a short work, a decisive action is near, even at our doors. Will we lend a listening ear, and be found in the victorious army of the Lord? If so, your attention is directed to the fact that your field officers are our brave leaders, Elder R. E.

Grant, 848 Holms Avenue, Grant Rapids, Michigan; Elder J. J. Cornish, Reed City, Michigan, is Bishop's agent; Elder Andrew Barr, Eastern Michigan, address, Forester, Michigan, Bishop's agent; Elder S. W. L. Scott, of Coldwater, Michigan, Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana field, and Samuel Stroh, of Coldwater, Michigan, as Bishop's agent; Elder George Jenkins, of Byrneville, Harrison County, Indiana, Southern Indiana field, and William C. Marshall, of Wirt, Indiana, as Bishop's agent.

All these brethren are duly appointed to be your servants. Will you heed their counsel and assist them all you can by your faith, prayers, and means? Send the agents your names and often as you can, of what the Master has blessed you with, fill up the storehouse of the Lord with tithes and offerings and see if you do not receive a blessing you cannot contain, as the Lord has promised in the scriptures of truth. (Mal. 3:10; also stick of Joseph.) The darkness is past and the light is shining brilliantly upon the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints now. Let us all be humble and faithful and see how much we can do to move the cause of Zion along. Send in your mites, dimes, dollars, fives, tens, twenties, fifties, hundreds, and thousands, and surely the Lord will bless you. And the elders, teachers, deacons, and members are all called upon to assist with all their might, and I will promise you, if you seek unitedly in prayer, as Jesus commanded and in everything give thanks, you shall be directed in your work and the labor of your hands shall be prospered and your hearts filled with joy and gladness.

Servants of the mission, please be prompt and report quarterly to your field officers first day of July, first day of October, first day of January, and the fifteenth of March. Have your reports so arranged that the number of sermons shall be at the top of the first page, left hand corner, in figures, and baptisms in right hand corner. In this way the mission work may be summarized readily, and we may all see what we are accomplishing from time to time. And the missionary in charge can make his report briefly and readily show statistics for the encouragement of the saints, and thus preserve the record of the work done.

I also wish to suggest that your usefulness and worth to the church are not measured by number of sermons preached or baptisms registered, but by the real substantial good you are doing. Hence no rivalry is aimed at to run a race for the number of sermons and baptisms. Genuine conversions and teaching is the only guide marks by which the minister is measured. Sobriety, candor, diligence, and zeal are always noticed and praised. Triflings, light-mindedness, and lack of dignity in a minister are always painfully observed by the saints, and spreads abroad to the discredit of the church, and like perishable material, hay, wood, and stubble, is burned, and the one who thus trifles away his time must suffer loss. In plain words whoever idles away his time is known. The horrible practice of speaking disrespectfully and depreciatively of each other is dishonorable and inexcusable. Jealousy is the offering of an evil heart and is sensual and devilish, and the practice of spreading difficulties and by slighting remarks or innuendo of a fellow minister of Christ is such a breach of Christianity that whoso is guilty of such disgraceful act should be silenced after the second offense, and be remanded to a discipline that will release the church of such burden, that the church suffer not through such evils. Members and officers should report all such offenders to their presiding elders.

There is a law to which all the members of the church are amenable, and can be dealt with in an honorable way. But the low, sly, cunning, crafty hypocrite who rolls slander under his tongue, is the vilest enemy the church has ever had. He should be pitied and his acts despised. Of such the apostle spoke truly and plainly: "Slow bellies, evil hearts, whose mouths should be stopped."

I will be in the mission as soon as opportunity will offer. With much love and gratitude to God, and prayer for the welfare of latter-day Israel, I am,

Your colaborer for Christ's sake,

E. C. BRIGGS.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 20, 1897.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, AND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS MISSION.

By the appointment of the First Presidency, and the indorsement of the late conference held at Lamoni, Iowa, I have been placed in charge of the above mission. I enter upon this important work with my co-laborers, feeling the great responsibility attaching thereto. I can but trust in God and ask the assistance and coöperation of my brethren—both the General Conference appointees and the local force in the branches and districts—throughout the mission, to assist me in making a success in this new department of work your unworthy servant and fellow-laborer has been called to.

The following named brethren have been appointed to take charge of "fields of labor," and I trust they will be found worthy of the confidence and support of the saints and ministers, located in their respective charges: Peter Anderson, Nodaway district, Missouri; J. M. Terry, Far West district, Missouri; R. May, Independence district, in Missouri and Kansas; Alfred White, Clinton district, in Missouri and Kansas; F. C. Keck, Spring River district, in Missouri, Kansas, and Indian Territory. Henry Sparling, the city of Springfield and South Missouri district, Missouri; M. H. Bond, St. Louis district, in Missouri and Illinois. F. M. Slover, Southern Illinois, except that portion that belongs to the Nauvoo and St. Louis districts. W. S. Pender, Kansas, except that portion which lies in Spring River, Clinton, and Independence districts. The Northeast Missouri district will be under my own charge for the present.

I call special attention to the action of the Twelve on reporting; and that all the missionaries may more fully understand their duty in that department of work, I herewith submit the resolution adopted by the quorum: "Resolved, that by the adoption of the following resolutions and declarations we call the especial attention of all ministers who are under General Conference appointment to the necessity and importance of reporting their labors to those who are in missionary charge: 1. It is the opinion of this quorum that a prompt and conscientious compliance with a suitable system of reporting has become an important necessity in missionary work. These reports should be brief, but sufficiently explicit to indicate, as plainly as possible, the labor performed, time spent in actual ministerial work, prospects, etc. 2. All ministers who are not in charge are required to report on or about the first day of the months of July, October, January, and March; these reports to be made out and sent to the minister who is in charge of the 'field of labor' where the work is performed. All who are in charge of such 'fields of labor,' are required to report on or about the tenth day of the above-named months, such reports to be made out and sent to the general missionary in charge. The reports of those ministers who are not in charge need not be so lengthy as those who are, from the fact that they have nothing but their own labors, results, and prospects where they have labored, to report. 3. In the March report, all items required by the quorum as a prerequisite to missionary appointment, must be furnished. It should be the duty of the missionary in charge of a 'field of labor' to secure proper reports from all General Conference appointees in his field, summaries of which, together with his own report, must be sent to the missionary in charge. 4. In all cases where assistance from those in charge is needed, reference should be had directly to the one in charge of the 'field of labor,' and if further counsel or help is required, it should be applied for, by him, to the general missionary in charge."

Dear brethren, the field is white before us; let our motto be, "In God we trust!" Push forward, for the victory is ours in Christ Jesus. I feel prompted to say: It will not be all sunshine; our joy will often be followed by grief; yet the clouds will have their silver lining, and the year will end prosperous to many. I am your brother and fellow servant in Christ Jesus,

I. N. WHITE.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints of Minnesota and the Dakotas:—The reunion will begin on Saturday, the 19th day of June, at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, and will continue over two Sundays. We hope to meet all the saints on the above date promptly. That we may have a good time, come one and all, bring the Spirit of Christ with you, and a good and joyful time will be had. Those who have tents, bring them with you and camp on the ground. Those wishing to board will please write T. J. Martin, Detroit, Minnesota, or the writer, Audubon, Minnesota. We ask you to do this so the committee may secure suitable places for you and at a price to suit the times.

George H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, and the missionaries will be there to present the word. It is the desire of the committee to make this meeting a success in every particular. Tell your friends, invite your neighbors, tell all to come and meet with the people of God.

Dear saints, let us all labor together as one that success may attend. Let no trivial thing keep you away from this meeting. Remember the words of the poet, "Our aim mankind to bless." Sr. Fidella Hawley and Miss Nora Ochsner will preside at the organ.

I. N. ROBERTS,

Chairman of Com.

OKLAHOMA SAINTS.

Oklahoma saints, look! read! respond! We want to reach one hundred thousand people with the gospel this summer. Only two missionaries in the field. Will you assist them? When? Now. How? There are thousands of copies of Heralds, Ensigns, Autumn Leaves, Hopes, sermons, etc., which the saints will send just for the asking.

If you had them, could you not distribute them among your neighbors, or when you go to town take a roll of them and put one in the farmers' wagons? In ten minutes you can distribute a hundred. Do this every time you go to town for one month or as long as your supply lasts, and you will reach as many with the gospel as the elder in a series of services. Will you not help us in this way, and also help those in darkness? The writer was brought to the light by a tract given him by Bro. John Kaler. If you will assist in this scheme, drop me a card with your name and address, and you will be supplied with literature. Don't put it off, now is the time to act.

PHILLIPS.—Sarah E., at her home near Pilcher, Ohio, on December 28, 1896. She was born January 9, 1846. She became a member of the Latter Day Saints Church September 3, 1876; was baptized by Rev. James Craig, at Lampsville, Ohio. After the disorganization of the church at this place the records were transferred to Wheeling, West Virginia, where she was recorded. Owing to her isolation from any branch of the church she did not have the opportunity of attending church services, but she believed in the doctrines and principles of the Latter Day Saints and was ever ready to defend her belief. Before dying she expressed herself as being ready to go. She left a husband and four children. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Manley of the M. E. Church, who conducted the funeral very nicely and made mention of her as a member of the Saints Church.

GIVENS.—April 3, 1897, near Oxford, West Virginia, Bro. John W. Givens. Deceased was born June 24, 1845, in Monroe County, Ohio; baptized August 6, 1881, by Elder B. F. Drake; ordained to the office of teacher September 26, 1883, by Elder H. H. Robinson. Wife and nine children, four sons and five daughters, besides a host of relatives and friends, are left to mourn. Bro. Givens lived a consistent Christian life, was always ready to make any sacrifice for the work he loved so well, and died strong in the faith. Funeral services conducted by Priest B. Beall. Interment at the Cabin Run graveyard, Doddridge County, West Virginia.

FARLEY.—At the home of Bro. and Sr. Farley, Gallup, New Mexico, a son was born February 23, 1897, and named John. He lived but a short time, the Master calling him home March 6. Funeral on the 7th, conducted by Isaac Bailey.

GIFFORD.—Mrs. Savilla M. Gifford died at her home at Mormon Springs, Illinois, April 2, 1897, aged 72 years, 8 months, and 9 days. Sr. Gifford was born in Oswego County, New York, July 25, 1825, and moved to Nauvoo in 1838. Her maiden name was Savilla M. Durfee. She was married to James S. Gifford at Nauvoo, October 22, 1850, and resided in Nauvoo until 1879, when they moved to Mormon Springs, where they have resided ever since. She was baptized in her childhood and has always lived an earnest, consistent Christian life, and has been loved by all who knew her, for she always tried to do unto others as she wished to be done by. She leaves a large circle of friends, together with her husband, and six children, to mourn. Funeral sermon at her late home, Sunday morning, at eleven o'clock, by Daniel Tripp. Burial at Nauvoo, Illinois.

ALEXANDER.—At Harris Grove, Iowa, March 29, 1897, Sr. Latina Alexander, aged 78 years, 4 months, and 2 days. Said sister was born November 27, 1818, in Simsbury, Connecticut. Removed from Connecticut to Nelson, New York, in August, 1823, and from there to Spafford, New York, in 1826. Soon after she joined the M. E. Church, of which she was a devoted member until 1832, when she united with the Latter Day Saints Church, of which she remained a faithful member until death. In February, 1838, she was married to Stuart Alexander. To this union eight children were born, four sons and four daughters. Two sons and two daughters have preceded her, also her husband eighteen years ago. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder J. A. Donaldson in the Union church, in Harris Grove, Iowa, from the text of her own choosing, 2 Timothy 2: 19.

WILLSON.—March 18, 1897, At Epsom, Indiana, Sr. Lizzie Willson. Deceased was born September 26, 1844; united with the church October 19, 1890, being baptized by Elder L. F. Daniel. She lived a faithful, diligent life since her conversion to the faith, showing that there was something that she expected in the future that would reward her for all the diligence she had taken to live a better life. Three sons, mother, and many friends mourn.

FRY.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, April 3, 1897, Mrs. Jane Fry, mother of Sr. Fairbanks, aged 70 years, 3 months, and 9 days. Funeral services at the saints' church. She was laid to rest in Oakland cemetery, Gilbert J. Whitehead officiating, assisted by David J. Krahl.

THOMPSON.—Sr. Cynthia Thompson, wife of Mr. C. W. Thompson, died at their home near Lake City, Iowa, April 15, 1897, aged 56 years, 7 months, and 5 days. Sr. Thompson was baptized into Christ by Elder Charles Derry, January 27, 1870, since which time she has been a worthy member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Funeral services were conducted at the union church near Lake City, Iowa, Saturday, April 17, 1897, by Elders W. W. Whiting and Charles E. Butterworth, the latter pronouncing the discourse to a crowded house of attentive and sympathizing relatives, friends, and neighbors. Many of our ministers have found a home with Mr. and Sr. Thompson, who will remember her as a sister of Bro. Benan Salisbury. She died as she lived, strong in the faith.

KLINGBACK.—Bro. Jacob C. Klingback, at his residence near Emmett, Idaho, March 15, 1897, aged 84 years and 6 months. Bro. Klingback was a native of Denmark and removed from there to Utah in 1858, and to Idaho in 1868. He settled in the Payette Valley and remained there till the time of his death. The last sixteen years of his life he was called to pass through much bodily suffering. His wife and two sons survive him. They need the prayers of the saints in their present hours of affliction, as they are passing through other sorrows.

WEITLICH.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, March 29, 1897, Tine, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Frank Weitlich, born January 21, 1891. Funeral preached by T. T. Kinderks in the German church. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery of the German branch. May God bless the bereaved.

FOSDICK.—At Ableman, Wisconsin, April 9, 1897, in the eighty-second year of her age, Sr. Ann Fosdick; who died in the faith, and in the language of Mr. O. Ward, who wrote of her death, "She was a good Christian."

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

THE SCIENTIFIC ARGUMENT FOR IMMORTALITY.

THE man who can say something positively new in regard to immortality does not, in all probability, exist. The most we expect on that subject is a restatement, in clearer and more modern terms, of what has already been said. Mr. L. C. Poore, in an article on "Life," in The Westminster Review (March), describes life, for man, as an "endless changing of the combinations of things already brought into existence," in which combination two properties stand clearly out, without which there could be no life. These two properties are Individuality and Immortality. No two of the many combinations that constitute life are just alike. "Each combination has something that no other combination has. . . . This is individuality." After enlarging on this point, the writer takes up the argument for immortality drawn from the conservation of force (which argument, of course, as has often been remarked, applies to all animals as well as man), and restates it as follows:—

"Life for man, as we have already seen, is an endless and constant changing of the combinations of things already brought into existence. For man there is no end, as there has been no beginning. From the stars far away to the midges we brush off as we write, from the blue mountains that lie upon our horizon to the eyes that behold them there is no exception. When a change comes it is a result of the separation of the factors as they form other combinations. The very fact of a change shows separation, and separation shows fresh combinations. We have learned when the tree decays and the flower fades, when hollows are formed in the sides of hills and snow melts, when a storm goes out and a man dies, we have learned that these things are due to the nature of life. Something is divided, something is gone, and something is left. But even in the act of separation the factors are forming other combinations in accordance with the spirit of life, its endlessness or immortality. When a fire burns, we know that the coal is undergoing separation under the influence of heat and air and we have learned that the ashes are not the only fresh combination formed. The combination coal has gone, but all its substance will be found as factors in fresh combinations.

"Though it is only in very simple matters that we can restore the former combination, yet we never put down our inability to the annihilation of any of the factors. We cannot recover them, we say, but we never doubt that they are still in existence.

"But though the immortality of the objective world is acknowledged, it is a subject of great doubt in the subjective. Living in the body here, we grow to think our body is us, and the endless cases in which we are more or less influenced by the body helps to strengthen this feeling. But, indeed, though the body, being the most intimate objective part to us, naturally exerts a proportionally strong influence, still it is an influence and not a creator. This is seen at death or the ceasing of the combination of the soul and body. When a man dies is there any factor unaccounted for in the change that comes upon him? His body still exists, but the rapid falling to pieces that comes upon it shows that that has gone which held it together. He has gone, the subjective part.

"I labor under the great disadvantage of ignorance, but I believe I am right when I say that the factor which represents me cannot be placed. I stay in my present manifestation, as we call the union of the subjective and objective, as long as I can, but when, in obedience to the nature of life, separation comes, it is because all the factors are forming fresh combinations. The very fact that the body is forming new combinations shows that something has left it. Now, until I can be shown differently, I shall hold that this something is the subjective part of the combination, that it is 'I,' that it must in accordance with the nature of life be forming a new combination also.

"The fact that when we die, as we say, we are still in the same universe as this, appears to some people absolutely blasphemous. Yet it is difficult to see why. The present world has been enjoyed for so short a time, the knowledge we have gained of it so small, that it is hard to see why we should have been awakened to it at all if at death it is done, and still harder to see why what is good in one portion of eternity should not be good in another.

"So, for man, life is immortal or endless, as in the objective world so in the subjective. Life cannot be without immortality, for it is immortality; immortality, moreover, of individuality."—Literary Digest.

GRATITUDE A RULE OF LIFE.

NO LESSON is more appropriate than the divinely emphasized duty of being grateful. The religion of the Bible is a religion of praise. A thankful spirit is one of its essential elements: not only the feeling, but the expression of thankfulness is its explicit and reiterated demand. The exhortation to thanksgiving perpetually on the lips of psalmists and prophets and apostles has been called "in a sense the alpha and omega of the Christian life," because thankfulness should be in perpetual operation in our hearts, and because it may be truly said to lead to every Christian grace. In fact, gratitude toward God, taken in its broadest scope, covers the whole religion of man. It means an abiding sense of God's goodness. It means prizing and accepting his great gift of salvation in Christ, and his daily renewed mercies. It manifests itself not only in words of acknowledgment, but in service joyfully rendered "unto the Lord for all his benefits." "Help us, O God," was the prayer of a wise and devout man, "to show our gratitude toward thee by acts of kindness and love, as well as by words of thanksgiving and praise."

It would seem a natural and easy thing to be thankful, but it is not so simple even when there is everything to lead to it. It is not a mere spontaneous instinct, like the buoyancy of animal spirit rising with the increase of oxygen in the air. Gratitude to God requires thought, humility, faith, reverence. The old minister was right who said when some one lightly cried, "Oh, I am so thankful." "No, you are only glad; it is a great thing to be thankful." Often it would seem that gratitude is rarest where there is the largest reason for its exercise. Those who have most in God's world are apt to be those who thank him least. The Giver is forgotten in the very abundance of the gifts. Reluctance to take and acknowledge a freely bestowed blessing is what keeps men, more perhaps than any other cause, from becoming Christians. It is a strange and significant fact that the sorrows of life bring many to God who are never brought to him by its prosperities.

"Hands that the preacher could not move, by wayside graves are raised,
And lips say, 'God be pitiful,' that ne'er said 'God be praised.'"

We owe to each other as we owe to God, the ready sense of favors bestowed and the frank utterance of thankfulness. There is a strange perversity about this in human nature. It takes generosity to receive as well as to bestow, and men seem to think that by ungracious acceptance and niggardly thanks they somehow lessen the obligation they incur. Nothing does more to mar social and family relations than the want of gratitude. To have a thankless child is an affliction "sharper than a serpent's tooth." To forget what has been done for us, and what we owe to those who did it, is a selfish tendency against which we have need always to be on our guard. It is not only disloyal to the benefactor, but degrading to the recipient. Let the forms of expressing thanks—even the most conventional—be scrupulously observed, and let the spirit of honest gratitude toward God and man be always alive in our hearts.—Ex.

Whence is life? and what of its mysteries? are interestingly discussed in an article of great scientific merit, by William Seton, in the May issue of The Catholic World Magazine. Dr. Seton is doing for American Catholic literature what St. George Mivart is doing in England. With deep scientific knowledge he joins a reverent faith.

JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER.

WE are requested to give an opinion as to whether Jephthah, the Gileadite, offered his daughter as a burnt offering, in accordance with his vow, or not.

So far as the history of Jephthah and his actions in contending against the children of Ammon, as related in Judges may concern us of the latter-day work it is immaterial whether he did or did not offer his daughter as a burnt offering. All that would be wrought by an absolute decision in regard to it would be the satisfaction one might be supposed to have from a knowledge of the transaction as it occurred.

The record in Judges is quite plain. In both the King James' version and the Holy Scriptures verses 30 and 31 of chapter 11 read alike:—

And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's and I will offer it up for a burnt offering.

Verse 34:—

And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances: and she was his only child; beside her he had neither son nor daughter. And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: for I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I cannot go back. And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the Lord, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the Lord hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon. And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows. And he said, Go, and he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains. And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a custom in Israel, that the daughters of Israel went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.—Judges 11: 34-40.

This is the history as told in the book. In examining it to determine what was the fate of the girl, it is well to inquire who Jephthah was; and what sort of a man he was.

1. He was the son of a harlot.
2. He was driven from his father's house by his half-brothers.
3. He fled to the land of Tob where he became a kind of outlaw, and gathered round him a following of men like himself.
4. When sought after as a fighting man, the chief of a corps of border warriors and requested to come back to Israel and take up the combat against Ammon, he stipulated with the elders that he was to be the head over them of Gilead.
5. This the elders agreed to.
6. When the king of Ammon failed to allow what he demanded Jephthah then proceeded against them in battle.
7. Before doing this Jephthah made the vow as recorded.
8. This vow is distinctly a promise that whatever came out of his house to meet him it should be the Lord's.

9. The promise of Jephthah was, "I will offer it up for a burnt offering."

10. This promise or vow was made upon condition that the Lord would deliver the children of Ammon into his hands; that is, that he should be permitted to beat them in battle.

11. The record states that Jephthah was successful and did beat the children of Ammon, slaughtering a great many of them and capturing twenty cities.

12. The first thing to meet him was his daughter, coming with some of her companions to greet him with song, music, and dancing as a conqueror.

13. The offering to the Lord was to be a burnt offering. Could any other be substituted, and the vow be kept?

It must be remembered that the times were semi-barbarous. That men of blood, warlike men were often not learned or subject to other control than their own ambitions. Jephthah was evidently a superstitious, or over devout man, and in his zeal to overcome the children of Ammon and so gain the lead of the hosts of Gilead, he made a vow to offer to the Lord whatever thing came out of his house to meet him. There is nothing in the text as we have it to indicate that the sacrifice was to be anything but a burnt offering. The vow was rash, exceedingly rash. One that only a zealot, or a madcap warrior would be likely to make. That Jephthah was one or the other of these, may be inferred. Would such a man hesitate to carry into execution a vow, however rashly made, the execution of which was within his power? The custom of the times, the traditions likely to affect such a man, the reputation for integrity in keeping his word all point to the presumption that he would not withdraw from a vow made by him under such conditions, however rash the terms of the vow might have been.

The record further states that Jephthah's daughter submitted to the terms of the vow, asking only the privilege to "go up and down upon the mountains," with her companions "bewailing her virginity." This Jephthah granted. And for two months the young woman went "up and down the mountains, bewailing her virginity."

At the expiration of this time the daughter returned, placed herself at the disposal of her father, for the fulfillment of his vow, and he "did with her according to his vow which he had vowed."

Take the record as it reads and we can draw no other conclusion than that the vow was kept, and it was that Jephthah would offer her "as a burnt offering."

Our opinion if we had one would not change the cold letter of the record. It must stand as written, so far as we know, until different light is thrown upon it to what we now have.

The compilers of the Senior Quarterly have introduced in Sidelights the ingenious work of Doctors Clarke and Hales by which the translation of the text is doubted, suggesting that Jephthah simply devoted his daughter to the service of God in the temple; and cite verses 36 and 37 to sustain the idea. But nothing contained in the verses cited refers to the temple service in any form.

These further suggest that by the vow Jephthah condemned his daughter to continued single life, and cite verses 34 to 39 as evidence. But these verses show only what already appears, excepting the words, "And she knew no man." Verse 39.

This is an inference only. The term, "And she knew no man," can only be made to mean that she not only was not married, but that she had remained uncontaminated and died a virtuous maiden.

Dr. William Smith in his Bible Dictionary says:—

That the daughter of Jephthah was really offered up to God in sacrifice—slain by the hand of her father and then burnt—is a horrible conclusion, but one which it seems impossible to avoid.

The same writer says further:—

Joseph Kimchi supposed that, instead of being sacrificed, she was shut up in a house which her father built for the purpose, and that she was there visited by the daughters of Israel four days in each year so long as she lived.

Would this be "a burnt offering?" And how will this supposition tally with the one of Drs. Clarke and Hales that Jephthah gave his daughter to the service of the Lord in virgin celibacy instead of the "burnt offering of his vow"?

To us, horrible as it may seem, it appears better to take the record as it reads and let it go at that. It would be the act of a rash man to vow, as Jephthah did. It would be the act of a loving father to be grieved and hurt when the rashness of his vow appeared to him by his daughter, his only child, becoming in her innocent celebration of her father's victory the victim of the vow. It would be the act of a woman knowing the customs and traditions of her people concerning childless women, to mourn her unhappy fate. And it would be the act of a brave, zealous, devoted man and fearless warrior to carry his rash vow into effect. Abraham was in intent as bad as Jephthah when raising the knife to slay Isaac. And it is usually believed that Abraham would have completed the sacrifice of Isaac had there been no intervention by the command, "Stay thy hand."

No such interference occurred in Jephthah's case. And terrible as it seems to us in these days of peace and humanitarian sympathy and kindness, it is not strange taken with an understanding of the times in which it is said to have occurred, nor unlike the men of those times. And, as the hope and life in Christ are not affected by the incident, whether the life of Jephthah's daughter was taken in sacrifice by the knife and the altar fires of a mad father's vow; wasted by life-long imprisonment in a house prepared by the same father, or despoiled by condemnation to life-long deprivation of her crowning glory as a mother in Israel by virtue of the same mad vow made by the same father, we are content to abide by the record until such time as the Lord may correct it if wrong, rather than to waste time and energy in hunting for or inventing ways to evade the plain words of the record itself.

THE "RETURN."

THE Return, the paper hitherto published for the "Church of Christ" (Whitmerites) by Ebenezer Robinson, deceased, and later by Charles A. Wickes, for December, 1896, reached us during the first week of conference, the leading editorial dated Davis City, Iowa, March 27, 1897. From this issue we quote the following:—

With this number the Return will be suspended for the present. We are not able to continue it without assistance, and the trouble raised by our exceedingly charitable brother prevents the fund being used for that purpose at present.

Elders Snyder and Clark refuse to pay from the fund the expense of the last issue and this one, also the expenses of the editor to Richmond last December to arrange for an extension of time to Bro. Schweich on his note of $950 which fell due at that time.

We suppose it may be considered by some as a proof of "charity" to act as these brethren have done, but we must be excused for taking a different view.

As we were advised by our attorney who is also a banker, that we could not safely and properly attend to the matter by mail, and as the papers in the case were all in a safety vault in Kansas City, to which we only held the key, we decided to act on their advice.

To those who have paid in advance for the paper for this year we will say, that if the paper is not revived within the year their money will be refunded.

It is not likely that if the paper is revived we shall edit it, for we think it would likely be best for it to be in charge of some one not in any way connected with the trouble which has arisen; hence we here extend our sincere thanks to those who have so kindly aided us in our efforts to make the paper a success. We had hoped that from our little band, armed with truth and good will to men, might grow a work that would prove a practical temporal, as well as a spiritual blessing to men; but it has developed that many lack both good will and a comprehensive grasp of the things necessary to benefit themselves or others, hence until this defect is remedied, no further progress can be expected. With good will to all, including those who have wronged us, we bid you all farewell.

C. A. WICKES.

An editorial published in the same issue on the Sabbath question, closes with the following two paragraphs which we quote from page 13:—

We have always professed to have the courage of our convictions, and to be ready to discard an error when known, and for the present we shall return to the observance of Sunday. It will be remembered that the person who visited Bro. Leabo, of Oregon, when asked, "What day should we keep?" replied, "For the present keep Sunday."

May we all come to the full knowledge of the truth, and a unity in the Lord Christ; and until that time let there be no contention over differences of opinion, for in contention lies the evil, not in the difference.

The conclusion of the editor of the Return to keep Sunday as the rest day, we believe to be traceable to the articles on the subject published in late issues of the HERALD under the caption, "He Fixes the Sabbath." See HERALD for January 27, February 3 and 10, which the Return cites.

FRANK CRANE DEFENDS THE BIBLE.

DR. FRANK CRANE of Trinity Methodist Church yesterday at noon delivered the first of four lectures in defense of the Bible at Association Hall. The lectures are made at the request and under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., because of recent criticisms by prominent ministers in the East. Dr. Crane took for his theme, "The Bible Tested by Common Sense."

Dr. Crane said he did not believe in the inspiration of every Hebrew vowel point and Greek "de" and "kai," nor even that which stretched its authority to every word selected in King James' Version. He held that the reasons for believing the Bible to contain God's message are sufficient to convince any reverent mind seeking only the truth.

Some of the striking points in Dr. Crane's lecture were:—

"While each Bible writer teaches the same lesson the individuality of the authors is distinct.

"Common sense demands that a revelation from God shall be clear.

"There are enigmas in the Bible, but they are never about the immediate duty.

"There are clouds that cluster around the Bible's giants peaks, but they never get between the earnest soul and God.

"Its commands are explicit, its promises definite, its warnings vivid as lightning.

"The Bible treats of the loftiest ideas the mind of man can entertain.

"Common sense demands the Bible shall answer the moral demands of human nature.

"You do not have to hunt for the moral excellencies of the Bible as you would search for gems in an ash heap.

"It is not superstition or tradition, but it is the common sense of mankind, that gives the Bible its great influence. The hard sense of the common people will preserve this book.

"The Bible has taken the poor and the unlearned—the little children of the world—up into its arms and blessed them.

"We cannot think that the Father of men would communicate his will to them in such a way as to leave common sense in serious doubt as to its genuineness.

"The poison of unbelief cannot penetrate to any crevice where it cannot be found by the Holy Ghost.

"The Bible sweeps the whole gamut of human need. The dying hold it to their bosom and whisper its priceless promises as they step into the mists of eternity.

"Above the closed grave no orator can utter sentiments that sound so sweet to the ear of the widowed and bereft as the words of him who is the hero of its song and story, 'I am the resurrection and the life.'"—Chicago Tribune.

DESTRUCTIVE STORMS, ETC.

PRESS of other work has prevented us from giving a complete statement or summary of the calamitous events reported during the past few weeks. We give the following items, to some extent descriptive of the terrible character of the visitations now frequently coming upon the people. Already such events are so frequent that it is impossible to even note them all:—

"Guthrie, Okla., April 28.—At sunrise this morning a mighty wall of water, from six to eight feet high and a mile wide, broke upon West Guthrie without any warning, crushing houses, sweeping away property, and drowning people by the score. Every movable thing was swept before the wave, which passed on into the Canadian Valley with resistless force, wreaking terrible destruction to life and property wherever it reached. Dozens of human lives are known to have been sacrificed—how many may not be known for weeks. Hundreds of houses were wrecked in the twinkling of an eye. For miles farms were completely ruined. Bridges and tracks were washed out and railway traffic in every direction is at a standstill.

"Guthrie, Ok., April 29.—To-night it seems a certainty that the loss of life in yesterday's deluge will not exceed twenty. All day missing people, supposed to have been drowned, have been found clinging to bushes or driftwood down the stream, on the west bluffs or scattered in farmhouses for miles.

"For miles along the scene of devastation 1,500 people, homeless, half ill from exposure and hunger, passed a miserable night, and morning found most of them too weak to give much assistance either to themselves or others.

"Five hundred homes have been swept away, 150 houses wrecked, and twenty stores devastated, leaving 1,000 people homeless and half as many destitute.

"The damage to property will be in the neighborhood of $100,000, while that sustained in crops may equal or, perhaps, double that amount.

"Natchez, Miss., April 29.—There is a growing uneasiness now for the safety of the Largent levee in the lower part of Tensas Parish, and one of the largest and most important embankments in the district. It is reported to be in a decidedly shaky condition. Should it break it would inundate all of Concordia, and a considerable portion of Tensas Parish in a few hours.

"Keokuk, Io., April 29.—The breach in the Hunt levee is widening and deepening every hour, and it is only a question of a few days when the water will stand from five to twenty feet deep all over the district. At Gregory, Alexandria, and through the Hunt district the day has been one of deep gloom. The heavy clouds, steady downpour of rain, and cold weather greatly increased everyone's discomfort.

"Alton, Ill., April 29.—The water in the Mississippi is over twenty-three feet above low water mark to-night and has risen two feet within the last twenty-four hours. Mayor Breuggemann received a message from the weather bureau this evening asking him to warn the people in this portion of the valley that the river will advance another two feet to-night and to-morrow. The warning has been circulated as generally as possible."

A tornado struck El Reno, Oklahoma, April 28, doing much damage to property and stock.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, dated Nebraska City, Nebraska, the 26th, we learn that Bro. M. H. Forscutt was sufficiently recovered to attend and take part in the saints' meetings.

Bro. J. D. Erwin wrote from Jones Mills, Alabama, March 31. He was having grave debate with some elders from Utah, who strenuously deny the statements made by Pres. B. Young and others, as found in Journal of Discourses and other works.

Correction. An error occurred in the late "Ministry reports," published under date of April 7, 1897. The second paragraph given under the name of Bro. E. DeLong, on page 31, is part of the report of Bro. S. W. L. Scott, and should appear under Bro. Scott's name on page 30.

Bro. D. A. Hutchings, of Elmo, Missouri, thinks that preaching might be done at the point where he lives, if it was wisely directed. Brn. Gowell and Anderson might call, one or the other.

Bro. D. W. Shirk reports a branch of fourteen members at or near Bayard, Nebraska, temporarily organized by Bro. Joseph S. Lee, the Hunter. They were all at work according to circumstances, striving to establish the truth.

The following named brethren departed for their various fields of labor during the past week: Bro. A. M. Chase, Portland, Oregon; Brn. I. N. Roberts and E. A. Stedman, Minnesota. Bro. J. W. Gillen, Colorado; Bro. J. W. Peterson, Eastern Iowa; and Bro. J. S. Snively, Nauvoo district.

The progress of the Turco-Grecian war has steadily been in favor of the Turks, who, though the Greeks have gained some success in Epirus, have steadily advanced into the heart of Greece. The victorious Turks have taken Trikhala and Volo, and all Thessaly is virtually in their clutches. A Turkish army is on the way to Janina under command of Osman Pasha, the Turkish hero, and will doubtless drive the Greeks from Epirus. The Turkish army has outnumbered the Greeks and proved superior in discipline and equipment.

The Greeks have compelled King George to form a new cabinet, with M. Ralli, leader of the opposition at its head. Prince Constantine has been deposed from the command of the army, under the new regime, and reorganization of the army is expected. However, it is not supposed that the onward march of the Turkish troops can be stayed, unless the great powers intervene, which it is said they favor doing, though the Sultan will demand considerable from Greece as a basis for settlement; viz., a large cession of territory and a heavy money indemnity to pay the expenses of the war.

It is said that Turkey will grant autonomy to Crete; also that Russia will demand control of Suda Bay, if not of Crete itself. A mob threatened the palace of King George at Athens; the populace compelled the change in the cabinet. It is not unlikely that a republic may yet be proclaimed. It is believed that the powers will not permit the Sultan to be too severe in exactions from the Greeks.

'Elder J. W. Wight, of Lamoni, delivered two fine discourses at the L. D. S. chapel Sunday. Elder Wight is a man of ability, an eloquent and fluent talker, and impresses his audience with his earnestness in the cause he represents. He has been doing missionary work in Australia the past few years and is one of three recently appointed apostles of the Quorum of Twelve. We understand he will shortly go to Utah to try to reclaim some of the erring Brighamites."—Davis City (Iowa) Rustler, April 27.

Bro. J. F. Mintun writes from Mag-nolia, Iowa, that saints there were enjoying much of the Spirit as bestowed during the late conference. Others write of the diffusion of the conference spirit among the branches, in added good that has come to the church.

CHARITY.

BY E. A. RHODES.

Charity faileth never, O no!
She is humble and gentle, nor vaunteth herself;
No arrogance haughtiness cometh you know,
Where sweet dove-eyed charity lendeth her help.

Charity suffereth long and is kind,
She beareth the evil and doeth no wrong;
In love she ne'er faileth to speak out her mind
When the good of another has loosened her tongue.

Faith is the first of the fair sisters three,
And she dwells with the true saint wher-ever he be,

Hope comes the next; let our covenant be
With these sisters united by sweet charity.

TEMPERANCE.

"BUILD well." Without temperance no character can be pure and strong. Temperance, in the wide Bible sense, means control of all the appetites and passions, the persistent subjection of all "fleshly lusts which war against the soul." It is one of the fruits of the Spirit; the golden sheaf consists of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." Temperance is the band binding the precious sheaf together—it unites the virtues into a symmetrical character; without it they would all crumble into dust.

"Know ye not that your bodies are the temple of the Holy Ghost? Whosoever defileth the temple of God, him will God destroy." Because this beautiful temple of God is defiled through gluttony, through drink and tobacco, destruction is coming to thousands to-day. This is no arbitrary law, but one based in nature, and therefore immutable. The body was made for purity; the law written in its members by its Maker is violated by every impure act, by all excesses, and the penalty of this violated law is death; death from the destruction of the tissues, the disordered action of its organs—a self-inflicted death.

All poisons do not act alike; some kill instantaneously, like a stroke of lightning; others lead to death through long torturous ways of agony, as the leprosy does, and others through just as torturous ways, but their agony is dulled by stupefaction; this is the case with tobacco. Against nothing does the human system revolt more stoutly than against tobacco. This is shown by the deathly sickness which accompanies all first attempts to use it. "But papa and other men smoke and chew; it must be manly, so I'll learn," thinks the boy, and he does learn. The habit once fixed, is harder to break up than even the drink habit. And what does it do for the boy after he has formed it? If he is young it tends to stunt his growth and decrease muscular strength. Germany strictly interdicts the use of tobacco to all youth, and bases the prohibition on the fact that "tobacco lessens the future capacity of service to the State, especially in military life." If it deserves interdiction because it unfits for military duty, it surely deserves it on higher grounds.

It tends to produce cancerous affections of the mouth and throat. Senator Hill, of Georgia, a man honored and respected by the nation, died from this cause; General Grant died before his time from the effects of his cigar.

Concerning this vice, as concerning drunkenness, the first safeguard parents can throw around their children is to keep themselves pure. Next to parental purity and a right inheritance, we rank as a step in temperance character building such living and training as tends to secure to your children healthy bodies; over such, temptation has little power. See that all the conditions of health are fulfilled in your household; let cleanliness and fresh air reign there. Especially see to it that your children have plenty of wholesome, nutritious, simple food, at regular times, and are not pampered with dainties. Keep from them condiments, highly-seasoned foods, tea and coffee. Such foods unnaturally stimulate the digestive organs and thus arouse or create a craving for something stronger. Tea and coffee tend to nervousness, and disordered nerves sometimes open the gateways of temptation.

Next to physical health, cultivate self-control in your children. He that ruleth his own spirit is stronger against temptation than he that taketh a city. Alexander conquered the world, but he could not conquer himself. The boy who in childhood has every whim humored and is indulged in fits of passion, is much more likely to become a drunkard than he who early learns obedience and self-control. While fortifying your children against danger by these means, do not neglect direct instruction. Teach them the well-established facts concerning the action of alcohol and tobacco. Commence this while they are little, and continue it, varied to suit their advancing age, till they become thoroughly rooted and grounded in the truth. We emphasize commencing with the little children; they understand much more than we give them credit for, and this subject may be so presented that they will understand it and profit by it.

In teaching and training for temperance, stories and incidents have a place, but do not depend upon them for laying foundations. I think a mistake has been made just here. The staple of so-called "temperance talk" used to be stories illustrating the evils of hard drinking, often showed up in ridiculous light. The world is growing wiser now concerning this matter, and is striking down to bed-rock foundations. A few stories as illustrations may not be amiss, provided they are illustrations and not caricatures; but the investigations of Christian and philanthropic scientists like Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson and Dr. Carpenter, of England, Axel Gustafson of Sweden, Dr. Willard Parker and Dr. N. S. Davis, of America, have shown us a more excellent way. They have brought to light facts and principles concerning the physiology of alcoholics and narcotics which lay a firm foundation for temperance teaching, and have given the results of their investigations to the world in such simple, inexpensive form, that every family can both purchase and profit by them. Dr. Richardson's Temperance Lesson Book, which can be procured in its best binding for half a dollar, and in paper covers for a quarter, studied around the winter fireside would lay temperance foundations not easily shaken.

Says Dr. J. G. Holland, whose wise words as "Timothy Titcomb" have benefited thousands: "It is a cruel thing to send a boy out into the world untaught that alcohol in any form is fire, and will certainly burn him if he puts it into his stomach. It is a cruel thing to educate a boy in such a way that he has no adequate idea of the dangers that beset his path. It is a mean thing to send a boy out to take his place in society without understanding the relations of temperance to his own safety and prosperity, and to the safety and prosperity of society.

"What we want is to do away with the force of a pernicious example and a long-cherished error, by making the children thoroughly intelligent on this subject of alcohol. They should be taught the natural effect of alcohol upon the processes of animal life. (1) They should be taught that it can add nothing whatever to the vital forces or to the vital tissues, that it never enters into the elements of structure, and that, in the healthy organism, it is always a burden or disturbing force. (2) They should be taught that it invariably disturbs the operation of the brain, and that the mind can get nothing from alcohol of help that is to be relied upon. (3) They should be taught that alcohol inflames the baser passions, blunts the sensibilities, and debases the feelings. (4) They should be taught that an appetite for drink is certainly developed by those who use it, which is dangerous to life, destructive of health of body and peace of mind, and in millions of instances ruinous to fortune and to all the high interests of the soul. (5) They should be taught that the crime and pauperism of society flow as naturally from alcohol as any effect whatever naturally flows from its competent cause. (6) They should be taught that drink is the responsible cause of most of the poverty and want of the world. So long as six hundred million dollars are annually spent for drink in this country, every ounce of which was made by the destruction of bread, and not one ounce of which has ever entered into the sum of national wealth, having nothing to show for its cost but diseased stomachs, degraded homes, destroyed industry, increased pauperism, and aggravated crime, these boys should understand the facts and be able to act upon them in their first responsible conduct."

We echo this sentiment heartily, but would add "or girl" to his "a boy." The alarming increase of drunkenness and opium-eating among fashionable women shows there is work to be done on that side of the house. Even if there were no danger of girls becoming drunkards, they need the instruction to save them from the sadder, if not so hopeless, fate—that of drunkards' wives. If girls really knew the danger there is in the first glass, they would never offer it; if they at all comprehended what will be the harvest from a sowing of wild oats, they would never dare link their lives with men engaged in that kind of agriculture.

O, youths who are sowing wild oats, do you know That the terrible seed you are sowing will grow?

The physiological effects of self-indulgence are not the only ones to which you should direct the attention of your children. There are others growing out of them which should be kept in mind, as they have to do very largely with success in life. Bad habits shut the door of lucrative, honorable employment. If a boy applies for almost any position with a cigarette in his mouth, he will be refused, even though the one refusing will have a quid of tobacco in his mouth.

Another argument which appeals to boys is the economic one. "Can you afford to spend your money on either liquor or tobacco? Especially, can you afford to fix upon yourselves habits which will eat up a large part of your earnings, without leaving any good thing to show for it, and which, once formed, are so difficult to break?" Give the children such examples as these to figure out around the fire on winter evenings: How much land at ten dollars an acre could a man buy with the money he wastes on tobacco by smoking three five-cent cigars each day, from the time he is twenty-one till he is fifty? Vary it to illustrate the waste by drink. Show them that this is a low estimate, as self-indulgence grows with what it feeds upon, and exacts constantly increasing offerings at its shrine. Then ask them which they would prefer to have, tobacco and liquor, or the money they cost invested in something to make life better and happier?

Thus, here a little, and there a little, by example, by precept, by incentive, you are building temperance into the character of your children. Thus builded, it becomes as a house founded on a rock, against which the storms of appetite, the waves of temptation, dash in vain. In this building, ever remember that you are to build up yourselves and your children upon holy faith in God who is able and willing in every temptation to make a way of escape. Being rooted and grounded in this faith, go on to that most glorious sum in addition, "Add to your faith virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity."—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

BRUSH CREEK, Idaho, 1897.

Editors Herald:—My husband, two daughters, and I were baptized and my two youngest children blessed October 16, 1896, by Elder R. J. Anthony. On the Sunday following our baptism we went twenty miles to Little Blackfoot to attend meeting. Bro. Anthony preached a real good sermon and had good attendance.

I am quite deaf and had no idea that I would hear the sermon, but to my great joy I heard it distinctly, which did me more good than I can tell you.

I am very thankful that we are members of the church, and ask an interest in your prayers that we may continue faithful and endure to the end.

I pray that God will bless you all, dear saints, and if we are not all privileged to attend meeting and enjoy each other's company, we can at least be greatly benefited through reading the Herald and other church publications.

I hope Bro. Anthony or some of the elders may soon come this way, as I wish to be administered to. They will find us located eight miles north of Blackfoot City, on the main road, near Snake River. Praying that this glorious gospel may spread and prosper, I remain,
Your sister in Christ,
JANE HEATON.

TAKAROA, March 1.

Editors Herald:—On February 26 we left the island of HICKUERU bound for KAUKURA on the schooner "Teavaroa." On Saturday we stopped at a little island, TAIARO and got from there some "bufa" or dried cocoanut. A man and his wife are the only residents of that island.

From there we shaped our course for this place, and arrived last night, and as there is a pass through which vessels may enter the lake here, we are all ashore—some sixty natives and we five missionaries: Bro. and Sr. Case, Bro. Janssen, Emma, and myself. We leave again to-morrow morning, and after stopping at three other islands we will stop at KAUKURA for conference.

The saints are preparing for a grand feast there which will begin April 1 and last until conference ends. They have a very long building made in which forty-five tables will be placed in two rows. They expect to expend three hundred and fifty dollars for each table. I have seen some of the dishes; beautiful, heavy, gilt-edged platters and fine cut glass dishes—everything very nice.

They make extraordinary wages while at the shell islands. The largest I heard of was three hundred and seventy-five dollars in two days. When the restriction of the government is first removed they make easily fifty dollars a day, but after a few months it is reduced to from five to ten dollars per day, and food is very dear. These shell islands are more valuable than gold mines for the people, for every two or three years they are open for diving, the shells grow so fast. Our people built a chapel in Hikueru; cost about seventeen hundred and fifty dollars or a ton of shells. It was paid for and sixty-five dollars on hand more than enough, the day of dedication. Many of them are in debt to the traders, although they make such big wages, as they do not seem to know anything at all of restraining their desires, and buy the best of everything they can get. You may see sisters dressed in fine silks, satins, and velvets, who live in niau huts, and in some things are somewhat behind in civilization. They are very kind to the missionaries and try to make them comfortable. According to the secretary's book here there are fifteen hundred and seventy members of the church here on twenty-three islands, and generally seem to be very kindhearted and generous.

Bro. and Sr. Case speak the native language nicely and are very much respected and beloved by the brethren and sisters. We all are fairly well. In peace,

J. F. BURTON.

GALLAND'S GROVE, Iowa, April 3.

Editors Herald:—I am interested in the work, for I know it is the work of God. We as a family have received many blessings from him in time of great need, and for this I could never doubt the work.

I think that we as young people ought to be more prayerful. We ought to be thinking of what lies before us and trying to live to meet our God. Did we ever stop to think that we are in this life laying the foundation of character for eternity? The Bible says the seed we sow, that we shall also reap, and don't you think we ought to be sowing good seed and showing to the outer world that we are preparing for the life to come—that we should live pure and upright lives so that when our Savior comes to claim his own we may be among them?

We do not realize now as we will by and by that we are making a daily record as boys and girls, young men and young women, and one that is being read daily by those around us. They can see whether we are shaping and modeling our lives for the good or for the evil. By what we say, we are known as being truthful or untruthful; by what we speak as being pure or impure; by the acts we perform as being honest or dishonest, noble or mean. God is watching us continually, and when we do or say anything that is not right we know it, and so does he; so we ought to be very careful never to do or say things that we would be ashamed to have him see or hear.

Young saints, we must remember that the old are fast passing away. We know not when our time will come, and we ought to be preparing ourselves so that when we are called we will be ready and willing to go; and to do this we will have to put forth more of an effort to serve God.

Dear saints, let us press onward and upward until we reach that great prize of eternal life that our dear Savior has bought by the shedding of his precious blood. Let us do to-day what our hands find to do, with patience and with care, for the unknown tomorrow may not be ours in which to work.

I ask an interest in the prayers of all, for I am both young in years and in the work.

Your sister,

RENA BLACK.

EUREKA, Utah, March 23.

Editors Herald:—Will you kindly insert the following questions in your columns, so that the brethren may see and reply. By so doing you and they will do me a great favor.

I have been crossing swords somewhat with one of Brigham Young's followers, and I cornered him tighter than he could stand, so he gently called me a liar. But the end is not yet. I referred him to the books and to the teachings of the so-called leaders, giving him chapter and verse. He asked me where our temples were. I pointed him to where the Lord had a say so in temple building. At the same time I asked him if he believed Orson Pratt to have been a truthful man. He said he had always understood him to be a reliable man. I recited to him what Orson Pratt said in regard to the temples in Utah, in the seventeenth ward meetinghouse, Salt Lake City, December 10, 1876, and President Joseph Smith to L. O. Littlefield, page 8. He replied by saying he did not believe a word of it, or that he made such a statement. Other points also came up, and I again referred him to his leaders, and where to find such and such things. He asked me if I had the works referred to. I am sorry to say that I had to say no; but I told him that I gathered them from reliable sources, and gave him the names, that he might inquire of them for himself. He said such items had been refuted time and again, through the Deseret News, but he neither told me what volume or date, so that I could see the refutation for myself; so I doubt his word also.

Now, the questions are these, to the following brethren; namely, R. J. Anthony, Peter Anderson, and R. Etzenhouser: When you took notes as you have quoted in "Crooked Paths," and "Utah Mormonism," and the "Books in Contrast;" as also, "Mormonism, the true and the false," as written in Ensign; did you actually see and handle the following publications, from which you have frequently quoted, as given in the above articles; to wit, Historical Record; Millennial Star, vol. 15; Deseret News, July 1, 1874; The Seer, published by Orson Pratt; Times and Seasons, vol. 3; "Representative Women of Deseret," Millennial Star, vol. 21; Times and Seasons vol. 5; "Orson Pratt's Works;" Millennial Star, vol. 10; Salt Lake City Weekly Herald, of February 9, 1882; Journal of Discourses, vol. 14?

The above works are frequently quoted in "Crooked Paths" as written by Brethren Anthony and Anderson. The following quotations are taken by Bro. R. Etzenhouser; namely, Journal of Discourses, vols. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8; Millennial Star, vols. 10, 15, 16, 17; Deseret News, vol. 6; and "A discourse by Abraham H. Cannon," Salt Lake City, October, 1894, Daily News.

If the brethren will make a short reply they will greatly oblige. I would not bother them only I know not where to get the different works referred to.

Respectfully,

JAMES SHEEN.

GUILFORD, Mo., April 10.

Editors Herald:—I do not want to flatter the Herald, but must say as sure as the day comes you are here with all the news one can carry. I have been reading the Herald for twenty-five years, now going on twenty-six years, and in that many years you have taught me many good things and gospel truths, and I think I have been well paid for your visits. And I wish every saint would tell you to come.

There are now 31,814 members in the church you represent. If even one third of that number would read your news it would make over 11,000; and if that many could take the Herald and read the news it brings I think they would be well paid.

I have never heard of anyone that has ever lost any money in reading the news you bring. The two dollars you cost I think is well spent, and I would like to see the time that all members would take the Herald and see what it has to say. I know you could do better, and those who read it would feel better and be more advanced in the church.

I find many things in the Herald that I like, and sometimes it brings news I don't like. I found one article in Herald of April 14; the heading of it is, "Two Suggestions." It suggests new ideas to what the Lord has said. If the Lord wanted a different way or form I believe he is able to speak. Let not the foot say to the head, "I have no need of thee;" but the admonition is, Let everyone work in the calling whereunto they are called.

Now, if the Bishop should make a mistake, I am sure I don't have to answer for it; but there is one thing that I and many others will have to answer for, and that will be for not placing money in the Bishop's hands so that he can do. I believe we have Bishop's agents enough to the money that is had.

May the Lord bless all his saints that they may see aright, do right, think right, and live right, and the reward is sure.

Yours for truth,

ROBERT NELSON.

GORDON, Ala., April 4.

Editors Herald:—I wish to say a word to the saints through your columns, and especially to those of the Alabama district.

I come with shame, confessing my sins and unbecoming conduct before the Lord and the saints; and as I have fully resolved to live a better life and try to do some good, I ask forgiveness of all those who know me, and especially the saints, as my influence may have been felt for evil. I am sorry for having giving way to the tempter, and trust and pray and ask all the saints everywhere to pray for me, that I be faithful and do some good while passing through this vale of tears.

With hope of final redemption of Zion, I am,

Yours in hope, for truth,

A. J. VICKERY.

WESCOTT, Neb., April 20.

Editors Herald:—It is with feeling of gratitude to God that I drop you a line this morning. I am just home from a point near Arcadia, where I have been contending for the truth periodically all winter, and must say that the means resorted to by the enemies of all righteousness have been of a very low type, trickery and falsehoods being the principal weapons. We have been aggressive, hoping to raise them to a more honorable issue, but they persist in keeping in the old ruts; but notwithstanding all this, God is with us and is blessing our labors, crowning our efforts with shining sheaves.

The thinking, intelligent part of the community give us credit for teaching the truth. It is "certain lewd fellows of the baser sort" that make trouble, being full of zeal of a Congregational type. We have baptized some of the very best of the community and more are believing. We baptized one there last Sunday and three the Sunday before. These are all married people and we expect and believe they will be a great support to the work there.

I am glad to say God has been with me during the past year, manifesting his parental care for me, blessing me at times with information that he alone could give. All praise to God be given for his great condescension in answering the prayers of his dear people, giving directions for the filling of the quorums of the church, so that she may shine forth as she did when Paul said, "Now ye are the body of Christ." Thanks be to his holy name, he doeth all things well.

Through the mercy of God I can say I am in the faith, and as I look back over the work of the past year I feel a thrill of satisfaction, realizing that the work has moved forward with tremendous strides. I have on the gospel armor for life, and though John Eaton may write and other heathen may rage, and Utah send on her ten thousand, I expect to be found standing under the banner of King Immanuel; nor do I expect to ever see or hear of that banner being hauled down to any of these forces, for I feel assured the great hastening time has come and the great march of the people of God is onward; no time now for halting or surrender. God is in the work and if we humbly and persistently strive to stand in our station victory is ours.

The saints here are doing well as a rule and are very earnest and hopeful.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

C. W. PRETTYMAN.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., April 21.

Editors Herald:—This afternoon I write to you, because twenty-five years ago this afternoon I went and was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. That day has always been kept and remembered by me as a holy and sacred day, as I then believed I was making the most sacred vow of my life, in that I should henceforth belong to God alone and walk in newness of life while my life should last upon this earth. And upon that day God baptized me with fire and the Holy Spirit, that I can feel its influence burn within me now when I think of its effects upon me that same hour I was baptized, here in this city, April 21, 1872.

I rejoice that my life has been spared to see this twenty-fifth anniversary, which brought such joy and innocence to my soul, that I was hardly able to contain myself from singing aloud before the others who were along to witness the baptism of my departed husband, Neils Neilsen, and myself. Truly God had heard my prayers and brought me into his sacred fold and kingdom, and that I had not been deceived by joining this church.

I was young and ignorant of the things pertaining to spiritual gifts, consequently had no knowledge of the Spirit of God or its working, as I had never felt such a power working upon me as I did after being baptized into this church; therefore it gave me a witness for life that this was God's power alone bestowed upon me, and that I could comprehend it and was not afraid or beside myself, but innocent as a child in that moment. And I have never regretted I made that covenant to serve God the residue of my life, and I have kept true to that vow up to this day, and I have been blessed and upheld by God according as I have conducted myself; and I have never made another vow to draw me away from the church for to bow to the shrine of the world for those things that glitter or shall be so beneficial to human beings in cases of sickness or poverty. I have had full belief in the gospel, that God would provide for me both temporally and spiritually, according to my need here, and so far I have received from God's hand all there was needed of both, so I never have had any need of joining in with the world for temporal help; and if I have had any money to pay out, this church has been the first to get a share of it, and none else, for the purpose I should get temporal remunerations in return when some relations might die from me. I have believed in the gospel as it teaches that God will provide for all our needs here, and eternal life hereafter, when I comply strictly to his law.

I felt glad to be at our late General Conference in Lamoni, Iowa, to see such a concourse of saints as there were from all parts of this country and hear them sing, pray, testify, and preach of the power of the gospel of Christ the Son of God. Many I had not seen or heard for several years, and all true to the gospel, which made me glad. I for the first time saw and heard Sr. Salisbury, the sister of the martyr, bear her testimony to this latter-day work; and I talked with her. She is a tall lady, aged about eighty-four years, and possesses all the faculties of mind and shows that the hand of God has been over her to preserve her, as she is not weak and helpless looking, but could help herself, and looked as if she could yet live many years.

I also witnessed the ordination of the martyr's son, Apostle Alexander H. Smith, to the office of the first Patriarch in this church; also the ordination of three of the elders to be apostles, others to be seventies. I had never seen any ordained to apostles before. The Spirit of God was present and that vast congregation arose as one to their feet to sanction the revelation there had been received from God by the Prophet, and which was read by the Secretary. It was a grand conference all through, and it was said the largest this church has ever held.

The saints were kind and loving one towards another while there, and I felt glad and proud to see the great numbers there had joined during these past twenty-five years of my life in this church, and that I with the saints there could also bear my testimonies of the truthfulness of this glorious latter-day work, as it was nearly fifteen years ago when I first bore testimony at the General Conference, held in Lamoni, in 1882—never been there since till this conference. I felt glad to see we have as noble and intelligent a ministry as any can show up or present, as a church, and I pray the Lord will bless his work till the end of time.

Editors Herald:—It is some time now since I wrote to our beloved Herald, but to-night I feel drawn to my beloved brothers and sisters more than usual. I want to tell you of a dream I had about a week ago, and which has been present in my thoughts very often. Please give the interpretation if possible.

I thought I was in a church where I had never been before, and I stood up with the congregation to sing what is called the Te Deum, a psalm beginning with "We praise thee, O God, we acknowledge thee to be the Lord," etc.; but instead of singing that, all the people began to sing, "God save the Queen." I lifted up my head in astonishment and saw where the communion table usually stands a throne chair with Queen Victoria sitting thereon. Beside her on the wall was a bracket with a large bust of the Queen, on the other side a very large picture, also of the Queen. I thought in my dream, "Well, this is strange; I came here to worship God, but instead they are worshipping a creature unto themselves!"

While I pondered some one touched me on the shoulder and said, "You are one of those who have to get the dinner ready." I followed the guide but did not see him. We passed the end of a number of dirty narrow streets, each of which had a bridge spanning it in a slanting direction. We came to one and the guide said, "Down here." We passed along this street, dirty like the rest, and on the left hand I saw shops. The first was full of old iron; the second contained broken clocks, old shoes, and clogs, and other useless rubbish; the next had old clothing of all kinds in all stages of dilapidation; not one thing did I see which I could have worn. Here occurs a gap in which I knew nothing. I then found myself coming back along this same street, carrying a large dish containing the dinner; still the mysterious presence was with me, though I saw him not.

We met a man who told us it was no use, as the dinner was not wanted. I asked the reason, and he said, "She has gone." I said to the man, "How is that? she should have bestowed honor on the mayor by knighthood." He said, "No, she has done nothing but grumble." I asked, "What for?" He said: "She has lost the center jewel out of her pendant and is greatly troubled!" I said, "Did she not seek it?" He said, "No, she did nothing but grumble." I then said, "Well, I think it is better to look diligently till it is found, and not waste time in complaints." The guide said, "Yes." I awoke and immediately I thought, "Why, the Queen corresponds with the church; all the people were praising the church instead of her Master and King, the jewel was the manifestations in large measure of the gifts and blessings of the gospel, and if we have them not we should search diligently in prayer and fasting until the favor of our almighty Friend be restored to us.

Our conference is near at hand. O, may God in his infinite goodness stoop down to his weak, wayward children and take us in his arms of love and mercy, comfort us, and send on our way rejoicing. May he put far from us pride, vain glory, and hypocrisy, and cleanse the hearts of all his people in order that he may speak peace to our souls. May God grant this prayer, which has risen in my heart many times that God will send upon our bishops, priests, teachers, and deacons the healthful Spirit of his grace; and that they may truly please him, to pour on them the continual dew of his blessing, that they remembering whose servants they are may walk before him in holiness and lowliness of life to the honor and praise of his holy name through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

CRESCENT Iowa.—

Editors Herald:—In contemplation of the various ways we may individually forward the work of the gospel, under our various circumstances that may be our lot, I resolved that it would be a noble effort for me to heed the law of tithing. While I am but young in the work, and young in years, I believe that to commence while young to observe the laws of God is far better than in after years. We cannot take upon us to do good too young. "It is written, 'Remember thy Creator in thy youth' and also: 'Obedience is better than sacrifice' and to hearken to the law of the Lord, than the fat of rams, and it is written, 'Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.'" I understand that the forwarding of the work of the Lord cannot be accomplished but by temporal means. Shall we that are engaged in temporal work neglect our duty, and let the few poor servants that have sacrificed the comforts of this life go ahead and do it all? When the day shall come when our Master shall inquire into our stewardship, can we justly demand the same reward that these few ministers have arduously earned? Beloved Saints, life is but short; "penniless we came into the world and penniless we leave the world." What we possess and what we will possess God gives us. Should we not appreciate his kindness by returning our just dues? This world belongs to God; we are simply renting our portion of it. If the tenth part of what we accumulate on our portion is our rent, are we paying it? If not will we not have to answer for it? God is just. While men may exact rent whether we accumulate anything on their property or not, God does not demand of us when we have nothing, but I do believe that of what we have as our property, providing we have not paid tithing previously, the tenth part is justly the Lord's, and afterwards the tenth of our surplus.

To make our duty in this respect more plain, let me call your attention to the fact (and pardon me for it) that while some of us frail mortals have more than others, who gave it to us? If God does not give us health, and strength, and faculty of mind, how many of us are able to get it? And while some of us are not thus blessed is it our fault? God metes out to the children of men according to his abundant wisdom, as is for their welfare here below. And are there any of us that dare to point the finger at a brother or sister because they are poor, when they cannot help it (drones not included)? In the Book of Mormon King Benjamin informs the people thus: "Behold, are we not all beggars?"

Let us have brotherly kindness; let those that have not so much pay of their small means, and those that have more, of their abundance. If we all do our part according to what God has blessed us with, God will reward us, and his work will prosper. And as a suggestion to the young saints, which I feel confident is approved of the Lord, in whatever vocation you undertake to make a living honestly, let your eye be single to this one thing, Of my earnings, I will observe the law of tithing, to forward the work of the Lord throughout the earth. I believe our efforts will be crowned with great success; we have his promises for it. Let us commence and trust him.

Your brother,
A. E. MADISON.

REPENTANCE AND OBEDIENCE.

MAN was placed in this world to do good; our mission in life is to bring this mortal man, this "outer man," in subjection to the laws of life, the laws of life and the laws of the gospel being the same. When "law" is mentioned, whatever others may refer to, I have reference to that law which was formed and fixed in the council of heaven before the worlds were created, to which man must be obedient in order to obtain happiness in this life and salvation in the next. People are generally annoyed by criticism, they don't like to be criticised. Man's nature is such that he regrets to be found in the wrong. He not only regrets to be found in the wrong, but he so often refuses to yield when he discovers he is in the wrong. This very principle is what the Lord told Joseph Smith to "preach to this generation."

The world had wandered so far from God that it was necessary for him to send his only Son into the world, endowed with the powers of heaven, clothed with humility and meekness, walking in perfect obedience and in the most trying ordeal of life, bow in submission to his Father and say, "Thy will be done." He came not to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him. As he was the great teacher he taught the principle of repentance so perfectly that he refrained, "turned away from," sin during his life.

He also taught obedience to the extent that he stood like the Rock of Gibraltar against all inducement to disobey.

When the opportunity came for him to be tried, he stood so firm, the mighty magnet of temptation so strong, that it drew from him "great drops of blood." But yet he never yielded. He was our example. After Jesus, the Christ, had finished his ministry, he could look back and say, "I do always those things that please my Father." Had he not had the disposition to repent, he would no doubt have changed the statement. If he had not been clothed with humility, meekness, and obedience his effect upon the world would not have been proper. "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

Paul says, "I have begotten you by the word of truth."

How can we in this age of the world expect men and women to be begotten sons and daughters of God in any other way? And how can we be in possession of the truth unless we are willing to repent of our mistakes and bow in submission to God—clothe ourselves in humility and meekness? I do not pretend to say that I have reached that standard. It would seem very inconsistent in a critic to expect one to refrain from teaching until they had accomplished all there is revealed in the law of perfection. But I do say this: According to my belief and knowledge of this latter-day work, that the time has come when the servants of God, from the leading ones in charge down to the most humble ones in the rank of the ministry, should clothe themselves with humility and meekness; living in perfect obedience to the mind and will of God and learn as our Master did to say, "Father, thy will be done, not mine."

According to my way of thinking we will reach that point when we find ourselves willing to "become a fool," that we may be taught of God, and not be contending for our own way in the matter. "Be ye reconciled to God" is a glorious thought!

My heart has been pained to see and hear of the discord among the servants of God. God will bear me witness that I have wept and prayed till my eyes have sent forth streams of tears, because of the inharmony which I have seen among the brethren. I consider the manner in which I handle this ministry of everlasting importance, not only to myself, but to humanity in general.

As my Father hath sent me so send I you. I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance.

I cannot call sinners to repentance unless I am willing myself to repent when I am in the wrong.

It is very noticeable most every day to hear people speak of the way other people live. While on the way from preaching we hear people say, "O, didn't it make Brother — squirm!" "Wasn't it a scorcher on Sister C—!" "Didn't he make it plain, looks like anyone could see that?" Others will say, "I wish I could do more to carry on this work. Yes, I'd be willing to make any sacrifice in the world, just to see this beloved cause prosper. O, I do love this work; yes, I do." At the same time they have their bodies stinking with tobacco and if you notice the Bishop's agent's book their names are not there.

At other times you may hear them quarreling with their neighbors, and their own families and brethren. And if some of their manners of life are referred to, they look injured and say, "O you stop; you're finding fault with me and you ought to know that is not the Spirit of Christ." It is Satan's purpose to intimidate the servants of God by just such squeaking songs as that. The evil one don't like to be discovered in his trickery.

When a man is in the right, and he has the evidence of it, he has no fear of investigation. When a man has the truth and he meets with opposition, he has no disposition to puff himself up and get angry. He is in the wrong who does that. And the remedy is the golden principle of repentance, and except ye repent ye shall perish.

We may hide our thoughts from men and our acts be unknown to mortals but "He who searcheth the heart" and the very motive of the mind will gave us our just reward.

Man cannot reach that condition of humility and meekness without the gospel ladder. In that ladder is the round of "inspiration" which alone can enable us to discover what is truth and what is not. No matter if we be in possession of the best brain that was ever inclosed in human skull, if we lack inspiration we will fail.

That inspiration comes only to those who have obeyed the gospel of Christ and then been devoted to God, and prayed the prayer—lived the prayer, and acted it in the affairs of life.

Father, thy will be done.

When you think that sermon, whenever it was delivered or whoever preached it, was not intended for you, but for your neighbor, you are in need of some one to lead you; for blind people need guides. You need to repent. I cannot, since having a knowledge of this latter-day work, afford to lose "so great a salvation," just to cherish my own mind. I realize perhaps as well as others, the great trial it is to surrender a point after it has once been established in the mind. But it is evident that some one is mistaken. And each one in turn says, "It is not me." Well, it is some of us just as sure as gospel.

I speak for myself; I am willing to "become a fool" that I may find out. Repentance of heart and soul seasoned with meekness and humility will be a good indication that we are willing to be united and work in peace and love with one another, so that God's Spirit may do its work within us and the victory gained for the latter-day work.

As teachers of men—as "saviors of men"—for one, I hope to labor ac-ceptably unto God, so that my ministry may meet with his approbation. For the world has a great attraction for people; pride and popularity seem to be in the way of many. The angel's message calls on men to repent and turn from evil. And according to the case so must the remedy be. In this late age when the kingdom has been established for the last time (Daniel 2: 44), and the promise of God is that it shall roll forth and fill the whole earth and "consume these other kingdoms," we can look for people to come to us; knock at the door of the church in this the "hastening time," asking for admission as did the people who came to John the Baptist. (Matthew 3.)

When this church becomes more established in different parts of the world and gains prestige with the people, men will come forward to join us who will not need to make any sacrifice so far as popularity is concerned, and who will join us for the same reason and motives that many join other churches, simply to "join a church."

And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

All men are not fit to join the church simply because they will not repent before coming in nor after they get in. And to be on safe ground it seems quite plain to me that it would be well to be on the watch for just such people.

Now I do not think to be premature in my judgment, but I do think it well to preach repentance before baptism and if a man will not repent, tell him it is in violation to the gospel of Christ to baptize him unless he does repent.

I have known persons to be baptized who were tinctured with Spiritualism, and where it took two elders to baptize them and the sequel proved that they should not have been baptized, not then at least.

The elder should have the spirit of his office with him, so he can understand his business; and the church will prosper notwithstanding his list of baptisms may not be so great. I write this because I know the time is short, when the church is to be robed in righteousness, so she may be accepted by the Son of God. I have the testimony that the God of heaven is ruling this work; and as one of his servants laboring in the name of his Son I hope to be up and doing what is for me to do and do it in humility.

Notwithstanding some may have made many efforts to break away from the evils of life and have fallen back into the ways of discouragement and doubt, there is sweet relief found in repentance and obedience to God, for he has promised to bless us if we only try. Though effort after effort has failed yet there is consolation in the gospel anchor; for,

Hope is a shining jewel,
Given to us by God,
To cheer us on our pathway,
While through this life we trod.

After we have reached the summit then we will be able to glance back and see the valleys and swamps, rocks and hills, the canyons and gulches that have marked our pathway and wonder why we did not select a smoother road; but while we are now in the valleys and "bad lands" of our journey, let us give attention to our friendly guide who says,

Oh weary soul arise and see,
Shake off thy fears and come with me;
I'll guide thee to that peaceful rest
Where you'll ever be a welcome guest.

The way that leads to that abode
Is not the world—the broader road;
The path is clear though very straight,
You cannot enter but by the gate.

The gate is guided day and night
By angels from the throne of light,
And if in there you would be found,
You must first provide a golden crown.

Arise, and I will help you mould
That crown from gems of shining gold,
Then when the race of his is run,
You'll find the victory you have won.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
R. M. MALONEY.

AUTHORITY AND ITS LIMIT.

WE frequently converse with people who are apparently unable to comprehend this subject, as applied to the latter-day work.

"Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ," says the minister of our faith when about to immerse the candidate; and some who witness the ceremony do not give this portion of it a second thought, simply because they do not realize its import or its reality, which to us is so full of meaning and binding power.

Webster says "to commission" is to "empower or authorize," to "send out with a charge." So if it can be shown that those who taught the gospel anciently were sent before so doing, and those who were not sent were not recognized in that capacity, our position will be recognized as the only one which can be occupied as being in conformity with the practice of the church of former-day saints.

As proof that Jesus sent his disciples, we find recorded in Mark 3: 14, the ordination of twelve by Jesus, that he might "send them forth to preach," also in Matthew 28: 19, Jesus sends his disciples to teach and baptize. And this particular passage is referred to by some of the popular ministers of our day, as also another one in Mark 16: 15, as being their commission. Why do they not quote from Luke 9: 1, 2, instead of the former, seeing Jesus was speaking to the same personages upon both occasions; simply because in this place, they were commissioned to do more than man is capable of performing; neither would they care to take nothing for their journey. It is singular that none of the disciples, anciently, took this method of being called; it certainly was easier. We find, however, there were seventy others who did not attempt to construe this commission as referring to them, but however much they may have desired to be sent, they waited until the wisdom of the divine Master directed. (Luke 10: 1.)

Whenever a person took this honor unto themselves, their work was ineffectual, as seen in the example of Apollos, who was a fervent man and taught diligently the things of the Lord. However, when Paul, a commissioned minister of Christ, came among them, he found it necessary to baptize them in the name of Jesus; and our dictionary informs us, "in the name of" means, "by the authority of." Apollos had to be instructed more thoroughly the way of God, after which, the disciples received him. (Acts, chapters 18, 19.)

Again, it is not always those who desire to be called, that succeed, as we find evidenced in Matthew 8: 19—a certain scribe wished to follow the Lord, but was given plainly to understand that he was not wanted; and yet, when a certain disciple asked for even a temporary release, it was refused him. To officiate in a divine office requires a divine calling, hence Paul says, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron," (Heb. 5: 4,) and we find an instance recorded in Acts 19: 14 of seven sons of chief of the priests, who attempted to take this honor unto themselves, and used the name of Jesus without authority, attempting to cast out an evil spirit, but were compelled to flee naked and wounded.

In order to have ratified in heaven that which is done on earth, we can see the necessity of direct commission from Christ, who has declared that he will build his church, which statement leaves man to act only as directed by him, and this makes plain the promise to Peter by Christ, that "whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven;" because his acts would be by divine authority, and it cannot be said this referred simply to Peter, as we find this promise repeated to all the disciples upon another occasion. (Matt. 18: 18.)

Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, we are enabled to act for him in the building of his church, and the acts thus done under his direction will be "bound in heaven." "How can they preach except they be sent," says Paul, for "He whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God," and if man shall live by "every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God," we see the need of some one called of God to deliver the words that may emanate from him, unless he has ceased to reveal himself to man, in which case he has ceased to act, for the prophet Amos 3: 7 says:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.

Therefore, if God works, it must be according to the faith of men, that he may reveal it through prophets. From this consideration, we know of no reason why it should be considered a marvelous thing that God has spoken again in these days; and if the revelations to us foretell certain events to be brought about by God, is it not in harmony with his method of dealing with his people in the past?

"Enter ye in at the straight gate," must apply to the present as much as the past, if God is unchangeable; and how "straight" and "narrow" indeed is the way that leads to life; and how "few" indeed there are that are willing to enter in by being "born of water, and of the Spirit." Baptized by one called of God that it may be "bound in heaven." But if we did not teach this, it would be because we were not sent of God, for Isaiah 8: 20, says:—

If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.

If we examine we shall find that although Jesus gave his disciples much power, he did not upon any occasion give them authority, save it was to do and to teach whatsoever he had commanded them; and John says, if anyone brings not "this doctrine," "receive him not." Paul more emphatically states, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel," "let him be accursed," knowing that even he with all his power and authority, would bring upon himself the anathema of God, should he deviate from that which Jesus taught. Even Jesus, the scriptures inform us, took not the authority of himself, but was called of God. Yet some dare attempt to officiate for God, who do not claim to have been commissioned of him, and who would look with indignation upon anyone attempting a like fraud upon the civil government of our land.

The miracles performed in the times of the apostles, we find were not performed by the will of man, but Paul says, God bore them witness "with divers miracles," according to "his own will." (Heb. 24.)

Previous to the diffusion of light into the world in the meridian of time, the record informs us, "There was a man sent of God," and ringing in beautiful harmony with that statement in these last days, the world has again been startled with that sublime declaration. Both were sent to reveal God's will, and work pursuant with law; and both, while performing that mission, were recognized of God. Does anyone question the result if they had refused to work by their commission?

We might multiply infallible proofs that man must not only be called, but even then can legitimately act only in harmony with law. But, having the law, and believing it sufficiently plain to every honest soul, let us go on unto perfection, keeping in mind the statement:—

That which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. (D. C. 85:8.)

"DUTY TO THE POOR AND DESTITUTE."

AN article in a late Herald on the above subject has awakened thoughts in my mind, and in harmony with the views of the writer, and as a continuation of those thoughts, I wish to express my ideas if I may be enabled to make myself understood. When we view the works of nature, throughout the earth we can readily see that the wise Creator did not allow a necessity without creating a means for supplying the demands of that necessity, for instance; for thirst, there is water; for hunger, food in abundance and in great variety; for cold, material for clothing and materials for making suitable shelter, and also the means whereby these materials and foods may be continually produced from one year to another, whereby our needs may be continually supplied.

Then if God has so abundantly provided the earth with all things for the comforts of its creatures, why is it that some have such an abundance of the things of this life and others are so poor and destitute? I will tell you the cause: it is the selfishness of man with his fellow man. In Paul's letter to Timothy, we read these words:—

This know, also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.

Why, Brother Paul, should perilous times come in the last days any more than in any other period of time?

For [because] men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, . . . lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God.

Now take into consideration the words of Jesus in that great and grand sermon where he seemingly summarizes the whole matter by the word "therefore" in that oft-repeated and I think but little understood golden rule, Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

When the millionaire looks upon the suffering thousands whom his wealth might relieve by giving them employment, and he greedily holds his gold to obtain still greater gain, what will be his reward, in the final judgment day, when Jesus has said the words he spake should judge us in the last day? And not only the millionaire, but the men of thousands down to those who have only their hundreds?

Freely ye have received, freely give.

The Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.

COPY OF A LETTER.

NEWPORT, N. S., June 26.

DEAR FRIEND:—You asked me once why we deemed it necessary to accept the Book of Mormon as a part of the "fullness of the gospel" or the restored Christian faith. I do not know whether I made it clear in the brief reply that I made you, or not. This morning I feel like stating a few of our reasons for it, for your consideration.

First, because the book itself bears unmistakable evidences, in fact has proved itself to be, an inspired history of a part of God's people, in which is contained the words of God to man, especially to the former inhabitants of this continent; nevertheless largely applicable to mankind in any age of the world and in any condition of life. It is precisely like the Old Testament in that it was written primarily and essentially in the interests of the Hebrew people of Asia. Notwithstanding, those books which record the dealings of God with that ancient people in which is made a revelation of himself and his precepts to man, are profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction in righteousness, that the man of God in any age of the world may be thoroughly furnished to every good work. Thus no book coming to us bearing evidences of divine inspiration can be rejected with impunity, no matter to whom it was originally written.

The proof of the divinity of the Book of Mormon consists in the character and effects of its teaching, its fulfillment of prophecy, and its harmony with archæological research. It matters not as to the number of books that we accept, nor as to the time of their presentation to us; as the mandatory words of the angel of Revelation 22: 18 refer not to God continuing to reveal himself to man, but rather to man altering, that is, adding to or taking from, that revelation when it is presented.

God has set no bounds as to the number of books that should be written by his dictation and offered to man for his profit; but to the contrary has taught most distinctly that man should expect line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, and also that man should live, grow, and develop by every word that proceedeth (continues to proceed) from the mouth of God. It may be true that one could by the study of the delicate, perfect beauty of a flower, or the wonderful mechanism displayed in the construction of the human anatomy, be led to believe in God; but only as a creator. One might read the book of Matthew and become a believer in Christ; but as the growing, developing child calls for more than the once sufficient nourishment from the maternal breast, so the growing, expanding soul makes a demand that can only be supplied upon the principle of line upon line, etc. Only by feeding upon green pastures that may spring up in any part of God's footstool, and drinking of the water of life whose streams are being directed in numerous channels to make glad the dry and thirsty regions, can one be thoroughly furnished to every good work. The simple message that Christ can save is gospel so far as it goes; but the fullness of the gospel and true Christianity is more, yea, easily more than that. Who, how, when, and where are all necessary information to the reclaiming of the race.

Second. It is a part of true Christianity to believe the prophetic declarations contained in the Old Testament Scriptures, since Christ himself indorsed them and enjoined the same upon his followers. Isaiah predicts that a book shall come forth (Isaiah 29); true believers should expect one. He also predicts that it would come forth in a peculiar way; true believers ought not to expect it to come in any ordinary way, but a "marvelous work and a wonder." He further prophesied that in the reading of the book the eyes of the blind should see out of obscurity; also they that erred in spirit should come to understanding; and they that murmur should learn doctrine. The true believer will expect the reader of that book to have their minds wonderfully enlightened upon doctrinal matters which in itself is essential to salvation. See 1 Tim. 4:16. Isaiah furthermore prophesied as to the time when this book should come forth; viz., "a very little while" prior to the restoration of the Holy Land to its former fertility, which event began to take place upon the return of the regular rains in the year 1853. The true believer will not look for that prophesy to be fulfilled in the future, after that date.

Hence our position. We cannot be true followers of Christ without being in line with him. We cannot be in line with him without accepting "the prophets." We cannot accept the prophets without accepting their predictions. The Book of Mormon fills the predictions of the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah as nothing else possibly can at this date. Therefore we cannot be true believers in the fullness of God's works since we know this without accepting and incorporating it into our system of faith.

Third. We find all the way through the Old Testament and also in the New, especially in the eleventh chapter of Romans, the doctrine of the gathering of the Hebrew family into the gospel covenant distinctly taught, and the instrumentality to be used for their conversion is the Gentiles. Nearly nineteen hundred years have elapsed since the rejection of the Jews took place, and with the exception of an occasional individual case, the work of converting that race has been a failure with the means at our disposal; that is, the parts that have come down to us of the Old Testament scriptures together with the New. The reason for this is, The New they totally reject, the Old they, in their blindness, have so "spiritualized" that the plain and vital teachings which it contains are buried deep in mystical obscurity, and the light of life which it holds is shrouded in darkness which indeed can be felt.

This darkness was only to remain, however, until "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Romans 11: 25). The very language itself indicates that the Gentiles should at a certain time accept more than they had hitherto received; or, in other words, they should allow something of importance to "come in" which would constitute or complete their fulness. Now this fulness of the Gentiles could not possibly have reference to their reception of truth at the hands of the apostles in the early years of the Christian era, as that was the day of the Jews' rejection and not of their acceptance. And, besides, we learn that Jacob shall be roused to the truths of redemption by this "marvelous work" of the latter days in connection with the reading of the "sealed book" of the 29th chapter of Isaiah.

Now since it is the intention of Jehovah of Israel to redeem him through the "fulness" that should first come to the Gentiles, you can readily see how indispensably necessary it is that the Gentiles should permit or admit of their "fulness." So that with a threefold cord they may be able to draw the wandering Jew to his father's house. These are some of the reasons why the Book of Mormon becomes a part of our faith.

I might enlarge but perhaps the foregoing is sufficient for the present.

Yours truly,

HOLMES J. DAVISON.

THE ISRAELITES IN EGYPT. SKEPTICISM AGAIN CONFUTED THROUGH RECENT DIS- COVERY.

LAST winter, Professor Flinders Petrie, that most successful of excavators, made a discovery the importance of which, to biblical students, can hardly be overestimated. On the western bank of the Nile, at Thebes, he disinterred the ruined temple of Meneptah, the son and successor of the great Egyptian Pharaoh, Ramses II. Ramses II reigned for sixty-seven years over the valley of the Nile,—according to Dr. Mahler, from 1348 to 1281 B. C. Canaan and Ethiopia obeyed his rule, and he covered Egypt from one end to the other with his buildings. Among the cities he founded, as the excavations of Dr. Naville have shown, was Pa-Tum, the Pithom of Exodus, and Egyptologists have agreed to see in him the Pharaoh of the oppression.

The temple disinterred by Professor

Petrie lies a little to the south of the "Ramsesum," or temple of Ramses IV. It has long been supposed that it was erected by Amenophis III, of the eighteenth dynasty. But Professor Petrie's labors have shown that this supposition is a mistake, due to the fact that Menepthah dismantled the temple of Amenophis III, and used the stones he brought from it in building his own sanctuary. Among these stones was a large slab or stela of granite more than ten feet in length, upon which Amenophis had given a history of his architectural labors. Menepthah built the stela into the wall of his temple, with its inscribed side turned inwards, and upon the uninscribed side of it he engraved a new inscription of his own.

This consisted of a hymn of triumph composed by some court poet, and celebrating the overthrow of the Libyans, who had invaded and overrun Egypt in the fifth year of the king's reign. At the end of it the poet rapidly sums up the other successes of the Pharaoh. It is in these lines that the Israelites are mentioned, and it is the first time that their name has been found upon an Egyptian monument. The name is written I-s-(y)-r-a-e-l-u, and is followed by the determinatives of "man" and "woman," showing that they were a tribe, and not a settled people.

The first copy of the text was made by Professor Petrie and Dr. Spiegelberg under unfavorable conditions. It is not, therefore, always right, and the translation of it published by Professor Petrie in the Contemporary Review will, accordingly, have to be corrected in several points. The stela, however, has now arrived at the Gizeh Museum, where it can be studied at leisure, and excellent photographs of the inscriptions upon it have been taken by Brugsch-Bey. Hence it is now possible to tell what it really does say about the children of Israel.

The passage in which the reference to them occurs reads as follows: "Vanquished [?] is the land of the Libyans, the land of the Hittites is tranquilized; captured is the land of Pa-Kana'na [Canaan] with all violence [?]; carried away is the land of Ashkelon; overpowered is the land of Gezer; the land of Innuâm [in the north of Palestine] is brought to nothing; the Israelites are minished [?] so that they have no seed; the land of Khar is become like the widows of Egypt; all the world is at peace." The land of Khar was Southern Palestine, and the name is identified by Professor Maspero with that of the Horites of Scripture.

The word rendered "minished [?]" is fekt, which has not been found elsewhere. But the determinative of "smallness," "badness," is attached to it, so that it seems to signify "minished," or something similar. And Dr. Spiegelberg remarks upon the word translated "seed" that it is used in the sense of "offspring."

Now there are two facts which strike us in reading the text. The first is that the name of the Israelites alone is without the determinative of "land" or "city." Either, therefore, the Israelites were a wandering tribe, moving from district to district, and consequently without any fixed habitation, or else they were settled in the land of Egypt itself. There is no other alternative.

The second fact is the striking parallelism between the language used of them by the Egyptian poet, and what we read in Exodus 1:10-22. Here, too, we are told that the Pharaoh ordered his people to "deal wisely" with the children of Israel "lest they multiply," that the midwives were commanded to kill all the male children, and that when this order was evaded the king "charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river." The parallelism between the two narratives could scarcely be closer.

So far as we can see at present, therefore, there appears to be a direct allusion in the words of the Egyptian poet to the events which took place just before the exodus. In the usual spirit of Egyptian flattery, the efforts made by the Pharaoh to exterminate the Israelites are enumerated among the successes of his reign. Whether or not the exodus had already occurred we cannot tell. Over that event the court poet would naturally draw a discreet veil of silence. Like Sennacherib, who, in his account of his campaign against Hezekiah, makes no allusion to the disaster which drove him out of Judea, and describes only his defeat of the Egyptians, the presents he had received from the Jewish king, and the spoil he had obtained in Judah; so too the stela of Menepthah speaks only of the measures that had been taken to destroy the "seed" of Israel. But, in the light of the Book of Exodus it seems more probable to suppose that the "Israelites" were still in Egypt when the inscription was engraved.

At any rate, the theory which saw in Menepthah the Pharaoh of the exodus has received a confirmation. The theory was supported by the witness of Manetho, the Egyptian historian, who has left us the Egyptian legend of the expulsion of the Israelites out of Egypt. The Egyptian legend ascribed the event to Menepthah's reign, though the story is largely mixed with fable. Moreover, the rash dogmatizing of "criticism" so called has received another check. It has been said that the name of "Israelite" was unknown in the age to which the exodus is assigned, and that the Israelites themselves were never in Egypt. But once more the monuments have risen up to confute the skepticism of the nineteenth century.

HIGH COUNCIL.

Held four meetings at the residence of Alex. H. Smith.

The peace and unity of God's Spirit made the sessions a blessing to the council in the transaction of the business. Present Joseph Smith, President, and Bro. Alex. H. Smith Acting Counselor to the President, Charles Derry, David Dancer, James C. Crabb, Calvin A. Beebe, James H. Peters, John Chisnall, William Anderson, John A. Robinson, Asa S. Cochran, Robert M. Elvin, and Frederick G. Pitt, also High Priest Charles E. Butterworth to fill the place of Bro. David Chambers deceased.

After drawing numbers, patient attention was given to a case, the papers were found to be all ex parte and the case was left awaiting further evidence. The Secretary authorized to write the parties.

Southwest Missouri district, through C. M. Bootman, president, Henry Sparling, secretary pro tem., asked for action in relation to Elder S. T. Maloch and others uniting with the "Church of Christ" and returning.

The answer and action of the High Council: When persons are expelled from the church for cause and desire to return, they are required to receive baptism. See acts of the General Conference: Herald, vol. 26, p. 139, also Herald, vol. 31, p. 299, Minutes of General Conference for 1892, p. 69. As no official action was had in the case of Elder S. T. Maloch, therefore these rules cited do not apply to him.

Counselors Asa S. Cochran and Charles Derry were appointed to draft resolution on the death of Bro. David Chambers. They prepared the following:—

"Whereas, it has pleased God in his good providence to remove from our midst our worthy brother and colaborer, David Chambers; and

"Whereas, in him we recognized a good and efficient member of the High Council, as also, an efficient, faithful worker in every department of the church wherein he was called to act, be it

"Resolved, that we as President and members of the Standing High Council of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints take this means of expressing, so far as our meager language can, our deep regret at the loss from our number of this our departed brother; but while we mourn our loss, we rejoice in the blessed assurance afforded in the gospel that our heavenly Father doeth all things well, and that our brother has, in infinite wisdom, been taken to the paradise of God, preparatory to his receiving a glorious reward, which is laid up for all those who love the appearance of the Lord Jesus Christ; and we hereby extend our deepest sympathy with his bereaved but faithful widow, praying that God may bless, comfort, and sustain her through life, and in the end give unto her an abundant entrance into the rest that remains for the people of God."

President Joseph Smith nominated High Priest Charles E. Butterworth to fill vacancy caused by the death of Bro. David Chambers. On motion the Council affirmed the nomination and requested the General Conference to provide for the ordination.

April 14, in open conference High Priest Charles E. Butterworth was ordained a member of the High Council under the hands of Patriarch Alex. H. Smith, President Joseph Smith, Bishop Edmund L. Kelley, and Charles Derry, President of the High Priests' Quorum.

PASTORAL.

*To the Ministry and Saints in Western Nebraska, Colorado, Eastern Wyoming, and New Mexico; Greeting:—*Having been continued in charge of this mission, I earnestly desire the hearty coöperation of all; but especially of the traveling and local ministry throughout the entire field. And in order that there may be a proper understanding, and the work carried on systematically, and the best results obtained I have placed D. M. Rudd in charge of Western Nebraska, and O. B. Thomas in charge of Colorado and New Mexico. The ministry in their respective fields are urged to give prompt attention to their reports as required by the conference of 1893, and for the benefit of those who may have forgotten those rules and have not the conference minutes for that year, I will submit them. 1. . . . These reports should be brief, but sufficiently explicit to indicate, as plainly as possible, the labor performed, time spent in actual ministerial work, prospects, etc. 2. All ministers who are not in charge are required to report on or about the first day of the months of July, October, January, and March, the reports to be made out and sent to the minister who is in charge of the "fields of labor" where the work is performed. All who are in charge of such "fields of labor," are required to report on or about the tenth day of the above-named months, such reports to be made out and sent to the general missionary in charge. . . . 3. In the March report all the items required by the quorum as a prerequisite to missionary appointment must be furnished. (See Herald for June 4, 1892.)

It should be the duty of the missionary in charge of a "field of labor" to secure proper reports from all General Conference appointees in his field, summaries of which together with his own report must be sent to the missionary in charge. 4. In all cases where assistance from those in charge is needed, reference should be had directly to the one in charge of the "field of labor," and if further counsel or help is required it should be applied for, by him, to the general missionary in charge.

Let us earnestly labor, hope, and pray, that the present year may be one of unparalleled success to the cause we so dearly love, in which we are enlisted for life.

Your colaborer in Christ,

J. W. GILLEN.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSION.

It has pleased the church to again appoint your humble servant in charge of the mission, and while we realize the responsibility of the position we also realize that he whom we serve is able to give the wisdom necessary to the success of the mission.

I greatly desire the earnest coöperation of all the ministry and membership of the mission. In unity there is strength, and if we labor earnestly and zealously and so live as to receive the approbation of the Master we shall succeed. While we have not as many missionaries as we could desire, yet there are more in some parts of the mission than we have had, and the demands are urgent and frequent. There is much opposition to be met of various kinds and the servant of the Lord needs to be humble and watchful and avoid the very appearance of evil. I hope for good results by those in the field this coming year. Brethren, let us see to it that no more time is wasted, but that each moment that can be, is used to forward the Master's work.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly will take charge of the work in Texas and Western Louisiana. For the present the brethren in Arkansas, Indian Territory, and Oklahoma may report to me in person. May a loving Lord bless the diligent workers. Hoping to hear from you all, I remain,

Your brother and fellow laborer,
GEO. MONTAGUE.

PACIFIC SLOPE MISSION.

By the wisdom of the body I have been returned to the above-named mission, and, in accordance with instructions received, have subdivided the territory into "fields of labor," over which the following named brethren are placed in charge, to-wit: Washington and Oregon, Hiram L. Holt; Nevada, J. Arthur Davies; Southern California, David L. Harris; Central California, Thomas Daly; Northern California, A. C. Barmore.

All concerned will please notice and act in harmony with the above appointments, and render all possible aid to make the new conference year one of excellent record. The brethren named will please, at as early a date as possible, publish their mission addresses in the Herald and Ensign, so that all wishing to correspond with them, may be able to reach them readily through the mail. If saints in whose localities there are fair prospects for getting the gospel before the people, or where schoolhouses can be obtained, will notify those in charge, they can thus help to make the work lighter on the missionary.

Except when otherwise instructed by the missionary in general charge, it will be well for those under general conference appointment to confine their labors within the subdivisions assigned them as far as practicable.

Where necessity exists for labor within branches, let due respect be shown to those in local charge, that the work may proceed without friction. Let the local workers render all the aid possible.

The church presents a stronger front to the world than ever before, since the work of the Reorganization began. The influences going out from the late General Conference will be manifest to the great advantage of the work, and if the general and local workers will combine their forces and diligently apply themselves, with a view to purification within and proselyting without, the present year will eclipse former ones and present cause for universal rejoicing at its close.

In prosecuting missionary work, let us earnestly seek to convert men and women before baptizing them. This is frequently easier than to convert them afterward, and much more in accord with the character of our work. This is not dictatorial but suggestive. We work not for the praise of men, but the glory of God, and God is not glorified so much in the number baptized as in the number saved.

My present intention is to visit the several States composing the mission, during the year, if possible, and my hearty cooperation in all work being done regularly may be safely counted on.

Let every saint consider the character of the obligation assumed by him or her, when receiving baptism or ordination, and then apply him or herself to the discharge of that obligation, as in the immediate sight of God and Christ. In short, let us do all we can to advance the cause. This, of course, will make a draft on our financial store as well as our time and literary talent. This is a day of sacrifice, a day of self-denial, and our love is seen in what we do. If we love little we will do little; but if our love is akin to Christ's, we will tax ourselves to the extent of our ability, and our means and talents will flow forth for the maintenance of the object of our affection. If the Bishop has not received from us what the law justifies him in expecting, let us act so that the law may no longer condemn us. We cannot truthfully say that we are not hindering the intended progress of the work, if we have been and are withholding the tithes and offerings due the church under the law given. Let us be not only teachers of and believers in the gospel law. Let us be doers from henceforth. Let every saint resolve and act this year, so that, whatever failures occur, the blame will not be theirs.

My address for the present is Independence, Missouri, from whence all mail will be forwarded to me till I settle upon a mission address after removing into the field assigned. I hope to move forth in a few days.

Hoping that we may be found true to every trust confided of God, and that peace and good will may abound, I am,

Yours in gospel hope,
JOSEPH LUFF.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MISSION.

To Whom it May Concern:—As noted in the list of appointments Bro. A. B. Moore will labor in Montana. As the failure to mention Bro. Moore's name in the late pastoral was an oversight, I take this means to correct it.

Hopefully,
J. W. WIGHT.

MARRIED.

VAIL—SMITH.—At the home of the bride's parents, at St. Joseph, April 6, 1897, Bro. William L. Vail and Sr. Louisa M. Smith, Elder William Lawrenson officiating.

DIED.

PRUYN.—Margaret Mather was born February 28, 1819, Northumberland, England; died April 23, 1897, at her home, Davis City, Iowa, after a short illness, passing away without a struggle. Her first husband was Dr. John Gibson, a native of Scotland. After his decease she remained a widow until Thanksgiving Day, 1891, when she was married to Bro. Matthew Pruyn, who still lives at the advanced age of eighty-three years. Being dissatisfied with a previous baptism, she was rebaptized by Elder M. H. Forscutt, February 25, 1889. Though religiously inclined from childhood she never united with any church until as above. Of a "meek and quiet" disposition she had a very large circle of friends. Of her it can truthfully be said that she was a model of womanly virtue and moral excellence. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." She was the eldest of a family of twelve children, seven of whom survive her. The funeral services were from the saints' church, Davis City, Iowa, April 24, Elder J. W. Wight preaching the sermon from Revelation 14: 13. Members from the Methodist and saints' choirs rendered the music and the prayer was by Elder Bailey.

JENKENS.—Sr. Mary Ann Jenkins was born at Marion, Indiana, October 16, 1828; baptized October, 1842, at Kirtland, Ohio, by Elder Alex. Badham; baptized into the Reorganized Church October 7, 1860, by Elder John A. McIntosh, at Galland's Grove, Iowa; died February 17, 1897. The funeral occurred February 19, 1897, consisting of prayer at the house by Elder O. E. Holcomb, when her mortal remains were laid away in the church cemetery at Galland's Grove, Iowa, there to await the call of her Creator to come forth in the first resurrection. There was no sermon preached because of sickness of the near relatives. To Sr. Jenkins were born three children. One died in infancy in Texas. Two survive her, a son and daughter; the son, Elder R. H. Wight, resides at Durango, Colorado; the daughter, Sr. A. Crandall, resides at Galland's Grove, Iowa. In the loss of Sr. Jenkins from our midst, where she has resided since August, 1860, the church has lost a faithful worker and one that always stood firm and unshaken in the faith, yet in a modest, unassuming way. She had no enemies, but was loved and respected by all, both in and out of the church, by old and young, and with the children she was an especial favorite. She was untiring in her efforts to alleviate the care of those that were sick and in trouble. Where duty called and danger she was never wanting there. Her place at church was never vacant only when sick, or caring for others in distress compelled her absence. After the disruption of the church at the death of the martyrs she with her parents went to Texas, following after the fortunes of Lyman Wight. She returned to Iowa in 1860 and her heart was again cheered and made glad to hear that God had not deserted his people, but that a legally appointed successor had taken his place, and that the work began by his father was being completed by his son. The call had no uncertain sound and she readily accepted and devoted the remaining part of her life to its service. About the year 1864 or '65 she became united in marriage to Elder R. Jenkens, who, in his old age (which at present writing is 81 years), is left to mourn her departure. They had traveled life's pathway together for thirty-two years, and when the separation came and he left alone, he was lonely indeed. However, Bro. Jenkens feels that what is his loss is her gain, and he calmly awaits the pale reaper's summons to come to the other side and receive his reward. Her life was not all sunshine; the blight of sorrow and trouble often crossed her pathway, yet she bore it patiently, and when the grim monster, death, called a halt, she went peacefully to her rest without a murmur, and now awaits the trump of God to call into being her spiritual body and she be crowned and enjoy the rest prepared for God's people. Sainted one, rest in peace. Written by one that she has reared from early infancy to manhood and who reveres her memory. R. WIGHT.

MOSS.—At Crescent City, Iowa, April 27, 1897, Bro. Jacob Moss, after a long, lingering illness. He was born in Vermillion County, Illinois, in 1834; was baptized in 1859 by Bro. W. W. Blair in Decatur County, Iowa. He died in hope of a glorious resurrection. Wife, one daughter, and four sons mourn. Funeral sermon by C. G. McIntosh, to a large and attentive congregation.

GINN.—At Lucas, Iowa, March 27, 1897, Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ginn, aged 3 years, 10 months, and 7 days. Funeral sermon by Elder W. H. Kephart.

BENTLEY.—At St. Thomas, Ontario, March 29, 1897, Bro. James Bentley, aged 76 years. Bro. Bentley was a native of England; was baptized twenty years ago April 14, and was one of the first to start the work in St. Thomas. Wife and four children mourn. There was a large funeral March 30; services conducted by Elder Phillips and Priest Sherman.

MADISON.—At Bedison, Missouri, April 2, 1897, Sr. Hannah E. Madison, aged 19 years, 6 months, and 8 days. Deceased was baptized when eight years old. Married to the late Elder M. P. Madison, February 20, 1895. Her maiden name was Hannah E. Jensen. While preparing some varnish on the stove, her clothing caught fire, and no help being at hand, she was terribly burned, death resulting in eight hours after the accident. She was a faithful Latter Day Saint, but made perfect, doubtless, through her final sufferings. Funeral sermon by Elder M. F. Gowell, at the Union church, Bedison.

OLSEN.—April 21, 1897, John E. Olsen, of Decatur, Nebraska, aged 27 years, 8 months, and 13 days. He united with the church in March, 1895, and was a faithful member until death. He had many friends and was loved by all. Funeral services at the M. E. church; sermon by Geo. W. Walter.

RICHTER.—Sr. Lydia C. Richter, wife of Bro. Adolph H. Richter, died at her late home on Sunnyside Avenue, Burlington, Iowa, March 21, 1897. Her illness was short, being of only eight days' duration. Lydia C. Richter was born in Germany, September 13, 1849, and was married to Ad. H. Richter in Burlington, December 7, 1871. They celebrated their silver wedding last December. The funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon, March 23, at two o'clock, at the residence. She was buried at Aspen Grove cemetery. She was the mother of thirteen children, of whom six died when small. Seven of them, Marie, Johanna, Frederick, Adolph, George, Rudolph, and Enoch, are at home. She died firm in the faith of the gospel, and in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral conducted by G. H. Hilliard and C. Swanson. Sermon by G. H. Hilliard.

LINCH.—At the residence of his daughter, in Dorchester, Massachusetts, March 29, 1897, Mr. William Henry Linch. Deceased was born in the town of Cherryfield, Maine, February 11, 1826; married Miss Sharlotte B. Kelley forty-eight years ago, to whom were born six children, three of whom survive him. He followed the misfortunes of G. J. Adams in his expedition to the Holy Land, there learning the deception practiced by Elder Adams. He became disheartened, returned to his former home and occupation, faith forever lost in religion, but believing there was a kind and a loving God who would reward all men according to their works. He was much respected by all who knew him. Funeral services were conducted by S. O. Foss, at Indian River, Maine, April 4, 1897.

DERBY.—Nettie, wife of Elder M. F. Derby, of Selkirk, Ontario. Sr. Derby was born in Selkirk, Ontario, March 3, 1865. Receiving a good education, and being of a kindly disposition, she won the respect of all who knew her. She married M. F. Derby, January 9, 1883. The result of this union was a life of happiness and peace. She was a prominent member of the Disciple Church for years; but she heard the way of the Lord more perfectly, and as a result was baptized by Elder J. Shields, January 29, 1892. After an illness of three weeks, on the morning of March 21, 1897, she touched the hem of the Master's garment, and was made whole from that hour. She died as she had lived, honored and respected by all who knew her. Elder R. C. Evans preached her funeral sermon in the Disciple church. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Tricky, of the Baptist Church. Many were unable to obtain even standing room. Husband, five children, one sister, and her father mourn their loss.

WYMAN.—At her home in Bay Port, Michigan, March 21, 1897, Sr. Elizabeth Wyman. Sr. Wyman was born at Hartland, Michigan, October 11, 1858; baptized into the Reorganized Church in 1887; married to Mr. Charles Wyman, November 9, 1881. Husband and six children, mother, one brother, and two sisters, besides a large circle of friends, mourn. She was well known and highly respected in the community where she lived. Funeral services at the M. E. chapel; sermon by Elder J. A. Grant, assisted by Elders William Davis and William Dowker.

THEOSOPHY IS PLAYED OUT IN INDIA.

J. M. Thoburn, Bishop of the Methodist Church in India, said today:—

"Theosophy is a thing of the past in India. It was dropped there about the time it was taken up in America. The native papers denounced Blavatsky in the most decisive way in the hope that she would sue them for libel and thus give them a chance to expose her in court, but she never would sue, and when finally they got a case in court where they could force her to the witness stand she fled the country. They were prepared to prove from her own lips that she never was in the mountains of India gathering wisdom, as she claimed, but that at the time she claimed she was there she was in fact keeping house in Egypt. Blavatsky's telegram miracle was simple. You can by paying double rates have a telegram sent 'urgent' and calculate to within a minute when it will be delivered. I am in Bombay. I write to you in Calcutta saying that next Sunday at 8 o'clock I shall be at dinner party here and at 8:10 I shall say so and so. The statement will be combatted, and at 8:15 I shall say so and so in support of my position. It is the simplest thing in the world to time the telegram supporting my position to arrive at the critical moment."—Ex.

More than a year ago orders were issued that prohibited smoking in the corridors and elevators of the senate wing of the capitol in Washington. This applies to every floor in that wing. Of course, smoking can be indulged in in committee rooms and cloak rooms. The disgusting cigarette habit had become so prevalent in that wing of the Capitol and many complaints had been made, that a strict prohibition had become necessary. The rule was enforced with great strictness, and the improvement was so apparent that Speaker Reed, who rules the remainder of the capitol, decided to institute the reform in his domain. Within the past ten days, notices have been posted in the corridors and elevators and Statuary hall, stating that smoking is positively prohibited.

Habits formed in special matters extend to general features of life.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

IS THERE HERESY IN THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH?

THERE is not a drop of ecclesiasticism in me; but I believe in historical Christianity. I believe there is such a thing as apostolic doctrine, firmly rooted in the New Testament scriptures. And, if I have read aright the history of Congregationalism, especially in New England, it has always been the sturdy advocate and expounder of a thoroughly scriptural faith. The Westminster Confession, in its origin and history, is as much our own as it belongs to the Presbyterian Church. We have freely criticised and dissented from some of its phrases, but we have never repudiated it. But, unless my eyes and ears deceive me, we are drifting far away from its great landmarks. The doctrine of the Trinity is reduced to a form of logic. The incarnation is so formulated as to reduce it to the pantheistic statement of a universal indwelling of God in all men. Inspiration is reduced to intuition. Atonement dwindles down into a rhetorical expression. Expiation and propitiation have become figures of speech. Our ranks seem to be honeycombed with universalism and annihilationism. The reality of the fall is boldly denied, and the most extreme doctrines of natural evolution are openly advocated in our pulpits. Sin is declared to be only the remnant of our animal ancestry, which we are gradually sloughing off. The revolutionary theories of Wellhausen are invested with infallible authority, and the narratives of the Old Testament are reduced to a mass of fables and forgeries.

Such seems to me the present situation. Meanwhile, what is being done? Nothing. There is a good deal of restlessness. There is no sharp challenge from those to whom the people have a right to look for guidance. We comfort each other by saying that it will all blow over, and that the good old Book will survive. And I believe that. But I also believe that the good old Book and the good old gospel may survive by swamping us. Congregationalism cannot live on its past. Its past history is associated with the most vigorous defense of the historic faith. When that historic faith is abandoned the grave of Congregationalism will have been dug. And the old faith will march over that grave to final and glorious victory. Others will rally under the banner which we have deserted and in the triumph we may have no share. The gospel can do without us, and our decadence and disappearance would not be an anomaly in history. We are urging increased activity along denominational lines. Our most imperative need is a revival of evangelical doctrine. A scriptural faith will make us mighty, and without that we shall waste away, slowly but surely. Is it only an eddy, or is it more? I cannot help asking the question. I hope that it is only an eddy, and that my fears are groundless. But sometimes I fear that it is more than an eddy, that it is a rising and destructive flood, not for Christianity but for Congregationalism, for Congregationalism seems to have yielded most to doctrinal vagueness and disintegration.—Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, in the Congregationalist, Boston.

We are aware that there are reasons for apprehension. But we believe we have good evidence that the essentials of Christian faith are not less tenaciously held to-day than they were a generation ago; that the incarnation, the atonement, the resurrection, the judgment of all men by Jesus Christ, the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, his indwelling in the church and in the individual believer, the revelation of God through the scriptures, his providential government of the world and guidance of his children, are vital realities with many millions of believers in this country. We do not believe that these truths have less weight with Congregationalists than with those of other denominations, nor that the conception of them is changing more among us than in other religious bodies led by thinking men. We trust that our leaders who will prevail in shaping the thought of the church are seeking to be led by the Holy Spirit, and that they will not seek in vain, and we wait with interest, but not without confidence, the answer to the question, Is it only an eddy or is it more?—Congregationalist Boston.

That the statements of Dr. Behrends describe in general the condition of things in some particular churches, no discerning person doubts; that the existence of the looseness indicated lowers the tone everywhere is also true. It is a long time now since a clean Unitarian or Universalist has found it difficult to have a council so constituted as to ordain him or install him for a Congregational pulpit. But we still maintain, notwithstanding these humiliating exceptions, that the body of the Congregational churches is doctrinally sound and staunch. Nevertheless we have no right to treat lightly warnings that come from so respectable a source. Dr. Behrends cannot be accused of forming his judgments under some premillennial bias, nor of lack of knowledge and spiritual insight. The occurrence of his warning, therefore, may properly lead us to serious reflection.—Advance (Cong.), Chicago.

A RECONSTRUCTED THEOLOGY.

NOT long ago we sat at table with a distinguished scholar, a theological professor in a school of unsuspected orthodoxy; and he said, in perfect keeping with the general course of his remarks, "Unitarians ought to feel very happy in these days." "Why so?" was asked; and he replied, "Because everything is going their way." If not everything, a great many things. In Biblical criticism there is no line of demarkation between Unitarianism and the other sects. Individuals differ as they have always differed; but they differ as individuals simply and purely, and not as Unitarians and Episcopalians, and so on. Whether the enormous changes which have taken place in Biblical criticism portend much, or anything, of theological change is a matter of much interest. Those who are inimical to these changes no doubt exaggerate their theological importance. As time goes on, men find a modus vivendi under changed conditions which at first seems impossible. But, if those inimical to this criticism are too pessimistic as to the effect of its conclusions, even the most obvious of them, on the traditional theology, surely those who cordially or grudgingly accept these conclusions, in their wide significance from the first book in the Old Testament to the last book in the New, are much too optimistic when they assure us that not one jot or tittle has in any wise passed from the traditional theology. It would be very strange, indeed miraculous, if this were so. If you should take the letters that make up the several words that indicate the several doctrines of the traditional theology, and diligently shuffle them, and then throw these letters on the table only to find them spelling, just as before, "supernatural revelation," "infallible inspiration," "Biblical authority," "trinity," "deity of Christ," "the fall of man," "original sin," "vicarious atonement," "election," "reprobation," and "eternal punishment," this wonderful phenomenon would not begin to be so strange as it would be to find that the immense disintegration, displacement, rearrangement, which has resulted from the scientific criticism of the Bible, had left all the old meanings exactly as they were at the outset of the process, all the old inferences as secure as ever. The prophetic soul of the old-school theologian, brooding on things to come, was much wiser in its fears and doleful threatenings than is the progressive orthodoxy of the present time, assuring us that the Bible as critically understood, means just the same, or just about the same, as the Bible of infallible inspiration. Nothing is plainer to the unprejudiced mind than that it does not.

Meantime the new theology is miserably handicapped for the race it has to run, with reason and with science, by the whole tenor of the defense of the Bible and the traditional dogma heretofore. Said a great orthodox writer, who forty years ago was hailed more rapturously by orthodox people than Kidd or Drummond or Balfour latterly, "Never was there a book which presented greater obstacles to its recognition than the Bible, morally and intellectually." As with the Bible, so with the creeds. We were assured that their substance was superior to reason or devoid of reason, and that, nevertheless, we must accept them because of their inherence in or inference from the supernatural authority of Holy Writ. How then? Do all those doctrines which had no rational foundations, so long as they were supposed to have a supernatural sanction, suddenly become intrinsically rational when the supernatural sanction is forever swept away? If not, those who propose to hold fast to the traditional dogmas have a big job upon their hands,—nothing less than to prove the rationality of a whole system of belief which, until recently, they flaunted as irrational, and by that sign, more certainly, a thing of God.—Christian Register (Unit.), Boston. Condensed for Public Opinion.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

A VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work, in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth.

THAT NEPHITE.

WE sometimes see references in letters and articles sent to the HERALD, to Bro. Leabo, and the alleged visit of Nephi to him, as stated by him. And in connection with some of these references, we have been appealed to by letter and in person by brethren asking what we thought about Bro. Leabo's statement and the appearance of Nephi as claimed.

The only reply we could make, or can now make is, that we know nothing about the affair more than was stated by letter from Bro. Leabo, as published, and do not presume to express an opinion as to whether Nephi or one of the three Nephites had really appeared to Bro. Leabo or not. We have patiently waited for developments, believing that if it was a genuine visitation intended for the good of the work, it would be soon confirmed by succeeding events; and we have not yet changed in that belief.

It may be as well, however, to state that Brn. I. N. White, of Independence, Missouri, and John H. Lake, of Temple, Ohio, agreed with each other on an inquiry to be prosecuted by Bro. White. The latter began a correspondence, the conclusion of which was that there should take place at Kirtland at conference there a year ago this spring, such a manifestation as would be satisfactory to all. No such manifestation, concerning the visit of Nephi, or the testimony of Bro. Leabo occurred there. And, if anybody is still curious about it, Bro. I. N. White may be inquired of by addressing him at Independence, Missouri.

We refer to this as we learn that some unnecessary comment is being made upon the silence of the HERALD on the subject, to the effect that such silence was the result of fear of loss of prestige, place, or power, entertained by some. It ought to be needless for us to make a disclaimer of any such fear on the part of ourself, or any other of the brethren. For we are, all of us, just as willing that the three Nephites, believed to be still keeping the life of the flesh, or Nephi, or any other of the prophets of the Book of Mormon times, should be sent on missions of love from God and the Master to men, as we are to believe that Moroni came, as the history of the faith shows. But, there have been, and are now so many men wandering here and there representing themselves to be one, or the other of the men of the past, including Jesus Christ, that it is the part of proper wisdom to be quite sure of the evidences of identity before building much of a fabric of belief upon an alleged appearance of one of them.

It must be understood that we do not in this writing either affirm or deny Bro. Leabo's statement, or the identity of Nephi, as stated.

DEFY THE CHURCH MARRIAGE RULES.

St. LOUIS, Mo., March 30.—Exclusive society folk of St. Louis are agitated over a decided disposition on the part of certain young men and women to lead a revolt in the Catholic Church along matrimonial lines. Four prominent couples have within the last few weeks defied the church and incurred its severest sentence—excommunication—by marrying contrary to its decrees against the consent of Archbishop Kain. Here are the names of the four society girls who have disregarded the church regulations: Miss Josephine Rowley, now Mrs. Will L. Whipple; Miss Fannie J. Homes, now Mrs. Max R. Orthwein; Miss Birdell Doyle, now Mrs. William E. Corby; Miss Lalitta Bauduy, now Mrs. William M. Reedy.

Three of these were Catholics, Miss Rowley, Miss Homes, and Miss Bauduy. Miss Doyle was not, but her husband was.

Miss Bauduy's was the most serious case. Mr. Reedy who is a Catholic, was a divorced man. Such persons cannot marry in the Catholic Church while the other party to the divorce lives.

The foregoing indicates the growing tendency toward independence of church dictation in personal matters, and furnishes additional ground for belief that the Catholic Church must relax the rigor of some of its rules or be defied by the growing liberal element possessing the American spirit in the Catholic Church.

If the Catholic faith was the true faith—the faith pure and simple, a recommendation to its membership to avoid intermarriage with those outside its communion might be justifiable and advisable; but even then more than this would amount to practical dictation and be beyond its proper province.

She has been able to control the relationships of her devotees in this respect to a large degree in Catholic countries, but will find it difficult to pursue such a policy in free America. She will hardly dare to execute the threat of excommunication should the practice of disregarding her counsel in the matter stated become widespread.

It is well that the people are disposed to resent efforts to restrain them from the exercise of lawful rights in religious and social as well as political matters. The principles of liberty are sacred and the same whether running through church or state. Properly interpreted they interfere with neither, though they do test the character and undermine the foundations of institutions based upon principles foreign and antagonistic to both national and personal liberty.

L. D. HICKEY DEAD.

BY letter from Bro. C. G. Lewis, who writes from Spring Prairie, Wisconsin, April 29, 1897, we learn of the departure from this life of the last survivor of the Twelve Apostles under the leadership of James J. Strang, the prophet and king of Voree, Wisconsin, and Beaver Island, Michigan, Lorenzo Dow Hickey, who died at his home in Coldwater, Michigan, April 25, last, at 9:45, a. m. He was born at Palmyra, New York, February 15, 1817; married his second wife, Sarah Linnel, in 1852, on Beaver Island, Michigan, who with thirteen children survive him. The funeral services were conducted at the house, Tuesday afternoon, April 27, by Rev. H. P. Collins.

These items were taken from the Coldwater, daily, Reporter, and we give them place in the HERALD for the reason that Elder Hickey was connected with the latter-day work in some form from 1842 until his death. He was a singular and positive character, and opposed the Reorganization, as a whole, while admitting the right of the President of it to hold the presidency. He was a man of impetuous impulses, often rash, and at times bitter in the denunciation of what he opposed. He clung to his adherence to the claims of the prophet J. J. Strang to the last; and at his last visit to Lamoni, roundly denounced us because we declined to assist him to present Mr. Strang's position and claims to the people of our congregation here. He was fearless in presenting his views, regarding neither man nor place, when opportunity was offered him; being loyal to his convictions. His steadfast devotion to his views of Mr. Strang's claims and persistence in advocating them through so many years of apparently adverse fortune, are worthy of commendation, no matter what opinion we may hold as to the correctness of those views and the rightfulness of the claims of Mr. Strang.

Bro. Lewis adds at the close of his letter, "Thus passes away the last of the apostles of J. J. Strang."

WE see by the issue of the Dreadnaught, published at Springfield, Nebraska, by the one-time Advent-Christians, or Christian-Advents, that our old time friend and occupant of the Advent pulpit at Leon, Iowa, Elder F. C. Watkins, has decided to change his name. In refuting what the Christian Advocate has evidently published about him as regards his faith and having "joined the Campbellites," he writes thus:—

I have dropped the name Adventist, and henceforth will be known only as a Christian—a member of Christ's body. My membership is still with the church at Springfield, Nebraska, where I was last pastor.

"Straws show which way the wind is blowing; and it is a little comforting to us lookers on to see how easily men can dodge the idea of the unity of "Christ's body," and accept the idea that a man may break loose from any and all churches called the body of Christ, and exist as a "Christian—a member of Christ's body," and yet stand alone in belief, on an idea or two, of dogma or theory. Well, we wish success to Elder Watkins in seeking for the truth, though it may possibly lead him from his present anchorage.

SENATOR BLAKESLEE.

BRO. E. A. BLAKESLEE, of Galien, Berrien County, Michigan, who was elected to the upper house of the Michigan Legislature, by a late action of the Senate in which he bore a part, has won pleasant opinion of many of the lawmakers, both in the Senate and House, and with the people of the State at large. The story is told in a pleasant way in a copy of the Galien Advocate, for April 23, which reaches us incidentally. We give the extract below:—

When House Bill No. 148, introduced in the lower house by Rep. Stewart, late candidate for mayor of Detroit, reached the senate, it passed into the hands of the committee on State Affairs, was recommended favorably by that committee and seemed a very ordinary measure, until it went to the committee on Finance and Appropriations.

The committee on finance and appropriations, for some reason or other, have contracted a habit this session of carefully dissecting all measures that look like drafts upon the people. Upon its face the Stewart bill bore no evidence of an appropriation of public moneys, but when it again appeared before the senate it bore the stamp of disapproval of the Finance committee and the startling disclosure that it asked for the small sum of $68,000 to assist in the establishment of a marine hospital at Sault Ste Marie, for the care of sick and disabled seamen. The amount asked for was the surplus accruing from the operation of the Saint Mary's Ship Canal while the property of the State of Michigan and placed in the state treasury at the time of the transfer of the canal to the United States by the state. The liveliest discussion followed the final reading of the bill, and resulted in the development of the greatest number of orators of any measure that has come up before the senate during the session.

Senator Mason, of Gladstone, championed the bill and spoke for over two hours in favor of its passage. He took the position that the money was placed in the treasury in trust and did not belong to the State, and its withdrawal would not necessitate its consideration in the general tax levy for 1897-8. His appeal in the interest of the sea-faring people, in whose interest the measure was created, was eloquent, and portrayed a noble and patriotic character. His speech was a masterly effort and very effective. He was heartily congratulated at the close of his remarks.

Several forceful arguments were presented against the passage of the bill by some of the most able men in the senate, but to the young statesman from Berrien, Senator Blakeslee, is due the credit of making the most eloquent and by all odds the most logical speech of the occasion. Senator Blakeslee is a member of the committee on Finance and Appropriations, and is always alert when any measure is up calling for an expenditure of public money. He began by calling attention to the great demands made upon the people for the maintenance of the various State institutions and the regular running expenses of the State government. He said the people stood ready to meet every obligation in that direction, but they protested against any unnecessary outlay of money. Owing to the distressingly hard times they had experienced during the past two or three years they were compelled to caution their financial agents, the members of the legislature, to exercise the closest economy in the distribution of regular appropriations. The farmers of the State, who bear a larger share of the burden of taxation demand an economical administration of their affairs, continued the senator, and I for one do not propose to go to them with an extra draft for $68,000.

Senator Blakeslee then referred to the cleverness of Senator Mason in trying to make it appear that the money was simply held in trust by the State. He could not understand why the State should place in trust $68,000 of the people's money.

The facts are, he continued, that this money is a surplus accrued from tolls collected while the canal was the property of the State, and at the time of the transfer of the canal to the United States was turned into the treasury as the result of a paying business enterprise. He said from what he had heard some of the senators say, he was of the opinion that they did not fully understand the situation. He cautioned them against entering into any agreement that they did not fully understand. The proposition of Senator Mason that no future demands would be made upon the State for the maintenance of the institution might be made in good faith by the senator, but his responsibility was simply a moral one, and in case the $68,000 was appropriated, and future demands were made for appropriations Senator Mason could not be expected to pay the freight.

In closing, Senator Blakeslee called attention to the fact that the finance committee had carefully considered the bill and had unanimously decided to report adversely to its passage. He further called attention to the fact that the condition of the State finances at this time would not warrant the withdrawal of so large an amount of money from the State treasury, particularly in the face of the urgent demands of the people to confine to the minimum the expenditure of public moneys. At the close of his speech the senator was loudly cheered and heartily congratulated upon the effort he made to turn the tide of popular favor which followed the able address of Senator Mason. A roll call of the Senate was then taken on the passage of the bill and it failed to pass by a large majority vote. The Warner resolution to transfer the $68,000 in question to the general fund was then taken up and passed, thus securing to the State the undisputed possession of the money. BERK.

Those of the saints who know Bro. Blakeslee will be pleased to read of his success. It is not often that a man is taken from among the people, and without previous political aspirations, training, or preferment chosen to the high office of State Senator; and that Bro. Blakeslee was so chosen is very much to his credit, and shows the high estimate placed on him by his neighbors. It is for us to hope that Bro. Blakeslee may ever be equal to the emergencies in which he may be called to act.

"BARLEY FOR MILD DRINKS."

PERSONS interested in obtaining for and furnishing their families with a nourishing and palatable table drink, and a worthy successor to tea and coffee will find "unhulled" barley just what they want.

Browned but not burnt, and ground and steeped, it furnishes a wholesome and palatable drink, and with good cream or milk has a decidedly rich flavor. Get the unhulled, not the pearl barley.

It commends itself to Latter Day Saints because suggested to them for such use in the Word of Wisdom. It is the basis of health foods prepared for infants and invalids by physicians and physiologists, because of its peculiar adaptability to human physical needs. It thus has both divine recommendation and scientific indorsement.

Use the unhulled barley, brown it well, use good cream, and you will find its flavor rich, appetizing, and health-giving, and be in harmony with the counsel of the Lord in the Word of Wisdom, given for the physical and spiritual salvation of his people. It is both good and cheap, and superior to the manufactured substitutes for tea and coffee.

Your miller or your grocer can furnish it cheaply.

This is suggested in answer to the inquiry, "What shall we substitute for tea and coffee at our tables?"

The question of proper food or drink is an important one; so much so that the Father of the people saw fit, in his wisdom and condescension to speak concerning it. We have, therefore, thus written concerning a portion of it, believing that it, with "every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God" should be heeded, that in the fullest sense God's people may say, "In him [God] we live."

THE LATE REVELATION.

COPIES of the late revelation, printed in proper size for insertion in the Book of Covenants, may be had on application, accompanied by a two-cent stamp to cover cost of publication and postage. Address orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE names of Hubert Case and wife were unintentionally omitted in the list of appointees presented to conference at the late session. The pardon of Bro. and Sr. Case is asked, and they are hereby notified that their mission is sustained.

The church will also take notice of such appointment and sustaining of the mission of Bro. Hubert and Sr. Alice Case, to the Society Islands field. They are noble aids to the work there, and Bro. Joseph F. Burton will find them efficient helps in the work there.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. G. LEWIS, Spring Prairie, Wisconsin, late date:—

I feel to rejoice more day by day in this the Reorganized Church, and think I can say I am proud of it. I was made to rejoice in no small degree while reading the late Herald and Ensign of the doings of the conference; while reading the speeches of Elders E. C. Briggs, A. H. Smith, J. W. Wight, I. N. White, and R. C. Evans I thought myself in divine presence at the conference. Thanks be to God for his favor.

Bro. C. J. Spurlock, of Missouri, sends us an article on diet reform, of which he says:—

I send you an article from the Mammoth Springs Democrat on the necessity of using whole grain wheat for bread, which I highly indorse. When the Lord said in the Word of Wisdom that "wheat" was for man, I for one believe that he meant more than the white or starchy part of it. Latter Day Saints are to be the light to the world; then let us lead in reforms of every kind.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Business Manager directs us to say that owing to the pressure of the conference minutes and the History, there has been a delay in getting the tracts in the Scandinavian language into print. And that the manuscripts are in hand and will be got out as soon as practicable, and all orders will then be filled. He is receiving letters asking about the tracts and why they are not sent, and cannot fill the order for the reason stated above, delay in getting them printed. Patience, brethren, all will come in its time.

The reunion at Woodbine, Iowa, is set for September 3-13 inclusive. Bear this in mind those who are arranging the times for reunions, provided you desire to accommodate others wishing to attend those held by you and this one too.

The Merced, California, Express, of April 30, contains a half-column article written in defense of the faith by Bro. Albert Haws; a good article and written in a spirit of fairness and candor.

Departures for the missionary field during the week of the 2d include the following-named brethren: I. P. Baggerly, Texas; A. C. Barmore, California; E. C. Briggs, Michigan; F. M. Weld, Nauvoo district.

Bro. John Gillespie and daughter Mary, of Cleveland, Ohio, left Lamoni for home, via St. Louis, on the 5th. Bro. Gillespie will be remembered by many as a model usher; having had years of experience in providing for the comfort of his congregations at Pittsburg, Cleveland, at the Kirtland Temple, and with others during the late conference at Lamoni.

A clipping from the Aylmer, Ontario, Express (date not given) informs us that Bro. S. W. Tomlinson was holding meetings in the Catholic church and seemed to "draw the crowd."

Bro. Thomas Daley announces himself ready for work in the Central California district, his appointed field. He baptized eight persons in April. He wrote from Irvington, California, the 1st inst.

Bro. Robert M. Elvin, president of Decatur district, reports fifty baptisms in the district during the past five weeks. Somebody is "hearing and obeying" certainly. Let the good work go on.

The Tennessee Centennial and International Exposition was opened at Nashville on Saturday, May 1. The Exposition is almost national in importance; but is of especial interest to the entire South. Many great organizations throughout the country will hold their sessions or conventions at the Exposition, now the White City of the South.

The late British-American arbitration treaty, negotiated under the Cleveland and Salisbury administrations, has been rejected by the United States Senate by a vote of 43 to 26. It is said that this action will lose or nullify England's recognition of the Monroe doctrine, so strongly reasserted by President Cleveland, which was practically recognized by Great Britain in her agreement to enter upon a general arbitration treaty, and under which the Venezuelan dispute was to be passed upon. The defeat of the treaty was followed by the introduction of a resolution which provides that arbitration treaties be concluded with all nations. It has not yet been acted upon.

Gay Paris, the city of pleasure, has been sorely afflicted by a terrible visitation which has caused the death of some of her brightest society lights, people of rank and national fame. Between one and two hundred persons, mostly women, were killed and many more injured in a fire and panic at four o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday, May 4, in a crowded charitable bazaar in the Rue Jean Goujon, presided over by the leaders of Parisian Society. The building was a temporary one constructed of wood and other inflammable material and poorly provided with exits and protection against fire, and filled with booths and exhibits that burned rapidly, once they were ignited. It was densely crowded and the fire progressing very rapidly reached the roof, heavily impregnated with tar, which burned fiercely and fell in upon the imprisoned people struggling and trampling one another in a frenzied effort to escape. The bazaar became a burning sea of flame in which over one hundred were burned to death. It is now estimated that there were about 1,200 persons in the building when the fire broke out, about one half of whom escaped unhurt. The dead are estimated at 143. The affair is regarded as the most terrible of its kind that ever befell a European city. The Bazaar was under the patronage of the Duchess d' Uzes. The Duchess d' Alencon, a sister of the Empress of Austria and many others of the most distinguished families of France perished in the flames. All Paris and many of the European capitals are in mourning. The details of the disaster are appalling.

The Maysville, Missouri, Pilot, of April 29, sent us by Bro. C. P. Faul, has good words for our people in that region, whom it designates as some of the best citizens of the State.

Elder Columbus Scott departed for the Des Moines district on the 7th inst.

Great loss of life, caused by earthquakes, is reported, in the Leeward Islands.

The Turkish army has steadily continued its series of successes, defeating the Greeks and pressing them backward in retreat. Velestino has been occupied and burned, Volo has been taken, and the Turks are pressing forward to Domokos. The Greeks under General Smolentz have fought well and in some battles have withstood the Turks for a time. Mediation by the great powers is expected. It is said that in the settlement of the dispute "Turkey will certainly claim a fair allowance of the rights of a victor, and in this claim she will be supported by Russia and Germany." The resources of Turkey have astonished most of the statesmen of Europe.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Let us gather up the sunbeams,
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses,
Casting out the thorns and chaff.
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessing of to-day,
With a patient hand removing
All the briars round the way."

DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

At the business meeting of the general society of the Daughters of Zion held in Lamon on the 10th of April, some amendments were made to the constitution, and provision made that it be published in the Home Column, as revised. Those holding copies of the constitution would do well to note therein the changes.

A motion prevailed that the clause in the constitution making the payment of dues obligatory be stricken out, and that hereafter contributions be voluntary and that when necessary the general society shall make a call for funds.

CALLIE B. STEBBINS, Sec.

ANGUS, Iowa.

Dear Sisters of the Prayer Union.—Will you open your doors and let me have a place with you once more? I have been one of your members for a long time, but will confess that I have been very slack in my duty. I have many times thought to write you, then the thought would come that I had nothing to say that would be edifying, and so would lay down my pen. But I have tried to keep the day with you, and have many times felt the comforting, holy influence of God, and was made to feel that our spirits communed together though we were far apart. I have passed through the greatest sorrow of my life within the past year, in the losing of my dear husband, and have sometimes felt that I sink under my afflictions, but the "Father of all" has been merciful and has sustained me so far, and will if I continue to trust him.

I realize I have much to be thankful for. I have friends kind and true, and the comforting words I have received from them, as well as through letters from those absent, though none the less dear, have been like "balm to the bleeding heart." I truly thank you all, and God bless you all, is my prayer. I want to tell you that I rejoice in this latter-day work and know it is the work of God. I feel that there is nothing that could shake my belief or turn me from it. I have had too many evidences of its truth. I ask you to continue to pray for me, that I may be sustained and held by his hand.

I am as ever your sister,
MRS. PAULINE RUBY.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. HENRY HANNA, of Virginia City, Minnesota, requests your earnest prayers in behalf of his wife who is very ill and not likely to live unless the Lord sees fit to raise her up. Please remember his request.

Sr. A. L. Davis, of Leighton, Iowa, writes in behalf of her husband, D. J. Davis, desiring the prayers of the union that should it be pleasing unto the Father he might be relieved of the disease now afflicting him.

Please pray for me that my sins may be forgiven, that I may overcome evil with good; and O, dear sisters, that God will be pleased to grant the desire of my heart!

Your sister in Christ,

Letter Department.

KEWANEE, Ill., April 29.

Editors Herald.—Elder John Davis paid us a week's visit after the close of the General Conference, to see his loving, aged mother and two sisters, Watkins and Willets, mothers of large families of children, and in the faith; and who have become residents of ours for quite awhile now. Bro. John kept the restored gospel bell ringing during the whole of his stay, dealing out inspiringly some of its soul elevating pearls, that none but those that have put on Christ at the regenerative waters of baptism can fully appreciate. Indeed his manner of reasoning was grand in portraying to the outsider the unchangeableness of God—the narrowness and straightness of his way to gain an entrance into the celestial glory of Christ. Contrasting it so beautifully, almost beyond description by my feeble pen, with the fabulous, nonsensical, and ridiculous views of sectarianism, the more proper term given by the inspired record—spiritual Babylon. The conclusion of many being that God can make preachers out of coal miners, as well as tax gatherers, tent-makers, and fishermen. Come again, Brother John.

The city of Kewanee has proffered us some one thousand dollars and a lot in exchange for the one we occupy, if we will move our church edifice, so that Tremont Street can be extended farther north, improving the looks as well as being a benefit to all concerned. The saints, ever ready to admit and help improvements, have consented. Our Sabbath school is in line with the other flourishing schools of the saints. J. H. Harris on the lead, with the watchword, "come," and not go. Our branch preaching officials are about to branch out in preaching tours or circles, for the ensuing summer. Which may God grant is our ascending prayer.

JOHN D. JONES.

ELDON, Iowa, April 25.

Editors Herald.—I first heard John H. Lake, Mark H. Forscutt, and Jason Briggs preach the gospel; that these signs should follow them that believe. I then commenced to fast and pray to know that God had a visible church and kingdom on earth, and said, O, Lord God, if thou hast the church, let it be Catholic, Methodist, Baptist or Campbellite, what ever thou dost show me, that will I join. I kept up this fasting and prayer for eight months, and there was pointed out to me in a vision a house twenty miles distant from Farmington, near a body of water and boats on it, and there appeared something like a white lake. The house that I saw was a very peculiar one, with the door cut out in the side, situated on the bank of the Mississippi River, at the town of Montrose. The white lake was the Mississippi River, frozen over with ice about eighteen inches thick. Well, there was a man going down to Montrose; I started down with him, and when I got to the town, there I saw the very house that I saw in the vision, and I knew it was the same. In that house there was preaching, and I arose for baptism. They chopped a hole in the ice and I was buried in baptism, arose from the liquid grave, as my blessed Redeemer rose from his literal grave. While I was fasting for wisdom to know the truth of God's visible church a voice spake in audible tone, and said, "When thou fast, anoint thy head." I immediately went to search for the passage of scripture on fasting, and found it to be correct, as the voice had said. After I joined the church, I was raised to my feet by an unseen power, my eyes were closed, and these words were put into my mouth, "Joseph Smith of old was a prophet of the most High God." I then dropped back into my seat, and another vision appeared in the manner of a warning voice from heaven. Two persons were to approach me, with a book, saying, "Read this and be convinced of this infamous doctrine." One sat on my right hand and the other on my left. Both appeared as dark omens. I said, No. The book was ridiculing and stamping the latter-day work as infamous and polygamous in its nature; but God, not man, warned me not to heed to its teachings. I believe the book was entitled Annie Lee; anyhow, I was warned that it was a book of the Devil. After I had joined the church, for three days I saw the Devil just as plain as midday; half bent, making fun of prayer with a grin, and his teeth showed plain. He was dressed as beautiful as any young man; his hair was dark; clothes dark and beautiful. This continued for three days, and then disappeared.

Look, dear brethren, and learn and be wise, for these angels of the bottomless pit are fast depositing their blasted seed in the hearts of the fallen race of man, trying to stop the mighty depths of God's love to fallen man; and if you keep in mind and heart the depths, heights, widths, and breadths, your names will stand on the statute books of life in the world to come.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.

Editors Herald:—All the saints as far as I can learn are highly pleased with the news of late General Conference. Our hearts were made to rejoice as we read the new revelation, and were brought to realize more than ever that God's loving watchcare is over the work, and that he still chooses the men he desires to have as his representatives. It may be encouraging to my brethren and sisters to state that away off here, in this part of the Lord's vineyard, the Holy Spirit bears testimony to the saints of the truthfulness of the revelation, and that it was of God. I have read it several times, earnestly and prayerfully, and every time the Holy Spirit has come upon me in power, filling my entire being with that heavenly influence, and bearing witness to my spirit that it is of God. Others of my brethren here testify to the same. So we heartily concur in all that was done, and we rejoice with you that the quorums are now full, and we congratulate our brethren who have been called of God to fill them. We are thankful that we have the honor of representing the church of which our Lord and Savior is the head, and to which God, our heavenly Father, condescends to speak. We are thankful for a prophet's voice, and that we live in the day of present revelation.

All is moving fairly well with us. Our branch is all right; we hold two preaching services and Sunday school every Sunday; also prayer meeting and literary and prayer union, during the week. There are always some strangers present at our services, as a rule, and they appear to be interested. One young man was baptized here recently, so we are gathering souls into the fold occasionally. The faith of the saints here is strong, and the future looks bright before us. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

Yours in bonds,

GEO. S. LINCOLN.

GREGVILLE, Alabama.

Editors Herald:—Death has again visited our community of late, taking two of our sisters from our midst. Dear old Sister Wadsworth complained for some time, but seemed to be improving until the 17th of April; she was about her daily duties as well as usual, when about eight o'clock she called to her husband to come. He looked and saw her in the yard; before he reached her she fell to the ground. He carried her to the house and summoned help, but her spirit had taken its flight—life was no more. Sr. Mary E. Wadsworth was born August 2, 1842, in Coffee County, Alabama; was baptized by Elder J. D. Erwin, April 26, 1896, near Gregville, Alabama. Her remains were laid to rest at Flat Rock, by brothers, sisters, and friends. We ask the saints to remember Bro. Wadsworth in their prayers, as his health is very low. Pray for him, saints, that he may have strength to overcome his trials and troubles. That the Spirit may dwell richly in him is the prayer of your sister in Christ, Editors Herald:—Since last writing have had the opportunity to discourse in eight different places, thirty-five times in all. Have many times realized that more than human power dictated these words (uttered by Bro. J. F. McDowell, God's mouthpiece, speaking individually) if faithful and very diligent "your tongue shall be loosed, making you able to declare the truth." Many have listened patiently while we tried to tell of the blessings that accrue to those in the kingdom. Have also realized to our sorrow that we are mortal, liable to make mistakes. God help us to arise to the standard of perfection. May we have mercy for each other, seeing that we need the same from above.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I last bore my testimony in regard to the truth of this latter-day gospel, and I was pleased to know that while I was deprived of hearing the gospel proclaimed during conference by those appointed of God, that it was having its desired effect upon those in attendance; some obeying the gospel and accepting the truth, and others renewing their obligations to God, with a desire of doing more in his service, and during all the sessions of conference my prayers were with the saints, that much good might be accomplished; and I am thankful to heaven that my prayers have not been in vain, and feel that I cannot be thankful enough for the blessings bestowed upon me, and at many times since coming to this country, have felt God's Holy Spirit striving with me.

Dear brothers and sisters, I feel strong in this glorious latter-day work, and have occupied more time in reading the Doctrine and Covenants and Bible than ever before in my life; and more that, I can understand them better—everything seems clear to my mind, and I have thought many times since coming here, if I could only hear a gospel sermon once in a month I would be satisfied, and it seems hard for one who loves the services of God's house and its privileges to be deprived of them; and from one who feels that we are in possession of the true gospel, and who has had evidences of the truth of the work, let me admonish you while you are where you can enjoy the privileges and blessings of God's house that you use every possible opportunity of doing good; and it affords me great pleasure to read the letters in the Her- ald of the progress of the work in different parts of God's vineyard. My prayers are continually for the church, and especially for Brother Joseph, whom God has called to be leader of his people. I feel that we cannot be thankful enough to God for the blessing bestowed upon his church, and I find in reading the Doctrine and Covenants in all the revelations given to our brother and prophet, Joseph Smith, we find him obedient in everything and leading his church and people as he directed; and my prayer is that God may still continue to bless him with health and strength and spiritual wisdom.

Trusting that you will remember me in your prayers, I am

Your brother in the gospel,

Editors Herald:—It may be interesting to know that the written debate I had with Elder C. W. Sewell, of Dot, Texas, through the Saints' Herald and the Gospel Advocate, of Nashville, Tennessee, has created quite an interest among the readers of the Advocate. I had a written contract by letters from both Elder Sewell and the editor of Advocate before entering into the debate to the effect that the debate would be published in their church journal at Nashville, provided our church journal would publish the same. I laid the matter before the editor of the Herald and got a reply to send the manuscript and it would be published. It came out in the early numbers of the Herald for January; but, for some reason, better known to themselves, the editor of the Advocate saw fit not to publish the debate till along up in April; and then not until I had written Elder Sewell twice—asking reasons why, and urging a compliance with the agreement. However, tardy as it is, it is out; and letters of inquiry are pouring in from parties in Iowa, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

One lady, (presumably a member of the Church by the way she writes,) sends about twelve large pages of manuscript, closely written, and commences it by saying: "I have read, read with interest the discussion in the Advocate between yourself and Elder Sewell, and I feel prompted to write you a line, although a stranger,—I must say that I feel somewhat strengthened by the discussion." Further along she says: "But what I feel most rejoiced over is this: to know that others believe, in regard to the Spirit, as I do, and have always claimed; but I did not know (except by faith) that there was anyone in the wide world who believed as I do in regard to the gifts, reception and working of the Spirit."

She further states of being severely criticised by others for her belief on the points named, and while passing through such trials she had the following vision or dream:—

"I saw a ladder, one end standing on the earth, the other went up past the clouds and into the sky. I saw a concourse of people standing at its foot; all, it seemed, hesitated to climb it; it was a dangerous looking ladder, very narrow, and it had stood for ages. Many of the rounds were already gone where other parties had attempted to ascend, and from some cause had fallen. When I discovered myself I was near the foot of this ladder, and I cannot say for certain that some one from behind did not give me a shove and have me to climb; but anyway I said that I would climb the ladder; I knew that some one in that crowd would climb successfully, and before I hardly knew what I was doing I was considerably up on the ladder; there was little peril at first and I got on quite rapidly; but at length I found myself in the midst of great danger, and hard work it was to keep a footing, and the further I went the more perilous it seemed; in some instances the rounds were gone entirely for a great distance; and those that remained, many of them, were weak and looked unsafe.

"I remember to have looked down on the people every few steps till I was a great distance from the earth. The people seemed all looking at me with intense expectation; at length the task became so hard, and it was fraught with such danger, I wondered that I should have undertaken it; but soon I decided to stop looking behind and fix my eyes on the other end of the ladder. So I gazed aloft and above me, never looking down except to get a firm footing, and so I climbed up, up until I came to and passed through the clouds; it made me shudder when I thought of what I had undertaken—to climb a ladder like that, and did not know what the object was, only that it was a ladder that some one must climb.

About this time I realized that I was doing a work for others, and a thrill of happiness passed through me, and I understood that I would reach the top, and that my success was due to three things mainly—first, to patient perseverance; second, I looked neither to the right nor the left; and, third, I kept my eyes heavenward. I reached up to get another hold; the way I climbed was by pulling myself up by main strength; it was a hard pull, too, and sometimes I felt almost exhausted, but I found that whenever I could get my consent to make the effort, the necessary strength came; at length tired and almost exhausted I reached for the last round and drew myself up; when I did so my fingers went to work to untie a knot (it seemed by intuition), I knew not what it was for; but when I had untied it, a most beautiful ladder like the one I had ascended on, except this one was new and perfect, rolled out and down beneath the old one. As soon as I saw it I understood that the new one was to take the place of the old one, and that all might ascend on this one who wished. When the people at the foot of the old ladder saw the new one coming down they raised a great shout and I awoke."

To say the least, this dream is a very significant one. I have written this lady giving her some light in regard to her dream; also sent her my sermon on "What we believe and why we believe it," and also a copy of the Voice of Warning.

I have just received a letter from a young student in Tennessee, saying: "Dear Sir; I read with interest the discussion in the Advocate, between you and Mr. Sewell, and I see there is a difference between you (the Reorganized Church, I believe) and the Utah Mormons on the very important subject of marriage; one teaching that monogamy is the divine plan while the other contends that polygamy is the 'celestial law'. Now, both sides claim that no scripture is of 'private interpretation'. The Utah Mormons quote scripture to prove their system to be right, while you do likewise; so the question arises: How am I to know which is right? (if either). I also understand that you have twelve apostles which direct the affairs of the church. Now, I want to know if both sects are subject to the same set, or do each sect have a different set of officers—apostles, prophets, etc."

These very significant questions have been answered by me—with many more. I also sent this young student three tracts—"One wife or many;" "Bible vs. Polygamy;" "Was polygamy a tenet of the church," etc. Also, "What we believe," etc. Others have written, asking questions upon the Book of Mormon, Inspired Translation, etc., etc. All of this takes time to answer; but I would not dare to discourage such. I would rather wear out than to rust out. The work is of God; this I do know.

Elder Sewell and myself are still corresponding, and he has continued to ask me to furnish him an apostle to debate with. Well, the Lord has furnished one, and Elder Sewell writes of him (after having read in the Herald of our late conference): "By the way, I notice you have been called to the apostolic office. Accept my congratulations. I also feel like congratulating Uncle Joe. I doubt if he could have found a more wily assistant among your 'whole fraternity.'"

Well! It is some consolation at times to be noticed, though it is only in an ironical way. I will try patiently to endure such and such things that I cannot help. By the way, Elder Sewell has agreed that the following question is all "O. K." and can he secure one of his church journals (one in the north preferable he says, which will suit me as well), we will possibly debate through our respective journals the following; to wit: "Is the Church of Christ (commonly called Christian or Campbellite Church) the true church of God, and identical in organization, doctrine, and practice with the church of Christ as described in the New Testament Scriptures?"

I have also agreed with Elder Sewell to debate the following sometime in the future, after his church question is debated: "Is the canon of Scripture full?" Should Mr. Sewell be successful in securing one of his church journals to carry him in the debate, I shall feel at liberty to ask for the same honor from ours. Sometime ago I made similar arrangements with Elder J. H. D. Tomson, of the Christian Church, to debate church questions. He agreed to furnish one of his journals and I was to furnish Zion's Ensign. The editor and publisher of the Ensign entered into a written agreement to give us ten affirmatives with their negatives of fifteen hundred words each, for each church proposition; but, Elder Tomson and the editor of his journal (The Primitive Christian) both flew the track and had the audacity to offer to furnish their journal for three affirmatives and their negatives of about eight hundred words on each proposition! The editor then wrote me that I could accept this or "we shall pay no more attention to you."

I feel thankful, happy, and glad that I have the honor bestowed upon me from God to represent the TRUTH that need have no fear to appear in any respectable church journal side by side with the tact and talent of its enemy. Let Elder Sewell and his editors take notice.

Yours in defense of the gospel work,
I. N. WHITE.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 5.

Editors Herald:—In answer to Bro. James Sheen's question in Herald of May 5, I will say that all the quotations in "Crooked Paths" were copied directly from the books and papers cited. We were in possession of all those works, and we feel sure they are correct. Bro. Peter Anderson copied the manuscript, and we carefully compared the quotations to be sure they were correct, before we sent to the Herald Office.

I have had similar experience to that of Bro. Sheen. I have met men in Utah with the books in my hand containing the utterances of their leading men, but they remained steadfast in their traditions. The Deseret News has never refuted those statements, nor can they. The position occupied by the Reorganized Church is impregnable. It is in harmony with the revelations of God and the true history of the latter-day work, and will stand till Jesus comes.

Anyone may use those quotations with safety. Yours in bonds,

R. J. ANTHONY.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., April 19.

Editors Herald:—I arrived home on the 10th after a three months' tour in my mission field—Walsingham and vicinity. I made three new openings, one at Vienna, which we feel will prove successful. I will inclose a clipping from the Aylmer Express. By the assistance of Bro. Isaac Pearson, of Houghton, I secured the Catholic Church there and had it well filled for seven nights, and left a splendid feeling. Was cared for whilst there by some of the wealthiest citizens of the town, Mr. Z. H. Balcome and Sons, who carry on an extensive business, a saw mill, sash and door factory, and furniture store, and also undertaking. They are fine people and made me as one of their own, with a strong welcome to make my home there when I return. Many friends were made towards us while there, and I think quite a number will embrace the gospel. I propose to return there in May to resume my labors.

At Houghton Center I secured the English church, from Squire Aulton, and made quite a number of friends, with the promise of the church whenever we needed it. Truly God is fulfilling his promises, wherein he said he would send his angels before his servants to open the way.

I also labored at Watson Center, and vicinity. Nine were baptized there; five by the branch officers and four by the writer. One old brother I baptized was supposed to be dying with cancer, which had eaten the under part of his jaw clear around from ear to ear, nearly through to the windpipe. The odor from it was so disagreeable I could scarcely endure it while preaching and would get out as soon as possible after the service was over. After the priest of the branch and the writer had held several meetings there the old gentleman demanded baptism, and we secured Bro. H. Thompson's team and sleigh and proceeded to the water. Many outsiders said he would never come out of the water alive. "Why," they said, "they are just going to murder the poor old man!" "Oh," I thought, "how little faith they have in God!" We muffled the old gentleman up with bed covers, as it was a cold night, being the 5th of March and he had not been able to be out of the house for several months, and we got him in the sleigh and drove to the water. The team and sleigh were driven right into the water and I lifted the poor old man out and buried him with Christ in the cold watery grave. He arose praising God. That evening I confirmed and administered to him according to the injunctions given in James 5: 14. Three days afterward he walked four miles to see some of his friends, and when I returned in two weeks to fill my appointment in his house the aged brother exclaimed, "Thank God, Elder, God is healing me; my cancer is most all healed!" This he said in the presence of a goodly number who had just come to meeting; and that unpleasant odor was entirely gone. O, how I felt to praise God for his marvelous work and a wonder!

I also baptized a gentleman at Bookton, who was given up by the doctors. They said they could do no more for him. Elder Longhurst and the writer administered to him twice before his baptism and the writer twice after, and on the fifth of this month, Elder R. C. Longhurst and the writer called to see this brother and found him able to be up and around. We again administered to him and felt blessed. His wife and daughter promised to obey in the near future.

I was called from Walsingham Center by telegram to conduct the funeral services of Sr. Eddie Wyett.

On March 31 I was called to Vanessa to conduct the funeral services of Miss Nellie Smith, an adopted child of Bro. and Sr. Coats. This dear girl died very suddenly. She was not in the church, but was a constant attendant of the saints' Sunday school at Vanessa. She was a good, kind girl, and was beloved by all. Whilst there I was cared for by our worthy district president, Bro. R. C. Longhurst and his wife. I was quite under the weather while there, but have nicely recovered. Since I have been home I have visited and talked with some outside the church and preached for the saints here and assisted the president of the branch, Bro. George C. Tomlinson, in caring for the sick, and have been greatly blessed in our labors here.

I was pleased to learn through the Herald of the church being more fully organized, and felt like singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." We feel there are great blessings in store for the faithful. I leave to-morrow for Norwich. Will labor there some, then on to my field.

Asking an interest in the prayers of God's people in my behalf, for the work's sake, I remain,

Yours truly,
S. W. TOMLINSON.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 6.

Editors Herald:—Brn. I. M. Smith and George Robley have just started for Fagundus, Pennsylvania, and Bro. W. W. Blanchard for East Pharsalia, New York. Bro. F. M. Sheehy will leave here to-morrow for Cohocton, New York. Bro. G. T. Griffiths and self intend reaching Detroit, Michigan, next Monday; anyway by Tuesday morning.

Excellent meetings here last Sunday, Brn. F. M. Sheehy and George W. Robley occupying the stand morning and evening, Brn. Lake and Griffiths assisting. Saints are feeling well in the work. Bro. Lake is ailing physically, and is at home yet. The gentle breezes of spring are blowing, and gladness is manifest all around.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Sermon delivered by Bishop E. L. Kelley, at Lamoni, Iowa, March 11, 1894.

It has been very difficult for me to select a passage of scripture as a basis for the evening's remarks that was even satisfactory to myself. However, I will call your attention to a familiar text, a statement made by the Apostle Paul regarding the kingdom of God:—

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Romans 14: 17.

The apt discourse this morning called our attention to the fact of the culmination of certain events in the near future relative to the work of Christ and the church. And, possibly, it may not be out of place this evening to touch upon portions of that work, and discuss in our own minds some things that particularly distinguish it from any other work that may be found in the world; for if we should fail to properly comprehend just what the work of God is to be in the last days, we may fail of being partakers therein, as truly as did the Jews in their time fail in becoming identified with the kingdom of God sent to them.

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

This language of the Apostle to the saints was occasioned by reason of the actions of certain brethren in that time, showing that they were caring simply for this world. When they went to the sacramental service it was for the purpose of eating to be filled, or drinking to satisfy the natural thirst. They had become almost gormands under the idea that this was the work of the kingdom of God to satisfy the earthly nature and all that belonged thereto, in contradistinction to the idea uttered in the language of the text.

The text is comprehensive in very many things. It includes the work of righteousness; the righteousness of God, as it is revealed in the gospel to the human family. This is fulfilled under the work of the law of the spiritual kingdom known as the gospel. The kingdom of God certainly has laws to control and direct those who become attached thereto as members, and those who officiate in its offices. These and all of them of whatever class or condition are partakers of it from having drank into the spiritual and for having performed the works of righteousness revealed in the law rather than for having followed their own selfish or peculiar inclinations, or wrought for works, those things of their own choosing. In the language of the Apostle it is the good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.—Ephesians 2: 10.

The identity of membership in the church or kingdom is not one of formal union by the profession of the lips, or the handing of the name for record, if it is a membership in the true gospel sense; but the candidate must have thrown off the ways of evil in which he walked, accepted the message that set forth a belief and hope in the risen Christ, performing for duty the works enjoined by this Christ under the law that he may receive the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father.

Full compliance with the law revealed for our adoption is the means by which we may change our state, and having thus changed, become citizens and partakers of the spiritual condition indicated in the language of the text, "Righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

The Apostle Paul, speaking with reference to the work of righteousness places it under the work of the gospel. He says:—

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.—Rom. 1:16, 17.

The same thought that is expressed in the language of the text, "Not meat and drink." Not things that we may take hold of after the desires of natural life here; the kingdom of God is not received after that way nor so realized. And if we have been looking for it in that manner we have doubtless overlooked it. It did me considerable good this morning to hear our President state that the work of the Reorganization had been to present the law of this kingdom to the Gentiles, with all its promises and blessings to the Gentiles, as well as to the Jews or the adopted children themselves, if the Gentiles would do the works of righteousness and accept the conditions. This is the special work of the kingdom of God, and if we have been so building we ought to take assurance by reason of the signs of the times and the conditions of society in the time in which we live.

The time of the setting up of the kingdom of God spoken of here has been variously placed in the first, and the nineteenth centuries, and during the millennial reign, by individuals as they have understood certain texts in the Bible; some claiming that it never would take place until after the ushering in of the millennial reign; others that it was set up in the time of the Savior or soon afterwards, and it was never to be overthrown; that this kingdom has been in existence from the days of John the Baptist and has not been overthrown but has continued right along on down the history of the world to the present. While still another class claims that the kingdom of God, as it was set up in the beginning of the Christian era was by the wicked taken by force and that there was an apostasy therefrom, many being turned from the faith and forsaking the organization, certain features of the organization, the seed, going into the wilderness, and that a restoration had to, and did, take place sometime after such apostasy. To the latter class belong the people that are represented here this evening.

Confusion in reference to the setting up of the kingdom as understood by the churches of the world has been on account of the fact that they have misunderstood or misinterpreted the prophetic statements of Daniel that are found in the second chapter of the Book of Daniel. It is there clearly shown that the kingdom of God would have place and existence in a certain day and age of the world, and in the interpretation of the dream Daniel says:—

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed.—Dan. 2:44.

In the interpretation of this text, men, theologians, have tried to interpret the setting up referred to, to have taken place in the time of the Savior's personal ministry in the first century, and from the fact that Daniel says it should never be thrown down or "left to other people," the argument has been drawn that it must have continued down unto the present day.

If you will turn to the twenty-first chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, and the forty-third verse, and read, you will note that the statement of the Savior is so contrary to this view that it need not be argued at length at all. He says:—

Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

But Daniel said that the kingdom to which he referred touching the time of the setting up or establishing should not be left to another people. So that setting up as having taken place in the time of the Savior could not have been that which was spoken of by the Prophet Daniel. And here has entered one of the leading errors that has been preached in the world for the last three hundred years by many ministers, and which has been taught for the last twelve hundred years by one of the leading societies of the world known as Christian. Jesus, when speaking with reference to the kingdom of heaven in his time, said:—

From the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.—Matt. 11:12.

It was a prediction of the Master himself with reference to the end of that state of things that had begun with the preaching of John the Baptist. It was a statement that was eminently prophetic with reference to the results of the setting up of the work in his own time, and the history of the world proves conclusively the truth of the prophecy; how that by violent hands the early disciples were taken and put to death and that the prediction was literally fulfilled. That kingdom was taken by force. If there were no other texts in the Bible to show the condition and state of the kingdom of God in those early times, and what became of it, except these two from the lips of the Savior, it ought to be sufficient for thinking men and women. That is, that the kingdom of God was set up, to a certain extent, in the time of the Savior, as represented there, but was overthrown by reason of the wickedness of the people; and you turn to the nineteenth chapter of Luke's Gospel, and to the twenty-second of Matthew's Gospel, and read the parable with reference to a certain king who made a marriage for his son, you will see further evidence of the manner the kingdom was rejected, and those to whom it had been sent would not consent for the king's son to be ruler.

It may be truly said, as illustrated in the parable:—

What will the king do with those wicked servants? He will send and he will burn their city, and destroy it, and scatter them.

It was literally done with reference to the people to whom the kingdom came in the days of the Savior. Their city was burned and the people destroyed or taken captive.

So that the settling up of the kingdom as represented first by the preaching of John the Baptist, who was the sower that went out to sow good seed in the field, teach the word of God as Jesus represents, the kingdom of heaven unto a "sower who went forth to sow," was not the work or the time spoken of by Daniel. This kingdom was preached, however, by John the Baptist at the beginning. Afterwards it was added to in the personage of Jesus; and later he began the organization by the calling of the twelve, and after they were sent the seventy were called and commissioned so that the kingdom began to take form at that early age, but soon went into apostasy, and the results are known to the readers of the nineteenth century.

The apostasy occurred more than any other one thing on account of the fact that the people did not understand the nature of the kingdom. They were looking for a temporal kingdom. They could not rise to the plane upon which is based the statement of the Apostle Paul. They were not living according to the spiritual kingdom. They were looking for ease and indulgence in this world. They were longing for a selfish triumph here over their enemies; a triumph that God has never permitted his people to have as yet in this world, and we really have no right to think that we shall ever have such a triumph as that of selfishness and ambition either in this world or in the next; that is not the work of the church in which we are engaged today. We ought not to wish, we ought not to seek for these triumphs here. Pray that, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Pray for the spiritual light and blessing, for this is what proves salvation unto the people. The kingdom of Christ is for the purpose of saving men and women from their sins and is what we have been called to do in our work in the nineteenth century. Not the building of a temporal kingdom, nor the setting up of something of an earthly nature, that will enable us to overcome somebody else in this world. Do we undertake to do that, what different is our work to that of others of whom it may be truly said, "They lord it over each other as do the Gentiles?" But instructing his disciples with reference to the work that should claim their attention, Jesus says:—

It shall not be so among you.

It is very easy, then, to determine whether a person by his work is in line with the kingdom of God or not, by noticing what he does and what he says. It is not enough that we claim to be in line with the building up of Christ's work that actually makes true building; that which is in harmony with the word of God; that which is founded in "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." The kingdom of God is to be built up of these principles and essentials, and he who undertakes to build and does not work accordingly fails, and must ever fail because God is not with him nor can he be unless a change is made to God's plan of work.

It is singular that so many persons permit themselves to be deceived touching the examination of the character of the kingdom; its character and work is as clearly marked in the world's experiences if we may believe the history, as that of any civil government. There is no other like unto the kingdom of God. It ought not to be surprising to us, here or hereafter, if we are condemned for a failure on our part, to receive and become citizens therein; for it is easy to distinguish the works of righteousness and peace from those of sin and hostility.

It is impossible for men and women to have place in the kingdom of God and be acceptable to the great King, who is the head, unless they live strictly according to the law of the kingdom, which is the Gospel. And there is no one in the church or kingdom, or out of it, who can break or violate the law without putting himself at variance with the great head of the church and Creator of all, of the greatness and glory of whom the Apostle says:—

For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power. In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ.—Colossians 2: 9-11.

We are complete in him. How? He is the head of the church; he is the one who supplies to the church its nourishment.

In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord.—Ephesians 2: 21.

And hence it is that we look to him, as a people and as a body, for that peace and comfort, the Holy Spirit of promise, which is mentioned by the Apostle as being especially characteristic of the kingdom. Further speaking of this same head of the church the Apostle says:—

Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshiping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind, and not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God. Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, which are after the doctrines and commandments of men, who teach you to touch not; taste not; handle not; all these things which are to perish with the using?—Colossians 2: 18-21. I. T.

This thought brings us a little higher. The Apostle has reference to the kingdom of God in contradistinction to the kingdoms of this world. We are not to look at it as some earthly thing in which we are to do as we please, and then expect commendation of this great one, who is the head. We cannot be supplied with that nourishment that fills all and supplies every part which is in keeping with the law, if we live according to the things of this world and of which, the Apostle again gives warning:—

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy. The philosophy of this world is not always in the road of understanding and wisdom. A short time ago I happened to hear Dr. Snow, Chancellor of the University of Kansas, lecture before a class of several hundred in Kansas City, upon the development theory. And this passage occurred to me. Those who listened to this lecture and viewed the illustrations by a magic lantern, really thought that they had gained something that was wonderful and doubtless many felt wise, when in fact they had only seen something they did not understand or comprehend. Of course they thought that they did. And I will give you an illustration to show more particularly what I mean. In describing the development from the star fish, the dog, and man beginning with the egg life, it was shown that this development occurred gradually, until one came out a star fish, another a dog, and another a man. "Originally," the lecturer stated, "the egg life of these are alike; but what makes one come out a man we cannot tell. Why the other will come out a fish we cannot tell. Why it is a fact that one will come out one kind of a star fish, and another will come out another kind of a star fish, we don't know that. But this development is wonderful."

A gentleman in the audience sent up this question, or as near as I am able to state from memory: "Since you conclude that mankind originally developed from egg life and that the race exists by reason of this evolution, how is it that in the egg life of the human being we have different races from the same egg; particularly, the African; European; the Malay, and the American races?"

"O, that is easy enough," the lecturer explained; and he asked, "Why is it that, in the development of the bovine, the buffalo of Europe is so different from the buffalo of America? Do you not know that there is a wide difference between them?"

"Why, yes."

"Well, in the same way mankind may differ."

This was the best answer the lecturer could give; but who knew in fact any more after his answer than they did before? The why as to the difference was just as far lacking in the explanation touching the bovine kind as was the first regarding the diversity of the human race. This should lead to the conclusion that the development theory in many phases is not only wrong as to the man, but in its application to the lower animals it is likely to come short also. It was easy to see that the people thought it was wonderful. And I thought of what Paul said:—

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.—Col. 2: 8.

The great object and aim of the lecturer seemed to be to follow the line of those who had essayed to account for the origin of man in some other way than had been revealed by the Creator. I do not believe that every feature of the development theory is so vague as to be easily torn to pieces, but very many of them are; but I do not propose to stop here and discuss that.

The kingdom of God is the principal thing that men and women have had their attention called to all along the ages, and it is that which you and I ought to think of in shaping the first act in life as it is first of all that is profitable to us. Now I like to represent this heavenly kingdom, its orders and powers, for the reason that in this there is no disparagement of worth and merit, but each and all have justice and equity meted from the basis of a correct judgment.

There is no possibility in that kingdom of one man treading on the toes of another, as the saying is; everyone must have his rights. The safety of one is the safety of all and the wisdom and justice of the kingdom must recognize this. If the great head of the church could not violate any laws of this kingdom, certainly you and I could not. The agency that was given to the human family at the beginning forms one of the laws of this kingdom. The people are free.

Men and women often wonder how it is that God does not put forth his hand and save this one or that one whether or not; why he is the head of this kingdom, the governor; and as such it ought not to be expected that he would transgress the law or interfere with the rights of any member of the kingdom. If the president of the United States, because he is president, should assume to send out an order contrary to our liberties, demanding that the people of the United States obey, without the sanction of the two houses of Congress, you know how quickly we would shoulder our muskets and go up to Washington. And it would not be for the purpose of sustaining the president, either. And who would not approve of such a course who loves liberty and right?

It ought not to be expected that even with a finite ruler who is liable to err and be misled that a violation of the law by him will often occur. His duties as well as those of the humblest citizen are made clear, and the rights of each are guaranteed. But how much more is this true in the kingdom of God. And I was pleased with the decision of the court touching the case that was called to your attention this morning, in the fact that the judge gathered this idea so readily as to the action in this church; and although acknowledging the fact of a governing head, he says:—

The rule of action in this church is by common consent in the church, and nothing could be imposed upon the members of this church without their consent.

That is a truth embodied in divine law, and is well set out in the findings of the Federal Court. The people of this church, the membership, need not be scared or afraid that somebody will trample upon their rights, if they will only look to the law and to the testimony. I have never been afraid of the President of the church, or the Quorum of Twelve, or the Quorum of Seventy, or the Quorum of High Priests, or any other quorum of the church, trampling upon the rights of the people of this church unless they go so far as to disregard and violate the constitutional law. That is where all the trouble lies. There is no possibility so long as we keep within the bounds of the law of the church, of any one of these individuals or quorums, or all, injuring you, or interfering with your rights, or liberties, or property, or life, or anything else. It is impossible. So I have never been alarmed, as I have heard some express themselves. I know there was such a thing done in the past; but it was done by reason of a violation of the law and constitution of the church; it was done by usurpation; it was done through setting aside that law we are bound to obey and follow if we would have acceptance with God; and there can be no lawful substitution for this either by a new law adverse to what we have or by a "living priesthood;" for God cannot change, neither his law. He does not leave his children to be guided by the caprice of men, but has called them to obey his law which is certain and true. There is no man who has ever lived to whom God has said that we should follow. It was taught, Follow me as I follow Christ, by the great Apostle; but God never placed himself at the disposition of humanity here below.

If God should say to an individual in this world, "You follow that man," then whatever the man did would be to compromise God and thus God might be compromised with evil. Don't you see the reason of it? God deals in principles; fixes the standard in truth and asks us to think. And when a few years ago I heard persons who used to belong to what was termed the Original Church of the Latter Day Saints, get up and testify that they knew that Brigham Young was a prophet, it was a puzzle to me until I discovered the secret of their error. The secret of it was simply that they had forgotten God's law and looked at the man, having closed their eyes to the law; and if an individual does that in the Church of Christ, he shows himself an unworthy member of that great body, because we are not cited to men; but the truth. We are to be judged by the law. Whoever shall overcome and keep this law,—he it is who will stand approved in the last day. No wonder that we are instructed by the Apostle to try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.—1 John 4:1.

How shall we try them, you ask? I answer, By the word of God, the law which we have received.

If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.—1 Cor. 14:37.

In other words, let his teaching be in harmony with the law. Not adverse as was this man's to whom I have referred.

I am aware that many think that the leading men of the Reorganization are not so strong as those of the old organization. I do not so read them. I look at the First Presidency of the Reorganization as abler men in many ways than the First Presidency of the old organization. They are more careful and considerate as well as spiritual men. They may not be as gifted in certain directions, in revelations and prophetic utterances; that may not be their work as it was with some of the First Presidency in the old organization; but in other ways, in the understanding of the law of Christ, and correctness of interpretation, I do not think the original Presidency was any further ahead than the present Presidency of the church. And so it is with the Quorum of Twelve. There has never been a stronger Quorum of Twelve Apostles in the nineteenth century than those that belong to the present Reorganization of the church, mentally, morally, or spiritually. Never. I say it without fear of contradiction, and without any desire to compliment the present Quorum, either; because what they are they have gained by reason of hard work and labor, and the blessing and favor as well as the chastisement of the hand of God from time to time when they did not live as they should have lived. The honor is the Lord's. The honor is due to him who is the great Head of the church. I may say the same with reference to the Quorums of Seventy. There were good men in the Quorums of Seventy in the old church; and when we say but few were the equal of the Seventy of the present day, it is all that you can say in fact in my opinion. I have been privileged to converse upon the religious question with these men, and have had the privilege of meeting some of the Twelve of the old or original organization, and comparing them with the present ones. The Twelve that are now living that belonged to the original organization do not near compare to-day with many of the Seventy of the Reorganization. Do not compare mentally or spiritually with the Seventy of the Reorganization. I only refer to this because there has an idea been entertained of some superiority of those of the old among the people, and it is a deceiver.

There is no danger to the body if we will move forward without hesitation and perform the work the Lord has asked us to do, push the preaching of the gospel in all the world and "live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." Now I want somebody to begin to think about these duties and not think somebody else is in apostasy, and that he is about ready to fall, and that another has about given up the faith because he does not happen to indorse our hobbies. Just give due credit to your brother or sister as you would have them give credit to you in this great work of the Reorganization, and trust that He who has guided the work thus far is able to continue, and the work, if we will but adhere to the principles that should govern, will overcome by and by, and salvation and redemption will come and the kingdom of God will be here. And when it comes it will not be in that we are rejoicing over the downfall of the Gentiles. I am glad President Smith made the statement touching that this morning; but when this time comes the Gentiles and everybody else will be heard saying, "Honor, and praise, and glory forever and ever to Him who sitteth upon the throne, and who hath redeemed us." Why, salvation is not just for this people, but it is for all peoples. It is not for us to say that we will isolate ourselves, and that we are going to do this in our way, and go to heaven according to our plan. We must be willing to teach and willing to hear. Be ready to do good to all men, and so perform without respect of persons.

A few mornings ago a brother rode hastily up to the sidewalk, jumped off his horse, and said,

"Brother Kelley, I want to ask you a question."

"Well, all right."

"I have heard a great many statements as to what parties had heard and I thought I would ask you. A brother told me yesterday that you said that you could interpret revelations as well as Brother Joseph Smith, and that you had just as good a right to receive revelations as the President of the church."

You may imagine my surprise, for I had never thought of such a thing, let alone saying it. The canvass of such an idea had never entered my head. It had never entered my mind that I could interpret a revelation at all. In thinking over it since I am prepared to say that I have no recollection of ever canvassing the thought in my own mind that I could interpret a revelation better than or equal to Brother Joseph, or Brother Cochran, or any other brother or sister before me. God knows I never had that thought in my mind. I have this in my mind, that neither Joseph Smith nor myself can interpret a revelation properly unless we have the Spirit of God to aid or qualify us for the work. It is a matter which does not belong to man, but to God, and man may only properly act as he is qualified by God's Spirit.

For this cause and for many others it is necessary that men should become citizens of the kingdom of God and abide its conditions:—

Righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. So let us abide and work, trusting in the Lord for help to overcome.

PROPHETS VINDICATED.

IN an able article on "Men who claim divine missions," in Herald, page 122, current volume, we find two items made to do duty in a manner which we think if carefully weighed by the good brother would not have been so used.

The first item referred to is the case of Jacob represented as a deceiver imposing upon his aged father Isaac, and fraudulently dispossessing Esau of his birthright; which, if carried to its legitimate issue, must of necessity implicate Rebekah in the practice of deceit upon her husband, and wilfully defrauding her eldest son Esau out of his paternal blessing, and placing it unjustly upon the head of her younger son Jacob, which has been done by many persons through mistaken zeal or misunderstanding of the texts.

This line of argument would lead to the unhappy conclusion, not only that the Prophet and Patriarch Isaac was deceived, notwithstanding he was in possession of the spirit of prophecy and revelation, but might be damaging to all other prophecies; and still further, it would make the Almighty a party to the transaction, and if carried to its legitimate conclusion would bring the Almighty down to the level of capricious and intriguing man, and overturn the whole theory of divine interposition in the affairs of men, as well as take the very foundation from the plan of salvation revealed from Adam to Christ.

The fact is the story of Jacob and Esau is a beautiful allegory, in which no injustice was practiced upon Esau or deceit upon Isaac, and neither deceit nor fraud practiced by Rebekah or Jacob; but that the purpose of God might stand as was declared, that "The elder shall serve the younger." If not so that Jacob was designed by the Almighty to fill the station that he did in life, even to the manner of his birth, why was he not born first? and thus avoid the necessity of a visible manifestation of an election or choice on the part of the Almighty.

We are informed in Doctrine and Covenants, section 2, that the works, designs, and purposes of the Almighty never fail; therefore, that man might learn to bend his will to the decrees of heaven this and other allegories in the Scriptures were given. We might further reason, why was a Reuben first born to Jacob, and why was he displaced by the seed of Joseph? Surely his life was foreseen by the Almighty. As to the seed of Joseph, we might ask, why was Ephraim set before Manasseh? We have in the case of Jacob and Esau endeavored to give our views briefly in Herald, September 16, 1896, and will therefore not further enlarge upon it here.

The second item to which we wish to call attention is the reference had to the character of the prophet that lived near Bethel, as found in 1 Kings, chapter 13, verses 7 to 19, of whom it is said, he was a false prophet. The eighteenth verse of said chapter King James' translation reads as follows:—

He said unto him, I am a prophet also as thou art; and an angel spake unto me by the word of the Lord, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him.

From the reading of this chapter from the seventh to the thirty-second verses inclusive, if nothing else was given upon the subject, we would be driven to the conclusion that the prophet, calling the man back was not a false prophet, for he not only holds the prophet from Judah in great reverence, but he also prophesied in the name of the Lord concerning him saying:—

Thus saith the Lord, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the Lord, and hast not kept the commandment which the Lord thy God commanded thee, but camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place, of the which the Lord did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcass shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.—1 Kings 13: 21, 22.

All of which literally came to pass. It is evident, however, that a mistake somewhere exists. By turning to the Inspired Translation we find it declared in the eighteenth verse that he was directed by the angel of the Lord to try or prove him, and he so informs him of the fact. But the prophet from Judah no doubt thought the test was ended when he refused to turn aside, or to eat by the way, and felt himself at liberty (after proving himself to the prophet) to turn aside before his journey was completed, which we think will appear from the determination of the prophet, as at first shown, to fulfill the word of the Lord, and from the eighteenth verse, according to the Inspired Translation, which reads thus:—

He said unto him, I am a prophet also, even as thou, and an angel spake unto me by the word of the Lord, saying, Bring him back with thee unto thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water, that I may prove him; and he lied not unto him.

ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN.

*To the Saints of the Northern Illinois and Wisconsin Mission; Greeting:—*Having been placed in charge of the above mission, I take this means of forming a better acquaintance with all the saints and friends in the mission. Dear saints, there has a new era dawned upon the history of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, that I and many others have hoped and prayed for so many years. It was witnessed on the 12th of April in the conference at Lamoni, Iowa, that the church was no longer a remnant; the leading quorums were filled, and the Spirit of God resting on the congregation, bearing witness to many that God was well pleased with his servants and the position they occupied before him. And it is to be hoped all will take new courage and arise and shake the coals from our garments, and seek to do something that will help to move the cause of Zion, that the mission year before us may be a successful one, and many be added to the church. To that end I shall labor, hope, and pray. Those who have been appointed as laborers with me in the mission are strangers to each other in mission work; but I trust our acquaintance will be pleasant, and for the good of all. I have no personal feelings to be gratified; all my desire is that all should be respected and dealt with in mercy and in accordance with the law and order and usages of the church.

I have placed in charge of Wisconsin Bro. W. A. McDowell; all laborers in that part of the mission will please report to him and he to me, as rules of reporting demand. Bro. F. M. Cooper will have charge of missionary work in Northern Illinois district, devoting as much time in the city of Chicago as circumstances may demand or wisdom direct. All missionary laborers in the above-named district will please report to him. Bro. T. J. Sheldon will have charge of the missionary work in the Kewanee district, and all of Northern Illinois that may not be included in above-named district; all associated laborers to report to him.

We ask for the cooperation of all local laborers of the districts and branches, saints and friends, to assist in the great missionary work now before us, that much good may come to the church. I expect to be in the mission as soon as circumstances will permit; hope to meet with the saints at as many conferences as I can and become better acquainted with the saints and mission. I do not expect to locate at any one place, but travel and labor in the mission as the Spirit and wisdom may direct.

Dear saints, let us labor together as one, that success may attend.

Your servant and fellow laborer for final triumph,
JOHN H. LAKE.

TEMPLE P. O., Ohio, home address.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA, OHIO, ETC.

To the Officers and Members of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and Northeastern Kentucky; Greeting:—Having been reappointed in charge of the above-named mission, I herewith invite your hearty support and cooperation during the current year. The recent General Conference and its grand results is indeed very gratifying and comforting to those of us who for many years have been fasting and praying and looking forward with anticipation to the day when our heavenly Father would complete the organization of the church by filling up the vacancies in the leading quorums. The fact that our prayers have been answered and the desires of our hearts have been realized, should infuse new life in us and inspire us to sacrifice and labor with greater diligence to bring our fellow men to a knowledge of God and his Christ through the preaching of the gospel.

Truly the field is white and ready to harvest. Therefore, let us thrust in our sickle and reap with a will to gather in the golden grain. We sincerely hope that the local officers will ably second the efforts of the traveling ministry, that together we may be colaborers with Christ. The traveling missionaries are hereby admonished not to interfere with local affairs, only when directed to regulate district and branch affairs by the proper authorities. Let us all strive to work in harmony with the divine injunction which says, "The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—the Twelve and the Seventy, under their direction, together with such High Priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers."—Book of Doctrine and Covenants, page 355.

It will require temporal means to successfully carry on the work committed to our care; hence, send your tithes and free-will offerings to the Bishop's agents in your respective districts, as the Lord shall prosper you. The most of you have done nobly in the past, but let us all try to do better the present year. The following faithful brethren have been assigned to labor in the mission: R. Etzenhouser, J. C. Foss, James Moler, L. R. Devore, D. L. Shinn, H. E. Moler, J. L. Goodrich, G. H. Godbey, F. J. Ebeling, F. C. Smith, S. J. Jeffers, and Joseph Biggs. The missionaries and the missionary in charge have labored harmoniously together in the past, and we hope that the pleasant relationship will continue in future. I shall expect a report from the ministry as heretofore, once every quarter. All those who desire preaching, notify me by addressing me at Temple, Lake County, Ohio.

Dear saints, let us all labor with renewed diligence the present conference year, and let us pray earnestly that great success attend our weak efforts.

Yours in the conflict,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

NORTHEAST AND NORTHWEST KANSAS.

To the Ministry and Saints in Northeast and Northwest Kansas Districts; Greeting:—Having been reappointed in charge in the above mission, I wish to call the attention of those concerned to a few matters of importance pertaining to our work.

First, you will notice by report of annual conference that the number of General Conference appointees has been reduced to three, Brn. E. A. Davis, L. F. Johnson, and the writer. This weakening of our ministerial force is partly and happily condoned for by the generous offer of Brn. J. W. Hudgens and N. S. Dunnington to put in their entire time in the work.

Second, respecting the purchase of a tent

by and for the Northeast Kansas district, this will be impracticable at the present time, for two reasons: first, the amount donated, $50, is insufficient; second, the number of laborers assigned us is too few to conduct tent work. By another year, we may hope the tent fund and the numbers of workers may increase so that we may procure and use a tent.

Third, Brn. E. A. Davis and J. W. Hudgens will be associated together in Northeast Kansas district, with the understanding that Bro. Davis shall continue, as previously arranged, to labor in Atchison and vicinity, and that Bro. J. W. Hudgens hold himself in readiness to respond to requests for preaching in the various parts of the district. Bro. P. Cadwell, president of district, and others interested, will please note. Bro. J. W. Hudgens' address is Baker, Kansas.

Bro. N. S. Dunnington and the writer will reach the Northwest Kansas district as early in June as possible, with the expectation of working with the tent. We wish to use it where the labor done will be most effective. We wait determination of this until consultation can be had with Bro. H. Hart, president of the district, and further information is received as to what place or places would best be worked.

Bro. L. F. Johnson will be left at liberty to continue his labors in Northwest Kansas district and answer such calls as may be made to him for preaching in that district.

April 19 the writer came to Maysville, Missouri, at the solicitation of Elder J. M. Terry, to defend the cause against the attack of Mr. William Kirby. To-night we begin a debate of nine evenings in the Latter Day Saints' church near Maysville. This detention from my own field seemed unavoidable. In justice to the saints and faith here, a defense was demanded. I hope, however, Missouri, in the matter of ministerial aid, will accept the doctrine of "reciprocity" and practice it, by giving us help sometime.

Mail sent to Fanning, Kansas, any time, will reach me.

Very truly,

W. S. PENDER

FREMONT DISTRICT.

To the Saints of Fremont District, Greeting; Dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord:—Having been returned by the direction of the leading authorities of the church to labor with you in the interest of this great work that is so dear to our hearts, and that we so much love, I greet you again with joy, and call upon you once more in the name of our loving Master, to come forward to the help of his cause; let us labor together in love and unity, as in the past fourteen years. God has wonderfully blessed us, and poured out his Spirit upon us, filling our hearts with joy, and has added many precious souls to our number, who have nobly and willingly stepped out and assisted us as best they could, both by precept and example to move the work along.

There has never been any conflict or jar between us and the authorities of the district. We have labored harmoniously together all these years; and trust that in future there shall not anything take place to mar our peace; nothing interdictory to hinder the onward march of the work; and to this end let us labor together in the spirit of the Master. And when we pray, let us pray from the heart, as the great preceptor taught, saying, "Father forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those that trespass against us."

What we have done in the past has been in all "good conscience before God," and toward all; having in view only the good of the work, and the general good of all my brothers and sisters. Thanking you for your support in past years, still trusting that I may through the grace of God be able to merit your confidence and love in the coming years. And I herewith tender my sincere thanks to the dear saints of the Nodaway district, and shall ever remember the good times had with you in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, for your good desires towards me, and liberality in administering to my temporal necessities. May God our Father reward you both here and in the hereafter, is my earnest prayer.

We met Bro. D. Hougas, the president of this district, with Brn. W. N. Gaylord and James Roberts, of Shenandoah, with Elder William Leeka and wife, of Thurman, here yesterday, Sunday, May 3, to attend the dedication of the church bought by the saints of this place. Some of the leading brethren of the branch, with the advise and consent of all, have assumed the responsibility; and have a clear deed to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. And many, by their works and good intentions manifested yesterday, showed that they were determined to stand by these brethren, and thus help to shoulder the burden.

The sermon in the morning was by Elder D. Hougas; it was timely, fitting, and opportune. Dedicatory prayer by Elder H. Kemp. The Spirit of the Master was present in power. In the afternoon fellowship meeting; all seemed to be imbued with God's Holy Spirit, and as they rose one after the other, and spoke of the goodness of God to them, tears of gratitude coursed down the cheeks of nearly all in the house, thanking our heavenly Father for his matchless goodness and infinite wisdom in opening up the way for them to get a house in which to worship the Lord their God. Many not of the church rejoiced with us, and congratulated us in being so fortunate, and expressed themselves better satisfied with our work, and hoped to know both us and the work better in the future.

Thus the work moves on. God is moving amidst the people by the power of his spirit; and we are hopeful for the work in this place. We shall stay and do what we can, preaching the word in this house.

God will speed the work in all the land and nations of the earth.

Yours most truly,
HENRY KEMP.

To the Saints of Decatur District; Greeting:— Beloved in the Lord, permit me to salute you in the grace of our blessed Master, and to assure you of my deep anxiety for the spread and establishment of our holy cause in righteousness. I felt at the time your vote was given, and still feel the weight and grave responsibility of the office of pastor over such an important charge as this district; and especially so on coming into touch with all parts or sections of the district, and discovering so much that is of an unfavorable character to prosperity, demanding immediate attention in regulating that the ill may be removed and the good have ample opportunity of developing. My success in accomplishing the needed work in this district will largely depend upon the liberty and privileges granted in the discharge of duty and the assistance and cooperation of both members and officers within the limits of the district, and the guidance of the Holy Spirit. I feel somewhat keenly embarrassments not experienced by my predecessor in office; however, I shall seek to freely, earnestly, and humbly give to this important work my undivided time and the full benefit of my long and active service in the cause of Christ.

The Lord having kindly spoken to us in the law concerning the care and government of branches and districts as follows: "In the meantime, branches and their officers, and districts and their officers, are to be considered as provided for by my law to carry on the work of the ministry in caring for the membership of the church, and to relieve the Twelve and Seventy from the vexation and anxiety of looking after local organizations when affected."—D. C. p. 347.

Again: "In matters of personal importance and conduct arising in branches or districts, the authorities of those branches or districts should be authorized and permitted to settle them."—D. C. p. 349.

I cheerfully assent to the provisions of the law, and if "permitted" will try to faithfully comply with its requirements. When ministerial assistance is required by the branches (or other localities of the district), and timely notice is given me, I will make the effort to supply the needed help promptly upon the application.

All local ministers are respectfully urged to thoughtfully and carefully consider the necessity and importance of employing their time in teaching and preaching the gospel in their several localities, that their friends and neighbors shall have ample opportunity of hearing the angel's message and prepare themselves for the kingdom and coming of the Son of God.

Those who have been chosen as branch officers will find it of great benefit in their labor of love that they shall avoid hasty or harsh expressions, so that in all their ministrations they shall be kindly disposed and considerate of the feelings of all, even of those who need to be chided for folly, or those whose acts have to be rebuked for sinful actions. Those having the watchcare of branches will seek to be diligent and self-sacrificing in providing for all the regular meetings, and to see that proper persons who are prompt, faithful, and spiritual are in charge; that whenever the celebration of the sacrament is to be observed, that bread and wine, as required, be provided, and that a qualified officer is present to administer. No branch officer should neglect his duties and requirements in his branch to fill outside calls. Let me impress upon the attention of branch officers the paramount importance and great responsibility that rests upon them to see that the household of faith shall be constantly and fully taught in all the principles of the gospel, as also the necessity of the several duties required of the individual member. There would be consistency and wisdom in those ministers who teach, either in public or in private, that they should be examples of purity and cleanliness; for the Lord hath counseled: "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord."—D. C. p. 137. This includes all pertaining to mind and body, act and conversation. We cannot be too careful about this matter, for lately the Lord said: "Be clean."—D. C. p. 346. In the rise of the church the Word of Wisdom was: "And again, strong drinks are not for the belly, but for the washing of your bodies. And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. And again, hot drinks are not for the body or belly."—D. C. p. 245. The latest word of advice to us reads, "Men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, be ye clean in your bodies and in your clothing; let your garments be of a sober character and free from excess of ornamentation. Avoid the use of tobacco, and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example."—D. C. p. 344. I assure one and all that it is pleasing to our heavenly Father that we hear him in all things and abide his counsel and instruction.

Ordination is not a badge of reward for dress parade exhibition, but is a means of usefulness to the uplifting of humanity and doing good in the church of the living God.

Should there arise misunderstanding, observe the following: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."—Eph. 4:26; see also Matt. 5:21-26. In this connection observe God's direction: "I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men."—D. and C. p. 192. In trouble have not confidants; talk first with the offender plainly but kindly, if you are not successful of amicable settlement, call in another (the teacher) to aid you; if still no adjustment, you may lay it before the elders; but it is both unwise and unlawful to spread one's trouble. Be not guilty of doing that which you are commanded not to do; and be equally sure that you do not omit to do that which is commanded you to do.

I feel the premonition of the Spirit, that the promise—the hastening time is near, yea, very near; and that the saints are beginning to be obedient to the invitation, "Come up higher." I would therefore exhort that one and all seek to have part in the Lord's wonderful work; "faith without works is dead."

All can be helpers by sending your tithes or freewill offering to David Dancer or E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa, or hand the same to me; it would be an exhibition of our confidence in the work, if the two thousand names of this district should appear upon the Bishop's report for this year. Do not hesitate on account of the smallness that shall appear opposite your name, so that the gift is all that you can afford, and it is done with an eye single to the service of God.

It would be advisable that all meetings and ministrations in branches be with the consent and knowledge of those in charge; however, let not there be too particular straining for authority; let not the work suffer because of red-ribbon practice or iron-clad rule; but adopt the ancient usage "with love; in honor preferring one another," for all are "equally honorable."

I heartily indorse the fifth paragraph of J. R. Lambert's "pastoral" in Herald, for April 28, 1897, and trust that none will go contrary to instruction as to "fitness and preparation" for baptism; trouble and shame can be saved to the church by being careful and obedient.

To all saints let me urge: "See that you love one another; cease to be covetous; learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires; cease to be idle; cease to be unclean; cease to find fault one with another; cease to sleep longer than is needful; retire to thy bed early, that ye may not be weary; arise early, that your bodies and your minds may be invigorated; and above all things, clothe yourselves with the bonds of charity, as with a mantle, which is the bond of perfectness and peace; pray always, that you may not faint until I come."—D. C. p. 242.

We are entitled to the blessings of God only on condition that we keep his law, not otherwise. Let the men of the church avoid familiarity with females, likewise let the women of the church avoid familiarity with men; then the church will be saved mortification by lapses from virtue, and the sin of the world rebuked. Vie not with each other in what is done for place, or praise of men, but the reverse, that you may please God, and like Moroni, say in your soul, "I seek not for power, but to pull it down." Let the uplifting and sustaining of "all truth" be the sole object of your labor. As a servant of Christ I bid you God speed.

ROBT. M. ELVIN, Dist. Pres.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

To the Saints in Northern District of California; Greeting:—No doubt you are all rejoicing over the complete organization and our Father's love and watchcare. You may justly feel proud of the church, and more so that you are members of the true and only true church "upon the face of the whole earth." I rejoice exceedingly with you that God heard our prayers, respected our fasting, and granted that which we sought. Do we appreciate enough our privileges? While thousands are in doubt and uncertainty, wrapped in midnight darkness, we are permitted to bask in his true light and listen to his guiding voice.

While the world cries, "Delusion," "False prophet," we are like the old lady who dropped a bundle of bills wrapped in "straw" paper on Broadway, New York, on April first. Because none knew the contents of that paper, they kicked it from side to side of the sidewalk, and when she picked it up, knowing what it contained, they cried, "April fool." But who was fooled? And that is our position to-day spiritually; we know what we have. Proper investigation would have revealed the contents of the "straw paper" SURE, and so with this work of God. "If any man will do his will he SHALL KNOW." We have a work to do to acquit ourselves before God.

We need funds to supply the ministers' families, and also the needy, worthy poor. Let us not act like the world, let us walk in the light of our Father.

I have been placed here by the Bishop of God's true church to look after the poor among us, and also the families of the ministers. Will you help me to do so?

I thank you for the response you have made to my appeals before, and I now urge you to aid me in the performance of this solemn trust.

May God bless and prosper you, and give you needed grace to walk as he would have you.

In bonds,

CHAS. A. PARKIN,
Bishop's Agent.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

AZTEC WRITINGS IN IOWA.

THE archæological museum at the Ohio State University has been enriched by a find of great rarity and value. A fortunate chance has placed it in possession of an Aztec manuscript, the fifth so far as known in existence in the entire world, and the only one now in America, the others all being in European museums.

The story of the unearthing of this remarkable relic and the manner in which it came into the hands of the university is highly interesting. On September 2 last [1896], J. T. Griffith, a laboring man of Fairfield, Iowa, in the employ of the water works of that city while engaged in excavating, brought to light what was apparently an ordinary chunk of wood, except that its surface was encrusted with a coating of pitch. The object was found about three feet below the surface, the dimensions being a foot in length by eight inches in width and five or six inches in thickness. A stroke with the pick caused it to break open, revealing a space that had been scooped out of the center, in which lay a shell of birch bark, covered on one side with strange looking hieroglyphics.

The laborer was intelligent enough to realize that the find was of some value, and refrained from the vandalism of which many uneducated workmen might have been guilty. He carefully preserved the curious object, and later it was brought to the attention of Miss Emma Clarke of the same city, who became interested in having scientific judgment passed upon it. She laid the matter before Professor Edwin Sparks of the University of Chicago. The latter gentleman, knowing of the valuable collection in the possession of the Ohio Archæological Society and the State University, and of the zeal of the curator of the same, Professor Warren Moorehead, to secure additions to the museum, referred Miss Clarke to him.

From the description which the lady sent to Professor Moorehead, he concluded that the find was nothing less than an Aztec manuscript, and with the instinct of the true archæologist, his fingers itched to get hold of the treasure. Several letters passed between the curator and Miss Clarke, with the result that the relic was finally forwarded to the Ohio Archæological Society, being received at the college a few days ago.

The bark is of extreme thinness, and is of the character which was ordinarily employed by the Aztecs in their writings. The hieroglyphics are made with reed pigment, and remain fresh and distinct. The natural color of the bark is also well preserved. The three pieces into which the manuscript is divided are from three to four inches long and from two to three inches wide. The edges are broken in two or three places, impairing a portion of the writing. As soon as Professor Moorehead received the relic he telegraphed to Mr. Griffith, asking him to dig again and see if he could not find the missing fragments. The latter replied that he had made a search for them at the time of the discovery, but without success.

The wooden case in which the manuscript was inclosed is in a fair state of preservation. It is of hickory and the inside is charred. It had been rudely fashioned with a stone ax. But for the coating of pitch it must have long since gone to decay and its precious contents with it. Accompanying the relic were two photographs of the spot on which it was found. The scene is an open prairie, evidently the extreme suburbs of the little city. All doubt is set at rest as to the character of the relic. Its Aztec origin was speedily determined upon examination by Professor Moorehead, whose extensive researches in archæology in connection with the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., makes him familiar with the signs employed by this race in their writings. Lest any suspicion should attach to the genuineness of the manuscript a letter was received with the latter, signed by a number of prominent citizens of Fairfield, testifying to Mr. Griffith's veracity and trustworthiness. This is unnecessary, however, as the relic on the face of it is what it purports to be. In order to have perpetrated such a fraud Mr. Griffith must have been an Aztec scholar. There are but three works extant upon this branch of archæological science, and the copies are very rare and expensive. It is unlikely that any laboring man would have had the knowledge of the existence of these books let alone access to them. However, this point does not need to be discussed, as imposture is removed beyond the bounds of possibility.

Many interesting questions are aroused at sight of this fragmentary reminder of an extinct people. The one that most naturally suggests itself is in regard to the translation of the strange characters. What does the writing say? The most learned scholar is obliged to shake his head at this inquiry. The sad fate of an eminent archæologist of Philadelphia is recalled. Dr. H. D. Cresson was a graduate of two schools of medicine and a painter of rare ability, who had exhibited and won recognition as an artist in Paris. He was also interested in other branches of science and art, and was connected with the Smithsonian Institution at the time Professor Moorehead was there. The doctor took up the study of an Aztec manuscript and spent years in the vain attempt to decipher it. Too close application to the work finally unbalanced his mind, and while suffering from mental aberration he shot himself in Central Park, New York, in 1884.

Professor Moorehead will send the manuscript to the Smithsonian Institution and have it passed upon by the archaeological authorities there. He does not expect, though, that they will be able to read it, as this feat has not been accomplished in the case of any of the other Aztec manuscripts in existence. He believes that the time is coming, however, when they will give up their secret. It will be remembered that it has only been within recent years that scholars have been able to read the Egyptian hieroglyphics. Dr. Daniel G. Brinton, of the museum of the University of Pennsylvania, the greatest living Aztec student, gives it as his opinion that instead of consisting of an alphabet the language is phonetic, like the Chinese, each character signifying an idea.

A gleam of light is thrown upon the manuscript in question by Professor Moorehead. It is no doubt of religious significance. The circle of spots which surrounds the human figure is known to be the sun symbol. The figure is evidently meant to signify a priest of the sun or a chief protected by the sun. On the upper fragment is a house-like figure, which denotes a temple. The semi-circle of spots above it shows that it is a temple of the sun.

As to the probable age of the manuscript, it cannot be less than 400 years. At the time of the Spanish conquest, in 1500, the Aztec civilization in Mexico was stamped out, their records were destroyed by the fanatical priests and no vestige of their nationality allowed to remain. All the literature, as far as known, except the few fragments of which mention has been made, were sacrificed. No writing was done by the Aztecs after they were crushed by the Spanish conquerors. How much the manuscript in question may have antedated this event is a matter of conjecture.

Another question that may be asked is as to how the manuscript came to be found as far north as Iowa, when the scene of the old Aztec civilization was no nearer to the spot than the present boundary line of Mexico. This might be accounted for in two ways. It was either carried by an expedition of Aztecs into the present territory of Southern Iowa, or was captured and borne away by Indian tribes during their wars with this semi-civilized nation. In whatever manner it came to the location in which it lay buried for centuries, it must have been carried a distance of not less than 2,000 miles. The Indians employed picture writing in recording their deeds, using for the purpose buffalo skins, bark and other substances. The Aztec manuscript is not to be confused, however, with this class of relics, as it belongs to a higher civilization, and in the discerning eye of the archaeological scholar has nothing in common with Indian records.

The find is in every way a unique one, adding, as has already been stated, a fifth Aztec manuscript to the possessions of the world. The others are all larger than this one, although Professor Moorehead regards it as a very fine specimen. The characters are the same as the manuscripts in possession of the famous Trocadero Museum at Paris, the Vatican Museum at Rome, and the Berlin Museum. This new piece of Aztec writing is placed under an air-tight glass and inclosed in a frame. In this manner it will be sent to the Smithsonian Institution, and after its return will be preserved in the archaeological museum of the State University at Orton Hall.—Columbus Dispatch.

USEFUL INFORMATION ABOUT GREECE.

It had a population of 2,187,208 at the census of 1890.

It is called "Hellas" by its people.

The mean temperature of Greece is 64° Fahrenheit, but it is hot there in summer.

No part of Greece is forty miles from the sea or ten from the hills.

About one-half of the population are agriculturists and shepherds.

It has an area of 25,000 square miles, or less than half that of Illinois, with about the present population of Indiana, or less.

The Greek flag is a white cross on a blue ground—the Bavarian colors and the Greek cross.

Greece has few rivers and many hills. None of the former is navigable, and many of the latter are fortified.

Its boundary limits were determined by an arrangement among Great Britain, France, Russia, and Turkey, concluded at Constantinople on July 21, 1832, but the Turks never surrendered all of the territory that treaty calls for by 5,000 square miles and half a million of Greek people.

Only about 70,000 of the inhabitants speak any language other than Greek, and only about 20,000 profess any religion other than the orthodox Greek Church.

The chief characteristics of the average Greek are his inquisitiveness, fondness for excitement, love of discussion, desire for knowledge, an aptitude for learning, and aggressive patriotism.

The climate has two striking peculiarities—the heat in summer and the cold in winter are far more intense than those of any other country in the world lying in the same latitude. Gell once remarked that in traveling through the Morea in March he found "summer in Messenia, spring in Laconia, and winter in Arcadia, without having moved beyond a radius of fifty miles."

Greece is now engaged in a war struggle with her deadly enemy, who outnumbers her more than twelve to one in population.—Ex.

CHARITY IN JUDGING CHARACTER.

Hasty judgment of the actions of others is dangerous and often unjust. We measure too much by some superficial appearance, and condemn hastily, when, if we but knew and understood the motives and reasons, we would warmly approve. We sometimes say of some one, "That pain, sorrow or loss has not deeply affected him." But we do not know. It is like the death of a few of the soldiers in front of a regiment. The broken ranks close up again into the solid phalanx and the loss is not apparent. There may be no disorganization, no surrender, no craving for pity, no display of despair. It is like the calm, dazzling play of the waves warmed by the morning's sun after a night of storm and disaster. There is no sign of the wreck; the tide has carried the debris away far out on the ocean; the treacherous water has swallowed all signs and tokens of the night's awful work. We see only the fairness of the morning, not the suffering of the night. Let us be charitable in our judgment and condemn not when we do not know.—Ladies' Home Journal.

OLIVER COWDERY.

OLIVER COWDERY was called of God, and by choosing and ordination, was an elder and an apostle in the church; which office and calling we suppose he would have continued to hold, had he remained faithful, to the end of his life.

In June, 1829, the Lord by revelation said to him and to David Whitmer: "By the way of commandment; . . . I command all men everywhere to repent, and I speak unto you, even as unto Paul mine apostle, for you are called even with that same calling with which he was called."

The Lord here called Paul his "apostle," and states quite clearly that both Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer were called to the same calling.

In section seventeen, Doctrine and Covenants, paragraph one, it is stated that both Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were called apostles; Joseph to be the first elder, and Oliver to be the second elder of the church. Section nineteen, paragraph three, it is stated of Joseph Smith that he should be ordained by "Oliver Cowdery, mine apostle," that each having been ordained under the hand of the other, by the grace and command of Jesus Christ, should be an elder unto the church. In section twenty-seven, paragraph three, the revelation states that Peter, James, and John had been sent to Joseph and Oliver, thus:—

By whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry.

Oliver Cowdery was for a time a writer for Joseph Smith, as well as an associate elder and minister in preaching the word. By revelation given March, 1831, John Whitmer was selected to be the recorder and historian, and Oliver relieved of that duty, and directed to engage in some other work, which was to do selecting, writing, and printing books for the church. (Sec. 55, par. 2.) Afterward he was to assist W. W. Phelps in that work. (Sec. 57, par. 5.) Still later, he was connected with Bishop Newel K. Whitney, assisting him in the temporal affairs of the church.

At the organization of the High Council, in 1834, Oliver Cowdery, with others, was chosen one of the standing High Council of High Priests; hence he was then an high priest, as well as elder and apostle.

The revelation of 1841 states that William Law was put in the place once occupied by Oliver Cowdery. From all this we conclude that Oliver Cowdery was an elder, apostle, high priest, and counselor, acting in places of trust and usefulness in the church; but was never one of the Twelve Disciples, or Quorum of the Twelve. He was a preacher, scribe, historian, printer, and recorder, and labored in the Bishopric as an assistant. By command of God he with David Whitmer were associated in selecting the Twelve. Martin Harris acted with them, but by what authority is not stated. This command to choose other apostles did not affect the calling and authority which Joseph and Oliver held as apostles, special witnesses, sent of God. They were commanded to select twelve to form the Quorum of Twelve, the Traveling High Council.

NAUVOO REUNION.

WE are advised by Bro. F. M. Weld, President of the Nauvoo district and chairman of the Nauvoo reunion committee, that the Bluff Park reunion grounds have been obtained for the coming Nauvoo reunion, and that it will be held from August 19 to September 2, at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, opposite Nauvoo.

The committee has done well in selecting a location for this reunion. The grounds are well located, high and dry, beautiful for situation, overlooking the Mississippi River and Nauvoo, the beautiful city. All who attended last year were delighted with the scenery and surroundings and well pleased with the ample accommodations and general facilities afforded for quiet and healthful recreation. The visits of the saints and the preaching of the elders had good effect and left impressions far-reaching for good.

We trust that the Bluff Park reunion will receive a fair share of the patronage of those who contemplate spending a portion of the warm season of the year in attendance at some of the reunion camp meetings. Room will be provided in abundance, in tent or cottage, and all who go may be assured of a good time. The scenery from the Bluff is among the finest on the continent, and one never tires of the magnificent view afforded by the wide sweep of the winding river basin surrounded by hills on every side, and rendered doubly interesting by the sight and history of Nauvoo.

The committee's announcement will appear in due time. Look out for it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Please harmonize Book of Mormon, chapter 4:8, where it is written "that none other people knoweth our language, therefore he hath prepared means for the interpretation thereof;" with the statement found on page 19, Church History, where Martin Harris said Anthon gave him a certificate certifying that the translation was correct and offered to translate the book, evidently believing he could do so from the characters he had seen and examined the translation. In Isaiah the learned is to say, when asked to read the words of the book, "I cannot;" but according to Harris he did.

Ans.—We see nothing in the passages cited calling for an attempt to reconcile them.

The statement in the Book of Mormon, is to the effect that at that time there were none except the people whom the prophet represented who knew the language. It is in the present tense. Notwithstanding this, there was to be a "means prepared" for the interpretation of the plates when the time came. Professor Anthon stated that the characters were a composite of four,—Egyptian, Chaldaic, Assyrian, and Arabic, and that the translation shown him was more correct than any he had seen. The plates were written in the reformed Egyptian by the recorder. Professor Anthon's statement corroborates this.

The Prophecy of Isaiah does not say that the learned man should not know the nature of the characters, the hieroglyphics of the book, but that he could not read a sealed book. Martin Harris states on this same nineteenth page of the history that Anthon said to him, "I cannot read a sealed book."

With the motive of Mr. Anthon in requesting Martin Harris to bring the "book" to him, or make the presumption that he could have read the book, or that he believed he could, we have nothing to do.

We do not know that things which have occurred could have been different, or that what did not occur, might have been. The providences of God have shaped the world; but we finite beings have no means of determining why such and such things were not different. We may speculate about them, raise queries about them, worry and fret over them, but they remain unexplained and inexorable just the same. To us it is evident that the part performed by the visit of Martin Harris to Professor Anthon, was one of the things referred to in the Book of Mormon as included in the things called "means" named in the passage referred to, with that we are contented, because we see no way now to believe it otherwise intended.

DISASTERS.

STORMS, earthquakes, plagues, etc., are added to the news of war, intrigue, commotion, and general disaster, and of which we can make but very incomplete statements in passing notices. Who and what shall be able to stand—to abide the tests that are to determinate the character and fate of men and their institutions?

London, May 13.—The continent is suffering severely from a heavy snowfall, frosts, and storms. In all the mountain districts of Austria and Germany the damage to fruit trees has been very great. On Tuesday a heavy snowstorm swept over Hamburg, Cologne, and Nancy. Widespread injury has been done to the vineyards in the districts of Bordeaux, Angoulême, and Burgundy. In most of these sections the temperature this season has been 11 degrees below the average.

Paris, May 13.—A dispatch from Auxerre, the center of the wine-growing district of the Department of Yonne, says there was a general and sudden frost last night and the night before, destroying the crops of vines, fruit, and vegetables. The amount of damage done in the Department of Yonne is estimated at 20,000,000 francs ($4,000,000). The inhabitants are in consternation.

London, May 13.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Bombay says that the bubonic plague is making fearful ravages in the Cutchmandvi district, where there have been 2,000 deaths in a fortnight. Half the population has fled.

Melbourne, May 10.—A severe seismic disturbance took place to-day in South Australia and Victoria. The shock was intermittent, and continued for several minutes.

Simla, British India, May 10.—A British officer and thirty coolies have been killed by an avalanche on the Sprinagarleh road.

HOWEVER widely we may differ with doctrines taught by Utah Mormon elders, we agree with them in belief that they have rights in common with others under the law; also with Governor Johnston, of Alabama, who has promised them protection under the State Constitution. He has qualifications for the office that some governors have not had:—

Montgomery, Ala., May 4.—One night last week some residents of Jackson County carried into the woods, stripped, and severely whipped two Mormon elders. The elders subsequently appealed to Governor Johnston for protection, saying that they had been threatened with death if they remained in the State. The Governor has promised to protect them, and has instructed the sheriff of the county to make them his special charge. The Governor says the Constitution of the State guarantees religious liberty and that the Mormons are entitled to it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH left home on Wednesday, the 12th, for East Delavan, Wisconsin, stopping enroute at Plano and Sandwich, Illinois.

Bro. L. P. Hansen, of Manti, Utah, writes that we did not give his meaning correctly in stating in HERALD of the 28th that he desired the saints to pray for the Scandinavian people "in the United States and in the Fatherland." Bro. Hansen thinks the people in Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, who have not one ministerial representative of the church and who have been sorely deceived by the Brighamites, need to be especially remembered before the Lord, that he may send shepherds to lead them into the true fold and to feed and care for them. His heart is turned toward his brethren and sisters in Europe, and he would gladly go and teach them the true way, were it possible for him to do so. We trust that Bro. Hansen's desires for the good of his brethren abroad will be realized; and we doubt not that again the truth will spread among the Scandinavian people abroad. Truth crushed to earth in America has risen, phoenix like, from the errors that seemed for a time almost to destroy it. We doubt not that we shall see Scandinavia again alive with faithful shepherds and abundant flocks of the sheep of Israel. God will bring it to pass in his own good time, we believe. Bro. Hansen's request should be heeded and prayer be made that the Lord may prepare the way and again establish the work in the lands where once it was triumphant.

Bro. F. M. Weld wrote from Montrose, Iowa, the 13th. He had been looking after some Utah elders, of whom he would write later. It seems that with them as with others the battle is on. Success for our cause and defeat for them is in their favor, because we bring them truth.

Bro. R. J. Anthony started for the Rocky Mountain mission on Tuesday, the 11th, going directly to Salt Lake City, Utah. Bro. Anthony located his family at headquarters early in April, just previous to the late conference, hence his permanent address is now Lamoni, Iowa. We are glad to welcome him and his family to citizenship in the city of the saints.

Bro. J. W. Wight left home on the 14th inst. for his field, the Rocky Mountain mission, going via Western Iowa points, where he will make brief stops enroute. The good wishes of many go with and follow him into the difficult mission over which he has been given charge.

From the Maysville, Missouri, Pilot, of the 6th inst, sent us by Bro. C. P. Faul, we learn that Bro. W. S. Pender was successfully defending the work from attacks upon it by Kirby, the so-called exposé of Mormonism. The editor thinks Mr. Kirby has a task before him in his undertaking to place the Reorganization in the light in which he seeks to place it before the people. But some men are persistent for a long time, even in the face of repeated series of failures, so persistent indeed that the conclusion that enmity actuates them seems sometimes hard to resist.

Bro. J. D. Erwin was at Steadham, Alabama, last writing, May 6, and was feeling well in the work. He states that the Utah elders in that region flatly refuse to discuss the issues with our representative men, which is curious to Bro. J. D. who thinks somewhat as we do that if their cause was defensible, they surely ought to stand by it.

Brn. W. H. Kelley and J. H. Lake had slight attacks of the "grippe," after conference, owing largely to the reaction after the session closed. The tension of feeling during conference was great; many were affected by reaction.

Bro. R. C. Evans stopped over Sunday in Chicago, on his way returning to Canada. He thinks judicious care will result in a good work being done there. Bro. Evans also spoke three times in Detroit, staying there over a Sunday, also. He reports prospects favorable for successful work in his field; and feels much encouraged. The wave of spiritual uprising and advancement so richly enjoyed at conference reached the Queen's western dominions also. May the good Queen live long, and her subjects become the subjects of the Prince of Peace, in due time.

Washington advices of late date state that President McKinley has about decided to send a message to Congress recommending an appropriation to provide for distribution of supplies among the starving noncombatants in Cuba, who under the war policy of General Weyler, the Spanish commander; have been driven into and kept in the cities, that he might devastate the outlying districts in order to cut off the supplies of the Cuban insurgents. Under this policy large numbers of people have been huddled in Cuban cities, where starvation and Spanish barbarities have caused the death of thousands. Reports from United States consuls are said to be the basis of these statements. It is stated that of 10,000 people concentrated at Sancti Spiritus, 5,000 are absolutely in want; while Consul Brice at Mantanzas reports 7,000 people in the country covered by his jurisdiction who are starving to death. It is said to be President's McKinley's plan to provide for prompt relief in the manner described. The Spanish Minister at Washington has intimated that Spain would not object to relief being furnished those not supporting the Cuban cause. On the other hand it is said that General Weyler and his troops would resist any effort to distributed relief except through the specific agency of Spanish military authorities. President McKinley has delayed final action until Monday, pending later reports from Consul Lee and other American officials in Cuba. Latest reports state that General Fitzhugh Lee's reports of Spanish atrocities have incensed General Weyler and his associates to that degree that it may be necessary to send a war vessel to Havana to protect the United States Consulate. Altogether the Cuban situation is serious and may involve the United States and Spain in diplomatic if not in open conflict.

General Gomez, the Cuban commander-in-chief, states, in an address to the American people, that Weyler's atrocities are equal to the butcheries by the Turks in Armenia, and that if his warfare was long continued the island would be depopulated.

General Garcia and his Cubans gained an important victory of late over General Lono, commanding the Spanish troops in the Manzanillo division. The battle is considered the most momentous of the war.

China has borrowed $80,000,000 from a British syndicate; whether for peaceful improvements or for war material is not stated.

Bro. Edwin S. Allen, of Chicago, employed by an elevator manufacturing company, and who will be remembered by many as one of the ushers at the late General Conference, lost his life by falling down an elevator shaft in the city of Chicago, about two weeks ago. His skull was fractured, causing death, after he had lingered about a week in an unconscious state. His sorely afflicted family have the sympathy and prayers of saints and friends.

CORRECTION.—In the late conference minutes, page 21, paragraph 3, under date of Friday, April 9, it should read, "President Joseph Smith presiding." The name Smith was erroneously omitted by the typesetter, and overlooked in proofreading.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins is with the saints of Beaver, Wichita County, Texas, where we understand he is to deliver a number of lectures on the Book of Mormon and do other ministerial work.

In response to the request of the Greek government the powers have agreed to undertake arrangement of a basis of settlement between Greece and Turkey. The Sultan's troops have steadily advanced and now are concentrating upon Domokos, a natural stronghold, occupied by the Greeks. Advices dated May 16 state that the Porte has replied officially to the note of the Powers and declines to agree upon an armistice until conditions are accepted providing for the annexation of Thessaly, an indemnity of £10,000,000 (Turkish), and the permanent keeping open of certain Greek ports for vessels with food supplies for Turkish soldiers. The reply has occasioned great surprise to European statesmen, and it is expected that it will be difficult to induce the Sultan to modify his demands; failure to do which would cause serious diplomatic difficulties and possibly rupture, imperiling the peace of the Balkan states.

Original Poetry.

A YEAR AGO.

BY E. M. FIFER.

Calm Night unfolds her sable wings
And spreads them wide from east to west
Deep quiet reigns o'er all the land
And weary day has gone to rest.
Fair Luna robed in splendor bright
Floats proudly on through clouds of foam,
While myriads of glittering stars
Like gems bedeck Heaven's azure dome.

The hills lie bathed in tender light,
And in the quiet town below
Hundreds of lights like mimic stars
Flash brightly out with radiant glow.
Fair Mississippi's waters broad
Lie icebound 'neath a silvery sheet,
While over on our sister shore
The hills and blue sky seem to meet.

O lovely Night, my senses, rapt,
Drink in thy beauties sweet and rare;
The wind that murmurs soft and low,
An inspiration seems to bear!

O, calm, fair night, a year ago
 You wore a darker, sterner mien;
 You had not then this balmy breeze
 Nor fairy moonbeam's silver sheen.

O, what a change has come since then:
 That gloomy night, how dark and drear!
 The sleet beat pitilessly down;
 The winds weird wail was sad to hear!
 But yet within our little home,
 Safe sheltered from the bitter blast;
 We heeded not the night's wild wind,
 Nor dreary shadows darkly cast.

The firelight gleamed upon the hearth,
 A ruddy, cheerful, pleasant glow;
 Diffusing light and warmth around,
 Defying winter's sleet and snow.
 Within the cosy room we sat,
 My husband dear, both he and I;
 And while he read I swiftly wrote;
 The truant moments fast did fly.

Within a little chamber snug,
 In childhood's slumber, still and sweet,
 Our darlings lay, their bright eyes closed,
 And quiet little hands and feet.
 O what a pretty sight was that,—
 Three little faces, fresh and bright,—
 Three bonny little heads, that pressed
 With loving touch the pillows white!

Yes, we were happy on that night,
 Though owned we neither lands nor gold;
 Yet in those little children's love
 Our hearts were blessed with wealth untold.
 We "recked" not of the bitter woe
 That future days might to us bring;
 We little knew life e'er would seem
 To us a worthless, joyless thing.

But ah! alas! but three short months
 Had drifted on and joined the past,
 Ere death bereft our hearts and home,
 And we in sorrows deep were cast.
 Oh, deep and bitter was the cup;
 Which Heaven decreed that we must drain!
 Oh, piteous thought, but one frail link
 Is left us of our broken chain!

Our little boys, their loving hearts
 Knew naught of sin nor sorrows dark.
 Bright, fair and stainless were their lives;
 Death ever seeks a shining mark.
 Yes; they are gone. It was not theirs
 To win renown or worldly fame;
 Transplanted by the Father's hand,
 In paradise they praise his name.

He called them home to that dear land
 From whence their spirits bright were sent;
 We must not murmur, for we know
 They were not given, but only lent.
 O, may their spirits watch our feet,
 Through "pastures green," by "waters still,"

That purer thoughts be in our hearts,
 And better deeds our short lives fill.

O, Thou, in whom we safely trust,
 In pity look upon our woe!
 Great Searcher of our inmost hearts,
 May we thy sweetest mercies know.
 Help us to say "Thy will be done;"
 O, lead our souls through this dark night,
 Though tempest-tossed on grief's dark sea,
 May faith be still "our beacon light."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

The mind has a thousand eyes,
 And the heart but one,
 Yet the light of a whole life dies
 When love is done.—Bourdillon.

29 Bromehead Street, Commercial Road, LONDON, England.

Dear Sisters:—It is a long time since the London sisters paid a visit to the much-loved Home Column, but we have not been asleep for all that, and now I fear we shall want to tell you more than we shall be able. Our hearts are so full, yes, full of love and gratitude to our Father in heaven, that he has given us the desire of our hearts. It is just a year since our little chapel was dedicated to God, by our beloved brother Caffall; since which time we have had many glorious meetings in it, notwithstanding the fact that the branch has had to pass through a severe trial; but praise the Lord, he has brought us through, and now we are rejoicing in bright prospects for the future. As we have a testimony to bear regarding the above-named building, we send it to the Column to interest and encourage some of the sisters' societies, who are seeking in various ways the general interest of the cause we love.

When the building fund was started, the branch entered into it heartily, and we sisters decided to let our weekly donations go to swell the fund. All went well for some time, but within two years and a half some of the members of the branch became somewhat weary in well-doing, some, who had supported the fund, had left us, and matters looked very discouraging; so much so that some strongly urged the advisability of letting the whole scheme fall through,—the contributions to be returned to the donors. A church meeting was called to decide the matter, meanwhile the sisters had made the matter a subject of much prayer and fasting, and the Lord spoke to us in one of our meetings and told us to doubt not, for there should be a house built to his name, and we should worship therein; with many other words encouraging us to go on in faith, assuring us that our sacrifices were pleasing and acceptable unto him, and that none of our prayers were unheard, O, what a blessed privilege to be thus spoken to and cheered; but, during the time between the promise and its fulfillment, there was much that was calculated to cause doubt,—many times of darkness and perplexity. The sisters' meetings were almost deserted; Sr. Bradshaw being almost tempted to give up the meetings; sometimes one, or perhaps two or three would attend, and sometimes more. The writer will never forget one night. I had not been able to attend for a few weeks because of sickness, and when I entered, Sr. Bradshaw was very much cast down; no one else came, and as the meetings had been unattended for some weeks, she expressed her intention to give them up entirely. Branch affairs were under a cloud at the time; we both gave way to murmuring and wondering why these things should be. Just then Sr.

Bradshaw had to answer a knock at the door, and I took up a Saints' Harp that lay on the table and opened to the seventy-seventh hymn. As she returned I exclaimed, Sr. Bradshaw, here is something for us; I read it through, and we both felt the inspiration of the Spirit. The cloud was lifted, we bowed before God in prayer, and we can both truly testify that our spiritual strength was renewed, and we parted rejoicing in the hope of a brighter future. This hope is now being realized; we have six sisters added to our number, and are having some very happy times.

Shortly after the above mentioned prophesy in our sisters' meeting, the Lord spoke in a branch meeting, saying we should build and build again; and the same promise has been repeated under the roof of our new building. I think we have good reasons to believe that God is about to move upon the hearts of the people in this city. May his richest blessings attend the efforts of Brother Caffall, who is to begin a series of discourses here about the middle of January. We hail his coming with no small degree of pleasure, as we have benefited so much by his able teachings while with us before, and he always seems to have a supply of fresh food, wherewith to feed the hungry. The last Sunday he was here he explained the law of tithing in a way that I had never heard of. I have often prayed the time would come when I could live by that law, little thinking the poorest can live by it. We have need to be thankful that God has sent us such an able and faithful exponent of the pure gospel as our aged brother. Ever praying for the welfare of the cause of Christ,

I remain your humble sister,
 ESTHER FURNESS,
 Secretary of the Sisters' Mission.

Dear Sister Walker:—Having just returned home from choir practice, and wishing to read a short time before retiring, I took up the Saints' Herald, of January 27, and proceeding in my reading, gladly fastened my eyes upon what appeared under the caption "Mothers' Home Column," for we know there is always to be found something interesting to us. We are indeed to be congratulated that it devolved upon our sister with the clear insight to notice that the "Column" should be supported as well by the the strong arm and ready pen, the help and sympathy of the brethren as by us.

Be assured, Sister Green, that your letter will be appreciated by many, and among them some of these noble brethren who have, since the organization of the Daughters of Zion, been always ready to speak and labor in defense of the "sanctuary of home," and all the pure and hallowed influences that should cluster around that sacred name and place.

There are some very pleasant memories connected with the beginning of the organization mentioned, and one is that one of the originators was a brother; and another happy thought is that when we first started out on the mission of arresting the attention of the mothers in the work of discovering the best and proper method of "raising" their children, and of preparing them for the arduous duties of life, several of the brethren stood bravely in readiness to support and strengthen the good work. These are unassuming brethren, and so we will not mention names, only Bro. Joseph's.

We are all aware that he is not only a defender and exponent of every good word and work, but also is well used to see his name in print. May that name, to his life's end, continue to be associated with everything that is pure and good both in religious and social life.

We have faith to believe that the many young men, also older ones of the church who are using much of their energy to establish principles of purity of life and conduct among the Sons of Zion, are instruments of good to themselves and to the homes which the faithful mothers and daughters are trying to make a "little heaven on earth."

These thoughts presented we are aware are all harmonious with our highest hopes—that the good Lord would raise up brethren among us whose sympathies would be in unison with the movement of the Daughters of Zion. They strike a cheerful chord; but to complete the simile, according to the ways of the world (and a Supreme Intelligence permits it), there must be sounded forth both within and without the sacred fold the minor note, the sad refrain, and even the strain discordant and harsh.

We sometimes hear, even in the homes of the saints, of discontent and fault-finding; and the gruff, unrefined, and unkind words of the scrupulous church member we refuse to listen to, and we turn away.

The little tender babe at its mother's knee listens and looks with wide-open eyes, the boys and girls with shamed faces try to hide from the scene, and the sons and daughters go out into a world full of the enticements to sin and wickedness. But we join in the responsive: "All this is not for us: domestic life has shown for us no failure like this; in these sacred relationships, the sowing and the reaping in our life's endeavor has been a success: in knowledge, and wisdom, and love to rear, direct, and lead our children to true happiness below, our minds are content and satisfied." So may it be with all; and we desire that to our faith, knowledge, and all its power to bless may be added; and God's people abound in temperance, virtue, brotherly kindness, and charity. As Sister Green intimates, there is much for fathers as well as mothers to do, and let us watch, and labor, and pray that the Spirit of truth may lend to our earnest devoted lives its holy aid and influence.

The sisters' idea that the father's efforts should be united with the mother's in training the child is in accordance with the teachings of Trumbull, which have with few exceptions been generally indorsed. These exceptions have been among good sisters too. This class is no doubt in the right in cases where the father's influence and example are baneful—who right in the face of teaching from the sacred desk, and of the testimonies of the saints, speak lightly of the Word of Wisdom, speak reproachfully of those in authority. Before their families they are generally morose, complaining, contrary-minded, addicted to bad habits, and do not scruple even to use words profane and decidedly unrefined; make no attempt towards obeying the temporal law, and decline to ask blessing before meals, or to engage in family prayer.

We think the sister would not be in favor of asking such to unite their efforts with the mothers in training the little ones around them. She asks, "What is a home without a father's influence?" What is home with it in such a case as has just been described? But where both parents are faithful and strive to discharge their duties, at church and home, no one could with reason oppose their mutual authority in the household and their united and parental care. Because the father is the stronger and more robust, should he be ignored in the education of his children, and in all those kindly ministrations which in sickness and health are necessary?

Sister Green says she hopes others will write on this subject, and after this humble effort in looking at the home as it is, it seems to point to the conclusion that some of the most effectual steps have already been taken to the end in view, namely: the organization of the Sons and Daughters of Zion, the establishing of Sunday schools, where both parents and children receive such helps to the perfecting or developing of character through the study of "the books," and through the ministrations of loving, prayerful, and efficient teachers. Then there are the prayer meetings and educational societies.

Colleges and schools we must have, and the sooner we begin to establish them without the evils commonly attendant, the better. As a general thing we older ones have not had the needed privileges of education in its fullest sense, but the children nowadays are better provided for. After knowledge, follow meditation, then a consciousness of higher possibilities, and in all our righteous attainments we have the promise of the Holy Spirit's aid.

Your sister in the faith,
ABBIE A. HORTON.

NOTICE TO DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

FOR the use of those locals which do not find enough in our regular line of work to occupy the entire time, an addition has been made to our programs for monthly meetings. This feature will be an instructive series of topics for thought and discussion; and in order that the Advisory Committee may make such selection as would be of the greatest service to the majority, invitation is hereby extended to each local to send in lists of such questions or topics as it would find most interesting.

Any local society desiring further alteration in program or which have anything of value to suggest concerning the line of study to be pursued, or anything else pertaining to the work of the Daughters of Zion, will confer a favor upon the Advisory Committee by corresponding with them as they will at all times welcome any helpful criticism or suggestion. Address,

AUDENTIA ANDERSON,
Corresponding Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 17, 1897.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

AFTER a somewhat lengthy vacation we feel that our department should again return to duty. Many good thoughts have found their way into our columns during the past year, and we feel that many more are waiting to be clothed upon with words. We trust that we may soon be overrun with good articles and Sunday school notes.

Who will be the first to contribute?

What are some of your ways of making temperance Sunday interesting to the primary class? Bro. J. F. Mintun, please answer.

In what ways do you vary the opening exercises? F. G. Pitt, answer.

Do you have any set form of primary class prayer? Why? Sr. Dora Young, answer.

Amy D. James says:—

"In beginning the primary lesson do not always say, 'What was last Sunday's lesson about?' Children like a change.

"2. Use the blackboard. If the lesson is about the wise men, draw a star as you talk. If about the crucifixion, draw a cross; something to hold attention.

"3. If they act tired, give them a little exercise or a motion song.

"4. Be animated; a dull teacher seldom holds attention. Children like life. Even a small baby likes a noise, lively company, and bright colors.

"5. Love your work, and you will have little trouble in making the children love it."

Mrs. W. J. Semelroth, State Superintendent of primary work of Missouri, at a convention held in Kansas City, delivered an address on "The six points of preparation." She illustrated by means of a wheel. The teacher, the hub from which radiate five spokes: "Approach," "Lesson study," "Teaching Plain," "Questions," and "Testing." These she holds firmly to the hub by a rim called "application." She has a Bible which she calls a knock-down Bible, because it comes all to pieces. The big book, representing the entire Bible, is a shell, and in it two smaller shells—the old and the new testaments. Then the books in pamphlet form she groups according as they belong to history, law, etc. Thus she gives the class an idea of the construction of the Bible.

Extracts from Sunday School Quarterly Review, of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Abbie Horton, Ed.

One year ago the association gave the church $400.00, last year $1,000.00 was gathered by the penny collection for the noble cause for which it was used. There is still $1,000.00 on hand.

Some may think we could not get a person who would devote his entire time to the work. I believe our present incumbent, who has our utmost confidence, would be willing to drop everything else, and go as an elder goes, in the interest of the work. He suggested a similar thought in his first report.

Our association has an enrollment of 10,000 scholars, all of whom would be filled with new energy by a visit from the Superintendent.

Were our Superintendent traveling he could get out into those districts where there is no organization, and by a little work cause enough more to fall in line to offset his extra expenses on the association.

We frequently say we want to do more for the Lord, and is there not opportunity along this line? What say we all?

In relation to the subject of a "traveling general superintendent," Bro. F. J. Ebeling, of Wheeling, West Virginia, wishes to present the following thoughts:—

No society can reach its highest possibilities and have its chief executive incumbered by work foreign to its planning.

While attending the late convention we heard such expressions as these from thoughtful, conservative men: "The church is largely dependent upon the Sunday school." "The Sunday school is but a stepping stone to the church," etc. Now if the school is of such importance, should we not deem it wise to support at least one with a constant eye to the needs of the work?

The expense would, no doubt, be the greatest objection raised by many; but could not the greater part of his expenses be raised the same as an elder's, by the community in which he labored? Would not any school gladly raise a small sum for the benefits derived from a visit from the Superintendent? Could not the association afford to pay the lacking amount?

WIRT, Ind., May 2.

Editors Herald.—Good news has reached these parts, of the love, joy, union, peace, harmony, and the blessings of God's Holy Spirit that attended the dear saints at our conference session. We feel to praise God from whom all blessings flow. We trust the saints in general will heed the lesson and warning there given, and renew their energies, be more faithful, more humble, more closely devoted to God's work, more obedient to the law of the church, and put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to understand the fiery darts of the wicked.

Do we realize the importance of being a saint, not only professedly, but possessedly. Can we rejoice that our names are recorded in that book of life, according to knowledge? If not, why not? Have we believed in vain? Did the angel not bring the gospel or are we neglecting our duties, living beneath our privileges, not showing our faith by our works? Remember, it is not the hearers of the law that are purified, but the doers. Let us bear in mind and cease not the conflict, "till the summons home be heard."

When we enter the waters of baptism, we covenant (contract) with the Lord to work in the vineyard as long as the day (our probation) continues. If we cease to work we have no assurance of pay. Do we not know that we all (none excepted), rich or poor, great or small, the ones that have ten talents and the ones that only have one talent,—have something to do in raising this great building? Illustratively, some may weather-board, some may shingle, some may plaster, some may lay flooring, and some may carry water and food to others while at work. By so doing, a united effort and the building will soon be completed, and we receive an inheritance, the fruits of our labor.

Let us be careful and have our names on the committee's book, as participants in this great work. One may say, "I am doing all I can for this great work." If so, then you are all right. Query, Are you a minister, laboring to bring souls to Christ?

Answer, "No."

Are you a priest of a branch?

"No."

Are you teacher?

"No."

Do you attend your meetings?

"O, yes, when its not raining or too dark or nights too short."

How much have you given this year to support the elder's family while he is taking the gospel to some other one?

"O, I have all I can do to feed my babies; the elder is no better than I am; let him work."

Are you sorry you heard the gospel?

"O, I'm so glad."

Where did you first hear this that makes you so glad?

"Bro. A. preached over here at the school-house"

Well, don't you think he had better have been home working for his babies?

So dear saints, you see the consistency. If all stay at home, how many will get the bread of life? So, dear saints, take courage.

To the saints of the southern Indiana district, I would say: In making my report to the bishop I found some improvement over the previous year; still there is room. Some branches have done fairly well, while others have done nothing scarcely. Let me kindly and firmly ask you, Can't we all give something this year, much or little, and show to the world that we are determined to let our light shine? We are aware this is a marvelous work, but is not enough so to be proclaimed altogether without some means. We all know that; accordingly let us work together. Brothers, can't we give one dollar of that ten we have in our pocket? God is a good landlord; all he asks is one tenth—much more liberal than our fellowman. When we sell our corn can we not give one bushel from every ten for his work. That leaves you nine. Would you have had that if God had withheld the dews and the showers? When we sell our pigs, can't we give one tenth of that? When we get one dollar for a day's work, can't we give ten cents? There are many ways that we might aid if we so determined.

Sisters, you are also on the list, when you sell your chickens, butter, eggs, etc., can't you give one tenth of that to the Lord. The answer sounds, the echo rings, "Yes, we surely can do that much." I think so. Then I trust and pray God that we may.

We want to leave our missionaries without excuse; they know what Bro. Hilliard's instruction to me is, "If they idle away their time at home, their allowances stop." And also the missionary in charge has written me, if anything of that character takes place, to notify him. The missionaries will understand and also the dear saints that I will endeavor to carry out instructions given me.

I will not be able to visit many of the branches before autumn; will have to raise a crop to supply family needs. I design to visit the entire district during fall and winter. I hope to hear from many of you before that time.

I request branch presidents and collectors to work in this line energetically. Have your weekly contributions every time you meet (and meeting together should not be neglected), hand your five cents, your dimes, your quarters, your dollars, to the collector, and the solicitor will forward to me from time to time. Will you please do this? Then our elders can go, our light will shine, the gospel will spread to the ends of the earth, and Jesus Christ will come to reward the faithful, and then we shall all gather home where parting will be no more, all toils and trials shall have ceased, and we shall walk the streets of the New Jerusalem praising God forevermore. Amen.

Your servant for Christ's sake,

WILLIAM C. MARSHALL.

MONTICELLO, Ill., May 10.

Editors Herald.—For the encouragement of those who may be drooping in spirit, and for the active elders in the field I write.

Eleven years ago I preached one sermon at Argenta, Illinois. I came back for the first time on Friday. Many remembered me and at once began to discuss with me the merits of that eleven year old sermon.

I was invited to preach again. I accepted the invitation and did so on Saturday night and Sunday. If ever God stood by his servant he did so Saturday night. I wondered afterwards why it was I should have such unusual liberty and power, but I learned last night the cause. Men came declaring that they were enlightened as never before. At the close of the discourse a Christian minister announced that he would review me.

On Sunday night I by special request preached on the final restoration of all things. This morning the Christian preacher came, confessing it was the greatest, most profound discourse he had ever heard. He could not sleep, and now he has no desire to review me.

The seed sown in weakness and by the Spirit of truth eleven years ago God did not permit to die, although I thought it was gone "wasted". Now I hope to see someone gather the fruit.

Fraternally yours,

J. A. ROBINSON.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, May 9.

Editors Herald:—I expect to close meetings here to-night and go home to-morrow. It is three months and nine days since I left home. The Lord has truly blessed me in my work. By request I stopped at Hiteman from April 17 to May 5; preached about twenty-five times, baptized eleven, and several more are ready, but don't know what they are waiting on. There is a noble class of saints there; they don't forget that an elder can't ride on the cars without money, even at half fare, and several of the outsiders remembered me kindly in the same line.

I got to Beacon on the 5th inst.; arrived at good old Bro. and Sr. Kramer's just in time to stop Miss Sylvia, one of the seven noble daughters of Bro. and Sr. Kramer, from wondering "where Mr. Roth is, for I want him here to-morrow sure." Just then, unexpectedly to all, I stepped into the house, to the great joy of all and the sure relief of Sylvia's mind. I soon learned that she wanted me the next day to speak the solemn words that would make her and the one of her choice (a Mr. Madison) one for life. At 8:30 the next day a large crowd of relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony. Some said it was a nice ceremony.

The saints here have a good Sunday school, and this afternoon we had a very spiritual testimony meeting; the holy influence of God was made manifest in holy joy. At the close nine were administered to and some were wonderfully blessed. Will they all lie? Brigham's statement made November 9, 1856, as recorded on page 38 of "Books and Utah Mormonism in contrast:" "We have the greatest and the smoothest liars in the world," has been proven true again. Two Utah elders, James D. Coon and Myron Holgate, were bumming around here. They would tell the people that they were "elders of the reorganized Latter Day Saints church," so they could get lodging and food. But when their trickery was exposed, they left; so you need not answer the question, for the saints here and at Beacon say that they (Coon and Holgate) did lie; and I believe that if I should ask our worthy brother, P. Shimel, of Richland, he would say that he believed that the villain or "Vilers" that nearly killed him with the neck-yoke will lie, and murder too, if he gets half a chance. I hope Bro. Shimel will get over it, for he is too fine a man to be slaughtered by a villain. May the Lord open their blind eyes.

I am still in the faith,

J. E. ROTH.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 10.

Editors Herald:—Leaving Lamoni April 17 for Shenandoah, Iowa, and bearing with us most pleasant memories of the great church conference of 1897, across the prairie—a new experience for Sr. B.—in carriage conveyance to Beaconsfield, twenty miles away, thence by train to the old scenes of our first gospel experience in Western Iowa, where we were received with a warm welcome among the old friends and relatives, and from whom it proved so hard a task to get away the following week.

Meetings had been appointed, and ministerial work for the coming year was begun in the saints' chapel that night.

On Sunday—Easter day—with songs and flowers and Spirit accompaniment and power, a glad day was spent; preaching every night during our stay.

The following Thursday found us on our return homeward via St. Joseph, where we were met at the station by Bro. Robley, of Providence, Rhode Island.

On Sunday, by invitation of our congenial Bro. Terry, we occupied the stand in their beautiful church in St. Joseph, speaking to good audiences morning and evening.

Tuesday, on to Independence, carrying with us more pleasant memories of the kind hands and loving hearts we met in St. Joseph. Tarrying in Independence, the city of future hopes, beautiful indeed for situation, where there are slowly gathering, as at Lamoni, many of the salt of the earth, pleasant people to dwell among, inspired with the greatest of hopes and stimulated toward high endeavor by the great latter-day revelation.

Sunday, May 2, found us back among the saints in St. Louis, and with our good welcome, good attendance, and excellent spirit all day, left us at the close of the day's labor in grateful frame of mind toward the Father of all mercy and all good. Yesterday was a repetition of the Sunday before, with the addition of three by baptism, one of whom was a Bro. Sylvester Bartlett, who came from Beardstown, Illinois, yesterday morning one hundred and ten miles to be baptized, and went away, like the eunuch of old, rejoicing in the new-found light. This conversion was due chiefly to the faithful efforts of Bro. Shoemaker, of Beardstown. Bro. Bartlett who was a respected member and officer of the Congregational society, having heard but two Latter Day Saint sermons; one by Bro. John Robinson, of Independence, and one by Bro. Stafford. Beardstown will hear more of the gospel hereafter.

If the spiritual aid given since the very first ministerial effort subsequent to close of our Annual Conference may be considered as an indication or prophecy of the coming year, we may look for the fullest and best results ever experienced. May the good Lord strip us from every unhallowed, and untoward influence, every sinister, selfish, or unworthy motive, and enable us to form and maintain such a character as shall meet the approbation of and finally merit association and fellowship with our great Master and Leader, Jesus Christ, is the prayer and daily petition of

Your brother in Christ,

MILTON, Fla., May 10.

Editors Herald:—Our quarterly conference closed yesterday and was one of the best we have had for many years. The saints were made to rejoice, and all were built up and strengthened. There was a marked tendency toward progressing and "coming up higher," and we can safely say the district is entering upon an era of healthy growth.

At two o'clock p. m., as Bro. D. E. Tucker and a large concourse of people wended their way to a neighboring stream to attend to the rite of baptism, the writer hitched team and started for home, more than twenty miles away, to be with loved ones who were unable to attend conference. There were two applications for baptism, with a strong tendency for others to follow.

Bro. Tucker is doing a good work, and the district is fortunate in having his services, also the services of some recently ordained priests, teachers, and deacons, who are alive and energetic in their duties. We desire the prayers of the saints that we may continue to grow in humbleness, purity, and spirituality. In bonds,

CORRECT, Ind., May 6.

Editors Herald:—When I last penned you I was here, holding forth in a union church. Splendid interest prevailed throughout. Since then I have labored at Auter Village, Foltz, and Canaan. At Foltz I was sent for to meet a Campbellite divine who had attacked every organization, but when I answered the challenge in person the reverend gentleman informed his congregation ("a vast throng of people") that he knew too much to meet the Latter Day Saints, commonly called "Mormons." This has thrown the prestige of the people in our favor. He held up a tract with the portrait of the Utah temple on the back thereof, and said, "there is the doctrine of that people;" they and our church are "one." I kindly informed the congregation that if Mr. Harrison ascertained through fair investigation of that "tract" that those it represented and his order were one, to give the congratulation to the Brighamites' Heterodox, for we of the Reorganization denied the divinity of either, and that I considered them as Heterodox, that is, contrary to an acknowledged standard.

At Canaan we held forth in the high school building. I was assisted by Bro. J. D. Porter. He has informed me that the M. E. people had challenged us for a religious contest. Arrangements are being made for the debate. At this place some are absorbed in deep meditation and are giving our claims a critical investigation.

I was called to the Olive branch on the 4th inst. to look after Utah workers. They worked among the saints, announced themselves as harbingers of a better way, as messengers of a true successor in the prophetic office and presidency of the church, and contend yet for polygamy. They have several of their presbytery in Indiana, and a number of others will soon join them. They still labor under a guardian, and consider priestly rule superior, higher, greater, preferable to law. They prefer to abide the behest of their high and lofty presbytery and obey their mandate, "Don't debate with the Josephites." If I was laboring for an institution too secret to investigate, and the leaders thereof would not allow me the privilege to grant criticism, I would be forced to the conclusion that something was wrong. I love to see the divine test applied. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

I have made the Utah claims a study since my early training, and now I can see the necessity of my parental instructions. The privilege of reading the publications of the Reorganized and Utah churches are proving beneficial now. And while they may increase their number of preachers, unless they change the mandate, one Josephite well informed, laboring under the influence of the Spirit of God, can by law and testimony put to flight all their workers in Indiana. In nothing is the wisdom, goodness, and greatness of God manifested to his saints more clearly than in his showing to them the future, the things that are to come, pointing out with unfailing accuracy what should happen, declaring to them events, their time and nature, before they spring forth. Such are God's dealings with his people. We may therefore look into the prophetic revelation of God to his people and find facts relative to the latter-day apostasy. His revelations will prove a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. "Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled."—D. C. 1:7. We can see readily that as a logical sequence, the prophecies and promises with reference to the status of the church shall be fulfilled.

The question of lineage as set forth in the Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, and Bible prove clearly the right of the one who presented himself to the conference April 6, 1860, at Amboy, Illinois. He said: "I came not here of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit." God worked like himself, sent the proper one whom he had previously spoken of: "I, the Lord God, will send one mighty and strong, holding the scepter of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words, while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God." This is so grand. It portrays that the Lord God would do the sending, and the one who was sent did not get exalted in himself, was meek like others whom God had sent; for instance, John and Christ were willing to do God's will rather than the will of self or men. Note the eternal words, "shall be dictated by the power that sent me;" and again, "I do not propose to assume this position in order to amass wealth out of it; neither have I sought it as a profit." Why did he go to Amboy, Illinois, April 6, 1860? Because the Spirit directed him. "Hath God said and shall he not do it?" "God works by means best known to himself." The one sent had the right by lineage, had come in at the gate, was the one prophesied of, and in order for God to make the prophecies and commandments good, must work by means and send the one spoken of. This God has done. Praise the Lord, O my soul!

Let us of the Reorganization take courage and keep pace with the general march of the church, and come up higher; and while we may be encompassed by Brighamites this year, let us keep ourselves posted so as to show their heterodoxy or heresy.

Let us watch the movements of the Utah church, test their actions and doings by what is written. Let their ministry know we are ready to meet them privately and publicly, tell them such history of their doings as what took place the sixth day of August, 1847, of Brigham rebaptizing his body of men in City Creek, and of Heber C. Kimball baptizing, confirming, and ordaining Brigham. Let them know you are acquainted with their Adam-God and blood-atonement doctrine, which to some are "eye openers." Such testimonies as Lyman Wight's, Charles Derry's, William Clayton's, W. W. Phelps', Arthur Milliken's, Sr. Lucy Smith, and others who spoke in relation to the man of God who would lead the church, are soul-cheering, and would prove before any court of jurisprudence the authenticity or genuineness of the official position of the present president of the Reorganized Church.

Why in the light of history and all that has come to us by way of observation in the light of all that has furnished us information or knowledge in regard to this great latter-day work should we not be encouraged?

In line and at work,

M. R. SCOTT, JR.

HIGBY, W. Va., May 5.

Editors Herald:—I came here last evening to minister to Sr. Moore, and she is much better this morning, and she requested me to write to the saints through the Herald and ask them to fast and pray to the Lord that she may be restored to health. Sr. Moore is a faithful saint and her house has been the home of Brn. Moler, Matthews, Shinn, and all the elders that have labored in the West Virginia district.

There seems to be a desire in all the saints that I have talked with since General Conference to get up higher. It seems that the holy influence that was present there has spread everywhere, and I hope that it will continue to spread until its divine influence is felt by all.

I will start in a few days to visit the branches of the district, which covers a distance of about two hundred miles.

Your brother,

G. H. GODBEY.

JOHNSTOWN, Wis., May 11.

Editors Herald:—I am now in my field of labor, looking up the interests of the work. I have visited Hanover and Limer to ascertain if possible whether there was sufficient interest to justify us in setting up the gospel tent again in these places. I find quite a number at each of these points who seem very much interested, and I believe some more will obey the restored gospel of Christ. Some were baptized at each of these places last year and quite a number of others were almost persuaded.

I regretted very much that I did not have the means to attend the recent General Conference, but my heart was there, and when the day of fasting and prayer came my wife and I observed the fasting and sought the Lord earnestly in prayer that he would hear the pleadings of his people and speak through his prophet, and give such instructions to the church as would enable them to complete the organization. The question has often been asked me by outsiders as well as by members of the church, "Why do you not fill up your leading quorums of your church? If a complete and perfect organization is necessary to constitute the body of Christ—the church, why do you people lack in this point?" This question was not always easy to answer to the satisfaction of the questioner, but now, thank God, we can with pride point to the true Church of Christ as a perfect body lacking nothing in its organization.

Like my old brother, E. C. Briggs, I am one of the charter members of the Reorganization; was with it in its beginning and first movement, and have long looked and prayed and labored for this result. O, how my heart did bound with joy and thanksgiving when I read the glad news, that the Master had spoken and pointed out the men who should fill these responsible positions! My heart went out in prayer to God, for these my brethren that they might be faithful to the trust whereunto they have been called.

And when Elders C. H. Barr and W. A. McDowell, who have been associated with me in the ministry for the last five years, called on me at my home at Plano, Illinois, on their return from the conference, they seemed to bring that same spirit with them that characterized the conference. I felt like doubling my diligence and pushing out with renewed energy to gather souls into the kingdom of Christ. Brethren, it is the Lord's work, and we will be held responsible in the great day of judgment for how we perform the part of this work that he has intrusted to our care. May God bless his people.

In gospel bonds,

E. M. WILDERMUTH.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., May 12.

Editors Herald:—I arrived in my field on the 8th inst., and find plenty to do; but the laborers are few. However we hope to do the best we can, and ask the local brethren to make a special effort this year to strengthen the branches and do as much missionary work as possible.

Elder J. T. Davis left home for the Rocky Mountain mission on the 6th inst. The evening before leaving he led three of his grandchildren and E. A. Davis' stepson into the waters of baptism. My oldest daughter, Maud, was among them. It did us good to see them have a true desire to enter the church so young. The Spirit witnessed at their confirmation that they were accepted. Our prayer is that they may grow to be of use in the church.

I was appointed to a mission that was several hundred miles from home when Maud was a little over a year old; before I started Sr. Hart prophesied that her life would "be spared to be a comfort to her mother and she will grow up to be an honor to her parents.

I am holding meetings here at present and expect to work my way to the western part of the district soon.

Yours truly,

W. E. PEAK.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., May 10.

Editors Herald:—At present writing Bro. Robley and myself are trying to sound the "glad tidings of great joy" in the vicinity of Fagundus, Warren County, Pennsylvania. It is a dreary, desolate, forsaken looking country, but we find some liberal-minded, generous-hearted, intelligent people here who are willing to hear, and who insist on thinking for themselves. And, on the other hand, we find here, as elsewhere, that class of people who insist on thinking for the entire community, not willing for the people to hear anything outside of their own creed.

Some of our friends here asked for the use of the Methodist church, but their minister, although quite gentlemanly, seemed to have the idea that if he could not reach and save the people here, it would be better to let them go to hades than to give us a chance to do something for them. He attended our meeting in the afternoon yesterday and listened to me, for an hour or more, on the organization of the Church of Christ. And, after the meeting was over, he stayed and talked for quite a long while; seemed to think it strange that we could not recognize the Methodist Church as a branch of the Church of Christ, and him as a minister of Christ; said he could recognize us as being saved, and as ministers of Christ, even though he thought our judgment at fault, and was willing to fellowship us. That is, looking at it from our standpoint, he could concede that a man might be saved, might be a minister of Christ worthy of Christian fellowship, might be fit for the kingdom of God and for heaven, and yet not fit to preach in the Methodist church. Funny, isn't it? He was quite gentlemanly all through our conversation, and seemed to want to do right, but it was easy to see that he was afraid for the members of his church to "prove all things" as commanded by the Apostle Paul. The church that has the truth, and knows it has the truth, is not afraid for its members to hear anything that comes along. I am glad that I belong to a church that says to its members, "Hear all, and if you find any new light, any new truth that you don't find with us, accept it." Truth has nothing to fear from investigation, while error always dreads to have the light turned on.

We are making our home with Bro. George H. Parker and wife, who obeyed the gospel somewhere in the Far West district, Missouri. They are alive in the work, and willing to make any reasonable sacrifice to get the glad tidings before their neighbors, friends, and relatives. Bro. Parker's father and mother, although not of our faith, and old in years, are willing and anxious to do their part towards keeping up the incidental expenses of the meetings, and in making them a success.

I feel to rejoice with my brethren and sisters over the grand outpouring of the Spirit, and the great work that was done at our late conference. I feel to go forth to the battle this year with renewed zeal, greater confidence, and a stronger determination to help push the work on to success and victory.

For the first few months of the season my work will likely be in Western New York and, as there is no branch of the church anywhere in the western part of the State, my work is likely to be where it should be—to the world.

While Bro. E. C. Briggs was away from his field, attending General Conference, I slipped over into Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana and put in a month's work, baptizing two at Clear Lake, Indiana. The visit was a pleasant one, to me, and I trust that good was done. The saints there are brothers and sisters to me, indeed, and it filled my soul with joy to have the privilege of once more taking them by the hand and getting another look into their honest faces. May the kind Father's care be over them! Not only are they brothers and sisters, but many of them, both at Clear Lake and South Scott, are my own children in the gospel. Bro. E. C. will please forgive me for trespassing on his territory during his absence.

May the Lord bless his people everywhere, and hasten his work in his own good time.

Yours in gospel bonds,

ISAAC M. SMITH.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 10.

Editors Herald:—Church work onward; interest increasing. With three weekly prayer meetings, history class, choral and sisters' aid societies, together with our Sunday services our people are kept busy. Our boys and girls are acquitting themselves nobly in the song service. The social services are more spiritual than of late, the Lord confirming with signs following. Cottage prayer meetings are a success.

Yesterday, by invitation, I addressed a patriotic association of this city. Am expected to repeat the effort. Several requests for memorial services have been received; cannot say aye to more than one.

I go to Harlan to-night, by special request, returning Thursday. Indications are bright for a busy and prosperous year. Expect to reap some of the seed sown in Fontanelle ere long. Health has been very poor for some time; am slowly recuperating.

Fraternally,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

FLINTVILLE, Wis., April 25.

Editors Herald:—I was brought up by Latter Day Saints, that is, my parents were saints and their teachings always remained with me. I will also say that I am in the dark; there used to be a church of the saints here, but a good many have gone to rest, but as I was young at the time I am still left to fight the battles of life. I never had a chance to be baptized, but feel that the Lord will give me the opportunity in his own due time.

I wish to ask the saints one question: Are they keeping the day that God commanded us to keep? If we are not, why didn't the Lord instruct Joseph Smith concerning it when he organized his church? The Adventists claim we are keeping the wrong day.

Well, friends, I have had my prayers answered many times so I know that my Redeemer liveth and will answer my prayers. I wish this presented to the church, and I wish an answer. I had a dream or a vision, I hardly know which, it was so real, and I will relate it; may it be of interest to some of the saints.

I had been searching the Scriptures to see if I could not find something to enlighten me on the Sabbath question, but was not satisfied, and I asked God to show me the right in his own due time; so I went to bed contented, and I dreamed that I stood in a field, when all at once I looked to the northeast and saw a queer shaped cloud about as big as a man's hand, and all at once it took the form of a man and his face was as bright as the sun. As soon as I saw the cloud I said, There is the Son of Man, and I started to run and was lifted off my feet into the air, all the time singing. I was taken up over the housetops, and looking down saw one stood gazing at the sight, and immediately I was on my feet. But no pen can describe the happiness I experienced when I was raised from the ground. Immediately I was awake, and something seemed to tell me that if faithful I would take part in that great event. I ask the prayers of all the saints that I may.

Respectfully,

ED S. FRANKLIN.

DELOIT, Iowa, May 11.

Editors Herald:—After the close of General Conference, in company with my wife I visited my brother-in-law, L. Robbins and family, near Dudenville, Jasper County, Missouri. While there an effort was made to secure a churchhouse for the writer to preach in, but the trustees said, "No; you are not orthodox!" Being accustomed to that kind of an answer, we secured a good sized schoolhouse near by and held four meetings, with good attendance and interest. The first evening I gave permission to hand in written questions on doctrine, etc. The result was that thirty-seven questions were presented during the meetings.

It would have been a pleasure to have continued longer, but we were there only for a few days. I will write Bro. I. N. White, the one in charge of that mission.

The good results of the late conference are being realized by all the branches I have visited.

STILLWATER, O. T., May 2.

Editors Herald:—We arrived home from conference all safe. There have been terrible floods here from the recent rains, which have done much damage. West Guthrie was nearly all washed away, and one hundred and fifty are reported drowned.

We hope Bro. C. R. Duncan will reach us by the 9th; also Bro. W. S. Macrae. We expect some to be baptized then.

In bonds,

S. J. HINKLE.

WAS IT DISORGANIZED?

"OUT of their own mouths shall they be judged."

The array of testimony presented, taken in connection with the law of the church as given in the revelations of God, clearly demonstrates that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was not disorganized at the death of the prophets Joseph and Hyrum, that such a thing was never contemplated in the work of God in this dispensation, and since the church has never been disorganized, any organization claiming to be the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" is a counterfeit, and writes fraud in the very title of it.—B. H. Roberts.

The foregoing is copied from page 99 of a work entitled "Succession in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," by Elder B. H. Roberts of the Utah Church. The writer therein assumes that there has not been a disorganization of the church since its organization on the sixth of April, 1830. Consequently the position of the Reorganized Church represented by Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, is an abortion, devoid alike of spiritual life and authority, apparently oblivious of the fact that the church represented by himself is the outcome of a reorganization affected under the auspices of the late Brigham Young, during the period comprised between the latter portion of 1847 and the beginning of 1849, as the church history of that period will abundantly confirm.

Walker, the English lexicographer, defines the word "disorganization" to mean "the act of destroying organic structure, or connected system, the act of destroying order." "Reorganization," he defines "to organize anew, to reduce again to a regular body, or to a system." That the former condition obtained is evinced in the fact that the followers of Brigham Young proceeded to act upon the alternative contained in the latter definition, and "organized anew," the proof of which will be found in the following extracts taken from their own church documents.

Since the murder of President Joseph Smith, many false prophets and false teachers have arisen, and tried to deceive many, during which time we have mostly tarried with the body of the church, or been seeking a new location, leaving those prophets and teachers to run their race undisturbed, who have died natural deaths, or committed suicides; and we now, having it in contemplation soon to reorganize the church according to the original pattern, with a First Presidency and Patriarch, feel that it will be the privilege of the Twelve, ere long, to spread abroad among the nations, not to hinder the gathering, but to preach the gospel, and push the people, the honest in heart, together from the four quarters of the earth.—Epistle of the Twelve, from Council Bluffs, December 25, 1847; Mill. Star, vol. 10, page 86.

We have evidence that this "contemplation" was carried out, for we learn from the "compendium," published by Franklin D. Richards in 1857, page 227, that in December, 1847, a First Presidency of the church, consisting of a quorum of three was reorganized. And we further learn that, on the 12th of February, [1849], the Presidency and those of the Twelve who are here [Salt Lake City], met in council and proceeded to fill the vacancies of that quorum. Elders P. P. Pratt, John Taylor, and A. Lyman were present; and Charles C. Rich, Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow, and Franklin D. Richards were ordained to the Apostleship, and numbered among the Twelve, instead of the three who were called to the First Presidency, and Lyman Wight, of Texas, who was disfellowshipped. This accession increased the members here to a majority, and enabled them to act as a quorum. They were then instructed to assist in reorganizing the different quorums here, and in establishing righteousness. They met with the presidency and others almost daily and proceeded to organize and ordain the presidency of the High Priest's Quorum, viz.: John Young and his counselors, also Daniel Spencer as president of this stake, and his two counselors, David Fulmer and Willard Snow. They also ordained and set apart a High Council.—Mill. Star, vol. 11, page 246.

From the foregoing it is self-evident that the followers of Brigham Young were duly impressed with the fact of the disorganized condition of the church. Therefore they proceeded according to their understanding to reorganize the same. This is fully borne out, not by the statements of "Josephite history," but by the statements of those who affect to despise the action of the Reorganized Church in these matters; and who having themselves essayed to do the very thing that they charge upon us, have not the common honesty to admit it. For according to their own showing the Utah church is at best but an attempted reorganization of the church disorganized at the death of Joseph Smith and others. "But O," say they, "the church has been set up in these last days never more to be thrown down or given to another people," with the accentuation placed upon the latter sentence. Oblivious of the fact that even this promise—if it be a promise—is like all other promises of the Lord, conditional upon obedience to the law and commandments, the Utah people seem to assume that any reconstructing process must come through themselves. That they are the people alluded to, consequently they must be the church, forgetful of the fact that obedience and loyalty to the law of God constitutes the only legal claim to the membership of the Church of Christ, and wherever there is wilful disobedience to the law of God, rejection and punishment inevitably follow either the church or the individual guilty of the same.

Joseph Smith writing of the church in Zion, on the 11th of January, 1833, said:—

I send you the olive leaf which we have plucked from the tree of paradise, the Lord's message of peace to us; for though our brethren in Zion indulge in feelings toward us, which are not according to the requirements of the new covenant, yet, we have the satisfaction of knowing that the Lord approves of us, and has accepted us, and established his name in Kirtland for the salvation of the nations; for the Lord will have a place from whence his word will go forth, in these last days, in purity; for if Zion will not purify herself, so as to be approved of in all things in his sight, he will seek another people; for his work will go on until Israel is gathered, and they who will not hear his voice must expect to feel his wrath.—Mill. Star, vol. 14, page 346.

The sentiment contained in this extract was afterwards approved of by a Council of Twelve High Priests, who noted the foregoing paragraph, as follows:—

There is one clause in Brother Joseph's letter which you may not understand; that is this, "If the people of Zion did not repent, the Lord would seek another place, and another people. Zion is the place where the temple will be built, and the people gathered, but all people on that holy land being under condemnation, the Lord will cut off, if they repent not, and bring another race upon it that will serve him. The Lord will seek another place to bring forth and prepare his word to go forth to the nations, and as we said before so say we again, Brother Joseph will not settle in Zion, except she repent and serve God, and obey the new covenant. With this explanation the conference sanctions Brother Joseph's letter.—Mill. Star, vol. 14, page 359.

We may here ask what constitutes the Church of Christ. The law says:—

Whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church; whosoever declareth more or less than this, the same is not of me, but is against me; therefore, he is not of my church.—D. C. 9 (36):16.

Therefore, the adoption of the church by Christ is dependent upon the faithful discharge of the duties devolving upon her membership individually and collectively; wilful and persistent neglect of duty must result in her final rejection as a body, and the acceptance and adoption of those only who live according to the law. The church has no promise guaranteeing the acceptability of her administrations except so far as they shall be performed in agreement with the law and commandments of God. This claim is clearly established by the foregoing as well as the following declaration to the church:—

But, behold, at the end of this appointment, your baptisms for your dead shall not be acceptable unto me; and if you do not these things at the end of the appointment, ye shall be rejected as a church with your dead, saith the Lord your God.—D. C. 107, (103) 11.

The apostasy of the church in its collective capacity does not of necessity destroy the work of God. Men and women individually or collectively are but instrumental in the consummation of the purposes of Jehovah. They have an agency of their own; the power is with them to will to do, either good or evil; but their doing either the one or the other does not and cannot bring to naught the works and designs of God, only so far as those works and designs effect their own individual salvation. Therefore, the authority of that body, called the church, to act in the name of Christ, and acceptably administer in the ordinances of his church, will always remain dependent upon implicit and lawful obedience to that which he has commanded to be done in his name. The unfaithfulness of men does not alter the purposes of God, for the works, and the designs, and the purposes of God can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught, for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round. Remember, remember, that it is not the work of God that is frustrated, but the work of men.—D. C. 2:1, 2.

The claim made by the members of the Utah Church that they by promise are the representatives of the Church of Christ, in perpetuity is false in fact, lacking foundation in either gospel, law, or equity. If as Elder B. H. Roberts claims:—

The array of testimony, taken in connection with the law of the church as given in the revelations of God, clearly demonstrate that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was not disorganized at the death of the prophets Joseph and Hyrum; that such a thing was never contemplated in the work of God in this dispensation.—page 99.

Why did the leaders of his church proceed to reorganize it, for if the statements presented in this short essay, as taken from their own official journals, are of any value whatever, they prove conclusively that the portion of the church that went out to Utah under the leadership of Brigham Young did in word and deed attempt to reorganize the church, thus by their own act they admit, perforce, that the Church of Jesus Christ, as organized on the 6th day of April, 1830, was disorganized by the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and the subsequent confusion, division, and apostasy that ensued. And furthermore it can be proven by the laws of God, and the history of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, that all this was foreseen and predicted, as well as provided for in the aforesaid law.

Therefore, we contend that the claim made by Elder B. H. Roberts, "That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was not disorganized at the death of the prophets Joseph and Hyrum Smith," is disproven by facts that cannot be controverted. Therefore, in the disorganization of the church, from the causes named, we have ample evidence that the church in Utah, represented by the author of "Succession in the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," is not what he has represented it to be, and is therefore "a counterfeit, and writes fraud in the very title of it." For out of their own mouths are they judged, and out of their own books do they stand condemned.

JOSEPH DEWSNUP, Sen.

PARTICULARLY FOR MEN.

THE Society of the Sons of Zion was organized during the General Conference held at Independence, Missouri, in 1895, its objects being:—

1. Mutual improvement.

2. To increase love for the sanctity of home.

3. To promote social purity.

4. To teach the responsibility of parenthood.

5. To save the rising generation from vice and ignorance.

6. To aid the erring and encourage the fallen.

7. To do in fact what the Y. M. C. A. is doing in the world at large. This will in time we hope mean—"open reading rooms, gymnasiums," etc., for our young and middle-aged men.

As yet but few are acquainted with our society. Where at all possible we would like to establish local organizations, and we hope that some one in each of the various branches of the church will interest themselves and write us for direction. Eight or ten members are enough to start a society. As it will be impossible, however, to have local societies everywhere, we invite every man young and old to enroll their names on our general record and thus, through written or printed communications, we can not only assist you in understanding self and God's laws as applied to the physical being, but also to enlist your services in instructing and reclaiming others.

Many objections are urged:—

1. "Too many societies." Possibly, but when the church or any other society will take up and push the work we herein propose, we will gladly disband. Until then we will observe the motto: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

2. "It takes money which should go into the church treasury." There will be no expense for sometime, save for literature along these lines, which we can put in the hands of men and boys; and these they should have whether there is a society or not.

3. "Unless care is used you may do more harm than good." True, and we propose to use care; but as no overt act has ever yet been committed by us, and no evils resulted from our effort, it is best not to anticipate. It will be time enough to raise this objection when you find the wrong.

The advisory committee are J. A. Gunsolley, Lamoni, Iowa; M. H. Bond, St. Louis, Missouri; C. R. Duncan, Lebeck, Missouri; A. C. Barmore, California; T. W. Williams, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

J. A. Gunsolley is the president and located at headquarters. Any communication will readily reach him and will meet with prompt attention.

Bro. J. F. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, Iowa, is recording secretary; and those desiring enrollment or information relative thereto, will write or send their names to him. Those desiring information as to the organization of locals, or any direction, will address me, at the address given below, and I will send all needed instruction.

If those engaged in this work will endeavor to be discreet and careful, we can but expect increased interest in our undertaking, which will eventuate in lasting good to many souls.

Sincerely yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS,

Corresponding Secretary.

DIET REFORM.

A SEASON or so ago there visited this country a stalwart Englishman, Mr. Herbert W. Hart, who was interviewed by a representative of the New York Herald. Mr. Hart has been for many years an earnest advocate of diet reform, making investigations especially into the bread question.

"There is," he says, "no question of social economics as important as that of bread reform," and, he adds, "that applies particularly to America."

In showing the important relation of food reform to the health and well-being of all civilized communities, he quotes from Brillat-Savarin, who said, "The destiny of nations depends on the manner in which they feed themselves."

He made the startling announcement that "the scourge of all civilized countries is white bread," and went on:—

"I will go so far as to predict that unless there is a revolution in the bread-eating custom of this country the physical and mental condition of the people will get worse, and the children that are brought into the world will be inferior in type, weight, and physique, by reason of the deficiency of lime and silex in the food, which are absolutely essential to the normal growth of the bones, skulls, and teeth of the rising generation.

"If people are to be rendered healthy, first of all they must eat bread made from the whole grain of wheat, the same as eaten by the apostles, and which chiefly sustained them in their arduous work—the only kind that was capable of sustaining their bodies and brains in their task of impressing the multitudes of the truthfulness of their righteous cause.

"Bread made from the whole wheat was the kind of bread eaten by the ancient Romans, Greeks, Gauls, and Britons. Without this kind of bread the greatest men that have lived before or since the Christian era could not have accomplished what they did. The proper kind of bread should contain all the properties of the wheat, including lime, iron, and silex, absolutely necessary to make pure, healthy blood, and for want of which the American people employ thousands of dentists to supply imperfect teeth, which would grow to perfection if nature were not handicapped by the ignorance of the natural laws of dietetics.

"The great poet Shakespeare ate the whole meal bread, for it is put on record by himself that he used to take the wheat grain to Lucy's mill to be ground for family use, and it would be well for the civilized communities of the world that all families discard at once and forever the sophisticated and adulterated white, spongy starch, so-called bread of the present generation, and partake of only that kind on which the great nations of the world chiefly relied for their strength, and which produced the greatest architects, poets, artists, and generally the strongest and most handsome men and the most beautiful and accomplished women."—Phrenological Journal.

Caffall. 2:30 p. m., fellowship and testimony; the testimonies were numerous, quickly succeeding each other, and all very elevating and encouraging; a very happy spirit prevailed. Business of conference resumed Monday morning. The chairman drew the attention of the elders to Rules of Order, section 25. The president of the district tendered his resignation, so as to test the acceptance of his policy in the past or rejection of the same. It was unanimously resolved that we continue to sustain the president of the district. During its discussion much confidence was expressed and sympathy evinced in the arduous tasks which had in the past fallen into his hands. The elders of the district assured him that he might depend on them for their loyalty and support. The following resolutions were passed: 1. That as a district we affirm our unabated confidence in the authorities of the church, and pledge ourselves to so support them in everything that may be lawful and conducive to the righteous advancement of the work of the Lord. 2. That the thanks of the conference be accorded to the South Manchester branch for the use of their meeting room during the sittings of the conference; and also to the officers and members comprising the several branches for the financial and other aid given, which has contributed largely to the success of the annual gathering. 3, 4, 5. Resolutions thanking the sisters for "catering to the physical wants of the people during conference;" the "choir for their very efficient services;" and "the deacons for their good work," were passed. 6. Resolved that the best thanks of the meeting be tendered to our respected missionary in charge, Elder James Caffall, for his kind and efficient counsel and assistance which has been so ungrudgingly placed at our disposal during the whole of this conference. 7. Resolved that we express sympathy and condolence with Bro. and Sr. Taylor, of the South Salford branch, in the loss of their eldest son, and commend them to our heavenly Father for his consolation and peace; also referring them to the glorious hope which we entertain under such circumstances, through the gospel of Jesus Christ. The condition of the Leeds branch was considered, and it was decided to refuse to indorse the licenses of Elders W. H. Seekins and Tom Roberts, also Priest William Rudd, and Teacher Henry Warren, until a court of elders had fully examined specific charges laid against them.

The branch was shown to be in a very unsettled condition, despite the repeated efforts of the missionary in charge and the president of the district to effect peace and harmony. Despite the fact that some of the conference business was very irksome and trying, a very good spirit prevailed throughout; much instruction was to be obtained, and all parted fully prepared to exercise themselves as diligently as possible during the conference year.

AN APPEAL.

Having now on hand about one half enough to purchase a tent for the Utah mission, and believing that by its use we can reach more people and to better advantage than under present conditions, I take this means of appealing to all to assist in raising enough to assure the purchase.

Fifty, by sending one dollar each, will do the work. Five hundred, at ten cents each, or one thousand, at even five cents each, will make it an accomplished fact. Send in your muckles and your miles then, and do it at once, and thus confer on that mission and people a lasting favor, by thus showing your faith by your works. Do not be backward in sending small amounts if you cannot afford to do more.

Please remember that delay on your part means a delay in getting the tent at work, and it should be in use now.

Two things should be remembered; viz., that it is difficult to get places in which to preach the word in Utah, because of the opposition of the church leaders, and that our people are few in numbers and should be aided financially to sustain the work. Hence the necessity for a tent and the reason for asking contributions. Please aid us in the good cause and help to reach the people of Utah.

Send contributions to the undersigned, addressing me at No. 532 East Second South Street, Salt Lake City, Utah.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT,
Pres. Rocky Mountain mission.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Canada Mission, Dear Brothers and Sisters:—Having been appointed to labor in Canada I embrace this opportunity to address you through the church paper. As a servant of God, anxious for the peace and happiness of this mission; eager to promote its welfare and greatness, and to see all its saints laboring together in unity and good will, I request your hearty coöperation, that "the work intrusted to all" now before us to perform, may be accomplished in that peace that follows work done according to the law.

I am glad that God and the church has permitted me to return to my native land—and to the people for and with whom I have labored in the dear dead past; may uninterrupted concord, firmly grounded on mutual affections and respect between missionaries, local officers, and laity, ever reign.

On bended knee I thank God that I find the mission in so good a condition—that there is no burning questions to disturb our peace or strain our relationship as saints. This happy condition is, in a great measure, due to the prudent guidance of our venerable predecessor, Apostle John H. Lake; may sweet peace be his, now and ever. In losing Elder Lake this mission has met with a great loss—this his successor feels deeply; but believing that God has promised additional light, wisdom, and strength to the faithful toilers, may we struggle to attain to conditions under which we may obtain the promised blessings.

For the present it is thought best that the missionaries remain in their present fields of labor assigned them by Elder Lake; should it be thought wise to effect any change, this can be arranged at the June conferences of each district. It is desired that the missionaries will push out into new fields, so far as practicable, leaving the burden of care in branches to the local authorities. In your labor for the Master, exercise unbounded confidence even in the midst of danger, and look to the Lord Omnipotent when no means of escape is manifest. We should look for his protection and fear no evil when walking in the sunny way of duty; always remember that you are on God's errand, and that not even a sparrow in the dell falls without your Father, and that the very hairs of your head are numbered. No difficulty need heavily oppress us if carried to "Our Father." Always honor God's claims upon you; see that the law is observed, and yet pity the weakness of those who go astray. "Deal gently with the erring one." Be patient and kind in your administration of the law, weighing matters before God ere you act before men. Work, work, work, the time is short, the end is near, the coming of the Master draws nigh; sound aloud the gospel trump, that the people in every hamlet and city of this Dominion may be warned.

Now a word with regard to tithing and offerings. There are a number of elders and priests who have offered themselves for the mission field if they can obtain partial support from the church for the loved ones at home. But the Bishop had to warn the Twelve not to send any more to the field, for there was no money for the support of their families. No one, who was not present in those councils can know the feelings of the Twelve and Bishop when compelled to inform those men that they were unable to put them in the field. Canada has several good men, among them two who were formerly prominent Baptist ministers, who have made application for a mission. Will the saints arise to duty and do their part in "the work entrusted to all," by putting forth an effort to pay their tithing, and thus bring great blessings upon themselves, and help to open the way for an increase of the missionary force. Start now; send in your mite at once. Do not wait till you can pay a large amount; send what you can to the agents of your respective districts.

I hope you will remember me at the altar of prayer, that I may do my part, and with you, at last be permitted to dwell with Christ.

Those wishing to write me may send all mail to 474 Adelaide Street, London, Ontario.

Your fellow laborer,

R. C. EVANS.

TORONTO Ont., May 10.

To all the Saints of the Southeastern Mission, Greeting:—I see by the list of appointments that I am to be associated for another year in laboring for the great cause of truth, in this part of the Master's vineyard. In entering upon the labors of another year I feel a little more hopeful as to the success of the work in this mission, as I think I can see some improvement along the line; but let us remember that we are invited "up higher," and that unless we give heed to the invitation, and accept it in a practical way, we will be very liable to fall below our present standing, which we can not afford to do.

The opportunities for preaching the gospel in new places are constantly increasing, and calls are heard in different directions from the people, asking for the "bread of life." Is there one who realizes what this work is, who can or will fail to do his or her part in giving the people a chance to hear the message of truth? Is there one who has received the priesthood who will "come under my condemnation, by reason of neglecting to lift up their voices in my cause?" If so "for such there is tribulation and anguish."—D. C. 116:2.

Brethren, do not bury your talents, but use them righteously, and your reward shall be great. And that the good that may be accomplished by the elders and others holding the priesthood be not hindered, let all the brethren and sisters, be diligent in using every legitimate means to assist them, inasmuch as the work is "entrusted to all." No one can afford to fail in doing his or her part, for the reason that it will entail a corresponding loss on them in the day of awards.

In the late revelation to the church, the Lord tells us that "many of the sacrifices made by the church have been acceptable" to him. This is encouraging. But to whom does the encouragement belong? Undoubtedly to those who have made, and not to those who have not made the sacrifices referred to. Who receives the benefits of baptism? Those who are baptized, evidently. Who receives the benefits of faith? Those who exercise it, certainly. Who receives the benefits of confirmation? He who is confirmed, is it not? Now who has been benefited by the sacrifices which the Lord says have been acceptable to him? There can be but one answer, Those who made them. "Gather my saints together unto me, those who have made covenant with me by sacrifice."—Psalms 50:5. If any have failed in doing their part, will they now take courage and at once commence the work thus far neglected? Who can say no?

To the brethren who have been appointed to do mission work in this field I feel to say: God bless you in your labors and give you abundant success. I trust that none but the kindest feelings toward each other may have place in our hearts, and that each and all of us may so live and labor as to receive the approbation of our Father in heaven. Please don't forget your reports at the times required by the Twelve.

Bro. D. E. Tucker will have charge of the work in Florida, Georgia, and the following counties in Alabama: Henry, Geneva, Dale, Barbour, Pike, and Coffee.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn will be in charge of the work in Tennessee and Kentucky.

All labor done in these subdivisions by others of the missionary force should be reported to the brethren named, and not to me. Also calls for preaching, propositions for debate, etc. In short anything that should be reported to the missionary in charge, report it to them, and not directly to me. I think I can safely recommend Bro. Chatburn to the saints of Tennessee and Kentucky as an efficient laborer, and worthy of their confidence and support. Also Bro. J. F. Henson, who will likely spend most of the year with them. Bro. Tucker is already well known in his field, and therefore needs no recommendation there.

Will branch officers please see to the settlement of any difficulties that may arise in the branches without calling on the traveling missionaries when it is not an absolute necessity for them to assist? I think it unwise, to say the least, to appoint the general missionaries to sit on elders' courts, etc., in the settlement of branch or personal difficulties, when local elders may be secured just as easily. Why should this extra burden be laid on the missionary, thus hindering him in his work? Doctrine and Covenants 122:7 says that, "The Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected, to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons," etc. Do "ye all" see?

Again: "In matters of personal importance and conduct arising in branches and districts, the authorities of those branches and districts should be authorized and permitted to settle them, the traveling councils taking cognizance of those only in which the law and usages of the church are involved and the general interests of the church are concerned."—D. C. 120:7.

This is plain enough. The local authorities are invited to make special efforts to assist in pushing the work into new fields or places during the year. Sometimes an elder or even a member can work up meetings in adjoining neighborhoods, where they are acquainted, to better advantage than the missionary who is entirely unacquainted. There is room for all who will occupy wisely. The work is worthy of the best efforts of all to sustain and extend it. The Lord does not demand unreasonable sacrifices of any. None can afford to refuse to make what he does demand. Let us have a united effort and push the work with vigor. Victory is waiting for all the faithful. "The willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days."—D. C. 64:6.

"Perilous times" are here. Hard times is the cry from every quarter. Plagues and pestilences are abroad in the land. War and famine are taking off their thousands. Storms and tempests, with the "fierce and vivid lightning," are making themselves felt and feared, and causing terror among the people. Earthquakes are causing "groanings in the midst of her." The "sea and the waves" are "roaring," and "upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity." These with other "signs of the times" indicate the fact that the time of the coming of our Lord "is near, even at the door."

"And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. . . . Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."—Luke 21:34, 36.

Saints, are we prepared to "escape" these things? Are we able to stand should the Lord come now?

My permanent address is Independence, Missouri. If any wish to write me and do not know my whereabouts, if they will write me there, letters will be forwarded.

T. C. KELLEY.

HARDIN, Ky., May 8.

As Bro. J. W. Gillen has placed me in charge of Western Nebraska again, I would like to say to the ministry and saints of the mission that my permanent address is Dow City, Iowa, and that I would like to hear from any in the mission who desire labor done in their locality. When you write don't forget to say what the prospect seems as to getting a place in which to preach and a hearing on the part of the people. The missionary force is small and we are anxious to do all the good we can.

For the present Brn. Porter and Payne will labor in the southeast part of the mission.

Brethren, the harvest truly is great and the laborers are few, therefore let all the local laborers do all they can. Don't wait for the missionary, but do what you can. What is of as much worth as the gospel and the salvation therein promised? What you can do to you may seem but little; but if you do that as well as you can God will bless you in so doing.

Your brother and colaborer in Christ,
DAVID M. RUDD.

To the Saints and Friends of Oregon and Washington; Greeting:—Bro. A. M. Chase and the writer having been appointed to labor in the above mentioned field, desire the cooperation of all saints and friends in the work lying before us—the preaching of the gospel as far and widely as we can. All wishing us to labor in their neighborhoods please let us hear from them.

Bro. Chase is a fine singer and will be greatly appreciated as a worker in the cause. We have a tent that can be used if it is thought best. We want to hear from the saints. We are desirous of doing a good work this coming year; and we feel and fully realize that we must have the help of the saints. We will begin work at Drain, Douglass County, Oregon, and will be governed by calls and the promptings of the spirit from that on. Let us hear from you at that place. Yours to labor for the spread of the work.
HIRAM L. HOLT.

REUNION NOTICES.

There will be a reunion at Mt. Eden, Indiana, June 6, of the family and relatives of John Scott, deceased, who was one of the first settlers of Southern Indiana; he raised a family of eleven children, nine boys and two girls; six boys and one girl are living; all of whom at one time belonged to the Christian Church. Old Mt. Eden was first occupied by the Baptists, second by Christians, and third by Latter Day Saints. The day will be spent in religious service discussing the prominent religious questions of the day interspersed with oriental music. Robert, James, and Harbert, will occupy the forenoon, and Wesley, David, and M. R. the afternoon. All are cordially invited; a large crowd and a good time is expected.

INMAN REUNION.

A reunion of the Central Nebraska district will be held at Inman, Holt County, Nebraska, June 3 to 6 inclusive. Inman is on the Black Hills line of the Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley Railway, about 185 miles from Missouri Valley and Omaha. The place where the tent will be pitched is in a grove about one fourth of a mile east of the town, where will be found suitable places for camping. Fuel, hay, and pasturage will be free; corn and oats fifteen cents per bushel. One of the Bishopric, with several other prominent ministers will be present, which assures a pleasant and instructive reunion. Keep your eye on the date, and arrange your business so as to spend a few days in the association of saints, and in the enjoyment of a spiritual feast.

FOURTH QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

At our late General Conference, the Fourth Quorum of Priests, at one of their sessions held there, Bro. George Edwards asked release from the office of secretary, which was granted. Bro. Edwards was afterwards elected to the office of First Counselor to succeed Bro. F. J. Ebeling. Bro. Edwards has since been ordained to that office. A vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Edwards for his services, and the work done by him was very highly appreciated. Bro. F. M. Pitt was elected secretary, and the members of the quorum will please remember to send reports or letters to him at the following address, F. M. Pitt, No. 277 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northwest Kansas District, Greeting:—You will see by the minutes of our last district conference, that it was made the duty of the district president to appoint a two days' meeting at each of the following places: Minersville and Blue Rapids, whenever notified that their respective church buildings were ready for dedication. Now to carry out my instructions, I will appoint June 12 and 13 for the meetings at Minersville, as I have been notified that that building is ready; and I am very glad to inform you that I have encouraging words from Brethren Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley that (no preventing providence) they will be with us, and several others of the elders: so there will be plenty of good talent to make the occasion instructive and profitable for the cause. So we give you all a cordial invitation to be with us when the first church building in the district is dedicated to the service of our God.

On account of the extremely close times and the small number of saints in Minersville I would suggest to the friends to come with wagons and tents, all who can, so as to be prepared to care for yourselves. The saints there will do all in their power to accommodate visitors. Bring with you the Spirit of the Master and all will be right. We hope our missionary in charge will be with us, too; so come.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

HOLDS BY BIBLE LORE.

CHICAGO CLERGYMEN WRITES IN DEFENSE OF SACRED HISTORY.

In the Tribune of Sunday, in the review of "A history of the warfare of science with theology," Professor A. D. White's new book, appeared what seems a very formidable impeachment of the Bible as viewed from the evangelical standpoint. Will you allow a brief reply to the positions claimed by Professor White? I ask this to show that there is a sufficient reply possible from a conservative evangelical standpoint.

Professor White's argument is, in brief, that inasmuch as the ancient monuments of Assyria, Babylonia, and Egypt, and the sacred books of the Persians and others contain accounts of the events of the Bible and doctrines somewhat similar, therefore the Bible accounts are taken from these ancient monuments; that the narratives are mostly myths, and the doctrines the result of a natural evolution of belief. He brings in support of these positions the claimed results of higher criticism that the books of the Bible especially the pentateuch, are of far later composition than the times claimed for them, and still later than the events and records of the monuments and sacred books. I think I have stated his position fairly.

As to the Chaldean inscriptions, he states they long antedate "the time assigned in Genesis to the creation." I quote his words. Now, there is no date assigned in Genesis to creation. The Bible simply states: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." He further says: "Probably 2,000 years before the scriptural date assigned to the migration of Abraham from Ur of the Chaldees this Chaldean civilization had bloomed forth in art, science, and literature."

Now, "probably" is a rather indefinite term to use as the basis of such sweeping claims as he puts forth. However, here is proof upon one vital point: There was such a state of literature as would educate men who could produce the Bible records and such a state of advanced civilization as would produce a people capable of the social, political, and religious economy of the Israelites.

PRIOR DATE INFERENTIAL.

Professor White mentions the fact that the Chaldean inscriptions contain accounts of the creation, the tree of life, the Sabbath, the deluge, the Tower of Babel, and other events, and that these long antedate the Bible accounts. Now, to begin with, this is confirmatory evidence of the truth of the (alleged) facts stated. Professor White's claim that the Bible accounts are copied from the Chaldean, or derived from them or from those who inscribed them, is wholly inferential. There is nothing of this kind stated in either record. The fact that the one may antedate the other is not of itself sufficient evidence that the latter is a copy of the former. There is another supposition possible—namely: that both were derived from the same source, or were records of the same general knowledge prevalent at the time in some form. If one is a copy of the other an examination and comparison of the two should show this. The original would show clearness, precision, and consistency, while the other would vary in these and other respects. Now, this is the fact. The records of the Bible show high literary excellence, insomuch that they are among our literary standards to-day.

The two records, when placed side by side, show at once the most glaring contrast. The biblical accounts are precise and consistent, and, as compared with the puerile and grossly grotesque narrative of either the monuments or the sacred books of the heathen, simple and credible. The Bible accounts read like carefully prepared and preserved records, while those of the monuments and sacred books of the ancients read like stories which have accumulated the crude and improbable variations of orally transmitted traditions.

CONTRAST OF ETHICAL STANDARDS.

This contrast also appears when the Bible is compared doctrinally with the sacred books cited. There is little dispute as to the high ethical standard of the Bible. The Bible, and not the sacred books, is the source of our modern ethics. The results of the adoption of the Bible, either by an individual or a people, are too well known to need argument, while the nations which have the so-called sacred books are as they were or worse than centuries ago. Professor Max Mueller, when asked why he did not translate certain parts of the Shastas, replied, "They are too indecent for publication." It is not denied that the monuments and the books both contain much truth. The Bible represents mankind as beginning with the truth and as afterwards losing it. This agrees with the facts as shown by both monuments and sacred books. Why should not such early records show at least traces of this original knowledge, both historical and ethical? Mankind all once knew about these early events, such as creation, Eden, the deluge, and preserved this knowledge by tradition.

The dates and chronology of these ancient inscriptions are not at all of such established certainty as to warrant the weighty conclusions Professor White places upon them. It is to be borne in mind that 6,000 years is a very long time—nearly 200 successive generations—and this is the period claimed for the earliest events by Professor White. This is principally calculated from a single inscription made by Nabonidus, 554 B. C. It is as follows, as translated by Professor Sayce: "I dug down [for] the foundation stone of Naram-Sin, the son of Sargon, which for 3,200 years no King my predecessor had seen." Now, this is from one of the self-glorifying monuments by which all these ancient monarchs delighted, after the manner of Belshazzar, to magnify their doings and importance. They especially delighted in long ancestry and dynasties, as is seen in the ridiculously extended ages claimed by the Chinese and Egyptians, and although this monarch was one of the most accurate, as Sayce shows, yet he is in this record magnifying to the utmost his greatness. In view of all this is it not unsafe at least to cast aside records so long received and so well approved in other respects as the Bible narratives for those of such a character? Yet this is what Professor White asks us to do. Surely such reliance upon so poorly attested records savors of credulity.

"TWO BROTHERS" LATER THAN JOSEPH.

As to the Egyptian story of the "Two Brothers," which Professor White declares was the basis of the biblical story of Joseph and Potipher's wife, Professor Sayce states it no older than the exodus, and other Egyptologists say a thousand years later. The first date is several centuries after Joseph's time. It also bears all the marks of a carelessly transmitted and exaggerated tradition and is full of crudities and grotesque narrations.

Professor White objects to the biblical story and doctrine of the fall, as do also Mr. Savage and Dr. Lyman Abbott and indeed all the so-called liberal school. But the fall is a fact, account for it as we please. Man is a fallen race. All sin, sorrow, and suffering attest this. Savage races are races in a state of decay and not of advance. The earlier peoples were more devout than their descendants. The primitive Romans and Greeks were more pious than the later generations. The ancient civilizations appeared at their best at or soon after beginning. The very inscriptions and ancient books, to which Professor White so confidently appeals as the origin of the Bible, are in themselves evidence of the early state of knowledge of divine truth. The descendants of these peoples would have been incapable of such thoughts or records. No race has ever lifted itself from the state of savagery save by an impulse from without and the present high state of civilized man is traceable, as all admit, to the religion of the book which Professor White so antagonizes. China and India and Persia are to-day no better for all their sacred books than they were centuries ago.

The account which the higher critics give of the origin of the Pentateuch is incredible from any literary or historical standpoint. Here it is as given by the school of Wellhausen:—

In the fifth century, a thousand years after Moses, the priests composed the laws which are found in Exodus and Leviticus, weaving into them such rudimentary laws as the Ten Commandments, or a part of them which they found current among the people, and which some of them allow were made by Moses. In order to give the composition a savor of antiquity the priests used occasionally words and phrases of the age of Moses, and to further commend it to the people interlarded it with the legislative part the historical narrative of Israel's descent into Egypt, life there, and deliverance, and the subsequent life and wanderings in the wilderness, and conquest in the land of Canaan, and history there. They injected into the narrative such miracles as the plagues of Egypt, the opening of the Red Sea, the destruction of the Egyptians, the miracles of the wilderness, and the crossing of Jordan. They placed the name of Moses at the top as the author of the whole composition and gave it out to the people as his work. It was received by the Jews as being of olden time and the work of Moses. They swallowed the whole forgery, and have continued to believe through their whole history that this is the veritable and inspired law of God and true account of their past. Even so great students and critics as Hillel, who lived but a comparatively short time after, and Gamaliel, his great follower, received it as true. The most careful scrutiny of the Jews, who counted every word in their sacred writings, did not discover the forgery. Now, all this is simply incredible. Far more so than the old view.

STATEMENTS OF PROFESSOR SAYCE.

Professor White appeals to Professor Sayce in support of his theory. Let us hear what Sayce writes of the testimony of archæology to the claimed results of higher criticism: "The evidence of Oriental archæology is on the whole distinctly unfavorable to the position of the higher critics." (Higher Criticism and the Monuments, Revell, p. 561.) He also adds on the same page: "The cuneiform inscriptions have restored the historical credit of certain passages of the Pentateuch which had been resolved into myth," and we may confidently expect the same testimony will yet be found to much more of the scriptural record.

As to the denials of Professor White of the truth of the books of Ezra and Nehemiah testimony just published is at hand. In the Expository Review for March is an article by Professor A. R. S. Kennedy of Edenburg University upon a work recently published by Dr. Eduard Meyer Halle, author of "History of Antiquity," a standard work. Both these scholars are of the critical school and of the highest rank. Dr. Meyer writes: "The documents preserved in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah are [substantially] genuine official documents and the chronology of the chronicler is correct in every particular. Ezra embodies, as scarcely another of antiquity, the very corner-stones of history royal rescripts and government archives."

The same magazine above referred to contains a review of a work by Professor Harnack of Leipsic, a scholar of wide and great reputation of the critical school, "The Chronology of Ancient Christian Literature," translated by Dr. Sanday. In this occurs this passage: "There was a time—the great mass of the public is still living in such a time—in which people felt obliged to regard the oldest Christian literature, including the New Testament, as a tissue of deception and falsification. That time is past. For science it was an episode in which she learned much and often, and after which she has much to forget. The results of the following investigations go in a reactionary direction still further beyond what may be called the middle position of the criticism of the day. The oldest literature of the church is in the main points and in most of its details from the point of view of literary history veracious and trustworthy."

CHRIST RECEIVED THE OLD TESTAMENT.

Christ himself received the Old Testament as true and quoted from it, preached from it, said of the law: "One jot and one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law until all be ful-

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 26, 1897.

E. D. HOWE'S WORK, "THE MANUSCRIPT FOUND," ETC.

THE following clipping is from the Cleveland, Ohio, Recorder, of May 18, sent us by Bro. J. W. Burgett, and will prove readable and useful to the ministry, as showing what some, practically on the grounds where the "Spalding Story" originated, think of the whole affair.

I was greatly surprised to see in the World of Sunday a long article on the Mormons, in which the old and long since exploded theory that Solomon Spalding wrote the Book of Mormon is again exploited. That theory was put forth by E. D. Howe, of Painesville, many years ago, in a book which was called "Mormonism Unveiled." The book was a lie from beginning to end, and it is now pretty certain that Howe knew that it was a lie when he published it. At any rate he had in his possession at the time, Spalding's silly story in manuscript and yet told a gauzy yarn about that manuscript having been lost in a printing office in Pittsburg. Howe's book stood as the history of the subject for many years. But about a decade ago, President Fairchild, of Oberlin College, while in Hawaii, discovered among the papers left to the daughter of Howe, who lives there, the original document. Knowing its great historic importance, President Fairchild brought it home with him, and it is now in the library at Oberlin College.

The Mormons, in collaboration with President Fairchild, have published the "Manuscript Found." There is not the least resemblance between that and the Book of Mormon. There is not a line or expression in the one book that is even similar to the other. There is not even an idea that is similar. All this is well known to anyone who has examined the subject and who has enough information in regard to the matter to make anything that he writes worth a moment's attention. The World was evidently imposed upon by some careless penny-a-liner.

Of course this discovery of Solomon Spalding's stupid book does not explain how the Book of Mormon did originate. It simply demonstrates beyond question, that it did not originate in the way Howe and all who have followed him have asserted that it did. The Mormons have made a great deal of the discovery, and well they may. They assert that it was clearly an interposition of providence to protect their sacred book from its vilifiers. They regard it much in the same way as they do the fact that the temple at Kirtland, during the almost half century that it stood without an occupant, did not receive a crack in the walls or a bit of damage from frost or weather except that the shingles rotted away.

The clipping seems to be taken from the editorial correspondence columns of the Recorder; but of this we are not certain. The writer speaks positively and evidently because he knows whereof he affirms. We present his statements, evidently those of a live newspaper man, and one accustomed to getting at facts and quick to see points in evidence, and probably as well qualified to state them correctly as are the enemies of the latter-day work.

In addition to the fact and circumstances of the discovery, of the "Manuscript Found" of Solomon Spalding, which exposed the scheme of E. D. Howe, Hurlbut, and others, who tried to make it the basis of the Book of Mormon, it is well known and has been stated repeatedly by old residents in and about Kirtland, Painesville, and Willoughby, Ohio, that Howe himself confessed that there was nothing in said theory, and that the Book of Mormon could not be accounted for upon that ground. Indeed he is on record in a written statement practically to that effect.

One would think that the discovery of the "Spalding Manuscript," the complete refutation of the theory of which it was made the basis, by the elders right at Kirtland and all over the country, together with the proofs presented of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, would put a stop to further efforts to connect it with the Spalding Story. However, it is probably well that the threadbare tale is occasionally retold, as it serves to bring out the facts concerning the origin of the Book of Mormon and the divinity of the latter-day work. The opposition is helping to correct the statements of those past who have imagined vain things, and of those who in the present love to repeat them.

As the work is to increase the more opposed, we may look for continued opposition in the "hastening time."

WORK AT NAUVOO.

BRN. WELD, Evans, and Snively, laboring in the Nauvoo district are having busy times in and active campaign against Brighamite elders, in Nauvoo and vicinity, and principally in Nauvoo itself. It appears that the old city and the outlying districts have been fixed upon by a large force of Utah missionaries, who are seeking to impress the people with their peculiar philosophy and claiming to be the proper and legal representatives of the faith taught by the Seer, but in such a way as to mislead the public upon many points which mark the lines of distinction between the Reorganization and the church of Utah.

The Nauvoo press has called attention to the labors of both churches. The brethren have set up the district tent and are at work in good form and evidently with a determination to draw the lines of distinction so plainly that all may see them, judging from their handbill, which we reprint, as follows:—

TENT MEETINGS.

In the city of Nauvoo, corner 13th and Knight Streets, Elders of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will hold a series of tent meetings, beginning Tuesday evening, May 18, 1897.

The object of the meetings will be to set forth the faith of the church. Also, to show the distinction between the Utah Church under the presidency of Brigham Young and his successors, all of Salt Lake City, Utah, and the Reorganized Church under the presidency of Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, son of the martyred Joseph.

Special invitation is extended to Elders O. O. Richins, M. M. Stookey, George A. Hill and Ezra Christianson or any other Utah elders, with privilege to occupy half the time as long as they wish. Everybody is cordially invited.

F. M. WELD,

Missionary in charge of Nauvoo district.

Judging from this effort and from what we hear of evasive and other questionable methods employed by the Utah elders in the region of country named, it seems that the true position of the church is to be brought clearly and strongly to the attention of Nauvoo and its people. The Utah people will doubtless learn, if not already learned by them, that the statement of the angel that the work would "increase the more opposed," has an application to all forms of opposition to the truth, including their misrepresentation of Latter Day Saintism.

The reaction against their efforts will help the work of the Reorganized Church at Nauvoo and all through that region of country, if results are similar to what they have elsewhere been when the elders of the Reorganization have presented its work in contrast to Utah Mormonism. The letter, and spirit, and methods of the two are so different that the people cannot but see, and feel, and learn to know the superiority of the truth in contrast to the perversion of it. Success to the brethren in standing for the right. We believe the Lord will stand by them with abundant help in their work of maintaining the faith of the Master. Kirtland, Independence, Far West, Nauvoo, and adjoining regions have been occupied and the gospel standard replanted by the Reorganization, while the forces of the apostasy have been driven in and almost compelled to cease mission work in the States for years. There is no good reason to believe that their present efforts will result in anything but repeated repulse and defeat. There is hope, however, that the honest in heart in Utah will learn the causes of their trouble and abandon error for truth and find deliverance.

AUTUMN LEAVES — "RELIGIO'S ARENA," AND CURRENT EVENTS.

WITH the forthcoming June number of Autumn Leaves its readers will find some features that add considerably to the value of the magazine as a publication for the young people, and indeed for all classes of readers. We refer to the changed and enlarged department devoted to the general Religio work, which under the heading of "The Religio's Arena" will henceforth occupy from fourteen to sixteen pages of the Leaves, and carry to its readers the matter formerly sought to be conveyed in the Religio Program.

The Program has been discontinued and the Religio department in the Leaves substituted therefor, and placed in the editorial charge of Sr. Louise Palfrey, of Macon, Missouri; who, with the several department editors appointed, has undertaken to supply religious, literary, and general matter required for the Religio-Literary wants of the young people composing the Religio organization.

The first installment of the work of Sr. Palfrey and her associates appears in the June number of the Leaves, and will be appreciated by those who realize the value of such efforts in behalf of our progressing young people. The work so well begun will be extended and improved as the appreciation of it increases the demand therefor. It is worthy the hearty support of every family, and we trust will meet with prompt and genuine encouragement in subscriptions to the publication. The young and older ones will find in this department a fund of valuable information connected with the general study of the latter-day work; will find it presented in desirable and in systematic manner and method. The energies and talents of many will be devoted to exploring the vast fields that have been but partially examined for confirmatory proofs of the work of the last days.

In addition to this improved feature still another important one is to be added, beginning with the July number. Bro. Duncan Campbell is to edit a department devoted to "current events," in which the leading items of importance connected with the passing events and history of our own times are to be given. This will prove both valuable and interesting. Bro. Campbell has been assigned from fourteen to sixteen pages for that purpose, and will no doubt fill the space with such matter as will prove very helpful to the student of world affairs connected with the work of the church and the individual work of its membership.

In order to place the magazine with its added attractions within the reach of all—Religio workers and others—the management has decided to make the following offer: Autumn Leaves will be mailed in packages of five or more to any address at $1.00 per year, payable in advance; or if preferred, any five or more persons may have the magazine sent to individual addresses of one post office at $1.00 each, if paid in advance. Besides this, the offer of the HERALD and Leaves to one address at $3.00 per year in advance is open to all.

Subscriptions solicited; address Bro. Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. G. PITT, Chicago, May 17:—

I am kept very busy; last week at Sandwich, in the city Sunday, this week Piper City, and Peoria next Sunday. I baptized four at Chicago, Sunday, May 9. Four more have given their names for baptism for Sunday, May 30. I have enjoyed excellent liberty in presenting the word. Am trying to visit most of my field before I leave for Europe. I expect to leave Illinois about June 22, and board ship which leaves New York July 17. Am feeling well.

Bro. T. W. Williams, from Council Bluffs, Iowa, the 18th inst., gives notice of the coming conference of the Pottawattamie district, etc., as follows:—

Will you please state in your next week's issue that the Pottawattamie district conference convenes at Crescent, Iowa, May 29 and 30, and a large attendance from the district is expected. If any of the brethren enroute west could stop off and assist us then it would be fully appreciated. All goes well here. Visited Harlan, Tabor, and Thugman saints last week. At Tabor I preached a funeral sermon in the congregational church, receiving divine aid and human appreciation.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE HERALD readers will find a study in finances in this issue—the Bishop's itemized report of receipts and expenditures. This leaves but little space for other matter, in the present number. However the statement of willing offerings received and of limited expenditure for the amount of work accomplished, will be found encouraging and profitable by all lovers of the work.

Bro. Quincy Anderson, of Ozark, Missouri, writes of his interest in the work. As an indication of it he subscribes for the HERALD, to keep posted on church movements, that he may be acquainted and in touch with Bro. I. N. White reports success in his late debate with one Rev. Leonard, of the Christian Church, at Scammon, Kansas. He was especially blessed in his efforts and gained the good will of the people, notwithstanding the abusive methods and misrepresentations of his opponent. Bro. White is feeling well over one of the most significant victories he has been permitted to win.

The following resolution, acknowledging the Cuban insurgents as belligerents, was passed by the United States Senate by a vote of 41 to 14: "Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives, that a condition of public war exists between the government of Spain and the government proclaimed and for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States of America shall maintain a strict neutrality between the contending powers according to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory in the United States." A seventeen days' armistice has been arranged between the Turkish and Grecian armies. This was done, it is said, through the influence of the Czar of Russia. While the Sultan firmly insists upon his demands for indemnity, it is thought that through the influence of the powers they will be modified.

Much matter of importance has been held over for next issue. Pastorals, letters, etc., delayed, will appear in our next number.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of Southern California District:—Once more I will invite your attention to the fact, that the office of Church Historian for this district has simply been in name, only one article having been handed me for record during the two and one half years since my appointment. I take this method to inform you that I expect to be present at the coming annual reunion, and hereby request that articles for record may be handed me there. Unless there is more attention paid to this matter between now and our October conference, I shall resign as historian, and use my influence to have the office abolished.

Respectfully yours,

R. R. DANA, Historian.

University P. O., Los Angeles, May 16.

To the Saints living in the Nauvoo District:
Greeting:—There are a great many Utah elders sent out through the States this season and of late a number have been working in different places in this district, and getting favors on our credit, because of not making a proper, if any distinction. Within the last few days some of the missionary force of the district have met four of them in the city of Nauvoo and found it necessary for the advancement of the truth and the good of the public to spend some time in showing the people the differences; at the same time extending to the Utah elders the use of our tent, with equal privileges of time, etc., to canvass the differences; which they have refused.

It will therefore make it necessary for us to pursue the same course all over the district.

Will the branch presidents and scattered saints please take notice, and see that all such elders make a proper explanation of the differences between them and us, also to notify me at once of their presence, that proper steps may be taken.

Those of the scattered saints who may not know the territory included in the Nauvoo district, will say it comprises the following counties: Davis, Wapello, Jefferson, Van Buren, Lee, Des Moines, and Louisa, in Iowa; Hancock, McDonough, Adams, Schuyler, Brown, and Pike, in Illinois; and Clark, Scotland, and Schuyler, in Missouri.

Yours for the advancement of truth,

F. M. WELD,

District President and Missionary in charge.

Home address, Lamoni, Iowa.

Nauvoo, Illinois, May 20, 1897.

INMAN REUNION.

Central Nebraska district reunion will be held at Inman, Holt County, Nebraska, June 3 to 6 inclusive. One of the Bishopric, F. A. Smith, H. O. Smith, and other prominent ministers will be present, nothing preventing, and this assures us a very instructive session. One afternoon will be devoted to Sunday school work, which we hope will be a very pleasant feature. As many as can will bring Winnowed Songs and the three Quarterlies with their Bibles; the latter being needed in the preaching services as well as the Sunday school work.

Fuel, hay, and pasturage will be free; corn and oats fifteen cents per bushel.

Inman is on the Black Hills line of the Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley Railroad, about 185 miles from Omaha and Missouri Valley. The place where the tent is to be pitched is in a grove about one fourth of a mile east of the town, where there is a pleasant place for camping.

Remember the date and arrange your business so as to be present that you may receive growth in the knowledge of the truth, and additional spiritual grace to make proper application of that knowledge. Come praying that God by his Spirit may be present to cheer and encourage the saints, and convert the sinner.

filled." He verified the account of creation, the story of the murder of Abel, the flood, Abraham, the destruction of Sodom and Lot's wife, Moses and his miracles, Elisha and his miracles, David and the Psalms. Christ affirms the truth of Daniel's prophecies, and makes the story of Jonah a type of his own resurrection, and in one verse affirms the canonicity, authenticity, truth, and inspiration of the whole Old Testament. (Luke 24: 44, Rv.). "All things must needs be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses, and the prophets, and the Psalms concerning me. Then opened their minds that they might understand the scriptures and said unto them: Thus it is written that the Christ should suffer and rise again from the dead the third day, and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all the nations." Here Christ makes this, which the Outlook recently styled "a collection of anonymous oriental writings, composed at various times and in several places, altered and amended by many persons"—Christ takes this as the basis of all his work, rests his claims upon it, and sends his disciples out with this to affirm their gospel. If Professor White, Drs. Savage and Abbott are right, Jesus Christ was either mistaken or a guilty partaker in the most gigantic fraud of all history. Either of these suppositions is utterly at variance with his universally admitted character for wisdom, candor, and holiness. The issue narrows itself down to this: Who is right, these latter-day critics or the whole mass of Jewish testimony from the fifth century to our own day, backed by the express testimony of Christ and his apostles and the whole Christian church, Catholic, Greek, and Protestant? It further is condensed into this: Who is right, Jesus Christ or the higher critics?

Jesus is an admitted fact by all. His character is acknowledged by all. His testimony is therefore good. It has never been impeached. This matchless witness then stands between the Old Testament and the new. He places his hand upon the old and affirms its authenticity, its truthfulness, and its inspiration. He sends out his disciples and authorizes them to speak in his name, saying: "He that receiv-eth you receiveth me." Jesus is therefore personally responsible for the whole Bible. The most profound argument for the Bible, the most simple, satisfying to the wisest, yet comprehended by the child, is this: We know the Bible is true because Jesus said so. ALEXANDER PATTERSON.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

IS LIBERALISM ADVANCING?

FOR fifteen years I have been identified with, and interested in, liberal work. I watched carefully the methods employed in carrying on the work, both by the press and the rostrum, and upon the whole, the results are not what I hoped to have seen by this time. I hope this will not be taken as the wail of disappointment, for I am as much interested in the work as ever. Perhaps I have not that burning enthusiasm to turn the religious world upside down and play havoc with men's cherished opinions that I had a few years ago. I confess to a considerable "change of heart" in regard to methods of spreading the gospel. What is the reason of this general apathy among liberals? It seems to me to be obvious. We have proceeded on wrong lines of work. Our work has been almost entirely negative. Our entire energies are spent in showing what is not true, rather than in showing what is true. The assertion of our opponents that there is nothing in a negation to bind men together, nothing for them to rally around, is perfectly true, and the history of free-thought organizations during the past twenty years should convince us all of that fact. There is nothing in the mere intellectual conviction that a certain theory is wrong to make men put forth a prolonged or heroic effort. The mere exercise of the reasoning powers in the line of criticism is just as likely to lead us to unwarranted conclusions as is the sole exercise of any one of the faculties likely to lead us astray. The emotional nature must be called into activity and the will power so cultivated as to give direction and purpose to our energies. Any system of philosophy that is purely critical, and negative at that, will always be barren of results. It can attract but few persons who may be critically inclined. The majority of mankind cannot content themselves with merely knowing that some doctrine or system is false, they want to feel that they know what is true. We can hardly understand how anyone can cling to erroneous beliefs when they are, themselves, almost satisfied of their falsity. Yet, nevertheless, they do feel that they are at sea without compass or rudder, and they will cling to what they have rather than forsake their faith for nothing. Man's notions are not based upon an accurate knowledge of objective realities; but they are his interpretations, and are therefore subjectively true to him. Society will only move from its position by a process of evolution—as it advances intellectually and can therefore safely lay aside its old forms of faith for new and more accurate opinions—it will do so. I say safely lay aside the old faith, because the old faith has been the daily guide of the multitudes for generations, and whether true or false, it has a tendency to hold in check the vices and crimes of men. Then to strip this faith from the masses before the mental development is such that something better can be grasped, and regulated according to reason and experience, is not safe. I do not condemn criticism, it is absolutely necessary at times. But why so much criticism with so little constructive work? For those who think the days of image-breaking are not passed, I would say, let the work be done more humanely, and according to the rules of evidence that our criticism do not degenerate to mere denunciations. Why use the invectives that we so often see printed? Malice is not argument.

I am not advocating the promulgation of a system of religion in the sense of worshipping the unknowable; or in personifying the unknowable, to make the philosophy clear to the multitudes. No religious system can ever again be established in a civilized society that will so powerfully stir the emotions through the imagination as has Christianity and Mohammedanism; nor is any such system in demand. But certainly, as man exists here and is a social being, he then has need of social and moral principles to guide him. It is no just criticism on the foregoing argument to say that we might, in building, incorporate just as many great errors as we are now endeavoring to destroy. The scientific acquirements of the present day have given us truth sufficient for a grand structure if we are but guided by philosophy in the construction. No doubt but we might incorporate some errors, but we fulfill our duty if we build the best we know. With the advancement of science and philosophy future generations would correct our errors, as we correct the errors of the past. Perhaps the time is not ripe for constructive work; perhaps a philosophical system may attract but the few. But it is evident that the ancient faith is losing its hold upon the minds of men and that liberalism is gaining nothing. The history of the world shows that at such times men even lose sight of the principles of morality that the faith, which is no longer their daily guide, has given them. Society becomes corrupted. A general decay of civilization follows for a time. Can we not trace here the cause for the rottenness of our present social fabric? It seems that the need of the time is a work of remuneration that will lead men clear of the pitfalls into which the history of the world shows they have ever fallen when the social fabric under which they have lived has given away. Why may not this be the work of liberalism?—Geo. H. Dawes, in the Independent Pulpit, Waco, Texas. Condensed for Public Opinion.

It is probable that Mr. Dawes had in mind only the idea of advancement in the direction of organization. I am conscious of the fact that in this direction we have made but little progress, though, I do not think we have lost any ground, in fact, we have never yet had much to lose. I do not regard organization, except in the matter of local clubs, as being very important. In our present stage of development, organization is of doubtful utility, and, unless wisely managed, even local clubs oftener bring peril than success to a struggling movement, not well understood by the general public. If Mr. Dawes or any other despondent liberal will call to mind the character of opposition it had to contend with fifteen years ago and compare it with that of to-day, he will find ground for encouragement. Then a liberal was ostracised on every hand, now he is not. Then a liberal idea rarely ever found its way into the secular press, now the press is full of liberalism. The Universalists and Unitarians were regarded as dangerous heretics, now they are reinforced by hundreds of liberal preachers. If the life of the church depends upon the perpetuation of traditional theology and Biblical supernaturalism, then it is doomed. But may not the church, as an ethical institution, live on and thrive after these have been repudiated? I am one of many who believe that it will, and in that case the church will be a liberal institution. Whenever the church repudiates superstition and becomes broad enough to cherish the truth on all subjects affecting its moral aims and purposes, it will be broad enough to take in liberalism with all for which it now contends, and he must be blind who cannot see that its tendency is in that direction.

From the Pacific to the Atlantic heretical ministers are springing up on every hand, and liberal ideas are being uttered in universities, newspapers, and ministerial associations. The simple fact that such ideas can find utterance in an orthodox pulpit and be discussed, even with their disapproval, by orthodox ministers of high standing, goes to show that liberal ideas are insinuating themselves into the churches, and in that proportion orthodox superstition is being repudiated. What is now called the higher criticism school of thinkers is doing much to destroy superstition and bring rationalism into public favor. To all this it may be said, "but these people are not liberals." They do not so call themselves I grant, but what does that amount to if, as is the case, they are liberal? and if, as they do, they are liberalizing their congregations, the churches to which they belong and the general public? We can do no more, and I doubt if we can do that with as much success as are they. We do not seek to destroy the churches, but only to rationalize them, and that is what these men are doing. Whenever the churches abandon supernaturalism and throw open their doors to the truth the fighting period of liberalism will come to a close.—Independent Pulpit (editorial).

GOOD ADVICE TO THE CLERGY.

IN one of Dr. Burton's Yale lectures the following advice was given to the young ministers: "When trouble is brewing, keep still. When slander is getting on its legs, keep still. When your feelings are hurt, keep still, till you recover from your excitement at any rate. Things look differently through an unagitated eye. In a commotion once I wrote a letter and sent it, and wished I had not. In my later years I had another commotion, and wrote a long letter; but life had rubbed a little sense into me, and I kept that letter in my pocket against the day when I could look it over without agitation and without tears. I was glad I did. Silence is the most massive thing conceivable sometimes. It is strength in its very grandeur. It is like a regiment ordered to stand still in the mid-fury of battle. To plunge in were twice as easy. The tongue has unsettled more ministers than small salaries ever did, or lack of ability."

TO ENABLE DEAF FOLK TO HEAR WITH EASE.

A DISPATCH from London says: It is announced from Geneva that Prof. Dussaud of the university there has invented an apparatus to enable the deaf to hear. The microphonograph he has just issued magnifies the human voice in the same way that a lens magnifies. It is simply a telephone connected electrically with a phonograph, but a far more sensitive phonograph than Edison's ordinary model. A battery of one cell to sixty, according to the degree of deafness, is used. Of course, the apparatus is useless in the case of absolute deafness, but such an infirmity is far rarer than is suspected. Ninety-five per cent of so-called stone-deaf persons can be made to hear and understand by Dussaud's invention. You speak into the phonograph; you make it repeat the words which are transmitted by a sort of microphone and speaking tube into the deaf ear. Prof. Dussaud is preparing for the 1900 exhibition an apparatus which will enable 10,000 people who may all be deaf to follow a lecture.

The latest exploit with the Roentgen rays is reported from Lisbon. It was at the instance of the Queen of Portugal, who takes a keen interest in science, that the ladies of her court submitted themselves to the searching action of these vibrations. The ladies have been startled at the sight of their distorted ribs and bones, the result of tight lacing. Henceforth they have determined to be free women. Corsets are to be cast aside.

LAMONI, IOWA, JUNE 2, 1897.

HOW IS THIS?

1. WHAT is the mission of our Savior during the millennium? Will the saints need any teaching to perfect them?

2. Will the righteous departed dead that die from now on receive their bodies in the morning of the resurrection and at once have a perfect understanding of all things; and have an equal knowledge with God and Christ and be above teaching?

If so how can we harmonize such a theory with the written word in Doctrine and Covenants? It says, if I understand it correctly, that they who are quickened by a portion of celestial glory will then receive of the same, even a fullness. I can see how a righteous spirit can receive an immortal and purified body, and be in harmony with the written word; but I cannot see how it can have a perfect understanding of all things as they exist and be above teaching, when it is only quickened by a portion of celestial glory. If so, that would be creating or making intelligence with the body, which would not be in harmony with the word, as I understand it; for it says intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be. I believe the body will be given its God-given faculties for the spirit, or inner man to enter in and occupy and develop, the same as he does in the body we now have, by observation and study; and by keeping the commands of God or having kept them, receive light and truth until he is glorified in truth and knoweth all things.

3. Do the leading quorums of the church believe that faith is the moving power of all action, both in heaven and earth; and that it was by it that God worked in the beginning, and without it he would cease to exist?

1. We apprehend that the mission of the Savior, during the millennium, will be to reign and rule.

And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.—Rev. 19: 15, 16.

Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.—Rev. 20: 6.

And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.—Matt. 19: 28.

He shall be called great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.—Luke 1: 32, 33.

And they shall multiply and wax strong, and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation, for the Lord shall be in their midst, and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their King and their lawgiver.—Doc. and Cov., Sec. 45, par. 10, closing portion of paragraph.

From these texts and their kindred passages to be found running all through the Bible, prophetic and descriptive, we conclude that the mission of Jesus Christ, the Savior, during the Millennium will be the necessary and pleasurable work of a King and Ruler; fulfilling the statement found in Jeremiah 31, and Hebrews 8, that he would be to the Saints their God, and they be to him a people.

It is evident that this work of the King of Saints, will be to administer the things of the Kingdom righteously, meting out justice, observing the demands of mercy, teaching and instructing through those whom he will appoint as priests and kings those who shall be finally found worthy of eternal life in the perfected kingdom, over which he will be appointed to reign, after the Millennium and the "little season," which reign will continue forever. Any of our readers who may desire to "search the scriptures" topically on this subject, will find a wonderful mine of things of beauty and grandeur depicting the peace, pleasantness, happiness and joy of the reign of the Lamb of God; from the ushering in of the dispensation to the building of the beautiful city of which the Lamb was to be the light and glory thereof.

2. We have believed that not only those who "die in the Lord from now on," will rise in the morning of the first resurrection, but all who have thus died in the Lord from the resurrection of Jesus unto the morn of the first resurrection will rise. But we cannot conceive that those who thus rise will be so far perfected in mental and spiritual growth that they will be blessed with all knowledge, wisdom, and power in the fulness in which these qualities are held by the risen Redeemer and the Father.

There evidently will be degrees in knowledge and wisdom among those who are resurrected, as there are differences here in the same qualities; although there may be an equality, so far as the ability and opportunities to progress are concerned; and that equal facilities to acquire knowledge of infinite things will be accorded to all. If this is conceded, and we believe it to be correct, then the resurrected saints will need instruction; either from their own number in inquiry and research, or from those designated by the King as priests who shall minister unto them. That they may finally come where Christ and God are, we believe; but that they will ever attain to supremacy in the sense that God and Christ are supreme we do not believe. Men on the earth all breathe the same air, move in the same presences, of earth, sky, sun, moon, and stars; are all subject to the same general laws of life, and of death; yet differences exist as to knowledge, wisdom, and power—physical, moral, and spiritual. In that world in which the resurrected men shall live, move, and have a being, the trammels in which the spirit here is held and circumscribed preventing the progression to which the human aspires, will be removed; the spirit be disenthrilled, and the boundless worlds of space be opened to inspection, comprehension, and mental grasp, the infinite placed within his reach. According to the apostle men shall then "know as they are known, comprehend as they are also apprehended."

We cannot write confidently as to whether the leading quorums of the church hold that faith is the "moving power of action;" never having learned whether the quorums had passed upon the topic. We think, however, that the general opinion is in accordance with the Apostle Paul in his statement to the Hebrews, that through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God.—Heb. 11: 3.

The account given in Genesis is to the effect that "God said, Let there be light: and there was light." Each successive step in creation was of the same sort; "God said, Let there be a firmament," "Let the dry land appear;" and each measure followed the command; power was brought to bear upon matter existing in chaos and that power wrought the succeeding stages of evolution until all were accomplished.

God undoubtedly had confidence in himself, and knew that he had power to accomplish his will. He knew that he had but to command, exercise his will, and all the latent forces lying concealed in the world of chaotic material would be set in motion to work out the designs of his will. If such confidence in himself may be called faith, then he had faith; but if there was force, power in action, set in motion by command—the word—then the confidence which God had in himself was justified by the works that followed, and were not of faith but of knowledge.

Man's faith moves on finite lines, God's on infinite lines. Man's faith enables him to accept the works of God, while yet unable to comprehend them. God's works indicate goodness, wisdom, will, power, and confidence in himself, differing widely from the trust that man must put in things which he sees, but neither understands, nor their origin, nor why they are.

We think that the greater number of the ministry are hardly prepared to accede to the deduction drawn from the passage quoted from Hebrews 11:3, as found in the Lectures on Faith, in Doctrine and Covenants 1:14-17 inclusive; that faith is the principle of power which being exercised by God, produced the world, put the planets in their places, and prescribed their orbits, and gave the laws of their continued existence. For reasons which follow.

In every instance named in Hebrews 11, it was the power of God that wrought the things spoken of, and in most of them the nature of the faith exercised by man was that of trust without knowledge; confidence, in the nature of "evidence of things not seen." The things which God wrought were all of them known by him before they took place to be the result of power resident in him to will, direct, command forces outside of his person; but within his control which accomplished the work designed. The elders take the view stated by Alma, as the same is found in the Book of Mormon, Book of Alma, chapter 16, paragraph 20, of the smaller Lamoni edition; verses 129 to 134 inclusive, in the large type edition.

Now I ask is this faith? Behold, I say unto you, Nay; for if a man knoweth a thing, he hath no cause to believe, for he knoweth.

And now as I said concerning faith. Faith, is not to have a perfect knowledge of things; therefore if ye have faith, ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true.

The argument is, that God had a perfect knowledge from the beginning of all things; hence, he was not in the condition of one hoping for things as yet unseen. He knew what the result would be, and his condition was as one who had had faith before the things hoped for had occurred, and had lived to see the things hoped for accomplished facts; hence faith was ended in knowledge, which knowledge had superseded faith. When the work of faith is perfected, knowledge has been obtained and faith ends, its office work being completed.

We can quite readily comprehend how it is that through our faith "we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God;" but we cannot understand that it was through God's faith that the "worlds were framed."

Faith exercised by man in regard to things beyond his knowledge and control is sublime; but, the exercise of a quality in himself by which a man knows he can accomplish what he designs would not be called sublime, nor that quality be called faith but knowledge. In a like manner God being endowed with goodness, wisdom, will, and power exercised the creative force not by virtue of faith, but by virtue of knowledge. In the language of Alma, Is that faith, I say unto you, Nay, for "faith is not to have a perfect knowledge of things;" but is to have a confidence and trust of things not seen.

We believe that the above fairly represents the views of a majority of the eldership, hence present it for examination, thinking it possible there may be some who may not hold belief in that way.

DIVINE RETRIBUTION.

THE following is a clipping from the Sacramento, Cal., Bee; sent us by a "brother."

HOLLISTER, (Cal.), April 21.—"May God strike me dead if I am the murderer of Bernardino Asseuro!" cried Joseph Cascado in the court room here yesterday. The last word had scarcely left his lips when, with a shriek, he toppled forward and fell heavily to the floor.

The terrorized officers and most of the spectators stood aghast for some moments, at what appeared to be a startling manifestation of Divine retribution. Then several rushed to the prostrate man and sought to assist him from the floor. There was no response to their orders, or their efforts. Joseph Cascado was dead.

The man was a Portuguese and had been arrested on a charge of having murdered Asseuro, a Mexican rancher, whose dead body was found last Saturday morning in his cabin in the Cleveland district.

The object of the brother in sending it was, evidently, for the moral of it; which put in few words is to this effect; that there is a limit to the blasphemy of man beyond which it is not safe for him to go.

It is a fearful thing for a man to call God as a witness to his thought, purpose, or deed. The intelligence of God take cognizance of things in their absolute sense. There is no warrant for asking God to take cognizance of, or bear witness of what is wrong, evil, or false. The man who does it indifferently, or carelessly is inexcusable; and he who being guilty does it wilfully, puts himself into position to be reproved, rebuked, or possibly destroyed, as was the man in the instance given in the slip sent us.

In the course of our life we have heard of a number of instances in which a blasphemous calling of God to witness has been signally rebuked in a similar way to the one given above, and it should teach man this lesson, that the Savior's words direct the better way:—

Swear not at all.

Let your communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay.

A man guilty of crime may call God to witness to his assertion that he is innocent; but for such wickedness he must answer to God, sooner or later, and liable to be at once made to suffer the penalty for outraging the right and truth. "God knows my heart," are words too frequently heard, too frequently used, even among saints; and sometimes in the presence of others with whom serious doubts concerning the sincerity of the one using them, are engendered by their use. He who is conscious of right motives for his action, can afford to wait until he is accused of wrong before he enters upon denial or defense. There is a proverb to this effect:—

He that is first in his own cause seemeth just, but his neighbor cometh and trieth him.

THE conservative theology of old-style Presbyterianism has its friends, as may be seen by the following press item. It may be that the extreme positions assumed by the higher critics and rationalists will cause a reaction to the other extreme, in favor of the creed of Calvin:—

Charlotte, N. C., May 26.—The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly resumed the Westminster celebration to-day. Dr. S. M. Smith of Columbia, S. C., delivered an address on Westminster standards. His defense of the conservative theology was popular and well received.

THE Valley Oracle published at Fern-dale, California, in its issue of April 20, sent us, presumably by some good brother, contains an article "An old tragedy recalled" in which it denounces the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith in this language:—

Even those who sanctioned the deed at the time and still sanction it agree that it is the blackest spot on the pages of the history of Illinois.

Time brings compensations. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." They rest from their labors, but the good they wrought abides and endures.

WE extract the following from a press account of proceedings of the Presbyterian General Assembly of May 26, at Eagle Lake, Indiana, which serves to show that the wily Jew or Heathen sometimes becomes more Christianized in appearance than in fact:—

At the request of the foreign missionaries the assembly to-day put the iron heel of disapproval upon the professing native Christians who come from foreign lands to solicit money either for their own education or to develop Christian enterprises in their native land. One convert to Christianity from the Jewish faith went to England from Persia to be educated. When he returned to Persia he wore a black broadcloth suit with a low cut waistcoat, showing a broad expanse of shirt front, in the middle of which was a glass diamond. His collar reached nearly to his ears. He wore a red necktie, patent leather pumps, kid gloves, and a silk hat. He was so far above his people that he could not sit on the floor and take his food in his fingers as formerly.

He returned to England, made an address there on the need of Christian work in Persia, and received $5,000 from some benevolent Englishman. He is soon to return to Persia, and expects to build a fine residence for himself in the capital of that country.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. J. CORNISH, Reed City, Michigan, May 24:—

All goes well here; some are obeying the gospel, etc.

BRO. J. W. BURGET, Cleveland, Ohio, May 18:—

I am pleased to say that we are progressing and making friends to the cause of Christ in this place. Our meetings are quite well attended, and at times a good interest is manifested, and we are hopeful of a greater awakening to the truth of the restored gospel in the near future than heretofore, and that the efforts of the saints may be crowned, and many be added to our number who will be an honor to the cause.

BRO. A. H. PARSONS, Philadelphia, May 24:—

The work in these parts moves very slowly; one addition since General Conference; two others almost ready. Brn. Kent and Baker arrived last Tuesday night, ready for tent work. They will set it up next Wednesday in Camden, New Jersey, near where Brn. Smith and Moler held forth last year. They gave us two rousing sermons each Lord's day. Since Brn. Smith and Moler opened the work there (Camden) and at Germantown we have held forth once a week at each and twice in the city. All well.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Williams Bay, Wisconsin, Observer, of May 20, has a good and lengthy article setting forth the faith of the church, written by Bro. E. M. Wildermuth. It makes mention of the late conference of the Southern Wisconsin district held May 15 and 16, and the presence of President Joseph Smith at said conference. Williams Bay is a popular resort where many recreation seekers gather during the summer season. It has two important features worthy of special mention among minor ones; viz.: the saints have a neat church near by, and the celebrated Yerkes telescope, the largest and latest improved instrument of the kind in the world, is located there; a happy combination for those who would learn the truths of the heavenly world. It is to be hoped that while many of the world of science and learning gather at the Bay to learn the lessons of the starry heavens, and to measure their modes and distances, they will also learn of and embrace the faith revealed by the Maker of the spacious firmament on high "whose constellations light up the spacious avenues between this world and the unseen." Is it scientific to ignore the facts and measurements of the law of the spirit and devote investigations entirely to the physical world about us, and which cannot bring man into direct communion with their Author? We think not, but that men must seek him with the heart, the whole heart, in addition to searching his works through the microscope, the telescope. When men become the children of God and receive his Spirit which teaches the things of God, they will be better qualified to interpret the works of his hands. May the church at Williams Bay prove a light to many.

Elder J. W. Wight on his way to Rocky Mountain mission reports having crowded houses at Little Sioux, Iowa. In first week after leaving home he had preached eight sermons, baptized four, blessed two children, and administered to sick a number of times. He also forwards eight dollars for college aid. That is right; let the elders be alive to every enterprise of church work and peace and good will come to men.

Sr. L. M. Richards writes a touching account of the death of her little daughter "Joyie," caused by the bite of a rattlesnake during a visit among friends near North Platte, Nebraska, recently. Bro. and Sr. Richards have the sympathy of many in their sore affliction.

The Hamilton, Ontario, Times, of May 24, contains an interesting and lengthy account of work being done at that point by Brn. Hiram Dickhout, George Virgin, and others of the Reorganized Church in that vicinity. The item describes a baptismal and confirmation ceremony in which the brethren with others took part, and has good words throughout for the church, its faith and its work. The influence of this excellent statement of the Times will doubtless be far-reaching for good.

A year or two ago Bro. R. M. Elvin was obliged to stand the fire of a very severe attack upon the faith by one Rev. Irwin of the Holiness movement, at Lucas, Iowa; which, however, resulted in favor of the truth and did no harm to anyone but the Rev. Mr. Irwin. The Des Moines Leader of May 27, handed us by Bro. Elvin, contains a lengthy account of a late effort made by this same Rev. Irwin, at Centerville, where he became so bitter and abusive of the people and the churches that the Mayor of the city notified him to leave the place and the people aided his early departure by letting down his tent. We are sorry to be obliged to chronicle the mistakes of Mr. Irwin. We are glad, however, to note that our work gains steadily both at Lucas and at Centerville, where Bro. Elvin and others of the ministry continue to preach the gospel, no man preventing them. May our representatives continue to deserve the good will of the people now so generally being manifested toward them and their work of truth and right.

The San Antonio, Texas, Press, of May 16, in an article descriptive of the coming "Pioneer festival of the Mormons," which is to be held in Utah, July 24, also included many erroneous statements concerning Joseph Smith the martyr and his work. Bro. H. P. Curtis, located at San Antonio, corrects said errors of statement and puts the work and character of the Martyr in their true light in the same paper for May 22. Bro. Curtis has done well in his statement. It is written in forcible language, but is candid and moderate in tone and successfully refutes the misleading statements of the former writer. It seems that every movement of the Utah Church is but serving to bring the truth unsullied before the people; and that, though the church and the Martyrs have suffered misrepresentation and shame because of the latter-day apostasy, compensation now is coming, and coming rapidly in widespread diffusion of knowledge of the faith of the church established under the ministry of Joseph Smith and others. The Utah people celebrate their jubilee commemorating settlement of the State or arrival of the pioneers in July, 1847. But a few years more and they with the general public will more generally recognize the character of the movement made under the apostasy and exodus from Zion to the salt land.

Lieutenant R. E. Peary, of the United States navy and of Arctic fame has been granted a five years' leave of absence to resume explorations in the Arctic regions.

The United States Senate has adopted the Chandler resolution authorizing the sending of supplies to the famine sufferers in India by any suitable ship.

The German Reichstag adopted a credit for 30,000,000 marks for rearming the German artillery with improved field pieces. Herr Richter, the Radical leader, stated "that in the matter of artillery what is spared in iron we might perhaps have to make up in blood."

A copy of the Minneapolis Times dated May 5, sent us for notice we suppose, contains a lengthy account of the experiences of one W. A. Laufman, a well-known traveling man, who asserts and gives particulars of an experience in his life when his spirit left his body and he was laid out for burial while conscious of and able to see and note all going on about him. The account is remarkable and similar to others told by parties personally known to us. Mr. Laufman, it appears, is not a spiritualist nor given to visionary experiences and was as much surprised as his hearers could well be by what he experienced.

Elder T. A. Hougas, Superintendent of the General Sunday School Association, visited Lamoni over Saturday and Sunday, the 29th and 30th on matters pertaining to Sunday school work. He addressed the Lamoni saints at the Sunday morning preaching service.

Montreal, Quebec; also Whitehall, Elizabethtown, Rome, Watertown, Saratoga, and other places in New York report severe shocks of earthquakes during the past week. Buildings were perceptibly shaken causing occupants to flee in terror.

Elaborate measures have been taken at Athens to prevent a popular uprising against the present dynasty in Greece. War ships and troops are ready to suppress manifestations of discontent.

Lower House of Prussian Diet rejected a motion providing for police suppression of meetings threatening safety of state and public order.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, who has been laboring since conference in Kentucky, arrived at Lamoni on the 31st ult. He has sent for his family, now in California, having concluded to make his home in the city of the saints.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"I count these things to be grandly true:
That a noble deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from the common sod
To a purer air and a broader view.

"We rise by the things that are under our feet,
By what we have mastered in greed and gain,
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ill we hourly meet.

"Heaven is not reached by a single bound,
But we build the ladders by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And we mount to its summit round by round."

IMAGINATION.

THERE is no faculty whose right training has greater influence upon character than imagination, yet none whose cultivation is more neglected. We often act as though we thought God made a mistake in giving us imagination, or that the world had outgrown all need of it. . . .

What is the imagination? Webster defines it as the power to create or reproduce an object previously perceived; to recall a mental or spiritual state before experienced; to reconstruct or recombine material furnished by experience or apprehension, for the accomplishment of an elevated end or purpose. This latter power distinguishes it from fancy, with which it is often confounded. The two are near of kin, but imagination is the higher. . . .

Being the creative faculty in man, imagination allies us most nearly to God. By it we perceive God. It is the germ of faith, of noble purpose, of enthusiasm whose literal meaning is "God in us." The world's best work is always done by enthusiasts, no matter how much utilitarians scoff at them. They do this work because of their deep, true, heaven-born belief in God and that it is his work, which having given them to do, he will give the ability to perform. Such a conviction is not to be hammered out of cold reason. It comes only through imagination taking hold upon the unseen and spiritual forces. To rise, we must reach up and take hold on something above; we cannot be pushed up by forces from below; and that something becomes real to us only through the imagination. . . .

Those who have builded the ladders best on which to reach heaven have been men and women of strong imagination. Such men and women are the best workers. Castle-building precedes real building. Every great achievement lives first in the imagination of its doer. This faculty is the soul of all philanthropies; for by it we are enabled to put ourselves in the place of wronged, sinning, suffering men and women, to feel their sorrows, and through thus feeling them, be moved to relieve them. By it Howard put himself in the place of the prisoners, and thus was moved to inaugurate prison reform. Florence Nightingale and Mary Stanley put themselves in the place of suffering soldiers, and wrought out their relief in imagination before they could work it out in reality. Making the woes of the drunkard, and of the drunkard's family, their own, led Mrs. Thompson and her noble co-laborers into the Temperance Crusade whose fruits are now blessing thousands. It is the basis of all sympathy with joy as well as with sorrow. More than any other faculty it distinguishes man from the brutes and allies him with spiritual natures.

Often imagination in its highest, noblest development, exists in those we are wont to consider only prosaic workers. If their work is well done and has a lofty aim, we may be sure it has its root in imagination, no matter how little of this appears in blossoms or fruit. . . .

We have the clear testimony of God in Revelation, in Nature and in History that there is no power of the mind through which he works so irresistibly for the uplifting and salvation of man as through imagination. . . .

The ideals of Greece and Rome defy the brute forces—strength, courage, feats of war. Inspired idealism illustrates the reactive virtues—the cultivation of the human soul, the development of its faculties to their highest perfection. In your home erect the statue of the perfect man, all glorious with truth and beauty in their highest conceivable perfection, and say, "Behold the man! Behold the model of your life and thought!" It rests with parents to decide what ideals they erect in their own households. It behooves them to decide carefully, for their children's lives will be moulded to the model of the ideal thus erected. If your highest type is Croesus, your children may gain wealth, but bring leanness into their souls, and so on through all the catalogue of ruling passions. It is only when the perfect Christ is the family ideal that the noblest family life is possible. Combined with this you can keep before your children the lives of noble men and women, and these ideals become insensibly wrought into the fiber of their being; herein is the great good of pictures and statues of grand men and women in the home. In my study hangs a picture of Agassiz. I never came into the room tired out with a hard day's work in school, without being rested and refreshed by looking into the noble face of him who so gloried in his life work that he counted it his proudest distinction to write his name "Louis Agassiz, Teacher." In my bedroom hangs a picture of Lucretia Mott. As it greets my opening eyes in the morning the strong, sweet face bids me "good cheer," and I go to the labor of the day with greater courage from thinking of the eighty years of noble work she did. . . .

To this principle Roman Catholicism owes much of its power over the masses. Pictures of Christ and the saints adorn not only cathedrals and churches, but even the humblest homes. Around them gather the sweetest ideals of the household. The pictured images become living friends to them, rejoicing in their joy, sympathizing in their sorrow. . . .

Bring biography and incidents of noble deeds to aid in forming your children's ideals. The world is full of them. If newspapers would take as much pains to record them as they do to give the records of revolting crime, the world would be much better. The imagination would be fed on worthy food, and would grow pure and strong instead of groveling in the mire. All history is full of incidents whose tendency is to lift us to a higher plane of living. What an inspiration to self-denial has been Sir Philip Sidney's passing the untasted cup which his own dying lips so craved to a wounded soldier dying beside him, because "his need is greater than mine." It is matched in our own time by the magnanimity of Albert Sidney Johnston. A minie-ball wounded him in the leg, cutting an artery from which the life blood was rapidly flowing. Scarce realizing the danger in his anxiety to have his wounded soldiers and the prisoners attended to, he sent his surgeon to attend to them saying, "These men were our enemies a moment ago, now they are our prisoners; take care of them." The surgeon went, not dreaming of his general's danger, and in a few moments Johnston was dead.

The cholera was raging in Naples. The whole city was in a panic, which but increased the fearful ravages of the foe. King Humbert and his beautiful wife undertook to allay this panic, and did so at the risk of their lives. Going to the plague-smitten city, whence all had fled who could escape, the young king literally took his life in his hand and periled it for the protection of his people. The monarch gave place to the philanthropist; he went about among the stricken people, his very presence allaying their fears and thus increasing their chance of life. The priest who first accompanied him soon fell a victim to the cholera, and then the heroic queen, whom the king would have kept from the contagion if he could, took his place beside her husband; it was as though Queen Victoria and Florence Nightingale had united in one person. History shows no brighter example of heroism—a king and queen, in the very meridian of life, happy in all relations public and private, periling their lives, not for their crown, but for their suffering people. . . .

But does some busy parent ask, "Is it really worth while, in this hurrying life we must live, to take time to tell such deeds to our children?" Yes, we answer unhesitatingly, if you would have your children emulate them. Children are natural-born hero worshipers; better to set before them noble heroes, around whom a pure imagination may twine, than leave them to bow at unworthy shrines. Imagination will be busy; supply it with pure material upon which to work. . . .

Look, now, on the other side of the picture. Neglect to fill your child's mind with noble ideals; let his imagination grovel in the dust, as it assuredly will if you give it nothing upon which to climb; let the materials of which it builds be furnished by the daily papers' showing-up of crime; by the dime novel, or by lewd stories told on street-corners; or, not to descend into such depths, let its materials be drawn from frivolous gossip, carping criticism, or sensational literature, and what an ideal is set up in the heart of your child! You can not touch pitch without being defiled. Such images once impressed upon the mind go on doing their deadly work—their work of vile insinuations, of sinful suggestions, of promptings to evil, all through life. John B. Gough said he would give all he was worth could he cleanse his imagination of the vile pictures impressed on it during the years of his dissipation; but there they remained, starting out vividly at unexpected moments, often when he most longed for purity. Who has not had somewhat similar experiences, images of evil, formed, perhaps, long ago by listening to some story or cherishing some impure thought, springing into life at the very moment we most desire their destruction; coming, perhaps, between us and God as we kneel in prayer? However parents may neglect its culture, Satan never fails to make use of the imagination. If it be true, as before stated, that all the world's great achievements live first in the imagination, it is equally true that all sin against God and crime against man find there a starting place. An evil thought or suggestion gains entrance into the mind; it is repulsive, but is not repulsed; imagination dallies with it, dresses it up in fair colors, dwells upon the pleasure or the gain which will come of the wrong doing, lulls conscience to sleep with a siren song; meanwhile, desire grows strong, passion, overpowers reason, till the imagination of the heart becomes the outward act whose consequence may darken a lifetime. It was because every imagination of the thoughts of men was only evil continually that God repented that he made man, and destroyed the race by the flood.

Christ continually appeals to the imagination. "Without a parable"—a little story formed in his imagination, appealing to the imagination of his hearers—"spake he not unto them." The child-hunger for "Arabian Nights," "Hans Christian Andersen," and fairy tales is Heaven-sent. The imagination which transforms a soiled rag-baby into a princess, or erects and furnishes a palace out of some old boards and bits of broken crockery, should be used in making Christ real to children. Tell them the story of Jesus as it runs from Genesis to Revelation, not as dry details of something dead and gone, but made by your imagination speaking to theirs, indistinct with life and feeling. Make them see Jesus as he takes little children in his arms and blesses them; as he forgives the penitent child seventy times seven times; as he, from the scant store of a little lad, feeds the multitude; as he raises Jairus' daughter to life. Help them to know God through that most beautiful idealization, the father of the prodigal son. Let their imagination take strong hold upon the fact that God is their Father, that he loves them as no earthy father can, that his care is continually around them. Sow seeds of faith; seeds of doubt are in every breeze. There is no danger that the child's imagination will picture God as too faithful, too mighty, too loving. They and we are saved by faith, not by fear. But "faith is the substance of things hoped for," and this substance is apprehended only through the imagination.

Another thing: make your child acquainted with Heaven through the imagination, which is the Bible way. Many children die; all children are liable to do so, and there are few children to whose minds this possibility is not present. I well remember how my own childish thought brooded over death. I believe this is true of most children. It is certainly natural that it should be so, for death presents just the materials upon which the imagination seizes—mystery that no one can fathom, a weird strangeness unknown to everyday life; its attendants, hushed voices, darkened rooms, the strange putting away of the dear form under ground, all appeal strongly to the imagination. Left to itself the child's imagination builds from the materials not a beautiful ideal, but one of terror. Thus left, many a sensitive child in a home where death has entered, has suffered tortures from the terrors its imagination conjures up, and no wonder, for all the accessories of death, the stillness and coldness of the form they had so lately known full of bounding life, the dark desolation of the grave, all are most repugnant to child nature. It is cruel to leave the child a prey to these imaginings. I have known children to sob as though their hearts would break because the storm was beating on "poor little brother out in the graveyard," and beg piteously to have papa "bring brother in out of the rain." We should teach them from the first, not that they have souls, but that they, themselves, are the souls which have bodies to live in, and from which they can go out when God calls them, just as they can move out of the house in which they live, and that when God calls the soul away, it has no more use for the body, and we lay it away in the grave just as their mamma lays away their outgrown clothing in the drawer. Do not let their thoughts linger in the grave, but lead them straight up to Heaven along the shining way an inspired imagination has laid, from earth to the "many mansions" Christ has gone to prepare for us. For nothing is there more abundant material in the Bible than for thus building the Celestial City in the minds and hearts of the little ones. The brightest imagery of earth is used by God to help our imaginations paint a picture of Heaven—the pure river of the water of life, whose banks are lined with beautiful trees bearing twelve manner of fruit, and whose leaves are for the healing of the nations; balmy, health-giving air, for none of its inhabitants ever say, "I am sick;" streets of gold and gates of pearl, in walls made resplendent with all manner of precious stones. "But," you say, "these are only figures; you don't suppose the streets are real gold and the gates are real pearl?" Yes, or something better than this; figures they may be, but the thing prefigured by them must equal or exceed them in beauty, or they violate all true use of language, and this God never does. He is striving through these figures of the most beautiful and precious things on earth to paint in our minds a picture of that home whose beauties "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man" to conceive; make your children feel at home in this beautiful place by picturing it to their imaginations in ways they can understand. The figures used in the Bible may give no definite picture to their minds, because they are not comprehended; use, then, such figures as they do comprehend.—Childhood: its care and culture.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. J. E. UNCAFER, of Apollo, Pa.: "I request the prayers of the prayer union in behalf of a friend that is very sick, that if it is our heavenly Father's will, she may be restored; also in behalf of myself, that I may be healed of a great affliction.

I ask the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union in my behalf, that I may receive my health once more which was taken from me the 10th of last September. As ever your brother in Christ.

JAMES FULLER.

Please ask that the Prayer Union earnestly pray in behalf of my daughter, that if it be His holy will to restore her to health and incline her to obey the true gospel, that its blessings may be hers to enjoy.

M. A. CHRISTY.

Sister Kate Smith, of Alpha, Oklahoma Territory, earnestly desires the prayers of Prayer Union in behalf of her son, Stephen, who is greatly afflicted, showing signs of acute consumption.

Letter Department.

PARIS, Texas, May 19.

Editors Herald:—I reached this city on the 17th, and found a family of saints living here by the name of Sapington, formerly from the state of Illinois. They settled near Manchester, Texas, became acquainted with the church, and united with it. They are striving to hold up the light of truth to their neighbors. We are making arrangements to get our claims before the people of this city. I go from here to Shawnee, Texas, for a few weeks, when I intend to return and do what we can to open up the work here.

I stopped at Standley for a few days and in company with Brn. Short and Toney preached at Hurd's Mills and at Antler, a place where the United States holds court for the territory. The interest at both places is fair. I was pleased to note that the interest of the church is increasing throughout that part of the territory, due largely to the untiring labors of Elders Ellis Short and E. D. Bailey. They have now the aid of our energetic young elder, Bro. Toney, recently from the ranks of the Christian Church.

The saints at Standley held a two-days' meeting while I was there. At the close two intelligent ladies were baptized, the fruits of the labors of Elder Short, I believe. My stay in the territory was pleasant and profitable to myself and I hope to others. Sr. Nora Short assisted me in a financial way, as far as my wardrobe was concerned. The Lord alone can reward her for her many acts of kindness to the saints and others.

I will say to the saints and ministry of the church in Texas, that the church has again associated us together for another year, and trust that all will be inspired to make an extra effort to push the work in the several localities of the church. I desire to be notified of the needs of the church everywhere in the state. Will try to meet all calls as much as possible; and to the end that the work may prosper. Let all the saints remember their covenant to build up the kingdom by paying their tithes also. I do hope and expect the saints to do better this year than they did last.

The traveling ministry can address me (and others also,) at Shawnee, Red River County, Texas, until further notice. Brethren, please remember to be punctual in reporting your labors the first day of each quarter.

In bonds,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., May 10.

Editors Herald:—After enjoying fifteen days of social and spiritual life in the quiet town of the saints, named after the ancient King Lamoni, I boarded the train for St. Joseph. The last good-bye is said, the last handshake given, and Bro. "Frank," loyal to his friends to the last, jumps from the moving train. It is sad to part from such kind friends, but the battle of life must be fought; and it is storms and difficulties after all that makes us men.

As the train slowly moves into the Union station at St. Joseph and I leave the car I see a familiar face, and in a moment am shaking hands with Sr. Isleib. We cross the street and seating ourselves in a carriage, are off behind a good horse. Three of us in a small carriage makes room not too plenty, but we manage.

What a change has been wrought in the city since I saw it last! Nineteen years nearly have passed since I entered this city a boy, without home, or friends, or experience; but I had not been in the city many years before I had at least some friends, and a good deal of experience. However, St. Joseph is not like it was fourteen years ago, when I left the west. Then it was inclined to be a little wild and cowboyish in its nature, but now seems to have settled down to be as staid and respectable as one could wish. What a crowd of memories hover around me as I walk the old familiar streets; memories of long-forgotten faces come up as this or that object or incident call them to mind. It is a joy to meet old friends, but always tinged with sorrow because there are usually some faces absent that can never be seen again in this life. Ah me, time changes us all!

I met with the saints in their fine brick church, and had the pleasure of addressing an intelligent and appreciative audience on the gospel theme. What a change from the past, then we climbed up—I hardly dare to say how many flights of stairs—and went into a small room with from ten to a dozen, or fifteen perhaps, to worship, and sometimes not that many. And in those discouraging times it was told that Bro. Mark Forscutt had said as the word of the Lord that in time to come God would do a great work in St. Joseph. Then it seemed from a human standpoint impossible, but thank God it has come to pass; and who shall say where it will end if the saints are faithful. I was entertained by saints and friends while in the city, and enjoyed my stay very much; making my home with Bro. Henry Isleib, who, by the way, has a little daughter that plays and sings very nicely.

On Friday, the 23d, I said good-bye to the saints and went to Independence. Here also time has been busy with changes, and the Independence of to-day seems to blossom like the rose. I was kindly entertained at Sr. J. A. Robinson's and enjoyed being in Independence greatly. The town was thick with elders returning from general conference, and meetings every night were in order. The weather was fine, climate delightful, saints hospitable, and withal it was a joy to live.

On Sunday morning the writer was called on to preach and responded as best I could under the circumstances.

Somewhat reluctantly I boarded the train for Chicago on Thursday night and arrived in Kirtland on Saturday. The storm raged out side, but we found a welcome and home at Bro. Wm. Kelley's. Sunday morning Bro. F. M. Sheehy was the speaker, and the writer occupied the stand in the evening.

On Thursday Bro. I. M. Smith and the writer left Kirtland for Fagundus, Pennsylvania. From Oil City to Trunkeyville the road follows the windings of the Allegheny River and the scenery is very picturesque and grand, while in a half hour's ride you may go in nearly all directions, north, south, east and west. Fagundus is about two miles from the station, and we began the ascent; a hill when we started, but a mountain before we got to the top. It was all right for the writer, but rather hard on Bro. Smith. However we arrived without mishap, and found a home with Bro. and Sr. Parker. As neither church nor schoolhouse can be obtained, we are holding forth in Bro. Parker's house and are having good audiences and good liberty. We don't know what the outcome will be, but from present indications there will be a little excitement—just enough to keep the blood in circulation.

Good-bye,

GEORGE W. ROBLEY.

DETROIT, Mich., May 18.

Editors Herald:—Bro. William H. Kelley and I arrived here on the morning of the 11th inst. to look after church matters: hence we have been here a week, and the probability is that we will be here for some time to come.

I hope the saints in my mission will be very patient. I will attend to the matters that require my attention just as soon as I can get away from here. We are quite busy day and night, but hope to get through with our work in this city the latter part of this week.

We crossed Lake Erie on the grand steamer City of Cleveland, and we enjoyed the voyage very much, as we experienced smooth sailing. Detroit is a very beautiful city especially this time of the year, with its shady streets and lovely parks.

Hastily,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, May 22.

Editors Herald:—Leaving home the 14th inst., I arrived in Des Moines same night in time to talk to those who had gathered at the church, Bro. C. Scott and G. W. Johnson meeting me at the station and seeing that I was cared for during the night. Thanks to all. Left for Perry next morning and found Sr. Martin waiting my arrival. Was pleasantly and profitably entertained by her and her sister, Chloe Hawley, she not forgetting that it requires money to travel. Thence to Defiance, where a visit with Bro. and Sr. I. McCord was much enjoyed. Bro. Gid Hawley conveyed me thence by buggy to his home, where a warm welcome awaited. Who has more reason than the traveling elders to appreciate such welcomes?

The following day, Sunday, two sermons, two baptisms, two confirmations, two children blessed, and administering to the sick, comprised the labor done. The Galland's Grove branch seems to be in a good spiritual condition. They also realized that the preacher could not travel without assistance.

A Miss Dollie Dick and a little daughter of Bro. and Sr. Shaw were the parties baptized. The former is a school teacher and dates the beginning of her conviction to the reunion at Woodbine.

I certainly enjoyed my visit with relatives and old friends here as well as at Woodbine and Moorhead, and next day a half brother took me to Dow City, whence I departed for Woodbine, where three sermons brought out an increasing audience. Here a warm welcome was extended and one night was spent with those not in the church.

Thence to Moorhead, where two sermons were delivered, the house being packed. Two baptized there this morning, after which, by the kindness of Bro. C. W. Blackman, I reached this place and am billed for "memorial" at 11 a. m. to-morrow and preaching at night. Monday morning leave for my mission field via Omaha and Denver.

Bro. Scott, of this place, still has a long knife, but pumpkin pies are unseasonable.

Believe Bro. C. Scott could do a good work at Perry. In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

SCAMMON, Kan., May 22.

Editors Herald:—The debate with Rev. G. W. Leonard, at Scammon, Kansas, from the 11th to the 18th is a thing of the past. I feel satisfied that he failed to count the cost. The animus of the man was expressed in his first speech. If I counted correctly he used words "Joe Smith" seven times in ten minutes during his first half-hour speech. "Joe was a sheep thief," and a "liar," and the "prince of liars," was the kind of tirade used to meet my argument upon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith. It was even said of my second speech, That "Leonard is down; he can never answer that speech." I don't think I ever felt better in all my life while defending our claims regarding the claims of Joseph. Mr. Leonard used the harsh word "liar" so often that the good people of Scammon became disgusted at his manner of meeting me. The editor of The Scammon Miner, in his issue for the 14th wrote of the debate:

"The debate between Elder I. N. White and Elder G. W. Leonard has been in progress at the opera house this week and is drawing large crowds. The question under consideration is, 'Was Joseph Smith a true prophet of God?' The manner in which the discussion is carried on is, in our opinion, not in accordance with the established rules of etiquette. Gentlemen should not pass 'the lie' in presence of ladies. In some parts of the country when one man calls another a liar they begin shooting at once. Why not use such language as will edify the audience and glorify God?"

This is a local paper and the editor could do me no harm in using such strong terms to express his disgust for such language used in debate. Mr. Leonard felt the smarting lash, and the paper had scarcely gotten upon the streets before he accosted the editor and tried to get him to retract in his favor. But no; the editor stood his ground and told him he wrote as he saw the matter. Leonard turned upon his heels and muttered: "Your paper is nothing but a little nasty sheet anyway." I had used every courtesy known in an ordinary debate, and felt thankful to God that I had embraced a cause that called for nothing else but true manhood to represent it. The debate went on and created great interest and considerable excitement.

The same editor writes of the debate in his issue for the 21st as follows:—

"THE DEBATE.

"The second proposition of the religious discussion between Rev. I. N. White, and Rev. G. W. Leonard, of McCune, began at the opera house Sunday evening. Rev. Leonard affirmed that his church, known as the Christian Church or Disciples of Christ, is 'identical in organization, doctrine, and practice as described in the New Testament.' It is the general verdict of the public, not including members of the Christian or Latter Day Saints Church, that Rev. White was several knots ahead in the argument. According to the proposition Rev. Leonard was compelled to compare the church of the New Testament and the Christian Church, and show wherein they resembled each other; this he failed to do. He spent his entire time on the foundation, as he called it, on which to build his arguments.

"These religious debates are a very meager way of preaching the gospel to nations. They stir up feeling between neighbors and the disputants are prone to grow personal and use language unbecoming to ministers. Some place in the good book it says, 'Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness;' and we have failed to find the place that says anything about spotted pigs, except those that were full of the devil and ran down a steep place into the sea.

"The debate furnished food for the head and not for the heart. It entertained the audience and at times called forth hearty applause. In expressing our views on this debate we do so without fear or favor from either side. We are also well aware that there are some serious objections to our remarks last week, but this week we publish the news as we see it and offer the use of our columns to anyone who feels that we have not treated them fairly. We are not all members of the same church, not all members of any church at all, but we do claim to be gentlemen."

In regard to the "spotted pigs" the following explanation is probably necessary: During the debate Mr. Leonard got so crowded that he thought to have a little fun at my expense. This was next to the last night and while debating his church question. He wanted me to obligate myself to heal a cripple or two that he had brought for the occasion; and if I would not do that he then desired me to obligate myself to put his ear on as the Savior did when Peter cut the ear from the servant. Mr. Leonard said, "Do it; and I will obligate myself to make two spotted pigs and make them squeal." He made such demonstrations over this and it seemed to tickle his clerical assistants so well I thought the better way was to answer a fool according to his folly.

When I arose in answer I told Mr. Leonard that I felt satisfied that he could make "spotted pigs" and make them "squeal" better than he could make an honorable public speech in debate. I was unable to hold the house. Orders came in the next day for Leonard's "spotted pigs;" but they wanted to be sure that they would "squeal" before paying for them. It seems like going from the sublime to the ridiculous to even write of such a transaction, but to let the readers of the Herald know of the kind of argument used by these reverend gentlemen to down the truth, I write it.

The victory on our side seemed to be so complete that I am set on all sides with congratulations. I leave it with God and feel to give him the honor for the truth and aid that gave us victory. I have preached once here since the debate, and Bro. Keck once. Some are interested. I go to Fort Scott to-day, and on to Redfield to answer Rev. Carlin's effort against us, leaving the cause in Bro. Keck's hands at Scammon.

Hurriedly yours,

I. N. WHITE.

SPRINGFIELD, Neb., May 24.

Editors Herald:—In looking over my journal I ascertain that it has been some months since I have penned a communication to you, and to begin with confess that I have been neglectful of doing that which I enjoy having others to do, and that when done makes the church paper what it should be.

Since last communication I have labored at Columbus, Nebraska, where I believe is as earnest, devoted branch of the church as I have communed with in many a day; but a difficulty exists, which is the most of those composing the branch are aged, and some of them getting quite feeble; so that there is need of assistance being rendered, that a younger element may be gathered in for the perpetuation of the work. Several there who have learned of the work in years ago showed an interest that portends an increase to the little flock in numbers, and the character of those interested give evidence of the stability and added influence of such increase. While there I met Mr. W. K. Lay, whom the Herald readers have heard of in former years; and by request of Bro. H. J. Hudson and himself I took his writing and examined his claims and teachings, and ascertained that his claims were spurious, and many of his teachings false, and so informed him. One thing can be said of him, and that is he showed himself a gentleman, and especially in that he has and does defend the reputation of Joseph Smith, against whom so many false charges have been made.

From Columbus I went to Laurel, in Cedar County, where I enjoyed (?) a shut in condition for several days by reason of a local flood and mud, yet I held services with fair attendance each night, which increased in numbers and interest till the close, and many urgent requests for my return. Bro. D. W. Albertson has made a zealous effort to interest his neighbors in the gospel message, and I believe will be rewarded for his labors by seeing some gathered into the church of God. Great kindness was shown me here by all, but especial mention should be made of Dr. Williams, where I found a home during most of my stay.

On my way from there to General Conference I stopped one night at Tekamah, where I addressed a few who in spite of the rain gathered to hear the word; and one night in Omaha, where I attended services, in which a Mr. Young defended the claims of Brigham Young, and Bro. F. A. Smith so conclusively showed the false positions he took, and the evil teachings of Brigham Young, that he did not care to make any further effort to sustain his positions.

Arrived at Lamoni, April 1, going by way of St. Joseph, where I attended prayer service at their beautiful chapel, and enjoyed the hospitality of Brn. Best and Krahl and their families. From the beginning of my stay to its close, although very busy, the most satisfactory and profitable time was enjoyed that I have ever experienced in the same length of time, and some features of that experience superior to anything before realized. What joy, what supreme joy, to know that one is considered worthy to enjoy communion with God! What rest to the soul to know that one is numbered with the people of God!

Upon my return home, although physically ill from a severe cold contracted on my journey hither, I was called upon and did speak to the saints under the enjoyment of the blessed Spirit in wondrous power, and it filled the house. From the announcement of the opening hymn to the close the Spirit in wondrous power attended, giving evidence to the saints there of the advanced step the work had made through God's gracious recognition of his people's prayers.

Arranged home affairs, sought to give counsel and comfort to wife, and instruction to children, and obtain added information that would assist me in my ministerial duties until 14th inst., when I started to Plymouth County, by way of Smithland. At the latter place I held three preaching services, confirmed two, and administered to two. In Plymouth County I baptized two, confirmed two, blessed four children, and rejoiced to see the spirit of reconciliation manifest. May God help to remove all that unreconciles.

On the 20th I blessed the babe of Bro. and Sr. J. C. Woodruff at Onawa, and preached at Mondamin at night to a very attentive audience. I came to this place on the 22d, and on yesterday held two services at the Christian Adventist church, and was greeted by a fair audience at both services. I remain here till Wednesday, continuing services each night at the same place. I look forward to the time when there will be an ingathering here, and trust it may be ere long. Here is a noble few, who are trying in their weakness to uphold the banner of King Emmanuel by word and deed.

The prospects for an advancement all along is marked by most of the letters received, and association with the saints.

Begging an interest in the prayers of all, and trusting in hope, I am,

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

BELOIT, Kan., May 7.

Editors Herald:—There is a small band of saints in this place; yet we have that blessed promise and assurance which Jesus gave, that where two or three meet in his name, there will he be also. With this thought in view, we are pressing forward, trying to attain to perfection with our Sabbath school, prayer meeting, and bible reading. We sometimes almost grow weary and become discouraged; but with the thought of Jesus and his mission here on this earth, we rally and try to walk more perfectly in his footsteps, bearing our cross with meekness and patience, doing the duty which lies nearest us.

We have much to discourage us, for the enemy is up in arms against us, armed with the tongue of slander, which is able to kill the spirit, but not the body. Those who were once our friends, are now our enemies, because we are trying to serve God and his only begotten Son, whom to know is to have life eternal. Pray for us, that we may prove faithful.

It is with joy we greet the arrival of an elder in our midst, as we are denied the pleasure of the same to some extent. The saints and those who have recently obeyed this gospel are left entirely too long without hearing the voice of the "good shepherd." The Spirit is strong, but the flesh is weak, and the feet are prone to wander in by and forbidden paths of sin and folly. Christ said, "Feed my sheep, and feed my lambs."

It was with pleasure we greeted our esteemed Elder Alma Kent last Saturday afternoon. Appointments for that evening and for Sabbath morning and evening were given out, and quite a number were present at the services. On Monday morning he left us for his mission field. He had been gone but a short time when one of the sisters drove up, accompanied by a precious soul, the mother of eight children, who wished to be buried with Christ in baptism; but she was too late. How sad it was; all we could do was to say, you are too late. Bro. Kent is gone, and will not be back for a year; possibly never, who can tell? I sometimes wonder why it is that people will put off doing their duty until it is too late.

Your sister in Christ,
BELLE F. GROUT.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 17.

Editors Herald:—In answer to the brother in issue of May 5, on reliability of quotations, will say, the matter found in "Books and Utah Mormonism in Contrast," both in its first and present issues, is reliable. In the main part it was taken direct from the works cited; in all other cases from well certified productions by others. The parts objected to most by Utah Mormons has been tested again and again and will stand their fire till the crack of doom, as well as accomplish their doom.

MARION, Iowa, May 26.

Editors Herald:—Elder J. A. Seaton, of the Disciple Church of this city, has attacked our faith through the Christian (?) Index, of Des Moines, also in the Marion Sentinel. It will run in the Sentinel, for nearly four or five months.

I am writing a reply, which the editor thinks he can do us the justice to run through the paper. The Sentinel has quite a circulation, as Marion is a city of five thousand inhabitants, and Cedar Rapids, only four miles distant is a city of twenty-five thousand population. Should any of the saints desire to aid in the circulation of the defense of the Book of Mormon, the editor of Sentinel, will let them have the paper during the run of the two articles, nearly six months, as Elder Seaton and myself will be heard each alternate week. The Sentinel is an eight-page, seven-column weekly. All the numbers for fifty cents! Address the Marion Sentinel, Marion, Iowa.

Seaton's first No. is the Sentinel for Thursday, May 13, 1897.

Bro. L. E. Hills resident here, is standing by the good cause. We expect to begin preaching here to-morrow evening, the 27th.

In the fight.

C. SCOTT.

HEARNE, Texas, May 13.

Editors Herald:—We are thankful to you for the blessed tidings that you bring us every week, and of the glorious news of the feast of fat things enjoyed by those present at the annual conference. When we read the testimonies and letters, and the revelation that was given at that conference, it thrills us with joy and thanksgiving to God most high, for we felt like we were almost with them in their meetings.

We are here among outsiders, do not see the saints often; but remember to pray always, and hope never to faint by the way. We are also thankful for the church history; thankful to read and peruse its teachings. O, I feel that the Lord has greatly blessed us in these latter days, and I hope that the saints will remember me in the Prayer Union, that my health may be restored to me again, so that I may do some more good while in this life, if it is God's will. We are also patiently waiting to see Bro. I. P. Baggerly come again, as we will not have to inquire of him who he is if he comes this time. Our prayer is for the welfare of this church and the spread of the gospel.

Yours in bonds,

BRO. AND SR. W. W. SQUIRES.

GREENWOOD, N. Y., May 27.

Editors Herald:—Please say to the scattered saints in Western New York that Elders F. M. Sheehy, W. W. Blanchard, G. W. Robley, and myself are now in the western part of the State, laboring for the cause of truth. I do not know how long the other brethren may remain in this State, nor how long I shall remain myself; but I shall be glad to hear from any who may desire preaching in their vicinity. Write me at "Greenwood, Steuben County, New York," for the next few weeks. Tell me what the prospects are for getting a house in which to preach, and also as to getting a hearing. It seems that the time has certainly come for the elders to push out into new places, and open up the work where it has not yet been presented. Will you help us, by giving us the information you have of the needs of labor in your respective localities? also by trying to secure places in which to preach?

At present writing I am assisting Bro. Sheehy near Cohocton. Hearing quite good, considering the busy time, short nights, etc. Expect to return to Greenwood in a few days, if nothing occurs more than I know of now. Left Bro. Robley at Fagundus, Pennsylvania. He baptized one there before I came away, and others seemed near the kingdom.

In bonds,

ISAAC M. SMITH.

COOKES POINT, Texas, May 11.

Editors Herald:—I am still growing stronger in the faith as time passes by. There are some things I believe, and some I know; and this latter-day work I know to be true,—if I did not I surely would have quit it a long time ago, because it is so contrary to the flesh to be engaged in it, for that of itself proves it to be the work of God.

The interest is better than it has been. Many calls for preaching, from those not of the church; more than can be answered by the present laborers. We will try and do the best we can under the circumstances. I am expecting Bro. I. P. Baggerly in this section about July. I am very anxious to see him. There is a debate on hand in my section, a Campbellite preacher wants to have one with us in Hunt County. I guess he can be accommodated if the demand is sufficient to justify it; and if not we shall pass it by.

I baptized two ladies into the kingdom last Sunday; one of them a married lady, the other was not. Prospects are bright; others seem to be near the kingdom. I expect to go to Rodgers in Bell County this week, to hold a series of meetings there, and then to Grimes County to hold some meetings at a new place—interest good there I hear. I preached some there last year.

The local brethren in Texas Central district are doing well as a rule in the work; in fact we expect to do better this year all around, both officers and lay members.

Yours, in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

CLAY CENTER, Kan., May 23.

Editors Herald:—I thought a few lines from these parts might be of interest to your many readers, especially to old friends, and to Bro. R. L. Ware. I have moved into the neighborhood where he preached some four years ago, two miles south of Morganville. Myself and Bro. George Bolly obtained the use of the schoolhouse and left appointment for the next Sunday eve. I wrote Bro. Hart, district president, who with his two daughters came and assisted in the singing. Bro. Hart did the preaching, and we left appointment for one week, when I held forth; had good full house each evening and left an appointment for tonight. Many inquired for Bro. Ware, who wanted to know if he was coming to do any more preaching. The people seem to be interested, bringing lamps, building fires (when needed), etc. I shall endeavor to hold forth there as long as the people desire me to.

Yours in gospel bonds,

V. F. ROGERS.

Original Articles.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

SOME time ago I wrote an article for the Herald on the above subject, intending to continue it before this, in which I took the position that according to prophecy, both ancient and modern. Christ will come in this generation; reckoning a generation to be one hundred years; and that the present dates from 1830, leaving a little more than thirty-five in which to wind up the work, supposing him to come at the extreme end of the generation. Many consider thirty-five years entirely too brief a time in which to do the work they consider must be done before he comes; and therefore have lost faith in his coming in this generation, so can have no fixed idea regarding the matter at all.

While I am aware that saints should do right for the love of right, I am also aware that Christ has offered them considerable encouragement to do so, in the way of holding out to them the certainty of reward. "Feed my sheep," signifies encourage my people; not by telling them continually of duty unperformed, but of the blessings awaiting them at the coming of the Lord. Such hope has encouraged the people of God in all ages of the world. Therefore it is not wise to dim the brightness of that hope, and cast a shade over the path of the struggling saints; but far better to increase the belief, and thus lighten the burden and gladden the hearts of our Father's children, not by creating a false hope; for, although the object might be good, it would surely result in injury. As stated, the main argument made against Christ's coming within the next thirty-five years is, that the work cannot be done that is clearly stated must be.

I suppose the greatest work still to be done is preaching the gospel to all nations, which surely must be done before the end, I admit; but that it must be before he comes I deny. A distinction should be made between his next coming and the end. I see nothing to prevent his coming within the next year to the church unless it is the necessity of a general assembly of the church. For the last nineteen years I have heard prophecies made to both young and middle aged, to the effect that they should live to see the Savior, by men approved of God; many of whose predictions I have seen fulfilled; and I am loth to think so many in reference to Christ's coming should be found untrue.

Generally all statements made by prophets, ancient and modern, regarding Christ's coming, have been associated in our minds with his final, last coming, for some reason it being usually supposed that his next coming will be his last. A greater mistake is seldom made. The many different times his coming is spoken of cannot possibly refer to any one time, but must refer to several times; and he may come more times than is spoken of.

We read of his coming in the clouds, when the dead awake and rise to meet him, at which every eye shall see him. Also of his coming to Jerusalem to intercede in behalf of the Jews; which certainly is another time than the one when he comes in the clouds, at the time of the end; for we are told that for seven years implements of war had in this great battle will be used for fuel.

In Malachi 3, we are told of his coming to his Temple, which is not likely the time spoken of at Jerusalem; but the work done there and at the temple may be done at one visit to the earth.

We are more interested in his visit to the temple than to Jerusalem, for we may be in attendance at the former. We are clearly told his object in coming to Jerusalem; but his purpose in coming to the temple is not quite so plain; further than purifying the priesthood,—just how that will be done we are not told. The reference of his coming to the temple and the marriage supper, (Matthew 25,) refers to the same time, and refers to the promised endowment, which if never received, means failure to the whole scheme. Is it an unreasonable idea, or an unscriptural one, to look for Christ to come in person, and make arrangements for his final coming? I think not. He came to give power for the setting up of his kingdom; and more power being necessary for the final consummation of his work, it is but reasonable to suppose he will come and give it. Of course he could give it otherwise, if it was his way of doing business; but like a wise builder he prefers to be here in person on important occasions.

In Matthew 25 we are given an idea of his coming to give the endowment. It is set forth under the figure of a marriage supper—a fitting symbol. Let us notice some of the leading features of it. Under proper circumstances it is an occasion of great joy,—a time when those present receive physical food to strengthen and increase their physical powers, as a reward for the past, and a preparation for the future. An endowment of God's Spirit is precisely that. It is an occasion of great joy, as all saints know. What joy and strength for coming days a small measure bestowed at a prayer meeting gives. Let the statement be made by the watchman, whose right it is to know that he is coming; and all the ministry will haste to meet him. But half will not be ready to meet him; they will have their lamps (the theory of the gospel), but not the spirit of it. If he should come this year, many of us would be in that condition,—would be found with an understanding of the gospel, and testifying to its truth, but nothing more.

This is not his final coming; for the foolish went away to get oil, and returned, but were too late. Too late to take part in the great and grand events of the last days. They are not called wicked, but foolish, virgins; nor is it said they were punished. Foolish, because they did not avail themselves of the splendid opportunity to partake of this power, and take part in the stirring events of the end; when God's power will be so wonderfully displayed, and angels be our companions in preaching, binding up the testimony and gathering the saints. Yes, many will regret then that they had not been more faithful. Many are called now; then comes the time of choosing. Then the great work of preaching to the nations will be done, and not until then. On page 246 D. C., we read, speaking to Joseph:—

As also through your administration the keys of the school of the prophets, which I have commanded to be organized, that thereby they [the elders] may be perfected in their ministry for the salvation of Zion, and of the nations of Israel, and of the Gentiles, as many as will believe, that through your administration, they may receive the word, and through their administration, the word may go forth unto the ends of the earth, unto the Gentiles first, and then behold, and lo, they shall turn unto the Jews, and then cometh the day when the arm of the Lord shall be revealed in power in convincing the nations, the heathen nations, the house of Joseph [Indians] of their salvations.

For it shall come to pass in that day, that every man shall hear the fullness of the gospel in his own tongue, through those who are ordained to this power. If a school of prophets was necessary that the first elders might be perfected, it is equally so now. It may be urged that that received by the first elders is sufficient for all time. Reason teaches to the contrary; and the above positively so. For when at the time the gospel goes to the Jews, then cometh the day of power, showing that prior to that time it is not a day of power, which all elders ought to know is a fact. A measure of power is in the church, and out of it too for that matter; but the day of power is in the future. Then our blind will see, lame walk, dumb speak, and the teeming millions of heathendom hear the glad sound of the gospel, and the saints lift up their heads and rejoice. To make this grand truth doubly sure, see Doctrine and Covenants:—

Behold, verily I say unto you, for this cause I have sent you that you might be obedient, and that your hearts might be prepared to bear testimony of the things which are to come; and also that you might be honored of laying the foundation, and of bearing record of the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand; and also that a feast of fat things, . . . of wine on the lees well refined, that the earth may know that the mouths of the prophets shall not fail; yea, a supper of the house of the Lord, well prepared, unto which all nations shall be invited. Firstly, the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble; and after that cometh the day of my power; then shall the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the deaf, come in unto the marriage of the Lamb, and partake of the supper of the Lord, prepared for the great day to come. Behold, I, the Lord have spoken it.—D. C. 58:3.

The above is too plain to need commenting on. It is the same supper as that spoken of in Matthew twenty-five. On page 286 Doctrine and Covenants we read:—

Therefore, in consequence of the transgression of my people, it is expedient in me that mine elders should wait for a little season for the redemption of Zion, . . . and this cannot be brought to pass until mine elders are endowed with power from on high; for behold, I have prepared a great endowment and blessing to be poured out upon them.

This was to be given after the waiting time through which we are now passing, that Zion is not redeemed, and that we are waiting for are painful facts; but at the end of the "little season," above-mentioned, "tarrying time," the promised power comes.

In the Book of Mormon we read:—

And it came to pass that I, Nephi, beheld the power of the Lamb of God, that it descended upon the saints of the church of the Lamb, and upon the covenant people of the Lord, who were scattered upon all the face of all the earth; and they were armed with righteousness and with the power of God and great glory.—1 Nephi 3:50.

Notice these were already saints, and of course had received a portion of the spirit, but now received an additional degree; and that before the gathering, while they were still scattered.

So I conclude, before very much is done the endowment must be given; but admitting such to be true, what shall we do in the meantime? Wait for this more favorable time? No; for if we do, we will not be of the wise virgins. Now is the time appointed to prove us; any of us would be willing to go into the service then, at that day. All will be willing to share in the harvest; but all are not willing to share in putting in the crop. May God aid us all to realize that this is the day of preparation in getting ready for the supper.

The officers and superintendents reported the work done in the past quarter; their reports were encouraging, and gave promise of good in the future. Six schools reported: Weir City, Angola, Blendville, Webb City, Columbus, Pleasant View. Seligman school report came in too late for the convention. Reports show a membership of 453; 35 classes, 45 officers, 108 Hopes taken, 98 Senior Quarterlies, 83 Intermediate, 92 Primary, and 12 books in library. The present method of securing the district program will be continued. The question of uniformity of texts was brought up and decided against. The election of officers resulted in Sr. Mina Hart being chosen as superintendent, Bro. C. W. Sutherland assistant, E. E. Gilbert secretary and treasurer. J. W. Gilbert and wife and Sr. Hart were chosen delegates to General Convention. Bill of expense of 25 cents to Sr. Brown and of 50 cents to Sr. Hart were allowed. Vote of thanks was tendered to the officers for the service of the past year. By resolution it was agreed that each school, when visited by the district superintendent, shall see to conveying her to the next school she desire to visit. (Superintendents take note as this work will devolve upon you.) Superintendents' and teachers' normal training class was organized by Sr. Mina Hart, an instructive session was held. Let all the superintendents and teachers attend next convention with the idea of taking part, and of being benefited in this class. In the evening a pleasant time was had; the program was rendered by Pleasant View and Weir City Schools. The judges awarded the banner to the Pleasant View school.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Eastern Mission, Greeting:—On entering upon the duties of another conference year, it is most gratifying that we can do so with brightened hopes and assured confidence in the justice of our cause. That the truth borne by us is indeed the message of peace and glad tidings borne to man from Christ the Lord.

Already you have learned of the felicity enjoyed by those in attendance at the recent General Conference, and you no doubt have joined in those felicitations by reason of the glad news received. Peace and unity prevailed in all of the councils and sessions had, and the most cordial feelings were manifest in the social relations among the saints. God's goodness and favor manifest gave great confirmation and comfort to those present. The feelings of ecstasy inspired have not been magnified. We were all cheered on in the marvelous work, and so take great pleasure in sending congratulations to the saints abroad, and urge in the fullest confidence:

Be strong in your all-surpassing faith, for we have not followed "cunningly devised fables," but are witnesses of the grace manifested to the saints.

But neither past labor or received blessings will suffice, for the responsibilities of service to the cause are still upon us. The harvest field is ripe and the end is nearing. We should not falter, and only dream of advance and triumph. The conflict is on, and we should support the cause with becoming zeal at every point. The chief reward is at the end of the race, which can only be obtained by sacrifice and efforts. Not only is your social and moral support needed, but your financial and personal effort. In these times this means much. Personal sacrifice in the interest of the work is implied, a response to the requirement of the law of offerings, by which means is secured to carry on the work. From the cheerful support given by many in the past, confident reliance may be had in this regard in their faithfulness in the future. Avoid jealousies and strifes, and come to the support of the work of the "hastening time," and "let the dead bury the dead."

Read the excellent addresses lately sent out by a number of the leading brethren in charge of the various fields of labor. Note the general principles found in their advice. In the main they are equally applicable to all of the saints, and may be perused with profit by any desirous to learn their whole duty. "United we stand, divided we fall." Can we not renew our resolutions for good all along the line, and unite for the best year's service we have ever given to the cause?

As in the past, the appointments made for the east this year were few; and for the present, the division of "field labor" are as follows: Brn. A. Kent and Baker in the Philadelphia and New York districts, to advise with Brn. A. H. Parsons and Joseph Squires as to the best methods of labor. Bro. F. M. Sheehy in the state of New York (except that part included in the New York district), the Wyoming district and State of Vermont. When laboring in the Massachusetts district the general missionaries will advise with Brn. R. Bullard and O. Coombs and the missionary in charge. U. W. Greene in the state of Maine and New Hampshire. H. J. Davison in Nova Scotia. Brn. G. W. Robley, W. W. Blanchard, S. O. Foss, and I. M. Smith will be expected to support the work in these various fields as opportunity may offer and wisdom direct. All of these named, except Brn. S. Foss and H. J. Davison, are now in the State of New York and active.

On account of the paucity of our numbers, it seems necessary at present to deviate from the usual course pursued in providing persons from the general ministry to take charge of the Massachusetts and New York districts. But knowing all concerned, it is safe to say that they will move along in harmony and for the best.

The general missionaries should endeavor to work in harmony with district and branch authorities, giving them proper recognition and consideration; and branch and district officials should not fail to cheerfully support the efforts of the missionaries, when in their midst. We are laborers together. May God bless our efforts for good.

WM. H. KELLEY,

In charge of Eastern mission.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 19.

To the Saints located within the limits of the European mission, Greeting; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Three years will have elapsed July 8, 1897, since I left the bosom of the church, and my family too, as per action of General Conference of 1894, to cooperate with you in ministerial work on this side the Atlantic. Arriving in Manchester at Bro. Joseph Dewsnup's, Sr., July 21. My reception being of a character that is always stimulating to missionaries when far from home, and whether in England or Wales, my reception has been of the same stimulating character; but my appreciation for this uniform kindness is all I can offer for the same, for to God must we look for a reward for deeds done in his great name. The pang of regret felt in a failure to please everyone is made tolerable in the assurance of having injured none through design or aforethought. I have always been approachable, and ready to hear complaints from those who may have thought themselves injured by any of my ministerial acts. I am not aware of having cherished a desire to evince officiousness, or a wish to evade law prescribed duties; and certainly not to evade duty by any strategetic movement to leave that to others that might be unpleasant, for I would think in the course of human events such crookedness would be detected by some shrewd, sober thinker, in whose confidence I could not expect to live. And that which prevents Latter Day Saints living in each other's confidence and affections is alike effective in preventing brotherly love and saintly fellowship.

However perplexing the meagreness of success may have been, it has never appeared a justification for inactivity. Nor do I think that any Latter Day Saint who has testified to the validity of the latter-day work, can justify himself in inactivity; for if inactive in duty, we must be active in something which may destroy a love for duty. For inactivity is not possible in the strict sense of the term; but while blessed with a sound mind, we are responsible for our activity, whether good, or bad. But having set to our seal that God is true, the necessity for a concession as to a realism of the gospel is made apparent, which concession involves a necessity for a practical demonstration of a rectitude evincive of a corresponding realism.

It is a source of great consolation to learn that the good Lord has directed Bro. Joseph to designate brethren to fill vacancies in the leading quorums of the church; may these brethren be fully qualified for the important work, and live long to battle for the right. They have been long and favorably known in the front ranks, and though in another sphere they are still of and for the church. For worldly fame, etc., the brethren might have done better in the popular world, as could many others of their kind; but thirsting for the recompense of reward, as Moses of old, have no desire for the kind of fame that necessitates a divergence from the old paths. Long may they survive. This interposition of God's power, at this juncture, is another evidence the Reorganization has come to stay. I should suppose that the president has neither forgot the tune, or lost the time of "Redeemer of Israel;" but should he perchance be defective in either, I may enlighten him next August. Ahem.

The barriers that exist to stay the progress of the work should stimulate all concerned to a continued, persistent, and systematic effort. At the preaching services at the Manchester district annual conference, April 189—, my attention was called to the presence of two or three young women, who for some time had been scholars in the Salford Sabbath school. I learned on a previous occasion that two or three of the Sunday school scholars had been baptized. On my arrival in Manchester, May 21, 1894, the work in Salford was in its incipient stage; the outlook not flattering. A small mission room had been secured, which was reached by ascending one flight of stairs, not "back slums" however, because you entered from the front, from of the cause way (or side walk). If it had been, it would not have been the first time the blessed gospel had been preached in "back slums." I have done it, and shall do it again, if an opportunity offers. For the renovating influences of the gospel is just as effective on "back slum" men and women as those emerging from back or front parlors. Christ was not a pharisee because he preached to or taught them, nor a horse because being born in a manger. As per request I preached in this small upper mission room, morning and evening—outdoor service being held an hour before assembling for the evening service. One of our young elders, who at the present bids fair to become a mighty man in Israel, shouldered an instrument of music, another one carried a chair, and presently there was "music in the air." The young musician was the preacher; but his auditors were few and far between; for while a few were within easy hearing, some stood afar off; a few peeped through the windows; one or two ventured to open the door, but held on to it that it might easily be closed if finding the sound of the preacher's voice too obnoxious. A few had to take the middle of the street or come pretty close to the preacher to pass; some did so, with a kind of a one sided glance. Nothing daunted however, the preacher evinced the gift of endurance, closing in time for the indoor service at 6:30, when the writer preached to one stranger and about a dozen saints, maybe a few more.

No; the prospects were not at all flattering. But a Sabbath school and a systematic method of tract distributing were inaugurated. Young brethren and sisters come to the front; they believed it was the constant dripping of the tiny drops of water that wore the solid rock, and so entered into the good work; and when a feeling of discouragement came over them, the constant drippings of the tiny drops of water proved a stimulus and onward and onward they marched unto victory, and as a result of this persistent, systematic, and continuous labor, there's a Salford branch of twenty or thirty members, and a Salford Sabbath school of over a hundred members, with good prospects; while the distribution of tracts under a well regulated system continues from street to street. And on hearing a report of the progress and prospects of the Salford Sabbath school my mind reverted back to the time when our "Herald" had scarcely assumed its swaddling bands," a plea for the little ones was heard;" and despite the limitedness of the facilities the plea was not unheeded. No; but the dripping of the tiny drops of water continued, the petitioner for the little ones in the front all the time, through evil and good report, adding stroke after stroke, and the opposers to Sabbath school movement grew less, its advocates increasing—and O, what a grand victory has been achieved!

From one or two isolated Sunday schools under the auspices of branches of the church, have grown district associations, going on and on. Now a general Sabbath school association, which can occupy a day or two in the capacity of a general Sabbath school convention in the discussion and examination of questions evincing the effects of natural and acquired ability that would be no discredit to any worldly parliament consisting of the most cultured men of the age. And as I read the reports of Sabbath school conventions, I find the Sabbath school boys and girls (notably the latter) of twenty years ago, the men and women (intellectually) of the to-day's Sabbath school. Some giving incontestable evidence of the pen being mightier than the sword. How inspiring the spectacle! And how stimulating the thought, that some of our best teachers and advocates of the Sabbath school have been true to their convictions received in the Sunday school in boyhood and girlhood days; passing through youth's slippery paths, and are now proving themselves such competent workers in one of the best of systems among men; and if such big results dating from the time of the plea for the little ones was heard, what pen can describe or tongue tell the gigantic results that will come with the systematic work being done by our present Sunday school workers in ten years?

We ought never to overlook the fact that knowledge is power, and if our young men evince a willingness to bring their powers of minds into requisition to aid Zion in any of her departments, they should be encouraged by all means.

It is just possible I may be a little fanatical. But I have thought that since 1830, culture and refinement have kept abreast, if not ahead of the progress of the latter day work, and a love for the simplicity of the gospel has decreased in the same ratio. If then, in the wise order and providence of God, cultured young men are raised up that shall more successfully cope with the exigencies created, by this increase of culture, and decrease of love for the simplicity of the truth, as it is in Christ, so much better for the cause we love, and none of our predecessors who battled long, in the front ranks of the latter day work, and have gone to their rest, will suffer loss; nor will those who are still laboring with less mental ability than some who are coming to the front, with many more that may yet come, or so it is to be hoped.

What of our young brethren in Australia. How loyal, how zealous, how persistently they push on; what credit they reflect on themselves and the cause they represent, who, in riper years, could have done better, with the same barriers confronting them?

Bro. Joseph once said, we are not all equally intelligent; but we may be equally zealous and enduring, and win the prize. Why should not this fact prove sufficiently stimulating to all, despite degrees of intelligence, gifts and callings of God unto us—and rise above all that is ignoble and undignified. Christ has vividly portrayed the dread consequence of a divided house and kingdom. And nothing was more effective in preventing this division than a practical observance of 104:44, Doctrine and Covenants, for when all are acting with diligence in their respective appointed spheres, there is no room for friction or division; for such diligence precludes the consumption of time that might be used in one brother seeking occasion against another brother, and the diligence thus evinced will, if evil exists, lead to a legitimate procedure to meet and adjust it. And Christ's revealed method of adjudication to the sober thinker and God fearing official, is of such a character as to at once convince him as to the wrongness of any act that would culminate in accusing the supposed wrongdoer. Sitting in judgment on his acts, or publishing him as a transgressor, before the law imposed preparatory steps are taken. And if any officials are ignorant of these plain reflected law imposed duties, they ought to be released from official duties until they give ample evidence of an understanding as to how a wrong-doer is to be dealt with. For he that evinces ignorance of law, or a willful disregard of the same, is capable of doing much mischief among quiet, unsuspecting, God-fearing Latter Day Saints; and the sheep ought to be protected from the ravages of the wolves. A sensationalist, or a willful violator of known and accepted law is generally deceptive, though withal very pious; and a great claim to Spirit direction has a wondrous effect with many, so that it becomes not difficult to form an affinity, and so enlist sympathy in opposing that which the violator of law may designate as tyranny or despotism, etc. It is a grave matter for anyone to substitute impulses, etc., for a guide in view of given and accepted law, nevertheless it is possible. But I have use for no claimed manifestation that conflicts with given and accepted law. For that which is governed by law is preserved by law. Nothing could be more effective in revealing the necessity for law than that found in 38:7 Doctrine and Covenants; and the following serves to show that the elders who are appointed to watch over the church, are to see that my (Christ's) law is kept (41:2; 46:7, D.C.) A failure to do with the sinner as the scripture direct is offensive to him who is our lawgiver (64:2, D. C.) The above also forbids one brother seeking an occasion against another, while he (85:7, 8, 9) affords the best exposition of spiritual law, with the most vivid portrayal of consequences to follow the act of becoming a law unto ourselves. Since the demise of the apostles; besides all this, the twenty-third paragraph of section forty-two gives the most lucid detail as to the procedure of one who is offended with another, and to cap the climax, the Book of Rules positively prohibits the offended party from proceeding against the offending party until a reconciliation has been sought as law directs, which preventive is of a binding character, from the facts that it is in perfect harmony with Christ's teachings. (Matt. 18:15-17; B. M. page 535.) And any official that should be so ignorant or willful as to consume his time and the time of others in arraignment a brother; accusing and passing judgment upon him, and he know nothing of it, not present to offer a word of explanation or defense in the blaze of the above instruction, which forbid such a dispicable procedure, would be unfit and unworthy to hold a membership in Christ's Church; much less to act as a representative of that church, until coming down in the valley of humiliation, recant or offering reparation. It is a thousand pities that any innocent, well-meaning, God-fearing Latter Day saint should be so influenced as to look on such godless procedure with favor.

What conception could any official have of the grave responsibility assumed in the acceptance of a legally tendered position of the church of the living God, which is tantamount to making a covenant with his God to acquit himself of duties attaching to the accepted office that would allow himself to so transcend the dignity of a servant of God? If we love not our brother whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen?

The greatest criminal in the law is not denied the right of self-defense. Nothing is more evincive of mercy and justice than Christ's method of adjudication, when practically observed; and nothing more subversive or hindering of both when violating it. I respectfully suggest to my young brethren to study to render themselves familiar with the above law, for the light radiating therefrom must prove our polar star through this dark maze, with a corresponding study to discriminate between natural impulse and Spirit impression, and know assuredly that God's Holy Spirit will never lead to a violation of God's revealed law. Paul advised those who exercised the gift of tongues, if there were no interpreter present, (1 Cor. 14:28). How suggestive of the thought that by right living and proper striving we are so to discriminate that we be not deceived. (See also 46:7, D. C.) And we learn that God promises discernment to elders appointed to watch over the church, etc., if striving for it. And in your studies on this point, don't overlook section 50, nor paragraphs 4 and 5, section 52 pattern on all things.

The world is full of sensationalism, wild excitement, undue impulsiveness, etc., and greedily the masses feed thereon; in view of which fact the Lord has spoken to his servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language (D. C. 1:5), that we may come to understanding, and not be deceived. Shall we evince our appreciation of the overtures of his mercies, or suffer ourselves to be inveigled in the meshes of sin and delusion, and blast our prospects for futurity? Let us think on the thing.

Brethren and sisters should sustain branch and district authorities, and they in turn, by diligence and godly zeal, should show themselves worthy of confidence in their ministrations; but if they fail in this, giving evidence of but a partial interest in the great latter day work, they must not feel surprised if evidence of a lack of confidence becomes visible: and diligent, God fearing Latter Day Saints look for, and are stimulated by diligence, and persevering officials, and made correspondingly sad if officials are negligent and undecided, etc. It were better therefore to be zealously engaged, than just hanging on merely to retain a foothold. Better give all our strength and service to God, or concentrate our strength elsewhere, for if this great latter day work is not worth everything, it's worthless; why then should we trifle with it?

Husbands and wives, fathers and mothers should always be studious to make home a sacred spot, endearing, attractive; and never by any means permit their homes to be desecrated by the tongue of the slanderer, or idle gossip; know and understand this, that our method of adoption provides for appeals from one recognized church tribunal to another, if those whom these tribunals decide against have the least pretext to think they have been dealt with unjustly, therefore there can be no justifiable pretext for anyone to oppose the legitimate operation of revealed and accepted law; therefore do not sanction, berating and abuse of constituted authority by any means, frown it down, especially if done in your homes, which should always be peaceful. When the enemy comes in like a flood, constituted authority must place their hands behind them, their tongue between their teeth, say nothing or do less, however threatening the aspect; or in the dignity of their calling step to the front, expound, defend, enforce the law for the vindication of the innocent, punishing the guilty, and fostering the fair fame of the church; and God will ever and comfort and bless the officials who with an eye single to his glory give such evidence as to their faith in the Supremacy of his divine law; otherwise there were little inducement to bear the contradiction, persecution, etc., of sinners. But this zealousness in the defense of the law, will always prove effective in the advocacy that the law is a praise and comfort to them that do well, and only a terror to the evil doers. Admit that the Supreme Being is unbounded in goodness, infinite in wisdom, it must of necessity follow, that he is inflexible in justice; hence justice continueth his course and claimeth its own; we therefore become proficient in expounding and enforcing God's laws as our conception broadens, and enlargeth of God's justice. Hence there is peace and satisfaction in living God's law; but shame, confusion and distress in its violation. Let us be loyal to God's law and be happy.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

P. S.—The mission conference will convene at Manchester, England, at six p. m. Saturday evening preceding the first Monday in August, 1897. Elders, please remember. It is not likely the secretary will find it practical to notify every individual elder. Place for meeting given later. It is expected that the newly appointed missionaries, Brethren H. C. Smith and F. G. Pitt will be present. Both have been long and favorably known in the latter-day work; their births were announced later than the writers, so they doubtless will skip around more lively, increasing while the writer will decrease. I expect to cease hostilities about three or four days before the August conference, looking westward—pending the discussion of conference rules. No reports expected but from districts, presidents, and isolated branches; and elders (if any) not known to districts. District presidents will please present their licenses for indorsement. This does not mean elders in organized districts, but it does include elders (if there are any) not known in districts and elders in isolated branches.

J. C.

To the Saints of Northeastern Nebraska Mission; Beloved in the Lord:—Once more I come to you by appointment as your servant, and submit to you the following as missionary in charge.

We enter upon this year of service with brighter prospects than ever before, and with a stronger desire to see the work advance. Our labors together during the past has been, in a general sense, pleasant, and I know of but little to discourage now.

The mission as now outlined is that part of Nebraska lying north of the Platte River and east of the ninety-ninth degree of longitude, as will be seen by the Pastoral of Apostle J. R. Lambert, general missionary in charge. All saints and friends desiring work, or having suggestions to offer for the good of the work, will correspond with me, addressing me at Box A, Magnolia, Iowa. Bro. F. A. Smith will have special care of the missionary work in Omaha and suburbs, but will no doubt gladly respond to any urgent calls for him in the mission. Brn. W. A. Smith and Samuel Wood will for the present labor together, and occupy their time in Northern Nebraska district. I will spend most of my time during the early part of the summer in that part of Central Nebraska district in my mission, but will hold myself subject to any special calls so far as I can.

I desire to keep in correspondence with the presidents of Northern and Central Nebraska districts, so as to keep in touch with them and their work, and thus mutually labor for the cause we love.

Do not forget the needs of the work in a financial sense, but send in your tithes and offerings as the law directs, and therein be blessed, and bless the work. Bro. J. M. Stubbart is Bishop's agent of Northern Nebraska district, and Bro. Levi Gamet is Bishop's agent of Central Nebraska district. Remember also that the missionary is dependent upon you for his necessary expenses, and when you correspond with him see that he has postage for reply, and when you wish his labors see that his expenses are met. I can assure the saints and friends that the laborers in this mission are worthy, and will be as economical as possible and do efficient work.

The hastening time is come, and the watchword of all should be, "ready;" ready for labor; ready to sacrifice; if needs be ready to repent; always ready to forgive; and that you may not need be overcome; but ready to meet the devil and the world with all their allurements successfully, and all afflictions patiently, watch and pray always, and thus be ready to meet the Master when he comes. I trust that the saints may so labor in their temporal affairs, that they may feel that God will bless them in all their undertakings, and to this end I shall ever pray. Be careful not to contract debts if you can possibly avoid it; but above all things, don't go in debt more than you are assured you can pay; but should you meet with failures, so that you cannot fulfill promises made, be honest with your creditor, and apprise him of your failure and assure him that you will pay as soon as it is possible, and do all on your part to make it possible. Try to satisfy all your honest debts, before making any move. Do all things to the glory of God. Keep yourself clean from that which God has told you is not good, and use the amounts thus saved to advance the work of the Father.

I desire to be remembered by the saints when in prayer, that I may be wise and humble; patiently enduring, yet wisely controlling all that appertains to my work.

Your brother and fellow-laborer,

J. F. MINTUN.

To the Saints of the Southwestern Mission; Greeting:—After prayerful thought I have decided to request Bro. C. R. Duncan to take charge of the work in Oklahoma. Bro. T. J. Sheppard will please take the active oversight of the work in Indian Territory and Arkansas. I hope this arrangement will be satisfactory to all concerned. The brethren of the ministry will please report promptly, so that our report may go to headquarters on time. My mission address will be, till further notice, Medina, Texas. Praying that God's blessing may be with the faithful workers, I am your brother in bonds,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

To the Saints in Southeast Nebraska Mission; Greeting:—Having been reappointed in charge of this mission, we hope to be able to accomplish more this year than last. We desired and hoped to have more assistance this year, but in this we have been disappointed. Bro. J. W. Waldsmith will not labor as a missionary this year, but will devote his time as district president and Bishop's agent. We desire to see the saints in this mission sustain their former record in tithes and offerings, as you can justly be proud of the same. Bro. H. W. Bellville will be in the mission by the first of June, and we hope he shall receive the support and confidence of the saints wherever he labors.

I feel to make a special appeal to the saints to make a greater effort this year than ever to reach that condition spiritually which will enable you to enjoy more of the Spirit, and thus develop within you those gifts which God has given. The branch officers should do all in their power to enable those under their watchcare to "come up higher," and preach the word in new localities as much as possible. This mission is large, and it is impossible for the missionaries to keep the work moving as it should, without the undivided support of the local officers. The year opens with good prospects before us; so let us make a united effort, each working in his respective position, and none "shall lose his reward."

If anyone seeing this has E. D. Howe's "Mormonism Exposed," John Corroll's "Brief History," or Professor Turner's "Mormonism of all Ages," that would dispose of them, please address the undersigned at Netawaka, Kansas.

Your brother in Christ,

W. E. PEAK.

BENNETT, Neb., May 20.

To all who can tell the gospel story, though simply, and all who love the work in the Far West, Missouri, district; Greeting:—

Having placed upon me by the general missionary in charge, the responsibility of looking after the missionary work of the district, I address you.

The inactive, and careless ones are fast being relegated to the unpopular minority, in the rear; while the self-denying workers are moving aggressively, conquering, and to conquer. No heights have yet been attained, but above them towers others higher, within the possible reach of man. "We are workers together with God"—a copartnership in which we must do our part, if we would obtain our portion of the heavenly treasure. None are exempt from responsibility, though it may differ in kind and degree. If it be found small and lowly, be sure that it is fully met; for which honor will come to you from him who noticeth the falling sparrow. We need such a consecration to the work that will lead us to improve the smallest opportunities to do good. Small duties outnumber the large ones, and need to be sharply looked after,—the larger ones are easily seen. If you cannot turn a wheel yourself, lay to with some other and help them. By conjoint, harmonious effort, the work will move with rapidity. Let all, both district and branch authorities; the local eldership, the priests, teachers, deacons, sustained by the essential help of the membership, assisted by the general missionaries, labor together, and with one grand united and universal effort, push the gospel into every unoccupied part of the district.

The missionary in charge expects to labor in harmony with the district and branch authorities, without jealousy or strife. Reardless of holding the priesthood, let those who can look up appointments in new fields, get out appointments for some of the ministry to fill. By so doing you will share their reward, quite probably the larger share. If any field opens up with no one to occupy, let me know and I will go or send. If any desire to labor, all or a part of the time, with no field before them, correspond with me. In case of debates, the missionary in charge should be consulted before permanent arrangements are entered into. Let every word be tempered with wisdom, and a due consideration for the feelings of others. Charity is a beautiful mantle, beautifying all who wear it—a panacea for many of the ills of life—a preventer for many more—let us all wear it.

May there be a general uprising and pushing outward from every center, until like the measures of meal, the Far West district shall be leavened with gospel truth from center to periphery. May the spirit of earnest labor rest upon each, strengthening the strong, and moving into activity the dormant ones, is my prayer. My permanent address is, 904 Woodson Street, St. Joseph, Missouri.

Your servant and colaborer,
J. M. TERRY,

Missionary in charge, Far West district.

To the Saints and Friends in Colorado and New Mexico; Greeting:—Seeing by late Herald that Bro. J. W. Gillen has placed me in charge of the missionary work in Colorado and New Mexico, I desire to say that I am in the field, ready for work. Any requests for labor or other communication from the saints, friends, and co-laborers will be received at address below till further notice. Will be glad to hear from all who desire correspondence.

O. B. THOMAS.
WRAY, Colorado.

NOTICES.

The Latter Day Saints, of Western Maine district, met in conference the 15th and 16th of May, and while there authorized the following resolutions of thanks to be written:—

Be it resolved, That as Bro. William G. Pert has been released from the office of Bishop's agent, and president of the Western Maine district, through lack of physical ability to perform such duties as are required of one holding such offices; that the saints of said district extend to Bro. Pert their most hearty thanks for such valuable services as has been rendered by him during the fifteen years in which he has so faithfully discharged his duties.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Herald for publication.

RALPH W. FARRELL,

Committee of Resolution.

Ensign, please copy.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

In my notice to the saints of the Northwestern Kansas district I failed to state that Brn. Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley would be in Blue Rapids, June 5 and 6, to hold a two days' meeting, while en route to Minersville to dedicate the church at that place. All interested will take notice and govern themselves accordingly. All are invited to come and participate in these meetings. I am very sorry the church at Blue Rapids is not completed, so that it would be dedicated at that time. With prayers for the success of the work in this place, I remain your brother in Christ,

HENRY HART, Dist. Pres.

BROUGHTON, Kansas, May 27.

MARRIED.

Kelley acting as master of ceremonies Bro. Fred H. Johnson is a son of Elder Fred Johnson, of Burlington, Iowa, and a young man of excellent reputation. He wins a bride of grace and worthy accomplishments. May their lives be of that useful and beneficial type, which shall bring to them happiness for having done their part fully in life's battle.

DIED.

ALLEN.—At Chicago, Illinois, May 11, 1897, from a fall of sixty feet down an elevator shaft, from which he never regained consciousness, Bro. Edwin S. Allen. He was born October 6, 1853, at Lymington, England, and came to this country in infancy. He was married to Alice M. Orsborn, March 10, 1875, who died June 29, 1882; to them were born four children; his daughter Grace the only one living. Was married to Phoebe Weld, March 29, 1885; three children were the issue from this union, who with their mother, and sister Grace live to mourn the loss of their loved one. Was baptized by Elder H. A. Stebbins, August 17, 1879, and confirmed by Elders F. G. Pitt and H. A. Stebbins; and ordained a deacon by Elder M. H. Forscutt, July 11, 1880. He was a kind husband and father; a faithful worker in the church, also in the Sunday school; he had charge of a large Bible class of young people. Both branch and Sunday school recognize the great loss they have sustained. For years Bro. Allen has been known as a faithful doorkeeper in the house of the Lord. His funeral was attended by a large company of friends and relatives. Funeral sermon at his late residence by Elder F. G. Pitt. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at Plano, Illinois.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE SAINTS' HARMONY.

Music and Hymns combined.

The Harmony contains all the hymns in the Saints' Harp, also 555 pages of music, comprising about 720 tunes, with full instructions on choir and anthem music. Leather backs, cloth sides, $2.00. With music only, $1.25.

The regular edition in extra binding. Red morocco backs and corners, red cloth sides, with gilt edges entire. Price $2.75.

ABSTRACT OF EVIDENCE, TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

An abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the original church, the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the original church.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

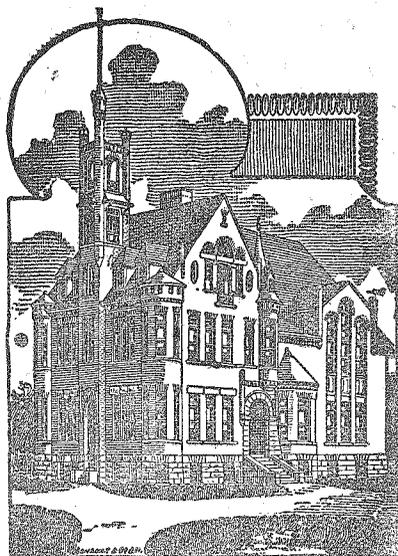

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

DOES EVOLUTION IMPLY GOD?

THE Duke of Argyll has for many years been locking horns with the mechanical evolutionists, and in a couple of articles in The Nineteenth Century (March, April), he ranges rapidly over the whole field of controversy in a review of Mr. Herbert Spencer's work. The articles were written (all but the last few pages) before the completion of Mr. Spencer's latest (and last?) work, being called out by the latter's article in 1895 on Lord Salisbury's utterances regarding evolution. We cannot follow the Duke here in the wide range which he covers; but the central thought and purpose of his articles, as indeed of all his writings on the subject, is to demonstrate that neither Darwin's theory of natural selection nor Spencer's theory of organic evolution does away with the necessity for God, but rather presupposes him clearly and necessarily. Mr. Spencer, indeed denies that his reasonings are materialistic (or spiritualistic either); but says the Duke, while the attitude of professed neutrality may be the true one for his own very subtle mind, it is certainly not true of the effects of his presentations on the minds of others.

The Duke of Argyll finds a teleological argument in the very name adopted by Darwin for his theory—natural selection:—

“Selection means the choice of a living agent. The skilful breeders of doves and dogs and horses were, in this phrase taken as the type of nature in her production and in her guidance of varieties in organic structure. Darwin did not consciously choose this phrase because of these tacit implications. He was in all ways simple and sincere, and he no more meant to impose upon others than on himself when he likened the operations of nature in producing new species to the foreseeing skill of the breeder in producing new and more excellent varieties in domestic animals. Nevertheless, as a fact, this implication is indelible in the phrase, and has always lent to it more than half its strength and all its plausibility. Darwin was led to it by an intellectual instinct which is insuperable; viz., the instinct which sees the highest explanations of nature in the analogies of mental purpose and direction. The choice by Darwin of the phrase natural selection was in itself an excellent example of its legitimate meaning. He did not invent either the idea or the phrase of selection. He found it existing and familiar. He took it from the literature of the farm yard and of the stable. He told Lyell that it was constantly used in all books of breeding. It was his own intellectual nature that made the choice, selecting it out of old materials. These materials were gathered out of the experience of human life, and out of the nearest analogies of that natural system of which man is the highest visible exponent. But Darwin neither saw nor admitted its implications.”

Darwin assumed that the processes of selection were accidental, the result of fortuity or mechanical necessity, simply because he did not know any law governing their occurrence. His “fanatical followers” have gone further and assumed that the rule of accident and mechanical necessity had forever excluded the agency of mind. Yet there can be no doubt that the result of thirty years of discussion has shown more and more clearly that this theory of mechanical evolution cannot account for the facts. “Selection, as we know it, cannot make things; it can only choose among materials already made and open to the exercise of choice. Therefore selection, whether by man or by what men are pleased to call nature, can never account for the origin of things.”

Spencer substitutes for Darwin's phrase another; namely, “survival of the fittest,” which, the Duke thinks, “means nothing but a mere truism”—that the creatures fittest to survive do survive, but explains nothing and tells us nothing. Of Spencer's wider generalization, organic evolution, we are told that it is nothing more than “the general idea of development in its special application to organic life”; and all Spencer's great heads of evidence from Geology, Classification, Distribution of Species, Embryology, Rudimentary Organs, are merely proof that “nothing that we can see or know, nothing that we can even conceive, is produced at once as a finished article, ready made without any previous processes of growth.” Still circling around this point of the origin of things, the Duke of Argyll says further:—

“We know as certainly as we know anything in the physical sciences, that organic life must have a definite beginning, in time, upon this globe of ours. If so, then of course that beginning cannot possibly have been by way of ordinary generation. Some other process must have been employed, however little we are able to conceive what that process. All our desperate attempts, therefore, to get rid of the creation, as distinguished from mere procreation, are self-condemned as futile. The facts of nature and the necessities of thought compel us to entertain the conception of an absolute beginning of organic life, when as yet there were no parent forms to breed and multiply.

“Darwin, as is well known, recognized this ultimate necessity. He clothed the conception of it in words derived from the old and time-honored language of Genesis. He spoke of the Creator first breathing the breath of life into a few, perhaps only into one single organic form. His followers generally seem to regard this as a weak concession on the part of their great master. They never dwell on it. They never realize that without it, or without some substitute for it, the whole structure of what they call organic evolution is without a basis—that it represents a chain hanging in mid-air, having no point of attachment in the heavens or on earth. It is as certain as anything in human thought that, when organic life was first introduced into the world, something was done—some process was employed—differing from that by which those forms do now simply reproduce and repeat themselves.

“But the moment this concession has been fully, frankly, and intelligently made, another concession necessarily follows; namely, this, that we cannot safely conclude that the first, and more strictly creative, process has never been repeated. Yet this is the assumption tacitly involved in all the current materialistic theories of evolution. It is an assumption nevertheless in favor of which there is assuredly no antecedent probability.”

Later on (in his second article) the writer presses the point still further:—

“If the processes of ordinary generation have never been reinvigorated by a repetition of that other process—whatever it may have been, in which ordinary generation was first started on its wonderful and mysterious course—then all the more certainly must the whole of that course have been foreseen and prearranged. It has certainly not been a haphazard course. It has been a magnificent and orderly procession. It has been a course of continually fresh adaptations to new spheres of functional activity. We deceive ourselves when we think or talk, as the Darwinian school perpetually does, of organs being made or fitted by use. The idea is, strictly speaking, nonsense. They were made for use, not by use. They have always existed in embryo before the use was possible, and, generally, there are many stages of growth before they can be put to use. During all these stages the lines of development were strictly governed by the end to be attained, that is to say, by the purpose to be fulfilled.

“This, indeed is evolution; but it is the evolution of mind and will; of purpose and intention. . . . I quite agree with Mr. Spencer that most men when they talk of separate or special creation do not realize, or ‘visualize,’ what what they mean by it. But exactly the same criticism applies to the language of those who are perpetually explaining organic structures as developments governed by the absolute necessities of external adaptations. They do not really see the necessary implications of their own language. If the organism is to live at all, they frequently tell us, such and such developments must arise. Quite so—but who is it, or what is it, that determines that the organism shall live, and shall not rather die? The needed development will not appear of its own accord. The needed perception of its necessity must exist somewhere; and the needed power of meeting that necessity must exist somewhere also. Moreover, the two must act in concert. Those, therefore, who talk about that combined perception and power existing in nature are using words with no meaning, unless by nature they mean a conceiving and a perceiving agency. It is on this principle alone that we can explain very clearly why some apparatuses are common to all living things.”

Mr. Spencer very briefly replies, in the May number of The Nineteenth Century, to several points (not reproduced above) in which he thinks the Duke of Argyll has misapprehended him; but does not enter upon any general argument because, as he says, of “the small amounts of time and energy remaining” to him.—Literary Digest.

ACCUSATION BY REVELATION.

THE following from the Chicago Tribune for May 24, if true, is quite significant, and is not altogether unexpected by us.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 23.—For the last fourteen years Archibald R. Henry has been prominently identified with the Seventh-day Adventists, whose headquarters are in this city. Mr. Henry has held many and various positions of trust connected with the religious and commercial interests of that denomination. Before becoming an active member of the Seventh-day Adventists he served eight years as president of a national bank in a western State, and his ability and business experience, combined with religious zeal, at once placed him in the front rank of prominent workers in the faith. The sensational announcement made a few days ago that Mr. Henry had brought suit in the Circuit Court against the Adventists for $50,000 for defamation of character was as startling as a clap of thunder from a clear sky.

At the last session of the general conference of the Seventh-day Adventists Mr. Henry was relieved of the various positions of trust held by him in the denomination, among them being that of treasurer and general manager of the publishing association, which position he had held for ten years. He declares that this action of the conference was the result of a series of "visions" and inspired writings by Mrs. Ellen G. White, who bears the relation to the believers and followers of the creed of a prophetess inspired from God. The "inspirations" were received and written by Mrs. White at her home in Australia, and are dated "Norfolk Villa, Prospect street, Granville, New South Wales." Following are a few excerpts:—

"I do not find rest in spirit. Scene after scene is presented in symbol before me, and I find no rest until I begin to write out the matter. I think we will institute once each day a season of prayer for the Lord to set things in order at the center of the work (Battle Creek). The general conference itself is becoming corrupted with wrong sentiments and principles.

CHARGES UNJUST DEALINGS.

"Men connected with the work of God have been dealing unjustly, and it is time to call a halt. The holy principles God has given are represented by the sacred fire, but cannon fire has been used in place of the sacred. The plea some are so ready to urge, 'working in behalf of the cause of God,' to justify themselves in presenting robbery for burnt offering, is an offense to God. We accept no such transactions; prosperity will not attend these movements. The Lord of heaven does not accept the strange fire offered to him. Let men be connected with God's work who will represent his character. They may have much to learn in regard to business management; but if they pray to God as did Daniel—if, with true contrition of mind, they seek that wisdom which comes from above—the Lord will give them an understanding heart. Read carefully and prayerfully the third chapter of James, especially verses 13-16. The whole chapter is an eye-opener if men wish to open their eyes.

"No man should have a responsible connection with our institutions who thinks it no important matter whether he has a heart of flesh or a heart of steel. I have borne abundant testimony, setting forth the fact that the ability to write a book is like every other talent—a gift from God, for which the possessor is accountable to him. This talent no man can buy or sell without incurring great and dangerous responsibility. Those who labor to bring about changes in the publication of books, to place the books wholly under the control of the publishing houses or the conference, know not what they are talking about. The efforts made to turn all the profits derived from the talents of writers into the hands of the conference or publishing houses will not prove a success, for the plan is not just and equal. From the light given me by God, the efforts made in this direction by those at the heart of the work are not heaven-inspired.

"When men connected with the publishing business make decisions and transactions as they have done and propose to do in Battle Creek they give evidence that changes should be made as soon as possible, for God is not in such a plan.

"Some will urge that in dealing with sharpers—those who have no conscience—one must conform in a large degree to the customs that prevail; that should he adopt a course of strict integrity he will be compelled to give up his business, or fail to procure a livelihood. It has not been after God's order to center so much in Battle Creek. The state of things now exists that was presented before me as a warning. The Lord gave warnings to prevent this demoralizing condition of things, but they have not been heeded. This state of things must change. Unconverted men must no longer be managers and directors in so important and sacred a work.

"ROBBERY IN ANGEL'S GARMENTS."

"I presented no false visions before the men in Battle Creek when I said that some were handling responsibilities which they were not fitted to undertake. When men like A. R. Henry and Harmon Lindsay refuse to be worked by the Holy Spirit, and yet consent to accept important responsibilities, Satan takes possession of their minds and plans and devises for them. When Elder Olsen linked himself with these men he perverted his spiritual eyesight and saw things in a strange light. The men who have been connected with the greatest interests upon this earth have tainted and corrupted the work of God. Brother H. W. Kellogg was not proof against the representations of A. R. Henry and some others. He accepted their propositions, which meant act after act of complicated robbery—robbery which was clothed in angel's garments. My guide cautioned me in no case to accept propositions coming from the Board of Directors of the publishing house in Battle Creek, for they meant robbery—robbery of those dependent upon the talents and abilities which God has given them. Again and again I have been taken by my guide to hear words and assertions with reference to authors and their books, and in regard to money and how it should be used. This seemed to be a subject upon which Brother A. R. Henry was crazed, but his enthusiasm was the inspiration of Satan, and by the influence of the tempter the moral depravity has spread till there is danger that it will corrupt every right principle in the life of Brother Henry.

"Harmon Lindsay is no more pure in his integrity than is A. R. Henry. I have seen different ones come from interviews with them dazed and bewildered."

MRS. WHITE'S ROYALTIES CUT DOWN.

Mr. Henry says that when he became general manager of the publishing house Mrs. White, who is the recognized prophetess of the denomination, was receiving yearly a large sum of money as royalty upon the publications of so-called "visions," testimonies and "inspired" writings. He regarded the royalties as excessive, and during his management of the association he greatly reduced these royalties. As a result of these reductions and from other causes Mrs. White became angered, and for five years past she has written and distributed among the people who believe in these visions and are members of the denomination certain so-called visions, in which she charges him with a great number of crimes and misdemeanors, and breach of faith, confidence, integrity, and duty. Mr. Henry believes that Mrs. White, in sending out these testimonies, was actuated by malice and a desire to injure and degrade him in the estimation of the believers in the creed; that she took advantage of her position and the way she was regarded in the minds of the followers and believers in that faith to bring him into public scandal and disrepute. For this reason he claims that he has been injured and has sustained damages to the extent of $50,000. The case will come up at the September term of the Calhoun County Circuit Court. The Seventh-day Adventist general conference officials here and those at the publishing house refuse to make any statement in regard to the case. They claim that it will result in "no cause of action" without much effort on their part.

The temptation to run all the affairs of the community is strong in most human natures; and it has been a source of some wonder to us, if sooner or later, this desire on the part of the leading spirit in the Battle Creek movement, as at present constituted, would not crop out in a direction to interrupt the harmony of the current of events and create some distress to many if not contention and division.

It would appear from the above that the business methods of Mrs. Ellen G. White, were not altogether in accord with those of business men educated in business schools. It appears that some men of this sort have been chosen to assist in the financial affairs of the Battle Creek establishment, and have come into contact with Mrs. White, in a pecuniary way, and that she proposes to get rid of their ways by getting rid of them. Mr. Henry seems to think that if his ways have been irregular, an investigation in a businesslike manner would serve the purpose of either proving it or giving him an opportunity to disprove it.

It may be possible that the "love of money," may have proved a fruitful source of contention in this religious household as it has done in others. We wait the result.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is it understood by the church that the revelation in regard to the stars falling from heaven before the coming of Christ, was fulfilled in the great meteoric shower in 1833.

Ans.—We believe it to be understood that the "meteoric shower" of 1833, bears some such relation to the prophecy concerning the falling of the stars, and the moon being turned into blood before that great and notable day in which the Lord will come that the falling of the Spirit on the one hundred and twenty disciples on the day of Pentecost had to the prophecy of Joel regarding the pouring out of the Spirit upon all flesh in the last days. It was a part of the general phenomena, a sign of the near approach of the time prophesied of. We have heard some elders hold that it was the veritable star-falling time; and we suppose they so believed. We believe that it is now and again referred to as one of the signs of the times. It is hardly so wide a fulfillment of the words concerning the falling of the stars as would be expected to fill the prophecy.

TO SEND MORE JEWS TO PALESTINE.

NEW YORK, May 6.—(Special to the Chicago Tribune.)—A meeting was held last night at Liberty Hall, at which the question of forming a colony for the Jews in Palestine was discussed. Ex-Coroner Ferdinand Levy presided. The speakers were Dr. Mayer Kopstein and Rabbi Klein.

"The object of this meeting is to choose several delegates, who will represent the Jewish race at the meeting which is to be held in Munich on August 25. Delegates from all over the world will be present, and the plan of establishing a colony for the homeless and persecuted Jews of Europe will be finally launched. For many months the Jewish population in this country has been silently working on this plan. We hope to obtain the aid of all the churches and large societies in America. New York must take the first step.

"This great city has a larger population of Jews than any other city in the United States, and it is through the efforts of this city that the colony in Palestine would be established. The present idea is to form a home for the Jews in which they may live in peace and govern themselves without being subjected to the tyranny and despotism of a powerful government. We ask the help of this land of freedom and its generous people."

[The rich Jews of the world ought to buy Palestine from the Turks. It is of but little value to them, while the money they could get for it would be of great use to them in helping their credit and paying their debts. —Ed.]

SLAVES FREED IN ZANZIBAR.

GREAT Britain has added to her fame as an emancipator of the slave by forcing the Sultan of Zanzibar to issue an emancipation proclamation. The Anglo-Saxon says, Go free; the Arab merely submits to what he is powerless to prevent.

Washington, D. C., May 27.—United States Consul Mohun at Zanzibar has informed the State Department that the Sultan, Hamaud Bin Mahomed Bin Said, on April 7 last issued a proclamation abolishing the legal status of slavery in the Islands of Zanzibar and Camba. The Consul says:—

"It was thought by many persons that the effect of freeing the slaves would be to throw many thousand negroes on their own resources, and that great sufferings and privations would ensue for three or four years, but from what I can see not one person will suffer in the slightest degree. The Arabs received the news with submission. The town was absolutely quiet, although sailors and marines were prepared to land from the British man-of-war in the harbor."

HEALED BY PRAYER.

CLEVELAND, O., May 12.—Mrs. Joseph Morris of Ashtabula has suffered several years with a cancer. Two weeks ago she was at the point of death, when she was induced to try faith cure. She applied to Zion Church in Chicago for treatment. The people wrote her at what hour each day they would offer prayer for her and instructed her to pray simultaneously, which she did. Mrs. Morris avers that her pain ceased with the first prayer and never returned, and in a week's time the cancerous growth went away. The patient is now able to take her meals at the table.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS.

THE repeated shocks of earthquake throughout the United States and their noticeable increase in other countries, are significant, and indicate, we believe, that speedy and repeated disastrous visitations of that nature will be seen and felt in various parts of the world where such calamities have practically been unknown heretofore, at no distant day. The shocks are ominous:—

RICHMOND, Va., June 1.—Earthquake shocks have been experienced in Giles County, Virginia, nightly since the 25th, and people are moving out.

An eruption is expected in the mountains near Pearisburg, Virginia.

It is said that in the district that seismic disturbances have caused a fissure a mile and a half in length.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—All the states along Mason and Dixon's line trembled under the shocks of an earthquake Monday afternoon. The disturbance extended from the Atlantic to the Mississippi and from Lake Erie to South Carolina.

The self-recording instrument at the weather bureau shows that the seismic tremors began at 1:58:15 o'clock and lasted five minutes.

The movement here was from south to north. The vibrations caused chandeliers to sway and floors to tremble perceptibly. It was noticed at the capitol, in the telephone exchange, and several of the high buildings. In the Associated Press office in the Post building the vibrations were felt very distinctly. Reports from other localities show differences in direction and duration. There is no report of loss of life.

A strange freak of nature was noted at Caledonia, Illinois, Monday, which may have been a forerunner of the earthquake. A section of the village sank to a depth of fifty feet or more. The piece of sunken ground is about one hundred and fifty feet long by sixty feet in width. A few moments before the movement of earth began the villagers heard a rumbling noise. One vacant house stood on the sinking ground. The people of the neighborhood are much alarmed. Caledonia was for years the capital of Pulaski County, Illinois, and is on the Ohio River.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. D. ERWIN wrote from Manti, Alabama, May 31:—

This leaves me well, busily engaged in this great work. Several new openings made of late. Harvest is great, laborers few indeed. We are expecting a glorious good conference at Flat Rock June 12 and 13.

Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California, May 26:—

We are all rejoicing in the restored gospel. On Sunday, the 23d, I went to West Berkeley and preached for the branch there, and tried to show that the gospel is the only way that perfection can be attained, it being the "perfect law;" that all the "vain philosophy of the world" will not do. In the evening Bro. G. S. Lincoln gave us a sermon on the same line. On the morning of the 16th Bro. A. M. Chase preached for us from John 10:9 "If any man enter in by me he shall be saved," and then showed the manner of entrance. Bro. Chase is a clear, logical speaker; one who to be known will be loved. The California saints are striving to stand in the front ranks as representatives of the restored gospel, knowing that in the end it must win. Our meetings are pretty well attended. We have some strangers most of the time. We hope to be among the faithful.

Brn. Parker and Barmore have begun their work in California by a protracted effort at Los Angeles, see the following reprint of their hand bill:—

NOTICE.

Come and hear the gospel in its fullness and purity.

427—San Pedro Street—427

Elders R. J. Parker of Independence, Missouri, and A. C. Barmore of Oakland City, Indiana, representatives of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will do the preaching.

The meetings will be held at 7:45 p. m. for two weeks, beginning Wednesday the 26th inst.

The word Reorganized is emphasized to enable the people to distinguish between it, and the people centered in Utah, for it has no connection with them. In speaking of it Bishop John F. Hurst of the M. E. Church says: "It is guileless of the crimes that stain the reign of Brigham Young."

Bro. George Montague, Standley, Indian Territory, June 1:—

I am again in the field; find things here in good shape; saints advancing in spiritual life and favor with God. A wise, energetic, live man at the head of a branch is a great blessing. Am in hopes to organize a branch at Coalgate soon, and maybe another at Wilburton. I feel much encouraged in the work. Will likely remain here till latter part of June, or in the vicinity, and then push on to Texas.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., Louisville, Kentucky, May 29:—

I am holding forth in Louisville, Kentucky, interest fairly good, one gave his name for baptism. I am to open up in a Christian Adventist church in New Albany, Indiana, the 1st of June. I secured quite an item in the Versailles Republican, of Riply County, relative to the claims of our people and Utah. They have several workers in Indiana.

Elder John S. Roth, Oskaloosa, Iowa, June 2:—

On May 29, I delivered the decoration address for the G. A. R. at Vandalia, Jasper County, and preached the memorial sermon on the 30th. All seemed to be well pleased. I will preach in Beacon till next week, then go to Richland conference.

Bro. Alma Kent, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 29:—

I desire to inform my friends through the Herald that my present address is No. 2925 Rose Hill Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. I am engaged in tent work with Bro. A. M. Baker in Camden, New Jersey. We made our first effort last evening, a fair congregation greeted us with the best of order and attention, and the best of all the Lord was present to assist in the dispensing of the word. We need one million of tracts to distribute among the people, but alas! poverty is a withering blight that cannot be avoided.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JAMES FARLEY sends us a copy of the weekly Orb of May 23, published at Bisbee, Arizona, in which we find an account of the indictment of one Donnelly, who posed as "the Savior of man," in the camp in the Huachucas. The Orb charges him with serious crimes and thinks his deceptive career is at an end.

President Joseph Smith arrived home from Wisconsin and Illinois on Tuesday, the 1st inst.

President A. H. Smith departed for Blue Rapids, Kansas, on Thursday, the 3d.

Sr. Bertha A. Greer, M. D., Homeopathist, formerly of Pleasanton, Iowa, and late of St. Louis, Missouri, and well known to many of the HERALD readers, has begun the practice of medicine in the city of Lamoni, where she expects to reside permanently. Sr. Greer has devoted herself closely to an exhaustive study of her profession and has graduated from an institution of recognized standing and up-to date in methods and facilities. Besides this she has had quite a wide experience of a practical character among fellow members of her profession. We regard her as a capable, conscientious practitioner, and as such commend her to the patronage of those who need hygienic and medical advice or treatment.

David McIntosh and others "of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and of which it affords us pleasure to make mention. Our readers must not get tired of press notices, and we presume they will not, inasmuch as they show the sympathy and aid of that power for good—the public press—toward our work, and that the gospel is being preached far and wide throughout the lands where missions have been established, and from which it is to spread abroad throughout the world.

Tacoma, Washington, advices dated May 31: The Northern Pacific steamship Mount Lebanon, which arrived to-day from China and Japan, brings news that prolonged earthquake shocks were experienced at Magane, Japan, the night of May 6. A professor from the imperial university and several assistants have gone to Kimi Taki, a district where repeated seismic movements have recently been felt.

Heavy frosts, accompanied by light fall of snow, prevailed throughout the State of Wisconsin, on the night of May 30. Fruit and vegetables were destroyed; ice formed in many places. Madrid advices dated June 2 report that Premier Senor Canovas del Castillo has tendered to the Queen Regent the resignation of the Cabinet, owing to the difficulty the ministers experienced in carrying on the government in view of the parliamentary situation caused by the refusal of the Liberals to take part in the deliberations of the Cortes. This attitude of the liberals is due to the personal encounter between the Duke of Tetuan, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and Professor Comas, a Liberal senator, on May 21, when the Duke slapped the face of the senator after a heated debate on the Morgan belligerency resolution adopted by the United States Senate. The Queen has sent for Marshal Campos, former commander of the Spanish troops in Cuba, and Senor Sagasta, the Liberal leader, and it is expected that the latter will be commissioned to form a new Cabinet as Premier, and that Campos will be sent to Cuba, to relieve General Weyler and to inaugurate reforms, under the policy of the Liberals. Excitement is said to be intense both in Spain and at Havana.

Constantinople advices dated June 3: The first sitting of the peace negotiations was held this afternoon . . . between the ambassadors of the powers and the Turkish minister for foreign affairs. "There are lonely hearts to cherish,
While the days are going by;
There are weary ones who perish,
While the days are going by.
If a smile we can renew,
As our journey we pursue,
Oh! the good we all may do,
As the days are going by."

LITTLE THINGS.

A good-by kiss is a little thing,
With your hand on the door to go,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling,
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare,
After the toil of the day,
But it smooths the furrows out of the care,
And lines on the forehead you once called fair,
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind,"
"I love you, my dear," each night,
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find;
For love is tender, as love is blind,
As we climb life's rugged height.

We starve each other for love's caress,
We take, but we do not give;
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole love grudgingly, less and less,
'Till 'tis bitter and hard to live.

Dear Home Column:—Perhaps others, like myself, have noticed how few the letters were becoming, all the time resolving in our own minds to send something soon to help; but putting it off, not thinking but that others were at their posts, and there would be plenty, if we did fail to do our duty. It seems a little thing in itself to do, so little that we insist on putting it off for a more convenient season; yet can we imagine what our feelings will be if in the day of accounts we fail to receive the reward we have been striving for? and no doubt learn to our great grief that it was lost by our neglecting the little things. Have we not all been cheered and strengthened many times on turning to the Home Column, and finding something from the pen of some one perhaps thousands of miles from us, answering some question that has been troubling us sorely? seemingly written just for us. Then why do we hesitate to write? When it may be our letter that will cheer and give strength to some poor struggling soul. Let us try harder to do the little things, that we may be prepared to do greater when the opportunity offers. I sometimes think when I feel I am neglecting, to quickly heed the promptings of the Spirit to write, that it is no use trying, for I cannot write anything that will benefit anyone, and I do not know that anything I have written ever did benefit anyone, and perhaps never will know in this life. But I do know that the Lord requires the effort at my hands, and it grieves me when I calmly think upon it, that I am so slow to improve the talent the Lord has given me.

I become very much discouraged at times, owing to ill health. My surroundings and circumstances often appear to me, as if I could not endure the trials, that seem to be upon me only to destroy me. But when all things seem so dark, I have always been led to look for the silver lining to the cloud.

I felt much strengthened after reading, "The Dangers of Discouragement," in Herald of late date. How many times I have been led to say, in the last year, surely the sifting time has come; and then ask myself the question, Shall I be able to stand the test? Numbers of times have I thought of something Sr. Burton said in my hearing, during her first visit at our place, several years since. It was to the effect that our trials would come to us in our most tender and sensitive place. I know it is so in my case. But in my calm moments I can say the Lord knows best what is best for me. He knows what to withhold, and where to apply the test to remove the dross from my nature. In looking back over the shaping of events in my life, I can now see where the Divine hand led me, although I did not realize it at the time, and often struggled to be free. I cannot understand why I am called to bear much that I am; yet I feel that God does understand, and will make it known to me if it is necessary for me to know. It is my earnest plea that he will give me strength to stand steadfast in the faith whatever betide, and give me strength of purpose to be doing that which I ought to do, that I be not accounted a slothful servant.

Yours hopefully,

IN Sunday School Department of May 19, the article on a traveling general superintendent is all from the pen of Bro. F. J. Ebeling. The part first printed should have succeeded the second, and have been printed as one article.—ED.

HOW I ENDEAVOR TO INSTRUCT MY CLASS.

FROM my own experience I realize that the pupils as well as the teacher must be interested, to obtain the best results. In teaching, I first endeavor to obtain the undivided attention of every member of the class, and impress upon them the necessity of faithful attendance, strict adherence to the study during the hour, and that they can be a help to the teacher, as well as she to them, by advancing their own ideas on the subject matter discussed. A Sunday school teacher's work is, oftentimes, more than simply the teaching of the lesson on Sunday.

If there should happen to be one or more in the class who are inclined to pay little or no attention to attendance, my first effort would be to devise some means by which they could be attracted. I try to work up an interest in them, by first gaining their respect for me, and never tire in my efforts in trying to keep them thus interested. Having accomplished this, I can soon lead them on little by little until I have gained that for which I was striving. I find that sociability, with the class tends to draw teacher and scholar nearer together. I invite them occasionally to spend their evenings with me. If friends are invited to meet them, I select those that I feel would have the best influence for good with them. When the lessons seem to be neglected, I select some good book that is in harmony with the lessons, and spend one evening in each week reading and discussing its merits. We would soon have them paying strict attention to the lessons assigned, in order that they may be as well informed as the other members of the class, on the regular reading night, as the previous lessons should also be discussed at that time.

I let each individual member of my class feel that I am personally interested in him. If in trouble I let them feel that my sympathies are with them. If absent on account of sickness, or from any other cause, I let them know that they were missed, and that their particular place could be filled by no one else. If at any time they seem to be negligent or indifferent, I let them know that I notice it. Perhaps a word or a look for some will be sufficient for them to understand that I notice the seeming neglect on their part, and if I have their confidence and respect, this will be sufficient to incite them to put forth a greater effort.

In teaching every lesson, we should endeavor to impress some one or more divine truths so vividly upon the mind, that they will not be easily forgotten. While we should endeavor to teach nothing but truths, yet we think by giving more prominence to some few, it will tend to impress them upon the mind and be retained. Without this special effort the matter presented might all be forgotten, and we think one truth presented in a manner to be remembered, would be better than ten truths presented in a manner to be forgotten.

I watch the attendance of the class. If members drop out and cannot be persuaded to return, I fill the vacancies by others from outside the school, who have not been attending; for a full class creates an interest that a small class will not.

It is not absolutely necessary for persons to be thoroughly familiar with the Scriptures to make a successful teacher. We have known of instances where the teacher of this kind seemed to forget that the ones being taught were not able to comprehend many things which were presented by him. It is easier for some teachers to put themselves on familiar terms with their scholars than it is for others, and also scholar with teacher, but whatever the difficulty this familiarity must be to secure cowork in the class.

And when you have brought yourself down to the plane of your scholars, and are at ease with them, then set them at something which they can do in the line of cowork with you.

You may not be able to become expert as a teacher, you may lack skill in questioning or explaining, but if you possess love for Christ, you will have power with your scholars in behalf of Christ.

In this work there are many agencies and helps to make a success; but the greatest of these is love.

Letter Department.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 3.
IT IS FALSE.

FROM a letter written by Sr. Rosa L. Sides, dated May 11, 1897, at Potter Valley, California, which was written to Elder Joseph Luff, who is in charge of the Pacific Slope mission, and by him sent to me, I learn the following:—

That Elder F. C. Watkins, of the Christian Adventist Church, had been holding a long series of meetings at Potter Valley. That he stated to one of his converts, "that after the debate held between him and Bro. Lambert, he took five of our members into his church."

This will certify to all saints and friends whom it may concern that I held a public debate with Elder Watkins in January, 1891, at Leon, Iowa. There were but few Latter Day Saints residing in Leon at the time, but up to the present time not one of them has gone into the Adventist Church.

In order to test the sincerity of Elder Watkins in making the purported statement, I respectfully challenge him to furnish the proof, in writing, and submit it to my inspection, that he has ever taken into the Adventist Church, as a result of the debate held with me, any person who was at the time a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, either at Leon or anywhere else.

The debate was a success, so far as we are concerned, and it was and is so regarded by all, so far as I know, except the members, or a majority of the members, of the Christian Adventist Church. One thing is certain, that Elder Watkins' influence in Leon waned very fast after the close of the debate, and he soon found it necessary to remove to Springfield, Nebraska.

Last year he preached for the Christian Church at Mondamin, Iowa, because, as some of his brethren have said, he could do better financially! He has announced over his own signature, I understand, that he has not changed his belief nor membership, but has dropped the name Adventist, but has retained the name Christian. So his church is now the Christian Church, or Church of Christ. I wonder which "Christian Church," or does he represent all of them?

Respectfully,

J. R. LAMBERT.

Editors Herald:—The following digest of labor performed since General Conference may be of interest. On April 18, the writer spoke, by invitation of Bro. J. M. Terry, at St. Joseph, Missouri; April 19, at Ero. Terry's request, and in harmony with a revelation of the Holy Spirit manifested in the social meeting the day before, went to Maysville, Missouri, to refute an attack upon the faith in that vicinity, by William Kirby. I arrived in time to hear a sample of Mr. Kirby's lectures against us, delivered in the M. E. church at Weatherby, Missouri, April 19. At the close of his lecture I asked for the use of the house to reply the next night. No one being present who felt authorized to grant my request, a Mr. Riggs kindly offered the use of his hall; announcement was made accordingly and the evening following I had probably twice as many hearers as did Mr. Kirby the night before. His chief effort had been to prove there had been no apostasy, and therefore the claim of the saints of restoration could not be true. This gave opportunity to preach one gospel sermon in Weatherby, which excited some interest, some observing that they believed, we "would come out all right."

The day after his lecture at Weatherby, Mr. Kirby went to his home in Doniphan County, Kansas. He had excited considerable feeling against our people and faith by a long-continued effort in a church east of Maysville, a mile distant from the saints church. He had succeeded in convincing quite a number of people, before his departure, that he was fully competent to demonstrate the fallacy of the doctrines of the Latter Day Saints. So fully were the people where he had lectured imbued with this idea, that they clamored for a public discussion. Under this inspiration, and fretting, no doubt, over the effect of lectures which I was nightly delivering, in defense of the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith, they telegraphed Mr. Kirby to return to Maysville. I was informed that they defrayed his expenses and hired a man to work on his farm in his absence.

In private conversation and before the public I had refused to debate with Mr. Kirby, insisting that his admirers should secure a minister who represented their own faith and whom they were willing to endorse as a representative man. Concluding that the best means and probably the only means to convince his friends that his efforts to destroy "the faith once delivered to the saints" would be as futile as the efforts of others in that direction had been, would be to give him an opportunity to present his claims in public discussion, we offered to debate with him, so soon as he secured the signature of twenty adults in the neighborhood, to the following indorsement:—"We, the undersigned, attach our names hereunto as evidence that we have seen and examined Mr. William Kirby's book, 'Mormonism Refuted' and that we believe it contains reliable information respecting the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and that the religious system taught therein is in harmony with the Bible, and that its author, Mr. William Kirby, is an upright, Christian gentleman."

This endorsement was signed by thirty-four persons. The following propositions were debated, in the saints' church, four miles east from Maysville, Missouri:—"Resolved, That the book entitled 'Mormonism Exposed' by William Kirby, is erroneous and false in its statements, certain assertions contradicting others, and as a book, illogical, unscriptural, misleading, deceptive, and untrue." "Resolved, that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and entitled to respect and belief of all Christian people."

Four nights were devoted to the first question, and five to the second. Mr. Kirby made but little attempt to defend his unreliable book.

The archaeological evidences and biblical proofs of the divinity of the Book of Mormon he made no attempt to answer.

Beside the nine nights' discussion, I delivered sixteen discourses in the month spent in DeKalb County, Missouri.

On May 22 I came to Atchison, Kansas, and found great improvement had been made in the spiritual condition of the branch there. As a result numbers are being added to the membership. Six were baptized May 23, and another on the 26th.

Bro. J. W. Hudgens officiated at the baptisms, Bro. C. E. Guinand and the writer at the confirmations; Bro. E. A. Davis, president of the branch, not being in the city.

Last winter, I met Elder Hyatt, Seventh-day Adventist, and missionary in charge of their work in Kansas, at Topeka. As they have a church building in Topeka and we have none, and as we have a building in Atchison and they have none, I proposed to Elder Hyatt that we "exchange pulpits," he occupying ours in Atchison, and we occupying theirs in Topeka, with the understanding that each "tell it all" and so give both congregations an opportunity to "hear the conclusion of the whole matter." But, no; he would not consent. But just now they are canvassing Atchison with tracts quite thoroughly, and have a representative there. So I took occasion to announce in the Atchison dailies the following:—

"The Sabbath; Jewish or Christian, which? The above subject will be discussed in a series of three discourses, etc. All are cordially invited to attend these services, but the speaker extends a special invitation to those who may be muddled over the Sabbath question, or who conscientiously believe Christian people should observe Saturday as a day of rest."

The Adventists have evidently learned that there is nothing to be gained for them in discussion of their favorite theme, the "Sabbath."

The Atchison branch, at a business meeting held May 24, showed its appreciation of the services of Bro. E. A. Davis, as president of the branch and missionary in the city and vicinity, by reflecting him to the presidency of the branch without a dissenting voice or vote.

May 29 I came to Topeka. Began services the 30th at Pauline. Bro. N. S. Dunnington is with me and we will continue at Pauline and Berryton, in the vicinity of Topeka, until conference at Netawaka, Kansas, June 12, 13. Immediately after this conference we will go to the Northwest Kansas district. So, "In your patience possess ye your souls." "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

Your brother,
WILL S. PENDER.

SPRINGERTON, Ill., May 18.

Editors Herald:—I started to my field of labor, southern Illinois, April 28, and labored some on my way at Buckeye, and at Westfork, Indiana, with some degree of success. Found some at Buckeye that will unite with the church ere long. What few saints that are at these places are firm in the faith and are trying to tell the people of the restored gospel.

On the 8th of May I arrived at Dryfork branch; commenced to hold forth in their chapel, with small congregations. I enjoyed some degree of liberty; formed the acquaintance of the saints; there are good saints at that place, but are scattered over a good deal of territory, they are trying to do their duty. Bro. Walker is in charge there. I visited with father and mother Green; they are getting very feeble, not able to be around much; the gospel is their only conversation; they still bear a faithful testimony of the truth of this work; it was confirming and strengthening to me. May God bless and protect them is my prayer. I met a good many of the saints, formed their acquaintance, and spoke some four times.

Bro. F. M. Slover and J. D. Stead met me here on the 10th; Bro. Slover was on his way home from a preaching tour in Hamilton County. Bro. Stead came in from Arlington, where he had been holding forth for two or three days. Found them to be very agreeable companions, having the cause at heart. We counceled together, and it was thought best that Bro. Stead and I should labor south until the June conference. Bro. Stead and I came to Springerton; we arrived here the 13th and commenced meetings with good crowds and good liberty. Here is quite a branch of the church, and a very nice house of worship. The saints, as far as I have got acquainted, seem kind and good. Here we met Bro. Stone, whom we had not seen for twenty-five years; he was then in the Christian Church, preaching for them; now he is in charge of the branch at this place. We talked of the past, and felt to rejoice in this glorious gospel. What a grand thought it is to know that God recognizes us as his servants. May we be worthy of his blessing, and live pure and holy before him.

I find Bro. Stead to be a kind and humble servant of Christ, and a fair representative of the faith. We will remain here till the 20th, then move on to a place six miles west, and then as the way opens. May the saints live humble and faithful, and prayerful that the gospel may have access to the honest in heart, so that they may rejoice in God our father, is the prayer of

V. D. BAGGERLY.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 31.

Editors Herald:—The work here opened up somewhat auspiciously last night, there being a goodly number out. Among those present were John T. Caine, S. W. Richards, and Samuel H. B. Smith. The latter took especial pains to introduce me to the two former, and he is very friendly. So far rather than a feeling to antagonize, it seems to me if there were ever a time and place needing "first principles," it is now and here.

In gospel work people are to be won by kindness rather than attacking their peculiar theory. And so far I feel as did General Grant, likes "fighting it out on this line if it take all summer."

Bro. Luff stopped a week, baptizing one, and the saints enjoyed his sojourn. I had the privilege of a twenty-four hours' visit with him, and at parting felt sorry he could not remain with me.

And now Mr. Editor just a word about the tent "appeal." While responses are coming in, I cannot but feel that did all understand the real situation we would now have sufficient in hand to purchase. When it is remembered that we are to send as far as to Omaha, likely, to make the purchase, and all the delay incident thereto, and that we should have the tent now, there will be seen the necessity of prompt action on the part of all who may choose to respond.

In a letter received last night from four sisters in California, they say, "We are working women with a small supply of pay, but send our little." In combination they sent one dollar and sixty cents. Who'll "do likewise?" I am afraid that some think that what little you could afford would not amount to anything. Your nickle or dime might be the one to complete the necessary amount to purchase, and without which such purchase fails.

When a man of the Utah Church sees and gives expression to such necessity—"I have often wondered why your people did not get a tent and work in the settlements of these valleys"—what will we do? Surely everyone can send a nickle. Don't think, "O, well, there is sure to be enough without mine;" but send it right along. If we get more than requisite to the purchase, remember we can use it as a "tent fund" for expenses. Now how many will act immediately on reading this?

Remember that the church has sent us here, and if you would help to untie our hands to the accomplishment of the greatest good, here is one way to do it. We don't expect to baptize many of their leading men, at least not soon; but do hope for a healthy growth. Please help us.

Editors Herald:—On the 6th inst. I left home for my field of labor and began preaching in the saints church, near Maxwell, the same night. Bro. Knapp took me from his place about twenty-five miles north to the Whittier table, where I spoke three times in a schoolhouse, with good liberty, to a very attentive congregation. This is a new point. Bro. Porter will please remember this point when he gets that far west. Sister Josie Jensen lives here and we found a home with them. She had not heard a sermon for ten years. Mr. Jensen is quite favorably inclined to our work, although never having heard a sermon before.

From Maxwell I came on to Kimball, and had the good fortune to meet Bro. R. J. Anthony on the train. At Kimball I spoke eleven times in the courthouse to small but interested congregations. I am assured that a number there are believing, and I cannot understand why they did not obey. I think oftentimes that I lack in ability to get people into the water. I can get them to believe, but to obey is another matter. I came here yesterday and began meetings in the courthouse last night.

There will be a reunion of the saints in Northwest Nebraska at Bro. G. A. Heywood's, about eleven miles southeast of Gordon, June 23-27. The saints in that part of the State are very scattering and it may require an effort on the part of some to attend. Let all come that can, and bring the Spirit with you. If you come by train, write to Bro. Heywood, at Gordon, telling him what day you will arrive. We hope to have assistance in the preaching from outside the mission.

DOW CITY, Iowa.

Editors Herald:—Here are a few items I have "picked up" that might be of interest or use to some.

Bishop John F. Hurst, in the Northwestern Christian Advocate for January 13, 1897, page 11, gives the number of members of the M. E. Church as 2,766,656; a gain, he says, for four years of 474,042. This would give them an annual gain of a little less than four and three tenths per cent.

In the Christian Evangelist, April 8, 1897, page 210, a writer who signs himself B. B. T., gives an account of the Christian Church in Iowa. (They perhaps, have made the largest gain of any church in the state, as the writer claims.) He places their membership now at 49,500, and one year ago at 47,196. This gives them a gain of 2,304 or a little less than four and sixty-five hundredths per cent.

According to the recorder's report to our last conference, the Reorganized Church has a membership of 38,370; a net gain for the year of 3,556, or a little more than nine and twenty-six hundredths per cent.

According to these figures our percentage of gain is very near double that of the Campbellite and more than double that of the Methodist Church. Latter Day Saint gain 9.26 per cent; Christian (Campbellite) gain 4.65 per cent; Methodist Episcopal gain 4.30 per cent. I would like to see this comparison carried farther. If some of the brethren can supply items as to numbers and gain of other churches I would like to secure them.

I also clip the following from Bishop Hurst's article:—

"CHRISTIAN UNITY.

"We devoutly thank God with you that we are in the most friendly relations with all other churches. We believe that the intense longing of the heart of Christ, as expressed in his great high priestly prayer, 'That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us,' is being fulfilled. Our message of love means oneness of spirit. Though there are differences of operation, it is the same God who worketh all in all. We neither want other churches to accept our episcopate, nor surrender anything of their own. We are not talking about unity because we are not conscious of any diversity of Christian purpose. We say to any church that goes back to Christ and reproduces the early church, in its faith, in its ordinances, and life: 'Your heart is as my heart, give me your hand.' We have always practiced these four great elements of Christian unity:—

"1. A recognition and acceptance of the members of every evangelical church on the presentation of letters of membership, and a commendation of our own members to other churches.

"2. A cordial welcome of members of other churches to the holy communion of their Lord as administered by us, and a glad going to the communion of our Lord as administered by them.

"3. A free and cordial exchange of pulpits.

"4. A practical coöperation with other churches in all Christian work. We know no rivalry, except such as one army corps feels for another to do the quickest, bravest, and most effectual work against the common foe. Our ideal is not organic union of churches, but fraternal union of spirit. And this we believe to be the only unity known to the apostolic and post-apostolic churches.

"While we rejoice in these blessed fraternal relations with all churches in Christ, we especially appreciate and reciprocate all evidences of Christian fellowship and coöperation from our sister Methodist churches throughout the world.

"Bishop Merrill, in his remarks at the close of the General conference, on behalf of the board of bishops, wisely and wittily said: 'We wish to express our profound interest in your proceedings, and our satisfaction very largely with what you have done, and to invoke the divine blessing upon all that you have done, and upon all the good things which you have allowed to remain.'—The Independent."

MOUND CITY, Mo., May 31.

Editors Herald:—Having occasion to visit relatives near Leavenworth, Kansas, I stopped to call on the few saints there at the suggestion of Bro. Pender. I was made welcome by Bro. Willis Bowlby and wife, and through their efforts held nine meetings in private houses. The attendance and interest manifested were more than we expected. Some are near the kingdom. The branch once in existence became disorganized and scattered, but as Bro. Buckley expressed it, "the gospel bell had again been rung," and the indications seemingly are favorable to a revival of the work if it is looked after. As the common saying goes, "It is a long road that has no turning;" therefore do not be discouraged, brethren, neither weary in well-doing.

While in Leavenworth I had an invitation to preach in a church for the colored people, and should have accepted it, but calls from my own district prevented.

Yours ever,
M. F. GOWELL.

SEDALIA, Ky., May 27.

Editors Herald:—After a visit of a little more than a month in this field, the old veteran "soldier of the cross," Bro. J. C. Clapp, left us yesterday for Lamoni, where he expects soon to locate his family, so his children may have a better moral and spiritual atmosphere in which to grow than formerly. I was sorry to see that Bro. Clapp's health had failed so much since I was privileged to meet him a few years ago in Southern Illinois. The climatic conditions of the mission to which he is assigned are in some respects detrimental to his health, he says; and on that account thinks he would prefer to labor in this, the southeastern mission. Will the First Presidency and others whose right it may be to consider the advisability of making such a change, please excuse my presumption in offering the suggestion that they do so.

Some of Bro. Clapp's relatives were constrained to acknowledge that the doctrines of the Latter Day Saints has much more of good in it than they had ever thought. I pray that his labors among them may be for good to them and to others as well.

The work moves slowly here, but we look for better things than these by and by.

T. C. KELLEY.

DOW CITY, Iowa, June 2.

Editors Herald:—While at Sac City last month Judge Eugene Criss furnished me the use of a hall free of charge, but the room had to be seated and lighted. I borrowed a hundred chairs from the Christian Church through the kindness of their pastor, Elder G. W. Burch, and their trustees. I procured an organ from a friend, and had everything in good shape for meetings. A number of ministers in the town made an effort to keep everybody away from my services, and succeeded to some extent, for my meetings were not well attended. However, I enjoyed good liberty in speaking to those who did attend, and feel grateful to those who so kindly assisted to make my meetings a success. Mr. and Sr. Thomas Lane were very kind to Bro. C. J. Carlson and the writer while we were at Sac City, in that they furnished us a home and permitted us to preach in their house before we procured the hall.

I found the saints of Pilot Rock branch alive in the work, and enjoying the spirit in their services. Their influence for good is felt in the neighborhood. The two days' meeting held in the branch was fairly well attended, and was enjoyed by all.

Our district conference and Sunday school convention held at Deloit, from the 28th to the 30th were well attended and quite spiritual. The Sunday school entertainment, Saturday evening, was good. Business passed off quietly; prayer services were enjoyable; and the preaching was excellent, the sermons being delivered by Elders J. F. McDowell and H. O. Smith. The saints at Deloit have repaired their church on the inside, which makes it look neat and clean, as the Sunday home of God's people should always look. On Sunday, the 30th ultimo, the church was nicely decorated with "Old Glory" bunting, small flags, plants, and flowers, and at eleven a. m. union services were held in honor of memorial day and the nation's dead. Ten old soldiers honored us with their presence, among whom was Father John A. McIntosh, with his snow-white hair. The object had in view in holding memorial services was to impress upon the minds of all who should attend, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is loyal not only to God and Christ and the gospel, but to the nation in which they live.

The saints, when laboring in unison, for the advancement of the truth, are surely the happiest people in the world. Implicit confidence in the gospel of Christ as the means of salvation; knowledge that the work in which they are engaged is divine; the manifestation of God's power through the Spirit; the consciousness that God is on their side; the fact that he still lives and reveals his will to his children, all tend to inspire them with confidence, and give them hope; and they know that if they know that if they endure in faith unto the end they will be crowned with glory in the presence of God and his Christ.

CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

WEST BRANCH, Mich., May 25.

Editors Herald.—On the 14th of this month I arrived at this place, then moved on north six miles, where I met with Bro. Joseph Roservier and wife, also Sr. Eliza Goff and Lucinda Squires, making four saints in this place. They were pleased when they learned I had come again to tell them about Christ and the gospel. Preparations were made to preach in the schoolhouse the following evening. Since then I have preached twelve times to crowded houses, and three have offered themselves for baptism. I gave them to understand that I was not here for any other reason only to preach the gospel and receive those who are willing to let go the world and live as near God as they possibly can, for if they are baptized and then continue on in their evil way, it would be better for them, and also for the cause, if they would remain where they are. I am glad to say that although I have been absent from this people for nearly a year, I find them just as strong and firm in the work as when I went away. I shall be very particular about receiving those who ask for baptism. We want those who will do right. I have learned in my experience that it is best to give candidates plenty of time to consider. I have noticed the man or woman who wishes to obey to-day, if they are really converted to Christ, and determined to serve God while life lasts, will still desire baptism until they are baptized, if it is for months afterwards; and will show repentance by living right. There are others who will ask for baptism, and if they are not waited upon at once, will, when a few trials come, change their mind and say, "I guess I won't obey it at all now." If they had been baptized they would not have lived worthy of the Spirit, and would have been a hindrance to the cause instead of an honor.

Dear saints, although we have all made mistakes in the past, let us strive to live right and please God in all things. We are told in the good book that it would have been better for us not to have known the way of righteousness than after we have known it to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto us. (See 2 Peter 2:21; also Book of Mormon, page 73.) "But woe unto him that has the law given; yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them wasteth the days of his probation; for awful is his state!" Then we cannot afford to be careless. This I say then, "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh."—Gal. 5:16. May God help us all to do right. I expect to move on north and attend our district conference in June.

Yours for truth,

DAVID SMITH.

BEALL, Ind., May 23.

Editors Herald.—I came here last week, began preaching in Bro. Rose's house; from there we went to the schoolhouse, could not at first occupy, as school was in operation; the teacher not being willing. When his time was up, and the key given to another, we were then permitted to occupy the school building. There is splendid interested manifested. If the work is kept up it will do good. We have so many calls for preaching; truly the harvest is great, but laborers are few.

Saints, let us go to with our might, and help to roll on this glorious work. May the local laborers come to our assistance; let all see how much they can do, and not how little. Let us take care of the local organizations, as far as we can, so that those who are sent as missionaries will be free from looking after local work. They then can push the work into new fields, where the standing minister can not go, and thus keep in harmony with the revelation of 1894. Let us all see how much we can do for the Master this year. Let us do something each day, so when the time comes for us to stand before the Judge of all men to receive our reward, that there may not be any days that are blank, but something be recorded there each day that we have done, that we may receive our reward. There is a great work for the members to do. They can untie the Elders' hands by giving aid in paying their portion that the law requires of them, to keep the ministers in the field. There are hundreds of ministers who ought to be in the field to roll on this work, but who have to stay at home on account of there not being means enough paid in to supply their families, so they can go. Who is to blame? God has done his part; he has blessed you with all you have; given you health and strength, and blessed you in barns, houses, and lands, money, and the things of this life; yes, and the gospel of your salvation. So you see it is our fault and not God's. Let us at once do our duty; let us have this work in view first. Bishop Kelley said in conference that he would rather suffer to go down financially, and suffer loss that way, than for the church to suffer. Let us all look at the work that way, and then it will be an easy matter for us to give; and then those whom God has called and qualified will take the field, and many a soul now hungering and thirsting after righteousness will be filled.

Let us not forget the traveling ministers. Let us be as courteous as the world is; they pay one half of our car fare; cannot you then pay the other half? We think so. The elder cannot stop preaching to go to work to make the money. If he does, his ministerial labor stops, and then the work suffers loss, and the progress of the work is hindered. When we are on our knees asking God to prepare the way before the elders, to open up the way before them, that the kingdom might be built up, let us think, "What have I done that my prayers may be answered?"

I am greatly encouraged to go on in this great latter-day work. My address is Byrnesville, Harrison County, Indiana. Anyone wanting my labors can address me there. I will come to your assistance; but don't forget the white metal,—the conductor wants it for tickets.

G. JENKINS.

LUCAS, Iowa, May 31.

Editors Herald.—On my return to my field of labor in Warren and Polk counties I found the saints active and feeling greatly encouraged since receiving the reports from General Conference. I have done but little public preaching during the week. Owing to the backward spring the farmers are obliged to work hard early and late, and could not attend the meetings; but I kept on visiting and talking with them at their homes, which I believe will result in making many friends for the church.

On my return to Summerset, where I had left a good interest, I found that a Holiness preacher from Des Moines had been there and abused us and badly represented Mormonism on the blackboard as a den of serpents. I do not think it will result in doing us much harm. One lady that had given her name for baptism became sinlessly saved and said she did not need baptism for the remission of sins, as she did not have any sins; and God had baptized her with the Holy Ghost without her obeying the ordinances, and I could not ask the Lord to do more for her than that; so after showing them how unscriptural such a profession was, I left them, in hopes they would soon discover their folly.

I then went to Runnells and held two services, and had the pleasure of leading Sister Taylor into the Des Moines River and burying her with Christ in baptism. I then returned to Milo and Liberty Center, and on my arrival at Liberty Center I found a letter from Bro. E. B. Morgan calling me home that my wife was very sick. I hurried home and found my wife very bad. But my work did not suffer, as Bro. Morgan kindly went and filled my appointments. On the 30th I went to Liberty Center and held two services and baptized a noble young lady, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Poriden Cole, and at the close of the services another gave his name for baptism. Bro. Morgan and myself will hold services at Runnells next Saturday and Sunday, June 5 and 6, and from there will drive to Richland Creek to attend conference.

Yours in bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

Original Articles.

GOD IS CONSISTENT.

EDITORS HERALD:—Your issue of April 21, contains an "original article" entitled, Gifts and Callings, the writer using the following text:—

The gifts and calling of God are without repentance.—Rom. 11:29.

From which, I believe, many readers will gather a wrong idea concerning God and his dealings with the human family. The text is one over which predestinarians have stumbled for centuries, and it has been left for inspiration to solve the mystery and properly interpret this profound utterance of the Gentile apostle. The writer in commenting on the text says:—

The above is an axiom with God, as Paul here lets us understand, hence Israel may be saved irrespective of repentance without any injustice to the Gentile world.

This language, unqualified as it is, would convey the thought that salvation, both as to time and eternity, would come to the descendants of Abraham without any effort on their part. So far as Israel's salvation in a gospel sense is concerned, God will deal with them as he does with the Gentiles; for, Peter says:—

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—Acts 10:34. (See also 2 Chron. 19:7; Romans 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25.)

While God will fulfill his promises concerning Israel as a nation; and, when having suffered sufficiently for their sins, they shall be liberated from bondage and oppression, and restored to their rightful possessions; yet in order to possess eternal life they will have to pass muster in a rigid examination along gospel lines; for Christ said to the wardens of his kingdom:—

Go ye unto all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16:15, 16.

Paul says:—

Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved.—Rom. 9:27.

Not all, but a remnant shall be saved. Again:—

For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.—Rom. 10:12, 13.

There being no difference between Jew and Greek, gospel obedience is as imperative upon Jew as Gentile. In speaking to Israel, God, through Isaiah, shows how they are to be saved:—

Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth.—Isaiah 45:22.

Salvation comes from looking, and this implies seeing and doing. I now turn and quote the context to that used by the brother:—

Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God; on them which fell, severity; but towards thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off. And they, also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in.—Rom. 10:22, 23.

Their grafting depends entirely upon their belief and obedience. God, speaking to Joseph Smith, David Whitmer, and Oliver Cowdery, in June, 1829, said:—

Behold the world is ripening in iniquity, and it must needs be, that the children of men are stirred up unto repentance, both the Gentiles, and also the house of Israel.—Sec. 16:2.

In speaking to James Covill, he says:—

Thou shalt preach the fullness of my gospel which I have sent forth in these last days; the covenant which I have sent, forth to recover my people, which are of the house of Israel.—Sec. 39:3.

Thus Israel is to be redeemed by the Gospel covenant. It would be a violation of the previously quoted passages for God to save Israel, irrespective of repentance, and consequently would be an injustice to the Gentile world. As righteousness is an absolute pre-requisite of salvation, Paul tells where Jew and Gentile can attain thereunto:—

For, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith.—Rom. 1:16, 17.

So the gifts and callings of God are without repentance; but salvation never! Christ came to save his people from their sins, and this would be impossible unless they knew the consequences of sin and the laws of re-trenchment, and from choice would "cease to do evil and learn to do well." Agency and salvation are inseparable, as the poet has said:—

Know then that every soul is free,
To choose his life and what he'll be;
For this eternal truth is given,

That God will force no man to heaven.

Again our brother says:—

Officers in our church are ordained according to the gifts within them.

This may, or may not be true, according to the application made by the reader. The passage upon this point reads thus:—

Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him.—D. C. 17:12.

And speaking to the Twelve, God says:—

And behold, you are they who are ordained of me to ordain priests and teachers to declare my gospel, according to the power of the Holy Ghost which is in you, and according to the callings and gifts of God unto men.—Ibid 16:5.

The call of God is paramount, and that call will come in harmony with the capacity of individuals to respond. A mistake is made by some in believing that foreordination and election has to do with man's eternal destiny; and that Paul taught that some were foreordained, or elected to be eternally saved or damned, according to the prejudices of the Almighty.

God has called, foreordained, and elected men to work, to labor, to fill certain stations in this world, and as they fill these positions they will be acquitted or condemned. All things are known to God from the beginning. He knows men's capabilities ere they are born, and as "where much is given, much is required," and vice versa; men are placed in certain positions in life, to do as they are qualified therefor. God knew Jeremiah before he was born, and foreordained him to be a prophet; but that did not determine as to his salvation. Salvation is the result of action, not election or foreordination.

Officers are ordained in the church in harmony with the revealments of God's Holy Spirit, which discloses to the church those whom God desires, or may have previously ordained to do a work for him.

The writer continues:—

We often see persons exercising gifts of tongues, prophecy, or healing, whom we have good reasons to believe are not so moral, or penitent, as others who seem to have little spirituality. All this is because those gifts are inherited, the same as the gifts of music, and come from God, the author of all good, although it does not necessarily follow that God is going to prompt their use on every or any occasion.

This position is erroneous and misleading. Not one of the spiritual gifts which God placed in the church, or of the signs which Christ said should follow the believer, are inherited. If men inherit and possess them naturally, without having faith in God, then why should Christ say, "And these signs shall follow them that believe?" Where the evidence of Divinity? Where the distinction if they follow others? If inherited, where would the efficacy of faith come in in securing what one already possessed. In enumerating the spiritual gifts, Paul says, "For to one is given by the Spirit,"—not by birth; and, "God hath set some in the church," etc. Paul says, "Covet earnestly the best gifts." Why covet a thing if we already have possessed the same from birth; and if not, then we cannot get it, because these gifts are inherited? The Lord in these latter days said:—

I will show miracles, signs, and wonders, unto all those who believe on his name [none others]. And whoso shall ask in my name, in faith, they shall cast out devils; they shall heal the sick; they shall cause the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak, and the lame to walk; and the time speedily cometh that great things are to be shown forth unto the children of men; but without faith shall not anything be shown forth except desolation upon Babylon, the same which has made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And there are none that doeth good except those who are ready to receive the fullness of my gospel, which I have sent forth unto this generation.—D. C. 34: 3.

This forever settles the question. The gifts and blessings came alone through faith, and not by natural birthright. They can only be enjoyed by those who are willing "to receive the fulness of the gospel."

Again:—

Wherefore, beware, lest ye are deceived, and that ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefited, that seeketh or that asketh of me, that asketh, and not for a sign that he may consume upon his lusts. And again, verily I say unto you, I would that ye should always remember, and always retain in your minds what those gifts are, that are given unto the church, for all have not every gift given unto them; for there are many gifts, and to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God; to some it is given one, and to some is given another, that all may be profited thereby; to some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he was crucified for the sins of the world; to others it is given to believe on their words, that they also might have eternal life, if they continue faithful. And again, to some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know the differences of administration, as it will be pleasing unto the same Lord, according as the Lord will, suiting his mercies according to the conditions of the children of men.—D. C. 46: 5, 6.

We here note that these gifts are given unto the church, not to men at birth; and men enjoy them because of church membership "to profit withal;" or "that all may be profited thereby;" that said gifts are given by the Holy Ghost, not "born in" men. Again:—

"Verily, I say unto you, there are those among you who seek signs, and there have been such ever from the beginning; but behold, faith cometh not by signs, but signs follow those that believe. Yea, signs cometh by faith, not by the will of men, nor as they please, but by the will of God. Yea, signs cometh by faith, unto mighty works, for without faith no man pleaseth God; and with whom God is angry he is not well pleased; wherefore, unto such he showeth no signs, only in wrath unto their condemnation.—D. C. 63: 3.

The brother continues:—

If a saint who is ill sends for an elder and is healed through administration, it of itself is no proof that God directly had anything to do with the healing.

The spiritual gifts cannot be exercised save through the influence of the Holy Ghost, and no man was ever healed according to God's plan by any man acting independent of God. If elders fulfill the law and administer to the sick, God will raise them up. Men have no more power to heal the sick than to forgive sins. The following statement is also wrong, and contrary to the teaching of Scripture ancient and modern:—

The gift of healing comes from God with life itself, and is born in all persons in varying degrees.

Francis Schlatter is referred to, and the statement made that "He is just exercising the power that God gave him with life;" but that he is not "healing through the warrant of the Holy Ghost."

Francis Schlatter was anti-Christ in teaching and practice, and if he possessed any spiritual or healing power, it was not from God. I am credibly informed that the man is now in a California insane asylum, as conservative men believed him to be insane at the time of his Denver episode. Shrader, the healer, is now in a dime museum in Allegheny, Pennsylvania.

The brother states:—

The gift of tongues in a person indicates a very fine sense of the hearing of spirit voice word for word, as does the gift of prophecy show the faculty of imbibing spirit ideas, oft-times word for word; yet here again are we struck with the varying degrees in which they are found, and how much slower they develop in some than others.

This violates the plain facts of scripture and the experience of ages.

On pentecost there was no developing, but "cloven tongues like as of fire" came from above and "sat upon each of them;" and they "were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the spirit gave them utterance."

As a rule those who possess the gift of tongues are not natural linguists. They are simple-hearted, yet earnest, men and women whom God condescends to bless. If Christ was inspired as we aver, then "Buddha and Mohammed" were not persons "remarkable for prophetic and inspirational powers," but were dominated by evil, and enshrouded both soul and mind in a cloud of night.

Jesus knew that the gifts of the gospel were not natural, but spiritual, and there was no "LIABILITY OF SOME OF THEM TO BE CULTIVATED BY THE WORLD," although he knew that devils and designing men would seek to counterfeit. We then conclude:—

1. To be saved all men must "repent and believe the gospel."

2. Foreordination and election, as used by Paul, applies to grants and privileges given in this world to labor, and not to fateful decree which makes God a respecter of persons.

3. The "gifts of tongues, prophecy, and healing" are not "inherited;" but are given of God to his obedient children as it best pleaseth him.

4. If saints are healed through the administration of God's servants it, of itself, is "proof that God directly had" something "to do with the healing."

5. If men have power beyond that of the ordinary natural man, they receive it either from God or the Devil, and as God is consistent with himself, no man can receive power from him unless he obeys his commandments.

6. The gift of tongues, or any other gift, in a person evidences God's love, and the manifestation of his power.

The above has not been written in a contentious spirit to provoke controversy, not to question the sincerity of the brother. He views certain things in one way, I in another. Each has presented his views—let the reader judge.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

DECEPTION REIGNS.—NO. I.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

FOR there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before.—Matt. 24: 24, 25.

This prophetic statement of our Lord is by himself classed with the utterances setting forth the strange and miraculous events to transpire just prior to and at his second and glorious coming, that unparalleled event that brings this world to a final end, and ushers in the wonderful "world to come."

The warning, "Take heed that no man deceive you," is characteristic of our heavenly Father in all past ages, as well as in the present—his watchcare over his children. He knows our danger, so gives us to understand, and bids us "take heed," for man is to be the visible agency of the dangers deceptive which beset the world. Unusual devices, wonderful and supernatural in character, are to be used with which to captivate and lead us astray. Religious guildings will enshroud those devices, and in the hands of "false Christs and prophets" perform wondrously, and carry the unprepared multitudes of mankind with them to darkness, and disappointment, and woe.

Shall we pass by unheeded the divine and prophetic warning without being benefited? Shall we sleep on, discerning not the deceptive dangers that beset us on every hand? The perils herein referred to that await us are such as relate to the soul's everlasting welfare,—religious perils,—not those merely that imperil this life only. Their consequences extend into the never ending ages yet to be. How important, then, to all the world is the investigation of this subject!

One of the greatest difficulties that stands in the world's way, touching the subject before us, is its indisposition to investigate. It takes too much for granted that ought to be analyzed, looked into, weighed, and tried, before it be accepted as true. Sham and empty display has been the order of the world largely. And the more transparent the show, the more gorgeous the glitter, the more readily the superficial-minded world has been content to follow on, bewildered by the royal deception.

IGNORANCE AND SUPERSTITION.

Ignorance and superstition on the part of man is the domain of deception's reign, the citadel of its throne, the palace of its kingdom, and the field of its undisputed reign and triumph,—of its most successful operations and its trophies. Mankind will not investigate religious matters, will not learn. They are content to accept what happens along, and besides, their disposition is to readily take to the marvelous in religious things without a thorough examination into its nature, and so they follow on in blindness to final ruin.

They know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in darkness: all the foundations of the earth are out of course.—Ps. 82: 5.

They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.—Job 24: 13.

The agents of deception work in darkness, and "Men loved darkness rather than light." Man loves,—is disposed,—to darkness. Darkness is ignorance of the truth; and herein is deception's power with and dominion over man. "They know not, neither will they understand." And strange as it may appear, the power of the great deceiver extends into the borders of the kingdom of light. Its influence may overtake even "the elect."

My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest unto me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children.—Hosea 4: 6.

Because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.—2 Thess. 2: 10, 11.

God will not protect those professing to be his own, who are negligently or willfully ignorant of the truth and are indisposed to lovingly observe its precepts. But are, as we see, left to grapple alone with the damning power of strong delusive influences. How plainly, then, is it to discern the dangerous condition the world is now in. Jesus foresaw this, and is it any wonder he gave the great warning? "Take heed that no man deceive you."

Deceptions began to be practiced early in the history of the race. By deception the beautiful garden of Eden was invaded and transgression of divine command effected. Says Paul:—

And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.—1 Timothy 2: 14.

And from that time all along the ages till now, sin has ever been the handmaid and twin ally of deception.

The agents of deception are cunning, and deception is subtle. It works where least expected, in modes least understood by man. The agent of man's deception is as liable to be oneself as any other.

Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.—1 Corinthians 3: 18.

The agency of deception referred to here by the apostle has been and is one of the most fruitful sources of deception that has ever cursed the religious world. It instigates all the arrogant religious assumptions that do and have occurred.

It is the disposition prompting man to propose to be instrumental in saving his fellows by means of human, worldly wisdom. It assumes to declare some of the principles of Christ's gospel nonessential, and substitutes itself instead thereof. It is to this that most of the church organizations existing in the world owe their being; and the theologies on which they stand are very largely composed of worldly wisdom, which with God, is foolishness.

Jesus never assumed to lay the doctrinal foundation of the church and then build thereon of worldly wisdom. He first received authority of his Father to do that work, and then received the doctrine from heaven (See John 7: 17, 18) by revelation direct to himself, and then, like Moses was told to do (Hebrew 8: 5), "see that thou make all things according to" the divine pattern; for it was after this pattern that Moses, a type of Christ, worked.

The outlines of Christ's Church pattern are seen in the New Testament model, and its organic structural outlines are given by Paul in 1 Corinthians 12: 13-29, and Ephesians 4: 11-13. Who then are these great and worldly wise who assume to build religious institutions without receiving authority from God, who manufacture theologies to govern, and then christen them; "The Church," "Church of Christ," or "of God"? Do they come by authority of God, or in their own name? Do they receive their authoritative honor from God? See John 5: 41-44; Hebrew 5: 4, 5. What is this that self-deception is leading the world to? Reader, pause right here and consider for a time, seriously. Never unite your eternal fortune with any church till you have diligently inquired into its doctrine, its organization, its origin, and whether builded by divine authority. Compare all these features faithfully with the Scriptures.

Be not deceived, God is not mocked.

For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an antichrist. Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.—2 John 7, 9.

Christ's doctrine is the infallible test of the truth and of men's claims to authority to act for God. The first principles of Christ's doctrine are severally named by Paul in Hebrews 6: 1, 2, and are seven in number. We need not be deceived either by ourselves or by false prophets.

Infallibility—under the name of "sanctification," is becoming to be a fruitful source of self-deception in our day, and the deceived ones are on the increase. Sanctification does not contain the idea of being without sin necessarily, or, that men do not or cannot sin, as is claimed by many at present.

"Sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3: 4.) And man will ever be liable to transgress so long as his knowledge is finite. He will not know just what is always right till he becomes infinite in knowledge; till then he is liable to do wrong—transgress; and anything short of this is not infallibility. Until we arrive at that stage we should not assume that we are absolutely without sin. We should not assume that we have no disposition to sin, for the disposition to sin may be with us till we come to know all the right law, and are disposed to observe it all.

Paul, having obeyed the gospel been set apart to the service of God, and called an apostle, after years of experience as a saint, a sanctified one and a minister of Jesus Christ, wrote to the Roman Saints thus:—

If then I do not that which I would not allow, I consent unto the law, that it is good; and I am not condemned. Now then, it is no more I that do sin; but I seek to subdue that sin which dwelleth in me.—Roman 7: 17, 18, I. T.

Likewise the Apostle John in his address to the church, to those who had already obeyed the gospel, says:—

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.—(1 John 1: 8.)

For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good and sinneth not.—Ecclesiastes 7: 20.

Sanctification primarily signifies to "be separated unto;" set apart to a special service, or purpose. Thus the priests under the law were sanctified to minister unto the Lord in the priest's office. (Exodus 28: 2, 41.)

Also,

Keep the Sabbath day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee.—Deuteronomy 5: 12.

Here the children of Israel are commanded to sanctify the Sabbath.

But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.—1 Peter 3: 15.

By this saints are to sanctify the Lord in their hearts, to set him apart as the only object of their worship or service.

Paul wrote:—

Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours.—1 Corinthians 1: 2.

Now while Paul addresses the Corinthian saints as having been "sanctified," or separated to the special service of God by the gospel, he does not address them as those who were not liable to sin. They had no doubt been cleansed or forgiven their past sins, at the time of their obedience to the truth, and at that time were justified from all previous sin; yet they were addressed as being in some respects "carnal" (see verse 3), as liable to self-deceptions (3: 18), "puffed up"—boastful (4: 19); not yet free from the "old leaven" (5: 7); and as being "proud" to an extent.

Though sanctified, they could not in truth declare that they had attained to such a high state of Christian perfection that they did not sin nor had not sinned for years, nor that were not liable to sin. To have done so would have been presumption, and presumption is itself a sin. See Deuteronomy 18: 22. It is self-exaltation, pharisaical (Luke 18: 10-14).

Sanctification implies likewise the process of cleansing—purification; but this is done not all at once, but is a conjoint work on the part of both man and the Lord, and is progressive. The gospel is the means used in doing the work:—

We are laborers together with God.—Corinthians 3: 9.

Man must do his part of the work:—

Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, plead for the widow.—Isiah 1: 16, 17.

Man cannot "learn to do well" all at once. From the childhood given us at our regeneration, and Christ is formed in us, the work of development to mankind in Christ is a gradual and progressive work. "The word of truth" being the foundation of our faith in God and Christ, we are begotten by that word. (James 1: 18; Matt. 13: 18-23.) Ceasing to do evil and learning to do well, follows; that is, we "bring forth fruit meet for repentance," and this is followed by the next step in the regenerative process, and we are "born of water, and of the Spirit;" in doing which we purify our souls and become newborn babes in Christ.

Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever.—1 Peter 1: 22, 23.

Peter here places the word of truth in the same relation to the regenerative work that James and the Savior do in the passages above-cited—the relation of the seed sown to the harvest to follow from it. As the seed has germinal life in itself, so the word of God is "spirit and life." (John 6: 63.) By the divine word, then, man is "quickened," "begotten," induced to believe and obey. But who that understand nature would contend for a moment that the life in the seed sown is all the life force that is necessary to the development of the harvest expected? Such an idea has no analogy anywhere in the universe, so far as understood. A seasonable life from the earth, air, day, night, sun, dew, and rain are essential. The life-forces communicated through all these agencies are essential to the development of the harvest. Nor are they all brought to bear at once, but as development, growth, progress demand, first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. "As newborn babes," says Peter, "desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby."—1 Peter 2:2.

But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior: that being justified by his grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life. This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.—Titus 3:4-8.

Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, we speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.—John 3:3-5, 11.

Pause right here, you religious ones who find so many nonessentials in the gospel, and weigh carefully the last verse quoted; especially you who deny the necessity of being "born of water." Are you not able to see that the words, "Ye receive not our witness," mean you? Why is it the skeptic does not receive and obey the words, "Repent ye, and believe the gospel"? You reply, "Because he does not receive the testimony—"witness"—of Christ. Just so. Why, then, do you reject baptism in water? Where is the difference between you and the skeptic?

Regeneration and sanctification, then, are progressive processes, to be gradually attained to. After having been ingrafted into Christ, we partake of the divine nature, the old impure nature as gradually dies out of us, as like Paul, we subdue our sinfulness. And in this work we have the aid of the Holy Spirit which "helpeth our infirmities." And while thus adding the graces required, we "learn" of Christ, to be obedient children of God, learn the Christian way, and "learn to walk in the high way of "holiness." And by doing—keeping—the "holy commandments", attain unto a holy life, a holy condition. And thus, likewise, "go on unto perfection." We must learn how and then put into practice the requirements of the holy law, if we would be pure and holy. So Jesus teaches:—

It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.—John 6:45.

From this statement of Jesus we are led to the conclusion that those who refuse to "come" to Christ in the way pointed out, just like the believers did on the day of Pentecost,—by repentance and baptism "for the remission of sins," have neither "heard" nor "learned" of the Father. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest to your souls.—Matthew 11:29.

Man cannot do what he does not know; he cannot learn all of his duties toward God in an instant. He can do as he learns. As he fulfills the holy law of truth in his life's work, by the truth he becomes sanctified and holy, because doing this he enjoys the sanctifying influence and guidance of the Holy Ghost.

Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth.—John 17:17.

But ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.—1 Corinthians 6:11.

For the reasons here assigned, and because the revelations of God nowhere reveal that sanctification is a special gift of God to man, given by the Holy Ghost instantly, and thereby placing him where he does no sin, nor is not under the liability to sin while yet in the mortal body, and thereby rendering him infallible; we reject this dogma as a dangerous deception and calculated to blind men to their true condition before God. It is a professed condition to which even the angels of God have not attained. They still have to guard against rebellion and sin. Lucifer was once an angel of light, but he ventured too far. Of him God says:—

Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee.—Ezekiel 28:15. See Isaiah 14:12; John 8:44.

"He abode not in the truth;" he deceived himself. "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." "Be not deceived."

TO DISTRICT AND BRANCH CLERKS.

The branch reports from a few districts are still lacking, and I hope that all who have reports in their hands will forward them soon, that the work may not be hindered. Also forward the May and June reports as soon as you can after said conferences. Much correspondence remains unanswered by branch and district clerks, my inquiries for corrections in dates, places, and items omitted in previous reports or letters.
I will be glad to receive replies, so that the General Church Record may be properly and promptly corrected as necessity requires.

Kindly attend to these matters and oblige the church and your brother.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear Brethren; Greeting:—The many changes in quorum membership during the past year seem to demand a renewal of our circular letter. We are glad to say that the work of the quorum during the past year has been very encouraging. We have cause to be thankful that the work is moving onward with increasing power, and we should earnestly strive to keep pace with its progress. In order to discharge our duties as servants of God, it is highly necessary that our work be inspired by a spirit of great humility and a careful observance of every injunction given by the divine Master under whose direction we are. Let us be energetic and diligent.
Those of the local force, as well as those under conference appointment, should feel the burden of their calling resting upon them, and lose no opportunity of getting the truth before the people. In order that we may keep a systematic account of work done during the year, it is specially requested that every member report annually. Blanks for this purpose will be sent to each member in time for reports to be received by March 15. A careful observance of this request will produce excellent results. The work before us is great. If you cannot occupy your entire time in the work, it is desirable that you preach Sundays, or whenever or wherever opportunity presents.

Brethren, let us labor together in the spirit of love and humility for the good of the Master's cause, upholding each other and all of God's servants in our prayers; and God will abundantly bless our labors and give us joy when our work is finished.

Let us rejoice that God has given us such injunctions as this: "Behold the field is white already to harvest, and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perish not, but bringeth salvation to his soul; and faith, hope, charity, and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualifies him for the work. Remember, faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence."—D. and C. sec. 3.

A copy of this letter together with names and addresses of members will be mailed to each member in due time.

Trusting that the blessing of God may be with you during the present year and all time, we remain,

Your brethren in Christ,
FRANK CRILEY, President.
T. J. BELL,
J. A. GUNSOLLEY, } Counselors.
D. W. WIGHT, Secretary.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of Chatham district will be held in Buxton, June 12 and 13. Date was omitted in previous notice.

J. A. HACKETT, Sec.

Conference of Southern Indiana district will convene with New Marion branch, Ripley County, September 4, at 10:30 a. m. We hope to have a report from all the branches.
A grand time is expected. Brn. E. C. Briggs,
S. W. L. Scott, G. Jenkins, and others of the ministry are cordially invited and expected to be present.

WILLIAM C. MARSHALL,
Dist. Pres.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Northwest Kansas:—Elder W. S. Pender, missionary in charge, has assigned the above district as my field of labor for the conference year. Should any saint or friend wish preaching in their neighborhood, and who in their judgment think good could be done, I shall be pleased to correspond with them regarding the matter. I trust that our district may not come behind in the accomplishment of good by reason of the limited number of church appointees this year. Saints and local ministry should labor harder, and strive to make up the deficiency. We should not forget the law governing finance, placing in the hands of the Bishop the necessary means to carry on the work successfully through the district. I would be pleased to receive Heralds, Ensigns, and tracts for distribution. My mission address will be Minneapolis, Ottawa County, Kansas, care of B. F. Lee. May the Spirit of the Master prompt each to move forward for the accomplishment of great good, to the honor and glory of our God, is my prayer.

L. F. JOHNSON.

To the Saints of Kentucky and Tennessee;
Greeting:—You are doubtless aware that I have been placed in charge of this mission.

Since getting on the ground and hastily looking over its necessities, I have felt to ask the following brethren under appointment to take immediate charge, as follows: C. L.
Snow, the western half of Kentucky; J. M.
Scott, the eastern half of Kentucky, except that portion presided over by Gomer T. Griffiths. J. F. Henson, the eastern half of Tennessee; and M. L. Sory, the western half of Tennessee; calling such local help and assistance as in their judgment may be wise.

I shall try to be with each of you a part of my time during the year. The only thing I urge is to remember that we must force the battle; it will not come to us. This I ask at your hands, and should you get into serious trouble, notify me; I will come at once to the rescue and help you out.

I ask all the saints who have or know of favorable localities for preaching in the mission to correspond with me. Praying that the harvest will not find us barren of sheaves for the garner, I am,

Your brother and servant in bonds,
T. W. CHATBURN.

P. S.—My address will be for the present,
Sedalia, Kentucky.

To the Members of the St. Louis district:—
Having been commissioned with the oversight or charge of this district during the conference year, will say to all properly interested in the advancement and promulgation of the latter-day message, that we desire to cooperate in every practical way and by every legitimate means, with everybody, lay-member, or those who have submitted to an ordination that calls for special ministerial action and deportment; that we are ready for any or every plan or work that has for its object the perfection of saints or the warning of the world.

Local organization or branches having a name as such should, in our judgment, seek first to establish the work of something like discipline and respect for law and order as defined in the law, which reason tells us should be as binding upon us, as are the first gospel principles in reason binding upon the world, to whom we are, as qualified and legally commissioned ministers sent.

Inattention and indifference in regard to the obligation imposed by the commandments of God upon us, either as laymembers or ministers in regard to the good that may or is designed to come from attention to and the safety and growth of branches, by attendance at business meetings, and also the business service of our district conferences is to be regretted, and if possible amended.

Saints everywhere are urged to remember that the work of reaching those who are out in the world and still waiting to hear the voice of the "Good Shepherd" is still largely committed to their trust, care, and energies.
Openings for both local and the general church missionary may be greatly aided by those of the earnest workers in the ranks of the laymembers, and their reward is as certain as is that of any under any appointment in this the Church of Christ. All are commissioned to "warn their neighbor" by the distribution of tracts, church papers, personal interview wisely and faithfully sought and conducted and the procuring of opportunities for preaching the word by the local or general ministry. Brethren Anderson and Walters, appointed by General Conference to labor in this field, together with myself, with the local ministry, are the dependencies for new openings or the filling of regular appointments as well as the general supervision of the work or special service where the legal demand makes it a duty. I wish also to call especial attention to the fact that anything like a full reward or satisfaction can never, by the terms of God's law, be administered to us at the last day if the law of tithing or offering of our temporal means is ignored by us. The gospel that has brought so much of good into our lives though free to us then, cost somebody a denial or sacrifice to bring it to our doors. One tenth part of our increase—not income—is by his own declaration the Lord's. "Will a man [or saint] rob God?" and in offerings? "The liberal soul deviseth liberal things." Make yourself happy and secure by opening an account with the Lord through the district agent, Bro. Gordon Smith.

For correspondence, regarding labor and the interests of the work, my permanent address is, No. 2512 Slattery Street, St. Louis, Missouri. Yours in the work of God,

M. H. BOND.

ORCHARDSVILLE, Illinois, June 5.

REUNION NOTICES.

Southern California Reunion will assemble at Downey, Los Angeles County, Friday, July 2. The opening service to begin at ten a. m. The camp ground is close to, and just back of the S. P. R. R. depot. We have been credibly informed that two of the General Conference appointees to Northern California, are now in Los Angeles under instruction from Bro. Luff to remain thereabouts until after the reunion. We also hope and have reasons to expect the presence of Brn. Luff and Hilliard. Bro. D. L. Harris will also be present to bear his part in the preaching services, as well as other local elders.

The committee will supply good water on the grounds for drinking and cooking; also feed for animals at the lowest prices possible. Come saints and friends, old and young; and as the hallowed influences of the Holy Spirit overshadowed God's people at the last General Conference, let us hope and pray that, like the waves caused by the pebble which dropped in the water, we too, may feel its same gentle influence.

By order of the committee.

R. R. DANA.

JEPHTHA SCOTT.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Massachusetts reunion will be held at Dennisport, beginning August 14 and ending August 23. Those who intend to occupy tents are requested to send their orders to Mrs. C. D. Gerrish, 129 Center St. Dorchester, Mass., on or before July 1. Prices for the use of tents are expected to be the same as last year. No tents will be provided after July 1. There will be no restaurant this year. Arrangements will be made for providing food on the grounds and a possible commissary is in view by the committee. Those who prefer to occupy such vacant houses as may be at the disposal of the committee are also requested to notify them as soon as the first day of July. Railroad fares are as follows: To North Harwich and return, from Attleboro, $2.75; Providence, $3.25; Fall River, $2.75; Fairhaven $2.10; Brockton $2.50; Boston $2.90; tickets good for the summer season. Let all come bringing temples fit for the indwelling of the Spirit and a good time is assured before we meet. The committee will try to do all that is needed for your physical welfare and will trust you to do all that you can for their financial success as a committee.

The "Cape" is a lovely portion of God's garden, and has features that will compensate for the effort to go there, aside from the natural beauties beheld by the early riser as he greets the ascending "orb of day," over the ocean's vast expanse.

JAMES.—At Flagler, Iowa, December 26, 1896, to Bro. D. C. and Mrs. L. J. James, a son, and named Earl Clifford. Blessed at Okaloosa, June 2, by Elder J. S. Roth.

MARRIED.

ROBERTS—SMITH.—On May 4, 1897, were joined together in holy matrimony Sr. F. Smith, of Oronogo, Missouri, to Mr. John Roberts, of Opolis, Kansas. The marriage took place in Webb City, Missouri, at the home of Sr. Maude Van Hoose, the bride's daughter. Elder W. C. Cather performed the ceremony.

MONTGOMERY—EUBANKS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, May 26, 1897, Mr. George Montgomery, of Wagner, Indian Territory, to Miss Lizzie Eubanks, of Lamoni. Mr. Montgomery is a well-known "cattleman" of the Territory and made use of good judgment in coming to Lamoni for a wife. Miss Eubanks is an adopted daughter of Mrs. M. A. Wickes and a worthy young lady. Ceremony performed by Elder E. L. Kelley before a goodly number of their friends.

NICOLL—JOHNSTON.—At the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Brooks, 2411 Angelique Street, St. Joseph, Missouri, May 18, 1897, Bro. Jno. E. Nicoll and Sr. Ida M. Johnston, Elder W. S. Pender officiating. The bride has a host of friends in St. Joseph, who anticipated the interesting event; but the marriage, as planned and consummated, was a surprise to most of them. The bridegroom has lived in St. Joseph but a short time, being formerly a resident of Topeka, Kansas. The young people will make their home at 2411 Angelique Street, St. Joseph, Missouri.

WILLMAN—JOHNSON.—At Canton, Iowa, May 20, 1897, at eight p. m., Edwin Willman and Sr. Hattie Johnson were united in marriage, Elder J. S. Roth officiating. A large number of guests were present to enjoy the happy occasion.

DIED.

SMITH.—At his home, Vinton, Iowa, on Tuesday, March 13, 1897, Mr. Heman Smith (uncle of Elder Heman C. Smith), at the advanced age of seventy-seven years. When a young man he heard the gospel as preached by the Latter Day Saints, and was quite favorably impressed, but some evil reports concerning them turned him from further investigation. So far as we know he never made any profession of religion, but he was one of the honorable men of the earth, respected and loved by hundreds who knew him well. He leaves an aged companion patiently awaiting the summons that will call her hence; also a daughter, with her husband and family, who feel deeply the loss of his fatherly counsel.

FRICK.—Orion Lewis, son of Martin S. and Eliza Frick, at the home of his father, in Blendsville, Missouri. He was born October 17, 1875; baptized March 28, 1897, at Joplin, Missouri, by Elder James A. Graves. Funeral sermon in saints' church, by Elder W. S. Macrae. Though in the bloom of young manhood he was willing to go. Was confined to his room only about one week.

WEIR.—Bro. James Weir was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, November 20, 1851; died May 5, 1897, aged 45 years, 5 months, and 15 days. For a long time he was not able to leave the house. He was justice of the peace at Milford, Iowa, when he was called home. Funeral services by S. McBernie and H. Pratt, at the house.

MCGREGOR.—In Kern City, California, November 8, 1896, Sr. Olive McGregor, daughter of Bro. W. W. Hutchings of Beaver, Utah. She leaves a husband, and a son six years old. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church, March 22, 1885, by Bro. R. J. Anthony. Her age was 31 years, 10 months, and 26 days.

THE THREE BOOKS
AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priest-hoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the original church, the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the original church.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

HAS THE CALL FOR RETREAT OF THE "HIGHER CRITICS" SOUNDED?

ACCORDING to the view taken by Rev. Dr. A. J. F. Behrends, a call for retreat of the "higher critics" all along the line has come from Berlin, from a no less influential scholar than Professor Harnack. This call, Dr. Behrends finds in Harnack's first volume on "Chronology of Old Christian Literature," just issued from the Leipsic press. "Nothing more noteworthy," says Dr. Behrends, "has appeared in a hundred years." After a few introductory sentences in regard to Harnack himself, as "the bright particular star of the University of Berlin," "the idol of Germany," one who "in minuteness and breadth of historical learning" "has no living equal," Dr. Behrends proceeds to describe the new book as follows (Christian Work, April 17):—

"Not the least remarkable part of the book is the preface. In it, Harnack sketches the present state of New Testament criticism, and announces the general conclusions to which his studies have led him. He declares that the attempt to sketch the origin and development of Christianity, by assuming that the New Testament books were a 'tissue of deceptions and frauds,' and late in appearance, has utterly broken down. The school of Baur is dead. Tradition has been vindicated as true and trustworthy. Interest in literary criticism is waning and historical studies are displacing it; 'the problems of the future lie in the domain of history, and not of literary criticism,' simply because tradition is right in its estimate of the literature. The significance of this verdict appears, when it is remembered that the assumptions of the Wellhausen school, in the treatment of the Old Testament, are identical with the assumptions of Baur, which Harnack emphatically discredits and repudiates. Significant is the confession of a Dutch theologian, to whom Harnack refers without naming him, that he had been 'compelled to believe in the supernatural origin' of Christianity. Harnack will not stand alone. He will carry the younger scholars with him. And the Old Testament critics will have to follow. That has been the order for two hundred years. In five years, the retreat now begun may become a stampede.

'In the body of the work, the most remarkable thing is the discussion of the chronology of the life of Paul. It has come to be generally accepted that six years intervened between the death of Christ and the Martyrdom of Stephen; and Paul's conversion has been located in the year 36. Holtzmann and Blass had placed it four or five years earlier. Harnack sifts the evidence bearing upon the date when Festus became governor of Cesarea—the crucial chronological point—and decides emphatically, with Eusebius and Tacitus, that this took place in 55 or 56. Paul had, at that time, been a prisoner for two years; so that his arrest in Jerusalem falls in 53 or 54. Combining, now, the data furnished in Acts, and in Galatians, it appears that twenty-four years must be allowed between Paul's conversion and his arrest in 53 or 54. This locates his conversion in the year 29 or 30; the year of the crucifixion. And, as a result, every one of the Pauline epistles is crowded back from four to six years; Thessalonians to 48; Galatians and Corinthians to 52; Romans to 53; Colossians, Ephesians, Philemon, and Philippians to 56-58; the Pastoral epistles to 59-64, in which last year the apostles suffered martyrdom.

"The most startling fact, in this criticism, is the date of Paul's conversion. It had been assumed that the events recorded in the first nine chapters of Acts covered a period of six years. According to Harnack, the time must be measured by six or nine months! The death of Christ, and Paul's conversion, are separated by less than a year! What a picture this gives us of the ferment of that time! No wonder the Dutch theologian was compelled to believe in a 'supernatural origin' of Christianity! Harnack propounds no theory. He makes no note or comment. But he plants himself squarely upon these early dates; which, so far as I know, he has been the first to suggest. And we are surely getting very near Christ, when the man who wrote Galatians and Romans was converted in the year when Jesus was crucified! For one, I am waiting to hear what European scholarship will have to say in reply. Harnack has done a bold thing; but as I have read his pages, I have not been able to see where he is vulnerable; and the man who challenges his verdict on a matter of history had better do a good deal of thinking before he writes!

"This book has stirred me to the depths. It seems to me that it marks the beginning of the end."—Literary Digest, April 17, 1897.

PROFESSOR HARNACK'S "CALL FOR RETREAT."

WE published April 17 an article from the pen of Rev. Dr. A. J. F. Behrends on Professor Harnack's latest book ("Chronology of Old Christian Literature"), which Dr. Behrends interpreted as a call for retreat of the "higher critics" all along the line, and of which he said, "nothing more noteworthy has appeared in a hundred years." That the conservatives will follow this lead and make the most of the admissions in the book appears certain from the nature of the utterances already appearing in the church papers, and was to be expected from the importance of Professor Harnack's place in the theological discussion.

He has been generally regarded as the leader of the so-called rationalistic school of German theologians and biblical critics. He is usually conceded to be one of the most daring, powerful, and brilliant Christian scholars and investigators of the day. He makes no claims to orthodoxy; he is, in fact, often regarded as the champion of unorthodoxy. In his own country he is known most widely for an assault delivered on the Apostles' Creed. On scholars he has conferred an immense benefit by his "History of Early Christian Literature," and by the promise of a complete series of well-edited "Early Christian Texts." Each new work from his hand is received with intense interest by thinking men throughout the religious world. The Expository Times (London) declares Professor Harnack's latest volume to be "the most significant event in the study of the New Testament which the present generation has known."

The same note of satisfaction that was sounded by Dr. Behrends is heard in The Living Church (Protestant Episcopal, Chicago). It says:—

"Professor Harnack and his school now admit that the books of the New Testament are the genuine productions of the Apostolic Church and, generally speaking, of the men to whom they are attributed, and that their writers intended to speak the truth and thought they were speaking the truth; yet they reject the most momentous facts they record as unworthy of belief. We are asked to assume that, within thirty or forty years, while many of the most eminent persons, familiar as eyewitnesses, or as intimate associates of eyewitnesses, with all the facts, were still living and actively engaged, as they had been all along, in teaching the things which had been accomplished among them, the facts had become so intertwined with legend that an entirely new and false color had been imparted to everything; that a false history had been constructed; and that this was accepted on all hands, even by the apostles and founders themselves, as undoubtedly true. It is as if we were asked to believe that an account of the life of Lincoln, somewhat more than thirty years after his death, which was quite untrue, not simply in minor details, but in its main incidents and great turning points, could be accepted by all his surviving friends; or, as if the reminiscences which General Horace Porter is now publishing of the campaign of Grant in Virginia, which culminated in the capture of Richmond, were only a collection of legends with a small residuum of truth. Men may, in their unwillingness to accept a supernatural religion, befog themselves with a self-contradictory philosophy; but plain men of ordinary sagacity will inevitably conclude either that the records being false, the writers knew that they were false, or else that the records are true because it is incredible that such men could have written them if they were not, or could have foisted them upon a community of people who for thirty or forty years had been taught something quite different."

The Watchman (Baptist, Boston) dwells at length on the great triumph to orthodox Christianity of Professor Harnack's conclusions concerning the dates of the New Testament writings. It says:—

"Persons of little scholarly training can see at a glance that, if the books were not written by the men to whom they are attributed, and were not composed until a full century after the events which they record and interpret, they have a very different authority than that which attaches to the testimony of men who were contemporaries of the persons and events of which they write.

"More than this, a successful vindication of the traditional dates of the New Testament books cuts the very ground from beneath the tendency theory of Baur, or the mythical theory of Strauss. It is necessary for a tendency to have opportunity to crystallize, and for a myth to have time to grow. Thus it was necessary for the Tübingen critics to remove the New Testament writings as far as possible from the events to which they relate. Make it clear that the earliest of the Gospels did not take its present form until a full century after the ascension of Christ, and you have secured ample space for the operation of all kinds of vagaries and myth-makings. Thousands of Christian believers, who, like ourselves, do not believe that the New Testament could have been evolved from intellectual tendencies or myth-making propensities in five times a hundred years, nevertheless have felt that, if it could be proved that a gap of a century intervenes between the events and the writings, the New Testament lacks a first-hand authority which it is in vain to attempt to impart to it, tout de force, by a high theory of inspiration. We do not doubt that God could have inspired men to describe events that took place a century before they were born, but such a theory of inspiration we all feel would be prompted by a desire to secure the authority of the writings. From this point of view, it is a matter for intense satisfaction when we find that a scientific critic, like Harnack, whose competency is thoroughly admitted by the most revolutionary theorists, and who has no prejudices in favor of the traditional view, gives it as his deliberate conviction that the evidence does not allow us to separate the New Testament writings from the apostolic age."—Literary Digest, May 1, 1897.

THE USES OF FRUIT.

OF all the classes of Nature's edible productions, that of fruit is most pleasing to the senses. That fruit alone will not sustain life for a prolonged period is true, but that the organic salts and acids of fruit are necessary to the maintenance of perfect health is equally correct. Prof. A. R. Elliot, (Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, November) summarizes the uses of fruit as follows:—

1. To furnish variety to the diet.
2. To relieve thirst and introduce water into the system.
3. To furnish nutriment.
4. To supply organic salts essential to proper nutrition.
5. To stimulate the kidneys, increase the flow of urine and lower its acidity.
6. To act as laxatives.
7. To stimulate and improve appetite and digestion.
8. To act as antiscorbutics.

Concerning the mode of preparation, ripe fruits as a rule do not need to be cooked, and are much more palatable and equally nutritious in the uncooked state. The proper time to eat fruit is either at the beginning of the meal or between meals, when they aid digestion and exert the greater laxative effect. Taken at the completion of a meal, they dilute the gastric juice and tend to embarrass digestion. —Scientific American.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT LAMONI.

THE high school at Lamoni this year had a graduating class of ten, three boys and seven girls. The exercises which closed the school session and released these scholars from the charge of the public school authorities, were held in the church, in charge of Bro. D. F. Lambert, who has been connected with the Lamoni schools as a principal, and as superintendent, for several years past, serving in the latter capacity for the last two years. The house was filled; and seldom has a graduating class been met by so appreciative an audience.

An excellent program had been arranged, and artists in the way of song and music lent aid to the school exercises.

The bell was rung at eight o'clock, and at its stroke the class marched into the already crowded room. When all were gathered on the platform, Mr. I. W. Allender gave a piano solo of two parts, from Opera 14, No. 3, Paderewski, and the Bohemian Carnival, De Kontski; both of which were appreciated, Mr. Allender being a local performer of reputation. Bro. Lambert then asked the audience to stand and an invocation was offered by Elder S. V. Bailey, one of the Board of Education, which was feeling and appropriate.

The class program was an oration by each of the ten graduates, as follows: Alice May Atkinson; subject, "Our lives our records." James B. Barrett; subject, "Our watchword, Onward and Upward." Martha Madeline Jones; subject, "The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another." Ida May Bradfield; subject, "In small proportions we just beauties see, and in short measures life may perfect be." A. R. Judson; subject, "Knowledge advances civilization." Audentia Ellen Hansen; subject, "The home and the State." A. Pearl Marie Jones; subject, "Labor, wide as the earth, has its summit in heaven." Arthur H. Smith; subject, "What mean those stars and stripes?" Maude May Lambert; subject, "Is polite society polite?" Besse Cymbelline Allender; subject, "Nature's languages."

Interspersed among these orations there were vocal solos by Sr. Alta Gaylord and Sr. W. A. Blair; and musical treats played by Mrs. W. E. Myers, and Miss Nellie Davis, the last-named being the teacher of music at Graceland College.

Of this commencement we have this to write: From beginning to the end it was thoroughly enjoyable. It will be seen from the subjects treated of in the several orations that the aim was high; each graduate did well, so well that it is hard to make comparison to determine which was the better. The attitudes and manners of the orators were natural and easy, and clearly showed the forming mind and teaching of Sr. Ruth Cobb, teacher of elocution for Graceland College.

The class honors were due James B. Barrett. The song selections by Sisters Alta Gaylord and W. A. Blair were good, and were well received by the listeners. Sr. Blair is teacher of vocal music and voice culture in Graceland College, and while teaching is herself a student, believing that standards of excellence are only won by care and study.

Bro. D. F. Lambert gave the class address, which was very excellent, abounding in good sentiment and advice to the outgoing students; some portions of it being feeling reminders of the final breaking of the ties which had bound student to student and student and teacher during the school career. He also feelingly referred to the exercises as not only severing his relations with the class, but as closing in connection with the schools, to turn his attention to other pursuits.

There was a tone of sadness in it all which hushed every one into feeling silence at the close of it, which remained until the benediction was said.

The High School Diplomas were delivered to the class by Bro. John H. Hansen, whose daughter Audentia was one of the graduates. The good Doctor's manner was simple and unaffected, his words few, well chosen, and earnest, derived in each instance from the subject treated of by the graduate and kindly tempered by his knowledge of each one as he in succession handed them the paper certifying to their success as students.

Sr. Mamie Allen, a granddaughter of Bro. James Whitehead, and who has been principal of the East Side school for the past year occupied a seat on the platform, thus emphasizing her interest in her departing scholars by her presence. Her presence was the more affecting as she goes from the Lamoni schools to a place in the schools at Leon, the county seat of Decatur County; a place won by steady, careful study and faithful work in her profession as teacher.

We have noticed this commencement thus at large, because it will show to the readers of the HERALD, that Lamoni is abreast with the onward march of intellect and brain development and advancement in the educational forces of the country.

THE WICKED.

THE writer of the book of Job, supposed by some to be one of the oldest books in the Bible, writing in regard to the fate of the wicked, states:—

And do ye not know their tokens, that the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? They shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.—Job 21:29, 30.

The Psalmist wrote of the same class thus:—

... God is angry with the wicked every day.—Ps. 7:11.

The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.

The Savior speaking of the same event, as stated by Matthew, said:—

So shall it be at the end of the world; the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.—Matt. 13:49, 50.

The time when this is to occur is not so definitely set, as we understand it, that the period may be accurately determined, so far as the word indicates revelation on the subject.

That it is to be at the end of the world, and when the Son of Man shall come in his glory, is stated:—

When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats. . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.—Matt. 25:31, 32, 46.

But, the same august personage had before this, in answer to his disciples' inquiry about the "end of the world," stated this:—

Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.—Matt. 24:35, 36.

Isaiah declared this passing away of the earth prophetically. (See Isa. 51:6.)

Mark records the statement of Jesus regarding the day when the end should come, a little stronger than Matthew, for he wrote it thus:—

But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.—Mark 13:32.

Answering the disciples concerning the restoring the kingdom, Jesus practically affirmed what is stated by Matthew and Mark, as given above. He said:—

It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.—Acts 1:7.

That the Lord will destroy the wicked is stated by the Psalmist:—

The Lord preserveth all them that love him; but all the wicked will he destroy.—Psalms 145:20.

To this agrees 2 Thessalonians 2:8:—

And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming.

From the Book of Mormon, B. of M., chap. 4, par. 5, Lamoni edition, small type; we gather that the writer of that book understood that the wicked and unbelieving should suffer punishment; we quote:—

Yea, in that great day when ye shall be brought to stand before the Lamb of God, then will ye say that there is no God? Then will ye longer deny the Christ, or can ye behold the Lamb of God? Do ye suppose that ye shall dwell with him under a consciousness of your guilt? Do ye suppose that ye could be happy to dwell with that holy being, when your souls are racked with a consciousness of guilt that ye have ever abused his laws? Behold I say unto you, that ye would be more miserable to dwell with a holy and just God, under a consciousness of your filthiness before him, than ye would to dwell with the damned souls in hell. For behold, when ye shall be brought to see your nakedness before God, and also the glory of God, and the holiness of Jesus Christ, it will kindle a flame of unquenchable fire upon you. O then ye unbelieving, turn ye unto the Lord; cry mightily unto the Father in the name of Jesus, that perhaps ye may be found spotless, pure, fair and white, having been cleansed by the blood of the Lamb, at that great and last day.

And assuredly as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God hath spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which cannot pass away, that they who are righteous shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy, shall be filthy still; wherefore, they who are filthy, are the devil and his angels; and they shall go away into everlasting fire, prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever; and has no end.—2 Nephi, chap. 6, par. 6.

It is also declared that a judgment day has been appointed, the time of which has been set by the Almighty, to whom all must render an account, regarding which as to the time when, much inquiry has been started. The following may seem to help some to be contented to do what opportunity affords a chance to do, in order to escape the penalty to be inflicted for unbelief, or wicked disregard and disobedience of the laws by which men may have life; and thus avoid the necessity for knowing either the time, or the details of the destruction of the wicked:—

Behold, verily I say unto you, that these are the words of the Lord your God; wherefore, labor ye, labor ye in my vineyard for the last time—for the last time call upon the inhabitants of the earth, for in my own due time will I come upon the earth in judgment; and my people shall be redeemed and shall reign with me on earth; for the great Millennial, which I have spoken by the mouth of my servants, shall come; for Satan shall be bound; and when he is loosed again, he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth; and he that liveth in righteousness, shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye; and the earth shall pass away so as by fire; and the wicked shall go away into unquenchable fire; and their end no man knoweth on earth, nor ever shall know, until they come before me in judgment.—D. C. sec. 43, par. 7.

Again:—

Nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father, and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire. And behold this is not yet, but by and by.—Doc. and Cov. sec. 63, par. 9.

There is reason to believe that final and total separation of the wicked from God and Christ will take place at sometime in the period of God's dealing with men on the earth. Revelation points it out as follows:—

And again, verily, verily, I say unto you, that when the thousand years are ended, and men again begin to deny their God, then will I spare the earth but for a little season; and the end shall come, and the heaven and the earth shall be consumed, and pass away, and there shall be a new heaven and a new earth; for all old things shall pass away, and all things shall become new, even the heaven and the earth, and all the fullness thereof, both men and beasts, the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea; and not one hair, neither mote, shall be lost, for it is the workmanship of mine hand.

But, behold, verily I say unto you, before the earth shall pass away, Michael, mine arch-angel, shall sound his trump, and then shall all the dead awake, for their graves shall be opened, and they shall come forth; yea, even all; and the righteous shall be gathered on my right hand unto eternal life; and the wicked on my left hand will I be ashamed to own before the Father; wherefore I will say unto them, depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.—Doc. and Cov. sec. 28, pars. 6 and 7.

By the same authority of revelation we may learn that the wicked, or a residue of them, how large or how small not known, are to be sent into punishment at the judgment of the "great day," and that this day is set to "come at the end of the earth."

But behold, the residue of the wicked have I kept in chains of darkness until the judgment of the great day, which shall come at the end of the earth.—Doc. and Cov., sec. 38, par. 1.

This agrees with the statement of Jesus found in Matthew 25:41.

Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.

The voice of revelation again states that Satan and his works are to be destroyed:—

I having accomplished and finished the will of him whose I am, even the Father, concerning me; having done this that I might subdue all things unto myself; retaining all power, even to the destroying of Satan and his works at the end of the world, . . . which I shall pass upon the inhabitants thereof.—Doc. and Cov., sec. 18, par. 1.

We also quote a part of section 74, paragraph 4, of what is known as "The Vision":—

These are they who shall go away into the lake of fire and brimstone, with the Devil and his angels, and the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power; yea, verily, the only ones who shall not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, after the sufferings of his wrath.

From the texts quoted from the three books, Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, it will be seen that they agree as to the general fact that the wicked, those who are finally unreconciled to God and Christ, will be punished or destroyed. Paul was impressed with this thought when he wrote to the Thessalonians.

And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day.—2 Thess. 1:7-10.

It appears to us, however it may appear to others, that the final determination of the fate reserved for the wicked is not made until the sitting of the judgment after the first resurrection, the Millennial reign, and the little season are past. At the end of the Millennium the Devil is to be loosed, and is to go out and tempt the nations, during the little season, then cometh the end, when the cleansed and redeemed earth is to be made the final residence of the redeemed people of God; and Christ, now Prince of Life and peace shall then be declared "King of kings and Lord of lords," and to the rule and dominion of his kingdom there shall be no end.

The judgment of those who have not part in the first resurrection but sleep during the millennium cannot take place until the second or final resurrection of all occurs, then those who are contented to refuse allegiance to God and Christ are to answer to the judge of all the earth, and the final and great award of eternal life and glory to those who have endured and won their right to them; of eternal shame, contempt, darkness, destruction, the second death, to those who shall be found subject thereto, shall be decreed.

We believe this to be the coming of the Lord referred to when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired of all the earth in them that believe. It does not seem to us that the coming of Jesus in which it is declared that the wicked are to be destroyed is that coming at which the first resurrection and the ushering in of the millennium take place; and as there is a series of events written of in the Scriptures, which must occur previous to either event, we are of the opinion that several specific comings of the Lord are intended to be presented, the time and separate concurrent events to determine each coming.

If the wicked are to be destroyed at the opening of the millennium, then they must rise with those who are accounted worthy of that first resurrection, which has been commonly believed not to be the case.

We believe the three books to be in agreement on the subject, when what is written in them is correctly understood. We believe further, that to take any one isolated passage and build a theory on that, may involve one in difficulty to harmonize other passages constructively different; but when the whole is taken together it seems to us we can get at the meaning quite near enough; especially as our salvation does not depend on knowing when, exactly, the end of the wicked may come, and the details of what shall take place then, but does depend on being ready, let Christ come when he will.

It will be well for the brethren in charge of reunions, protracted meetings, conferences, etc., and committees for the same, not to advertise President Joseph Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and other public officers of the church, without first obtaining the consent of those who are to be advertised as "expected to be present," with day and date expressly stated and stipulated; as it is both annoying and distressing to those advertised who have not been properly consulted, and is vexing and disappointing to those who attend such meetings, reunions, and conferences expecting to see and meet the men advertised in the program.

The editor has already been advertised in two or three places this season without his proper knowledge and consent having been definitely obtained, and some annoyance and disappointment has occurred. Please avoid this for the future.

It will be well to notice further, that in no instance will President Joseph Smith dedicate, or assist in dedicating any house of worship, where claims are properly held against building, or lot, for unpaid amounts of money for grounds, material, or labor. By bearing this in mind brethren desiring his attendance and service in dedication will be saved useless correspondence and trouble.

CORRECTION.

In a letter from Bro. Charles Sheen, Highmore, South Dakota, found elsewhere in this number, will be found a statement correcting an error made by us in a late issue in an editorial headed, "Much ado about nothing;" which we cheerfully submit, not having any desire to misrepresent the memory of Bro. Isaac Sheen who long since entered into the joys of a good man's reward.

Our mistake seems to have been in the date of Bro. Sheen's uniting with the church, it being 1840 instead of 1844. We believe our other statements to have been substantially correct; as we think Bro. Sheen was not connected with any division of the church in 1852. And as we were closely associated with him in official work from 1863 to 1874, the year of his departure from this life, a great part of that time living on the same block, and occupying the same office room with him, frequently conversing with him on the topics involved in our article, we are persuaded that our understanding of the case does him no injustice, and is correct. He was not a resident of Nauvoo any length of time, and from the nature of his surroundings was not intimately acquainted with the prophet, and could not have known personally the things of which he wrote in the news item published in the Cincinnati Evening Post, referred to by us. The argument of our article "Much ado about nothing," however, was not based on the thought whether Bro. I. Sheen did or did not know the prophet intimately, but was made upon the merit of the statements made in the Post and subsequently inserted in HERALD. However, we accept the correction of Bro. Charles Sheen, and apologize for the error, inadvertently made by us.

HIGHMORE, South Dakota, May 20.

Editors Herald:—I see in Herald of April 28 an article under the head of "Much ado about nothing," an item I wish to call your attention to, in regard to Isaac Sheen. It is stated: "The statement is a contributed news item first published in the Cincinnati, Ohio, Saturday Evening Post, for October 9, 1852, and written at that date by Mr. Sheen, not then connected with any faction of the church. He had not been at Nauvoo during the prophet's lifetime, and had not known him, having united with the church sometime in 1844; he knew nothing personally about the subject on which he wrote."

In Herald dated Plano, Illinois, April 15, 1874, page 240, is the obituary notice of Isaac Sheen. It states: "In 1840, in the city of Philadelphia, he first heard the doctrines taught by the Latter Day Saints; and he received them with all readiness of mind, and in the same year was baptized and confirmed by Erastus Snow." "In 1841 he was ordained at Kirtland, Ohio, by Elder Zebedee Coltrin, to the office of an elder." "In August, 1842, he went to Nauvoo, Illinois, and thence to Macedonia, Hancock County, Illinois, where himself and family remained until January, 1846."

How do you reconcile the two statements? I find that he was personally acquainted with the prophet, as I have talked with those that knew of his acquaintance with him. Hoping to hear from you I remain

Yours in gospel bonds,

CHARLES SHEEN.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

WE are pleased to note that one of our young sisters has honored herself and her family and friends by devotion and ability in her school work, as the following, addressed to one of the editors, indicates:—

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 7.

Dear Brother:—Sr. Florence Burgess, daughter of Bro. and Sr. S. R. Burgess, has just completed the four year course in the City High School at this place, and having received the highest grade has been chosen valedictorian of the class. It is the only High School in the city and there are one hundred thirteen in the class, hence Sr. Florence may well feel just a little proud of the record she has made, especially when taking into consideration the fact that she was forced to be absent some two months or more during the last year on account of sickness. We are all pleased to know that one of Zion's daughters should be thus successful in a four year's race.

Very hastily,

J. C. HITCHCOCK.

Bro. Alma Kent, Camden, New Jersey, June 8:—

Weather very unfavorable for tent work;

cold and damp, congregations small. Buried one last Sabbath beneath the liquid wave, a very intelligent German lady. Her husband is not far from the kingdom; so the work moves along, and they come by the ones and twos.

Bro. C. W. Prettyman, Wescott, Nebraska, June 3:—

I am feeling well in the work and am doing what I can; pressing calls for preaching, more than I can answer to.

Good news from Chicago branch; letter from Bro. William Strange, June 7:—

Six more baptized yesterday week; four by Elder Pitt, two by Elder Strange. The work is onward here, and we see no reason why it should not continue if we will prove faithful in that which is committed unto us.

It is evident from the increasing number of inquiries received by mail concerning the faith of the church that our work is attracting greater and more widespread attention. It is noticeable too that the late missionary efforts of the Utah Church have developed an interest in the minds of a number concerning the Reorganization, for among those writing for tract literature are some who desire to know the true facts and doctrines of the latter-day work; and some of whom have written of their willingness to see the Reorganization correctly represented, in contrast to what has been stated by Utah elders; so favorably has the Reorganization impressed them. We have taken pleasure in supplying their wants, so far as in our power. By these tokens it is manifest that in many ways doors are being opened for the preaching of the elders, and that many will find effectual openings made for them by the forces at work under the influences of the good providences that are preparing the way, following the fields for the sowing of the gospel seed. The good work is widening and extending.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins, who has been laboring for a time in the State of Texas, returned to Lamoni on Monday, June 7.

Sr. I. E. Dorner, of Holden, Missouri, writes testifying to evidences received which confirm her in the faith. She asks prayer that her husband may be led to obey the word.

Bro. A. B. Purfurst, formerly of Germany, and lately of Guatemala, Central America, was baptized at Lamoni on Sunday last, the 6th inst. Bro. Purfurst comes to us from the Utah Church, as a result of hearing and examining into the faith taught by our people in California and elsewhere.

Dr. P. P. Starke, of Richmond, Virginia, who became interested in the faith through the work of Utah elders in that city, paid Lamoni a short visit, and after making an examination of the faith of the church returned to his home, apparently pleased and encouraged to continue his investigations.

The monarch of old-time had his slave to fan him, but any sovereign citizen to-day may have his fan, in his room and at his desk, and at a nominal cost, thanks to modern discovery and inventiveness. June 10. From all parts of New England come reports of damage wrought by overflowing rivers. For several days past it has rained and yesterday's supply was a perfect down-pour. Rivers burst their limits and did great damage to property. West Concord, New Hampshire, is partly flooded and is still endangered by the overflow of Lake Penacock. Landslides and washouts have caused wreck and delay on railroads.

"Torrential" rains have fallen in the district of Taurida, Russia, inundating a portion of the province. Many persons have been drowned, the rivers are overflowing and ruining the crops, and the damage to the wheat crop is enormous. Drought prevails in Northern Taurida.

The town of Lyle, Minnesota, was struck by a cyclone on the evening of June 10. Several people were killed and injured and much property destroyed. The town of Kandiohi was also visited and damaged by cyclone; reports meager.

Dispatches from Verona, Italy, announce that a terrible cyclone, accompanied by hail, devastated the valley of Caprino on the evening of June 9. All the crops, including the mulberry crops, were destroyed, entailing a great loss of silk worms.

Famine in India is followed by famine in China. Oriental advices received at Vancouver, British Columbia, June 10, are as follows: "The fatality from famine and plague in China is appalling. The famine north and east of Szachuan is causing many deaths. A traveler who has just returned from there reports having seen numbers of dead bodies lying about unattended to. In one large town half the population had perished from starvation and the fever that follows in its wake. The government has sent 120,000 picules of rice by way of relief, but grain cannot be got to the sufferers beyond certain parts owing to sections made impassible by swollen rivers. Along the route to smaller towns numbers of bodies lay decomposing while the sky was black with vultures."

News of the Turko-Grecian settlement has for some time past been to the effect that stormy scenes have occurred at the meetings of the ambassadors of the powers, because of the determination of the Sultan's representatives to demand the cession of Thessaly or its control by Turkey. It has been stated that Turkey was sustained in this demand by Germany, and persisted in her demands until Russia and other powers joined Great Britain in the position that Christians should not be put under Moslem rule. The Greeks are in a state of suspense and recognize that should negotiations by the powers fail to care for their interests, they may have to fight for their existence as a nation. The Turks are angry at the alleged brusque declaration of the British ambassador that England will never permit Christians to return to Turkish rule. Delegates were to meet at Armyro, Crete, June 9, to discuss the proposed autonomous form of government for the Cretans. Delegates from western districts of Crete are willing to accept autonomy if the Turkish troops depart.

Washington advices dated June 11: It is rumored here that should Turkey refuse to comply with the diplomatic suggestion to quit Greek territory forthwith, Russia will use force to compel her. Private dispatches to the European legations to-day show that Russia, France, and England are acting together in refusing to allow the Turks to hold Thessaly. Bulgaria and Servia are reported to be mobilizing a large army on the Turkish frontier in obedience to a command from Russia, while Russian regulars are said to be marching to the Balkan States. The question of indemnity has been settled by the Ambassadors of the six powers. The sum is believed to be nearly $10,000,000. Russia is to receive the money in lieu of Turkey's debt to her. Diplomats here interpret this to mean a Russian financial protectorate over Greece similar to her political ascendancy in the Balkans, and with a view to deaden English influence in Greece.

The members of the General Council of the Reformed Episcopal Church, at New York, after discussing the question of the wearing of clerical robes, adopted a resolution prohibiting the use of the white surplice in parishes where it is not now in use. As a result of this action Bishop Cheney, of Chicago resigned. The action may cause a split in the church. At the second day's session of the Council Bishop Samuel Fallows, of Chicago, told of the part he took in the ordination of Ballington Booth as a minister some months ago. His action was indorsed with but one dissenting vote.

THE CHURCH HISTORY, SECOND VOLUME.

THE Board of Publication are gratified to be able to announce the completion at an early time of the second volume of the Church History. Already plates are made for 400 pages, and the book will be ready for delivery in July.

This history should be in the houses of all saints and friends of the work of Christ in the last days; its importance as one of the prime agencies in disseminating the truths and correct positions of the church in the nineteenth century can hardly be overestimated.

The Board of Publication was instructed by the Annual Conference of 1896 to issue this work, and it has moved forward under many difficulties to accomplish the same, and should have the hearty coöperation of every member and friend now in spreading the news and giving the people an opportunity to understand the faith of the Latter Day Saints as it is.

The church has suffered in the past on account of having been represented in a large part by its enemies and those who have been ready to malign their faith.

There is nothing more important than that we should present to the world our own faith and organization as well as the work of the church since 1830, and if we fail to do this, we are not active as becometh our high and holy calling as servants of the Lord.

The second volume of the Church History will contain about 700 pages and is delivered at the low price of $1.50, postage prepaid, to any address in the United States or Canada.

The office is in need of means which it has necessarily expended in getting out this volume, and it is urged upon the saints that they send in their orders promptly and thus be able to assist the office, as they at the same time assist in disseminating the true work and positions of the church among the people.

Nothing is more worthy and commendable than an effort in this direction; and let us not wait until we may thus aid without feeling that it is something of a sacrifice, for great good comes to the people when they make true and devoted sacrifice in order to forward any great and true work.

Send all orders and contributions to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa; and where parties at any one point desire to get a number of the books, they may be sent by express, and the postage which will be from twenty-five to thirty cents on each book, saved to those ordering.

Please let us hear from you at once. As ever, confidently in the truth and working for its advancement,

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"The truth the English poet saw
Two centuries back is thine—
Who sweeps a room as by God's law,
Makes room and action fine.
And in thy quiet ministry
To wants and needs of ours, I see How grace and toil may well agree."

WORK AND PLAY.

A RIGHT understanding of the nature and of the relations of work and play has much to do in character building. Some elements of character can be developed only through work; others, only through play. The finest characters are those where these elements exist in beautiful equipoise. Many characters become dwarfed or unsymmetrical because their development has come solely through work or solely through play. God's way is to combine the two. As Horace Bushnell says: "No creature lives that must not work and may not play." This universality proves that both work and play have important offices to perform. To understand these offices we must learn to distinguish clearly between work and play. "Work is activity for an end; play is activity as an end." The difference between them consists not in acts performed, but in the principles controlling the acts, the will governing work; impulse, instinct governing play. The boy really puts forth as much physical exertion in skating as in sawing wood, but this is work, that, play, because one is done under compunction, the other is done just for the fun of it. Doings things for the fun of it constitutes play.

But what is the use of doing things just for fun? What is the use of play? Rather, has it any use? If it had no use we do not believe a desire for it would have been so firmly implanted in our natures, and in the nature of every living thing. Lambs frisk in the pasture, the high-spirited horse prances and gambols from very exuberance of life; the birds, those children of the air, play with their voices in ravishing trills and quavers, or with their wings as they dart from tree to tree, chasing each other in abandon of joyousness. The first few years of a child's life, if he be good for anything, seem spent almost wholly in play. Nothing gives us more uneasiness than to see a child who does not play. We consider it a sure sign of sickness, either of body or mind. Growth is the primary use of play, and this is as true of intellectual and spiritual growth as of physical.

Thus we see that growth, development, is the mission of play; discipline, training, the mission of work. Confining our thoughts for a time to the child's body, it is evident that as he advances, the relative importance of development and discipline gradually changes and the necessity of the discipline of work gradually increases. Indeed, were development the only office of play, necessity for it might cease when the body attained its full growth. But play is equally necessary as "tired Nature's sweet restorer," a means of rest and recuperation. Our language shows that recreation is but re-creation—creating anew the worn-out faculties. This use of play must continue just so long as work continues. There are many kinds of weariness that can be restored only by play. It is because people forget this that we have so many physical and mental wrecks; the finest steel subjected to long-continued, heavy pressure, will snap at last.

Work and play have mutual relations, and each is necessary to produce its own results. Work is necessary for the development of a strong, self-reliant, reliable character; the more regularly and systematically work is done the greater is the value as a means of discipline. "There is no excellence without labor," is no more trite than true. Nothing but work puts us in complete control of our own faculties, of either body or mind. Impulsive play makes them grow strong; work alone gives control of that strength, and directs it into useful channels. The child grows strong by romping in the sunshine, and this is a vital necessity, but no amount of romping or of any other aimless action will make him a good mechanic, able to turn the strength thus gained to useful purposes. Work, so planned as to bring the muscles under control of the will and to train them to execute the will's mandates accurately and quickly, must do that. The giant's strength is worthless unless it can be well applied. It is worse than worthless if it be directed to ignoble ends, and the counterpart of this is seen in character. A character may be strong and yet be powerless for good because its strength is frittered away upon trifles; or it may become potent for evil through misdirection of its forces. The right kind of work rightly done tends to concentrate the powers upon worthy ends. These powers will be active, either for good or for evil. A young man of strong vitality if not trained to work is almost sure to sink into vice. Illustrations of this truth are seen on every hand.

The old Jewish polity teaches many lessons in social science. Not the least important of these is that taught by their law requiring every boy, be he rich or poor, to learn a trade. The effect of this is manifest in the sturdy strength of character for which that race was noted, and it may have something to do with the fact that to-day that race, out-cast and down-trodden for centuries, presents no beggars and few criminals. Learning a trade requires carefulness, accuracy, thoroughness and patience. The daily exercise of these virtues strengthens them and weaves them into the very warp and woof of character. Mastery of a trade gives self-reliance. In this country no man or woman with a good trade well mastered, need ever be long without employment by which to earn an honest living. This makes them independent; they can follow out their own convictions of right. Nothing so fosters the servile spirit as the feeling that we are not in command of any certain means of making a living. The class who are either not able or not willing to work, but feel that "the world owes them a living," is always and everywhere a dangerous class; out of it communists and criminals are made. Wise patriots count as one of the dangerous signs of the times the fearful increase of boy criminals. I lately sat in the chapel of a States Prison where were seventeen hundred prisoners. As I looked into their faces that which impressed me most was, how many young faces! Remarking it to the warden he replied, "Yes, thirty per cent. of them are under twenty years of age." Reflecting a moment, he added, "That may be a little too high, but I am quite sure thirty per cent. are under twenty-five when they are admitted." A variety of causes lead to this result. Prominent among them are the drink habit and reading impure literature. But connected with these, perhaps underlying them, is the fact that a very small proportion of these convicts had received any systematic training for work. Careful examination showed that in some wards the proportion of those thus trained for honest self-support was as low as two per cent. This lowest per cent. was found among women criminals. Among the boys and younger men it was found almost as low.

The decay of the apprentice system in America is deplored by those who note the evils resulting therefrom to our industries—the lack of thoroughness, the great increase of "shoddy." He who cares for the souls of men must deplore it even more on account of its effect upon character. The three years' steady application required of apprentices, the learning to make every part of an article well, and to so make it that it shall be in harmony with every other part, the regular hours, submission to proper control, to say nothing of the skill required, form valuable preparation for life work. This system is a thing of the past, and probably can never return, owing to the change wrought in our industries by machinery. But something must be done in the way of industrial training or the interests of the nation, material and moral, will seriously suffer. The realization of this fact is resulting in industrial training schools of various kinds. May their number and efficiency increase.

Systematic, productive labor tends to develop a wise economy. The value of money is never so well learned as by earning it. If it comes without labor, it is spent without thought. The spendthrift son is very apt to be the bad son; the money which he spends but does not earn leads him into many temptations. More important even than economy in the use of money is economy of time, and this is never learned in idleness. What busy worker is there who has not been exasperated almost beyond endurance by interruptions caused by some idler whose own time being of little value, he never scruples to consume any amount of his neighbor's time.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

MOSHEIM states that Sunday schools were in existence as early as the first century, but we can find no definite account of any until the year 1781, when they were apparently founded by one Robert Raikes, a printer in Gloucester, England. Business leading him into the suburbs of the town, inhabited by the lowest class of the people, he was struck with concern at seeing a group of children, miserably ragged, at play. He was informed that "on Sunday the street was filled with a multitude of wretches, who having no employment on that day, spent their time in noise and riot, playing at chuck, and cursing and swearing."

To check this deplorable profanation of the Lord's day, he engaged four women, who kept dame schools, to instruct as many children as he should send them on the Sunday, in reading and the church catechism; for which they were to receive one shilling each. In a short time a visible improvement was effected, both in the manners and morals of the children, who came in considerable numbers. They attended church with their mistresses, and a great many learned to read and say their catechism. Such was the origin of the Sunday schools. Numerous schools, formed on the same model, sprang up in all the different towns; and a society, under high patronage, was formed in London, in 1785, for the establishment and support of Sunday schools throughout the kingdom; which in fourteen years expended £4,000 in payment of teachers. This was the first stage of the Sunday school. The great impediment to its prosperity was the expense of hiring so many teachers. Even in Gloucester, the birthplace of the Sunday schools, after Mr. Raikes' death in 1811, all the Sunday schools were closed for a time, owing to want of funds.

Whoever first conceived the idea of gratuitous instruction has nearly as great merit as Mr. Raikes himself; but probably it was suggested by necessity, to many minds, in different places at the same time. It was the means of starting Sunday schools on a new career of success, and the idea spread so rapidly that by the year 1800 the teaching was almost universally gratuitous. A higher class of teachers offered their services. The schools ceased to be filled by the very poorest alone; handsome buildings were erected, in connection with the different churches and chapels, or by general subscription; and that system was organized which covered the land with schools. The secular teaching which, in many instances, included writing and arithmetic, was not of a very high order; but it placed the key of knowledge in the hands of the multitudes who would otherwise have been unable to read, and the religious instruction with which it was combined has molded the character of some of the best men in England.

In 1803 the Sunday School Union was formed, which, by its numerous publications, its traveling agents, and its connection with branch societies in every part of the kingdom, has exercised great influence on the Sunday school cause. Within the last twenty years the Sunday school has entered upon the third stage of its history. The improvement and multiplication of weekday schools obviate the necessity for teaching reading in Sunday schools, so that they have gradually become restricted to religious instruction. This for a time threatened to affect their popularity; but as the teachers were earnest men, they cultivated the art of teaching with considerable success.

Sunday schools were introduced into New York in 1816, through the exertions of some benevolent ladies; from which they have spread through the several States. They are now to be found wherever the English tongue is spoken.

Then as now, there existed some opposition to this work, although it had its origin in the desire of men's hearts to do good, and we feel assured it has the approval of One who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And I have heard the testimony of those who say they have experienced as much of the Spirit of God in the sessions of Sunday school as they have in other of the services of God.

The Sunday school work in our church was of a scattered and irregular order until 1891, when the General Association was organized at Kirtland. There has been considerable prejudice to overcome, and little yet remains, perhaps, in some places; but the work has progressed rapidly the past year. The statistical report states that in that time eight new districts have been formed, three new schools outside of districts; the total number of schools in the Association being 228, a net gain of 55 over the previous year. The total membership reported now is 11,669, a net gain in one year of 2,328. The Association is entirely out of debt and have a fine balance in the treasury.

I feel we have much to encourage and little to discourage; so arouse, each and every one, and let us see if we cannot do more efficient work the coming year than ever before; and let it be done with full purpose of heart, and to God be given all the praise, the honor, and the glory.—The historical data gleaned from Chambers' Encyclopedia, LYDNEY, Wales, May 17.

Editors Herald:—I dare say you will be interested to know how the work of God is progressing in England, perhaps I had better say Welsh Mission, over which Bro. Caffall has charge. Myself and three other brethren were strong Wesleyan Methodists five months ago, and advocating their cause to the utmost of our ability; but we were interested to know what the Latter Day Saints believed different to what we did. Bro. Caffall had preached in Lydney a few times previous to this, and Bro. A. N. Bishop had commenced coming amongst us. I had heard the saints preach about five times altogether, and was fully convinced in my mind that they were a great deal more right than any one else. However, not wishing to do anything hasty, I did as Christ commanded, searched the Scriptures. I soon found I was a long way from the kingdom of God, according to the plan which the Savior had brought from his Father.

Being honest with myself, and knowing that I should have to stand on my own merits in that great day when he whose right it is to reign shall come, I determined to join the church of the living God. I could not rest in mind, body, or spirit. So seeing an advertisement that Brn. A. N. Bishop and T. Gould would be in our little town again to hold meetings, I resolved to go and induce some to go with me who had been my companions in tribulation at the Wesleyans. Well, four of us did go, and I bless and praise God for the day. We heard what shall I say, a gospel; No, the gospel in its virgin purity as taught by Christ and his apostles. None of us were so sure of getting into heaven when we came out as when we went in. Well, in short, I may say that none of us found rest till we had been buried beneath the liquid wave for the remission of our sins, to be buried with Christ in baptism, and to rise with him to newness of life.

The next ordinance was to have the hands of the elders laid on our heads for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The saints gathered together for this purpose on Sabbath, the third, in January, and Brn. A. N. Bishop, T. Gould, and T. S. Griffiths administered in this ordinance; and as we had been told by the elders, we received the Spirit of God in power.

Three weeks later three sisters came down into the depths of humility to fulfill all righteousness. Again has God blessed the seed which has been sown in our midst, and three more have come forth and volunteered to follow in the footsteps of their King; and God has in his marvelous goodness blessed with a baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost in each case.

We have experienced some grand times of late; God has blessed this branch of his vineyard in a wonderful manner. The gifts of the gospel of Christ are showered on us in abundance; surely this is the day of his power. On the past Sabbath, May 15th, heaven came down to earth, and the power of God filled the place where we were sitting. I could write and relate instance upon instance, one blessing after another, that I have been an eye-witness to. No doubt it would interest some of your readers, but I must not intrude too much on your space. Asking an interest in the faith and prayers of all the saints of God, I remain your brother in the Lord, Editors Herald:—I see by the Herald that L. D. Hicky is gone to rest; and when I think of him I also think of his first wife, who took her children and left Beaver Island when L. D. was gone, all because she did not believe in polygamy. Then he married Sarah Linnell under the law of Strangism. Sarah was a nice girl, and I liked her; but what a mistake she made in marrying in that way? And who could blame him or any other person for trying to believe in Strang? What could he tell his wife and children and the world? That he was living in adultery? Not he.

I thank the Lord that I was never led so far astray as that. Now that I have got my eyes open I will try to keep them open.

My father and mother came into the church under Strang; were baptized by John E. Page. We went to Voree, Wisconsin, then to Beaver Island. I was taught to believe that polygamy was the order of the church; that Christ came down through a long line of polygamists; that Mary and Martha were Christ's wives.

I saw Strang crowned king. My father, Royal Tucker, made the scepter that Strang had. It was made out of a knot of wood and finished up nicely. I can see it now in my mind.

Then again, the Sabbath was restored, and the earth was the Lord's and the fullness thereof, and we were his people and could take the spoils of the Gentiles, and consecrate them to the Lord.

My father's property never left the church; we could apostatize, but not our house and lot, or father's tools. Call that the Church of Christ? No, never! But for all that we lived, and believe in the true gospel of Christ and his kingdom.

I have seen them married and sealed for time and eternity on the Island; but for all of that I always believed that Joseph Smith was the leader of God's people. Sometimes I think we were led to Beaver Island to try our faith. Be that as it may, I stand firm as a rock in this latter-day work.

My father and mother were baptized over again by Uncle William B. Smith and received the gifts and blessings that are given to the true Church of Christ. They are both dead now; they died full in the faith of this latter-day work. I joined the Reorganized Church some three years ago, and rejoice in the knowledge of the true Church of Christ. Sometimes I am told that all are alike; that is, all three of the churches, Brigham Young's, J. J. Strang's, and the Reorganization; but I know better, for "by their fruits ye shall know them."

I am an old woman now — sixty-one years old. I see lots of names of people I used to know, in the Ensign and Herald. The honest in heart will be sifted out, and I hope to be one of them that will stand the test and be worthy to enter into the celestial kingdom.

Yours in the faith and hope of the first resurrection.

CEDAR GROVE, Tenn., May 23.

Editors Herald:—I sit here sad and lonely to-night with my sick husband, not knowing how soon he may be taken away from me, as he is very low. He has been very poorly all winter with la grippe, and now dropsy has set in. He is very low, but I hope and pray that God will rebuke the disease that is preying upon his frame, and grant unto him health and strength again; and I humbly ask the prayers of all the saints in his behalf.

It is hard times for us here, as we did not get here last year in time to raise a crop, and he has been sick so long; but it is my earnest prayer that God may send some elder that is near here to administer to him. Brn. Snow and Kelley came through here about a month ago; they stopped all night with us. I wish we had had them administer to him but he was some better then. I hope some one will send me more papers, as they drive away dull care. The saints have sent me Heralds some time ago. I was very thankful for them, and hope they will send more, as we are alone in our belief. I will now close by asking the prayers of the saints everywhere in our behalf.

Your sister in the faith.

MRS. L. M. HINKLEY.

PORCUPINE, Wis., May 25.

Editors Herald:—A word from the northern Wisconsin hills. On the 21st of April (at the close of one of the best conferences the church has ever held) in company with Bro. A. V. Closson and family left Lamoni for Porcupine. Arrived on the 23d at Pepin, a town on Lake Pepin. The scenery all along the route was beautiful. I enjoyed our stop-over at Dubuque, and many places of interest I could mention, but think it not wisdom. We found Bro. Hooker waiting for us at Pepin with his team to convey us fourteen miles over hills, through the valleys, till at last we reached our destination. A kind sister had supper ready for the hungry travelers, which we appreciated highly, as we expected to have to prepare the same ourselves.

On Sunday, the 25th, met a little band of saints sixty-eight in number, in their neat little chapel situated in the Porcupine Valley, about one half mile from Brother Closson's residence. Porcupine is a small hamlet surrounded by hills with a creek passing through it, which also bears the same name. It is supposed that the name Porcupine was given because of the many animals bearing that name that roamed the forests when the country was first settled.

The saints are warm-hearted, kind, and generous, with the love of the work at heart.

They are greatly attached to Bro. Closson's family. They were thankful that he was sent back to them. I feel well here, never felt better spiritually. I am trying in my weak way, with the help of the Master to do all I can, assisting in Sunday school work and song service; have organized a Sunday school teachers' meeting, commenced blackboard exercises and various other helps. I never so fully realized what the Lord could do for those who put their trust in him before. I feel to praise his holy name for his goodness and mercy to me, one of the weakest of God's children. I feel a measure of that blessed spirit of light, joy, and peace which permeated the hearts of the saints on that memorable afternoon when the word of the Lord was read to hundreds of his children, given through the seer and revelator of latter-day Israel and the leading quorums filled, which fully equipped "the ship of Zion" for the first time since its reorganization. I shall never forget that conference. It was another day of pentecost to the saints.

Brethren I. N. Roberts and E. A. Steadman were here a few days on church business, preached twice in the chapel, which was well received and enjoyed by all who heard them. Brethren come again. The saints would have been glad could they have stayed longer; but we had to say the sad word, "Good by;" perhaps never to meet in this life again (at least some of us) until we meet in that grand reunion where partings never come, for we shall reign with Christ our king if we are faithful.

Your sister in the faith,

MARY A. WHITE.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 10.

Editors Herald:—We are anxiously awaiting the arrival of conference proceedings, but must wait some three weeks more. This great distance from headquarters is greatly felt at times. Have never got entirely reconciled to it, though we have had over three years of it. Time has been so thoroughly occupied that you have not heard from "I" for sometime. Would like to have related to you, while its memory was fresh, a remarkable case of healing that occurred about a month ago or more. Through over-straining her eyes in preparing for an examination in the education department of New South Wales, Sr. Anna Mather lost her eyesight, and was forced to come to Sydney from Kempsey (where she was serving as a "pupil teacher") for medical treatment. For several days she was blind indeed, the rest of the time partially so, and none of the time able to read even the largest print. The oculist who took the case acknowledged he did not quite understand it, and changed his treatment for better results. She seemed no better. Upon her request the branch here came together one Wednesday night fasting. She was present, as was also the healing power of the Great Physician. We administered in the usual way. Five minutes after she arose and testified to having been relieved. Had been able to read the number and first line of the hymn sung after she was anointed, something she couldn't do on entering the room. She staid all night at Bro. Seaberg's, (where I stay) and was delighted the next morning when she arose to read a letter received from her mother some time previously, without the least straining.

I then went with her to the doctor, who examined her eyes with surprise and delight. He remarked: "I can't tell you how much better your eyes are. You must have been following my directions very closely." He told her that she need not come but once more and then she would be able to go back to work. Sr. Anna was amused, but said nothing (as we are commanded). She informed me that she had given up his directions several days before, preferring to trust God, and because, too, the oculist acknowledged he didn't understand the case. I then took her to the top of the General Post Office clock tower and she feasted her eyes on a magnificent view of Sydney and suburbs, including one of the finest harbors in the world. Four days later she paid her last visit to the doctor who said: "That salve has done its work well! Your eyes look blooming!" (and nearly one week had passed since she had touched salve or lotion.) Little does the doctor know what salve it was that did the work.

But a curious thing happened her two days after the administration. About ten o'clock in the morning her voice was suddenly affected and not one word could she utter audibly until she was again administered to. It then returned gradually. Upon this occasion the same healing influence was felt and one lady, not a member but an investigator, states that she received a touch from "the hem of His garment" by which a long-standing trouble was removed by silently requesting it while we were engaged in administering to Sr. Mather. This same lady was not long since turned out of the hospital "incurable" and her husband feared to see her baptized on account of her delicate condition; but your humble servant had the pleasure soon after the above event of leading her and another lady through the waters of regeneration.

This reminds me of another sister (Parkes) who was a sufferer from a tumor and could scarcely drag herself to the water's edge. She came up out of the water "every whit whole," and remains so to this day. (This was about eighteen months ago.)

These cases and others I might mention, have been great strengtheners to the new saints in Sydney.

We have lately held an "all-week mission" here. A bad cold in the voice-box completely disabled the writer, which was not according to our calculations. But happily Elder Butterworth was on hand to take up the work and preached every sermon of the series; and he did it well, too. For over three years I have been listening mainly to myself, and it was a treat to hear for the first time our worthy chief in a series. We are more than ever impressed that he is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

It was our special privilege this week to hear a speech from the Rev. John Clifford, of London, the leader of the Baptist Church in Great Britain, and a prominent figure in social and educational questions in that great metropolis. When his name was announced at a public meeting in London to protest against the government's attitude in Cretan affairs (just before his departure), the audience gave him such an ovation as not even Mr. Gladstone received. Upon hearing him, we quite understood the secret of this. Notwithstanding he has more letters following his name than there are in it, one would never see any self-consciousness of that fact in his manner or style. And such a style is badly wanted among ministers as a rule. It was conversational, earnest, and emphatic. Earnest words never die, while affectation and stiltedness seldom if ever reach the heart.

Dr. Clifford thoroughly believes in what he says and devotedly advocates it. He is a thorough Protestant, and launched out fearlessly on the question of religious liberty, the attitude and mission of the Free Churches and established Church in England, and the relation of both to the Church of Rome.

The sacerdotal spirit in the Anglican, or Established Church, had caused a great gulf to grow between her and the Free Churches (Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodists, and Congregationalists). The former had regarded the latter as no churches at all (because they have no "orders" and hence no apostolic authority). This only created greater unity among the Free Churches. The English Church had been anxious (that is, the dominant High Church party) that Rome would recognize her orders. But the Pope had the consistency to declare them invalid. "We want no orders," said the doctor ironically, "other than is found in the command, 'Go ye unto all the world and preach the gospel to every creature'" (and his Free Church brethren on the platform responded with a hearty "Amen").

The doctor rejoiced in the glory of "Greater" Britain. There once was a Greater Portugal; she is diminished as the mists before the morning sun, a Greater Spain; but she is gone, too. Where is Greater Holland and Greater France? All gone. Was there ever to be a day when Greater Britain would follow Greater Portugal, Spain, Holland and France? What were the Australians going to do for the Great Britain of the future? It had been remarked to him by a young Britisher that Britain was ordained to rule the world, and the reason was because they were the justest nation. He hoped that was true. The Romanists could not make the Greater Britain of the future. Let the British Empire go over to Romanism and Greater Britain would go after Spain and France. The Free Churches who stood for liberty of conscience—that liberty that secured all the rest—would make Greater Britain permanent, extensive, universally and gloriously victorious. She must carry this light into the realm of the Czar and the Turk. He closed with this peroration: "Be men of faith, of loyalty, of conviction, and as we go from step to step in our history as a people, trusting in God who has made us what we are, we shall prepare the day when all men shall brothers be, and rejoice in the fact that they are children of one God, who through his Son, seeks their salvation, and by his Spirit seeks to bring them into blessed harmony with himself and his revelation.

This is a high and exalted ideal which he thinks the British nation has been ordained of God to realize. What a fruitful and interesting train of thought this arouses from our standpoint!

But I will not trespass on your space further, but leave your readers to think on it. (By "our standpoint" I mean the standpoint of a representative of the kingdom of God.) I suggest as a starting point Daniel 2: 44.

During the address Dr. Clifford admitted that Christian Socialism is spreading throughout Christian communities. Worldly forms of socialism had received a check; but Christian Socialism was a fact.

The doctor is on a tour for his health and will visit America before his return home.

GOMER WELLS.

THACKERY, Ill., June 1.

Editors Herald:—On April 24 I started in my field of labor, stopping with the saints at Green schoolhouse, preaching over Sunday; thence to Kell, a new opening, where I met Bro. and Sr. Fanver, strong in the faith, kind and generous, with whom I shared their hospitable home. I did not succeed in getting out large audiences until Sunday, when they filled the house; on week days most everybody was busy planting or preparing their ground for corn. I do not think this effort was in vain, and if followed up when people are not so busy, good will come to them. I went to Arrington; this is the place where Bro. I. N. White held a discussion with Rev. Moore, of the Missionary Baptist Church. I preached three discourses there and felt satisfied there will be an ingathering at this place; if Bro. White could arrange to hold a series of meetings at Arrington I believe he would be better received than most anyone else.

I went to Dry Fork and there met our general missionary from Indiana, V. D. Baggerly, and F. M. Slover missionary in charge. After conferring together it was agreed that Bro. Baggerly and I labor together until June Conference. At Springerton we labored a week, doing what we could to encourage the saints, publicly and privately, to a more active discharge of duty. This branch is in the condition that all branches are sure to get when the law is not enforced, and the branch officers are inactive. There are some good and true saints living here, doing the best they can under existing conditions. My prayer is that God's people and his cause will not always have to suffer because of injudicious advocates. When will the saints learn we are to be perfected through obedience to a perfect law, and the officers learn they are called to execute this law? Whatever harm may come to this body through a failure of duty of any member, whether laity or officer, just to the extent they have failed to comply with what is required of them, just to that extent condemnation rests on them. I would to God every one could awake to a realization of the responsibility resting on them, and move with the will and wishes of our heavenly Father, that we might not stand in the way of sinners.

At Bungay we secured the Newlights church to hold a series of meetings in, but the first night we found the keyholes of the doors filled with wood; but after some little difficulty we made an entrance, and the writer preached the first and only sermon that was ever preached by our people in their house. The people must have imagined a vain thing, and some raged, and informed us that the Mormons could not preach in their house; giving as a reason, if they let us preach some of their own number would burn down the house. The better class of the people did not like the way we were treated; said there was no Christianity in such conduct, hence a division among themselves. A number were heard to say they would not stay in such a church. Thinking it an opportune time to preach to the honest in heart, we secured an old log church in the little village of Bungay, and preached more than a week, baptized two, and left many more near the kingdom. Some expressed themselves as believing all we preached, and their intentions were to join the church in the near future. May they act on the courage of their convictions and receive the blessings that are for the obedient. At Thackeray we expected to remain over Sunday, and then on to district conference at Brush Creek branch, where I expect to meet my wife, this being near the point I started out from. Everywhere I go I find people of inquiring minds, and anxious to learn more; while others feel quite satisfied with what they have already received, and think to accept anything taught by our people more than they have already received would be adding to God's word.

The saints generally I think have the spirit of progression, not being satisfied to stand still, believing there is higher ground yet for them to occupy. May they move onward and upward, until they have reached the mark and prize of their high calling in Christ Jesus, is the prayer of your humble servant,
J. D. STEAD.

LOOKING GLASS, Oregon, May 31.

Editors Herald:—At last I am in my field and at work. Coming via Sacramento with privilege of running into San Francisco, I took the opportunity of getting acquainted with the saints there and seeing the city of the "golden gate." Here I enjoyed a week's stay and labor with a good deal of sightseeing mixed in.

As I came through I stopped off a week in the "Valley," speaking once in Salt Lake City, once in Ogden City, and once in a schoolhouse near Ogden known as Riverdale. Here, in Ogden, I met a friend of my childhood days, or rather two friends, in the persons of Bro. S. D. Condit and his sister Adda. Bro. C. was preaching at Riverdale and it was his appointment that I filled there. The following Sunday I spoke once in San Francisco, and once in Oakland, where I met Bro. H. L. Holt.

Saturday, the 22d, found me on my way to Sacramento, where I spoke twice on Sunday and once each on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Leaving there at midnight Tuesday I reached this point Thursday noon, and that evening was met by a house of nearly a hundred, and have spoken each evening since and twice on Sunday. My appointments are out for over next Sunday.

I feel that the Lord is blessing me here. I look for Bro. Holt to-morrow. I have found friends and seem to be making more for the cause.

Your brother,

A. M. CHASE.

Editors Herald:—It is a pleasure to me to read the glad news that salutes our ears from far and near. The Herald is ever a welcome guest; and I cannot understand how that those who call themselves Latter Day Saints can really do without the dear old Herald. I know those that say they cannot afford, and yet they do afford to take daily and weekly papers. I am of the same opinion as Brother Caffall, that if I can only afford one paper, it shall be the Saints' Herald. I am glad to say that God has blessed me during the past years, manifesting his parental care for me, blessing me at times with information that comes alone from the Giver of all good and perfect gifts.

All praise, honor, and glory be given to our heavenly Father for his condescension in giving directions for the filling of the quorums of the church. While such great strides are not made this side the Atlantic, we are pleased to see that the little stone is rolling so steadily in other lands. I have been blessed by the news of such a grand conference. I hope we shall heed the advice given us by Paul, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall," knowing that the time is but short. May we be wise and work while the day lasts.

I am sorry to say the work is but slow in this branch, only a few evincing a desire to labor; nevertheless the Sunday school is progressing very well. May Zion's cause prosper and the honest in heart be gathered in. With hope of final redemption of Zion, I am,

Yours in gospel bonds,

J. ARBER.

ORCHARDSVILLE, Ill., June 4.

Editors Herald:—Since our return from conference, and prior to our leaving home, we have had visits from Bro. Gillespie and daughter Mary, of Kirtland, Ohio, Brethren Kent and Baker, on their way to the Eastern mission field, and Bro. T. W. Chatburn, who stopped a few days on the way to his field in Kentucky and Tennessee, and whom we left with appointment for last Sunday in St. Louis.

Our trip to Southern Illinois was delayed fortunately or unfortunately, by the very severe sickness of Sister Bond; she being taken violently ill on the 17th. Of the trial of our faith we are not disposed to speak in detail. Administrations, and all that care and good nursing, or "the use of that which" the highest wisdom we were in possession of "directs," seemed to fail in bringing relief. "The spirit of healing from the Lord in faith," being for the time denied us; with the added importunities of friends to "fly from ills we have, to those we know not of," by venturing into experimental fields neither warranted by reason, the facts of history, or the word of the Lord to us. These all made the threatened dangers all the harder to bear; but when matters seemed to have gone far enough—and the point of a crisis had been reached—the Lord reached forth his hand, and in the administration of those means which His wisdom alone has appointed, and by his spirits' power said unto us—"it is enough"—and the persistency of the prayers of faith and of a trust when we may not always trace him with fleshly sight prevailed, and the Lord, according to promise, has raised her up from a natural death-bed, for which we feel profoundly grateful to him whom we still hope to trust, even though we may come to a place where our faith—or rather desires or petitions may be forced to submit to a denial, death must come to all, sooner or later. May God help us not only to live but to die consistently, and not by unwarranted method seek to interpose or stay—or rather take the greater chances of hastening the event we seek to postpone by reaching after the "hand of an enemy," blindly groping in the dark for chances that in my experience have proved so fatal to success.

I have never yet seen a person die without drugs, or the "orthodox" doctor, save by accident or violence. I have seen and have known many, very many, under their advice and treatment to pass away. We expect, sooner or later to die, with or without a doctor we trust, unless some new light dawns—to be able—so far as present current methods or practice is concerned to die without one. We are already handicapped by too many infirmities; ills enough we have, inherited or acquired, transgressors of law through ourselves or our progenitors—already great enough, without adding insult to injury. "Have faith in God"—why not?

I feel, at this writing, thankful to God for a companion possessed of grit, and with a goodly measure of confidence in God—a confidence that expresses and emphasizes itself in shadow as well as sunshine; in storm or in calm; in trial or in repose. Also, desirous of expressing thanks to the brethren, sisters, friends, and to our lady friend and physician, Mrs. Dr. Skinner, who not only put up with our "fanaticism" in refusing stimulants or medicines; but put in a heroic day and night's service of good nursing; and although she failed in "converting" us from "the old paths"—it is our satisfaction to believe that the faith of the saints received additional credit with this, I believe, honest woman.

Last Saturday and Sunday was principally spent at Orchardville, with T. B. Lee post G. A. R., of whom Bro. M. G. Powell is commander. Decoration day—a day of beautiful sunshine, and of scattering flowers in profusion upon the graves of our fallen heroes. Three cemeteries visited where repose the ashes of our country's defenders—memorial service in afternoon—speeches by Rev. McMinn of the Baptist Church, Prof. Branson of normal college, and the writer. Sunday—memorial sermon by the writer, the crowd being unable to get in to the church, in spite of threatening weather. Our theme—"Our country; past, present, and future." Reminiscent tribute to our country's defenders—the scarred living, and the honored dead, duties done, and duty still before us; dangers past, and dangers threatening still our beloved country. Traitors dead, with issues that created them. The living patriot has still a duty to perform. The enemies of freedom and of human rights, of constitutional inherent and God-given right, not yet all dead; conditions of peril may confront us, possibly obscured from the gaze of the pre-occupied masses. The insolence, the ignorance, overconfidence, and assumption of the Slave Oligarchy, that threatened to choke the life of our nation, and struck in its death throes ten thousand northern, as well as southern hearthstones with death, is no more; but the principle still lives, of rebellion against a government that God designed, and Abraham Lincoln on the battle field of Gettysburg prayed for—"A Government of the people, and by the people, and for the people."

May the ballot of a great people, a people designed of heaven for equal use of all his bounties—loaded with the conscience and intelligence of the people preserve unto, and for the use of the whole people their inherent constitutional and God-bequeathed right "to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." The musket is laid aside—by not only the boys in blue, but the boys who wore the gray—let us hope, forever; so far at least as internal strife is concerned, and to make matters sure, let the Grand Army of the Republic take up the bloodless, but no less effectual weapon—the freeman's ballot—draw a bead upon the man who seeks to destroy or corrupt its integrity, or pervert its design for personal or unpatriotic or selfish use. Beware of the professional politician, no matter what his party badge; and remember that the man who seeks by cajolery, by misrepresentation, by falsehood, or by intimidation to pervert or turn aside a freeman's will in this regard, is a traitor to the Constitution, and a rebel against his country. The man who sells his vote is a fool, and should be disfranchised. The man who buys it is a knave, and should be imprisoned. Let us study the declaration of our forefathers again and again—and with them and with that glorious patriot, Abraham Lincoln,—with hands stretched over the graves of our fallen heroes, to-day renew our vows, that "a government of the people, and by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth." . . .

In speaking we were helped, and applauded, and congratulated by ministers and all, at the close. Friends were made for the church, and we felt and feel that opportunities like this referred to, may be by carefulness and wisdom made to subserve the interests of the kingdom and government of God, and the cause of the ideal citizen, Jesus Christ.

Sunday and Monday evening spoke at the Helm schoolhouse in the neighborhood of this writing; since when we have been holding forth every evening in the Baptist church in town, being the first time our gospel has ever been preached in that place; the result, in a measure, of Sunday's memorial service, and the work of the Grand Army boys.

We are indebted to Mr. J. L. Scott, a prominent Baptist and temperance worker and merchant of Orchardville, for use of and preparation of church, choir assistance, and many courtesies. May his shadow increase with his love of justice, fair play, and as a consequence liability to learn of the truth that makes men free.

We go to Xenia for Sunday and meetings during the week, thence the Saturday following to Brush Creek and their district conference.

In bonds,

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, June 7.

Editors Herald:—The work at this place is steadily moving forward, and saints rejoicing in this work at the blessings they are receiving. Bro. J. S. Roth has just closed a series of meetings at Beacon, two miles west of here, awakening an interest among the people, a result which is sure to follow the labors of such able and faithful laborers as Bro. Roth.

The able and fearless manner in which he handled the principles of the gospel of Christ; also greatly strengthened the saints, they receiving more light on some of the principles of truth than they had ever learned before. The local ministry are putting forth such efforts as circumstances will permit, aided by the prayers and assistance of the saints, God is blessing us and we are steadily increasing in numbers. We have a Sunday school which is an aid in the work. The sisters have a prayer union, which is a source of much spiritual strength to them.

We are rich in the blessings and comforts which the Spirit brings, though not possessed of many of the riches of this world. We hope that by living faithful we shall see a great work done at this place, and many precious souls brought into the kingdom.

STANDLEY, I. T., June 4.

Editors Herald:—The second week in May I was holding a series of meetings at Tusahoma, Indian Territory, the capital of the Choctaw Nation. I was called upon to administer to an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Cox. The child was in the third week with bronchitis, and gastro-intinitis. The doctor had despaired of all hopes four days before. Being a physician, and seeing the child was in the throes of death, I proceeded to administer at once. The child was relieved at once, and healed in a few minutes; is now sound and well. The mother came to Standley and was baptized three weeks later; also an old man by the name of Collins near here, and a Mrs. Nicolas has also been healed by the power of God. To God be all the glory. All these are not members of the church.

Time would fail me to tell of the goodness of God to his people at this place. We are doing all we can for the spread of the glorious gospel of these latter days. The people are waking up to its truths all over this country.

I am made to rejoice every day of my life that I have been permitted to receive the glorious message. Pray for us that the good cause may roll on.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 3.

Editors Herald:—I had a pleasant time at Santa Rosa on Sunday, May 30; spoke for them in their neat church at eleven a. m. with good liberty. We had an intermission of fifteen minutes, after which we partook of the sacrament and a pleasant and profitable hour was spent in prayer and testimony.

There is a general good feeling all through the church and gladness over the filling of the quorums and the appointing of a Patriarch. The grand outpouring of the Spirit at the late conference has been felt to an extent throughout the coast. The Lord graciously manifests his approval when we try to walk according to the gospel rule.

Every year has brought experiences to me, which I think make me more capable of endurance; that is, I think it would take more to overthrow me now than in times past; and many others express themselves similarly. May the Lord bless all who are striving for the victory.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, June 9.

Editors Herald:—Our conference at Crescent was a treat to all present. The good Father graciously ratified the effort. The business passed off without any friction, and the prayer session was exceptionally good. The Sunday morning hour was occupied by the writer, and in the afternoon Brn. Carlile, Butler, McIntosh, and Lile were the speakers. Adjourned to meet at Wheeler's Grove, August 28 and 29. We anticipate good results from our series of two day meetings throughout the district. I expect to hold forth at Crescent next week, and will then commence tent meetings here in the city, to continue most of the summer, providing I can get the tent.

Recently the Sisters' Aid Society of this place secured a storeroom, and for two days served meals, ice cream, etc., and in conjunction had a counter well laden with useful articles for sale. It was lacking the usual "bazaar objections," and in all was a success. Some fifty-six dollars were realized above expenses, and the sisters now propose to carpet the church, and assist financially in painting the outside. One encouraging feature connected with this was, that they secured the storeroom free; the gas company put in the gas for nothing; the water company made water connections to suit without any extra charge,—a favor the other churches do not generally get. But each company representative stated they were only too glad to accommodate them, for said they, "We have never before been called upon by your people for a favor, and we will be pleased to do anything you ask." Every business man visited seemed pleased to assist. It was not always this way; but constant and persistent labor, added to square dealing and exemplary lives on the part of a majority of the membership, has strengthened us in the minds of the people.

There has been considerable sickness here this spring, and we have been quite busy at times attending to administrations. Sr. Kay is suffering with dropsy and heart trouble. Bro. Bassett has been stricken with paralysis. Bro. Hall is quite feeble. The above are among the oldest saints in the branch, and are among Council Bluffs charter members. Our genial brother, Doctor Thomas Allison, of Crescent, is suffering with dropsy and kidney trouble. The physician gives him no hope of recovery; what the Great Physician will do remains to be seen. Sr. Ada Darrington (nee Scott), daughter of Bro. Thomas Scott, died in childbirth recently, the funeral sermon being delivered by Bro. H. N. Hansen.

Bro. Senterlow Butler has been busying himself at Crescent and Hazel Dell since conference. A certain skeptic saw fit to attack the Book of Mormon, in the columns of the Shenandoah World, recently; we replied, and he confessed that he gathered his information from a "Mormon Exposure," but thought it was correct. He will be sure he is right the next time, I trow. The work is brightening here as well as in the district, and if we are blessed with health, we hope to report greater progress.

Yours with Christian love,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 2.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

MISAPPLICATION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

THE misapplication of the Scriptures and their perversion thereby is one of the leading causes of the religious deceptions of the present age. A failure to "rightly divide the word of truth" and a consequent perversion and misapplication of the truth, have led to the vortex of deception, blindness, and hopeless and final overthrow of many of earth's children from first to last.

The light and guidance of that same Spirit that originally gave or revealed the word of the Lord is absolutely essential to a right understanding and application of the word. The Christ understood and taught this truth:—

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth.—John 16:13.

Then opened he their understandings, that they might understand the Scriptures.—Luke 24:45.

Men and nations, councils and synods have been misled and led into deceptions by not having a right understanding of and by misapplying the word of God. And worse yet, when God sends men endowed with the Spirit to comprehend his words, and authorized to teach and apply them, a majority of the people are so blind and so deeply traditioned in error, that they will not hear, nor investigate, nor suffer themselves to be delivered from their deceptions.

The Jewish nation, almost without exception, were under a cloud of deception, so dark that they did not understand their own prophetic writings, at the time Christ was sent to redeem them. So blind and deceived were they that instead of receiving with joy and thanksgiving their Savior of "whom Moses and the prophets" had written, the nation, with their deceived leaders, rejected him as an impostor, deceiver, and criminal; as such had the sinless Christ, put to death. Strange condition that to be in, putting darkness for light; so grossly deceived that they would not even investigate his claims, but condemned him to death, and slew him, without a charge being sustained or even justly found! He was prejudged, condemned, and slain without a hearing! What an awful condition religiously to be in! What a strange deception that was! We may lay it down as a rule, that when individuals or societies are found in a condition of mind averse to investigation of that which does not accord with their religious belief or traditions, and oppose that that differs from their religious notions, without investigation, they are deceived, deluded.

Thus the Jews prejudged, condemned, and slew their Savior, without ever investigating his claims. What but a deceived condition of mind could have induced them to be so rash? Their deception blinded them to the sense of their Scripture, "They be blind, leaders of the blind," says Jesus. Paul's statement is:—

For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every Sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him. And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.—Acts 13: 27, 28.

But the Jewish nation was so grossly self-deceived that they did not really believe the Scriptures, though stoutly averring they did.

For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?—John 5: 46, 47.

May not the condition of a great many of this age be the same as has been that of the Jews for the last eighteen hundred years?

According to this statement of Christ people are sometimes so deceived that they do not in reality believe the word of God, when they think they do. How is it that people can be so misled, blinded, deluded, so dreadfully deceived?

Any system of religion that begets prejudice in the hearts of men against those who differ from them, or even allows blinding prejudice to exist in the mind, is not of God. His truth enjoins "godliness" and "charity." Prejudice is the opposite of godliness and charity. No, we are justified in the conclusion that such a system of religion, is itself a gross deception, and should be abandoned because blinding, misleading, and utterly deceptive.

Even the divinely inspired prophets needed the inspiring and revealing Spirit of God to enable them to understand their own revelations. We read this:—

Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.—1 Peter 1: 10, 11.

Understandest thou what thou readest? And he [the eunuch] said, how can I except some man should guide me?—Acts 8: 30, 31.

And who, in the economy of God, are the men to guide us to an understanding of God's word and the right application of it? Answer,

For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts.—Malachi 2: 7.

For he whom God hath sent speaketh [not only hath spoken] the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.—John 3: 34.

Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20: 21.

To the Seventy whom Jesus sent, he said:—

He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you [your message] despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.—Luke 10: 16.

To the apostles Jesus said:—

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent.—John 13: 20.

Paul writes:—

How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher [an authorized messenger, a witness]? And how shall they preach [bear witness], except they be sent?—Romans 10: 14, 15.

Reader, do not become weary with the consideration of so many texts on this subject, for they illustrate a principle that may save you from dire deception. The authorizing and sending of ministers by the Father to do his will among men, is inseparably connected with his kingdom or church; and such ministry are so authorized and sent by revelation of God to them, —present-day revelation,—and such will teach in harmony with those similarly sent by our Savior while here.

Of those who assume to go among men as ministers, without being sent of God, and will deceive the people, Jesus says:—

Many will say to me in that day [day of judgment], Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew [acknowledged, authorized, sent] you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.—Matthew 7: 22.

Some of these false prophets and apostles made their appearance in Paul's day. Of them he wrote:—

For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.—2 Corinthians 11: 13, 14.

Of the ever-increasing numbers of these "workers of iniquity" and "deceitful workers" and their multitudes of deceived followers, it is prophesied by Paul:—

Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they [the deceived peoples] heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.—2 Timothy 4: 2, 3, 4.

Here are the two classes of ministers presented in contrast. Which are you following? One class is sent of God; they declare unto you the word of the Lord and teach sound doctrine of Christ.

Who are the "many" "deceitful workers," "workers of iniquity," these teachers "heaped" or called and sent by the people? Can you distinguish them from those authorized of God? If so, how? If not, how can you determine but what you may be deceived by them, and blinded to their false teaching and deceptions? Your eternal interests are of too great importance not to be able to settle this question. Remember these workers of iniquity are to be rejected and condemned of God at the day of judgment!

These "many" "workers of iniquity" who are pretending to do so many "wonderful works" "in the name" (by authority) of Christ, have many followers. Who are they? Where are they? Can you point them out and inform us who they are? Of one thing we may be certain; that is, they are religious teachers. They pretend to do their iniquitous work in the name of Christ, God's Son. Awful presumption that! And Paul says, when speaking prophetically of their work in the last days, that it will be productive of "perilous times." They will be, rather are, self-lovers, money-lovers, boasters, proud, bargain-breakers, "false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good. Traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of Godliness but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." (2 Timothy 3:1-5) Here, dear reader, are some of the characteristics by which the false and deceptive teachers that lead people astray and deceive them are known.

The fact that the prophecies of the Bible abound with statements pointing out that deceptions will be so wide-spread, and will be advocated and headed by false teachers, ought to arouse the world to an active and solemn investigation of its present religious condition. Mankind to-day are averse to the idea of investigating religious matters for themselves. On the contrary there is a morbid desire to see religious wonders, something supernatural. Deceivers will pander to this morbid taste, and will pretend to do in Jesus' name "many wonderful works." But Jesus warns us beforehand that he will not acknowledge them, and in the immediate connection, proceeds to point out that the wise, the undeceived man, is the one who labors to understand, to discern the truth, who "dugged deep," (Luke 6:48), and builded his house (hope of eternal life) on a rock. "Therefore," says Jesus, (please give special attention to the word "therefore" used in this connection,) "Therefore," because those "workers of iniquity" will seek to push their deceptive schemes among the people by "wonderful works," therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, [not some false teacher's interpretation of them] I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock—Matthew 7:24.

It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching [not showing signs,—wonderful works; yes, by preaching, hearing, and doing Christ's sayings—the gospel] to save them that believe.—1 Corinthians 1:21. (See also Romans 1:16, 17.)

God's word is the standard by which we detect and try false doctrines, deceptions, and those who advocate them.

If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, [as an authorized teacher,] neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.—2 John 10, 11.

If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but dotting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself.—1 Timothy 6:3-5.

The foregoing illustrates how that perversion of the scriptures, and a refusal to abide the doctrine of Christ, brings delusion, blindness, and deceptions. Surely deception reigns almost supreme, and almost to an universal extent. But again; it will be observed that almost invariably, when going about the work of "converting sinners," as they term it, many teachers fail to invite the attention of their congregations to those scriptures which inspired men of God taught and applied to sinners in Bible times, but on the contrary, with their mistaken theories, they nearly always refer unconverted seekers after religion to scripture which inspired men addressed to church members—those converted, in Christ. For example, How many of the popular teachers will, like Peter, on Pentecost's day, when he was answering the inquiry of sinners, those yet out of Christ, reply to their solemn inquiry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost"? Acts 2:37, 38.

Why do they not so instruct their great multitudes of hearers in the doctrine of Christ as the Evangelist Philip did the people of Samaria, so that like the Samaritans, of whom it is written:—

"But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized, both men and women," (Acts 8:12) they might realize it to be their duty to God to be baptized? Why do not these modern teachers feel under the same obligation now to enjoin on penitent sinners when they are inquiring the way to be saved as Ananias did to the penitent Saul?

And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord.—Acts 22:16.

Strange, is it not, that the foregoing gospel requirements are omitted from the theories of these modern teachers?

To leave out some of the principles of the gospel is to change and pervert it, and a perversion of it leads to deceptions. How prophetic the statement,

And they will deceive every one his neighbor, and will not speak the truth: they have taught their tongue to speak lies, and weary themselves to commit iniquity.—Jer. 9:5.

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.—Roman 16:17, 18.

False and deceptive teachers not only omit some of the principles of the gospel, thereby deceiving the people, but will apply to those not yet brought into Christ the following language which inspiration addressed to members in the church, to those who had obeyed the gospel:—

That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth, the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.—Romans 10: 9, 10.

With this and other texts of like character, it is sought to make "seekers" after religion believe that faith and confession is all that are required to secure salvation in Christ, and justification from past sins. The preachers fail to inform the penitents that this language was addressed by the inspired apostle to baptized believers in Christ, (See Romans 6: 3, 4,) and who were dead to the sins of their life previous to that time. As those who had been taught the gospel, Paul says to them:—

The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart; that is, the word of faith which we preach.—Verse 8.

How can it be affirmed that the word of faith which Paul preached is in the mouths and hearts of those who have never heard it, and who do not know as yet what they ought to believe? The idea is simply preposterous, and the application is a perverted one, and therefore false and deceptive.

In the same manner the scripture found in Ephesians 2: 8, is misapplied, which reads:—

For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast.

This passage, too, is addressed to baptized believers. Moreover, the "grace" referred to here is the gospel of Christ, even "The gospel of the grace of God," (Acts 20: 24), which is to be "believed" (Mark 1: 15), and obeyed (2 Thessalonians 1: 8), under penalty of destruction; and if obeyed faithfully to the end will save. (Romans 1: 16, 17.) And besides, Paul immediately adds:—

For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them.—Ephesians 2: 10.

In a similar way is some of the language of the beloved Disciple tortured into making people believe that some of the requirements of the gospel are not essential; notably, baptism, and "the laying on of hands" for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And, hence, parts of texts are quoted as follows:—

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. And the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—1 John 1: 7, 9.

Here, it will be observed, only part of the ninth verse is quoted. The first part of the verse reads:—

But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another.

Is it not peculiar that God's word is so perverted and misapplied? And is it any wonder that we are warned—

That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.—Ephesians 4: 14.

John's language above-quoted is written to the church; hence he addresses them as, "my little children," (Ibid. 2: 1;) "brethren," (verse 7;) as those who had "overcome that wicked one," and this matter is set at rest by the words:—

I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because that ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.—Ibid. 2: 21.

The foregoing examples are sufficient to enable us to clearly see where the origin of religious deceptions often lie, and how they are developed; and just how they get control of the multitudes of the blinded and deceived.

Prove all things, hold fast that which is good.

Take heed that no man deceive you.

Faith is said by one "to be an investment in the promises of God." But, what will such an investment amount to without an equal investment of faith in God's commandments?

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me.—John 14: 21.

And I know that his commandment is life everlasting.—John 12: 50.

Our life eternal, then, is enfolded in God's commandments. It will not do simply to be "trusting in the promises."

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT.

To the Saints of the Galland's Grove, Iowa, District, of the Reorganized Church.—At the meeting of your last district conference Elder C. J. Hunt, of Deloit, Iowa, was recommended for appointment as Bishop's agent in said district in place of Elder John Pett, resigned.

This is to notify you that in accordance with the recommendation of the said district, I have this day appointed Bro. C. J. Hunt as agent of the Bishopric of the Reorganized Church in and for the district of Galland's Grove, Iowa, and that he is duly authorized to perform such acts as belong to an agent under the law in and for the said territory.

In commending Bro. Hunt to the saints for support in the work as agent, I also feel a pleasure in extending to the retiring agent, Bro. John Pett, the grateful acknowledgment of the Bishopric for his consistent and devoted work as agent for so many years in the past. Bro. Pett in his work has been faithful in his accounts, and has rendered good and lasting service to the interest of the church and the cause of Christ. We trust that now in his more enfeebled condition, the blessings and Spirit of the Lord may attend him, and that he may be sustained in his work as he shall be able to travel and perform the same.

Trusting that the special blessings that have been promised under the law of Christ may be extended to all saints who conform to and fulfill his law, both in things relating to temporal as well as spiritual duties, I am,

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

Cloth, limp, 25 cents; ten or more, each 20

JUVENILE BOOKS.

THE SILVER THIMBLES.

This is the first volume of the Birth Offering Series, a book for young children at home and for Sunday school juvenile libraries. The story of the Silver Thimbles is from real life. It relates how a little child learned to overcome selfishness and do good; cloth, price 20 cents.

ZION'S HOPE.

A large, four-page Sunday school paper for children; illustrated; edited by Sr. M. Walker. 50 cents per year; in packages of four, five, or six to one address, 40 cents each per year; in packages of seven or more, 35 cents each.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE SAINTS' HARMONY.

Music and Hymns combined.

The Harmony contains all the hymns in the Saints' Harp, also 555 pages of music, comprising about 720 tunes, with full instructions on choir and anthem music. Leather backs, cloth sides, $2.00. With music only, $1.25.

The regular edition in extra binding. Red morocco backs and corners, red cloth sides, with gilt edges entire. Price $2.75.

ABSTRACT OF EVIDENCE, TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

An abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the original church, the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the original church.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

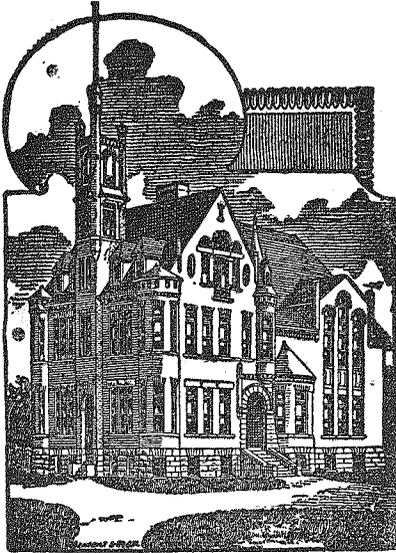

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

Price, bound in law sheep (counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00; in cloth, $2.50.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

PROFESSOR HARNACK'S "CALL FOR RETREAT." (Concluded.)

WE give also an expression of opinion in which an entirely different interpretation is placed on Harnack's utterances. It comes to us in the form of a letter from Professor W. B. Smith, of Tulane University, New Orleans. Professor Smith writes under date of April 20, as follows:—

“Editor of The Literary Digest:—The passage you quote from Dr. Behrends, under date of the 17th inst., would seriously mislead opinion touching the attitude of Harnack, as disclosed in his monumental Geschichte der altchristlichen Literature bis Eusebius. There is nothing rich or strange in his rejection of Baur's doctrines; he is the most brilliant disciple of Ritschl, whose energetic protest against Tübingen has divided German Liberalism against itself since 1857. But he jumps from the frying-pan into the fire who flees from Baur to Harnack, for the Ritschlian is quite as radical in his own way as even Steck or the authors of 'Verisimilia.' Witness the resolution of the Apocalypse by Vircher, likened by Harnack to the 'egg of Columbus.'

“Dr. Behrends very gravely misun-

derstands the unnamed 'Dutch theologian'; this gentleman did not 'confess' 'he had been compelled to believe in the supernatural origin of Christianity'; what he did say, as quoted by Harnack, was this: 'He who accepts the framework in which tradition has set the early Christian documents thereby renounces the attempt to sketch a natural history of Christianity and is compelled to believe in a supernatural origin.' It is evident from the context that this 'holländischer Theologe' does not accept this framework, but is most probably an ultra-radical of the school of Loman and Pierson. In the next sentences Harnack rejects strenuously this contention of the Hollander, insisting that 'thirty to forty years' were quite enough to 'generate the historical precipitate concerning the words and deeds of Jesus,' that the processes were merely more rapid than we are wont to imagine, that in the extraordinary intellectuality and spiritual tension of the epoch lies the key to the mystery, that we must recall the sudden evolution of Protestantism from 1517 to 1567, that Bauer and the Dutch have overlooked the 'universal force of two factors,' 'the enthusiasm and the enormous spiritual wealth of the age.'

“Harnack may or may not be justified in his divergence from Tübingen and Leyden—I express no judgment in the matter—but to represent this divergence as a 'retreat' is to trifle with one's readers.”—Literary Digest, May 1, 1897.

SIGNIFICANCE OF HARNACK'S LATEST UTTERANCES.

THE discussion in religious circles over Professor Harnack's "History of Early Christian Literature," to which extended reference has already been made in our pages, gives no promise of a speedy ending. Writing in The Universalist (Chicago) of the book itself and of the debate which has been going on about it, President Atwood, of the Canton Theological School, says:—

“The incidental question that has attracted our attention is the dependence of all parties on authority. The controversy between Dr. Behrends and Dr. Abbott, for instance, is little more than an array of names. A careful catalogue has just been made up of the numbers, respectively, of 'advanced' and 'conservative' critics in Germany and Holland. It shows a comfortable balance on the conservative side, and the souls of the fearful are reassured. But a headlong follower of the advanced school of critics exclaims, 'Holtzmann and Pfeleiderer and Julicher are on our side'; and mention of these authorities throws the traditionalist into spasms again. Who are these critics that we should pin our faith so firmly to them? Learned men and experts, but quite fallible. They are successors of other men once quoted with equal confidence; they will be succeeded by still other men who also will have their day. The truth is, in our limitless ignorance we must have authorities for our opinions. Harnack is to-day a high authority on the early literature of the church. But any one who reads him will discover that he is often arbitrary and capricious. To follow him blindly, whether in his conservative or in his radical leanings, is to go on a road which will often have to be retraced.”

The Standard (Baptist, Chicago) is also of the opinion that more value and significance have been attached to Professor Harnack's utterances than the case wholly warrants. It quotes a note which Dr. A. J. F. Behrends appends to his recent volume, "The Old Testament under fire," summing up what he deems to be the true significance of Harnack's early dates for some of the New Testament books. Says Dr. Behrends: "Baur is discredited by the most commanding voice of our time. Scholarship comes back to the faith of the nursery. The great have surrendered to the lowly. The foolishness of God has triumphed. The cottages have conquered the universities. The firm foundation of God standeth. For the critical postulates of the school of Wellhausen are identical with those of the school of Baur. They have been discredited in the region of the New-Testament literature, which emerges unharmed from keen dissection."

On this The Standard says:

"We are afraid the distinguished preacher and author above quoted, together with a number of other readers of a part of Harnack's book, has over-estimated its importance as a contribution to apologetic literature. Harnack is not an apologist, nor is it wise to take his opinions as to the general trend of criticism apart from his own conclusions, some of which are anything but conservative or orthodox. We wonder whether the writers who with good reason, welcome his protest against the excesses of some higher critics are mindful of the fact that Harnack himself attributes the fourth gospel and the three epistles of John in their present form to John the Presbyter, not to the apostle? Have they noticed that, while he speaks of 'genuine writings of Paul underlying the Pastoral Epistles, 'he says those epistles in their present form date from 90 to 110; and received additions still later? Are they willing to accept the dates assigned to the Epistle of James (120-140) and to the Second Epistle of Peter (160-175)? If Harnack is to be set up as a champion of tradition and orthodoxy by admiring friends on this side the Atlantic, one would wish to ask him a few simple questions to make sure he would not speak out in meeting at the wrong time and spoil everything."

Speaking in an editorial note of the admitted conclusions of Harnack's work, The Churchman (New York) says:—

"It may not display a scientific temper of mind, but it is a splendid tribute to Harnack's accuracy of methods, that on all sides men accept the general conclusion arrived at in his latest work before having examined his reasoning. Of course many of those interested have held this same conclusion under the authority of tradition without regard for what criticism might say, but now, without a detailed knowledge of his argument, they feel assured that it is the conclusion of criticism, simply because Harnack says so. The preface of a book is naturally its key. And before the volume itself is accessible to English readers the notable conclusion registered in the much-quoted preface to Harnack's work on the chronology of early Christian literature informs the theological world of his ripest thought and indicates the contents of his book. Epoch-making achievements are rare, but Sanday would seem to be speaking sober truth in ascribing to his brilliant German contemporary the distinction of opening a new era in New-Testament study."—Literary Digest.

THE CANAL OF JOSEPH.

How many of the engineering works of the nineteenth century will there be in existence in the year 6000? Very few, we fear, and still less those that will continue in that far-off age to serve a useful purpose. Yet there is, at least, one great undertaking conceived and executed by an engineer which during the space of four thousand years has never ceased its office, on which the life of a fertile province absolutely depends to-day. We refer to the Bahr Joussuf—the canal of Joseph—built, according to tradition, by the son of Jacob, and which constitutes not the least of the many blessings he conferred on Egypt during the years of his prosperous rule. This canal took its rise from the Nile at Asiut, and ran almost parallel with it for nearly two hundred and fifty miles, creeping along under the western cliffs of the Nile valley, with many a bend and winding, until at length it gained an eminence, as compared with the river bed, which enabled it to turn westward through a narrow pass and enter a district which was otherwise shut off from the fertilizing floods on which all vegetation in Egypt depends. The northern end stood seventeen feet above low Nile, while at the southern end it was at an equal elevation with the river. Though this cut ran a perennial stream, which watered a province named the Fayoum, endowing it with fertility and supporting a large population. In the time of the annual flood a great part of the canal was under water, and then the river's current would rush in a more direct course into the pass, carrying with it the rich silt which takes the place of manure and keeps the soil in a constant state of productiveness. All this, with the exception of the tradition that Joseph built it, can be verified to-day, and it is not mere supposition or rumor. Until eight years ago it was firmly believed that the design has always been limited to an irrigation scheme, larger, no doubt, than that now in operation, as shown by the traces of abandoned canals, and by the slow aggregation of waste water which had accumulated in the Birket el Querum, but still essentially the same in character. Many accounts have been written by Greek and Roman historians, such as Herodotus, Strabo, Mutianus and Pliny, and repeated in monkish legends, or portrayed in the maps of the middle ages, which agreed with the folk lore of the district. These tales explained that the canal dug by the ancient Israelite served to carry the surplus waters of the Nile into an extensive lake lying south of the Fayoum, and so large that it not only modified the climate, tempering the arid winds of the desert and converting them into the balmy airs which nourish the vines and the olives into a fullness and fragrance unknown in any part of the country, but also added to the food supply of the land such immense quantities of fish that the royal prerogative of the right of piscary at the great weir was valued at £250,000 annually. This lake was said to be 450 miles round, and to be navigated by a fleet of vessels, and the whole circumference was the scene of industry and prosperity.—Engineering.

Professor Von Voit, of Munich, Germany, has investigated the nutritive value of extracts of meat, and now announces as the result of his researches that such extracts have very little nutritive value, if any, and that their action is almost entirely a stimulating one, being due to their contents of alkaloids, such as creatine and creatinine.—Prometheus.

President William R. Harper, of the University of Chicago, thinks that teachers of Sunday schools stand in as much need of training as other teachers, and that much of the present incompetent teaching does positive harm. Having been chosen superintendent of the Hyde Park Baptist church school, he will try to put his ideas into practice. His scheme includes an experimental school and a normal course, the latter to comprise a study of methods of teaching and to be tested in the experimental school.—Lit. Dig., June 12.

SURE ENOUGH.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?

THE United States, as a whole, is blessed above all other nations in its great fertility of soil, vast mineral resources of all kinds, that are easy of access, and no nation on the face of the globe has as much business push and capacity according to the number of its inhabitants.

The church and schoolhouse were the foundation stones upon which this nation was founded. The soil and mines have yielded far more than enough to supply the liberal demands of our citizens. Our schools have turned out some of the greatest men of the age, and science and inventive genius have reached their greatest height upon American soil. Religious sentiment has pervaded the very atmosphere. Ministers of the gospel have followed the earliest frontier settlements and planted the religion of Jesus Christ. Church spires point heavenward from every city, village, and hamlet. But notwithstanding these great advantages, financially, we have been gravitating downward for several years. Manufacturers and laborers, mercantile men and mechanics are, with few exceptions, bordering upon financial despair, though they are still clinging to the tantalizing delusion of the prosperity that was to come with the election of McKinley.

The churches, religiously and financially, are upon the verge of bankruptcy; missionary work is being limited and restricted, salaries are being cut down, and the spiritual life and influence of the church are on the decline. God evidently is hiding his face and teaching this nation that the way of the transgressor is hard, and that the only road to prosperity is a cheerful and willing obedience to God's laws.

The history of the race reveals the fact that whenever a nation has turned its back upon God and continued to disregard his injunctions, that it has invariably by a slow process been ground to pieces and swept from the face of the earth.

As a nation the people are guilty of peopling hell with the victims of the licensed saloon, and while our public coffers are filled with the silver and gold received for license, our hands are reeking with the blood of millions of our citizens who have been sent down into untimely and dishonored graves. As a nation we still refuse to put away this great sin.

The subtle influence of the saloon has corrupted and bribed the church, which to-day is in complicity with the liquor traffic to such an extent that it controls, in a large measure, the policy of the church, and because of this fact the church is shorn of its power.

Dr. Pierson, editor of the Missionary Review of the World, says:—

"I believe the Holy Spirit is withdrawing from the church of God as a body. There is a supreme crisis in foreign missions. It is the most alarming that has confronted the church in the last century. Surely the situation is desperate when is considered the difficulty of getting money, or even to get audiences to listen to missionary appeal."

D. L. Moody says:—

"A dead cold has come over the church."

Bishop Fowler, the Demosthenes of Methodism, says:—

"When a church reaches a state where she cannot furnish missionaries, she has nothing worth propagating."

Commenting upon Dr. Pierson he says:—

"This deadness rests upon all the great churches. Their missionary funds are exhausted and they are deeply in debt." But the most fallacious reason for this state of affairs is given by Dr. Pierson when he says:—

"It is the baneful, the appalling spirit of evolution and science. The attention of the civilized world has been turned aside by a whirlwind of science and evolution."

"Bosh, doctor, bosh. That is not the seat of the disease, at all. It is because the church has gone after strange gods."

Dr. Crafts, of the National Reform Bureau, says:—

"Perhaps there has been moral progress in the world at large since 1867, but it would be hard to prove moral progress in the United States since that date. The consumption of liquor, the divorces, and murders have multiplied three times as fast as the population."

Rev. J. G. Hogan, of Forest City, Pennsylvania, says:—

"It is not science and evolution so much as it is saloons and devolution—a profane attempt to sanctify some political and social sins, and it is time that Dr. Pierson and the pious political sinners in the pulpits and the pews of this country were made to understand that the holy Spirit can work through a saloon or a brothel just as well as he can through a church that consents to them."

Why should the world or even the church membership be interested in missions when this professedly Christian nation is sending to the heathen countries continually, liquor enough to send them all to hell? Why should the world at large be interested in the church when it is responsible for the existence of the saloon, and when it even persecutes its members and ministers for denouncing this infernal traffic. The action of the church upon this issue is such that the world wants nothing to do with its hypocrisy. No man, no party, and no church can bring prosperity, financially or religiously, until it recognizes God in its actions and life.—Oshkosh Signal.

The foregoing was handed us by Bro. James Campbell, of Geneva, Wisconsin, during our late visit to East Delevan, Wisconsin, conference.

This apparent indictment against the dominant Protestant churches is terrible, and seems to justify the statement made by the angel, "None of them is right."

Unless there is a direct and radical change in the methods of the churches, to say nothing about their doctrines, the decay suggested by Dr. Pierson, and attributed by Bishop Fowler to be a "deadness" which rests upon all the great churches, must continue until even the "form of godliness" will be lost; and the churches will have "gone after strange gods" sure enough.

While we concede to the awful-correctness of the charge by Rev. J. G. Hogan that it is the saloon and "devolution" (what a word!) that is sapping the vitality of the churches, and give these two elements their full value in the deterioration of the religious movements among the churches, we cannot escape the conviction that if the churches would but turn to and accept the doctrines of the "man Jesus who is called the Christ," the latter element, "devolution," would be eliminated from the list of destructive forces, and the saloons would follow, they being but one of the working tools of the master of "devolution."

The saints ought to be much encouraged in reading the foregoing by the thought that the Reorganized Church has been from the beginning the open and avowed advocate of the saving power of the doctrines of Christ, and an equally open and avowed foe to the liquor traffic. There has been no halfway, hesitating, or vacillating compromise with the evil; but a steady, persistent, and unflinching opposition all along the line, so far as the church is concerned, based upon the statement of the Savior, "No drunkard hath eternal life abiding in him." To be drunken is to be lost, to be lost is to be damned; and we can neither afford to be damned ourselves, or to suffer others to be damned because we fear to denounce evil.

The charge of these men whether it be that the church favors the saloon and "devilution," or has gone after strange gods, does not lie against us. Let us see to it that it never can.

"HE SEES THINGS."

"LOTS" of people are seeing visions and assuming prophetic roles in these days; so many indeed that we are unable to place on record all reported to us. However, here is another, the Rev. Andrew Jones, a colored minister, who predicts woe and disaster upon the city of Chicago in particular, and upon the United States entire. We are not informed further than what appears in his present statement, concerning his predictions of past calamities. We take the account from the Chicago Blade of May 8:—

"A great catastrophe is hovering over this city, and unless the people of Chicago repent of their sins a terrible calamity will befall the city in the near future."

These words were uttered by Rev. Andrew Jones, the colored evangelist, and, as he claims, the especially appointed prophet of God. He was preaching in the Providence Baptist Church on the west side. Since 1884 Prophet Jones has been predicting the wrath of the Almighty. He claims to have predicted the Johnstown flood, the earthquakes in New York and Charleston, and the St. Louis tornado. To all of these cities he went immediately after his vision and spent some days in each place exhorting the people to flee from the wrath to come.

"I can't just tell the natures of the calamity that is coming to Chicago," he said, "but it will be something that will hurl the tall buildings to the ground. In a vision I have seen the structures tumbling and the dead and dying lying in the streets. It may be an earthquake or a tornado that is coming, but whatever it is it will be something awful. I cannot set the time definitely, but it is in the near future, if the people here do not renounce their unholy ways.

"I have been appointed the prophet of God. He comes to me and speaks with me, telling me the name of the city upon which his wrath will be visited and commanding me to go forth and urge the people to repent. These revelations are according to the second chapter of Acts, 17th verse: 'It shall come to pass that in the last days that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh and sons and daughters shall prophesy and old men shall dream dreams.'"

Prophet Jones was born in Cumberland county, Virginia, July 18, 1854. He began preaching in May, 1883. Though he had never had the slightest education, he says God gave him the power to read the Bible.

"My first visions," he said, "was on April 16, 1884. On that day I saw New York shaking and staggering and I predicted an earthquake. It came August 10 of the same year. The earthquake at Charleston I foretold six months and eighteen days before it occurred.

"In 1884 I walked four times from Pittsburg to Johnstown to tell the people of a great flood that was coming upon them. It came in 1889. In 1893 I was in Cincinnati. One night in my sleep I saw a great storm strike St. Louis. I saw the buildings torn to pieces and the dead lying in the streets. I went there in April, and again in December, and told them of the coming calamity. They heeded not my warning and the storm came.

"God's patience with the people of this country is exhausted and if they do not mend their ways they will be swept from the earth. The famine which was put upon the Egyptians will be visited upon the United States in 1905. The most of the inhabitants will die. But again I warn Chicago. The buildings will fall and the dead lie in rows like the yellow grain after the reaper's sickle."

THE saints in the Northwest Kansas district have been successful in securing at Minersville the first church building to be dedicated to the worship of the Lord in the district.

Through the kindness of Sr. William Williams, and her husband, they donated a building and plat of ground on which it stands, to the church, quite large enough for the purposes of the saints at Minersville and its vicinity.

At the request of Bro. Henry Hart, the president of the district, Brn. Joseph and Alexander H. Smith visited the district and were present and assisted in the dedication services.

The editor arrived at Concordia, Cloud County, the evening of Friday, the 11th, and was made the guest of Mr. Gomer T. Davies, whose wife is the sister of Bro. L. W. Powell, of Temple, Ohio, and a member of the church. Mr. Davies is the publisher of the Kansan, a paper devoted to the interests of Kansas and the West generally, published at Concordia, and is among the leading business and political men of the county. He treated the editor and preacher very courteously, and on the morning of the 12th took his team and carried us over to Minersville, eight miles north of Concordia, where the dedication services were to be held. The day was a typical one in June, the country beautiful to look at, the ride enjoyable; and, as a consequence, when we greeted our brother and coworker, A. H. Smith, Brn. A. Hart, Arthur Smith, William Landers, and a lot of others, men and women from all over the district, at the gospel tent, we were in good mood, at peace with ourselves and all men; and so Editor Davies left us to return to his daily task, we to take up the roles prescribed for us by President Hart and required by the demands of the occasion.

The story of the dedication will likely be told by some one of the local force, so we are contented with stating that, so far as the editor can judge, all passed off pleasantly, the preachers enjoyed the spirit and the occasion; the saints were pleased, edified, and strengthened, while the Master was served and the Father honored in sobriety, meekness, humility and the comfort of the Holy Ghost.

The house of Mr. and Sr. Williams was the local center, the hospitalities were dispensed under the care and management of Bro. William and Sr. Ella Landers, of Greenleaf, and all were duly cared for.

Several meetings were held, the preaching being done by the brothers Alexander and Joseph Smith. The sacrament was administered Sunday afternoon and the testimony meeting after was pleasant and spirited and enjoyed by all.

FIRST IN THE NORTHWEST KANSAS DISTRICT.

ON Sunday, June 13th just passed, there was a notable gathering of the clans from Deloit, Goshen, Scandia, Minneapolis, Broughton, Greenleaf, Concordia, Hollis, and Minersville, Kansas, branches, at the hamlet of Minersville, where, at eleven a. m. a church building, the gift of Sr. Williams and her husband, and the donations of the few scattered and poor saints in the district for repairs and preparations, was dedicated, with due observance of time and ceremony.

The services were in charge of Elder Henry Hart, of Broughton, Kansas, president of the district; the sermon was by President Joseph Smith, and the prayer of dedication by President Alexander H. Smith, of Lamoni.

It was a decided success.

The brethren had pitched the district tent near the building, and services were held in it, the house itself being too small to hold the large crowd in attendance.

Two were baptized and confirmed at Lamoni, June 5 and 6; which incident is confirmatory of the way in which the spirit of inquiry commends the gospel to those seeking truth. One was a young man raised and living near to Lamoni, an earnest, sober-minded man, trying to begin life in a correct way. He heard and obeyed, and publicly took his place with us as a disciple. The other is a man past middle life, an extensive traveler; who, in visiting Los Angeles, California, on his return to the United States from a visit and sojourn in Guatamala, heard Brn. A. C. Barmore and Robert J. Parker, and others of the faith there, and came to Lamoni to join the church at headquarters. He is much pleased with the truth.

THE INDIAN EARTHQUAKE.

CALCUTTA, June 15.—Telegrams with earthquake news, the echoes of the subterranean disturbance of Saturday last, are pouring in from every station north of Madras. The heavy rains of the last two days are increasing the damage done. Thousands of poor Europeans and Prussians are homeless and are living in the open air.

Calcutta, June 16.—Further reports of the destruction caused by the earthquake of last Saturday show that great damage was done at Dacca, Jamalpur, and Murshidabad. At the latter place the Nawab had a miraculous escape.

Great injury has been done to the plantations of Assam, Cachar, and Duaro. A number of factories and machine houses have been wrecked at the three places named. At Krishnagar, Myendingh, and Silkot all the courts and treasuries have been demolished.

Terrible reports are coming in from Assam. At Shilong everything has been leveled to the ground. There have been many deaths in the public offices, in the military lines, and in the bazaar.

The official records have been buried at Gauhati, where the roads are now crossed by wide chasms. The railroad has vanished in that vicinity, and at Coalpara a tidal wave has destroyed the bazaar and all the other buildings and the adjacent country is covered with fissures which are spurting mud and sand.

Numbers of buildings have been destroyed at Dhubri, where the river bank has subsided, flooding the country and ruining the crops.

There has been heavy loss of life at Coalpara and Dhubri.

Several of the shaken districts have not been heard from, but isolated roads have been broken up by fissures, bridges have been destroyed, and the telegraph lines have been broken down almost throughout Assam.

WE were also lately visited by Dr. P. P. Starke, of Richmond, Virginia, who is seeking the truth; and who has been sedulously securing information concerning the church. We gave the Doctor all the opportunity for investigation that we could; and after staying with us over Sunday, June 5, he returned to his home, via Cincinnati, Ohio. We have hope that the result of his inquiry will be to lead him into the fold with us.

We believe in affording to those inquiring the fullest opportunity for investigation, without being over anxious about the result, whether favorable or unfavorable to our claims. The issue of every man's inquiry and action is between himself and his Lord; we can neither make, mar, nor change the verdict the Lord may pass upon such conviction and action as follow inquiry and investigation; every man standing or falling for himself. Hence while we may earnestly wish every inquirer to find the truth to be as we have found it, we feel it to be a duty to give every facility for inquiry and leave the result with the Master.

HERESY, IS IT?

ONE Rev. George E. Cunningham, of Kirksville, Missouri, a pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church is in trouble among his brethren, being charged with being guilty of heresy. The following are the two specifications upon which he will answer, and likely be deposed from the pulpit, if not expelled from the church.

Specification 1. The said George E. Cunningham holds that "the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are not the only and sufficient rule, both of our faith and practice." At a district conference of the Kirksville district, M. E. Church, held in Lancaster, Missouri, January 26-28, 1897, the said Cunningham did assert and maintain the following:—

"The theory that the Bible, as we have it, is an infallible and final authority in religion has already made it a dead book to multitudes of people." And, again, "But we have evidences of a continuous revelation in the world to-day." "Human souls are the word of God, and always have been." "It (the Bible) is not a chart to guide men to some world removed from ours; it is not a promise to bless in some other state of existence."

Specification No. 2. He said: "The nature and laws of the human spirit are just the same as the nature and laws of the Holy Spirit, with the exception that in the human these are an unfolding life, and the Divine is revealed in proportion to the capacity and development of the human."

BARGAINS IN FLEXIBLE BIBLES.

THE Herald Office has arranged to handle a special line of bargains in Sunday School Teachers' and Ministers' Bibles, by which strictly first-class editions are offered at greatly reduced prices, as follows:—

"The Self-Pronouncing Sunday School Teachers' Bible," the same as the "Oxford Bible," with "helps" and maps, in good large print, bourgeois type, with marginal references; printed on thin paper, flexible binding; size 8½x6¼ mailed postpaid at $2.00 per copy.

"The Comprehensive Teachers' Bible"—the Bagster Bible—with new and revised helps to Bible study, new concordance, and an indexed Bible atlas, new maps to 1896. Flexible binding, thin tinted paper, minion type, size 8½x6 mailed postpaid at $1.50.

These Bibles are marvels of cheapness in price, but are excellent in quality of workmanship in binding, etc. They are issued by leading publishing houses and may be relied upon.

Address orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

BISHOP CHENEY, of Chicago, who withdrew from the General Council of the Reformed Episcopal Church in session at New York, because of the action of the council in what is now called the "vestment contest," or the difference as to church "millinery," is thus quoted in an interview published in the Times Herald of June 18:—

I wish it to be understood that I favor no particular garment or church vestment, but I am opposed to any particular garment or robe being prescribed. If we are restricted in what we shall wear we shall be told what we must sing, or eat, for instance.

I was opposed to any restriction being put upon our Christian church liberty. Dr. Ashurst, a layman of Philadelphia, precipitated the difficulty by offering a resolution prescribing a black robe, and that only, as the clerical dress for church services. The white surplice and black scarf were decried as Roman Catholic, and the bishop's robes, which I only wear in the discharge of some episcopal office were denounced. I contended only for the fullest liberty in choice of vestments.

My resignation of certain chairmanships of committees and trusteeships, the gifts of the General Council, does not mean separation from the church. There is no question of secession involved. The synod of Chicago, which backed me in the position I took of fullest liberty, will not separate from the church, but the result may be that the synod may feel indifferent about representation in the General Council in the future, or when it meets three years hence.

Thus another theological storm center is generated, and which may result in permanent separation as an "independent" communion. Modern theology is at sea without chart, compass, or permanent reliable steering gear. It is in "commotion" with the general elements and tossing to and fro. Note the passing changes and the signification of them in the developments of the times.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. E. A. PAYNE, Maxwell, Nebraska, June 9:—

We are still alive in the work, and striving to teach the gospel to all that will listen. We have a nice Sabbath school at half past ten, and prayer meeting at eight in the evening. Bro. Porter did a good work here last spring, and we are looking for him soon again. I wish some would send me old Heralds, Ensigns, and Autumn Leaves, as there are so many traveling past, and I have a good chance to scatter the good seed, by sending out the church publications. My desire is to do all the good I can; yes, to spend every moment of my life in the service of God. I desire the prayers of the saints that I may be faithful.

Writing of the general attitude of affairs in Kansas, Bro. William Cairns, of Scranton, says:—

We have a brother Davis here preaching, but his hearers are few. Talk as they may, there is a growing spirit of indifference to all things of a religious nature.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly, Shawnee, Texas, June 8:—

I came here the 2d of May. Have been quite busy. Four were baptized last Sunday, and others are near. Many are becoming interested, and the work is opening up gradually, even beyond my expectations. Prejudice that has been so stubborn in this country is giving away, and the call for preaching more than can be filled. I go from here to Bagwell this week. More Anon.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, Cherokee, Iowa, June 17:—

For the past ten days I have been assisting Bro. W. W. Whiting in tabernacle meetings in this city. Attendance and interest quite good; the saints in this locality are alive to both the temporal and spiritual interests of the church. Brn. N. V. Sheldon and A. R. Crippen occupy in the neighboring school-houses on Sundays.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

OCCASIONALLY the editors receive letters complaining of the character of missionary or local work being done, also those of a personal character. The HERALD does not publish such complaints. Those desiring to enter complaints should do so formally to the missionary in charge or others having jurisdiction.

Brn. Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley, returned home on Tuesday the 15th, Brn. Smith from Kansas, Bro. Kelley from Illinois. Bro. A. H. Smith departed again on the 17th for the Minnesota reunion; and Bro. Kelley on the 18th, to attend the Southern Nebraska district conference at Wilber.

Bro. J. W. Whitley, of Douglas County, Washington, is anxious to have the elders visit him and preach the word to the people who have received what he has taught them and wish to learn the truth more perfectly. His post office is Toqua. He lives on the south side of the Columbia River, eight miles below Bridgeport. He asks prayers of saints and help from elders in the field to aid him in the cause. Perhaps Bro. Holt or Bro. Chase can respond.

The Xenia, Illinois, Press, of June 10, has two items advertising the conference of the Southern Illinois district. Good. As public interest wanes in the faiths of the fathers of Protestantism (as affirmed by many ministers themselves), we hope the truth will not escape the attention of the people, now that it has been vindicated and is receiving more public notice.

Bro. J. C. Foss, who has been confined to his bed at Rockland, Maine, with bilious fever, for the past twenty days, wrote June 5 that he is improving slowly. He hopes to be up in a few days and go to Ohio, his field of labor.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith reports that Bro. M. H. Forscutt, who had been improving in health, had fallen down an unlighted cellar stairway, carelessly left open, and had sustained severe injuries. He was improving as rapidly as could be expected. Letter dated Nebraska City, June 13.

Bro. E. DeLong sends us a letter received from a gentleman at Grayling, Michigan, who refers to former preaching some years ago by Bro. D., and asks that he return in behalf of a sick lady to administer to her and preach the gospel. The writer offers to pay the minister's expenses. Bro. D. will go and report results.

Bro. C. Christen commends the labors of Brn. William Woodhead and Peter Anderson, at Barnard, Missouri, of late. He sends a local paper containing a favorable notice of a temperance effort by Bro. Woodhead.

Sr. Ida Stewart, of Agricultural College, Mississippi, asks the address of Bishop John F. Hurst of the M. E. Church. Who can furnish her with it?

Bro. Green Cloyd, an aged and faithful colored brother living at Osceola, Iowa, writes that the Lord blesses the few who hold their Sunday meetings at that place.

Sr. Addie David, wrote from Lotus, California, in March, relating dreams received by her in testimony concerning the work and the church, which were sufficient to satisfy her and fortify her against being led to accept the Utah philosophy, urged upon her attention by her sister and others. We have not room for the dreams, and as they were to her rather than to others, we could more readily refrain from publishing them. The Lord seems to still answer the prayers of the inquiring.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., secured insertion of a lengthy article defensive of the faith in contrast to Utah Mormonism, in the Versailles, Indiana, Republican, of late date. It will doubtless reach many.

Bro. C. N. Townsend of South Tacoma, Washington, writes that he is anxious that an elder come to that place. He says he has a room all fitted for church, can be had for $1 per month, and a good many anxious to hear. Will the missionary in charge please make note of the request.

We have received minutes of the reunion of Central Nebraska district at Inman, Nebraska, which opened June 3. A good time was had all around, in preaching, Sunday school work, social enjoyment, etc. We omit publication of regular reunion minutes because of crowding demands upon our space.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., wrote from Osgood, Indiana, June 9; he had visited and labored at Louisville, Kentucky, where he found a working interest. He had labored also in New Albany, Indiana. He found some things of a discouraging character in the Southern Indiana field, also some encouraging features. Those who desired to take up the work in Louisville should address J. T. Scott, No. 19 Cotton Avenue, New Albany, Indiana.

A Lamoni brother writes for the HERALD, suggesting that the ministry address the saints more in the line of encouragement by picturing or describing conditions to be realized by the fulfillment of promises made and to be realized; that hopeful anticipation is preferable to much admonition, etc. We note the suggestion, not having space for the letter. It is probable that the instruction to speak as moved "by the Holy Spirit," is the rule by which the ministry are seeking to be governed.

Late Cuban news contains reports of signal victories by the Cubans over the Spanish soldiers. The general trend of press dispatches is that the patriots are pressing the Spanish troops in the provinces, also in close proximity to Havana. Madrid advices state that with the exception of military and office-holding classes and the aristocracy, the Spanish people are weary of the Cuban conflict and its resultant taxation, and would welcome an honorable cessation of hostilities by intervention of the United States. President McKinley's policy is said to be one of firm insistence that Spain accept American intervention on terms yet to be agreed upon, and that the new minister to Spain, Stewart Woodford, of New York has been chosen to initiate diplomatic overtures with that end in view.

The ambassadors of the powers have presented the scheme drawn up by the military attachés of the embassies. It gives to Turkey the mountain crests on the frontiers of Thessaly, but the Turks are not allowed to retain any of the villages of Thessaly. The Turkish foreign minister has submitted it to the Sultan and his cabinet. The Turks are fortifying positions on neutral ground between them and the Greeks.

Results of the late election to the States General of the Netherlands are strongly in favor of the Liberals against the Catholics. The election was held under the reform act of 1896, which confers the franchise on all male Dutch citizens not under twenty-five years of age.

A heavy cyclone swept over Arequipa, Peru, June 6, but no serious damage was done.

A popular demonstration organized by army officers, was held at Brussels, June 13, with a view to reorganizing the Belgian army.

Cuban successes too numerous to report in detail are reported from the seat of war. Two Spanish battalions have refused to accept paper money from the government. Famine is now being felt in Havana, under the pressure of war conditions. General Rivera, captured by the Spaniards, has been sentenced to death. General Gomez has declined to treat with General Weyler, the Spanish commander.

For the first time in centuries Italian cardinals are in the minority in the sacred college and correspondents point out the possibility of the election of an American pope. It is supposed however, that Pope Leo will provide for the emergency by the creation of other Italian cardinals.

The north of England and Scotland were swept by a severe storm June 16. Much damage to shipping, crops, and other property.

At Alguiza, Cuba, a town of 3,000 souls, 178 persons died in May last, from hunger and destitution.

Cuban generals say that recognition of Cuban belligerency by the United States is all that is necessary to insure Cuban's freedom; that intervention by the United States is therefore unnecessary.

A treaty providing for the annexation of Hawaii to the United States, negotiated and signed by representatives of the two governments, and favored by President McKinley, awaits ratification or rejection by the United States Senate. Action will not be taken for some time yet.

Waterspout and heavy hail destroyed crops near Humboldt, Illinois, June 15.

A peculiar and severe electric storm prevailed in Chicago during the evening of June 16. Electric plants, lines, and appliances became centers of danger by the vividness and strength of long continued lightning flashes. One person was killed, a number injured, and property destroyed.

Recent seismic disturbances in Northern Wyoming have left chasms a quarter of a mile in width and of great depth.

June 17.—Earthquake shocks were felt at Mexico City, and in all Southern Mexico from Acapulco to Vera Cruz; both vertical and horizontal shocks are reported. Advices from Tehuantepec indicate a continuation of the shocks; the inhabitants who have not fled are living in tents in the open air.

Calcutta, June 18.—Almost the whole of the Province of Assam has been devastated by the earthquake. The ruin is appalling. The courts, treasuries, jail, and hospitals have collapsed. The loss of food supplies is enormous. The crops are mostly ruined and great scarcity of food is expected. All traffic is difficult, as numbers of the roads have been completely demolished. Earthquake shocks still continue to be felt in the Province of Assam and much alarm is felt, especially as renewed shocks have been reported from various places in Bengal. Heavy rains are immensely increasing the damage.

It is reported that representatives of the governments of Guatemala and Costa Rica have signed the treaty which makes them a part of the Greater Republic of Central America. These two governments were the last to come into the union. Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua have been in the confederation some time. Ex-President Cleveland recognized the confederation last December.

London advices state that Queen Victoria is almost blind and that her infirmity will result in a regency under the Prince of Wales, or that she will abdicate in his favor, after the coming jubilee celebration of her sixty years' reign. The report concerning her blindness is both repeated and denied.

A storm of unusual severity, partaking of the character of a cyclone or tornado, according to reports from some places, swept over half a dozen States on Thursday night and Friday morning. Its general direction was from points in Nebraska, Iowa, and Kansas eastward, across Illinois and two-thirds of Indiana, taking in Louisville and the northern part of Kentucky. The property damage was large in the aggregate, Louisville being the greatest sufferer perhaps. Four persons were killed and six injured at Lincoln, Illinois. Much property was swept away at other points. The lightning was unusually vivid and severe.

Spanish correspondence states that a succession of cyclones and fierce hailstorms have destroyed the crops and vineyards in the Province of Valladolid and Guadalupe. In the district of New Castle, houses have been flooded, hundreds of cattle drowned, and a number of lives lost.

On June 18 the city of Paris, France, was visited by a cyclone which caused serious damage. Twelve persons were killed and fifty injured. Factories and dwellings were leveled to the ground. Near by towns also suffered severely. A cloudburst in Central France resulted in loss of life and property. On the same date the Province of Sagovia, Spain, was swept by hailstorms and floods. Crops were ruined, houses flooded, and cattle and goods carried away. The people are panic stricken.

The severest shock of earthquake experienced for many years prevailed throughout the State of California, June 20. At Hollister every brick building suffered, and in the courthouse the walls and ceilings lost most of their plastering. Other damage is reported. Gilroy and other places report much damage to buildings and other property.

The celebration of the diamond jubilee of Queen Victoria began at London and throughout the United Kingdom, on June 20.

Advices from Simla, India, June 19, state that over 6,000 lives have been lost by the earthquake disturbances which have recently visited the province of Assam.

OAXACA, Mexico, June 20.—There are reports of a continuing earthquake at Tehautepec. Every house is destroyed and 15,000 people are living in tents.

GOD GIVE US MEN.

"Men whom the lust of office cannot kill;
Men whom the spoils of office will not buy;
Men who have opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie."

ROCK ISLAND, Ill.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—It is with a sad heart that I note the few letters in the Home Column of late. Why is this? Have our dear sisters lost the interest or love they once had? I hope not. Has God ceased to bless them? I don't think he has. My prayer is that they may embrace these privileges of writing spiritual letters, that the weaker ones of the flock may be strengthened; for I know, like myself, many of them watch with anxious eyes for the Herald each week. I can say that this gospel is dearer to me than life, and I love it better each day. Like a jewel, the more we study it the more brilliant it appears. God has blessed us as a family more times than I can mention, for which I praise his name, and I know if we live lives becoming saints he will continue to bless us and answer our prayers. When we pray it should not be a formal kind of prayer; God will not hear that prayer; and when our prayers receive no answer, we blame him, and we ourselves are to blame. We should pray having faith in God, as though we wanted him to hear us.

I remember hearing a story of an old woman who read in the good old book that if we have faith as a grain of mustard seed we could command that mountains be removed, and it should be done. She prayed that the hill at her back door might be removed. When she came and looked, there was the hill. She said, "Just as I had expected;" and according to her faith it had been done. We should have faith that God will hear and answer our prayers; and I know if we ask according to the mind of the spirit that he will. My heart is made to rejoice when I read the many reports of the Sunday schools. I thank God to see the older ones take so much interest in the young; for soon those who have grown silver-haired in the service of the Master will be called home to rest, and the grand work will rest on the shoulders of our children; and if they have not been taught to love and reverence their Creator, and show a willingness to serve him, I think the condemnation will be upon our heads. I would like to have some one, or more, write their thoughts on sending our children to sectarian Sunday schools. I have three little ones who attend other Sunday schools, as we have not one of our own here. I often ask myself, "Am I doing right in letting them go," for we are told that we "should not bid them Godspeed." But we cannot send them without giving them a penny or five cents each Sunday, and that seems like bidding them Godspeed.

I ask the sisters to pray for us in this part of the vineyard, that the time may come when God will stretch forth his arm in love, and gather many into his fold in this place. Let us ever strive to know God's will and live to all his commandments, so that we may reach that higher plane to which it is the privilege of the children of God to attain. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion.

Your sister,

MARY STRANG.

GARLAND, Ala.

Dear Sisters:—This morning my mind is led out to you. I have enjoyed your letters so full of love, sympathy, and good advice, and I thought a few words from my pen might not be out of place.

Let me ask, mothers, Are you doing your whole duty toward your children? Are you preparing your children to make good neighbors, to be friends, and have friends? Are you raising them to make good husbands and wives? I sometimes view the world over in my own mind, and think of what I have heard and seen; it seems that many children lack reverence for age, for their fathers and their mothers, their brothers, sisters, schoolmates, and friends; and most of all, they lack reverence for the church and their Creator.

Can it be that we mothers are to blame? yes; the blame must rest largely upon us. Fathers; we need your assistance in helping to train our children. That a purer and better generation may grow up. The minds of both parents should be interested in training the children. Some will say, "I never have time to spend with the children." God pity the children of such parents! For what purpose were children given into their care? Many fathers take time to go to town and spend half the day talking of things of little benefit to them, while they can never have time to spend in teaching one of their children a Sunday school lesson. Sometimes we mothers will take time to ruffle and puff our little ones' clothes, and scrub the floor from once to twice a week, or oftener; but our little ones must be put off and neglected, because we have not time. Now dear mothers, let us put our shoulders to the wheel, and try to teach our children the way of truth and righteousness. Let us take time since this is our first duty.

Love to all, and success to the Home Column.
SISTER DORA.

THURMAN.

Dear Sister Frances:—I am not one of the isolated ones. We have a nice edifice to worship in and a membership of about one hundred and seventy-five. We have a good Sunday school, teachers, and local preachers. Henry Kemp is district president. I take Saints' Herald, Ensign, and many of our church books. I read, study, and pray; and I know there is no faith like our faith nor any true but it. I was a member of the Christian Church for thirty years. I was honest; and as enthusiastic as I am now, but was starving for spiritual food. I had read the Bible, and it seemed no one was right. Before I was a member of the Christian Church I made a vow that if ever I saw a people that was nearer to the ways of God and his Son, that I would turn my back on all that I loved; for I DID LOVE the membership. But time went on, and I heard many speakers preach, smart men people called them, too. I heard sermons by the saints and still I could not see. I told Bro. A. J. Cato, so he explained all he could, and I told him I was honest, but I could not see. He said he hoped the time would come when I would see; but when I did, it was through fervent prayer to best of Fathers, who made it known to me the saints were right, and this why I am a Latter Day Saint.

I have been united with the saints nine years. I have never regretted the step taken, nor ever can express the joy and sweet and silent delight to know that the most High has lead me aright! I feel that I am one who lets the cares of this world take up the precious God-given time; but my prayers are for all the saints; my sympathy goes out for all the saints. I am alone in the church, as far as relatives are concerned, as I know of none who are members. I ask the prayers of the saints, that God may be good to them, and lead them aright, that we may live in union and work in union.

RICHLAND, Iowa, June 14.

Editors Herald:—The Des Moines district conference held here the 12th and 13th instant was quite well attended, notwithstanding the busy season. Business was transacted in splendid good feeling, and a joyful time was had. One lady sixty-six years of age was baptized, and Bro. C. B. Brown, of Oskaloosa, was ordained to the office of priest. The social service of Sunday forenoon was marked with great spiritual power, and great joy in the gospel was received by the saints. We were reminded of similar sessions at the late General Conference. Bro. W. C. Nirk was sustained district president and Bishop's agent for another year, and Bro. W. Johnson secretary. The General Conference appointees to the district were all present and are alive to the interests of the work, or mostly so at least. Preaching was spiritual, the services well attended.

The district tent will go to Perry, Dallas County, from here next week, and from there to Oskaloosa, then on as may be arranged. Will the saints of the district remember the "tent fund" with their mites occasionally? Some incidental expenses must be met; they cannot be met without collateral. Guess the warm season is here in all its glowing glory, judging from the way we get "warmed up" to the "subject." Notwithstanding some difficulties existing in this district, the saints are courageous and very hopeful. All pray for us.

Your fellow servant,
C. SCOTT.

MONTROSE, Iowa, June 12.

Editors Herald:—The work in this district is onward and upward. Truly the members have partaken of the same Spirit that was so noticeable at the last General Conference,—that desire to spread the good news and do all they can to help, and not get discouraged by the many little disappointments that go to make up life. To be sure there are exceptions, but am thankful I can report that the majority are beginning to enter into and enjoy the Spirit of the gospel; and especially among the young men and a few of the older members of the local priesthood is this a fact. Bro. John Jarvis, of Keb, Iowa, has volunteered, self-sustaining, to assist with the tent during tent season; Bro. Brennan and Bro. Williams, of Keb, and Brn. McDonald, Willey, and McComas of Mt. Pleasant are doing well locally and in adjacent schoolhouses.

We have established regular services each week at Fort Madison, Corner Union and Santa Fe avenues; preaching at eleven a. m. and 2:30 p. m.; prayer service and preaching at 8 p. m., in charge of Brn. Dan Tripp of Montrose first Sunday of each month, W. T. Lambert of Adrian, second Sunday, H. T. Pitt, Powellton, third Sunday, and George P. Lambert of Adrian, fourth Sunday of each month. These brethren live from ten to fifteen miles distant from Fort Madison and have volunteered their services; and still there is room. Who else will follow their example? We hear of other local men doing good work and who will get their reward.

We just closed one of the best conferences it was ever our lot to attend in the district. The Farmington saints had spared no pains in providing to make the outer man comfortable, and had set aside the previous Sunday for fasting and prayer that the Lord would bless the inner man and be with us in our conference session. All present bore testimony to the fact that the Lord heard their prayers. The Spirit's presence was comforting to the saints to know that their work was acceptable, while we had a good attendance from the start. I wish the entire membership of the district could have been present and enjoyed the blessings of the occasion. Especially in the afternoon business session Saturday, was the Spirit's presence felt in great power.

Rock Creek branch by resolution requested the ordination of Bro. George P. Lambert, and when the clerk of the meeting read this request the Spirit came in power and bore testimony to the divinity of the call. Some who had not an evidence before, then and there received a testimony, and anyone who had the privilege of being present at the time will not doubt the call.

Let me urge the necessity the saints attending the conferences, and to be there at the opening of the session. It is important and absolutely necessary to get the intended good. Remember our motto, saints, "Onward and Upward;" no time now for reposing.

The missionary force of the district of late have been compelled to spend some time in showing the people of Montrose, Nauvoo, and other places the differences between us and the Utah people. There has been a number of Utah elders playing around in this district the last year, and in order to get favors have been sailing under our colors; they avoid telling who they are as much as possible, but go about telling they are Latter Day Saints, preaching only the first principles, never mentioning those terrible things contrary to the books and reason. Brn. Snively and Evans have presented these differences in such a plain way that the people that want to can and do see them. We are credibly informed that they go around, honeying the membership, telling them they are treated well by the saints, but that the elders they are a bad set; that they insult them in nearly every instance. We are prepared to deny the charge. I will tell you what they call insulting them—for one of our elders to call for proof of some of their statements, or ask them why they don't tell the people the differences between them and us; or ask them in public if they believe in polygamy, blood-atonement, Adam-God, or any of those many abominable doctrines they have taught and now believe, but don't tell their converts until they have them; or even for one of our elders to challenge them to defend their faith, and when they refuse, which they will invariably, to expose their position by reading from their own works and accepted teachings. This Brn. Snively and Evans did and away they ran with the pitiful cry, "They have insulted us;" trying to work on the sympathies of the people. God help them, the more one investigates their history and claims the more evident is the great latter-day apostasy.

At Montrose and Nauvoo we did all in our power to have them meet us and discuss the differences; offered them the use of our tent free as long as they wanted to divide the time and if they didn't want it, to any other elders they might bring; but no, the old, old, cry, "We don't want contention, don't believe in it," etc., etc. Neither do we believe in contention; we are always ready and willing to give a reason for our hope.

The tent will go to La Harpe this week, and that part of the district will be thoroughly canvassed. Any desiring work in their locality, write me at my home address, Lamoni, Iowa, and state all the conditions as far as you can and we will do the best we can for you.

Your brother,

F. M. WELD.

HILLS, Minn., June 7.

Editors Herald:—I have been here since May 19. I commenced meetings at the house of Bro. O. H. Midgordon, May 23, and in the evening at the opera house in Hills to about two hundred attentive listeners. On the evening of the 26th I spoke at Steen, the next town east of here, with fair attendance. On Sunday at 2:30 at Steen again, then Satan came also in the shape of a book with the usual threadbare story of Joseph Smith. Our brethren got the better of them. I am certain good can be done there if we have an opportunity to talk to them again. One of their number came over here, a distance of four miles, on foot, to hear us again. I spoke in the schoolhouse one mile east of Hills at eleven o'clock yesterday. After services I baptized a young man who had been well informed in regard to the work. We all went to the bank of Mud Creek and there I had the pleasure of immersing him in the waters of baptism, a new man in Christ Jesus, before about sixty people who had never seen baptism in that manner. While it was perhaps amusing to some, others were quite affected by it and it was evidently food for thought for some of them. One lady came to the young man who was baptized and shook hands with him in a way to encourage him in the step taken. There were some attentive listeners out last evening also. I think a good work can be done here in time. The old, hide-bound, creed-bound Lutheran faith is beginning to loosen and give away. I heard some of the people tell that their pastors should have said that they could do nothing with the people of Hills any longer. I suppose Bro. Peter Anderson has been telling the true gospel story, from what I can learn. The saints here are letting their light shine, and it is noticeable by all the people. Would to God that all saints could do the same. Truly it can be said as recorded by John 13: 34, 35, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." There is a lot of work to do here and the way seems to open quite encouragingly. Next Sunday we shall try and make an effort on the Iowa side of the line in a small town called Lester, a new place where our faith has never been presented. Hoping good may be done, and hoping God may speed the right,

Yours in the faith,

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.

Editors Herald:—Since the General Conference I have been very busy in my effort to cover as much of my present field as possible before leaving for Europe. I have succeeded in visiting nearly all the branches, and other places where the work has been started, and have been greatly blessed in my labors, though there are some places I have not been able to reach; and to these I would say, It is not because I desired to slight any, but it has simply been impossible in the short space of time to do all that I desired.

I was permitted to attend the Millersburg and Mission conferences. Both were excellent; the Spirit of God was with us in power. Many were cheered and comforted. It seems to me that the outlook was never so bright. More money has come into my hands, as Bishop's agent, than ever before in the same length of time, and people seem to be more easily reached with the truth. I have had the pleasure of baptizing fifteen; many others are fully convinced.

I am safe in saying the work in Chicago was never in better condition. Meetings have been well attended. Ten have recently been baptized; others are near the door. Our branch now numbers one hundred and thirty-three members, besides the attendance of a number from other branches who have not yet presented their letters. All the old troubles have ceased, we hope never again to be revived. Some of our local brethren have believed that the work could be best served by placing the work in their charge, thus relieving the missionary from the burden of branch cares. We hope their views may prove correct, as the burden of this work now devolves upon them, and the branch will have abundant opportunity to prove their ability to care for themselves. We feel assured, however, that they will gladly welcome their share of assistance from the small missionary force left in the district.

The last two weeks I have been associated with Bro. John H. Lake. It would have been a pleasure for me to have remained with him did not duty call me elsewhere. I can bespeak for him a pleasant mission in Northern Illinois. A kinder people I have never met. To part with them seems like parting with my own kindred. May God bless them.

If I comply with all requests for personal letters I shall be kept busy, but I promise to do the best I can. I am now busy packing up. I expect to leave Illinois on Tuesday, June 22. I hope to meet the saints in Philadelphia on Sunday, the 27th. The week following I go to Brooklyn to remain till July 17, then take the steamer Campania for Liverpool.

At first I dreaded this new responsibility, but after being assured it is God's will, all dread has been dispelled, and I look forward to this mission with a degree of pleasure, though I am assured severals trials await me. The parting with loved ones will be no easy task, but with them is manifest God's goodness. Everything is being so adjusted that they can now get along without our care. I am thankful to say they are all within the fold. Our youngest entered last month. He will soon be of age. All have work, so that wife and I can be associated together without neglecting our children. Letters addressed to No. 277 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, will be forwarded to me. I will publish my address as soon as I am located.

Craving an interest in your prayers, I remain,
Yours in bonds,
F. G. PITT.

NEWCASTLE, New South Wales,
April 13.

Editors Herald.—We have a branch at Hamilton West, two miles from New Castle, of whom it may be said, "See how they love one another." It is a pleasant sight to see them come together to speak of the goodness of God in sending his servants among them with the covenant of peace, and exercising the gifts of the Spirit bestowed by a compliance with the laws of adoption as Jesus authorized his ministers to freely give, having freely received. I can truly say I have freely received of the blessings promised according as I live up to the light; and may God the Father through his Son help me to live "nearer my God to Thee."

On March 23, about two a. m., God in his kindness gave me a vision to see into paradise; I had for my guide an angel on my right hand. The angel said, I will draw aside this veil, and you will see a beautiful being. He did so, and I beheld my mother, clad in a beautiful garment, her face was lit up with a smile as she looked upon me, she appeared to be in the prime of life; she took my hand, but never spoke. My mother has been dead ten years, and was a Primitive Methodist for thirty years; she was a woman that lived up to the light she had; she told me, a short while before she died, that she had prayed for thirty years for me, and the Lord told her last night that her prayers would be answered, and I should be saved, and should meet her in the promised land.

The angel then led me further on, and said, I will now take the veil from your eyes. He did so, and my sight and brain became extraordinary clear, and I could see the gospel from Genesis to Revelation; I there saw things that which is impossible for me to describe; I saw the small stone rolling and growing larger as it went on. The angel said, This is the true gospel, which you believe in. I said to the angel, I do not now wonder that Joseph Smith stood the persecution that he did, if he saw all that I now see.

The angel said to me, Stand fast in the faith, and then left me. And still in my vision, as I thought, I was walking home, I was singing and praising God and preaching to the people on the road; for my brain felt so clear that it was no trouble to preach. My companion said the people will think you are mad. I said I cannot help but preach the word of God, for he has revealed his gospel unto me. I awoke by shouting Hallelujah! Hallelujah!

All the day I felt the Spirit of God overshadowing me, and it has never left me. That night I asked God, in prayer, if there was any interpretation to my vision, to give it me, and at about the same hour, two a. m., the angel took me and showed me a country, to which I had been traveling before I joined this church. The country was very dull; no sun shining on it, and no activity in it. The angel said, Look to the right, and I looked and saw a beautiful country, lit up with the sun, and full of life and activity; and as I looked still further to the right, the country became more beautiful and full of the glory of God, which I am unable to describe; but I can see it yet, full of the glory of God. The angel said, This is the true gospel, which you now believe in, and the closer you live to it the more you will go to the right, for you can see the further you go to the right, the brighter is the glory.

I could see that between the country that I had been traveling to, and the country that I am now traveling to, there was a dividing line quite plain to me. Since I had the visions I have felt such a peace of mind that I never felt before. Jesus said, "My peace I leave with you."

Bro. Broadway is our elder and Sunday school superintendent, which is too much for him, as he has to work at his daily labor all day. We pray that God the Father will raise up one amongst us to assist our brother to preach the everlasting gospel. We have been praying that God would bless you all at the conference with his Holy Spirit, so that all things might be done to his honor and glory, through his Son our Redeemer.

Yours in Christ,
GEORGE D. WRIGHTSON.

HENDERSON, Iowa, June 14.

Editors Herald.—Our work is moving along very nicely; our preaching services in the different localities in the district are well attended; good attention and interest manifested by a number who are very favorable to our cause. By ones and twos they are coming into the church. Two more were added to our number at Bartlett, and five here yesterday by Bro. D. Hougas. Last night closed our district conference and Sunday school convention. Everything passed off in fine order, and in the best of feeling, highly seasoned with God's Holy Spirit. All hearts were made to rejoice in the goodness of God, as was testified to by many. Our friends turned out and seemed to be one with us in spirit, and enjoyed themselves with us. It will be a time to be remembered by all. The faithfulness of the saints in this branch in making preparation and caring for the visiting saints and friends is truly commendable. May God's grace be sufficient for all is our earnest prayer.

Yours as ever in bonds,
HENRY KEMP.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 3.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

A MISAPPLICATION OF THE WORD OF GOD.

A MISAPPLICATION of the word of God is one of the most successful ways of building up religious deceptions that can be conceived. We cannot be too careful and watchful of such movements—their origin, rise and progress.

The Devil once made an effort to mislead our blessed Lord, during the period of his temptation and trial, by a misapplied use of scripture. (Matthew 4:6.) It is not charged that all who do this kind of work do it intentionally, or dishonestly; but the work done is no less harmful, and the deception wrought no less blinding and destructive because it may be executed in ignorance. It is this that ought to warn men to wait till they are satisfied that what they propose to their fellows as religious truth is approved of God and in harmony with his will, his divine purposes and character. As observed before, work of this character does not end with the present life, but extends on into the never-ending eternity! What fearful, what awful consequences, then, are involved in the issues here considered! Will God be compromised to that which is false and deceptive just because one may be honest in its advocacy? Will he palliate our criminality, and justify our sin because we claim to be sincere? It may be that the character of our deception is such that we would not permit him to correct and deliver us if he would. Friendly reader, whoever you may be, we request you in all the earnestness of our soul to seriously consider these questions, as you value your eternal welfare.

The world will not soon forget the sad, sorrowful consequences to many thousands of good and honest souls that originated with the misapplication of the "Prophetic Periods" of the books of Daniel and John's Revelation. It was sought by the "Prophetic Periods" to tell the time to the year, and in some instances the month and day of our Lord's second coming in glory. The periods referred to are the "two thousand and three hundred days" of Daniel 8:14; the "seventy weeks" (Daniel 9:24); also the "time, times, and a half," and "the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days," of Daniel 12:7, 12. These periods were all understood to terminate at the same date, whatever their beginnings, and their ending was sure to bring the second advent, the end of the world, and the overthrow of all earthly governments, and the ushering in of the glorious millennial reign! And, although the time for these great and wonderful events to transpire has been set many times since the years 1843-44, these periods and the events supposed to be compassed by them being used as the basis of chronological computations; yet time, that inexorable corrector of mistakes and expositor of deceptions, has proven false all efforts hitherto made to determine the time of Christ's glorious coming. The consequent disappointments, loss of confidence, and deception have been so grievous, that all attempts to fix the time for our Savior to return have been largely abandoned. And, although the great evil developed from the movement in bringing the doctrine of the second coming of Christ into disrepute with many, and roused into activity the "scoffers" referred to by the Apostle Peter (See 2 Peter 3:3-7) the movement thus begun, because of perversions associated with it, has not yet been abandoned. On the contrary, several stages or phases of deception have developed connected with the advent movement, so-called, to the present. The arts of deception seem to be inexhaustible, and when the mind is under the darkening influence of one phase of deception, the transition to other phases is easy—sometimes quite irresistible.

Following closely on the track of the time-setting deception and failure, so sad in its consequences to so many confiding souls, was the introduction of the claim to consolidate the "ten commandment" law, or "declogue" with the gospel, declaring that such an arrangement is necessary to salvation. Thus the "Seventh-day Advent movement" is the second prominent phase of deception in the series.

This was developed in 1845 to 1857, principally by Mrs. Ellen G. White and Elder James White, her husband. It, like the preceding move, was accomplished by assumption; that is, by taking for granted unproved and untrue grounds for the groundwork.

It is assumed that the ten commandments are God's moral law. A further assumption is, that the declogue is an unchangeable law. It is assumed in the third place that the ten commandments, in and of themselves, independently of the code of law of which they are the basis, are a perfect law. But we deny that either of the three foregoing assumptions can be shown by scripture to be either true or a fact.

A law without cause (inducement) for operation, or result, or effect, is a philosophical obscurity, and contrary to all application of law either natural or spiritual, and that is precisely what the "ten commandments" are when detached from the code of which they were and are a part. For, without the statutes connected with them there is neither inducement to encourage their observance nor penalty attached for their transgression; so that they were inoperative. Now it is strenuously and persistently maintained that all the other enactments of law or statutes defining what it was to keep them, or the penalties for transgressing them, have been absolutely "abolished," "done away," "blotted out!" Hence it is sought to embosom the "ten commandments" in the gospel economy.

The law given through Moses to Israel, including the declogue, was a civil-religious, a politic ecclesiastical law. It constituted Israel a religious nation among nations. Its administration and the execution of its penalties were in the hands of the nation's officers, priests, and judges. (Numbers 15:32-36; Deuteronomy 19.) It was given to and designed for Israel only, and to no other people or nation. (Deuteronomy 5:2-4; 33:1, 2; Psalms 147:19, 20.) Its design was to lead Israel up to Christ and his gospel, and then end, the completed and fulfilled. Matthew 5:17; 23:1, 2; 2 Corinthians 3:7-11; Galatians 3:19-25; 4:21-31.) It never existed as a code, nor was it binding till Israel came to Sinai. (Galatians 3:17; Romans 5:13, 14; John 1:17.) Its rewards and penalties were all temporal, related to this life only. It could not secure life eternal to anyone. (Acts 4:12; Romans 4:13, 14; Galatians 3:21.) "Every transgression and disobedience" done under that law while it was binding, "received a just recompense of reward" (Hebrews 2:2), and died without mercy, under two or three witnesses (Hebrews 10:28), either at the hands of God or his ministers.

Death was the penalty for breaking either one or all the ten commandments. (2 Corinthians 3:6, 7; James 2:8-11.)

Under that law no pardon for sin was provided for in reality. It could not justify from sin against God. The sinner must die where it is binding. And it follows, therefore, as a logical consequence if that law that kills all transgressors "without mercy" is brought over and incorporated into the gospel where all penalties are eternal, that all who now become transgressors of it, will die eternally. Nothing can intervene between God and his broken law! Pause here and grasp this idea. How many have sinned? "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." (Romans 3:23.) And it follows, hence, that all will die the eternal death! A universal damnation of the race. Is the law just (Romans 7:12)? Yes. Would, then, an infinitely just God let anyone come in and intercept the penalty of a just law, and procure pardon from justice? Infinite justice fail! Answer, ye who can. How can the ten-commandment law be binding and yet its penalties fail if broken? It is not the case with any other law if honestly administered. All penalties are duly executed. It is a "ministration of death" (2 Corinthians 3:7). It could not justify anyone before God (Romans 3:20). Repentance is impossible where it is of force. The blood of the transgressor was demanded. A typical substitutional offering to take the place of the one who transgressed ignorantly, or "trespassed," was provided under the law, but no such provision was made for the breaker of the ten commandments or anyone of them (see Leviticus 5); but "the soul that sinneth, it shall die," (Ezekiel 18:4), is the inexorable doom under the decalogue. "He shall surely die; his blood shall be upon him" (verse 13). Christ, God's angel, was not to grant pardon for transgression of that law. See Exodus 23:20, 21. He will not pardon under it yet if binding, for he is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever." (Hebrews 13:8.)

But it is constantly and determinedly affirmed by the Seventh-day Adventists and other Sabbatarians that the decalogue is the identical law that Jesus was to "magnify" and make "honorable," and, hence, he came not "to destroy," but "to fulfill" (Isaiah 42:21; Matthew 5:17, 18); that is, blend it with the gospel; and "write" it in the heart of every believer in Christ (Jeremiah 31:31-34), and by it and the gospel judge and condemn sinners in the judgment day! By it is the knowledge of sin? Yes. What is the penalty? Death. How many have sinned? For that all have sinned, "both Jew and Gentile" (Romans 3:9). Is that law immutable? Absolutely so; infinitely so. Cannot in any sense be changed? No. What is the penalty for breaking it since Christ came? Eternal destruction. Since "all" "both Jew and Gentile" have sinned, what is the result to be? But to change the penalty attendant on the transgression of the law, from temporal death under the Israelitish commonwealth to death under Christ, is a change of an immutable law, and implies a change in the immutable God! How is that? O, well, God has introduced a new arrangement now, and whereas he did not pardon transgressors of the law under the Mosaic economy, he does grant pardon under the Christian, on condition of repentance, through the merits of a crucified and risen Redeemer. But this arrangement implies another change, not only in the relation of that law to man, but likewise in the God of the law! Is this change in the nature of an improvement in God's work?

Ah, kind reader, if God and his law which he ordains for any specific purpose in any given economy is immutable, and there was no pardon for the breaker of the decalogue under Moses, there is no pardon for its transgression under Christ, if it be still in force; hence, as all have sinned, all will have to eternally die! All go into eternal unconsciousness, and death be an eternal victor, and the work of Christ for the redemption of man is thereby nullified worlds without end! To this conclusion Paul also came, provided that law is yet in force as a religious code. He says:—

I was alive without the law once, [What law? See Romans 2:17-23]; but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.—Romans 7:9; see also verse 10, 11.

And it was just in these respects that the inspired apostle saw that the law was contrary to us and was against us; and for these reasons Jesus came and blotted it out, took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross. (Colossians 2:14.) At the cross the law, so far as being a religious guide, was nullified by Christ, and by his blood "the law of the Spirit of life," (Romans 8:2) was ratified, that by our obedience to it we might be saved, and at the same time,

By means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.—(Hebrews 9:15.)

When God abrogated that law by which death without repentance was administered, the higher law—the gospel—became the religious standard of thought (Matthew 15:16-20); of words (Matthew 5:27, 28, 33-37; 1 Peter 4:11); and deed, or life, (Matthew 5:16; 1 Peter 2:11-15). Notice Hebrews 9:15 once more and we learn that it is by means of death, that Christ atoned for those who sinned under the law, showing conclusively that there was no pardon provided in the decalogue for transgression. We have dwelt on this point at some length, that the blinding deceptiveness of this deception might be made plain. It is brought about largely by a palpable misapplication of the Scriptures.

Under the ten commandment covenant (It is called a covenant Exodus 31:16; 34:27, 28) and by its very terms God visited the sins "of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them" that hated him, that transgressed; and it would be impossible for that law to be of force and the principle not be in operation. (Exodus 20:5.) A law while binding operates on the principles involved in it, otherwise law is of no value, and a legal principle ceases to operate only when the law embodying it is abrogated. Even a law so severe in its operations as was this did not always curb the passions of ancient Israel. Now it is promised that this visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, would not be a part of the new-gospel-covenant; but would be done away (Jeremiah 31:29-34; Ezekiel 18). But if it be argued that the principle ceases while the law embodying it remains in force, it will be observed that this is another change in the law said to be immutable. But if, under the gospel this principle does operate, where is the pardon that is promised? Here is another two-horned dilemma, What is the retreat of my Sabbatarian friend here? Either there is no pardon yet under the decalogue, for God visits the iniquities, or the immutable law, so-called, is changed. Which is it? Need we wonder that Paul said that that first covenant was not faultless, and God found fault with it, and therefore he sought a place for the second? That that covenant waxed old and was "ready to vanish away"? (Hebrew 8:7-13). The gospel law being the divine standard in all things that pertain to life and godliness, we leave the law just where Paul said the gospel taught that it belonged; namely, in the hands of the officers of all right earthly or civil governments, where, as a just law, it can be used lawfully, its immunities guaranteed, and its penalties administered. (1 Timothy 1:5-11.

In the Herald of June 2, page 342, is a startling account of how outraged justice caught and punished Joseph Cascado, the Portugese murderer of Bernardino Assuero, the Mexican rancher. The wonderment of my mind is that such cases are so few and far between. The antediluvian world, Sodom and the cities of the plain, Pharaoh and his host, the powerful army of Sennacherib, Nadab and Abihu, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and the two hundred and fifty rebellious princes, the fourteen thousand and seven hundred murderers that fell in death from the plague, Eli, and his wayward, debased sons, Hophni and Phineas, as also his entire house, Jannes, and Jambres, Ananias and Sapphira, Judas Iscariot, and thousands more, the fates of whom are chronicled in holy writ, are set forth as monumental examples.

Several years ago, while I was in Joplin, Missouri, a Mr. Manlove that lived in that vicinity was killed by a shaft of lightning. Awhile after the tide of war had subsided and peace and prosperity began to smile over the border counties and the western frontier, a rich strange drover mysteriously disappeared. His horse, bridle, and saddle were found, but no trace of the unfortunate man further was brought to light. Manlove was poor, but soon after the dark deed purchased and equipped a fine farm. Suspicion rested upon him, but the rather unsettled state of society and the lack of proof, etc, with no friend or relative to push the investigation, the affair blew over. Years after he defiled his wife's sister, a young lady sojourning in the family. He threatened vengeance upon this unfortunate victim of his brutal, unscrupulous lust. With burning oaths, and fierce imprecations this terrorized, and forlorn maiden went from his door; but was overtaken at Center Creek, murdered, and thrown in the water to hide the appalling crime. A few days after a man in crossing the swollen stream discovered the prospective young mother floating around among some driftwood. Circumstantial evidence pointed to the criminal; but corroborative proofs, and positive testimony to fix and fasten guilt were lacking at the first trial. In the court he protested his innocence and called on the Supreme Judge to strike him dead if he was guilty. The murdered woman had some plain, and rather unique marks on her head, throat, and chest; all of which indicated foul means from other save her own hands. The inquest and physician's verdict were duly obtained and properly certified to according to law. I saw the small cloud, and the zig zag lightning flash, and heard the peal of thunder, when the mule and his rider lost their lives together about a mile away. It was said that a duplicate of the marks found on the former person were all reproduced upon the man that was out on bail and liable to baffle the courts of the land; and, hence, go all unwhipped.

Sr. Ann Davis, nee Scott, who was born in Armaugh, Ireland, in 1805, embraced the faith in Canada a few years after the church was organized and set in motion. The family were in the troubles at Far West, and fled to Illinois for safety. She told me that a Captain Bogart, a Methodist preacher, vowed death and destruction upon Joseph Smith especially and the saints in general, if they did not all clear out by, or before the 5th of April, A. D. 1840.

This instrument of cruelty, injustice, and slaughter boasted that this decree had gone forth, and should not return to him void, and that the buzzards should feast upon the prophet, etc. It is said "man proposes, but God disposes." This would-be hero and self-appointed inquisitor general of archheretics, with this sanguinary threat all unfulfilled, but still in his heart, shot a man with a pistol, at an election, by the name of Beatty. He lingered from this mortal wound, and passed away in a few days. A thousand dollars was offered for Bogart's apprehension, whereupon he fled in wild dismay, a vagabond and a fugitive from stern justice. In crossing the Missouri River the horse and rider were drowned. He was afterwards found on a sandbar where the vultures had eaten his eyes out of his dishonored head, and picked the rotting flesh from his once proud, pompous, and stately body. "Curses like chickens come home to roost."*

George C. Cookman, another M. E.

divine, was United States chaplain when Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, and Elder Foster were at the seat of government in 1840.

These brethren were sent by the church to seek redress for grievances and allay national bias. They were making apparently fair headway in obtaining good hearings, till the above-named character turned the tide of growing favor and merited justice.

He caricatured the committee, boasted of overwhelming the prophet, scandalized the faith, clogged the wheels of progress, and invited persecution on the already impoverished household of faith.

The Seer prophesied that this wicked man would be cut off from the face of the earth, both root and branch. On learning of this prediction the reverend gentleman made sport of it, and set up the threat as a capital joke and the butt of ridicule and additional irony. When the prediction was publicly proclaimed in a large assembly, high officials, including senators, made notes of the same, whereupon the speaker repeated the warning cry and told the auditors to note it well and write it to the States, for if God ever spoke to and through him, this was his word and it would surely be fulfilled, or words to this effect. Shortly after this affair there was a call on this country from England to send a clergyman over to London to assist in bringing about more unity among the churches. The United States chaplain was the selected man, and he thought it would be a nice outing and a good thing to take his entire family back to his native land, and combine pleasure with his business. They embarked all on the steamship President of the Cunard Line, which was thought to be seaworthy. That company has kept afloat a regular line of elegant packets for fifty-five years, or since they launched in 1842, and this unfortunate vessel has never landed, or been found since that eventful, calamitous voyage.

*This is a mixing of events, names, and dates. The saints were out of the State before the date given. Bogart, the Methodist preacher, lived to see the saints banished, and the last account we have of him he was in Texas in 1845 or 1846. The man who was drowned in crossing the Missouri River was James Campbell. This occurred in June, 1834. An account of the incident may be found in Church History, vol. 1, p. 498.—Historian.

Myself nor any other predicted the ruin of a Campbellite preacher named Norton, whom I met in debate at Jacksonville, Kansas. He became so incontinent and drunken, however, that his wasted life became unbearable, so he took the vital spark away by his own hand. Adverse theological opposers of the truth, virulent persecutors of God's children; seditious mobocrats, and apostate heretics, and the likes may run well for a transitory season; but sooner or later, either, in time or in eternity, they will get under the wheel. When their grist gets between the upper and nether millstones of the Lord's wrath, which is simply the curse and penalty of his broken laws, the grinding is rapid and fine.

Angels, under special instruction, will pour out the vials of woe and fell despair upon the incorrigible. The Lord in person and by selection will come forth as a swift witness against the perdition of ungodly men. In his fiercest display of wrath, mercy holds a glorious equipoise. Awards and rewards will be meted out in love, for the All-father does not afflict willingly; but, behold! he cannot look upon sin with allowance. When thousands desecrate the great resurrection day in viewing a Spanish bull fight, or the railroads are jammed with the profane, vulgar, drunken hosts that resort to see Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Company in the detestable arena, to say naught of the fields of sport and retreats for gaming, and the church bazaars of fashion, opulence, envy, and pride,—I say when such evils and ten thousand wrongs abound on every side, turn, and angle, it makes the man of God shudder and fear for the inevitable fate of all such work.

As the evil is rushing in like a flood, and spreading like a cancer, the God of Israel has the old Jerusalem gospel banner unfurled to the breeze, and the standard bearers are on the mountain heights. Let not the ensign be furled; nor yet the standard trail in the dust till victory crowns the flag. The achievements of faith are incalculable, and the avenues of success are available, and the supplies of grace are forthcoming and adequate for all imposed duties. Let us get in the current of mercy and the onward stream will carry us into the jasper sea.

Having sensed that the Lord is gracious, pitiful, and powerful, let us abide in his care, and trust him for a glorious outcome. His general providences are uniform, but his special dispensations are many. The cherishing fountain, from the deep wells is ever overflowing, and the bread of heaven is meat indeed.

Conference of the Decatur district met at Allendale, Missouri, in business session at ten a. m., June 12; president of the district, Robt. M. Elvin, in the chair, B. M. Anderson, secretary. Bro. Elvin made a brief statement of the work throughout the district. By motion, voice and vote in the conference was granted to Bro. M. C. Fisher, of Boston. He was also chosen to assist the secretary. Minutes of last conference were read and approved. The following branches reported: Centerville, Hiteman, Lucas, Lamoni, Lone Rock, Greenville, Allendale, Davis City, and Wirt. Ministry reporting as follows: J. R. Lambert, R. M. Elvin, George Derry, H. A. Stebbins, A. S. Cochran, C. H. Jones, R. S. Salyards, John Shippy, J. A. Gunsolley, T. J. Bell, John Watkins, D. W. Gaylord, organist, and those appointed by the Allendale branch as ushers. By motion the paper presented by Bro. Cochran was referred to a committee of three appointed by the chair, with power to prepare and publish a statement as contemplated in the paper presented, said statement to be approved by Bishop and his agent. Committee are J. A. Gunsolley, C. E. Blair, D. A. Anderson. H. N. Snively was by motion appointed a traveling missionary in the district. The resolution concerning a district record was taken from the table, and lost, by vote. The district Sunday school association reported their work as in a prosperous condition. A request from the Greenville branch that John Lovell be ordained to the office of priest was authorized. Moved and seconded to take up the recommendation from the Lamoni branch concerning the ordination of some. Carried. The following paper was presented by J. R. Lambert, missionary in charge.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 10, 1897.

To the President and Members of the Decatur district conference, in session at Allendale, Missouri; Greeting:—

Dear Brethren:—On the evening of the 1st inst., at a business meeting of the Lamoni branch, it was decided to present the names of Brethren Fred B. Blair and Fred M. Smith to this conference for ordination to the eldership, and George W. Blair to be ordained a teacher. This action was had upon the strength of a communication from Bro. R. M. Elvin, president of the district, which sets forth that on the 9th of last April, and since, he received spiritual direction to this end.

The reading of this paper was the first intimation I had that anything of the kind was on foot. I opposed the adoption of the paper upon the grounds that I was not prepared to indorse, and in the absence of any spiritual evidence in support of the proposition, I was compelled to regard the movement as premature. This view met with strong opposition. I then moved that the whole matter be deferred for one month, or till the next business meeting. This also was strongly opposed, and voted down.

During all this time, no one thought to ask, or ventured to ask, as the case may be, whether the missionary in charge had been consulted concerning the proposition, notwithstanding the fact that it was proposed to ordain two young men (whom it will be conceded, have not been active church workers in the past) to the important office of elder.

I now address you officially, as your missionary in charge by appointment, and your servant in the office to which I have been called and ordained, both of which positions were unsought by me; but the duties belonging thereto, I am, of course, under obligation to perform to the best of my ability.

Since the business meeting, referred to above, I have made this matter a special subject of thought and prayer, and have arrived at the following conclusions:—

1. I am willing to indorse the recommendation concerning Bro. George W. Blair, and do so with pleasure.

2. With the favorable action of the branch and district, and the consent of the other two brethren, I will not oppose their ordination to the office of priest, but, should conditions remain favorable, will heartily indorse it. This, of course, will require that their ordination be deferred for a season, at least. I am opposed to their ordination to the eldership, at the present time, believing that such a movement would not be for the best interests of the church, nor the brethren themselves.

The general rule has been to ordain to the lesser priesthood first, especially in the case of young men, and they are promoted when found faithful, competent, and worthy. This general practice has been commended by President Joseph Smith through the Herald.

It is conceded that there may be exceptions to the rule, but we know of no good reasons why these brethren should be made an exception. However, the burden of proof rests with those who favor the proposition which is before you.

The spirit of undue haste, which seems to have characterized this movement, to some extent, is not, I think, well founded; and for the following reasons, among others that might be mentioned:—

1. The purported divine manifestation upon which the proposition to ordain is founded, was given on the 9th of last April, only one day after the revelation to President Joseph Smith was completed, in which revelation the will of God concerning the sons of the leading men in the church is plainly and quite fully set forth. It was, too, before said revelation had been seen or acted upon by the church. Had there been need of great haste in the matter, why did not the Lord say that these two brethren were already approved of him and should be ordained as elders at once?

2. Paragraph 7 of the revelation of last April applies to the sons of President Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, the Bishop, and of those belonging to the leading quorums of the church; all of whom are "admonished," instructed, and upon conditions of faithfulness and the approval of God, they are to enter into the ministry and occupy. This suggests the necessity for a proper amount of time, also the wisdom of conferring the Aaronic priesthood first.

3. The following was adopted by the church in April, 1886:—

"Resolved, that in organized districts, no one be ordained to the office of an elder, without the voice of the district or conference be had ordering such ordination, or by sanction of the missionary in charge."—Herald, April 24, 1886, p. 253.

Now, if great haste was needed, why was not the sanction of the missionary in charge sought, at once? and the manifestation of April 9 presented to the branch in May, so that these brethren might have been ordained at once, provided the effort met with a favorable response?

That I am not assuming anything outside of or contrary to the duties of my calling, it is sufficient to direct your attention to the following statements found in the New Testament and Doctrine and Covenants: D. C. 104:30; Titus 1:5; D. C. 16:5; 17:8; 117:3.

I am not justly responsible for any degree of unpleasantness which may have resulted from this public conflict, for I had no opportunity of seeking to unite with the president of the district on what was proper to be recommended to the branch. Evidently the district president and missionary in charge should have conferred together upon this matter before it was presented to the brethren or the branch.

This oversight I regret, and especially so because the president of the district is one of my missionaries.

Another mistake (which made the matter worse) was for the branch to virtually refuse to give the missionary in charge any time for investigation, thought, and prayer upon so important a matter. D. C. 118:3; 120:4.

I wish it to be distinctly understood that this is no personal affair with me, and were it not that there is an important principle at stake, I would not mention these things. For me to see these brethren step forward and properly occupy, will always, I trust, be a source of joy and satisfaction; and to help and encourage them, in common with others who are making similar efforts in the same good cause, will, I trust, ever be my aim and effort.

Whatever may be the fate of this paper, I request, first, that you receive it and order it spread upon the minutes; and, second, in case you fail to adopt it, I kindly request that you order it published in its proper connection, with the minutes of the conference.

Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

Moved and seconded that the paper be received and spread upon the minutes. Carried. Moved and seconded that the ordinations be ordered and provided for. Carried by a vote of 17 for, 9 against. Moved and seconded that the paper presented by Bro. Lambert be published with the minutes, as per request. Carried. A request for license was granted to Joseph A. Anderson. Licenses were authorized issued to those to be ordained, also to Brn. J. L. Ritchie, and Joseph Bogue. Place of adjournment was taken up. It was decided when this conference adjourns, to meet at Lone Rock, October 9, next. The preaching was by Brn. C. H. Jones, J. R. Lambert, S. V. Bailey, and R. M. Elvin. At the Sunday morning prayer meeting a very profitable time was had; Bro. John Lovell was ordained to the office of priest, under the hands of R. M. Elvin and H. N. Snively. The services were well attended to the last, and a very enjoyable time was had, sixty-five being in attendance from Lamoni.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and friends in Florida, Georgia, and Henry, Barbour, Pike, Geneva, Dale, and Coffee Counties, Alabama; Greeting:—You will notice from the pastoral of our missionary in charge, Bro. T. C. Kelley, I have been placed in charge of the work again in the above described territory. It has been nearly one year since I came among you, and whether our efforts have pleased everyone or not, by looking over our labors the past year we can see that some progress has been made in various ways, for which we feel to say praise the Lord, O, my soul. Some of you have been good and kind to me in a financial way; while all have been, in every other way. Bro. A. J. Vickrey at Gordon, Alabama, presented me with a horse and buggy, to convey me from place to place. And while it furnishes a little less funds to purchase oil for Nahum's chariots, it saves some shoe leather for the writer, and lightens the burdens to some extent of those who would willingly convey me from place to place. Bro. Vickrey did not do this because of ability to do so, but because he wanted to do something for the work, aiding me in a financial way beside. From his letters to me since, the Lord has been restoring him fourfold. May his crown grow brighter and brighter till the perfect day.

Bro. C. I. Carpenter will be associated with me part of the time at least, and I bespeak for him your coöperation, faith, and prayers; and any other aid and assistance you may be able to render him. Let us enter upon our mission this conference year with renewed energy, zeal, wisdom, and vigor; and above all with greater love, that we may accomplish more this conference year than we did last. And if we will all do this we will see our efforts have not been in vain. Avoid working up public discussions when unnecessary and uncalled for. That is not what we need in this field. But the preaching of the gospel and a more righteous living upon the part of some, and more spirituality upon the part of all. Let us live righteously and the reward is ours.

Any saints or friends residing in the above described territory who are isolated from any branch of the church who desire labor in their vicinity will address me at Milton, Florida.

Fraternally,

D. E. TUCKER.

P. S.—Since my report to the annual conference I have baptized and confirmed eleven, the most of whom are adults, and we hope all will make good saints. My mission address is Milton, Santa Rosa County, Florida.

D. E. T.

To the Saints in Montana; Greeting:—Having been appointed by the missionary in charge of the Rocky Mountain mission to look after the interests of mission work in this State, I appeal to your goodness now to assist the missionary force appointed to labor in this field, in every legitimate way. To faithfully prosecute the work I shall hope for and expect a hearty coöperation from all officers and members in the State. And further request members and officers living isolated from branches to correspond with us, giving such information of surroundings and prospects for getting the gospel before the people, as you see and understand it; by so doing we will be better prepared to labor together for the spread of the good news. Brethren and sisters, you who are scattered abroad, let us hear from you; we want if possible to take advantage of the most favorable opportunities, and without your full, free, and hearty coöperation we will fail. You can correspond with myself or Gomer Reese. My address will be Box 41, Deer Lodge, Montana; Gomer's will be box 819, Bozeman, Montana. Bro. Gomer Reese will look after the interests of the work on the east side, while I will look after the west side. Bro. A. B. Moore is president of the district, and will travel and labor under general conference appointment as well, wherever duty calls. Elder J. E. Reese, associate president of the district, and Bishop's agent, will also travel throughout the district, teaching and instructing the saints and friends in the way of life, and receive such tithes and offerings as they may have to give. We shall expect all elders and priests to preach the gospel in their respective localities, informing the district authorities and missionary in charge of their work. I am aware Montana is not as inviting as some fields, but we who are called to labor must do our duty, and trust all to him who does all things well. May the Lord prosper you in all your labors, spiritually and temporally, and by his divine hand and wisdom guide for evermore.

R. J. ANTHONY.

IMPORTANT.

Permit me to tell your many readers a short but pleasing story. We are often stimulated by expectation, and as we look forth to some pleasing events our hearts bound with joy, and we prepare to get the most enjoyment and benefit from it possible. The coming event which is casting its joyful expectation before hand to the saints of north Missouri is the Maysville Reunion, to be held in the beautiful and noted "Harvey's Grove," two miles east of Maysville, DeKalb County, Missouri, coming September 3 next, and continue ten days. The chief attractions of this meeting will be the enjoyment of God's Spirit, the hearing the beautiful gospel by able expounders, and that peculiar refreshing and strengthening influence arising from that social mingling together in peace and unity known only to true Latter Day Saints. No lines are laid down beyond which we invite not. Let them come from Kansas, Iowa, North Missouri, and spend ten days of a rich spiritual repast.

A boarding house will be on the ground, with very reasonable charges. A tent can be procured by writing to C. P. Faul or A. W. Head, Clarksdale, Missouri. Eminent and able elders will be in attendance to deliver the word. Special invitations are extended to Nodaway, Northeast Missouri, and Northeast Kansas districts, to come and join with us to make the good effects of this meeting be felt throughout the whole region. To get the full benefit come at the beginning, pitch your tent on the third or before, begin at the beginning—and absorb all the good possible. Our quarterly conference convenes on the 4th, on the camp ground, which we trust will but add to the interest of the meeting.

Special particulars as to speakers, tents, railroad facilities, music, etc., will be announced later. Keep a close watch. Don't forget the date of beginning, September 3. Bro. F. M. Weld will please excuse us for drawing on his crowd, by holding on same date.

Your brother for the spread of the glorious gospel.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious "Manuscript Found," written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

In paper, 15 cents; ten or more, each $ 13
Cloth, limp, 25 cents; ten or more, each 20

JUVENILE BOOKS.

THE SILVER THIMBLES.

This is the first volume of the Birth Offering Series, a book for young children at home and for Sunday school juvenile libraries. The story of the Silver Thimbles is from real life. It relates how a little child learned to overcome selfishness and do good; cloth, price 20 cents.

ZION'S HOPE.

A large, four-page Sunday school paper for children; illustrated; edited by Sr. M. Walker. 50 cents per year; in packages of four, five, or six to one address, 40 cents each per year; in packages of seven or more, 35 cents each.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE SAINTS' HARMONY.

Music and Hymns combined.

The Harmony contains all the hymns in the Saints' Harp, also 555 pages of music, comprising about 720 tunes, with full instructions on choir and anthem music. Leather backs, cloth sides, $2.00. With music only, $1.25.

THE HARMONY IN FANCY BINDING.

The regular edition in extra binding. Red morocco backs and corners, red cloth sides, with gilt edges entire. Price $2.75.

ABSTRACT OF EVIDENCE, TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

An abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the original church, the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the original church.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

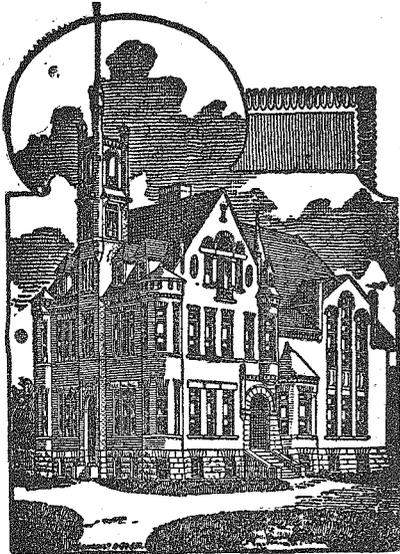

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

Price, bound in law sheep (counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00; in cloth, $2.50.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

WHAT THERE IS IN PRAYER.

JAMES MORRIS WHITON undertakes to set forth a theory of prayer that will answer the demands of this analytic and rationalistic generation. He begins with a general defense of prayer from scientific analogy as follows (The Forum, May):—

“The fact revealed by the spectro-scope, that the physical elements of the earth exist also in the stars, supports the faith that a moral nature like our own inhabits the universe. That the moral nature which is above the world is a supplicable nature, equally with the moral nature embodied in man, is a thoroughly reasonable assumption. Prayer therefore, is grounded in reason, and needs only a rational development in thought and in expression.”

The writer thinks with Professor Joseph Henry that the whole progress of physical science is due to “prayer” for knowledge, the prayer of the intellect, even as in religion we have the prayer of the heart for moral regeneration. The petitionary prayer is but one form of prayer, even in religion, and that a form likely to grow less and less important.

Most of the objections urged to prayer, we are told, are really urged against outgrown fallacies. These fallacies are classified as follows:—

“(1) The conception that prayer to God is comparable with prayer to the ruler of a state, who takes a petition into consideration, and grants or denies it as he judges best; (2) the notion that prayer aims to bring in an interfering power to alter miraculously the physical order of things; (3) the idea, akin to this, that prayer for moral betterment, as for the forgiveness of sins, can break the connection of cause and effect, so as to avert the natural consequences of any breach of physical or moral law.”

The chief aim of the article is to show how the efficacy of prayer may be recognized without resort to any of these fallacies. Thus prayer for divine assistance is efficacious, not because it changes the divine purpose, but because it “serves to focus our will in that line and to engage us more actively in pursuing it.” Yet the effect cannot rightly be said to be simply a reflex effect upon ourselves. “Of course, the primary effect of the prayer for uprightness is a reflex effect upon the man who prays; but it does not end there; something more ensues. The reflex effect in him passes directly outward into an objective effect produced by the uprightness which the prayer has promoted. This effect is extended to other men, and to what they do. It influences the course of human affairs in ever-widening circles.”

The prayer to God to heal the sick is efficacious in certain cases, the writer thinks, not because it causes a miracle to be performed, but because its effects “the substitution of a psychological for a physiological cause of cure.” The prayer for rain even should not be declared irrational, because we know that our own wills, working by certain physical methods, may effect changes upon the climate, and no one can say positively that there are no invisible intelligences superior to us whose wills may accomplish the same end and who may be moved by our supplications. Suspense of judgment is necessary at this point.

The prayer, again, for moral betterment may be efficacious without violating the law of cause and effect, simply by bringing us into the proper attitude toward God. “When we ask a neighbor's forgiveness, we ask him to change his mind toward us. But we do not ask God to change; at least, not if we think wisely. Our request to our neighbor implies that we feel toward him as we ought. This is all that our prayer to God can rationally imply. It is complete in its expression of the return of a wayward will to loyalty and obedience.” Professor Tyndall's prayer-test is needless. The efficacy of prayer is attested by the ethical development of mankind; by its close relation to the moral power of those pioneers who have wrought most influentially for the moral progress of the world.

The writer then proceeds to a more constructive line of thought as follows:—

“Prayer, as Coleridge insisted, is a very different thing from saying prayers. It is an activity of the whole man. Real prayer engrosses and focuses feeling and desire, thought and will, for the direction of the whole self upon its object. Here, undeniably, a real force is apparent, as much as in any movement of our will upon the external world. It is the force of an ethico-spiritual nature, not isolated, but related to nature of the same kind, both seen and unseen. To deem it futile, ‘a chimera buzzing in a vacuum,’ is to escape one difficulty by rushing into a greater—at least for any one who remembers that action and reaction are inseparable.

“The records of the Society for Psychical Research abound in fully verified instances of communications sped from friend to friend, in a moment across hundreds of miles, in some supreme crisis which called into momentary action some previously latent energy of the spirit. Such cases suggest the yet undiscovered possibilities and limits of prayer, considered simply as a mode of psychical force moving upon an unseen psychical environment, through which, as through the physical, divine forces are ever energizing in the interplay of action and reaction. That religious enthusiasm dwells closer to the springs of this mysterious force than our present science or philosophy is thoroughly credible. The saying attributed to Jesus, that, if he chose he could by prayer summon myriads of spirits to his aid, is not to be thought the idle fantasy of one unique in spiritual insight and energy. Much more reasonable is it to suppose that men in an embryonic stage of moral and spiritual development are as incapable of employing such a force intelligently as are savages of using mathematical instruments. . . . What John Stuart Mill observed of justice is true of prayer. An interest of personal apart from general welfare is an element of impurity in it, and therefore an element of weakness. The Lord's Prayer significantly conforms to this law of efficiency. How notably is its reference to the personal and transient subordinated to and uplifted by its interest in the universal and eternal! . . .

'The question which some still think it worth while to ask, 'Why does a loving God, who knows our needs, require us to petition for their supply?' both reveals the fundamental misconception and brings into contrast the fundamental truth in regard to the whole subject. Dr. Edward Caird has noted, as a strange survival of the pagan mode of thought among Christians, that some of them still conceive of prayer as an attempt to get God to do man's will, rather than as an aspiration to get God's will done by men. Jesus has expressly cautioned us not to think that either he prays or we pray for the purpose of informing God about our needs or inducing him to supply them. What end, then, is served by petitionary prayer for the things God knows we need, and that he wills to bestow? Surely no thinker is unaware that verbal expression has much to do with both clearness of thought and the concentration of attention and will. It is reason enough for engaging in petitionary prayer, that the confession in words of our wants to God enables and pledges us in a clearer consciousness to work out more reverently and patiently the divine conditions of their supply.'—Literary Digest.

ANOTHER GREAT ASIATIC RAILROAD.
TALK about a British railroad to India increases in both volume and earnestness. The Russian railroads across Siberia and China and through Central Asia to the Chinese border greatly provoked it, and an additional stimulus has been given to it by the new enterprise which Russia is pushing post-haste of a branch from her Central Asian line through Persia south to the Persian Gulf. What effect present complications in the Eastern Mediterranean will have upon the scheme is not apparent, but if, as many believe, the British flag is ultimately to be raised over Crete that will be an additional reason for carrying forward the great work.

Kurrachee is spoken of as the Indian terminus of the road. Its Mediterranean terminus is a matter of more doubt. The coast of Palestine would afford the most natural point. Two or three lines of railroad already extend thither, to or toward the Tigris-Euphrates Valley; but they are under French control, and there is a common feeling that when the breakup of the Ottoman Empire comes Palestine and all Syria will be apportioned to France.

At any rate, there is little prospect of England's becoming mistress there, so another terminus must be sought. It is probably to be found at Alexandria, in Egypt, which is now practically and seems likely to remain permanently British soil. Thence the road would cross Northern Arabia, and pass along the southern coasts of Persia and Beloochistan to Kurrachee. All the way it would be in territory which is either British or under British influence, for the latter may be said even of Southern Persia, and most of the way it would be so near the sea as to be under the protection of the British fleet.

The scheme is a gigantic one, and the execution of it would be enormously expensive. It would be no more arduous an undertaking, however, than the Canada Pacific railroad, and not to be compared with that across Siberia. Its advantages would evidently be great. It would probably soon be pecuniarily profitable as a trade route, while its moral value as a connecting link with India would be inestimable. As a strategic route in case of war it would be above all price. With British aggression seeking new worlds to conquer, and British capital seeking investment, the project is one which the most practical-minded man may well consider.—New York Tribune.

GREATER CENTRAL AMERICA.

THE report comes from Tegucigalpa that the governments of Guatemala and Costa Rica have finally signed the treaty that makes them a part of the greater republic of Central America. The confederation was formally recognized by the United States last spring when it was formed by Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua, and it will be greatly strengthened by the addition of the two other republics. According to the census returns of 1893 the republic of Central America has the following population and area:

	Pop.	Area.
Guatemala.....	1,364,678	63,400
Costa Rica.....	243,205	23,000
Salvador.....	651,130	7,225
Honduras.....	396,048	43,000
Nicaragua.....	380,000	49,200
Totals.....	3,035,061	185,825

This population is slightly greater than that of Chile and only slightly less than that of the Argentine Republic. It is made up at present largely of Indians, but the proportion of Europeans and those of European descent is steadily increasing. These countries were united once before, when as a unit they broke away from the sovereignty of Spain, but jealousy and other causes of dissension resulted in the split up into independent governments. Now that they have come together again in a new republic it will be able to command serious attention and respect from other nations and amount to something. Its power and resources will be sufficient to ward off aggression from the outside and avert insurrections which have been so frequent in the past.—Chicago Tribune.

STATEMENTS CORRECTED.

HOLLISTER, Cal., June 11.

BRO. A. H. SMITH:—I was talking with one of the Utah elders by the name of Peterson, a few days ago, and I asked him why the Utah Church did not accept the inspired translation by your father, if he was a Prophet, and they believed in him as such. He said that it was because the manuscripts had been changed by the committee, and that you had said so. He then read a written statement by Mrs. Neal, of Sacramento, California, in which you are made to say in her presence that the committee changed the manuscript. He also stated that our position that there was between a hundred and seventy-five and two hundred thousand in the church at the death of your father was not true. And he brought the evidence of W. O. Clark and other old saints to prove it. So I wish you or someone that knows would state through the Herald whether these statements are true. If you stated any such thing before Mrs. Neal, own it, or deny it; because they are making capital of it. And please have the committee make a statement of just what changes were made, and how many there were in the church in 1844.

I am with the district tent. Brethren Farris and Newton Julian are with me, but I have to do all the preaching. My health a part of the time is very poor, and it is very hard for me to keep up; but I just get up and go, and then I just keep going. I hope this will find you all right in health and every other way. We are having quite an interest here for any place in California, as there has been an average attendance of about thirty. We will probably go from here to Salinas City; and from there to Monterey, during the watering season. I am blessed with good liberty, and the best order in our tent; so good that it has been remarked by outsiders. This is one of the places that it was objected to my going with the tent, as it was such a bad place; but I have had the same respect and good order everywhere I have been with the tent. My folks were all well when I heard from them. My home address is No. 922 Third Street, Oakland, California.

A. HAWS.

We are authorized by Pres. Alexander H. Smith to state specifically that there is no truth in the statement that he said in Mrs. Neal's presence, or in the presence of anybody else whatever, that the committee who were entrusted with the duty of publishing the Holy Scriptures (the Inspired Translation) "changed the manuscript."

He further states that he was not one of the committee, had nothing to do with the work when it was being done, and then knew nothing of any changes being made, and now knows of none having been made.

The statement made by us of the members in the church at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith has always been made upon the authority of estimates made and published by Joseph Smith, the Martyr, himself.

In a work published by I. Daniel Rupp, in 1844, called "History of Religious Denominations in the United States," is a chapter furnished by Joseph Smith, of Nauvoo, Illinois, in which, on page 409, occurs this statement, which we quote verbatim:—

There are no correct data by which the exact number of members this now extensive, and still extending Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints can be known. Should it be supposed at 150,000, it might still be short of the truth.—Joseph Smith to Rupp.

On May 13, 1844, Joseph Smith wrote Hon. Henry Clay a letter replying to the proposition of the latter to move the church beyond the Rocky Mountains, in this fashion:—

Why, Great God! to transport 200,000 people through a vast prairie; over the Rocky Mountains, to Oregon, a distance of nearly two thousand miles, would cost more than four million.—Joseph Smith in Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 547.

To this we add the statement of Pres. John Taylor, now dead, but editor of the Times and Seasons, February 1, 1846. In an editorial of that date President Taylor wrote thus:—

It is reduced to a solemn reality, that the rights and property, as well as the lives and common religious belief of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, cannot be protected in the realms of the United States, and, of course, from one to two hundred thousand souls must quit their freedom among free men, and go where the land, the elements, and the worship of God are free.—Times and Seasons, vol. 6, p. 1114.

If there is any error in the statement of numbers in the church in 1844, we are not responsible for that error. If Elder Peterson and his comrades choose to say that Joseph Smith, the martyr, and Pres. John Taylor made false statements when writing in 1844, upon the say so of "W. O. Clark and other old saints," we cannot help them, they must answer for it by and by.

The committee who secured the publication of the Inspired Translation, were Joseph Smith, son of the martyr; Israel L. Rogers, of Sandwich, Illinois; and Ebenezer Robinson, late of Davis City, Iowa. The latter is now dead; but I. L. Rogers and Joseph Smith live yet. On behalf of the committee living and dead, it is hereby stated that the manuscript was not changed in any sense, by anyone, nor all of the committee, but was given to the public in word and substance, as delivered to their hands; and any statement that changes were made in the manuscript before or after publication is untrue, and this the committee will meet here and hereafter.

A LIE, OR ERROR, WHICH?

THE following reaches us from the Society Islands. We hope for the sake of consistency that it is an error, resulting from misunderstanding; though the statement is clear and explicit.

Elder Jensen, a church historian of Utah, told us in Tehopea's house, on this island, in March, 1896, as interpreted by Elder Frank Cutler, of the Utah Church, who spoke this Tahitian language fluently, "That Joseph Smith, the Martyr, laid the corner stone of the temple in Salt Lake City."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

LETTERS are numerous, hence summaries are necessary. Though some are disposed to complain at the practice of making such extracts, our readers may readily see that our limited space requires it.

Bro. C. J. Spurlock, writing from Michigan, Missouri, June 12, says:—

Since my health has permitted me to labor in the ministry again I have preached at Cain Hill, where I found some five or six saints, assisted by nonmembers of the church, engaged in the Sunday school work, and using our literature. May God bless them in their effort. While there I had the pleasure of uniting Mr. Elmore Frisbie and Miss Lula Jones in the holy bonds of matrimony. I am now holding meeting at Boze Mill and stopping with Bro. Snodgrass, who came here from the Pomona branch. The time for our district conference is to be set by our worthy president, C. M. Bootman. It is to convene at Bruner, in Christian County. We hope to see a good attendance.

Bro. John H. Lake writing from Mission, LaSalle county, Illinois, June 21:—

There were three baptized at the conference. So far, I am well pleased with the mission. What we need is more laborers; and, dear brother, I appeal to you for help, and you will try and get some man to come into the mission. . . . I have been blessed in a marked manner since the conference at Lamoni; will not attempt to describe it now; but will say, there is much for the servants of God to do.

Bro. J. M. Hethcoat, South Pittsburg, Tenn., June 21:—

The good Spirit is working with our little branch here, and we all rejoice; three baptisms of late.

Bro. Fred A. Smith, writing from Omaha, June 21:—

The work here is alive and doing very nicely. Three were baptized two weeks ago and we have the names of some for the coming Sunday. I expect to commence tent meetings here about the 6th of July with Bro. W. A. Smith to help me. We had a very pleasant time at the reunion at Inman the first few days were a little cold, but we had a very nice session.

He sends the following, which may interest the HERALD readers:—

Given in tongues on the evening of May 6, 1897, at the saints' chapel, Omaha. Sung.

"My little flock, you've sought for me,
And I have heard your prayers.

My mercy sheds abroad for you,
Be faithful I will share.

"Be prayerful, O, ye saints of God,
The time is closing, nigh,
To dwell with you upon the earth,
As King of Kings, 'tis I.

"Then all the hosts of Satan's force,
Is bound a thousand years,
I'll heal your wounded hearts of gold,
And wipe away your tears,
I'll charge your hearts with grace divine,
And drive away your fears."

Spoken: "You must be tried as quartz, by fire, if gold you still remain. If pure in heart, you I'll require, thus saith the Lamb 'twas slain."

Brighamite elders are at work in the city of Philadelphia and surrounding districts. Brn. Alma Kent, A. M. Baker, and A. H. Parsons are doing what they can to withstand their efforts and to push the work before the people. Bro. Kent writes from Camden, New Jersey, the 19th inst, as follows:—

The work is moving along slowly with us, the weather has been unfavorable for tent work; our congregations have been fluctuating, some are investigating and inquiring after the truth. I baptized a very intelligent German lady on the 6th. I think her husband will follow; another has presented herself for baptism. Elder A. H. Parsons was over from the city last night and gave us a rousing discourse that gave us courage to continue. Our young brother, A. M. Baker, the boy preacher, is with me and a noble boy he is. He meets with favor from all, and almost makes one feel as though they would like to be a boy again and grow up in the work as calves in the stall.

Bro. G. M. Jamison, president of Des Moines Valley branch, Ford, Iowa, June 22:—

Please state in the Herald that we wish it understood that the ministry are invited to the Runnels branch to preach as circumstances may admit. Do not pass us by, but call when convenient, especially you of the Des Moines district; and please remember it is our purpose to please you.

Bro. E. A. Erwin, Manchester, Texas, June 20:—

We are having the pleasure of being with Bro. I. P. Baggerly. He has been busy, telling the people the glad tidings. We were with him the first Sunday in this month in the eastern part of the county. We had the pleasure of baptizing three noble young ladies and one young man. We have just returned from Blossom Prairie where Bro. Baggerly did as fine preaching as I ever heard. We worked up a considerable interest. There are good people to come in out here. The outlook for the gospel in this country is splendid. We begin at Manchester July 3. All the scattered saints will please attend if possible. Bro. Baggerly will help, then we anticipate going to Vanzant County.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. ALEXANDER SMITH wrote from Fergus Falls, Minnesota, that the reunion meetings were opening auspiciously. He would likely stay a few days in the district to fill appointments. He was feeling quite well.

Bro. Joseph Luff baptized one at Salt Lake City, Sr. Vera, daughter of Sr. Dr. Higgins; and at Huntington, Bro. James and Alsha Shaw, aged 73 and 72, respectively, and Miss Deloria Chaffee, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Chaffee, of Fontanelle, Iowa, and sister of Sr. Dodd at whose home in Huntington Bro. Luff was staying, so goes the work.

Bro. Henry Hart, of Broughton, Kansas, president of the Northwestern Kansas district, wrote from his district that the result of the meetings at Minersville were productive of good to the cause in the district.

The Marion, Iowa, Sentinel of several dates has reached us with articles on Mormonism by Rev. J. A. Seaton, also one reply by Bro. Columbus Scott. Bro. Scott, so far, has combined in his reply a plain presentation of leading points of the faith, and will doubtless succeed in getting it before the people while he destroys the false assumptions of his opponent. It is a "way" he has of doing in discussion.

The "Morning Star," a barkentine-rigged vessel with auxiliary steam engine, owned and maintained by the American Board of Missions, will sail with a crew of missionaries—for a tour among the Cannibal islands of the South Pacific ocean. May its missionary work prepare the way for others to enlighten and exalt the dwellers of those lands by the preaching of the gospel in its fullness.

Sr. J. A. Eckhart, writing from Kalkaska, Michigan, recounts her experiences in finding the truth and the blessings she has obtained by obeying it. Her husband and children are with her in the good cause, in which she rejoices. They are teaching the word in the Sunday school, trying to do something in evidence that they love the work.

Sr. Mary Topliff, writing from Chatham Center, Ontario, relates manifestations of the Spirit in dream and in healing power by which she has been led from darkness to light, comforted, and healed, also others of her family, of affliction. Her statements add to the list of evidences that God regards and blesses his people.

Bro. W. O. Wetherbee, Clayton, Adams County, Illinois, wants to rent a farm in Southwestern Missouri, where there is a community of saints. Will some one oblige him by writing, if knowing of such an opportunity.

Bro. Nicholas Stamm writes good news from Haven, Iowa, the 24th inst. The late conference of the Des Moines district was a session of peace and unity throughout; one was baptized. Brn. Scott and Morgan continued preaching in the tent and five more obeyed the word. Those brethren were to go next to Perry, Dallas County, with the tent. Saints were rejoicing in the good cause.

Bro. R. E. Grant, at work in Michigan, is having an experience with one Lyman H. Johnston, who is editing a paper called the Stumbling Stone, at Toledo, Ohio, who has undertaken to destroy the influence of the work being done in Bro. Grant's field by issuing an article called "The Mormon Imposture," in his paper, and circulating it among those attending the meetings. The article is a series of picked quotations from the work of one "Elder Bradden, of Missouri," whoever that may be; and is a dirty piece of work indeed, and we do not wonder that Bro. Grant should be indignant; but, we counsel patience, for the reason that sooner or later all these evil doings must pass away and those who make and love a lie will have received the merited award for their evil doing; and the truth-loving, truth-holding saints can afford to be patient and wait.

"Sr. Estelle" sends us notes of the dedication of the first church building in the Northwest Kansas district, at Minersville, June 12 and 13, at which Presidents Joseph Smith and A. H. Smith were present, and which has already been reported, though briefly. It is replete with good things, but we are obliged to omit it. We wish we could publish more that the deep interest of many prompts them to write. However, we try not to omit any essential items.

The Gospel Quarterlies have all been mailed, for the quarter comprising the months of July, August, and September. The issue was delayed somewhat by causes for which the Herald Office is not responsible. It is expected that future editions will be issued earlier and all delays avoided.

Bishop E. L. Kelley arrived home on Thursday, the 24th, accompanied by his brother, Attorney P. P. Kelley, Esq., of Glenwood, Iowa.

Portions of Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin were visited by a severe electric storm on the 23d. Lightning did considerable damage, killing stock and striking buildings. High winds and floods aided the work of destruction.

Bro. Albert Haws was at Hollister, California, June 13, doing tent work, assisted by Brn. Richard Ferris and Newton Julian. Their audiences averaged about thirty. In addition to tent work they were reaching some by calling at their homes and talking with the people on the streets. They would go thence to Salinas and Monterey. "It is very hard to reach the people of California, and growing worse every day," Bro. Haws writes.

Bro. Henry Hoole, of Walkley, Sheffield, England, wrote under date of June 8, expressing his satisfaction with the church and a desire to be active in its behalf. A flourishing Sunday school at that place is doing much good for the young and older members. He exhorts the local ministry to activity, and all saints to diligence.

President Joseph Smith accompanied by Bro. P. Purfurst, went to Stewartsville, Missouri, on the 26th, to remain over Sunday, the 27th. Bro. Purfurst will return thence to Los Angeles. He is well pleased with his experiences as a member of the Reorganized Church, and leaves many warm friends among the saints of Lamoni.

A cyclone did much damage to property at Rich Hill, Missouri, June 24. Other places in that State, also various cities and towns in Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, and Colorado, were visited by destructive rain, lightning, or hailstorms.

Bro. Charles Brewer, Vassar, Michigan, is thankful that he obeyed the gospel. He advises those convinced not to delay.

The entire Belgian expedition under

Baron Dhanis, which was operating in the Congo Free State and in connection with the British in the Soudan, has been massacred by a revolt of the natives.

Archbishop Hennessey, of Dubuque, Iowa, one of the most conservative and able prelates of the Roman Catholic Church in America, severely denounced the American public school system, in an address delivered at Dubuque, June 24.

Two earthquake shocks at Hopkinsville, Kentucky, June 24.

Discontented Brahmins have secretly assassinated a number of British officials in India, as a manifestation of their hatred of British rule.

Thirty thousand poor and maimed of the London slums were fed by the Princess of Wales during the late jubilee festivities.

Bro. R. C. Evans, London, Ontario, June 24: "Chatham and London district conferences just closed were two of the largest and best conferences I ever attended. Peace and unity prevailed in business sessions. The sweet Spirit was in the prayer meetings. One little girl lately baptized arose and spoke in tongues. The preaching was solid, wise, and full of love. Much good was done; several were baptized; all were cheered, and the outlook for a great work never was brighter."

Late Yokohama papers received at Tacoma, Washington, June 26, publish advices from the Philippine Islands rebels dated May 18. The writer asserts that during the campaign just ended the Spanish have lost no less than 4,700 men killed and mortally wounded. The rebels started with but nine efficient guns, while now they have nearly 10,000 captured Mauser and Remington rifles. Three important towns had just risen in rebellion; one in Tambales, another in Tayahas, and one in the Isle de Negros.

Bishop Kelley left home again on the 25th, going to Ohio in response to call.

The Turkish army in Epirus having occupied several positions overlooking Agrapha, thus threatening the Greek retreat in the event of a resumption of hostilities, the Greek government has decided to occupy Karpensis with a strong force.

THE CHURCH HISTORY, SECOND VOLUME.

THE Board of Publication are gratified to be able to announce the completion at an early time of the second volume of the Church History. Already plates are made for 400 pages, and the book will be ready for delivery in July.

This history should be in the houses of all saints and friends of the work of Christ in the last days; its importance as one of the prime agencies in disseminating the truths and correct positions of the church in the nineteenth century can hardly be overestimated.

The Board of Publication was instructed by the Annual Conference of 1896 to issue this work, and it has moved forward under many difficulties to accomplish the same, and should have the hearty cooperation of every member and friend now in spreading the news and giving the people an opportunity to understand the faith of the Latter Day Saints as it is.

The church has suffered in the past on account of having been represented in a large part by its enemies and those who have been ready to malign their faith.

There is nothing more important than that we should present to the world our own faith and organization as well as the work of the church since 1830, and if we fail to do this, we are not active as becometh our high and holy calling as servants of the Lord.

The second volume of the Church History will contain about 700 pages and is delivered at the low price at which the first volume was sold; viz.; at $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, and $3.00 per volume postage prepaid, to any address in the United States or Canada. For styles of binding see advertisement in this number of HERALD.

The office is in need of means which it has necessarily expended in getting out this volume, and it is urged upon the saints that they send in their orders promptly and thus be able to assist the office, as they at the same time assist in disseminating the true work and positions of the church among the people.

Nothing is more worthy and commendable than an effort in this direction; and let us not wait until we may thus aid without feeling that it is something of a sacrifice, for great good comes to the people when they make true and devoted sacrifice in order to forward any great and true work.

Send all orders and contributions to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa; and where parties at any one point desire to get a number of the books, they may be sent by express, and the postage which will be from twenty-five to thirty cents on each book, saved to those ordering.

Please let us hear from you at once. As ever, confidently in the truth and working for its advancement.

E. L. KELLEY,

President Board Publication.

LAMONI, IOWA, June 10, 1897.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

AS REGULARLY year by year the list of names from the Islands comes to us, showing what the sisters in those far-away realms of the earth are doing for the spread of the gospel, we wonder why it is that the zeal of those upon this side of the ocean has relaxed. What is hindering those who once contributed to this fund from keeping up their contributions we know not, but are led to hope that in some way, perhaps through some other channel, it finds its way to the Lord's treasury. It seems a pity, however, that for the sake of encouraging those who are looking to us for an example (as for instance these island saints are) that it is not continued with more energy and zeal. Not long since Sr. Montgomery, of California, sent in fifteen dollars to the fund, and asked the question why so few contributed. Would it not be well, sisters, when our birthdays come around, to bring to the Lord an offering? Think of it, sisters, and may thinking lead you to act upon it.

NOTICE TO DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

The Herald of June 16, contained the regular reading for July meetings entitled "Work and Play." The heading was omitted through mistake and the short article by Dr. Greer on "Wastes" mentioned in July program will be used for August meetings and will appear in connection with the reading for that month.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, May 8, 1897.

Editors Herald:—We left "Hikuera" on the schooner Te-ave-roa on Friday, February 26, for Kaukura and conference; Brother and Sister Case and child and Bro. Johnson with us. After stopping for bufa at Tariaro, an island where a man and his wife are the only inhabitants, we went on to Takaroa and Ahe, then on to Kaukura, where we arrived on Friday, March 5, Bro. and Sr. Case going on to Tahiti, and in the latter part of the month the saints began coming in for conference in boats and vessels until five hundred and fifty-six had arrived.

The branches of Kaukura, Niau, Arutua, and Apataki made a feast for the conference. For this purpose they built a large house 120 feet long by fifty wide with two roofs, all made from the cocoanut tree. The trunk of the tree made the posts, rafters, etc., the stock of the long leaves made the wall around the building, about three feet high, and the leaves woven into mats made the roof—water tight—and mats for carpeting. In this building were about forty-five tables, at each of which about twelve persons could sit.

The feast commenced on April 1, and finished on the 19th, nearly three weeks of feasting; three meals a day of nice food generally nicely cooked, of fowls, pork, fish, with some canned food, fruit, butter, milk, and cheese. It was supposed that each table cost for food and dishes about three hundred dollars; some cost much more than this.

Before the feast began these four branches furnished flour, pork, coffee, and sugar to all the visiting saints; and at the close of conference they made an "aroha" of upwards of fifty barrels of flour, several tins of lard biscuit, many pigs, and coffee and sugar for these brethren to have to eat on the way home. Flour cost them $18.50 per barrel.

The Tubuoi saints came in a schooner which they had chartered for five hundred dollars. This also was paid by these branches, helped some by the brethren at conference. By a computation made by a man who thought he knew whereof he spake, the Tubuoi saints, about twenty of them, cost the four branches and their relatives about $2,800.00; but they brought a few potatoes, dried bananas, and oil with them.

All the missionaries have tried to stop such extravagance, but it seems almost impossible; nevertheless we got a resolution passed at conference with but few dissenting votes, to do away with the giving away of such large quantities of food, and will try next to equalize the burden of caring for the conference visitors, so that the few will not be so heavily burdened.

After conference Emma and I with Bro. Hawkins went on board the "Tapioi" for Tahiti to try and get the press to work. There were about one hundred natives on board. We were four days going down, light winds all the time. The first night out just about sundown the heavens became black with heavy clouds, and the thunder began to roll and the lightning flash heavily. Then came the hour for the evening hymn and prayer. While they were singing I thought of the great discomfort there would be that night when the rains which seemed so near now should descend; for all the after part of the vessel was so closely packed with men, women, and children that a person could not walk forward but must climb on the rail or skylight. The cabin was full and many in the hold, and while my mind was busy with these thoughts, and was feeling sympathy for those people, the singing ceased and they called upon me to pray; and the spirit of supplication rested upon me and I asked God to have compassion upon us; and although I knew I was asking much of him, yet I desired that he would command the clouds that they should not pour forth their rain upon us during this trip, and although I was but an imperfect man, he had hitherto heard such an one, and the heavens retained their rain for a much longer time than I desired it. And I felt it would be done, and that God had heard; and I always know that God will do right so my anxiety ended when I had perceived that he had heard me; so I went to our room, a comfortable berth in a room between the cabin and hold, my feelings filled with a peace and gladness not easily told. And no rain fell on us on that trip. We left Kaukura on the 19th of April and arrived at Papeete on the 23d.

About midnight one night during conference time Bro. Case came to our house and woke me up, and told me that Bro. John Hawkins was dying and had sent me word that he wished me to forgive him if by any means he had offended me. He had called all his relatives in and had bidden them good-bye, and was suffering from an affliction that has troubled him for years, but now the attack was so severe he felt he must go. I went immediately to him; he was groaning in great agony. Bro. Case and some of the native elders and I prayed again that God would spare our brother to us and rebuke his suffering, and in a few seconds he ceased his groaning, and in a few minutes his pain had all ceased, and the next day he said he felt better than he had for a long time. He was healed by the power of God and his heart was made glad and softened. I speak of these that you may know that God's loving hand is over all his people for good wherever they may be. Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me praise his holy name.

We are trying to get our printing press in operation. W. McGrath volunteered to help me, and I gladly accepted, and we are in a fair way to get out our first number of the Orometua next week. Mr. I. Henry does our translating. Emma and I are well and enjoy our blessings, and are so busy we have not time yet to get lonesome.

The saints just before conference got quite uneasy, as Bro. and Sr. Case could not apparently get to conference, as she was taken very sick with a chill and fever about the time the vessel left for Kaukura; but she shortly recovered and they got a passage up, and there was much joy when the saints learned that Hubiti and Alite had arrived. They were in time for the Sunday school convention and conference, after which they were to go to Arutua and so on up to the westward to their field of labor.

May peace be with them and with all the Israel of God. J. F. BURTON.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, June 7.

Editors Herald:—We have just concluded a very profitable conference in this place, also Sunday school convention. Elders J. C. Crabb and D. R. Chambers presided over the conference. There was a very good attendance at the business sessions, and the preaching services were crowded. I never saw greater unity in the transaction of business; in fact the president facetiously complained that he could not arouse any opposition on any question before the house. The setting apart of Elder Joseph Seddon as President of the Second Quorum of Elders, and also of Elder Frederick Hansen as Second Counselor to the president of that quorum was duly attended to, as ordered by the General Conference, under the hands of High Priests Derry and Crabb in the order named. Priests Joseph Lane, of Little Sioux branch, and Bro. Court, of Moorhead branch, were ordained elders as per recommendation from their respective branches, and as we verily believe by the direction of the Holy Spirit. Bro. Hurst, of Missouri Valley, was ordained to the deaconship. Reports from the several branches and members of the priesthood were generally encouraging, and a general determination to sow the seeds of truth in their respective fields and branches was manifest, and we hope to see a good work done between now and the October conference of this district.

Several two-days' meetings were appointed, as per request, under the direction of branch presidents, where branches existed, and the local officers who labored in the vicinity of such meetings, with the privilege of calling to their aid such help as may be available.

The Sabbath morning prayer meeting was largely attended and an excellent time was enjoyed, the Holy Spirit's influence being manifest in a very large degree. The young of both sexes bore humble but faithful testimony to the blessings received through obedience to the gospel. The middle-aged and those of gray hairs gave evidence of the power of the gospel to bless and ennoble mankind. During the conference the bread of life was broken by Elders Carlson, Derry, Crabb, and McDowell in the order named. The choir, under the leadership of Elder Kibler, did excellent service in the offering of our songs of praise.

Elders J. C. Crabb and H. O. Smith intend to commence work with the tent in Dunlap, in the near future, and continue through the summer in different places. I learn that our former brother, D. H. Bays, is on the war path, under the auspices of the Christian or Cambellite Church, determined to annihilate the Latter Day Saints Church, or make a little money out of his attacks. While I am sorry to see the course he has taken, I have no fears as to the result. God has said respecting his work, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." This work has withstood the opposition of the whole of the powers of darkness from the beginning and it still stands and proudly waves the banner of eternal truth and will do when our erring former brother and his mightiest efforts are lost in oblivion. My worst desire for him is that he, like many others who have taken a similar course, may yet see his error and return to the fold of God. It is amusing to see how eagerly the sects of the day and especially the "Christian" sect avail themselves of the doubtful aid of those who have turned away from the truth, to use them as tools to destroy this latter-day work, they having exhausted all their talent and cunning to destroy it in vain. Can there be any greater evidence of their weakness? Our duty as saints of God is to strive to imitate the divine Jesus, who, "when he was reviled reviled not again." Let us not be betrayed into the unsaintly practice of hurling slander for slander. Blackening the character of our opponents will not help the cause of truth nor render us more pure, either in the sight of God or man. "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God." Still believing and hoping in the promises of God, I intend by divine help to perform my duty and endure to the end.

CHARLES DERRY.

MYRTLE POINT, Oregon, June 14.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Chase and the writer are hard at work holding meetings nightly. Yesterday (Sunday) we held four, two in a schoolhouse in the country. We are having a fine interest; over a hundred out every night, most of them thinking people, notwithstanding the churches combined against us, refusing us the use of their meeting houses, and one minister refused to announce our meetings.

The work was first established here some twenty years ago, by Bro. Clapp, who baptized some six or seven and left a good impression, which still exists, as our well-attended meetings prove.

We return the last of this week to Looking Glass, where we held meetings before coming here; had a good interest there, attendance from fifty to one hundred, and an excellent feeling among the people. We expect to do some baptizing there on our return.

We are the guests of Bro. and Sr. Gilges and family, a splendid family. On my way here I stopped at Los Angeles, Tulare City, Modesto, Oakland, San Francisco, San Jose, San Benito, and Sacramento. Spoke at all of these places, and it is needless to try and tell how I enjoyed myself. If it is good to be a saint, it is indeed good to meet them and preach for them. The branches all seem to be in a fairly good condition; the Sacramento branch I think the best I have ever seen it in.

At Oakland I was pleased to meet Bro. Chase, who got some concessions from the railroad that enabled him to come that way. I am much pleased with him as a traveling companion and minister for Christ; an all-round fellow, ready to sing, preach, pray, or work; a true servant of the Master.

I am hopeful of a good summer's or year's work; plenty of calls for preaching, which we will respond to just as fast as we can.

Our plan now is to work this part of Oregon this summer, Washington and Eastern Oregon this winter. We want to do as much work and as little traveling as possible. For a time we expect to be at Drain and Lebanon. Some have written requesting us to fetch the tent. It requires a little money to handle it, which we have not got; can only move it as the way opens. But the tent is by far the best way to open up the work.

Our address will be as before: Drain, Douglas County, Oregon. Will be pleased to hear from saints and friends.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

COALVILLE, Utah, June 2.

Editors Herald:—It is four years in August since Bro. Hansen was here, and eleven since Bro. Anthony was here. I think the elders neglect some parts of their work, and forget those that are in the fold, to seek new and strange ones. Sr. Smith and I are alone here in Coalville. I am getting along in years, and have poor health; sometimes think I won't be privileged to see many years more nor to hear the blessed gospel. I have only broken bread twice since I came from Farnsworth, England, thirteen years ago, where we used to hear the word of God spoken, and enjoyed the blessings that follow; but cannot tell of the heartaches I have here alone, and so neglected.

Sr. Smith has been very sick this week, and Bro. Smith was sick three months almost. When Bro. Hansen was here we did all we could to make him comfortable. H. O. Smith was here, but he did not preach. Why is it we are left alone? Bro. and Sr. Robeson are ten miles from here, so we don't meet often.

They are getting old, and ought to be permitted to hear the truth soon, and partake of the bread and wine, as also had we.

There was once a flourishing branch at Henefer, but through neglect, some have joined the Brighamites, some turned infidel. I feel to thank God that my faith is strong yet. This gospel delivered to our dear martyred prophet is the dearest sound on earth to me. I rejoiced at the great blessings bestowed on the saints at the late conference. May we hear soon that blessed gospel of the Son of God. My husband is a Mormon, and sore trials have I had in defending Bro. Joseph and the Reorganized Church; but the more I am persecuted the brighter is my path. God has been good to me in leaving me that much light amid such utter darkness. Many times I have to bear my testimony to the work of God and this latter-day work, in which we are engaged.

Your sister in Christ,
MARY A. LIVESY.

STILLWATER, Okla., June 7.

Editors Herald:—It has been a long time since I contributed anything to your columns concerning my personal labors and experiences in the ministry. I wish to say that I am not idle if I have been silent. I left General Conference for home, making the trip with team, driving southward through Gallatin, Hamilton, Kingston, Richmond, Lexington, Holden and home to Lebeck. I found the natives usually willing to lodge me over night, and quite ready to charge me all they thought I would pay next morning. In many places I found saints to stop with, but as I had been accustomed to stopping with strangers in Kansas, and paying my way in preaching, I thought I would pursue the same course with the "inhabitants of Zion," but the harder I preached the more they seemed to charge.

I reached home in due time and had a general visit with the saints for ten days. It was a great pleasure to see home and friends once more, after an absence of nearly a full year. I left home May 5 for my field of labor, in company with Bro. G. W. Beebe, Jr., he going to Spring River district and I to Oklahoma. We certainly came very close to the apostolic plan of going "without purse or scrip," as I had only eight cents in my pocket when I left home and Bro. B. was about as well off as myself. We drove to Montevallo, sojourning over night with Bro. Failor. Next night found us near Lamar, at Bro. Souders. By the way our pockets "jingled" the next day one would guess that Bro. Souders' folks were "free silver" people. We tarried over night with Bro. Miles of Nashville, thence to Weir, Kansas, to take in the White-Leonard debate at Scammon, near Weir. The writer was installed as moderator for Bro. White, and the conflict began. It was really pleasant to occupy my old place as "right hand man" for Bro. I. N. once more. It brought to mind experiences at El Dorado Springs and Blendville. We tried to catch every point of importance on both sides, and we left feeling well paid for the time spent, and believing that the gospel was better understood in Scammon than before, and that the future will develop a harvest at that place. We are inclined also to believe (judging from countenances) that there are several Campbellite preachers in that locality who will not be anxious to defend the Campbellite Church in public debate.

I bade adieu to saints at Weir and drove to Blendville, where Brn. English and Houts made some very necessary repairs on the missionary buggy. I then drove to Fairland, Indian Territory, arriving at Bro. Hilens place on Saturday night, May 22. On Sunday I drove to Echo, expecting to hear Bro. Shepard preach; but on reaching the home of Mr. and Sr. Duncan of that place, I learned that he was "across the river," so I did not see him. I had a pleasant sojourn over night with my Lamanite namesake, and departed on my way early next morning for Catale. Two miles north of Catale I found a family of Lamanites named Dicks, who are kindly disposed toward the church, and who very kindly kept me over night. I talked Book of Mormon to them till a late hour, they manifesting a great interest in hearing me read from the same and explain to them the history of their ancestors. Next day I drove to the home of Bro. David Beck, a Lamanite brother, and found a royal welcome. Here I had the pleasure of greeting a "full blood" Lamanite, Sister New. Several of the neighbors gathered at the house of Bro Beck, and I talked to them on the Book of Mormon, using my maps, which Sr. Davis of Weir, Kansas, had assisted in making while I was there. I find that many of the Lamanites are prepared to understand the gospel, and at no great distant day a great work will be done among them; and I should not be surprised to see that the "full bloods" make the best Latter Day Saints. There are many of them, however, that care little for anything elevating; but the same can be truthfully said of their white brother. Bro. Macrae relates a story of a Lamanite who offered to be a "heap good Jesus man for three dollars."

Leaving Bro. Beck's place, I drove toward Catoosa, crossing the Virdigris River on a ferry. After paying the charges, thirty-five cents, I found that I had only twenty-three cents left. Here I was between two rivers and not a Latter Day Saint between them that I knew of, and not enough money to cross either way, as the charge over the Arkansas was fifty cents, and not only that, but night was approaching. Well, I moved on, trusting in the Lord. I knew that if he wanted me on the other side of the river he would in some manner open the way. I stopped at Catoosa and called on Mr. Denbo, whose name I had learned from Bro. Beck. He treated me very kindly and lodged me over night. I learned from him that a Sr. Hill resided in the town, and next morning I called on her. It was almost like meeting an old friend, as I have long been acquainted with her mother, Sr. Tate of Perkins, and Sr. Hinkle of Stillwater, her sister. She very kindly supplied me with the means to cross the Arkansas River, and I proceeded on my journey. Next night I reached the home of Bro. C. White, near Red Fork, in the Creek Nation. I here learned that I was just two days behind Bro. Macrae, who had been there holding meetings; that I had about seventy-five miles to drive through a wilderness, where a white man could scarcely be found, and where there was only an occasional Indian cabin. The roads were hard for a stranger to find. It was an unpleasant task; but I set out, taking provision with me to last me through, which Sr. White kindly prepared. I drove several miles out of my way the first day, not being able to follow the "trail," there being so many roads leading off in various directions. Finally I succeeded in overtaking some teams hauling freight to Cushing, Oklahoma, which was on my way. I explained my circumstances to them, and they kindly invited me to share their bed with them, as the Indians would not talk to me at all when I asked to stay over night with them. We built a big, bright camp fire, spread a quilt on the ground, and pulling another over us, we considered ourselves "in bed." This brought to mind some of our bygone experiences in the far west, when we "camped out." As one of the company was quite talkative, we lay and chatted on gospel themes until a late hour. I stayed with the company next day and enjoyed with them their sports of hunting and fishing while the horses rested, or as game was sighted near the trail. Toward evening we reached the line of Oklahoma, and once more partook of the comforts of civilization, reaching the home of Bro. S. J. Hinkle the following day. I found Brn. Macrae and Hinkle at work, and an excellent interest manifested on the part of the people. I consider this about as fine a field for gospel work as any I have visited. Everybody you meet is "on the war path" in a religious sense. They are sifting everything in the light of the word and reason. Good will certainly come from it. This is a much better country than I had expected to find. My health is quite good now and has been for sometime; I am very thankful for the same.

Yours in the conflict,
C. R. DUNCAN.

COLESBURG, Iowa, June 11.

Editors Herald:—Since leaving home I have been busy most every day and evening preaching and otherwise defending and advancing the latter-day message. Leaving Lamoni I proceeded to Radcliffe, in Hardin County; but finding it unfavorable to hold service, besides being refused the churches of the town, I thought it not wise to put the saints to the expense of hiring the opera house. I took train for Bro. C. E. Hords', near Chelsea, in Tama County. Having to lay over four hours in Tama City, I inquired of several parties concerning the Latter Day Saints living between Haven and Chelsea. It did me good to hear how they were praised by their neighbors. One man whom I afterward learned the saints had considered an enemy, said, "no better citizens or finer people ever lived." This is excellent, coming from an enemy (an enemy to the doctrine). In this neighborhood—near Chelsea, is where Bro. Philip Shimmell was struck on the side of the face with a wagon neck yoke by a Brighamite. He was arrested and was in jail waiting his trial when I was there. Hav'n't heard yet how it came out; but almost every one I talked with seemed to think Brighamite prejudice lay at the bottom of the affairs. Bro. Shimmell bears an excellent reputation, and is said to be the most peaceable, quiet man in the neighborhood. I was prevailed upon to preach to the saints and friends in that part, several times, though I was not yet in my field, I hope Bro. Scott will forgive me by returning the compliment, if I was found trespassing.

Coming out of Des Moines I got in conversation with a Disciple preacher, who had just graduated from one of their colleges, and he gave me the Christian Index to read, which contained an article from an Elder Seaton, of Marion, on "Mormonism." Of course this introduced the subject of religion. He informed me that he was a graduate, and asked me if we had any colleges. I told him that we were highly in favor of education, and had schools and a college for that purpose; but did not believe in theological educations only as they were received from the Lord and which I thought was much the better way. He replied that if I would show him a minister that ever amounted to anything who did not have a theological education he would be much obliged to me. I asked him how Peter and St. John would do. He said they lived in the miraculous age of Christianity. I told him that made no difference. He asked me to point out the man; and I did so; and his striving to evade it only made me think that he was convinced.

I always hold a man to one point at time, till one of us is beaten; and I like to inform them that an effort to talk about another point shows they are convinced in their own mind. We then had a long talk about the unchangeability of God and the gospel, and he became so excited that he tried to prove that God was changeable, and that baptism was no part of the gospel, because I had proved that baptism was known in Moses' day. He talked so loud that a great many came near to listen, even from the smoking car. When we got to Ames his knees were so cramped that he had to get out and walk the platform for exercise. After that I could not get to talk with him.

Since arriving in my field I have preached a week at Amber, and three weeks at Edgewood. Began here the next night after the Catholics killed the Devil. But I can certify that they did a poor job. Think perhaps they may have frightened him, so that he took refuge in this town. Set up the tent the 9th. Commenced meeting the 10th; but owing to a great deal of disturbance by the boys, (which by the way generally show what they hear at home,) had a poor meeting and a very poor sermon. Saw some of the leading men of town yesterday, also the council and Mayor, and informed them that if there was any more disturbance they might have their town disgraced by hearing of a wholesale arrest. That I already had the names of nine boys, sons of some of the leading men. That if I could not catch them for what they might do, I could for what they had already done. Well, the effect was electrical. The Mayor and councilmen saw a number of the boys, and last night we had almost a tent full, and I never had better order. Many of the town officers were out, also the editor of the leading paper. I called on him and explained the difference between us and the Brighamites, and our position. He asked me to write an article to that effect for his paper, which I did, and he published it yesterday. The editor of another paper has also asked for an article. Expect to be here two or three weeks. My permanent address is Lamoni, Iowa. My field address will be Center Junction, Iowa, care Willard B. Thomas. If any of the saints wish preaching and have a place, please let me know, or inform Bro. C. E. Hand at Chelsea, Iowa. Bro. Hand and I are associated together for the good of the work, and desire the coöperation of the district.

J. W. PETERSON.

EAGLE LAKE, Ind., June 18.

Editors Herald:—Left Derby, Indiana, June 13, and came via Louisville, to this place arriving here June 15. I am here attending the Indiana State Sunday School Convention, which has just closed. I was sent as delegate from the Perry County Sunday school association. Most of my gospel work this spring has been along Sunday school lines. By this means I have brought the church before many distinguished people who otherwise would not have known of it. This convention placed me on one of the leading committees, and also requested me to give an address, which I did. Winona near by, is the most beautiful summer resort in Indiana. From here I go to Michigan to do gospel work, having been appointed by Bro. E. C. Briggs. My address will be Coldwater, Michigan.

Very faithfully, yours in the truth,
JAMES M. BAGGERLY.

BUNGAY, Ill., June 9.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Stead and I have been laboring in Thackeray with some success; we got the school building there for a week; we had good attention, with some few investigating. Have been holding forth every night and twice on Sunday since April 25. The calls are many, but the laborers are few. The people want to hear, and we desire to do what we can for them. At McLeansboro we were refused a house to preach in. We will see if we cannot take the district tent there in July or August; the sheriff says we can pitch it on the public square.

We returned here last Monday; preached in Springerton Monday night; and last night spoke here, and to-day baptized two promising young men. Will speak here to-night, then on to district conference.

Yours in the conflict,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 4.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

"THE THREE ANGELS' MESSAGES."

THE two basic deceptions connected with the "Advent movement" so far referred to herein have the association of a third, which is equally as well founded and supported by Scripture perversions, misapplications, also assumptions, as the first and second have proved to be. This relates to their position in regard to the three angels and their missions, as prophesied by John the Revelator in the fourteenth chapter, verses 6-12. The text reads:—

And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name. Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.—Revelation 14:6-12.

That the foregoing prophetic statement of John refers to the latter-day work of God and its related events, we most fully believe. That "the everlasting gospel"—the same as Jesus preached and delivered to the church eighteen hundred years ago, the identical one that Paul preached at Galatia (see Gal. 1:6-12),—was to be brought to earth again by an holy angel and published to all nations in these latter days, is truly believed by us. That the great work here predicted by John involves the work referred to by Peter in Acts 3:19, 20, the great "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began;" and that it is included in the "restoration" "of all things" as predicted by our Savior (Matt. 17: 10, 11) when foretelling what was to take place just prior to his second advent. In fact it will be necessary for the gospel to be restored before it can "be preached as a witness to all nations" before the end of the world comes, as foretold by Jesus (Matt. 24: 14). More especially is this apparent, as we become aware of the fact that the gospel consists not of "word only," but also of authority or "power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." (1 Thess. 1:5.)

The three latter elements of the gospel, here stated by Paul to be parts of it, have not been possessed by men on earth since their return to heaven, as was seen by John, during the time of the great apostasy of the church during the fourth and fifth centuries after Christ, (Rev. 12: 5, 6,) under the figure of "a man child." And the church, as an organization, was left to be carried into "the wilderness" of apostasy, to be fed with the "doctrines of devils" and "seducing spirits," "from the face of the serpent," (1 Tim. 4: 1-4; Rev. 12: 13, 14,) till such time as the people were willing to be placed in possession of the gospel, not "in word only," but also in "power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," again, through the medium and mission of the angel, as seen by the revelator, John.

That there is a necessity for the restoration of "the everlasting gospel" is made painfully manifest in the fact that when we go to the popular religious world and offer to them the identical claims of the gospel of apostolic times, in all its principles, authority, spiritual powers, gifts, and blessings, they immediately object, saying, "We need no authorized apostles and prophets now; they were only intended for the setting up of the church, then to be done away. We have no use now for inspired and divinely authorized pastors, teachers or deacons. We can select such as we like for ourselves!" Paul prophesied that the people would think to do just that, in the apostate history of subsequent time. (See 2 Tim. 4:4, 5.) "We have," say the popular religionists of these days, "no need of the spirit of revelation, or the spiritual gifts now; we have the written word of God, and college-bred theologians to preach it!" Yes. So had the Jews when the inspired and authorized John the Baptist (John 1: 6; Luke 7: 27, 28) was sent unto them; and so have those who are under the ban of deception ever contended. But the gospel of Christ comes not "in word only; but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

This is the gospel Paul was sent to preach, (1 Thess. 1:5.) He was "not ashamed of" this gospel. "It is the power of God to salvation." (Romans 1:16, 17). And he promises the curse on any man or angel who should preach any other (Galatians 1:6-9). Therefore, if the angel that John saw "having the everlasting gospel," or, any set of men who claim to be fulfilling the angel's message, bring not the gospel as it was presented by Jesus and the apostles anciently, they should be rejected. In fact they are not authorized to come; for the angel will, if he has not already done so, bring that gospel. There is no other sent of God.

Now that the reader may understand what the deception is in connection with this subject that we refer to, I quote from a work written by Ellen G. White, entitled "The Great Controversy Between Christ and Satan," pages 222, 223, as follows:—

The prophecy of the first angel's message, brought to view in Revelation 14, found its fulfillment in the Advent movement of 1840-1844. In both Europe and America, men of faith and prayer were deeply moved as their attention was called to the prophecies, and, tracing down the inspired record, they saw convincing evidence that the end of all things was at hand. The Spirit of God urged his servants to give the warning. Far and wide spread the message of the everlasting gospel, "Fear God and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." Wherever missionaries had penetrated, were sent the glad tidings of Christ's speedy return. In different lands were found isolated bodies of Christians, who, solely by the study of the Scriptures, had arrived at the belief that the Savior's advent was near. In some portions of Europe, where the laws were so oppressive as to forbid the preaching of the Advent doctrine, little children were impelled to declare it, and many listened to the solemn warning. To William Miller and his colaborers it was given to preach the message in America, and the light kindled by their labors shone out to distant lands.

The testimony of the Scriptures pointing to the coming of Christ in 1843, awakened widespread interest. Many were convinced that the arguments from the prophetic periods were correct, and, sacrificing their pride of opinion, they joyfully received the truth.

A strange interpretation is this! Truly a great excitement was created by the cry of "William Miller and his colaborers" in 1840-44, by declaring the advent of our Savior due, according to the Scriptures at that time. But the Scriptures were misapplied, the message was false; time proved it. And yet Mrs. White asserts on page 225 of the "Great Controversy," that in the greatly excited meetings where this deception was being practiced on the people, innocently though it may have been, "the presence of holy angels was felt in these assemblies," thus contending that God was compromised to the deception then advocated! She admits, (page 228,) that:—

The time of expectation passed, and Christ did not appear for the deliverance of his people. Those who with sincere faith and love had looked for their Savior, experienced a bitter disappointment.

Just so. But this was only one of many disappointments that have been experienced since 1844 down to as late as 1866, by many who have been deceived into expecting the Savior to come in glory at a number of periods intervening those mentioned, who have blindly followed this so-called advent movement; but has proved a huge deception.

It is Satan, not God, who uses scripture to deceive. Baptism in water of penitent believers in the gospel, for the remission of sins, is a gospel principle, a divine truth; but how has it been used to deceive and mislead! The second glorious coming of Jesus to resurrect the dead, to reward and reign, and at the end of the world, is a gospel truth; and like other truths, a perversion of the scriptures has made it a subject of strange deceptions and disappointment.

A loving Savior had said a long time before William Miller began the time-setting agitation, that neither men nor angels knew the day or hour when Christ should come, (Matt. 24: 36,) No, not even the Son himself (Mark 13: 32). And in view of this we wonder why Mr. Miller and all those careful students of scripture should have been trying to make men believe that an angel had told the Prophet Daniel the time of Christ's advent! See Daniel 8: 13, 14; 9: 20-27.

And it is more strange yet, in view of the utter failure of the claims all along the line, that Mrs. White should claim before a thinking world that the men who were so deceived and misled, and who so deceived their followers, were in fact the angel of Revelation 14! God the author of such a movement! If this be true, what kind of a being is he? She says, "The Spirit of God urged his servants to give the warning." What was "the warning"? The Savior is coming. When? In the autumn of 1844!

"But" says Mrs. White, (Controversy page 228,) "God designed to prove his people. His hand covered a mistake in the reckoning of the prophetic periods." And yet his Spirit was urging his servants to give the "mistake"-n "warning"!

But following along the crooked path of the story as told by this writer, we wade deeper and deeper into the ditch wherein the blind have fallen; for on page 250 she tells us:—

Of all the great religious movements since the days of the apostles, none have been more free of human imperfection and the wiles of Satan than that of the autumn of 1844!

A strange claim is this. A pretended warning to all the world of such gigantic magnitude as the coming of Christ to destroy the wicked, to dissolve all earthly governments, raise the righteous dead, change the righteous living, immortalize both, introduce the eternal state of his kingdom, and the Millennial reign,—all this and much more, all in the year 1844 of the Christian era; and all prove to be a lie, because of a now admitted mistake in the time-reckoning; and yet Satan is not in it! He is the one who tried to make scripture lie on the mountain (see Matthew 4: 6) by misapplying it.

The leading assumption underlying the subject under consideration is that the angel of Revelation 14: 6 is not an angel at all, but a number of Adventist preachers who declared that Christ would come in 1844.

The angel that John saw, according to Mrs. E. G. White, was a "symbol," and symbolized William Miller and a host of other mistaken, erring preachers! Profound, isn't it? What proof is offered supportive of this assumption? None. Allow us to assume a basis for our theories and we can prove most any one equally as clearly as the above is shown to be.

If the angel that John saw was only a symbol, how do we know but what the everlasting gospel he had was a symbol also? And the nations to whom it was to be preached were not literal nations, but symbolic,—figurative,—nations!

Under the blinding spell of this delusive and deceptive spirit and scripture perversion, they pursue their onward course, hence, writing in reference to the angel that John says declared the downfall of Babylon (Rev. 14: 8), Mrs. E. G. White writes:—

This message was understood by Adventists to be an announcement of the moral fall of the churches in consequence of their rejection of the first message. The proclamation, "Babylon is fallen," was given in the summer of 1844, and as the result about fifty thousand withdrew from the churches.—Controversy, page 232.

According to the foregoing the first and second angels follow each other in close, very close succession; so close, indeed, that the one angel declared both messages. The same class of false teachers who declared the coming of Christ in 1844, and the cry proved false, and because the Protestant denominations refused to believe the false alarm, they sat in judgment on the churches, declaring they were now "fallen" and were "Babylon," and they are, says Mrs. White,

Those churches that cling to the doctrines and traditions of Rome and follow her worldly practices, and whose fall is announced in the second angel's message.—page 233.

While it is true that Protestant churches have largely sprang off from the Roman Mother Church, and they reverently refer to her as the "Mother Church," yet those "fifty thousand" who left the churches under the deceptive so-called midnight cry of 1844, found themselves only in a worse deceived, deluded, and "disappointed" condition for their sacrifice than before. And worse than all, most of them have never been able to deliver themselves from the snare into which they were entrapped.

According to this profound interpretation of prophecy, the "third angel" would symbolize a class of preachers, Adventists, no doubt; and so it proves to be. It is a well-woven piece, as follows:—

The scripture which above all others had been both the foundation and central pillar of the Advent faith, was the declaration, "Unto two thousand and three hundred days; and then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (Daniel 8:14.) These prophetic days had been shown to terminate in the autumn of 1844. In common with the rest of the Christian world, Adventists then held that the earth, or some portion of it, was the sanctuary, and that the cleansing of the sanctuary was the purification of the earth by the fires of the last great day. This they understood would take place at the second coming of Christ; hence the conclusion that Christ would return to the earth in 1844. But the appointed time came, and the Lord did not appear.—Controversy, page 258.

With earnest prayer they reviewed their position, and studied the Scriptures to discover their mistake. As they could see no error in their explanation of the prophetic periods, they were led to examine more closely the subject of the sanctuary.—Page 260.

At the termination of the 2,300 days, in 1844, no sanctuary had existed on earth for many centuries; therefore the sanctuary in heaven must be the one brought to view in the declaration: "Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

But how could a sanctuary in heaven be cleansed? Heaven need cleansing?—Page 262.

One thing we must credit the writer of this language quoted with, and that is the disposition often to confess the errors and mistakes. But how firmly does deception grasp its victims. Error does not like to die, nor yield its ground. The mistake was made. It is confessed. But if the event so confidently expected did not happen, O, something else did. It thundered, or I heard some other noise! Well, what was it that did happen in the autumn of 1844, since the Savior did not come?

Important truths concerning the atonement may be learned from the typical service. A substitute was accepted in the sinner's stead; but the sin was not canceled by the blood of the victim. A means was thus provided by which it was transferred to the sanctuary. By the offering of blood the sinner acknowledged the authority of the law, confessed his guilt in transgression, and expressed his desire for pardon through faith in a Redeemer to come; but he was not entirely released from the condemnation of the law. On the day of atonement the high priest, having taken an offering from the congregation, went into the most holy place with the blood of this general offering, and sprinkled it upon the mercy seat, directly over the law, to make satisfaction for its claims. Then, in his character of mediator, he took the sins upon himself, and bore them from the sanctuary. Placing his hands upon the head of the scapegoat, he confessed over him all these sins, thus in figure transferring them from himself to the goat. The goat then bore them away, and they were regarded as forever separated from the people. Such was the service performed "unto the example and shadow of heavenly things." And what was done in type in the ministration of the earthly, is done in reality in the ministration of the heavenly. After his ascension, our Savior began his work as our high priest. Says Paul, "Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself now to appear in the presence of God for us." (Heb. 9: 24.) In harmony with the typical service, he began his ministration in the holy place, and at the termination of the prophetic days in 1844, as foretold by Daniel the prophet, he entered the most holy to perform the last division of his solemn work,—to cleanse the sanctuary.—Controversy, pp. 265, 266.

Thus it is plainly seen that to bolster up a cause that is falling from its own intrinsic falsity and deception, another huge assumption is siezed upon to let it down easy. Where, in all the realm of divine revelation is there the most distant hint that Jesus, our great High Priest, never entered the holy of holies in heaven in the interest of penitent sinners, till the year A. D., 1844?

In the text cited above by the writer (Hebrew 9: 24), Paul says:—

For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us.

That was more than eighteen hundred years before the time set for him to do that work by Adventists. No revelation coming at this late date that contradicts Paul's statement should be received. The remission of sins and the justification of sinners repentant, was the object of Christ's atonement, and of such Paul wrote to the Corinthian saints more than eighteen hundred years ago:—

Such were some of you [sinners as previously described]; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." 1 Corinthians 6: 11.

If Paul is here correct these Corinthian saints realized the benefits of the atonement of Christ long prior to 1844. Now while this theory teaches that "our sins are in fact, transferred to the heavenly sanctuary by the blood of Christ." (Controversy, page 266), there is not an iota of scripture anywhere to show that the sins of the people, under either the old or new Covenants, were transferred in figure or in fact into the sanctuary. Such an idea is not the most distantly hinted at. As the high priest under the law confessed the sins of the people on the head of the scapegoat, which goat never entered the sanctuary (Leviticus 16: 6, 7); after which he is sent by the hand of "a fit man" into the wilderness, (verse 22), so under the new covenant Christ's blood was shed "without the gate" (Hebrews 13: 12), and when sinners turn to God, their sins are blotted out, through the merits of Christ, by their obedience to the truth (1 Peter 1: 22). "And their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."—Hebrews 8: 12. Strange, is it not, that having blotted out, or forgiven the sinner his sins on entering the new covenant, and God, promising to "remember them no more," finally concluded to institute an "investigative judgment," (Controversy, page 266), to refresh his memory on the subject, and so began that work in 1844.

That a "record" of the lives of men is kept in heaven we may believe; but that men's sins are taken there, we have yet to see the proof of.

It is further assumed that the sanctuary that Daniel 8: 14 speaks of is necessarily the one in heaven. But this is all assumed; no proof is adduced to show such to be the case. The careful reader of the chapter will notice that the fourteenth verse is the answer to a question that is propounded in the thirteenth verse, and therefore the sanctuary of verse 14, is necessarily the sanctuary of verse 13. It is also the sanctuary of chapter 9: 26. The "sanctuary and the host," were "to be trodden under foot" of a desolating power for a long period, and the vision, as Daniel saw it, troubled him. It related to Israel—Daniel's people.

They were at that time in captivity at Babylon. Daniel desired to know when that captivity would end. After seeing the vision, he learned "by books the number of the years" of that captivity. But that was not the only captivity that was to overtake Israel. In placing the four leading successive universal governments of the world before the prophet's vision, — Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome,—it pleased the Lord to let him see that during the rule of the fourth kingdom—Rome, Israel, their land and city, would go into captivity (chapter 8: 10-14), for a period of at least 2,300 years less the 490 years of chapter 9: 24-27, during which Israel were to remain in their land, reject the gospel, crucify their Savior, and go into darkness, be rejected of God, and then be "carried captive into all nations" and "the sanctuary and the host" be trodden down, "until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled" (Luke 21: 20-24). And when the prophetic period shall have terminated, "the sanctuary," that land set apart as the inheritance of Jacob, (Deut. 32: 7, 8; Ex. 15: 17; Ps. 78: 54, 55), will be cleansed.

One of the most important elements in the visions of Daniel; viz., the history, vicissitudes, and latter-day salvation of Israel, has always been omitted, in their consideration by those who have been so anxious to have our Savior come before his time! This is one of their grievous mistakes. Here is one of the secrets of them.

Before passing on to other topics, let us refer once more to the theory that is used to support this assumption that relates to the sanctuary,—the typical service, and ask the question, What was the object of the high priest in going into the holy of holies on atonement day? Was it to institute an "investigative judgment" in any sense whatever? Was his entrance "within the veil" essential to the atonement at all? Was his going into the "most holy place with blood on that day a part of the work of the atonement? Could the atonement work, or act, or requirement have been complete without it? If not, then the high priest could not have performed the complete and perfect atonement without entering the most holy place. Very good. Then, if it required the entrance of Christ into the most holy place in the sanctuary in heaven to complete our real atonement, and he never entered the most holy place there till the autumn of 1844, every one can see without further argument that the atonement made by Christ was not complete till or since 1844! But, under the law, the sins of the people were not officially confessed and separated from the people till after the high priest had come out of the most holy place (Lev. 16: 20-22.); and if this modern theory be true; the sins of God's people have not yet in reality been pardoned, and is a matter of the deepest interest to know when our Savior will come out of the holiest place and send our sins into the wilderness by the antitypical scapegoat! Sure enough, here is the solution of the mystery. ("Controversy," p. 267):—

When Christ, by virtue of his own blood, removes the sins of his people from the heavenly sanctuary at the close of his ministration, he will place them upon Satan, who, in the execution of the judgment, must bear the final penalty. The scapegoat was sent away into a land not inhabited, never to come again into the congregation of Israel. So Satan will be forever banished from the presence of God and his people, and he will be blotted from existence in the final destruction of sin and sinners.

If all this be true, why is it there has never been any revelation of it to God's servants of Bible times? They used to think they had "received the atonement," (Rom. 5:11), over eighteen hundred years ago. And that sins once pardoned would be remembered "no more" (Jer. 31:34). We think they were right, for as under the typical service the high priest never entered into the most holy place till after the offering was slain, so under the antitypical service our offering for sin was slain, and the offering made in the outer court of the sanctuary on earth, before he entered the most holy place, "heaven itself," which he did more than eighteen hundred years ago, and did appear there "in the presence of God for us."

In reality, then, there is nothing save deceptive theory in the so-called sanctuary outlet from the admitted mistake of 1844. Let us then pass on to the assumed "Third Angel's Message."

ANOTHER CHAPTER OF CROOKED PATHS.

ON June 10, in company with Don C. Salisbury, we went to Carthage, Illinois, to engage the court house for holding a series of meetings; while there we called on the county clerk, in his office, to see what date the records gave of the marriage of Zina D. Huntington. The county clerk assisted us in our search, and we found in Book A, page 40, that Henry

B. Jacobs and Zina D. Huntington were married in Nauvoo, March 7, 1841, by John C. Bennett, then Mayor of Nauvoo.

We also called on the clerk of the circuit court in his office, and in company with him examined the divorce records from 1834 to 1857, and found no divorce was ever granted said Zina D. Jacobs.

In "Representative Women of Deseret," page 12, we read:—

Sr. Zina was married in Nauvoo, and had two sons; but this not proving a happy union, she subsequently separated from her husband. Joseph Smith taught her the principle of marriage for eternity, and she accepted it as a divine revelation, and was sealed to the prophet for time and all eternity, after the order of the new and everlasting covenant.

In the Historical Record, page 233, we read:—

Zina D. Huntington, afterwards the wife of President Brigham Young, sealed to the prophet, October 27, 1841. Dimick B. Huntington officiating.

Now what have we learned. 1. Zina D. Huntington married to Henry B. Jacobs in Nauvoo, March 7, 1841. 2. As a faithful wife bears her husband two sons (no claim made for twins) in less than seven months and twenty days after her marriage, as she was sealed to the prophet October 27, 1841; and this is not allowing any time for the publishing of a notice for a divorce. We are informed the law requires thirty days notice before a divorce can be granted. 3. That no divorce was ever granted her.

Oh! "Consistency thou art a jewel."

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and Ministry of the Northern California District; Greeting:—By reference to Bro. Luff's pastoral letter you will see that the writer was placed in charge of the missionary work in the region named. However, I have been required to labor here until the Southern California reunion, which will be held at Downey, July 9. On account of this I may not be able to reach you for more than a month. We ask the full coöperation of both the ministry and laity. We desire all the information we can obtain, so that we can enter and occupy with a good understanding of the necessities of the work.

Now, saints, see how many letters you can send stating the needs of the work in your various localities. Let every one who has any suggestions to offer write me immediately after reading this notice. Let us make a united effort to be successful. "Let nothing separate you from each other, or the work whereunto you have been called."—D. C. 122: 17.

Address all your communications to No. 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California, in care of C. A. Parkin.

A. C. BARMORE.

To the Saints of Spring River District:—Having been appointed missionary in charge over above district, I desire your coöperation in the work God has intrusted to our care. The Spirit that brings love, unity, and zeal for the work of God was with us in conference to a marked degree. The Spirit admonished the priesthood to push out on Sundays and preach the word and develop yourselves and spread the work of God. We have more missionaries in the district this year than last, and I hope at the end of the year we can report a greater number brought into the church. It was with some reluctance I left Clinton district, having labored there from the time I was ordained, but I am already endeared to this district, I have received such a good reception every place I have been. May God bless the saints everywhere, especially the sacrificing ones. We are all coworkers in the one faith. Those that don't preach can pay their tithes to supply the needs of those that do.

Remember, brethren, to report the first of July; I want a report of how many sermons preached, and if you have not preached many I want to know the reasons; so I can report to Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge. I noticed at quarterly conference some did not report the number of sermons. Brn. O. P. Sutherland and G. Beebe will labor together, and Bro. J. A. Davis will labor for the present in western part of district. Bro. Cather and I will labor in tent in north part of district until August. Brethren, be humble and faithful, that God's Spirit may use you to the honor and glory of his work. Be very careful in presenting the gospel so as not to hurt the feelings of Christian people, and when they revile you and shut you out of buildings, don't retaliate; you will find it will work the best in the end. Our tent meetings at Oronogo were a success; for a number of nights many could not get into the tent. We have so many calls for the tent, we cannot fill a tithe of them. Any wanting preaching, let us know. Lebeck, Missouri, is my permanent address. I will be at Nashville for three weeks. My health is good and I never felt better in the work than now. The prospects are encouraging all over this district. May the Spirit of love, peace, and unity be with all of God's people.

F. C. KECK.

NASHVILLE, Mo., June 18.

To the Saints of Kewanee District:—Will the scattered saints who know of openings, or are desirous of having meetings held in their neighborhood please communicate with me? Be careful to state whether there are railroads where you live, and what are the prospects for meetings. If you are careful in these things it will save much inconvenience and assist us in the work. Also, if any of the brethren hear of any openings we shall be glad to hear from them. Let all interested respond, so that our effort may be put forth to the best advantage. If any of the brethren have a few weeks at their disposal, and can assist us in the field this summer, I shall be glad to hear from them; the calls are many and are increasing; this district is promising. Who can help us a few weeks? Address all communications to No. 69 Henderson Street, Galesburg, Illinois. Yours in the one hope.

T. J. SHELDON.

NOTICES.

To Whom It May Concern:—The saints and members of the Plano branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, scattered abroad, are hereby notified that the Plano branch is on decline, and may in a few months be disorganized. I would advise scattered members to call for letters and unite with some branch near you, and thus comply with the law and save yourselves and church secretaries and conferences trouble in granting you letters after the branch goes down. We are reporting 193 names, and yours with about 99 others are absent from the branch. We do not hear from you nor see you, and if you are in the faith you should attend to this; and if you are not, you should either get in the faith or have your name removed, and placed where it should be.

Earnestly yours,
W. VICKERY,
President of Plano branch.

May God bless the union and their happiness remain.

DIED.

STEWART.—At the house of Bro. John Weedmark, Lamoni, Iowa, June 17, 1897, Sr. Margaret Stewart. She was born at Greenock, Scotland, March 11, 1810, and was at her death 87 years, 3 months, and 7 days old. She married a Mr. Martin in her early womanhood, who went to South America to seek a fortune, intending to send for his wife when able; but instead took a fever incident to the country and died there, leaving his wife a widow with one child, a daughter, now Mrs. Congden, of Oswego, New York. She afterward married Thomas Stewart, December 25, 1841. They joined the church in Scotland in the spring of 1843; emigrated to America in 1856, landing in New York in July. Thence via Chicago and Iowa City, by rail, and thence by handcart to Utah. The company in which they made the journey suffered much hardship; but Bro. and Sr. Stewart, with their four children, were among those reaching the valley. The family became dissatisfied with Utah and removed to Colorado, where in 1876 the parents and part of the children united with the Reorganized Church, under the administration of Elder F. C. Warkey. Later the husband died, and soon after Sr. Stewart and her son Thomas removed to Lamoni. She was a sturdy woman physically and mentally, and retained her faith unshaken to the last. A broken hip joint, the result of a fall, made her a helpless cripple for the last three years and a half, and she rests from all earthly woes in Christ her Lord.

YOUNG.—Mrs. Frances Edith, wife of Bro. Edwin Young, was born in Weeping Water, Nebraska, December 18, 1878; died near Lamoni, June 17, 1897, aged 18 years, 5 months, and 29 days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stackhouse, and was married to Bro. Young on December 23, 1896. While laboring in her household duties she was overcome by the heat and said that she felt faint and blind; and in thirty minutes after the attack she breathed her last. The services were held in the saints' chapel in Lamoni, Bro. H. A. Stebbins preaching the sermon, Bro. A. S. Cochran assisting him. Her parents were present, also the many relatives and friends of Bro. Young, who is the son of Bro. Frank D. Young, formerly of Alameda County, California.

COSHOW.—At the home of Elder James L. Richey, Lamoni, Iowa, May 18, 1897, Mrs. Sarah Ann Coshow, born December 17, 1828, in Tennessee. At two years of age she moved with her parents to Southwestern Illinois. At the age of thirteen years she became a member of the M. E. society; since which she has ever remained a consistent, faithful member. January 1, 1846, she was joined in wedlock to Isaac Miller, who died May 26, 1852. This union was blessed with three children. The first died in infancy. Mary Margaret is the wife of Elder Richey; John C. went to California long since, and has not been heard of for many years. April 27, 1856, she was joined to Robert Coshow, and this union was also blessed with three children—Frank and George B. (residents of Missouri) and Christina who died in Illinois.

Once more death robbed her of her companion. Since which she has battled the world alone. Her life has been an exemplary one—a web interwoven with patience, forbearance, and kindness, and her transit from time to eternity was calm and serene, without a struggle, murmur, or a sigh of pain or regret as befits the end of a righteous mortal. Funeral service was conducted by Elder John D. Bennett at the M. E. church, Rev. G. E. Mitchel (her pastor) of Davis City, pronouncing the discourse. Her remains rests in Rose Hill cemetery.

WOOLSEY.—Bro. Isaac William Woolsey was born in Anglaze County, Ohio, April 9, 1852; was drowned in White River, near Golden, Missouri, March 31, 1897; his body was found April 6 and buried on the 7th. A few words were spoken and prayer offered by a member of the Baptist Church, as no elder could be had. Age at death 44 years, 11 months, and 22 days. He was married August 27, 1876, to Miss Rachel Oakley; was baptized January 30, 1873, at Liberty, Cass County, Nebraska, by Elder Thomas Nutt; was ordained a teacher December 11, 1890. He and his family removed from the Shenandoah, Iowa, branch, June 22, 1893. He leaves a wife, two sons, one daughter, an aged mother, three sisters, and three brothers, with many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. He was a kind and faithful husband, a tender and loving father, true and faithful to his covenant in the gospel until death.

Dear brother, thou art gone to rest,
We will not weep for thee;
For thou art now where oft on earth
Thy spirit longed to be.

Dear brother, thou art gone to rest,
Thy toils and cares are o'er;
And sorrow, pain, and suffering now
Shall ne'er distress thee more.

MCCLANE.—Near Norwood, Iowa, May 20, 1897, Miss Jenny May, daughter of Sr. Sarah McClane, aged 20 years, 7 months, and 2 days. She was sick but a few days, her birth and death were on the same farm. She was a believer in the gospel. Funeral in the M. E. church of Liberty Centre, Iowa. Interment in I. O. O. F. cemetery, beside her father. Sermon by Elder R. M. Elvin to a full and attentive house.

We loved her, yes! we loved her,
But the angels loved her more,
And they have sweetly called her
To yonder shining shore.

The pearly gates stood open,
A gentle voice said "come,"
And with farewell unspoken,
She calmly entered home.

Grates, November 30, 1856, at Liberty Center, Iowa. She was a good Christian woman, and a kind and devoted mother, honored and esteemed by all who knew her. She bore her trials patiently till the last, and often expressed her belief in the divinity of the gospel as taught by the saints. Before she died she called her people to the bedside, and exhorted them all to be kind to all men, to attend the prayer meetings regularly, and prepare to meet her at the resurrection of the just. Then she selected the hymns to be sung at her funeral, also desiring St. John, chapter 14, to be read. Just before she passed away she sang in a loud, clear voice the first verse and chorus of that beautiful hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning." He was married three times and was the father of fifteen children. His first wife died in 1856, and the second in 1867. The third, who toiled with unceasing vigilance during his long and helpless illness, is left with four sons and one daughter, the youngest thirteen years old. They have tender memories of a good and worthy husband and father. By his request the funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Pres. Joseph Smith assisted in the service.

THE SIMPLEST THING IN THE WORLD.

"Now, concerning spiritual gifts, brethren."—1 Cor. 12:1.

Mankind specially stands in need of two things—a religion that can be easily understood and a religion that can be used for every day purposes.

It used to be the custom to regard religion solely as a means of preparation for the future. To-day was given that we might get ready for to-morrow. The purpose of faith was to fit us for acceptance with God by and by. The present was thought of only as a vale of tears from which we should emerge at death to enter an eternity of blessedness or woe.

There is some truth in this aspect of religion, but not the whole truth. The future is certainly very important, and we ought to be properly equipped for it, but the present is of even more importance, since character is what decides a man's fate, and we are laying the foundations of character here and now.

The best kind of religion is one which takes your eyes away from the future, giving you only occasional glimpses of it by way of comfort and consolation, and fixes them on the best means of making this little life beautiful, because we may lay it down as a safe rule that if a man does not go wrong here he cannot possibly go wrong hereafter.

Thinking of what God will do to you and for you when the sum of your years has been counted, is well enough in its way, but thinking of what you can do to make your path more easy for daily climbing, and what you can do to cheer your fellow travelers on their upward way—that is a great deal better and vastly more profitable.

Here we are in a strange world. We came in a mysterious way, and we go in a way equally so. Science has done some good work in the solution of the problem, and is so well armed for research that it is likely to do still grander work within the next few years. It has already startled us by its psychological discoveries, and we are coming to believe that a soul is a much more wondrous thing than we have heretofore dreamed. The body is gradually assuming a secondary place, as the mere instrument on which the mind plays its symphony or sounds its discords. The grandeur and authority of the interior man, the invisible man, the man inside the man, are slowly being discovered.

The religion of the future, therefore, will come down from the clouds of theological discussion and tell us what the various incidents of life mean, and how we can best use them to our spiritual advantage. We have struggles which we cannot explain, experiences which are a sore and serious puzzle, sorrows and partings, the meaning of which is hidden from us. We are oddly ignorant about these matters, but our appetite for knowledge is insatiable. Is there any way in which to make our lives satisfactory, and, if so, what is that way? Setting aside what is going to happen to us by and by, we want to know the meaning of what is happening now, and, until that matter is settled, we shall continue to be restless and unhappy.

The time is not far distant when religion will assume larger proportions than in the past and occupy a very much more important position in the community. It will be stripped of all human theories and of all the dogmas which have their origin in such theories. It will be as necessary to every human being as the air we breathe and the food we eat, and we shall want it just as we want air and food and for the same reason.

Religion in its last analysis is simply the spirit of the Christ. The man who has that spirit is God's own child, by whatever religious name he may be known. It will broaden his outlook, deepen his reverence and so increase his power that he will be surprised at himself. The world knows nothing about the real Christ as yet. He is a theological proposition to most of us, a dead Christ, not a living Christ. He worked miracles and said "greater things than these shall ye do," but who believes it? He gave strength to the infirm and health to the diseased, implying that all disease is some form of sin, and that when men become spiritually Godlike they will necessarily become whole physically. We catch a far away glimpse of that fact in our hours of exultation, but as a general thing we are too dull to catch its meaning.

The spirit of Christ is all that anyone can need. In that sunshine, in that dew, we grow and bear fruit. We are at present so tangled that we cannot see this, but in very truth the spirit of Christ is the spirit of power. He who has it lacks nothing. He has no dread of the present, no fear for the future. He will not go to heaven at death, because he is in heaven now. His eternal life began long ago, and with broad shoulders and brave heart he faces the throne and smiles even when the tears fall from his eyes.

The New Testament must be opened for another and a more intelligent reading.

G. H. HEPPWORTH, in New York Herald.

NEW CENTRAL AMERICAN REPUBLIC.
 QUIETLY and unostentatiously the greater republic of Central America has become an accomplished fact. The first step was taken a year or more ago, when Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua united in a confederation for mutual defense. Now Costa Rica and Guatemala have joined and the new republic is complete. It would have been still better had the confederation been established half a century ago and thereby developed the resources of the five countries as they should have been and also prevented a score of miserable civil wars and revolutions brought about by ambitious and corrupt military adventurers. They naturally should be under one authority so far as their national policy is concerned, and now that this has been accomplished there is little doubt it will tend toward conditions of peace and order in domestic affairs.

The new republic will possess considerable strength. Its population will be a little over three millions, of which Guatemala has nearly one half. The area will be 185,825 square miles, divided as follows: Guatemala, 63,400; Costa Rica, 23,000; Salvador, 7,225; Honduras, 43,000; and Nicaragua, 49,200. As compared with South American States Chile has 293,470 square miles of area, Peru, 463,747, and the Argentine Republic 1,778,195, though the population of the latter is only about 917,000 larger than that of the new republic. Compared with Illinois, its area is about three times as large, while its population is about a million and a half less. The Central American population is largely made up of native Indians and mixed races, but the Europeans and those of European descent are steadily increasing.

The arrangement of the new federation is both wise and sensible. The individual States retain complete autonomy and absolute control of their domestic affairs. Outside relations, treaties, commercial and industrial relations with other nations are managed by a sort of congress which meets in the various capitals at stated times and which is regularly elected. Representation to foreign governments also proceeds from the authority of this body. In a word, the relations of the greater republic to the outside world are practically managed as ours are, and the rights of the States to control their own affairs remain untouched. Undoubtedly one of the impelling motives to this union, was the fact or the fear that Mexico had its covetous eyes on those States adjoining her own southern boundary, which has had the effect to expedite this fusion of the five States. The union will give the republic an army of about 175,000 men, regulars and militia, which will be sufficient for all ordinary purposes of defense. As to the commercial and industrial resources of the new republic, they should be greatly developed under the new management. If it have no other result than to put an end to the interminable revolutions and civil wars in that section it will be a blessing.

THE CHURCH HISTORY, SECOND VOLUME.

THE Board of Publication are gratified to be able to announce the completion at an early time of the second volume of the Church History. Already plates are made for 400 pages, and the book will be ready for delivery in July.

This history should be in the houses of all saints and friends of the work of Christ in the last days; its importance as one of the prime agencies in disseminating the truths and correct positions of the church in the nineteenth century can hardly be overestimated.

The Board of Publication was instructed by the Annual Conference of 1896 to issue this work, and it has moved forward under many difficulties to accomplish the same, and should have the hearty coöperation of every member and friend now in spreading the news and giving the people an opportunity to understand the faith of the Latter Day Saints as it is.

The church has suffered in the past on account of having been represented in a large part by its enemies and those who have been ready to malign their faith.

There is nothing more important than that we should present to the world our own faith and organization as well as the work of the church since 1830, and if we fail to do this, we are not active as becometh our high and holy calling as servants of the Lord.

The second volume of the Church History will contain about 700 pages and is delivered at the low price at which the first volume was sold; viz.; at $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, and $3.00 per volume postage prepaid, to any address in the United States or Canada. For styles of binding see advertisement in this number of HERALD.

The office is in need of means which it has necessarily expended in getting out this volume, and it is urged upon the saints that they send in their orders promptly and thus be able to assist the office, as they at the same time assist in disseminating the true work and positions of the church among the people.

Nothing is more worthy and commendable than an effort in this direction; and let us not wait until we may thus aid without feeling that it is something of a sacrifice, for great good comes to the people when they make true and devoted sacrifice in order to forward any great and true work.

Send all orders and contributions to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa; and where parties at any one point desire to get a number of the books, they may be sent by express, and the postage which will be from twenty-five to thirty cents on each book, saved to those ordering.

Please let us hear from you at once. As ever, confidently in the truth and working for its advancement.

LAMONI, IOWA, JULY 7, 1897.

"THE GOD OF MORMONISM."

THE Kansas City Journal, for June 13, 1897, has the following editorial based on the statements of the Rev. David Utter.

A Topeka gentleman, who has been assigned the task of discussing Mormonism before a literary club, asks the Journal for an explanation of the Mormon belief in God. To many readers it has perhaps never occurred that the Mormons hold ideas of the Deity which are distinguishable in any material manner from those of Christianity the world over, but upon investigation it will be found that the difference is quite marked.

The first article of faith in the Mormon church reads in this wise: "We believe in God, the eternal Father, and in his son, Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost." On its face this does not indicate any difference between Mormonism and orthodoxy, but a deeper investigation reveals that Mormonism embraces more gods than one, each having his degree and place. In a recent article explaining and defending Mormonism Professor David Utter says:

"The Mormons believe not only in one God, but in many gods; that God is in form like man, and has a natural body which may be touched and handled; that God is of two persons, Father and Son, who are one only in the sense of being in harmony; that as a person God can only be present at one place at a time, though he can be present anywhere by his Holy Spirit. It is freely said that God occupies his exalted position as a result of his intelligence. He has attained his eminence through a process of evolution. 'As a man is now, so God has been; as God is now, so man may become.' This is a favorite expression with the Mormon bishops, and it necessarily implies a pantheon of gods of different orders or degrees of power and virtue, and such indeed is the belief of most, if not all, of the Mormon people. The God who is spoken of in the singular number as the object of our worship is regarded as the one who has charge of our planet and the human race. He is spoken of everywhere as 'our father.' He is identified with Adam, the progenitor of man. Joseph Smith did not teach that Adam was a god, but this doctrine was set forth with vigor and emphasis by Brigham Young."

Having accepted the theory that God existed in the flesh and that man was his natural progeny, the Mormons had to remain consistent, which they did by supplying God with a wife. One of the favorite hymns, which may be heard sung every church day in Salt Lake City, contains the following verse:

"I have learned to call thee Father
Through thy spirit from on high,
But until the key of knowledge
Was restored, I knew not why.
In heaven are parents single?
No; the thought makes reason stare!
Truth is reason; truth eternal Tells me I've a mother there."

According to Mormonism the residence of the God who has to do with our planet and people is in a star named Kolob, entirely unknown to astronomy, but apparently well known to Joseph Smith, as he states that it is "near the throne of God" and that it revolves on its axis once in a thousand years. Here the gods are supposed to beget and bear the spirits that are to take possession of human bodies. After their mission is fulfilled upon earth these spirits not only return to bear the gods company, but to become gods on their own account.

In another direction the Mormons throw down an open challenge to orthodoxy. The second article of the creed is as follows: "We believe that men will be punished for their own sins and not for Adam's transgression." We quote again from Professor Utter:

"In the catechism for children we are told that Adam and Eve rejoiced and praised God because of their transgression, since it was one of the great steps toward eternal exultation and happiness. This view of the fall of man is set forth in the liturgy as follows: 'In that day Adam blessed God and was filled, and began to prophesy concerning all the families of the earth, saying, "Blessed be the name of God, for because of my transgression my eyes are opened, and in this life I shall have joy, and again in the flesh I shall see God." And Eve, his wife, heard all these things and was glad, saying, "Were it not for our transgression, we never should have had seed, and never should have known good and evil, and the joy of our redemption, and the eternal life which God giveth unto all the obedient." The paradox of obtaining by disobedience that which "God giveth unto all the obedient" seems to pass unnoticed.'"

By what right Rev. David Utter, whoever he may be, or whom he represents, has to define what the belief of Mormons in regard to the Godhead may be is not easy to understand. It seems to us that the Topeka gentleman could have found a better exponent of the Mormon theory had he written to Pres. George Q. Cannon, of Salt Lake City, Utah, who is publishing a paper there, and who would be amply qualified to make an authoritative statement of the belief of himself and his fellow churchmen in regard to the Deity. The Journal man gives a second hand relation from an evidently biased opponent of Mormonism.

This going to outside sources for the belief of a people is becoming decidedly irksome and tiresome to those who are being constantly misrepresented by it. The system is vicious and ought to be abandoned by otherwise bright minds. Would the Journal be content to have the Times answer an inquiry as to what Kansas City republicanism was? Or would it consider itself to be the proper and best exponent of that degree and sort of political faith?

METHODIST LAYMEN PROTEST.

THE theological microbe which has wrought such havoc in the Presbyterian Church and in others seems now to be busy among the Methodists, as the following indicates:—

Indianapolis, Ind., June 24.—Revolution threatens to overturn things at the next General Conference of the Methodist Church. Prominent laymen from all parts of Indiana met here to prepare for the laymen convention to be held in this city September 15. They took an open stand against the existing order in the Methodist Church, and propose to fight to the bitter end.

Judge Grubbs, of Martinsville, said: "We want it to go out that we are loyal Methodists, who desire representation in the General Conference. We should not be too radical, but if we cannot obtain our rights by peaceful methods, then I am in favor of revolution."

Colonel Ritter declared peaceful measures had been used until it was useless longer to consider them.

T. A. Goodwin said: "The heavenly trust must be smashed' is the common way the existing condition of affairs in the Methodist Church is alluded to."

C. C. Bentley, of Richmond, declared the church was one hundred years behind the times. "The cry is for $1,000,000 a year for foreign missions," said he, "and every church that raises its quota is assessed a larger sum the next year."

After an exchange of opinions the laymen appointed a committee to go before each conference in the State and present the subject. There are about four hundred ministers in Indiana, and they have seven votes in the General Conference. The ninety thousand Methodist laymen are given two votes, and their two delegates are chosen by the ministers.

BRN. HOLT AND CHASE are evidently making a favorable impression upon the people in behalf of the church, as may be seen from the following clippings from the Roseburg, Oregon, Review. The spirit of our work ought to impress favorably. Nothing can exceed its power for good and it will reach the people wherever correctly interpreted and rightly presented:—

Elder Holt gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Prophecy" to a full house on Saturday evening.

The basket dinner in the grove at the schoolhouse was a feature of the Sunday church service and was enjoyed by a large number. The song service immediately following was well attended, as was also the service in the afternoon.

Elders Chase and Holt closed their meetings Monday night and departed for Myrtle Point on Tuesday, where they will preach for a time, going thence to Drain. Their meetings here have been largely attended, a most favorable impression created, and much prejudice removed in regard to the Church of Latter Day Saints.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY.

THERE is a work being done in Iowa and elsewhere that partakes largely of the character of a well directed charity, doing a great deal of good. It is the Children's Home Society, of which S. F. Smith, of Davenport, Iowa, is the President of State Board of Managers, for Iowa. The headquarters of the society is at Des Moines, Iowa. It is a society founded and conducted for the purpose of securing homes for orphaned children, and those whose parents cannot or will not care for them.

The society has done a great work and is still doing it. The State is restricted; and as fast as possible able and qualified persons are being secured in every place to aid in the work. A paper called The Children's Home Society is being published, the Iowa supplement of which is published at Des Moines. The May number is laid on our desk by Rev. U. B. Smith, Assistant Superintendent, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

WAR FOOTING OF THE UNITED STATES.

THOSE who may think it wise for the government to precipitate the nation into war with Spain or any other nation, will do well to examine the following statement of its standing army, and it will then be easier to calculate what a war would mean to this country, so far as the human contingent of the armies to be employed might mean:—

The diminutive character of the military force of the United States does not seem to appeal very strongly to those who continually talk of the nation going to war. Uncle Sam's army of 26,000 men appears very small compared with the vast armies of Europe. The largest standing army is that of Russia, 800,000 men; the next in size that of Germany, 592,000; the third that of France, 555,000; the fourth, Australia's, 323,000; after which come Italy, with 255,000; Britain, with 210,000; Turkey, with 160,000, and Spain, with 145,000. The United States is great in a military way only in its possibilities, and in some respects these are doubtful.—Nauvoo Rustler.

MOHAMMEDANS and Jews are moving on in manifest destiny, the former to suppression and political dissolution as a nation, the latter to his own land, under the pressure of events moving him in that direction:—

Washington, June 28.—According to advices just received at the State Department from the United States minister to Persia, the Mohammedans in Teheran, Persia, recently invaded the Jewish quarters of that city and inflicted the most shocking maltreatment upon the residents. United States Minister McDonald, learning of the persecutions, appealed in the name of humanity to the chief of the Shah's ministers to interfere and stop the outrages. That official promised to do so, but according to the report the persecutions continued until after the officers sent to protect the helpless victims had extorted all their money.

Constantinople, June 28.—A fresh attempt on the part of the Sultan to secure Germany's support of the retention of Thessaly has met with refusal and the advice to conform to Europe's wishes on the subject.

An incident typical of the situation occurred here on Tuesday. During the panic caused by the salute fired in honor of the jubilee of Queen Victoria the Mussulman troops ran into the streets armed with bludgeons and asked the police whether the Greeks or the Armenians were to be attacked.

COMMENTS by a secular editor, who belongs to a class of men whose business it is to scrutinize everything in the moving world about him:—

The St. Joseph minister who gave statistics showing the supremacy of his denomination, failed to mention whether the founder of Christianity was a member of that body.

The Christian Endeavor convention at San Francisco will cost, in the aggregate, $4,000,000. No wonder the missionary boards of the various denominations are deeply in debt.

CALAMITOUS EVENTS.

MANILA, June 29.—The volcano Mayn has been in a violent state of eruption, and the flow of lava has done great damage in the Province of Albay, particularly to the village of Libon, where the tobacco crop has been completely destroyed. There has been considerable loss of life.

Calcutta, June 30.—A serious riot has occurred at Chatpur between Mohammedans and Hindoos, the trouble arising from the alleged profanation of a mosque by the latter. The police were unable to quell the fighting, and it was necessary to call upon the troops to restore order. The rioting continued at intervals throughout the day. Many European officials and some civilians were wounded.

Galatz, Roumania, June 30.—Torrential rains have fallen here, causing the rivers to rise and in some cases to overflow their banks. Lake Bratisch, near this city, became madly swollen, and to-day the waters burst out and deluged a part of Galatz. Sixty soldiers and many women and children were carried away by the torrent and drowned. Great damage was done to property.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The lower Danube has overflowed its banks and flooded a vast section of country. The town of Kilia, in Bessarabia, on the river Kilia, the north arm of the Danube delta, thirty miles from its mouth, is submerged. The terrific current has already destroyed 400 houses, and it is feared that the whole town, whose population is 7,000, will be wiped out unless the flood quickly subsides. Six feet of water cover the streets, and locomotion is confined wholly to boats. The inhabitants have taken refuge on the roofs of the houses remaining intact, or are camping out in the fields. Already the people are suffering for the want of provisions, and there is danger that starvation will be added to their other dangers.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. W. PETERSON, Colesburg, Iowa, June 28:—

We closed our tent meetings here last night with fair interest. Four or five may be baptized in the near future. Move to Olewein to-morrow. If the saints at Independence should see this, we would be glad to have them attend occasionally.

Pres. A. H. Smith, Fergus Falls, Minnesota, June 27:—

Our reunion here is progressing nicely; will close to-night. Baptisms this afternoon; Bro. G. H. Hilliard is on the boards this afternoon at 2:30; myself to-night at eight o'clock. Have had a real good reunion. It was decided to have another next year at Wadena, Minnesota. Bro. I. N. Roberts is quite poorly; my health not as good as when I left home.

Bro. F. E. Cohrt, Smithland, Iowa, June 28:—

The Lord is favoring us. "Onward and upward" is our aim. Yesterday we led four precious ones into the waters of regeneration.

Bro. George Montague, Coalgate, Indian Territory, June 28:—

I have been busy since coming into the field; closed my effort here last night, just one month from the time I bade the loved ones at home good bye. I feel truly thankful for the favor of the Master and the peace and joy that has come to me. Looking over the work of the past month I find that I have preached twenty-six times, organized two branches, and two Sunday schools; one branch at Wilberton, Elder Peter Adamson in charge, ten members; one at Coalgate, Indian Territory, Elder C. M. Fulks in charge, fourteen members, with others that will no doubt join, swelling the number to twenty or more; baptized three yesterday, adding three more to the number. There is a good field for missionary work here; this place claims a population of six thousand, and within fourteen miles are two other cities each with an equal population. The saints here have been very kind to the missionary, remembering to minister to his financial wants. May the Master prosper them in all good things. I expect to start to-morrow for San Antonio, Texas. I know not what is before me, but trust that whatever it may be, a loving Lord will give the needed grace and wisdom that success may crown every effort made in righteousness for the forwarding of the work of God.

Bro. Richard Coburn, writing from Blenheim, Ontario, June 27:—

The conference passed off pleasantly and was a success. When the work first started in Buxton and vicinity it met with considerable opposition, but time has wrought a change in the feelings of the people and the saints were treated kindly.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. WILLIAM LEWIS pronounces the late conference of the Far West district a pleasant and successful session. Judging from present conditions he thinks the next ten years will find that district and Northwest Missouri the home of thousands of saints, not from emigration, but because the young and middle-aged brethren are earnestly proclaiming the good news. Bro. I. N. White's presence and counsel were timely. Bro. J. T. Kinnaman, long a resident and worker, was to leave for his appointed field, with the good wishes of all. Far West district reunion near Maysville, September 4-12. Bro. J. M. Terry chairman, Bro. C. P. Faul secretary, and who would with others work hard for its success. Some of the German brethren had gone into Arkansas prospecting. Having good farms, good schools, good society, being out of debt, and located in the regions round about, according to the counsel of the Lord, he wonders why those brethren should desire a change, and hopes they will conclude to remain where they are, in the district. He refers to the labors of Brn. Chatburn, Turpen, and Summerfield, who have made many friends. Brn. Turpen and Summerfield are expected to attend the coming reunion and are requested to bring saints and friends with them.

Bro. E. H. Smith, of Sacramento, sends us clipping from the San Francisco Bee of June 21, which gives opinions of leading San Francisco Jewish Rabbis on the Zionite movement, started with a view to the erection of a Jewish state in Palestine. There is to be a convention held to consider such a movement, at Munich, Bavaria. Auxiliary meetings will also be held in American and other European cities.

The former Review and Reviews has been changed in name to the American Monthly Review of Reviews, a more comprehensive designation for that excellent periodical, inasmuch as it contains not only a review of the contents of the leading publications issued throughout the world, but also publishes much excellent original matter, and from an American standpoint. It continues well to deserve another descriptive name, "The busy man's magazine." We like the Review and cheerfully commend it to our readers. It is a valuable publication.

Bro. James McKiernan, writes from Ogden, Utah, June 21. He left home May 25 for his field of labor, going via Independence, Missouri, and Denver, Colorado, finding many friends at both places, who supplied his wants and cheered him on his way. The branch at Denver was prospering. The saints now occupied a church building vacated by the Lutherans. He would write later on from his new field.

The Cherokee, Iowa, Herald of June 25, announces "Latter Day Saints—not Mormons," and preaching from the tent every evening during the week by Brn. W. W. Whiting and C. J. Hunt. A question box in the tabernacle inviting friendly criticisms and a request to patronize it, completes the aggregation. Good.

The steamer Aden from Yokohama for London wrecked off the east coast of Africa June 9, eighty persons missing.

It is reported that Schweinfurth, the Rockford messiah, has purchased two thousand acres of land in Arkansas on which to establish a "heaven."

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, stopped at Lamoni over the 1st and 2d enroute home from Minnesota.

M. Droz, ex-President of Switzerland, has decided to accept the governorship of Crete, recently tendered him, provided the appointment is made provisional at first.

The Spanish government has instructed General Weyler to push military operations in Cuba to the greatest possible extent. It is said that no quarter will be shown by either Spaniards or Cubans and that the close of the season's campaign will be a most sanguinary one. Twenty thousand Spanish soldiers are now sick with yellow fever and other disorders; besides this Spain's daily expense in the campaign is $200,000 per day. Under these conditions it is thought that the war will soon be concluded.

Musselmen and Christians became involved in sharp fighting near Canea, Crete, on the 26th. The trouble was caused by the former trespassing upon the neutral zone.

The Mayou Volcano, in one of the Philippine Islands, which has been inactive since 1617 has become active of late. The eruption, accompanied by an earthquake, has caused the death of one hundred and twenty people.

A volcanic eruption is reported at Bainbridge, near Chillicothe, Ohio, June 30. Rumbling sounds were followed by large openings in the earth from which large volumes of smoke issued. The disturbances lasted an hour. Smoke continues from the earth fissures, which are of great depth.

We note that on June 24th the genial secretary of the general Sunday School Association joined the ranks of the married men, by taking as a wife Louise Isabel Alcom, of Kansas City, Missouri. May their happiness be great.

Brn. William Summerfield and M. M. Turpen are holding tent meetings at Higbee, Missouri, and are having good attendance and attention by the people; and the Lord is blessing with splendid liberty in preaching. Will move from there to Moberly, no preventing providence. Those of the saints or friends desiring their labors can address them at Higbee.

The Evening Owl, of Salinas City, California, for June 24, reaches us with a rousing defense of the faith by Bro. A. Haws, in which he deals a hard blow to somebody for grossly misrepresenting the church. Good for Bro. Haws!

One hundred and fifty thousand bituminous coal miners, of the United Mine Workers of America, located in different States, have gone out on a strike for higher wages.

Severe storms and cyclones in Minnesota, July 3. Nine persons killed. Loss at Duluth, $750,000; heavy losses at other points.

Edham Pasha, commander of the Turkish troops in Thessaly, has resigned his command, stating as a reason his inability to control the Turkish troops in Thessaly, who desire to push forward and occupy additional strategic points. Tewfik Pasha will announce to the ambassadors of the powers that the Turkish cabinet maintains the indefeasible right of Turkey to retain Thessaly by virtue of conquest. The Constantinople papers of July 1 report that a battle has taken place between Greek raiders and Ottoman troops near Metzovo, in which the former were defeated.

London advices say that some important lines of inter-colonial policy have been agreed upon since the colonial premiers have been in attendance at the celebration of the Queen's jubilee; viz., a proposition for penny postage within the limits of the British Empire, the establishment of a naval reserve in the colonies, and military coöperation with England on the part of all the colonies. Colonial representation in the House of Commons is also being discussed.
