FAULTS OF EXPRESSION IN THE PULPIT.

It is a fact of common experience that men are influenced not only by what is said, but by the way it is said as well. One does not write a letter on a matter of importance when he may have a personal interview; the lawyer does not submit his speech to the jury in writing. The fact is apparent that we are not moved and swayed by abstract truth. What we have to say becomes forceful and effective largely because it is personal in its nature. It is more effective for one to give truths colored by his own experience and originality than to repeat an abstract truth covering the same ground. The successful speaker gives himself along with the truth. He presents facts, and by his voice and manner shows his own appreciation of them. Words are largely abstract, impersonal, and conventional, while the modulations of the voice, the lines of the countenance, and the flash of the eye, render them personal, sympathetic, and spontaneous. As an example, some one may tell us an interesting personal experience, much to our edification; then should he reduce it to writing with all the care he could command, and then read it to us, it would be likely to have lost its force.

That which is read and spoken, then, owes its force to the thought which engages the attention, and to that form of expression that best points out all its shades, and which says it is true, and true to me. Is not here the key to effective work?

How frequently the hymns, the Scriptures, and other parts of the service, are read in a manner that would say: "This is mere formality; it is the custom to do it. It does not appeal to me, but I will simply call over the words, and you can interpret for yourselves." Under these conditions the congregation will do as the preacher has done—allow the mind to remain in a negative state; they will not receive what the voice and manner of the speaker has failed to suggest. The speaker is a director of attention.

One of the worst of pulpit faults is the "clergyman's tone," a half sing-song form of speech, with minor intonations. This is wrong, since we use this form of expression nowhere else in life. By this the whole Bible and all the service are made sad and dreary. This form of voice often renders the most hopeful passages indicative of despair. The Twenty-third Psalm, instead of a hymn of peace and joyful trust, is made hopelessly dreary and depressing. The words whisper "hope," the tones whine "despair."

Another common fault has arisen through protest to this form of voice, which may be termed the "intellectual tone." This is the cold, colorless, and formal form of speech. Hymns of praise and rejoicing are read as though the speaker were stating a proposition in geometry. The language of the heart is repressed, or transformed into formal, matter-of-fact statements. This is almost as bad as the other, and should be avoided.

Another prevalent fault in speaking is too rapid utterance and too high pitch, like one chasing an idea up hill. Self-control and repose are essentials. One idea should be handled at a time, and the attention should not be spread over too much intellectual territory. How often, especially in young speakers, as the sermon proceeds, the voice rises higher and higher and becomes more and more rapid, never pausing to impress an idea, allowing no form of light and shade, and only culminating in a shriek which is meant to impress some great truth. This is nervousness—excitement, but not force. Howling is not force, but frequently the speaker impresses the hearers with the fact that he is simply excited, instead of calmly and masterfully impressing the great truths.

There are as many kinds of speeches as there are speakers, and this gives variety to their discourses. Some of the various styles are due to bad habits, and some are due to individuality. Some in manner are timid and apologetic; rising inflections predominate, and in all they do they are exceedingly deferential. The opposite is equally bad; no audience will respond with warmth to sentiments from the lips of one whose whole manner suggests too much self-esteem.

Who are responsible for the many pulpit faults? Certainly the clergymen themselves are not blameless; but is there not some deficiency in their training? Do the seminaries furnish them all possible assistance in proper speaking? Perhaps only one hour per week is devoted to it; perhaps some clergyman is assigned to the seminary, and takes charge of this branch. Often one professor says, "Get ideas, and expression will take care of itself;" while another preaches, "Be imbued with the spirit, and words will be given you." Meanwhile many fail, some are tolerated, and a few make successes.

Here is a contrast—a church comfortable and homelike, where truth is preached, admission free, and a sign out begging people to attend. On the other hand, an uncomfortable theater, the play trash, the prices for seats high, the result "standing room only" at the theater, and empty pews at the church. Is any part of this due to a lack of effective delivery on the part of the preacher and a knowledge of the same by the actor?

Hints for Bible reading:—

Interpret it as the word of God.

Interpret each part in the light of its own meaning.

Do not whine, for sacred things are not necessarily sad; and do not give great and joyous passages like remarks about the weather.

Think each idea as you render it.

Hints on preaching:—

Impress your principal truths; one or two great thoughts impressed are worth fifty disconnected ideas.

Impress the important ideas, and shade the unimportant ones; you cannot be strong all the time.

Keep your self-command, and do not rant.

Talk to many as you would to the individual. Of course your delivery should be ennobled and magnified.

Give your message as though it were entitled to due consideration.

Be in earnest.—George B. Hymson, in The Lutheran Church Paper.

IT GIVES ALL SIDES.

All through the campaign Public Opinion has successfully maintained its reputation for fairness. Every shade of thought upon all topics is represented in its American Affairs department; not one man's opinion but the opinion of every man who is at all representative. Public Opinion (published at New York) is the one journal that enables its readers to keep posted upon the happenings in every field of human activity. Your local papers furnish information as to purely local affairs, and Public Opinion furnishes a view of national affairs. To go outside these two papers, except for purposes of special investigation, is unnecessary. There will be much to learn in the political field after November 3. The issue of Public Opinion for November 12 will contain about 200 expressions of opinion upon the result of the election from the press of this and foreign countries. Send 5 cents for this issue, or we will send a sample copy of our own selection free. For $2.50 you can be a thoroughly posted man for one year, $1.25 for 6 months, 65 cents for 3 months.

COLLEGE OPENING.

FRIDAY, January 1, 1897, will always be remembered, as one of the best and brightest in the history of the place. On that day the people of the town and country, the saints and their neighbors and friends gathered to the pleasantly located and beautiful building, on the southeast hill, called Graceland College, and there with song, and addresses, and music, and prayer, dedicated and formally opened it as an institution of learning. The exercises were entertaining, enlivening, encouraging, and reverential, and were thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed by the audience that filled the chapel, gallery, aisles, and doorways to the fullness of them.

No single day in the history of the place was ever so marked in strong and striking characteristics for the physical, mental, and moral progress and good of the town and vicinity as this one. The days preceding it had been cloudy and dull, fog and mist and rain had shrouded the earth, and leaden skies and dampening winds had chilled the spirits and depressed the spirit and ardor of the officers and committees charged with the duty of making the arrangements for a successful day. It seemed as if the fates that governed the weather had decided to open the winter upon the place in storm and gloom. But when the day dawned the clouds were flying before the strong south wind, steady and brisk, with more of May than January in its cadences; the sun rose in splendor and by its benign rays scattered the mists, and by noon roads were passable and sidewalks dry for the throngs that came from far and near to see and hear and rejoice in the ceremonies.

A procession led by the band gathered at the building in town in which the school had been held during the year 1895 and the fall term of the present school year, and marched thence to the College, and opened the exercises by a piece of music written for the occasion. After this and a song by the Lamoni church choir, Rev. Mitchell, of the M. E. Church, of Davis City, Iowa, offered the prayer of invocation, appropriately and feelingly; then followed in succession the dedicatory address, by President Joseph Smith, and addresses by Hon. H. M. Towner, judge of the third judicial district, and Elder J. R. Lambert, of the Twelve, and dedicatory prayer by Elder Mark H. Forscutt, of the High Priests, the intervals being filled by excellent songs, and by music by the Lamoni Orchestra, whose selections were very fine, the whole service ending with a benediction by Elder Columbus Scott, of the Seventy.

The committee to whom had been intrusted the arranging the program did their duty well, and the exercises under the skillful guidance of Bishop E. L. Kelley, master of ceremonies, were a complete success.

How much resulted to the College treasury has not been ascertained; but we believe that all did what their condition permitted, and that the committee did well.

The exercises began at 1:45 p. m., and concluded at 4:30 in a blaze of enthusiasm.

The saints will now take notice that Graceland College is an existent fact; the faculty and students domiciled in the completed building, "at home" to fellow students, visitors, sightseers, and those interested in the institution itself. Now let the committee have the hearty support of the whole family, not forgetting the fact that to secure what is now an assured fact, an educational institute, the committee have pledged their own and the people's good faith. Can we afford now to disappoint these faithful workers?

Send the students along; the people of Lamoni will be pleased to see them and will give them as good and comfortable a welcome as is possible.

CHURCH HISTORY.

WE give place to the letter of Bro. T. W. Williams, an active missionary in the field, whose opinion in regard to the History and its probable effect and value it may have as an adjunct and help in the work is of worth to all.

Bro. Thomas is enthusiastic; but the man who is not can be only a half-hearted worker, after all.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Dec. 23, '96.

To Brn. Joseph and Heman Smith; Dear Brethren:—The "Church History" just received. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," expresses my feelings best. Have not read the book, but examination thus far exceeds my expectations. It is the crowning work thus far of the Herald Publishing House. Merited commendation to "Ye Editors" for your indefatigable research and careful compilation.

An effort should be made to get a copy of the work in every public library in the land. I shall place one in Council Bluffs. I expect to place the History in one hundred homes in Pottawattamie district. Have ordered fifty and will soon need more. This book should be in every Latter Day Saint home. The Z. R.-L. could do no better thing than to take up the study of "Church History" during the coming year.

Church work moving nicely. Interest on the increase here. Our branch Thanksgiving offering netted nearly fifty dollars.

May God's "peace" and "good will" rest on you both, with loved ones included at this Christmastide; and may some swift-winged messenger of light bring gladsome tidings to our bereaved President, evidencing divine acceptance and Godly recognition in this his hour of sorrow.

Sincerely yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

ONLY a few months ago we heard President George Q. Cannon speak from the tabernacle pulpit in Salt Lake City, Utah. He had just returned from the east, and in language eloquent and impressive he portrayed the sin, corruption, and prostitution of eastern cities. He then closed with an appropriate exhortation to his audience to be thankful for deliverance from social evils, and spoke, as nearly as we can remember, these words:—

We cannot appreciate too highly the privilege of rearing up our children in these peaceful valleys free from the contaminating influence of a wicked world.

Remembering this we could but ask: "can these things be?" when we read in the Argus, published at Salt Lake City, Utah, December 12, 1896, the following:—

Chief of Police Paul has a herculean task before him, but he will be equal to it. Again it is his duty to cleanse the city of the human scum which infests it, of the assignation houses in which young girls are lured to ruin, of the dives and pitfalls which abound on every hand, of the private gambling resorts where clerks and business men while away their time and money which should be disbursed at home, of the opium dens which are the foulest blots upon civilization's escutcheon, and of the parasites who thrive upon the earnings of frail women. It will also be his duty to suppress into some semblance of decency the numerous houses of prostitution whose glaring lights lure the youth of the city into the hearts of respectable residence blocks, and to so conduct his affairs in that direction as to render it no longer necessary for policemen to call at these lighthouses of hell on a business pretense in order that they may bask in the smiles of the inmates or quaff, at the expense of the landladies, foaming beakers of the beverage whose distinguishing color is amber, tipped with a crown of white.

It will also be his duty to rid the city of its horde of vagrants who beg by day and rob by night; of the thugs who have in the past caused by their bold operation, property to be unsafe and human lives to be almost nightly in jeopardy. It will also be his duty to see to it that never again will it be possible for a vile den to flaunt its red rag of degradation from the ground floor of the Herald as was done up to within the past few days, into the faces of respectable women and innocent school children as they pass by. It will be his duty to so discipline his force that it will not even be intimidated by the most depraved mind that the hand of a blue-coated guardian of the peace is susceptible to the magic touch of coin placed there by confidence sharks.

It will also be his duty to see that the police do not play too often the game of blind man's buff with thieving gentry, and it is his duty also to see to it that men who pose as moralists and as honorable executors of a great trust are not permitted to transform a magnificent block in the business district into a palatial palace of sin, as the Argus understands is now being done.

In the same issue the Argus makes this bold charge:—

That opium dens exist in Salt Lake City; that they are operated within a stone's throw of the city hall, and that bluecoated guardians of the peace pass them daily and nightly with a full knowledge of the iniquity that is carried on within them are facts which the Argus is prepared to prove if the challenge is given.

If the Argus correctly represents existing conditions it by no means follows that the dominant church in Salt Lake City is responsible for all these evils. It is only responsible so far as its teaching, or practice condones, or encourages these crimes.

But when representatives of this same dominant church seek to induce people to go to Utah, by representing to parents that their children can there be reared in safety free from contaminating influence now too prevalent in the east, they are guilty of misrepresentation, and no exposé of eastern corruption, whether it be false or true, will free them from that charge.

KILLING THE SPIRIT.

THE following from Dr. Trumbull, will doubtless prove acceptable to many:—

There are more ways than one of putting the letter above the spirit. Ordinarily we think of it as an insistence on the surface meaning of words and phrases without regard to the motive which underlies their utterance. But there is a way of exalting the letter, not by a blind adherence to it, but by centering our interest on it as an object of criticism, and so forgetting the spirit that lies back of it. Mere spelling and grammar, and even rhetoric, as such, have played a comparatively small part in the winning of souls to Christ, or in spurring them on to great deeds for him. And yet there are persons who will dissipate the solemn message from a great soul by a petty denunciation of a speaker's slip in grammar, or by a contemptuous criticism of his mispronunciation. They will admit, by a stretch of generosity, that he may be a man of consecrated purpose, mighty of heart, and forceful in action. He even has his place, they concede, as a power for good with "certain classes"—to which they themselves do not belong. But that use of the objective case instead of the nominative, or of the wrong tense of a verb, of which he was guilty on the platform, has put him outside of the pale of usefulness to them personally. These petty critics thus think more of the misused letter than of the earnest heart, so far as their personal needs are concerned. One blessing at least they put above the being "poor in spirit," and that is, the being rich in grammar. It is a good thing to be a linguist, sensitive in ear and conversant with tongues; but one who would be of highest use to his fellow-men, and who would get good from them, must tune his life to the more subtle language which is the expression of the immortal spirit. He must not be led away or dragged down by his love for the correctness of the letter. Laudable as it is to be literate, it must be borne in mind that this spirit of petty criticism is not the spirit that giveth life, but one of the ways of loving the letter that killeth.

WE clip the following from the Independence, Missouri, Progress, of December 26, for the purpose of calling attention to the special "Mormon" edition spoken of. We hope some of our enterprising brethren of Independence will see that proper information is furnished the Progress.

During the year 1897, the Progress will have a number of special editions.

Each special edition will be devoted to some one special subject as the main idea of it.

For instance, our first effort in this line will be the "Old Soldiers'" edition. This we expect to get out at an early date. Following this will be the "Old Settlers'" edition, and so on along such lines as may be suggested from time to time. Our Mormon edition will probably be as intensely interesting to the mass of our readers as any other.

These special editions we expect to issue about the first of each month after we get started. Our Old Soldiers' edition will hardly be ready by the first of next month but will appear sometime in January. . . .

Data for these several editions are now being industriously collected. Our friends are cordially invited to assist us by offering suggestions, contributing articles or by merely relating to the editor anecdotes, incidents, sketches, etc. We shall want many short items. A short story, pertinent to the subject, will appear in each special edition.

It is our object to collect a vast amount of information for the people in this way—information not to be obtained in any other way. This enterprise will not lessen the amount of news regularly published in these columns. . . .

EDUCATION IN GERMANY.

THE following concerning education in Germany shows how the Jew is pressing to the front in preparing himself to stand in the forefront of human affairs, if not to lead in the avenues of thought and action:—

Statistics of the proportion of the population attending the universities and other higher educational institutions in Germany have, says our Berlin correspondent, just been published. Every 10,000 Protestants in the empire send 50 students to these high schools, every 10,000 Roman Catholics 32, the same number of dissenters and sectaries send 49 and every 10,000 Jews send the remarkable number of 333. In Prussia the proportions of Protestants, Catholics, and Jews are respectively 45, 27, and 333. In Roman Catholic Bavaria the proportion is 67, 42, and 370; in Wurtemberg, 84, 53, and 590; in Baden, 64, 41, and 417, and in Saxony, 40, 23, and 357. These figures testify to the extreme value set on a university education by the Jews in Germany and explain how it is that young Hebrews are pressing into all the learned professions in far greater proportion than their ratio to the entire population of the country would warrant.—London Chronicle.

BRO. ELIJAH WUNSCH, who once made Lamoni a visit, and who is now at Tonawanda, New York, is doing what he can to make his neighbor understand the faith. He sends an extract from the Buffalo Enquirer, and a letter, and extract from the Courier of the same place. We give letter and extract that the readers of the HERALD may see how the case stands:—

NORTH TONAWANDA, N. Y., Dec. 26.

Editors Herald.—Please find copy of description of "Mormonism" as found in a late issue of the Buffalo Enquirer; also clipping from the Buffalo Courier, a leading daily with a large circulation. The comments of the Tonawanda reporter may not be exactly as we would like to have them. He describes things the way he sees them within the sphere of his own observation. He did not misrepresent us, and may God bless him for reporting the contents of our ministry and branch cards.

Our faith is attacked here, sometimes by representatives of the creeds. I challenged some of the most enthusiastic of them to divide the time with me in public debate. Each of them found some technicality to back out honorably. On the other hand I do not know if the senior editor would indorse me as a proper representative of the church of which he is the lawful president, for this cause I might some day have to back out myself.

Your humble brother in the one faith,
ELIJAH WUNSCH.

HUMBLE PREACHERS.

BUREAU OF THE BUFFALO COURIER.

NORTH TONAWANDA, Dec. 21.—During the last two or three years there has been some persistent if not wholly fruitful labors going on here by representatives of the religious sect known as the "Latter Day Saints." The most active of this people is Elijah Wunsch, who is an ordained minister and who started out to be a Methodist preacher. He now earns a living by working in the lumber yards and preaches to gatherings on the street corners and in rooms when given an opportunity. He is an earnest appearing fellow, of large frame and good memory. He is well posted on Scriptural matters and quotes very readily. He says that his denomination is represented in the Tonawandas by three men, who, like himself, are anxious to do good work. He says that while he believed in the "laying on of hands" his people differ from the Christian Scientists. He said that the belief of his people was as follows.

Then follows the epitome of faith in full.

Bro. Wunsch has been laboring to get an education against strong odds, alone and beyond the sympathy of his own relatives because of his espousal of the faith. We have not seen him for years, but fully believe that the Lord will indorse and sustain those in the faith who correctly represent Christ; and see no reason now why Bro. Wunsch is not among them; and is justified in asking those who attack that faith for an opportunity to defend against such attack.

THE Independence, Missouri, Blade, for Saturday, December 26, has the following generous notice, in its representative column for the churches of that historic town:—

By far the largest congregation in the city worships at the magnificent stone church on West Lexington Street known as the Latter Day Saints church, Independence branch. Eight hundred and seventy-five souls are enrolled in its membership and the musical services are a feature of its Sunday worship. Some of the best amateur talent of the town participate in the choral exercises on Sabbath days and their splendid musical taste affords a treat to those who appreciate the praise exercises of religious services. Elder George E. Herrington is the pastor or president of the branch and his ministrations are popular and able. The building is a credit to a congregation numbering so many of those in the middle walks of life and is a practical lesson in church going to Independence citizens.

THE St. Joseph Gazette of November 21 comments thus on the election of Mrs. Martha Hughes Cannon to the Utah Senate:—

A biographical sketch of the career of Martha Hughes Cannon, who ran against her alleged husband for the Utah senate and beat him by 4,000 votes, throws some rather vivid light on this remarkable episode. The fact is that Mrs. Cannon is not the wife of the man who ran against her, if there is any virtue in the law abolishing polygamy in that state. The man in the case married two sisters under the Mormon regime, and when the United States bade him reject one he refused. Not only did he refuse, but he married two other women, the last being the present senator-elect. The new senator has, therefore, no legal marital status. But being a Mormon and believing that polygamy is the natural state and the right one, she is not troubled. It's a queer state of things that allows the law to be set at defiance by one of the chosen lawmakers.

EUROPEAN nations are reported to have arranged for the division of China. The following telegram shows that the Celestial empire is destined to feel the developing forces of western civilization. What is it that is moving the world entire along the lines of advancement?

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 9.—According to news received here from unofficial sources, Li Hung Chang's visit to England and the United States already has borne fruit in a decision of the Chinese government to gradually Anglicize the Chinese people, at least as far as their language is concerned.

The Pekin government recently issued instructions to the various viceroys and governors of provinces of the empire to establish schools for the teaching of the English language and western sciences in all of the principal cities of the country.

According to the wording of one clause in the general instructions the reason for this is that China, in order to keep herself on terms of equality and in touch with the great powers of Europe, "must educate the masses and encourage inventive genius and foreign learning among her people, together with that love of country and home and that devoted patriotism so consciously engraved in the hearts of those who have studied such languages and sciences."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. T. BAKER, Lebeck, Missouri, the 24th:—

With few exceptions all seem to be enjoying the gospel. Our prayer meetings are very encouraging, God's Spirit being present in mighty power at times. Bro. F. C. Keck has been holding a series of meetings west of here; eight baptized as a result. Bro. Keck is wonderfully blessed and has a way of convincing his hearers that he is very much in earnest in what he says. This seems to be quite an attractive place for saints, as many seem to be gathering in here and the Spirit revealed to us on last Tuesday evening that the saints should gather in here from east, west, north, and south. We would like very much to see a letter from the Auburn, Iowa, saints. While reading the Christmas story in January number of Autumn Leaves I was prompted to write for information through the Herald of Isaac Baker, who, near as I can learn, left Laporte, Indiana, in the year 1852 for California during the gold excitement. If any know anything of the above-named person I would like if they would write me.

Bro. Charles E. Willey, writing from Jamison, Clarke County, Iowa, P. O. Box 87, writes thus:—

You might say in Herald for the benefit of any of the elders or saints who might come this way, that my residence is two and one half miles due east of Jamison, a station on the railroad running from Des Moines to Kansas City; and while we cannot entertain them royally, we will make them welcome.

Cousin and Brother Joseph B. Smith, writing from Salt Lake City, Utah, December 27, says:—

We had a very nice time Christmas Eve at the chapel. We all enjoyed ourselves very much; the children were happy. Elder H. O. Smith has delivered some very fine lectures, showing why he is a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and to-night his subject is, "Where was the church from June 27, 1844, to the year 1852?" His lectures are fine and any man that is seeking after the truth and will acknowledge that which is written, cannot help but see that our cause is just; and that our feet are placed upon the written word, and that any doctrine that does not harmonize with the three witnesses we cannot accept. I believe the time will come when the false doctrines of the Utah Church will be buried, comparatively speaking, with their deeds. This idea that a man must throw away his reason and submit to the will of the authorities, without reflecting to the right and wrong, is gradually going to the wall. We are all well. Money is very scarce here and it seems as much as one can do to make a living, but I hope the coming year will bring prosperity to us all, and especially to the church, that we may push the work that is intrusted to our hands. In order to do this every member must do his part, and I do hope that in one more year my name may be on the books as one that not only hopes but aids the work.

Bro. Levi Gamet, Clearwater, Nebraska, the 25th:—

Bro. Mintun recently held four meetings in the town of Clearwater, awakening some interest and allaying prejudice. We had a Christmas celebration last night at saints' chapel; house full, and good time.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE acknowledge receipt of a good letter from Bro. John H. Wise, dated Donnelly's Mills, Pennsylvania, December 20. It is a testimony of appreciation of the gospel and a plea for earnest consecration of life powers to live it and make it honorable that men may see its power revealed in a purified humanity and be led to obey it. We are glad to hear from Bro. Wise.

Bro. J. E. Ritter, formerly of Lamoni, now located at San Miguel, Del Mezquital, Zacatecas, Mexico, writes earnestly of his love for the work and willingness to do anything in his power for its advancement. He requests prayer for strength to abide while removed from communion with brethren and sisters. His letter breathes an excellent spirit. We are obliged to omit it, with others.

Bro. W. A. H., writing from Stockton, California, asks that we make note of the labors of Brn. Albert Haws and Richard Ferris, which he mentions favorably.

Bro. R. A. Taggart, of Redfield, Kansas, commends the labors of Brn. I. N. White and F. C. Keck, who defended the faith against misrepresentations and other attacks. Saints there have the sympathy of the people and are blessed of God. He exhorts the young people to be true to themselves and the church.

Bro. W. A. McDowell was at Valley Junction, Wisconsin, on the 28th ult., preaching and looking after the work. He and Bro. A. L. Whiteaker found full houses at various openings in the neighborhood, the people inviting them to preach, offering to convey them to and from places of meeting. He thinks saints should live near to God and put forth greater efforts to further his work.

By letter from Elder S. W. Condit, of Idaho, we learn that he has been doing some acceptable work at Malad and vicinity. He has interested himself in raising means to pay off an indebtedness of long standing on the chapel in Malad. The saints nobly responded, and the result is that the chapel is not only paid for, but they also have enough means on hand to make necessary repairs.

Private advices from Rome to the Portland Argus state that Pope Leo is failing fast and that the choice of his successor is being discussed. The selection is expected to test the strength of the ultramontane and the liberal factions of the Church of Rome.

Some good brother sends us the Sheffield, England, Telegraph, of December 18, from which it appears that the late earthquake in England was quite a serious affair. Five or six shocks occurred; buildings were rocked and some damage done. A very slight increase in intensity would have wrought ruinous results.

President Joseph Smith arrived home from a trip to Independence on Tuesday, the 29th.

Bro. A. B. Pearce, of Rhode Island, has sent us a short paper on Sabbath observance which we shall be glad to insert when space permits.

Bro. Columbus Scott, of the Des Moines district, reached home on the 29th. He is to engage in discussion with an Adventist at a point in Nebraska, beginning January 11.

A letter from Bro. Edwin Trimby, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, makes favorable mention of Bro. Sheehy's labors there, among them the organization of a Sunday school. Bro. T. requests prayers of the Union in behalf of a crippled person baptized by Bro. S.

Bro. A. E. Beebe, Orr Post Office, Saginaw County, Michigan, twenty-eight miles from Bay City, an aged member of the church, writes asking if some of the elders could visit that place and preach the word. He believes the people would hear and some obey.

Bro. T. W. Davis, Quartz Mountain, California, reports himself preaching every Sunday night with good attendance and such interest as war-rants belief that good is being done. Other faiths are also presented. He hopes to show the truth as it is, that it may be understood and obeyed. He is encouraged by the good Spirit.

It is stated on what appears to be semi-official authority that Archbishop Corrigan, of New York, will be made a cardinal at an early date. Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, and Dr. Keane, formerly rector of the Catholic University at Washington, who represent the liberal wing of American Catholicism, are said to have been absolved by the Pope; but that he has resolved to elevate Corrigan as the representative of conservative Catholicism in America.

Bro. A. H. Parsons reports successful celebrations of the Christmas season with the usual treat by the Sunday schools, at Philadelphia and Camden. He refers to labor done farther east by Brn. Moler and Smith, already reported. Bro. M. was at Germantown, Bro. S. at Camden when he wrote, the 26th.

Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, secretary of the General Association writes that the late Sunday school teachers' institute at Council Bluffs was a success; attendance and interest both good. We may have a report of proceedings.

By letter from Bro. G. T. Griffiths December 20, Cleveland, Ohio, we learn that Judge Noble, who succeeded in getting Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser turned out of the Mayon Mission, in Cleveland, a year or so ago, had lost his eyesight, and was defeated for the Judgeship at the polls, November 3, last, thus losing the office; and that the Mayon Mission is no more, and Mr. Mayon himself, had lost his wife, become discouraged and had taken to drink, and was "going to the dogs," as the saying is. On the opposite of this Bro. Etzenhouser was still at work for the Master with degrees of success; the church was planted in Cleveland to stay, and the cause making progress generally, in that region.

In a compilation of statistics lately made by Mr. Rueherevein, State Labor Commissioner of Ohio, it appears that from 1,388 industrial establishments in forty-six States and Territories show that 52,448 less hands were employed in these establishments in July, 1896, than in July, 1892, and that $19,214,448 less is paid out annually in wages.

The receipt is acknowledged to Bro. Thomas Jones, of Nantyglo, Wales, of book mailed in care of Herald Office.

We have some excellent articles on topics of interest that we shall insert as space permits. Some call for more letters, others for more articles on gospel topics. It is impossible fully to accede to all demands. However, we think a fair share of both should appear in the HERALD, and suggest that letter writers boil down their statements to essential items only, that we may furnish our readers more matter and in compact form. Many nonessential details are often given in letters. The writer who can state what he wants to say in few words the better pleases the reader and trains himself to directness and brevity.

A London dispatch of the 2d states that during the last fifteen months nearly fifteen thousand persons have become converts to the Roman Catholic Church, two thousand of that number being in the diocese of Westminster alone. It is significant that Catholicism grows right under the shadow and notwithstanding the influence of the leading temple of the Church of England, rich in the memories and tombs of the country's national heroes, poets, and statesmen. The Church of Rome is not asleep.

Telegrams of the 2d inst. report destructive tornadoes in Southern Arkansas and Northern Texas. The town of Mooringsport, Louisiana, is reported to have been destroyed.

Madrid dispatches of the 2d inst. report much excitement in Spain and a sense of impending danger to the present government, caused by the bankrupt condition of the treasury, together with corruption among Spanish officers in Cuba, which is boldly denounced by two of the leading newspapers. The downfall of Premier Canovas is openly predicted by some. Senor Sagasta is leading the Liberal party in a general attack upon the government. The Spanish Republicans are reported alive with excitement.

Germany is alarmed at the increase and improved equipment of the French infantry and will hasten the equipment of the army of the Fatherland with new Krupp quick firing guns at an expense of 260,000,000 marks. The navy will also be strengthened. It is again in order for European statesmen to announce growing prospects for the peace of the continent.

We may be pardoned if we note the following from different places referring to the Church History:—

Bro. Charles Fry, Tabor, Iowa: "I have received the first volume of 'Church History,' and after a brief perusal of it can say I am very much pleased with it and that it fulfills my highest expectations. For years I have longed for a work of this kind and now I appreciate having one. Every young man interested at all in the church should have this book, by which he can obtain such a knowledge of the latter-day work as will enable him to defend its principles under any circumstances."

Bro. J. B. Roush, Fruita, Colorado, January 1, 1897: "I have just finished reading volume 1 of Church History, and to say I am pleased with it, is expressing myself in the mildest language my feelings will allow."

HELPS IN THE SICK ROOM.

PURE air is of vital importance in the sick room, and should be kept as nearly so as possible. A window let down at the top and a draft up chimney is a good ventilator. The bed and bedding should be put out and aired occasionally as well as to be kept clean by washing. If the patient has lung trouble, the nurse and all the family should be careful not to worry him or her by smoking, or by smoke or any unpleasant odor from the stove, or by dust and lint in the sick room.

If the patient is sad or despondent don't name it, but be cheerful and turn the mind into a pleasant channel. It is helpful to keep a dish of water in the room—it should be changed every day. Flowers and a few plants give pleasure. A room for the sick should not be dull but bright and cheery.

The windows should not be darkened unless the light is too direct for the eye, then should afford a little light. Light and sunshine are among nature's remedies and should be regarded as such. The animals and fowls know it and put themselves in the way of the same when very young. Look at a vegetable that tries to grow in the dark, or without the aid of sunshine; it is a good counselor. No impurities should set in the room or near it. If the patient takes medicine it should not be kept in sight or where it can be smelled, neither should food of any kind; but should be brought in only when needed, and prepared in a dainty manner, and in quantities to meet the demands of the case—patients are not always consistent judges. If the latter should be a little impatient or even a little cross, the nurse should remember that the strong should bear with the weak, and try and govern herself by the same.

We know the fact that sick people have suffered intensely from unkind treatment from those who ought to have comforted and supported them in their misfortune. What greater misfortune can one have than years of invalidism, and when does one need friends more? Many times has much of Job's experience been repeated, and what benefit was there ever derived from it, either to a patient or to the "comforters," and which think ye was approved of God? Let Job answer.

We think it is a gross sin to willingly or willfully worry a sick nervous person. It does the tormenter no good; it only heaps up wrath to be brought forth in his or her own time of sickness, and it only injures the afflicted one, prolongs the sickness, and makes it worse for all concerned.

Invalids should try to have regular hours for rest—habit is a great helper,—and every inmate of the house should make arrangements to that effect, inasmuch as circumstances will admit. Attendants should cultivate kind feelings toward their patients, but should not wear long faces, nor weep in their presence. A gentle movement in shutting doors, moving chairs, etc., and a soft step, by all means. Never allow callers enough to weary them, and never loud, boisterous talk nor whispering in their hearing. Don't allow anything that will excite or disturb them, and especially in the afternoon and evening—rest is one of nature's restorers. 'Tis very inharmonious to a sick person to have a visitor or friend tell her how much sicker she has been and how hard it was for her to get along as she had to, etc. It does not benefit the speaker and it discourages and often annoys the other. Don't try to encourage them beyond reason, for it is more liable to vex than to encourage.

Now we will turn the leaf and read some on the other side. The writer has had quite a broad and rather a deep experience in both sides of the question. Dear afflicted ones, we address you with the kindest feelings. Far be it from us to wilfully wound you. We only wish to offer you a few suggestions which possible may be of use to some one. We have had very many days, and many years of invalidism; have experienced much pain, have suffered much from weakness and prostration, to say nothing about the "many things suffered of many physicians," or of the false opinions of some, who ought to have been our friends. We were not inferior to any of them in ability, and were fully as ambitious, but were bound years by mental and physical infirmities. We do not wish to be egotistic, but those thoughts presented themselves, so give them a place, hoping that they may benefit one or more. We do not wish to give any details, but will say it is better in all cases of sickness for the patient to use all the self-control that can possibly be called out. Such should try and be consistent with themselves, and consistent with their attendants. Sometimes the latter suffer in consequence of the former's unreasonable requirements. Those who wait on the sick are only human, and are liable to feel unwell, to get tired and to lose their patience. In such a case a kind, sympathizing word from the sick one and a chance to rest, will give renewed strength and courage, and the business will move on like a newly oiled machine. Kindness from any source that has a pure base is not the "Spice of life" but the oil of life. It smoothes the waves of confusion and emotion as oil does the waves of the sea—makes smooth that which otherwise would be rough and turbulent. Medicine can do no good, no matter how much one may depend on it, if the mind is kept in an irritated, confused, or unreconciled state. A calm, trusting state of mind, whether one is to live or to die, is worth more than any physician or drug, for without it the other will be of little use.

One may think that all the days spent in sickness are lost. They may be in a financial sense, but the experience may be very valuable. One may learn how to appreciate health, life's richest blessing, as to take care of it. Prevention is easier and cheaper than cure. And besides, one may do much good while one of the invalid corps. "How?" says you. Cultivate good, kind thoughts toward everyone. It is a profitable exercise to note down such and read them when the mind gets stupid, and thereby awaken it. The thought of the "Shut in society" originated in the mind of Jennie Conklin and another sick girl, also the "Flower Mission" was the idea of Emily Cassidy, an invalid. She was confined to her bed all of twenty years, in consequence of having injured her spine when quite young. No other person can be one of them, or be just like one of them, but every invalid can do something, if it is only to try and be patient. "In your patience possess ye your souls," and the soul possesses the body while in it, and the two execute or make our business a success, whether it is to get well or to labor. Turn the mind from pain and discomfort of every kind, and let it rest in your blessings and on the promises of God. Drive out all unpleasant thoughts of the past, and shut out all gloomy forebodings of the future, nestle in the peaceful present love of the Father and Elder Brother. Again, by having been sick one knows how to sympathize with others in like condition, consequently are better prepared to care for the sick—judgment founded on experience is more reliable than that founded on hearsay.

Dear afflicted brothers and sisters, may you through faith and trust regain your health, and doubly renew your usefulness, and may we greet one another in that home where pain and parting are unknown, is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

OBSTACLES AND HOW TO SURMOUNT THEM.

Read at Guilford, Missouri, October 16, 1896, by W. B. Torrance.

AS WE enter into the work of the Sunday school we do so in the face of many obstacles, and in order that the Sunday school may accomplish its intended mission, we should know how to surmount them. The Sunday school work is thought by some to be of but little or no importance, but to consider it from a real and truthful point of view it may justly be regarded as second to none except the home, but of the greatest means of church work.

The first obstacle that I shall mention is late and irregular attendance. To Sunday school workers who live in the country come quite a hindrance, oftentimes, because of the distance which they live from the place of assembling, and because of the shortness of the days during certain times of the year, rendering them almost unable to preform home duties and attend Sunday school.

It would be difficult to suggest a means to surmount these obstacles unless it would be to arrange the hour of assembling as near as possible to favor the circumstances of all, and try to arrange home duties so they will not detain you from attending Sunday school.

But often lateness and irregularity is caused by that which is not necessary; viz.: The lack of interest in the salvation of the soul, or the not seeing any benefit derived from the Sunday school, these being caused by the mind's being absorbed by the pleasures and cares of the world.

To remove these would be to remember, that to reach the home of the "soul" or to attain to the "first resurrection" we must not idle the time away by seeking the pleasures of the world, but rather like Moses of old "choose to suffer with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." But resort to the Sunday school and work and "study to show yourselves approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed" of Christ or of his work in any department.

INACTIVITY AND INATTENTION.

Where there is activity there is attention and attention there is activity; but where the one does not exist the other is not visible. Attention and activity are virtues that should adorn the character of every individual. The lack of these are obstacles that rise in the way of the progress of the Sunday school work. If it be the superintendent that lacks these, then the work will wane, for what the superintendent is the school is. If he is attentive to the needs of the active and energetic he will influence the school. The spirit of the superintendent is contagious. If it be the teachers the result will be the same over their respective classes. They should become acquainted with each pupil, be enthusiastic, then the class will catch the spirit of the teaching.

The wayward girl, or thoughtless boy, or careless young man, who comes to Sunday school and engages in whispering and looking around is one whose attention is not engaged in the recitation. These should be dealt with; first, get them interested in what you have to say. Become their friend, make them your friend. Use them, let them know that their help is needed, increase their desire to be good and do right, to gain the approbation of their heavenly parent, to advance and to be useful, then you shall have accomplished your heavenly calling.

Attention and activity may be promoted by the song service. Let the songs be spirited, let the harp, the organ, the cornet, and all the stringed instruments (if they can be had) combined with the voice of every child and adult, praise the Lord, that the heavens may seem to catch the sounds and reverberate in blessings to the Sunday school workers.

How many a soul has been cheered and inspired to work by the sweet strains of music. There is something in music that inspires and fills one with enthusiasm, and enables us to make known and receive God's thoughts in a better light. It gives the children light and makes them feel that they are doing their share of the work. The lack of the talent of singing may be called an obstacle to be surmounted. This can be done by cultivating the talent already possessed.

The absence of cooperation is a great obstacle which retards the work of the Sunday school. Fathers and mothers should cooperate with the Sunday school in completing its intended mission. You should make the teachings of the home and Sunday school correspond with the teachings of God. You should become interested in the Sunday school, and your children will follow.

Now, last yet not least but greater than all is the work of the Holy Spirit. When this is absent the underlying principle or that upon which the foundation rests is gone.

Christ says, "Without me you can do nothing." He endows his ministers with his Spirit that they may be able to preach the gospel, how much more than those who have the instructing of the young. The way to obtain this precious boon is to do as it is written, "If ye love me, keep my commandments, and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth . . . when he . . . is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 22.

Editors Herald:—A week ago last night I closed a three-weeks' meeting at Broad River, Connecticut, with good results. Our heavenly Father was with me and there was good interest. I baptized four and left others near the door. On the 14th I came to this city, from where I left three weeks ago. Have baptized one here in the salt water yesterday.

I start for Philadelphia this morning in company with Bro. Moler. I leave a warm hearted band of saints at Broad River and also at Brooklyn. Probably I will not see them again in this life, but I pray that the Lord will bless us that we may meet in the next. So the good work goes on and the honest-hearted are being gathered into the kingdom.

Let us pray for one another for the day is fading fast. Your brother,

W. A. SMITH.

GRINNELL, Iowa, Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:—My daughter lives one mile north and three fourths mile east of old Far West. If any of the missionaries of that district should get into that part of their field I hope they will call on her. Inquire for Ed Stegall on the old Bozarth place; they moved there about a month ago. Mormon elders need not call there. The law says, "He that abets or harbors a lawbreaker is amenable to the law." I read Bro. H. O. Smith's article on page 844 of last Herald, when Brigham said, "We have the greatest and smoothest liars in the world, the cunningest and most adroit thieves, and any other shade of character that you can mention." What does that mean? Had he reference to the Mountain Meadow? I want to run no chances, to be a violator of the law by abetting or even harboring such men as Brigham said he had as elders.

I made a good opening at Gladbrook, Tama County. I used Rev. A. J. Eychaner's church. Bro. McDowell had a debate with him at Eagle Grove. He acted the gentleman with me. He invited the people to come and hear and at the close he invited me to come again and use his church. He acted as janitor, built all the fires, and lit up. The cost for fuel and light was sixty-eight cents a night, but the people paid it willingly. I made many warm friends there. A man and his wife would have been baptized, but she is sickly, therefore timid of cold water, so they concluded to wait for warmer weather. The tent ought to go there next summer.

In bonds,

J. S. ROTH.

ELKHART, Texas, Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—I have not been an idler. Besides presiding over Elkhart branch I preach at all accessible places in this and the adjoining county of Houston, every Sunday and often at night on other days. God blesses me with good liberty and I have been the means of bearing the gospel to many who have investigated, found it true, and embraced it, and now rejoice in the knowledge of the truth.

Some of us gave thank offerings to the church, and I am certain from my own experience that no one will be loser by this; and I intend and recommend to all the faithful the coming Christmas and New Year days, to give to the church all that I would have to present to friends; because a better friend we have not on earth or a more neglected one, from the messages we have from our Bishops and agents. And if all the saints who are able to spare a dollar or so in presents will present it to the church its embarrassments will cease and the cause advance as we all would delight to see, and able elders now at home providing for family necessities would be abroad in the land sounding gospel trumpet, wonderfully inspired by the knowledge that their loved ones were not suffering for the necessities of life, and that they are not the only ones called upon to exercise themselves in self-denial.

I have been certainly blessed of the beneficent Ruler of all things. Several years I traveled more than once the length of this great State on foot preaching, as I got place and hearers, and working for all my clothing and expenses. Since that I have been seventeen years postmaster at this place, and though the pay is small, I have been a self-sustaining local and traveling minister; I mean financially self-sustaining, never receiving any help from anyone but from God.

While I keep my usual health and physical strength I hope to continue the conflict, and on to the end of the race declare to all that will listen that God is true and that his words will never fail; and the work in which I have been so long engaged and which I so dearly love I know to be of God. That manifestation I received soon after Bro. T. W. Smith laid his hands upon me in confirmation and ordination to the elder's office was so full, clear, and explicit with regard to what I doubted that I have ever since had full assurance of the truth of the gospel as we teach it and of the heavenly mission of him through whom the world has been so blessed, and the angel message the blessed, misused, misunderstood, belittled, and besmirched, yet powerful truth, the everlasting gospel,—the Book of Mormon. God manifested its truth to me that evening when the room was filled with the bright heavenly light of God's Spirit; and my doubts were swept away at once and certainly filled my soul with joy unspeakable and indescribable.

I hope the saints will pray for me that I may always prove faithful and efficient as a laborer in the army of the Lord.

JAMES W. BRYAN.

MCLOUD, O. T., Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. B. Toney has just closed a series of discourses at this place. Inclement weather kept some away, and any from being baptized; but the brotherhood has been greatly strengthened, and several interested in gospel work. A great work can be done here in the near future. Oklahoma is one of the best mission fields in the world, but the ministers are few.

We hope Bro. Toney will be sent here another year. He is the right man in the right place; only two in the family, him and his wife. He is a very proficient gospel worker, and can do a great work on a small income.

Any elder in Oklahoma Territory passing this way will do well to stop and see us. We are looking for Bro. George Montague here in the near future. If he sees this I hope he will write us here.

May God bless the Herald and its readers.

Yours in Christ,

DANIEL A. BRESSMAN.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 5.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

A WISE sage has said, "The hopeless soul is the defeated soul." There are burdens heavy to be borne, and longings that perhaps in this life will never be realized. There are perplexities and evil in oneself, and prayers unanswered and the consciousness of failure, ashes of disappointments, wakeful hours, when trouble takes an exaggerated shape and form, and often words from friends which cut to the quick. The problems, the experiences and mysteries of life and the denser mystery of death are thoughts that fly through the brain as we make up the "jots by the wayside."

Happy is the man who has in his makeup the sunshine of hope, and plenty of cheerfulness and sympathy for his brother. The Lord said to Joshua, "Be thou strong and very courageous;" "be strong and of a good courage." Satan always begins his attack by discouraging us, then we are easily led. Cold people are of little use to others; the church is not in want of icebergs; yet there are people who are so cold you get chilled every time you go near them. Especially if they are aware that you are gathering tithes or freewill offerings for some laudable purpose or for the furthering of the cause or interests of the church, or to help the poor missionary as his wants may demand. The best receipt for melting icebergs is, Love one another and keep the "law," thus showing feeling for the church as a whole. Feeling is the crowning of "character" which is grown in the streams of life, while talent is developed in study and solitude. True religion is to pity and provide for the poor and the fatherless, and the converting of the world in the way that God has provided for the carrying on of his work. "Love one another" contains gospel sufficient within it to renovate a world and make a heaven on earth, if practically applied. But who hath believed our report?

Bro. Turpen has returned wearing his usual genial smile. We are very glad to have him with us to take part of the burden. He is ever pleasant in his address and able in counsel, and worthy the confidence of the saints. We noticed a wonderful improvement in him, thinking his visit home was the sole cause; but on closer examination found he was sporting a bran new suit from hat to shoes. He declared McKinley was elected and prosperity had set in. The sequel was he has passed through the "Far West" district on his way home, and the facts are there is a kind of a Lewis-Faul-Head-ed-Hen-Dirks, with White-Head, Krahl-ing-around St. Joseph combination, that will "hold up" a missionary at every corner of the road if he looks like a tramp. A hint to the wise is sufficient, and it is a notable fact surprising as it may be, such men pay their tithing too. But we cannot dwell on these unpleasant things. (?)

Taking train to Moberly we tramped out four miles west to Bro. W. J. Vaughn's; held a series of meeting in a schoolhouse hard by, breaking down prejudice and making friends to the cause. On Wednesday evening we were somewhat surprised when Bro. Vaughn handed us a license carrying with it the authority to bind together in holy bonds of matrimony William J. Vaughn and Mrs. Maggie Allen. We had not even noticed any unusual attention paid to the good looking old lady who was attending our services, we thinking she was like others only interested in the message we bear; but alas, for man's poverty stricken conception, he knows but little at best! They stood up together, solemnity prevailed, the mystic words were spoken according to the formula of the church, and two hearts were made as one, the usual fee was paid the minister, and we soon sought our rest to dream of going home to see the wife and babies and enjoy the Christmas festivities with the loved ones there. But Oh! these disappointments in life; for there is many a slip betwixt cup and lip. In the dawn of the morning we were groping around the room for our clothing, and imagine our surprise to finding it partially hanging out of a window, with the pockets rifled, the window raised by a prop under it so the thief could have free ingress and exit and every cent gone. We admit now there were different visions passing through our mind to the ones on retiring, and no doubt there would have been a case of laying on hands if I could have had the opportunity; but we composed ourself with the thought that we were in harmony with the law, "without purse or scrip." Bro. Turpen's significant smile added to my pleasures but very little, but he assured me that he was only glad his new clothes had not been taken. Next day we tramped back to Moberly, kind friends furnished money for tickets, and we set sail for Higbee, where we arrived in due time, and we are very cosily domiciled at Bro. and Sr. Geo. Thorburn's.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, Dec. 29.

Editors Herald:—The Church History just received. I have had but a few hours to examine it, but have seen enough to feel delighted. It is a work that ought to be in every family of the saints, and be read by every investigator.

Since my last I have preached in different places as I have found openings, in Salt Lake, Utah, and Juab counties; sometimes to fair, but mostly to small audiences. Gospel truths seem to be not much in demand in this country; or, perhaps it is my way of telling the story that is not attractive. At any rate I have not been permitted to see much accomplished besides comforting and encouraging those already in the fold. But as we sow in hope, not knowing what the result eventually will be, God may in his own time give the increase, so I feel still to trust in the Lord, and to remain

FAIRLAND, I. T., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:—I am to-day on the late battle ground, where Bro. I. N. White so valiantly fought last September; not at Ephesus, but here in Fairland, T. H. Popplewell being the chief lion. I find the few saints at this place firm and faithful, determined to stand by the truth to the end.

I closed a very interesting meeting last evening at Grove, Indian Territory. One of the leading merchants of that place, with some assistance, has built a new schoolhouse in which he cordially invited us to hold meetings at any time, offering to take care of the preacher while holding meetings. This is one of the places that our tent ropes were cut last summer, but friends are being made and a better feeling prevails among the people generally.

I go on from here to hold a week's or ten days' meeting at Wyandotte, Indian Territory, where I held a week's meeting last September and baptized two. Others say they are ready for the water when I get there.

This is a hard field requiring hard and careful work, but I am hopeful for good results finally.

Your brother,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

MINNEAPOLIS, Kan., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I will try this morning to inform you of my whereabouts, as I have not been permitted to see the Herald for the past two weeks, and I feel lost if I don't see it every week. I am located at present some six miles southeast of Minneapolis, in Ottawa County, where Bro. J. A. Davis and I are trying to talk gospel to the people. But there seems to be a very strong disposition to freeze us out, as we have tried two schoolhouses near us, and three are all the outsiders we can toll in as yet, but we will try a few times more. Perhaps they may see that we are perfectly harmless, and come where we can see them. We tried Industry two nights, and got a fair turnout, mostly Free Thinkers, but their hall was engaged to other parties, so we came to this place and found a small band of noble saints, surrounded by mountains of prejudice, but strong in the faith. God bless them.

Bro. Davis is a fine work-fellow, both capable and in earnest, and an agreeable companion. I hope he may peregrinate over this district many days.

HENRY HART.

BIG BEND, W. Va., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here about the 20th ult. and commenced scattering the seed. It has taken some root and brought forth some fruit; two have been baptized and five have given their names for baptism, one of whom I will baptize to-day.

I held ten services at a place about three miles from here, called Ann Mariah, but no additions there as yet, but several are believing, and I think when the "good seed" has time to grow it will produce fruit to the kingdom. I expect to return there before leaving this mission. The branch on Yellow Creek is not in good working order; some have become cold and inactive, but still there are some here that will never give quarter till the struggle is over and the victory won. I hope to get it in order, but members are scattered so it seems almost a vain hope.

The schoolhouses are generally open, and the people very kind and courteous, except a few "mossback" professors who try to prejudice the minds of those who will listen to them. I expect to spend all of January in the regions near here, and then proceed to Richie County on Indian Creek. The enemy seems to be on the alert, and some of the shots fired must have taken effect, judging from the stir in the enemy's camp.

Truly yours,

J. L. GOODRICH.

B'HAM, England, Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—As we journey along through life, from place to place we frequently see and hear strange things. While in Dundee a short time since a "Professor" Anderson delivered a discourse, "One of a series" on Christianity without miracles. A report was given in the morning's paper, and as the doctrine advanced by the "Professor" appeared to me so monstrous and as there were other correspondents also, I wrote the letter, a copy of which I inclose, together with the printed report of the "Doctor's" discourse, to the editor of the Advertiser, and asked him courteously to print the same. I cannot say if my letter was published, as I came away the same day. Then again last week I saw another strange item published in the Manchester Courier of November 26. I send you the cutting, wherein it sets forth that certain clergymen of the Church of England deny the existence of a personal God!

Well, brethren, when we have here a "learned Professor" denying miracles, and then certain "learned" clergymen denying the existence of God, what are they really leaving for the people to believe in? Truly we are living in extraordinary and perilous times. Praise God for the restoration of the gospel, and bless and praise his holy name that he has permitted us to be identified therein.

With all good wishes,

FRANK SWAN.

CHRISTIANITY WITHOUT MIRACLES.

November 11, 1896.

To the Editor of Dundee Advertiser; Sir:—I respectfully ask permission to offer a few remarks on the above subject. Now that men's minds are agitated on this and other more vital subjects as perhaps they have not been for centuries, I earnestly beg my readers to pay more attention to the reading and study of the revealed word of God as found in the Scriptures and to rely more upon the truths and precious promises found therein, than upon what this man or that man tells you. The way of life as recorded therein is so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein; but if there are certain things hard to understand, then take the advice of James who says: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God," etc. Don't be disturbed by the utterances of men like Dr. Anderson. The thing is just where it was before! It is they, the professors, that destroy the simplicity of the gospel with their vain and foolish speculations.

Doctor Anderson belongs to the class who deny present day revelation; how then does he know of the truth or falsity of miracles? If he succeeds in persuading you by his false and specious arguments that miracles did not occur, how shall you then believe that they will occur in the future? Was it a greater miracle in the past for Christ to raise the dead and give sight to the blind than it will be to raise us up "divinely new" on that great day? By the cunning craftiness of false but popular preachers who "preach for hire and divine for money" the people are so bewildered and so tossed to and fro that they scarcely know what to believe, or what they do believe. These popular preachers are succeeding in turning your ears away from the truth unto fables. Don't forget that it takes just as much to save a person to-day as it did in the days of long ago and exactly the same means are required now as then; viz., faith in God and the Lord Jesus Christ; repentance; baptism "by immersion" for the remission of sins; laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, etc. And to officiate in any holy office and to preach the gospel it needs men with authority from God. If they do not possess this authority, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself," their ministrations are illegal and not recognized in the courts above. If the preachers possessed this authority and had received the Holy Ghost they would all testify the same thing: they would all agree in doctrine. God is not the author of confusion. The Holy Ghost leads and guides into all truth.

To-day there are hundreds of different sects, all differing, and confusion is becoming worse confounded. Whose fault is it? Does the fault lie with God or the teachers that are and have been? What think you, people? Whom do you think Paul and Peter and other disciples referred to when they spoke of the false teachers who would arise, and the wolves who should enter in and tear and scatter the flock? Why, the clever, smart, and popular preachers!

Long before the death of Paul, false teachers had arisen. And Paul in righteous indignation exclaimed, "If I or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed!" The members were warned against those preachers who had a form of godliness, but who denied the power thereof, and about those who used great swelling words of vanity, promising them liberty while they themselves were in bondage. The disciples also said that we the people should be made merchandise of; that these men should preach for hire and divine for money, and that they should turn the people's ears away from the truth. If the priest and preachers possessed authority from God to-day, and if they continued to observe all things whatsoever Christ commanded; if the pure and simple gospel of Jesus was preached unto the people; then to-day would be a day of miracles also; of healing the sick, of giving sight to the blind, and the members of the churches would rejoice in possession and enjoyment of the many spiritual gifts that were poured out upon the believers in the early days.

"Contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" and "covet earnestly the best gifts," and truth before all else.

FRANK SWAN.

MONTE VISTA, Colo., Dec. 29.

Editors Herald:—When we left Denver, August 27, 1895, we put ourselves in the hands of the Lord to guide and be our helper in doing our duty. One duty we resolved to do and which we have been strict to observe ever since, was to tithe every dollar or fraction thereof and send it to the Bishop, which we have done. Though at time and several times since money has been scarce and we did not know where any more was coming from, the Lord opened the way and always provided, so we have lacked nothing we were in need of of the necessaries and comforts of life. Our hearts were touched with the goodness and mercy of God. So we can heartily say, "Praise the Lord."

Now as we read of so many calls for aid to spread the truth and build up the kingdom of God greater than have been, because the needs are greater, let us, dear saints, respond each and every one with the needful one tenth of every dollar we get. I do not urge this because I feel that we have been specially favored, but because of the blessings accruing from obedience to the law and willingness to help build up the kingdom of God and his righteousness. The demands and needs are not as great as they will be.

In gospel bonds,

G. O. KENNEDY.

FRUITA, Col., Dec. 30.

Editors Herald:—I notice in making application to the Western Passenger Association for half fare permit that the note under rule 1 reads "This to include clergyman who are pastors of churches of such denominations as do not believe in a paid ministry, provided their only other occupation is farming." If I have a correct understanding of this language it includes all of our brethren who are acting as district or branch presidents providing they have no other occupation except farming. It might be well to make mention of this through the Herald for I feel sure that quite a number of our brethren have not understood the change in issuing permits, favoring the farmer, so that they now come under this provision, providing they are actually in charge of a congregation. It would be well for the brethren who are district and branch presidents and farmers to look into this matter so they may obtain the benefit of clergy permits and be more able thereby to do work in the field as missionaries as circumstances may permit.

I am glad this provision has been made by the railroads, for a number of our brethren have been unable to do as much as they might have done on account of having to pay full fare on the railroads.

Perhaps the brethren understand this, but I had not noticed anything published in the Herald explaining it, hence I call attention to it.

Yours in bonds,

JOHN B. ROUSH.

NEW HOPE, Va., Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:—I baptized one more at Roxbury and had to leave the place on account of persecution. There are some splendid saints down there, but a pity they are in a place where they cannot worship God without being abused in such a manner. Still it is the elder who has the whole charge laid to him of making division and the like. But as it happens F. C. Smith is not the one that made the division this time; it was there before he came to Virginia.

There are others down there who will obey the gospel sometime, if an elder can go there to work, but the chances are very poor in this part to do missionary work. The more work done here the worse Satan rages. I hope the brethren will remember us in this part of the vineyard that God will protect and give us sheaves for the fold of Christ.

The saints had a lovely tree for Christmas, and we certainly would have had a grand time if Satan had not hindered us. How true the saying Satan rages because he knows "his time is short."

THE WHITE-SEWELL DEBATE.—NO. 2.

DEAR READERS:—In this, my second affirmative, you will find a seeking for "old paths," by "contending for the faith once delivered to the saints." Elder Sewell's negative has but little in it that needs my attention. He claims no degree of inspiration; but, writes sportingly and sneers at the idea of being "born again"—a "new creature in Christ"—drinking at the heavenly fountain by "one Holy Spirit," the only way to refresh the mind and soul of man, to be in harmony with the saying of Christ in John 7:37-39. Hence, Elder Sewell's claim carries defeat to his cause.

I proved in my first, that laymen and ministers alike received the Spirit with "signs following," in the first age of Christianity. I cannot but believe that Peter spoke God's unalterable truth when he said:—

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

This statement, coupled with Paul's in 1 Corinthians 12, and Christ's, in Mark 16:15-18, of Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover, makes the promise an emphatic one to "all the world," to "every nation," to "every creature" who accepts the imperative command to believe and be baptized. The interpretation and truthfulness of the foregoing statements were verified in the preaching of the gospel and obedience to the same under Philip (Acts 8:6-17); Ananias, 9:17, 18; Paul, 19:1-6; and others. Peter speaking in Acts 2:16-41, of the inspirational influence that will come to man through the Spirit which God promised by Joel to "pour out," in the last days, upon all flesh that would believe, repent, and be baptized, says:—

Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy.

Now, I am prepared to believe all of this. The first statement is, "God is no respecter of persons." Second, "In every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Third, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Fourth, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Fifth, "And these signs shall follow them that believe." Proof: 1. Peter in Acts 2, presents the unchangeable God, Christ, and the gospel. 2. The people hear and believe the message. 3. They repent of their sins. 4. They are baptized for the remission of their sins by men who are called and sent of God to do that kind of work. 5. They receive the Holy Spirit in confirmation of the promise made by Christ in Mark 16. 6. That Holy Spirit is to inspire "old men" to "dream dreams;" "young men" to "see visions;" "sons" and "daughters" and "servants" and "handmaidens" to "prophesy." 7. That "the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even to as many as the Lord our God shall call." That it did do all this, and more too, in the days of primitive Christianity, the Scriptures bear me record, and so has Elder Sewell, too.

That beasts, angels, storms and tempests, and nonchurchmen, have at times been used as instruments in the hands of God to rebuke men and nations, I am prepared to admit. Such may still be used; but, all of that does not make God's promises of none effect to his believing children. Elder Sewell says: "After the New Testament was written there was no longer a need for them"—spiritual gifts. Assertion, no proof, you see! Where is it written, Elder Sewell, that when he (Christ) goes away, he will send you another comforter, even the New Testament, and that immediately afterwards God will proceed to take away from all baptized believers the Holy Spirit, with all of its inspirational influences and gifts? Chapter and verse, please? Christ says:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

Christ, you see, makes the promise of Spirit-baptism as general, universal, and positive as the baptism of water.

This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations.

Thus the Savior makes the miraculous Spirit-baptism as broad as the race, as universal as repentance and baptism for remission of sins. "This gospel," includes faith, repentance, baptism in water, and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. 1 Thess. 1:5, says:—

Our gospel came not unto you in word only but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance.

Thus, it came to Paul and the early saints, in "word," in "power," in the "Holy Ghost," in "much assurance." I dare not declare less and steer clear of,

But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.—Gal. 1:8.

But, says Elder Sewell:—

Our strongest argument against his proposition is that the apostle tells us these gifts shall pass away.

This, then, is his Gibraltar. He then proceeds to tell us when, and how, all these gifts, "pass away;"—"after the New Testament was written," says he. I suppose, then, nothing more can be received from God, Holy Spirit, or angel! All is silent! Holy Spirit influence with man, ceases forever!! Paul, in 1 Corinthians 13:8, 13, is made responsible for all this!

Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

Had Elder Sewell quoted the next four verses, instead of jumping to verse 13, his Gibraltar would have sunk at once. But to make his case stick, he leaves out the four verses, the very ones that Paul used to explain when and how the knowledge "in part," prophecies "in part," tongues "in part," etc., were to be enjoyed till at a time when God would give all of these things in their complete entirety. Hence, that which they were privileged to enjoy only "in part," would be enjoyed in a fullness "when that which is perfect is come." Now, and then, will abide faith, hope, and charity. Until that perfect state shall have come Paul admonishes us to Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophecy.—1 Cor. 14:1.

But, Elder Sewell makes Paul say, that, "after the New Testament was [is] written," these "gifts" all "pass away." Now, says Elder Sewell, "Whose word will you take, Paul's or Mr. White's." I ask, Whose interpretation of God's word will you take, Christ's and Paul's, or Elder Sewell's? Christ in Mark 16, says: "These signs shall follow them that believe." Who? "Every creature." Where? "In all the world." When? When they believe and are baptized. Paul in 1 Corinthians 12, tells how the "self-same Spirit," divideth "to every man severally as he [God] will." To one is given "faith," to another "wisdom," another "knowledge," another "tongues," and "healing," and "miracles," and "prophecies," etc. Then he proceeds to explain how the knowledge of God in tongues, prophecies, wisdom, etc., are known and enjoyed now, only "in part." The privilege of enjoying such "gifts" of the Holy Spirit "in part," is God's "excellent way," promised by Christ in Mark 16 to every baptized believer in all the world. The "more excellent way" will be when all of these gifts will be realized in their fullness—when we see "face to face," and "know as we are known." If the New Testament is that "more excellent way," then Paul, Christ, and many of the apostles died without seeing it. John says:—

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as he is.

No "seeing through a glass darkly" then; no "knowing 'in part'" and "prophecy 'in part'" then. "But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is 'in part,' shall be 'done away,'" says Paul. All of our conceptions and formulations of truth are only "in part," now. As yet, "we see through a glass darkly." It would be a great misfortune to discard the means whereby we can see and know God's glory "in part," though it is only "seen through a glass darkly," now. All progress towards perfection would be at an end. Paul says: "Now, I know [but] in part." Even when things were revealed to the prophets, a great part of them were kept under the veil—only seen and known "in part."

"Prophecies shall fail," which are only "in part"—when all things are fulfilled, and God is all in all. "Tongues shall cease" as they are now because they are only a gibberish "in part" of the one pure language spoken by the whole universe before the confounding of the language at the tower of Babel. "When that which is perfect is come" one language shall prevail among all the inhabitants of earth. All language now is only "in part" of what it was when given in its purity by God to our parents in Eden. When perfection of language shall have come, and that "in part" be done away, we will have realized the fulfillment of,

Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy. For then will I turn to the people a PURE LANGUAGE that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent.—Zeph. 3: 8, 9.

This opens up a glorious destiny for every child of God. "Knowledge 'in part'" vanishes as starlight is lost in that of the midday sun; so our present knowledge "in part," in the light of eternity.

God's mind has never been wholly revealed to man; but it has "in part." The little child for instance, knows "in part;" as its grows up it still adds to that which is "in part," until it gains a perfect knowledge of the study it is pursuing: thus it continued in the "excellent way" as laid down by its teacher, adding to that which it had "in part," step by step, "going on to perfection," as Paul would have it, till it had reached the "more excellent way"—seeing "face to face" with its teacher. We learn in Ephesian 4 that Christ "gave gifts unto men." Yes, "apostles," and "prophets," and "evangelists," and pastors, and teachers." The purpose is there named:—

For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body [church] of Christ.

How long to continue? is answered,

Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and to the knowledge [not "in part"] of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the FULLNESS OF CHRIST.

When once to the fullness of Christ, we shall have reached that "more excellent way." We have not attained to that condition yet; we still "see through a glass, darkly"—only seeing and knowing "in part." The church will not have reached that state of perfection until she has made herself ready by the adornments of "gifts" given her by Christ, to prepare herself for the great reception of her husband (Christ) at the "marriage supper of the Lamb." (Rev. 19:7-9.) What a glorious thought for every child of God! "Charity" will abide, both now and then.

But, until that time shall have come, Paul says:—

Follow after "charity" and desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy.

We have thus shown by the written testimony of Paul, Peter, John, etc., that "baptized believers in Christ" enjoyed these "gifts." Also, that the promise was perpetuated to "all that are afar off, even [to] as many as the Lord our God shall call."

I certify here, before God and man, in this written epistle, that these "gifts" are enjoyed by the members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I live, and am an eyewitness to the fact. It will not impeach Paul, Peter, and John's testimony, for infidels or Christians to disbelieve and deny their written testimony; neither will it impeach mine to be thus denied.

I. N. WHITE.

MIRACULOUS GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT.

REPLY TO I. N. WHITE.—NO. 2.

Dear Reader:—Jesus says:—

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth.—John 16: 13.

He does not say some truth, but all truth. Elder White claims this promise. Yet he says of me, he "writes sportingly and sneers at the idea of being 'born again'—a 'new creature in Christ'—drinking at the heavenly fountain by 'one Holy Spirit.'" Now if Elder White can show that there is one iota of truth in this statement, he may lay claims to the promise of Jesus quoted above. Reader, will you take up my former article, reread it, and see for yourself whether I wrote "sportingly and sneered at the idea of born again," etc. Did I say a word about these things? I not only did not write such things, but such thoughts were never at any time in my mind. A man inspired of God would not knowingly misrepresent his opponent, and he could not do it ignorantly, for the Spirit would guide him into all truth.

As Mr. White has misrepresented me, he does not "possess the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit as promised by Christ to his disciples."

Will the reader read carefully his first argument? I can't use space to copy it. He quotes Mark 16 with other passages and sums up in first, second, up to fifth and offers proof from 1 to 7. His 5 reads: "They received the Holy Spirit in confirmation of the promise made by Christ in Mark 16." Here is where his whole argument breaks down. There is no proof of this assertion. Let Elder White show it if he can. Christ says: "These signs shall follow them that believe," etc. But who is embraced in the class "them that believe." He says all baptized believers. I deny it and ask him to show where anyone in apostolic age ever received the miraculous gifts of the Spirit as the result of believing and being baptized. He points us to Acts 8: 6-17; 9: 17, 18; 19: 1-6. But did these parties receive these gifts as the result of believing and being baptized? No. But through the imposition of apostolic hands. Hence all this proves nothing for his proposition.

Now, if I can find a congregation of baptized believers in the New Testament that were "led by the Spirit," who were "spiritually-minded," who had "joy in the Holy Ghost," and yet did not possess these miraculous gifts promised by Christ to his disciples, will it not prove—first, that the promise was not to all who believe and are baptized—second, that such a congregation may exist to-day without them? Such was the congregation at Rome. They were baptized (6: 3, 4), led by the Spirit, etc. (8: 14; 14: 17), and yet Paul says to them:—

For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established.—Romans 1: 11.

Now, if all true baptized believers received these gifts, what does Paul mean by talking thus? If all had them, how was he going to impart them? Mr. White quotes me thus: "After the New Testament was written there was no longer a need for them"—spiritual gifts, and says: "Assertion, no proof, you see." Now will the reader please read my article on the design of these gifts and see if I offered any proof. He demands that I give chapter and verse where Christ promised to send "another comforter even the New Testament." The spirit Mr. White possesses has imparted to him a vast deal of "cheek" to enable him to reply to my strong, scriptural argument on the design of these spiritual gifts with such a challenge as that; but I suppose it was the best "his inspirational spirit" could produce. He quotes John 3: 5 and makes "born of the Spirit" equal to baptism of the Spirit. Does he mean to say that to be born of the Spirit is to receive the miraculous gifts about which he is writing? If not there is no point in his argument; so we assume that is his meaning. Christ makes entrance into the kingdom of God depend on being "born of the Spirit." Then according to Mr. White entering into the kingdom of God depends on receiving the miraculous gifts of the Spirit. Are persons added to the Reorganized Church when baptized or when they receive spiritual gifts? When the people of Samaria (Acts 8: 12) "were baptized both men and women," did they enter the kingdom of God? Or did they remain outside till Peter and John came down? Christ says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Then they were saved, but were not in the kingdom, eh?

He now takes up 1 Corinthians 13. Because I teach that these gifts ceased when the New Testament was written he represents me as teaching that "Holy Spirit influence with man ceases forever." An inspired man ought not to misrepresent his opponent. Does the Spirit exert its power over sinners through miraculous gifts? Elder White does not believe it does. He believes with me that the Spirit exerts its power over them through the gospel. It's mighty hard to make an inspired man understand!!

He thinks I left out 1 Corinthians 13: 9-12 "to make my case stick." I only left it out to save space. "Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."

Even the apostles, much less the church, did not receive all the will of God at once—only "in part" or part at a time. See in Acts 10, 11, 15 chapters how they learned the will of God concerning the Gentiles part at a time or "in part." But according to Mr. White we ought to continue receiving additional revelations now. Well, in the sixty-six years of their existence they ought to have received something. Will Elder White tell us one new truth—one revelation which they have received that is worth anything towards salvation? Not one will he give us. No reference will he make to this in his next.

"When I was a child, I thought as a child," etc.

A child, when a child is fed by another (God fed the church direct while in the infant state); when it grows to be a man he feeds himself (the church when grown feeds itself on the milk of the word). According to Mr. White the church is still in its childhood and will become a man at the second coming of Christ.

Reader, note carefully the following quotations:—

Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come then that which is in part shall be done away.—Paul.

"The knowledge 'in part' prophecies 'in part,' tongues 'in part,' etc., were to be enjoyed till at a time God would give all of these things in their complete entirety. Hence that which they were privileged to enjoy only 'in part,' would be enjoyed in a fullness 'when that which is perfect is come.'" —I. N. White. (Italics mine). Paul says, "shall be done away." White says, "would (will) be enjoyed in a fullness." Which of these men did the Spirit guide into all truth?

Again: "Now abideth faith, hope, charity."—Paul. "Now, and then will abide faith, hope, and charity.”

—I. N. White. (Rev. 22:18).

“Christ in Mark 16, says: ‘These signs shall follow them that believe.’ Who? ‘Every creature.’ Where? ‘In all the world.’ When? When they ‘believe and are baptized.’” Mr. White cannot show a single instance in the New Testament nor anywhere else where anyone ever received these spiritual gifts mentioned in Mark 16 upon believing and being baptized. Then has he not made a misapplication of Christ’s language? Turn to Mark 16 and at verse 14 see how he (Christ) “upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart because they believed not.” He upbraided them. “And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe,” etc. Them. To what class does this pronoun them refer? Verse 20: “And they [the apostles] went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them [the apostles] and confirming the word with signs following,”—following who? Them, the apostles. (Hebrews 2:4.) This shows to whom the promise was made,—to believing apostles.

After the above quotation Mr. White goes to 1 Corinthians 12 to find these signs. That they had spiritual gifts is fully granted, but how did they get them? Not by believing and being baptized, but by the laying on of the apostle’s hands. Then he says, “The privilege of enjoying such gifts of the Holy Spirit ‘in part’ is God’s ‘excellent way.’ . . . ‘The more excellent way’ will be when all these gifts will be realized in their fulness,” which time he believes will be at the second coming of Christ. In this he pointedly contradicts Mr. Kelley, one of his own inspired men, who in the Braden-Kelley Debate pages 273-4, argues that Paul had already shown the more excellent way. He translates it, “For I have shown into you a more excellent way: therefore covet earnestly the best gifts.” Now, can Mr. White expect us to believe the Spirit guides Latter Day Saints into all truth while they thus contradict each other? What he says about all languages being abolished at the coming of Christ and one language being restored to all nations is very nice and may come to pass, for aught I know; but what has that to do with the question at issue? What Paul said would cease was evidently the power to speak tongues or languages they had not studied. He had no reference to the languages then spoken ceasing to be spoken. He foretold that the power imparted by the Spirit which enabled them to speak in languages they had not learned would be taken away. Has it not come to pass? No man has the power to speak with tongues to-day as they then possessed it. Do the missionaries sent to the heathen nations by the Reorganized Church have to learn the languages of the people to whom they preach? This question he will never answer.

No matter about how much we may know when Christ comes. Paul is discussing knowledge imparted by the Spirit. I contend Paul says “It shall vanish away” and that it has come to pass. Mr. White says it has not—claims that he has this knowledge “by the same Spirit” now. Does not this discussion itself prove he is wrong? He claims the promise of Jesus: “I will give you a mouth and wisdom which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay or resist.” Reader, do you think he has that “mouth and wisdom”? that “knowledge by the same Spirit”? Take his illustration of a little child pursuing its studies; see how it condemns him: He is the child and he must “Still add (by the Spirit) to that which is in part (his knowledge of God’s will) until it (he) gains a perfect knowledge of the study it (he) is pursuing: thus it (he) continues in the excellent way (spiritual gifts) as laid down by its (his) teacher” (Spirit) adding to that which it (he) had in part . . . till it (he) had reached the more excellent way—seeing face to face with its (his) teacher (Holy Spirit).” So you see he expects to reach the more excellent way in this life; be equal in knowledge with the Holy Spirit. But in Paul’s illustration the church is the child and the Spirit continued to teach it “in part” till he, the Spirit, had revealed the complete will of God concerning redemption—not all God or the Spirit knew.

Now, read his argument on Ephesians 4: “When once to the fullness of Christ we shall have reached that ‘more excellent way.’” Right for once. But he says we have not attained to that condition yet, but thinks it will be after the marriage supper. (Rev. 19: 7-9.) Will there then be any “wind of doctrine by the slight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive”? Paul says this will be after we come to the “fullness of Christ.” (Eph. 4: 14.) Again he says, (verse 15,) After we have come to the fullness of Christ will “make increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.” Will the body make increase—add new members, after Christ comes again? Will it then need to edify (build up) itself in love? Thus you see the apostles, prophets, and other inspired men were given “for the edifying of the body of Christ” till the time come when the body could edify itself, which was when the revelation of the will of God was complete.

And how does he prove the second part of his proposition? By saying, “I certify,” etc. Now if Mr. White expects us to accept such testimony as that why did he not say that at first and let that end the matter? If they have actually got these gifts and can prove it, I would accept the whole proposition. Then why did you not make this assertion at first, and have no argument about it? They have been making this claim for over sixty years and yet have never wrought our well-authenticated miracle. And after sixty years of notorious failure come up and ask me and the public to accept such an assertion as that!! If he will give us the interpretation of John 14: 12 that I asked for in my former article, and I do not show that said interpretation, let it be what it may, contradicts his own inspired writers, I will acknowledge he has made one point.

Yours for the truth,

C. W. SEWELL.

POTTAWATTAMIE.

Convened at Crescent, November 21 and 22; J. E. Hansen superintendent, Ada Darrington secretary. Number of schools reporting 4. Number of schools represented 4. Number of delegates present 15. The following questions were discussed: Shall we have a full vote in our business meetings, and shall it be by voice or by uplifted hand? Should officers of the Sunday school be elected by informal vote or by written ballot? The older ones in the church that are not interested in Sunday school work, are they keeping in harmony with the gospel? Should teachers use their Quarterlies in class? An entertainment was given Saturday evening and Sunday school talk Sunday morning by Bro. Williams. Moved and carried that the superintendents of the different schools arrange program for coming convention. Adjourned to meet at time and place appointed by superintendent.

MOBILE.

Some time ago notice was given in your columns of a convention of the Mobile district Sunday school association to meet December 11, and doubtless some of your readers will look for a report of said convention. Our district secretary was disappointed at the eleventh hour in coming to the convention and conference; and he having in his possession all the reports and documents we could not hold a business session in his absence. However the class exercises advertised for the evening services were conducted very satisfactorily, and we hope with profit to all present. The following is a minute of the session; Total number of scholars 46; number of officers and teachers 7; visitors 33. Four classes were very efficiently conducted by Bro. G. W. Sherman, senior; Miss Hattie Robinson, intermediate; and Srs. McDowell and Miller, primary. The lesson review was conducted by the district superintendent, after which words of encouragement and instruction were offered by assistant superintendent and Bro. J. D. Erwin. Our district is composed of five schools with a membership of 157 scholars. During the two months of October and November there was a gain in membership of 50. There has been paid into the district treasury $2.31 by the schools. Sixty-six Quarterlies are in use now and the orders for the next quarter show considerable increase. While there still remains room for plenty of improvement, the schools are in fairly good working order and much good has already resulted from our labors in this department of the Master's work. May the God of heaven bless and prosper the nursery of his church, that it may produce many wise and efficient laborers for his vineyard.

Yours in bonds,

WM. LEWIS, Pres.

IN MEMORY.

Sister Sabrinia A. Cato, one of the staunch veterans of the church, passed away November 13, 1896, aged 77 years. At the time of her demise and for years prior she had made her home with her son, Elder J. N. Cato, of the Wakenda branch, Ray County, Missouri. Born and raised in Alabama, she had all the strength of Southern character and was hospitable to a fault. She was the mother of eleven children. Four boys and three girls still remain, besides a host of grand and great-grandchildren, to mourn the loss of "Grandma." She has been a member of the church for thirty years, and it was an unusual thing for her to be out of her seat at the hour of meeting in the little church close by where she has lived so long, always bearing a faithful testimony to the angel's message, and dying as she lived, bore upon her deathbed a strong testimony to the latter-day work, admonishing all her children to live faithful to the end. Her son, J. N. Cato, and wife are deserving of great credit for their untiring efforts in watching and caring for Grandma during the failing years of her life. Nothing was spared by the household either in kind words, actions, or means to make pleasant her pathway in her declining years, the reflection of which is comforting to the bereaved ones. Her husband, E. W. Cato, who did much in an early day to establish the gospel in the Central Missouri and Far West districts, had preceded her some years, to whom she was affectionately devoted, and longed to join him in the paradise of God. The sentiment of her last words as she passed away in a peaceful sleep, were,

"I would not live alway; I ask not to stay;
I long to seek Husband that's gone o'er the way.
I would not live alway; no, welcome the tomb;
I desire in all calmness to pierce the dark gloom.
There Savior and brethren and loved ones to greet,
Where the saints of all ages in harmony meet."

HALF FARE PERMITS—LOCAL MINISTERS.

1. One rule of the Western Passenger Association provides that pastors of local churches, having no other occupation than farming, are entitled to half fare permits. This rule may not apply to any other class of ministers, hence others should make necessary explanations, or apply under other rules. See application blanks, which may be obtained from local agents, or from B. D. Caldwell, Chairman, Chicago, Illinois.

2. All but General Conference appointees have been referred to general missionaries in charge for indorsement, for obvious reasons. This system is regular and a protection to the interests of all concerned. Applicants should fill out blanks and forward to the Chairman, who has a list of general missionaries in charge, and will correspond with them. However, where applicants are well known and manifestly within the rules, local indorsement may be sufficient and reference to the missionary in charge unnecessary. (See rules.)

3. As many wish information, it is necessary to state that rules governing issuance of permits are strict and will not be departed from by the Association; hence it is impossible for any but those who can comply with them to obtain permits. The blank forms contain detailed information for all classes of ministers.

4. Ministers in territory of the Central Passenger Committee—east of Chicago, St. Louis, Peoria, and west of Buffalo, Pittsburg and Wheeling—should apply to F. C. Donald, Commissioner, Monadnock Building, Chicago.

He was born at Bristol, England, and joined the church in his early days, having been a saint nearly fifty years. Went to Utah, and was sent back a missionary to his native land, where he met Elder Jason W. Briggs, who convinced him of the errors of the Brighamites, and baptized him into the Reorganized Church, September 13, 1864, and ordained him an elder, which priesthood he held at the time of his death. He leaves a wife and four children. We especially miss our brother in the branch, where he was ever ready to preach or testify to the latter-day gospel as he knew it: he was blessed with the "Gift of tongues," and of "interpretation." Funeral services at his home, conducted by Rev. Dr. Humpstone of the Baptist Church, sermon by Elder George Potts, president of the Brooklyn branch.

ROSS.—At Pleasant View, Kansas, Bro. Melvin Ross; born October 15, 1812; baptized in the year 1835, in Gibson County, Tennessee, by John A. McIntosh, and moved to Nauvoo in an early day, before the saints settled there; followed Brigham to Utah, and there the writer and Elder E. C. Briggs found him in Provo Valley, and Bro. Briggs soon convinced him of his error. He soon afterwards went to Montana, where he made considerable money, but died in poverty. He joined the Reorganization at Gallatin Valley, Montana, in the year 1867; was baptized by William Morgan. Funeral services at the house of John H. Thomas, his son-in-law. Another honest soldier is gone to join the ranks on the other side. He only survived his companion two months and eight days. The services were conducted by Stephen Maloney.

SHEPARD.—At her home near Wayne, West Virginia, Sister Hester Ann Shepard. She was born May 10, 1848; departed this life November 23, 1896. She united with the church January 18, 1885; was baptized by Bro. L. R. Devore. She lived a consistent Christian life. Being an invalid for a number of years, her life has been prolonged by the administration of the elders, to which she bore testimony until death. Funeral service conducted by Bro. G. H. Godby, to a large concourse of friends and relatives. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn their loss.

SMITH.—At his home in Centerville, West Virginia, December 2, 1896, Bro. Frank Smith. He was born May 6, 1856; obeyed the gospel April, 1882, under the hands of Bro. L. R. Devore. His faith in the latter-day work was unshaken to the last. He lived through much opposition, but never regretted the step he had taken. He leaves a young wife and seven children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by Rev. H. Smith of the Baptist Church. He was buried by the Lodge of I. O. O. F. of which he was an honored member.

MANNERING.—Sr. Philura Evans Mannering, daughter of James and Hulda Evans, was born March 15, 1846, in Hancock County, Illinois; died near Bentonville, Arkansas, at the home of her niece, Mrs. James Lionberger, October 21, 1896. She was married to James A. Mannering, February 11, 1864. At the age of fourteen she united with the Christian Church, and on October 17, 1886, she was baptized into the Reorganized Church by Elder I. N. White, from which faith she never wavered, and remained a faithful member until her death. Having been in delicate health for a number of months, she thought perhaps to travel a short distance might improve her condition, and accordingly she in company with her husband left Lowry City, their home, October 2, visiting relatives and old acquaintances in Southern Missouri and Arkansas. When she reached the home of her niece, Mrs. Lionberger, her health was fast failing and she was soon compelled to keep her bed. Her remains were brought to Lowry City, October 22, and were interred in the Park Grove cemetery, October 23. Husband, nine children, two brothers, and a large number of other relatives and friends mourn. The funeral sermon was preached at the North M. E. church, Lowry City, November 29, by Elder F. C. Keck, assisted by Elder I. N. White, from Revelation 14:13. This sister was so well and favorably known that comment on her life is unnecessary, and well may it be said of her, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, . . . that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." We feel assured that hers is a glorious rest.

Farewell, dear mother, while you wait
Our coming at the pearly gate,
O may, in life, our purpose be,
To live beyond with God and thee.
We know if our lives
Are as pure as thine own,
Angels will greet us
When we meet thee at home.

Says S. P. Colburn in "The New Old Philosophy of Life," in the January Arena "These great souls, called masters, who live upon these higher levels are not gods, without knowledge of the weaknesses, temptations, and suffering in human life, but verily and truly our elder brothers, whose feet have trodden the same weary way, whose hearts have rejoiced in the pleasure of living and again have throbb'd with anguish unspeakable, but by steadfast, unwavering purpose and unswerving, indomitable will they have transmuted the base metals of their nature, iron, lead, and brass, or the desires, passions, and emotions of the animal soul, into the priceless gems and pure gold of love, compassion, and power divine, and stand living realities of that old-time, much-ridiculed science, alchemy. And, thank God, what man has done, man can do."

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraits of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE RECORD OF 1896.

The following statistics are taken from figures recorded and published by the Chicago Tribune.

FIRE LOSSES.

The losses by fire in 1896 aggregate $111,856,067, as compared with $131,578,206 in 1895, a decrease of $19,822,139. Of these fires those with losses of $100,000 and upwards contributed $50,726,200 of the total, and smaller fires $61,029,867.

MARINE DISASTERS.

The following list of losses of life by wrecks upon the ocean and inland waters is approximately correct. The actual total must be somewhat larger, as in some cases no record of crew or passengers was kept. The list shows 3,840 lives lost upon the ocean and 72 upon inland waters, as compared with 4,102 lost upon the ocean and 148 upon inland waters in 1895 and 6,804 and 77 respectively in 1894. The total number of vessels lost is 161.

VARIOUS DISASTERS IN THE UNITED STATES.

The following table gives the loss of life resulting from various disasters in this country as reported to the Tribune by mail and telegraph:—

Drownings.....2,800	Mines..... 663
Fires.....1,395	Cyclones and
Explosions..... 595	Storms.....1,442
Falling build- ings, etc..... 544	Lightning 302

EPIDEMICS.

The principal epidemic of the year as usual has been cholera, its ravages having been most severe in Russia and Egypt. The disease, however, has been much less fatal, the total number of deaths in 1896 being but 22,676, as compared with 79,461 in 1895 and 171,910 in 1894.

BATTLES.

The loss of life by battles and massacres is smaller than it was in 1895. The total loss, roughly estimated, is 129,080, as compared with 157,986 in 1895 and 82,750 in 1894, and was distributed as follows:—

Armenia.....35,740	Cuba..... 21,008
China.....29,012	Africa..... 32,030
Gen. America.. 1,630	South America. 187
Turkey..... 8,954	Philippine Is... 1,519

RAILROAD DISASTERS.

The loss of life by railroad disasters of various kinds was 3,076 in 1896, as compared with 3,600 in 1895, 3,648 in 1894, 4,603 in 1893,

4,428 in 1892, 3,261 in 1891, and 3,420 in 1890. The number of seriously injured was 1,786, as compared with 2,610 in 1895, 2,397 in 1894, 4,864 in 1893, 3,383 in 1892, 2,707 in 1891, and 2,740 in 1890.

SUMMARY OF UNIVERSAL DISASTERS.

As accurately as can be estimated 3,840 lives have been lost upon the ocean, 72 upon inland waters, 3,076 by railroad accidents, 80,061 by disasters abroad, 7,741 by disasters at home, 22,676 by epidemics, and 129,080 by war and massacre, making a total loss of 246,546, as compared with 275,391 in 1895.

Included in the foregoing is the following: By earthquakes 53,700, by tidal waves 4,000.

SUICIDES AND MURDERS.

The total number of persons who have committed suicide in the United States during 1896, as reported by mail and telegraph to the Tribune is 6,520, as compared with 5,759 in 1895, 4,912 in 1894, 4,436 in 1893, 3,860 in 1892, 3,531 in 1891, and 2,040 in 1890. The total shows a steady increase in the unfortunate crime of self-murder. Of this number 5,078 were males and 1,442 females, the proportion of about 4 to 1 being steadily maintained year by year. Among professional men, physicians still lead the mournful list, 47 having taken their lives as compared with 59 in 1895 and 45 in 1894. The causes of suicide were as follows:—

Despondency...2,993	Ill health..... 286
Unknown.....2,042	Domestic infelicity..... 262
Insane..... 428	Disappointed
Liquor..... 224	love..... 180
Business losses.. 105

In these cases of self-murder 2,565 poisoned themselves, 2,466 shot themselves, 643 hanged themselves, 388 drowned themselves, 288 cut their throats, 64 threw themselves from roofs or windows, 44 threw themselves in front of railroad trains, 30 burned themselves, 19 stabbed themselves, 9 killed themselves with dynamite, 3 starved themselves, and 1 killed himself by freezing. The figures show that poison continues to be the favorite medium of getting out of the world.

LYNCHINGS.

Judge Lynch has executed 131 persons—130 men and one woman—during 1896 or 40 less than in 1895. As the record of mob-murders is now attracting the attention not only of moral workers but Legislatures, the following table of lynchings through a series of years, showing a steady decrease of late, will be of interest:—

1886.....138	1892.....235
1887.....122	1893.....200
1888.....142	1894.....190
1889.....176	1895.....171
1890.....127	1896.....131

The lynchings in the various States and Territories were distributed as follows:

Alabama.....15	Mississippi..... 6
Arkansas..... 4	Missouri..... 5

Colorado..... 4	New York..... 1
Florida.....10	North Carolina... 1
Georgia..... 9	South Carolina... 4
Illinois..... 1	Tennessee.....14
Indiana..... 1	Texas..... 7
Kentucky..... 9	West Virginia.... 1
Louisiana.....25	Indian Territory... 4
Maryland..... 2	Oklahoma..... 6
Minnesota..... 2

Of these lynchings 122 occurred in the South and 9 in the North. Of the total number 80 were negroes and 51 whites.

MURDERS.

The total number of murders committed in 1896 shows a small increase over 1895, being 10,652, as compared with 10,500 in 1895, 9,800 in 1894, 6,615 in 1893, 6,794 in 1892, 5,906 in 1891, and 4,290 in 1890. The Tribune, in view of the figures and the large increase of crime shown since 1890, still adheres to its statement of last year that there is something wrong with the administration of justice. The causes of these murders may be classified as follows:—

Quarrels.....5,530	Highw'men killed.100
Unknown.....3,261	Insanity.....253
Jealousy..... 401	Self-defense..... 48
Liquor..... 459	Strikes..... 10
By highwaymen. 200	Outrages..... 28
Infanticide..... 300	Riots..... 10
Resisting arrest.. 52

HANGINGS.

The number of legal executions in 1896 was 122, as compared with 132 in 1895, 132 in 1894, 126 in 1893, and 107 in 1892. The executions in the several States and Territories were as follows:—

Alabama..... 8	Nebraska..... 1
Arkansas.....17	New York..... 5
California..... 6	North Carolina... 1
Colorado..... 4	Ohio..... 1
Connecticut... 1	Oregon..... 2
Georgia..... 4	Pennsylvania..... 5

Massachusetts... 1	Washington..... 1
Minnesota..... 1	Dist. of Columbia.. 2
Mississippi..... 3	New Mexico..... 2
Missouri..... 5	Indian Territory... 8
Montana..... 2

There were 83 executed in the Southern and 39 in the Northern States. Of the total number 70 were whites, 48 negroes, and 4 Indians.

EMBEZZLEMENTS.

The record of embezzling, forgery, defaulting, and bank wrecking for 1896 shows a gratifying decrease as compared with 1895, the total being but $9,465,921, as compared with $10,423,205 in the former year, $25,234,112 in 1894, and $19,929,692 in 1893. The statement of rascality by months is as follows:—

January....$ 852,674	July.....$ 290,794
February... 832,162	August..... 328,113
March..... 931,052	September.. 1,291,229
April..... 661,883	October.... 576,948
May..... 760,224	November.. 1,839,572
June..... 412,373	December... 688,897

Being an average of about $788,826 per month.

Out of 340 cases of embezzling reported fourteen persons stole over $50,000 each, twenty over $100,000 each, one over $500,000, and one over $1,000,000.

The losses are distributed as follows: Stolen by city and county officials, $1,393,975; from banks, $3,996,570; by agents, $1,045,692; forgeries, $341,500; from loan associations, $479,587; by postmasters, $32,815; miscellaneous stealings, $2,175,782.

The summary of defalcations by years, from 1878 to 1896, is as follows:—

1878.....$ 2,784,000	1888..... $ 2,240,000
1879..... 2,754,000	1889..... 8,600,000
1880-81.... 4,888,000	1890..... 8,622,056
1882..... 2,900,000	1891..... 10,720,249
1883..... 2,350,000	1892..... 8,837,547
1884..... 22,154,000	1893..... 19,029,602
1885..... 3,475,000	1894..... 25,234,112
1886..... 3,780,000	1895..... 10,423,205
1887..... 4,550,000	1896..... 9,465,921

Now and then a person is acquitted of the charge months after the arrest, and to keep track of such an acquittal is difficult. These acquittals are so rare, however, that the figures are not materially affected.

CHARITIES.

The black record of nine millions and more embezzled in 1896, as shown elsewhere is magnificently offset by the generous sums contributed by will or gift to churches, colleges, charities, museums, art galleries, libraries, etc. amounting to $33,670,129, as compared with $28,943,549 in 1895, and $19,967,116 in 1894. In the preparation of these statistics no attention has been paid to small donations, since to collect them all would be a manifest impossibility. Of the total amount stated above there has been given to colleges the immense sum of $16,814,256; to charities, $10,854,731; to churches, $2,135,142; to museums and galleries, $2,333,500; to libraries, $1,452,000; and to miscellaneous objects, $80,500.

AN INQUIRY.

DID Joseph Smith intend to remove with the saints to the Rocky Mountains, and did he predict that the saints would so remove in righteousness by choice, or command of God?

Our co-religionists of the Utah Church have persistently presented the idea before their people, and as a consequence against us, that the removal of the church from Illinois to the Rocky Mountains was a measure contemplated by the seer to be carried into effect by the saints, and prophesied of the event as one to occur to their advantage.

There is nothing in the tone of public expression, found in the Times and Seasons, the church organ of the time, to justify this teaching. On the contrary, that journal is replete with articles and declarations of public men and leaders of the people, that indicate that occupation of the city of Nauvoo and the county of Hancock for an indefinite and unlimited period was contemplated.

The Times and Seasons for May 1, 1844, has the name of Joseph Smith at the head of its editorial columns as a candidate for President of the United States; presumably by his consent. This is followed in the issue for May 15, by an article from him, giving his views on the Government and policy of the United States. In this same issue William Smith published a card declining renomination to the Illinois Legislature, and suggesting his brother Hyrum as a suitable person to be chosen for the office to succeed him. In the rejoinder of the Prophet Joseph Smith to Henry Clay, published June 1, 1844, pages 543-548, Times and Seasons, occurs this passage, most remarkable, if at the time when it was written, May 13, and the time it was published, June

1, 1844, twenty-six days before his death, the prophet had contemplated and completed directions for a removal of the saints from Nauvoo, "... Henry Clay; the wise Kentucky lawyer, advises the Latter Day Saints to go to Oregon to obtain justice and set up a government of their own; O, ye crowned heads among all nations, is not Mr. Clay a wise man, and very patriotic! Why, Great God! To transport 200,000 people through a vast prairie; over the Rocky Mountains, to Oregon, a distance of nearly 2,000 miles, would cost more than four millions! Or, should they go by Cape Horn, in ships to California, the cost would be twenty millions! And all this to save the United States from inheriting the disgrace of Missouri, for murdering and robbing the saints with impunity."

This does not sound like the language of a man who had a fixed idea of making, or attempting to make that very same expensive transportation.

Anson Call, as stated in the History of Northern Utah and Southern Idaho, states that on July 14, 1843, Joseph Smith, "prophesied that the Saints would yet go to the Rocky Mountains."

Following in the vein of this statement Mr. Call states that the Prophet said that some of those who heard him would do a great work in that land; and further, ostensibly giving the words, of the Prophets, "O the beauty of those snow capped mountains. The cool refreshing streams that are running down through those mountain gorges." . . . "Oh the scenes this people will pass through! The dead that will lie between here and there." "Oh the apostasy that will take place before my brethren reach that land." . . . "The priesthood shall prevail over all its enemies, triumph over the devil and be established upon the earth never more to be thrown down."—Tullidge's History of Utah, Vol. 2, pp. 271-272.

Elder B. H. Roberts, in his pamphlet, "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," in a footnote on page 102, states:—

*Under date of August 6, 1842, Joseph writes in his history: "I prophesied that the saints would continue to suffer much affliction, and would be driven to the Rocky Mountains, many would apostatize, many would be put to death by our persecutors, or lose their lives in consequence of exposure or disease, and some of you will go and assist in making settlements and build cities, and see them become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains.

In Mr. Call's statement he says that the Prophet "extending the idea to all those he had spoken of" and you, shall perform as great a work as has been done by man, so that the nations of the earth shall be astonished and many of them will be gathered in that land and assist in building cities and temples, and Israel shall be made to rejoice."

Both Mr. Call and Mr. Roberts are elders in the Utah Church, and presumably authorized alike to represent the theories of that people. One locates the prophecy as having been delivered August 6, 1842, and Mr. Roberts puts the date in italics to emphasize it, the other puts the date July 14, 1843. Mr. Roberts assumes to quote from the History of Joseph Smith, but fails to cite volume and page by reference to which his statement can be verified.

It is long after both of these dates that the Prophet makes reference to the cruelty of the proposal to remove to the Rocky Mountains. Is it consistent to believe that the Prophet would so write if the very movement suggested to him by Mr. Clay was a fixed determination in his mind, and had been certified to him by the spirit of prophecy? We hardly think so.

Mr. Call and Mr. Roberts evidently have the same supposed prophecy in mind, as a comparison of the terms will show. We have not seen the statement in the "History of Joseph," quoted by Mr. Roberts. Mr. Call gives his version from his memory.

June 1, 1844, the Times and Seasons hoisted the names of Joseph Smith for President and Sidney Rigdon for Vice President of the United States at the head of its columns. This was twenty-six days before the date of the murder at Carthage. Is it reasonable to suppose that at that time a removal from Illinois was contemplated, and a departure to and settlement in a far-off wilderness decided upon? Surely no!

Elders P. P. Pratt, Willard Richards, John Taylor, and W. W. Phelps issued an address "To the Saints Abroad," dated at Nauvoo, July 15, 1844, more than a half month after the murder, from which we quote the following:—

Yea, let us haste to build the temple of our God, and to GATHER together thereunto our silver and our gold with us, unto the name of the Lord; and then we may expect that he will teach us of his ways and we will walk in his paths.

This does not have a word that shows the spirit of a departure from the city, or place of the temple.

Again; from the same epistle:—

Let the saints abroad, and others who feel for our calamities and wish to sustain us, come on with their money and means without delay, and purchase lots and farms, and build buildings, and employ hands, as well as to pay tithing into the Temple, and their donations to the poor.

An epistle was issued from Nauvoo, August 15, 1844, nearly two months after the Prophet's death, signed by Brigham Young, President of the Twelve. It was published in Times and Seasons for August 15, 1844, and on pages 617-620. From it we quote:—

On the subject of gathering let it be distinctly understood that the City of Nauvoo and the Temple of our Lord are to continue to be built up according to the pattern which has been commenced, and which has progressed with such rapidity thus far. . . . The United States and adjoining provinces will be immediately organized by the Twelve into proper districts, in a similar manner as they have already done in England and Scotland, and high priests will be appointed over each district, to preside over the same, and to call quarterly conferences for the regulation and representation of the branches included in the same, and for the furtherance of the gospel; and also to take measures for a yearly representation in a yearly conference. . . . The gospel in its fulness and purity must now roll forth through every neighborhood of this widespread country, and to all the world; and now millions will awake to its truths and obey its precepts; and the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

In an article by P. P. Pratt, published in the Times and Seasons, for September 2, 1844, page 630, writing in regard to Nauvoo, and bewailing the failure of many to come to the place and expend their means he says:—

Every foot of vacant land would have been cultivated like Eden, and a hundred thousand outlaws, murderers, mobbers and traitors would have found it impossible to have disturbed our peace, or broke up the government of the country; and those who were opposed to peace, order and civilization, would have had their money for their lands, and would long since have been traveling to Texas, California, Oregon, or the lower regions of his Satanic majesty's dominions.

If Joseph Smith had prophesied so long before this that the saints would go to those same regions, minus the Devil's domains, why was Elder Parley Pratt so evidently, ferociously anxious that the mobbers, murderers, etc., should go there before them? Curious is it not?

September 2, 1844, Brigham Young, as President of the Twelve, issued the following:—

The Twelve would invite the brethren abroad, in obedience to the commandments of the Lord, to gather to Nauvoo, with their means to help build up the city, and complete the Temple which is now going forward faster than it has at any time since it commenced. Beware of the speculations about the prophet! Believe no tales on the subject: Time will tell who are the friends of Joseph Smith, who laid down his life for his brethren. We have no new commandments, but beseech the brethren to honor and obey the old ones.

To enforce the idea of gathering to Nauvoo, the epistle closed in italics thus:—

For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together. More in the next. —Times and Seasons, Vol. 5, No. 16, page 638.

There is not a hint in this of a contemplated exodus, or known command or prophecy regarding a removal from Nauvoo, but quite to the contrary a continued residence of the people there permanently is assured.

In the issue of the same journal, Times and Seasons, for October 1, 1844, is an epistle of the Twelve bearing this indorsement, "Done in Council at Nauvoo, this first day of October, A. D. 1844."

In this epistle in pursuance of a promise made in their last, the council proceeded to give further information relative to the welfare of the church both temporally and spiritually; the building up of Nauvoo; the gathering of the saints; the building of the temple; the establishment of manufacturing, and various branches of industry; the support of the poor, and the preserving of peace, good order, union, love and truth; to the suppression of vice, and every kind of disorder, evil and immorality.

Writing of the gathering the epistle says:—

Not only must farms be cultivated, houses built, and mills to grind the corn, but there must be something produced by industry, to send off to market in exchange for cash, and for such other articles as we need. . . . In order more effectually to do this, we must turn our attention to the erection of workshops for the manufacture of every useful article; and wares thus manufactured must find a market, not in Nauvoo alone but in all the wide country, and in towns and cities abroad.

The fact is, we have a country abundantly supplied with natural resources, and calculated for the production of wool, flax, hemp, cotton, and many other articles, and we have water power to any amount; and after all our troubles, a prospect of peace and protection; in short everything for the encouragement of capitalists and workmen. Come on then, all ye ends of the earth, to hold together, and with a long, strong, steady and united exertion, let us build up a stronghold of industry and wealth, which will stand firm and unshaken amid the wreck of empires and the crash of thrones.

This was by the whole council. Did they then know of the contemplated hegira to the Rocky Mountains? Is the language of that epistle the language of men already advised by the Prophet in person, and named by the spirit of prophecy that they might, would, or must go out into the wilderness to seek a realm in which "to build cities and become a mighty people?" Let those who have been bewildered by the assumption that the Prophet so prophesied, consider it, and answer to their own thoughts.

On Tuesday, October 8, 1844, during the fall conference of that year, eighty-three men were chosen, for the purpose as stated by Brigham Young,

To go abroad in all the congregational districts of the United States to preside over the branches of the church.

David Evans leads the list, and Daniel Stanton closes it.

In explaining the object had in view in the appointing of these men, Brigham Young stated:—

That it was not the design to go and tarry six months and then return; but to go and settle down, where they can take their families and tarry until the Temple is built, and then come and get their endowments and return to their families and build up a stake as large as this. [Nauvoo.—Editor.]

This was evidently in accord with the teaching of Joseph and Hyrum before their death, and so understood by the Quorum of Twelve. But, it certainly has nothing in it looking to the exodus to the Rocky Mountains.

A number of corroborative evidences similar to those already presented might be given; but we shall be content to offer the following from one of Pres. Brigham Young's discourses, preached February 17, 1856, and published in Journal of Discourses, vol. 3, p. 210.

I saw that this people would have to flee into the mountains, and into a climate and country that the Gentiles would not desire. If we are not in such a place, I do not know where we will find one more undesirable than this. Do the saints delight in this locality? No, it is repugnant to their feelings, if they could have their choice. Did I come here by choice, or was it because I had to come?

Orson Pratt, as reported in the Deseret News, of June 19, 1861, said:—

I think that there is no people upon the face of the earth need to envy the Latter Day Saints, so far as their temporal prospects are concerned; in other respects, they have great cause to envy them. There is not much chance for the Latter Day Saints to grow rich in this Territory; I mean according to the meaning of the term in the world. There is and ever will be too much to be done in various kinds of labor, for the building up of the kingdom of God. Your land, of course, yields abundantly where it is well cultivated, but it requires a great deal of toil to accomplish it, about three or four times the labor is required of the farmers and agriculturists, than is required in other countries. Why, it takes a man almost one half of his time to get his fuel from the kanyons, about one quarter to irrigate the soil, and of course the rest is well occupied with the other duties of life. This being the case, then there is not much prospect of soon becoming rich.—Herald, Oct. 1, 1863, page 101.

If Joseph Smith did prophesy that any portion of the then existing body of believers would ever leave the "beautiful resting place," the "stake of Zion that was never to be moved out of its place," and the "temple of our God," as president B. Young called the temple at Nauvoo in some of the extracts heretofore quoted in this article, it must have been in the same bitterness of soul that moved Jeremiah to make his lamentations, the Prophet Isaiah to cry "Woe to Ariel," and Jesus, the Master, to weep over the hardness of heart of the Jewish people, and for the same cause.

From what transpired after the date of the epistle of October, 1844, from which we have quoted in this article; during the occupancy of Nauvoo, after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith; and after the exodus, and the rules of doctrine and practice instituted by President Young obtained and were enforced in Utah, it is not difficult to see that the desire for some sort of supposed divine sanction would have been had; hence the construction put upon the alleged prophecy of Joseph Smith regarding the Rocky Mountains by the Utah leaders and people under them. But, to those who were not compromised by the loose rules of morality that seemed to obtain, and who kept their original faith in the doctrines of the church as taught by Joseph and Hyrum and the elders in their day, the prophecy, if it was ever uttered as alleged, while it goes to the credit of the prophet as to his prophetic character, is susceptible of a rendition and application very much to the discredit of the people who fulfilled it by being driven to the Rocky Mountains, rather than by having gone there by choice, or by command of God.

If Mr. Anson Call's statement regarding what the Prophet said about the apostasy, "O the apostasy," and that he and others should go there to the mountains, is correct, then the apostasy is to be traced and accounted for; which is not hard to do.

Hon. Judge Caton, of Illinois, who was in the Legislature of that State at the time J. B. Backenstos was the representative from Hancock County, which we believe to have been the term succeeding that of William Smith, the brother of the Prophet, about 1845, made the statement in a meeting in Farwell hall, Chicago, in February, 1882, that he supposed himself to be somewhat in fault, before the fact, as he himself suggested to Mr. Backenstos, and one or two others of the church representative men, that he believed that the best and safest way of settling the then existing controversy between the citizens and the church, would be their voluntary removal from the State, and he named Oregon or California, where they could found a State and make laws for themselves, and where they could remain in peace.

At that time it was supposed that some portion of the northwest was open to settlement, by adventurous spirits, who might "fillibuster" a government, and obtain a territory by virtue of the "squatter sovereignty" doctrine; hence the suggestion of Hon. Caton seems to have had virtue.

Whether Pres. Young ever heard of this suggestion of the Hon. Caton through Representative Backenstos, or whether the movement was the result of his own thought and design, it is certain that the idea of removal began to take shape in Nauvoo in 1845, and was finally enforced by agreement amounting to an expulsion.

We have no desire to detract from the credit due to Pres. B. Young for the manner the exodus was conducted, or to abate from the praise due to the people who followed the lead across the western wilds, or to make light of the sufferings endured by thousands who made the effort to go, and either succeeded, or failed and died on the way; but we do decidedly object to the idea of taking shelter under a supposed, mythical, or even real prophecy uttered by the Seer, to cover a period of misrule and wrongdoing, as we believe has been done. Zion was "moved out of her place;" and if the prophet predicted it, give him the credit for prophesying correctly; but, if the cause for the fulfillment of the prophecy was the misdoing of the people fulfilling it, let the blame fall where it belongs and let the innocent go free. We do not believe that the Prophet Joseph Smith contemplated or designed the removal to the Rocky Mountains, or that he prophesied of such removal in the sense of it being ordered, or commanded of God, from the evidences before us. And to what we have written here we add the letter written by Joseph to his wife, June 23, 1844, when writing from "safety" he said to her.

Do not despair—if God ever opens a door that is possible for me I will see you again. I do not know where I shall go, or what I shall do, but shall if possible endeavor to get to the city of Washington. . . . If you conclude to go Kirtland, Cincinnati, or any other place, I wish you would contrive to inform this evening.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. T. GRIFFITHS reports from his field improving opportunities for gospel work, December 2, 1896. He wrote:—

I have baptized about thirty since April; have organized two new branches, and have one to organized at Fayette City, Pennsylvania, soon.

He also states that the elders in his mission, Brn. M. T. Short, R. Etzenhouser, James Moler, D. L. Shinn, G.

H. Godby, J. L. Goodrich, L. R. Devore, F. Ebeling, and Smith are all doing well in their fields. Brn. Etzenhouser and Griffiths had baptized fifty-three, together.

We are permitted to use the following extract from a letter written by Sr. J. A. Hamilton, of New Washington, Ohio, dated December 22, to a sister in Omaha:—

I write you the first line I have penned with my own hand, since I have been healed that my loved brothers and sisters there may rejoice. I can't write full details, am too weak. One day I discovered I was dying, vision failing; after my long fight for life death had come, and I was not sorry—I was glad to think of going. But no more medicine would I take. I called on the Lord for the promise he made me, if I had been faithful to my covenant, that no weapon formed against me should prosper. Peace took possession of me. I sent for Elder G. T. Griffiths, and battled for breath till he came. After the first administration my lungs were freed. Never troubling me after, the third day the disease left my body in a great heat and sweat that encircled my body, and sight returned. Now, saints, rejoice in the "sure promises of the Lord."

Bro. Paul Tremblay, Owyhee, Oregon, December 30:—

I have had a surprise and a pleasure that I am not likely to forget as long as I live. The first thing I knew Bro. Elder Levi Wilson was at my door, it was a great surprise, having lost all hope of seeing any Latter Day Saint on this side of the grave. Therefore be it known to all the elders of the Reorganized Church that I live on the Owyhee River and near Owyhee Post Office, four miles from Riverside Ferry, or eight miles from Nyss, a station on the Oregon Short Line. I shall welcome any elder with pleasure.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We commend the reading of Sr. H. B. Torrance's views on economy and charity. The sister unconsciously emphasizes our editorial in which all were advised to live within their means.

The report of the College dedication has crowded out a number of items which must be held over till next week.

Bro. H. N. Hansen, of the Rocky Mountain mission, was obliged to return to his home, Weston, Iowa, because of the illness of his son, who was accidentally injured, but has recovered.

Brn. C. Scott, F. A. Smith, and F. M. Weld departed for their various fields of labor, of late.

Bro. F. E. Cohrt, located at Smith-land, Iowa, relates his experiences in trying to preach the word, in which he found friends and opening avenues for usefulness on every hand. He has baptized some and has received substantial evidences of interest in the truth on the part of the people. Traveling and district ministers are requested to help the cause in that neighborhood.

The presses are now running on a second edition of five hundred of the first volume of the Church History. It is hoped that sales will justify an early publication of the second volume.

GRACELAND COLLEGE DEDICATION.

JANUARY 1, 1897.

The committee in charge of the dedication exercises of Graceland College presents herewith a report of the speeches delivered on that occasion, together with a list of subscriptions to the College fund, from friends at home and abroad, in answer to the late general call for contributions.

The dedicatory address by President Joseph Smith was replete with liberal and advanced ideas of education and the possibilities of good to mankind from educational institutions. We did not get the address complete but substantially he spoke as follows:—

The worst, most vigorous, and dangerous enemies that civilization, political and Christian have had to contend against have been ignorance and superstition. There has been no nation of people, and no period of time, since man began the change from the ways of barbarism to the ways of civilization, when it has not been necessary to urge the contest against these untiring, mischievous, and dangerous elements.

When the social compact was formed, no matter when nor how far back in time that was, it was based upon the principle that man surrendered the freedom and isolation consequent to the exercise and enjoyment of his natural rights, for the pleasures, immunities, and benefits to result from existence under and adherence to the social compact. This social compact was the result of divine intention to establish among mankind a condition of life in which the strong and the weak, the wise and the foolish, the able and the feeble should exist in mutual interdependence together, thus securing protection and safety for the weaker against the encroachments of the stronger, the peace-loving against the vicious and the unruly.

One of the most effective measures employed by man in the civilized condition to secure the permanency of the compact and to insure the greatest benefits to be derived from it, has been the education of the people.

It was early found that as ignorance and superstition were the handmaidens of tyranny and oppression to escape the misery and ruin these were sure to inflict upon the race, the best and surest means was to educate men, creating in them by an increase of knowledge, love for what is good for all, and a consequent hatred of what was injurious to any.

The danger to society now is the same that it has always been, attack and disruption of its safeguards from ignorant and vicious elements found in it. And, while it may be conceded that the educated man, if vicious and wicked, is capable of doing more injury to his fellows and to society than the ignorant man of equal powers aside from education, it is true that the direct tendency of education is to eliminate the evil and vicious qualities from the human, and furnish him with a power to control the elements of mischief to society in himself, and enable him to restrain others, thus giving guarantee to society for good behavior.

The safety of the state rests on the better elements in it, rather than on the numbers of its population, upon those who are capable of understanding and appreciating the nature of the reasons for the state and the benefits accruing from it. Take these out of society and the state is not possible, relapse into the misrule of the ignorant and the vicious, tyranny and oppression, anarchy and ruin must inevitably ensue. The safety and perpetuity of the state lies in educating its human constituents.

In all that makes for true manhood the educated man is the peer of the uneducated. For all the purposes of the State the educated man is the safer and better man for society to trust, compared with the uneducated. From this consideration has sprung the public school system, through which the state makes it possible for the children of the poor man to take up the burdens of life with equal chances with the children of the rich man. And as education does not so much mean the accumulation of knowledge as it does the training and perfecting in the man the faculty, power, or ability for the acquirement of knowledge, the increasing and polishing of the quality of wisdom, the right use of knowledge, so the object and purpose of all institutions of learning from the common school authorized and supported by the state in which all are made to bear an equal portion of the lawful burden, to the high school and the university founded and maintained by private endowment and enterprise in which the coming man or woman may find opportunity and place for the development and cultivation of any special faculty inherent, or acquired, which may fit and qualify them for their chosen, or imposed part in the great drama of human life in the world of busy men. It is the province of the teacher, the school, the college to take these several integral portions of the state, and by careful training and culture, restore them finally to the service of the state, able and ready for the duties and labors of society for which they are fitted and that society and the state may demand.

There has been from time immemorial, at least from the time the social compact began the education of the people as a measure of prudence for its own safety, in some portions of the social fabric strong prejudice against learning, and as a consequence against educational processes and institutions of learning. Whence this prejudice it is hard to say, unless it can be traced to the suspicion to which the ignorant man is always susceptible, that the learned man feels himself to be a superior being to his unlearned neighbor. This suspicion is not founded in fact as it is easily demonstrated that the educated are far more tolerant and complacent to their fellows than the ignorant. The educated man having in his researches after knowledge become conscious how small he is as compared with the universe, is humbled, and can find nothing within himself to boast over his fellows; the fact that knowing so much he knows so little makes him tolerant.

One of the fundamental principles upon which the faith of the people whom I represent here, to-day, and with whom Graceland as an institution of learning originated, is that every man, of every name, nation, or race must answer to God in the final day of accounting, for what he is on that day when the judgment sits; not for what others his predecessors have been, nor yet for what himself may have been at some time prior to that day. As a consequence, they believe that whatever may tend to a development of the highest and noblest in man, inherent, or to be acquired is legitimate. That the sphere in which this development must take place is here among men on the earth. That having been endowed with faculties for useful and beneficent lives, it is a duty owed to God by reason of creation to learn how best to serve his fellow men, and answer to God for his endowments; holding it to be true that he loves God best who best exhibits his love to his fellow man. It is for this reason that the words "non sectarian," are found inscribed on the stone laid at the angle of the door on the north of the building, with ceremony and in the presence of the people a year ago. Man answers to God for his religion, not to his fellow man. Hence, all must be left free to the influences of moral suasion for the implanting and fostering of religious faith and dogma, and institutions of learning must be kept free from all coercive influences by which man may seek to exercise undue bias and restraint over the faiths of others. The intention had in the founding of Graceland was to establish at Lamoni an institution that should be free to all irrespective of faith, or creed. An institution in which an education higher than is possible in the common schools might be obtained; one in which every student should be left free to fit himself for the struggle of human existence among men, without the interference of the ecclesiastical. And, however tenacious we may as a people be concerning our beliefs, we desire that our neighbors, and friends who may think differently than we do, may feel that in Graceland they and their children may find a home of friendliness and peace for educational purposes alone, and not an instrument for the spread of dogma, or the exercise of priestly control and domination.

It may have been doubted whether such a thing as an institution like the one suggested by the inscription on that corner stone, founded and to be sustained very largely by a religious body, can be successfully maintained it presents such an anomaly; the only one in the country. It remains for time to determine whether the promise made shall be kept; but so far the men having it in charge have by their action shown an honest intention to make it what the promise has warranted the people to expect.

What the community, town, county, and state, need is that the boys and girls fast coming upon the stage of action to take the places of men who like myself have grown gray and old in the warfare, shall be men and women in the largest sense, filled with a proper sense of what manhood and womanhood mean to good men and to God, and fitted to fill the places to which inclination, duty, or the force of circumstances may assign them.

Our boys and girls, our young men and maidens should be taught, and be willing to learn that their first duty is to be men, manly, noble men; and women, well poised, womanly, noble women, beautiful in all those qualities which make womankind lovely, and worthy the high regard in which men may properly hold women. To do this an education is necessary, and one of the objects had in view by those who gave the land on which the college is built, those by whom the means so far contributed to its erection has been given; and those who have been appointed to supervise the work, the accomplishment of which we are celebrating to-day, has been to aid in such way as would make it practicable for the young of Lamoni and the county of Decatur to secure such education in an institution almost at their very doors, rather than abroad, and that in a locality remote from the bustle and rush of the busy marts of trade, in institutions round which cluster so much of the fashionable and false, in which merit fails before the claims of wealth and social standing, and assurance passes for worth. Graceland stands remote from such influences; and yet, amid conditions, and among a people whose faces have always been set against the sale and use of intoxicants, because of the evil and ruin that result from it in a direct way and also because of the follies, evil habits, degradation and ruin that follow in its train in all communities where it is allowed place and power; here in our midst, and on our municipal borders lurks this evil curse, seeking opportunity to decoy and lead our young men astray. We have no refuge but in open warfare against this insidious foe of progress and improvement, in social and moral worth before God and men; and we sincerely hope that Graceland may be a strong and effectual aid in influencing our young men to become sober and valuable citizens of the State.

Early in the rise and progress of the people so largely represented here to-day, the need for educational institutions was seen and acknowledged. Efforts were made to supply the need, and within four years from the day when a little handful of men were organized into a band of believers called the church, a school was established. Men recognized that they were unlearned; but they were not proud of their ignorance, neither were they ashamed to use an opportunity to remedy their deficiency. They believed God had called them, and would hold them accountable for the use they made of both time and talent, so men long past school age set about their studies, and soon placed themselves alongside of the scholars of their time.

The desire and effort to secure learning were continued with them in their settlement in Missouri, and after the expulsion from that State and the settlement in Illinois, one of their first measures was to secure by public effort a charter from the legislature for a university, at Nauvoo, for which a faculty excellently qualified to advance the interests of the cause of education of the people was chosen, and the school was at once established and well patronized.

It may be news to some if not to all present to be told that among ourselves when the project of establishing a college to be conducted under the auspices and direction of the church was broached, the objection was urged that it was for the purpose of educating men for the ministry, and as we taught that to God himself belonged the prerogative to qualify and call the men by whom he proposes to declare repentance and redemption to man; hence, any attempt to forestall the divine action by educating men to be called is to assume indirectly to counsel the Lord. This objection exists with some still; but I hope, if there is anyone here who may believe that the founding of Graceland College was for the purpose of educating men for the ministerial field, with intent to instruct or dictate to God in any sense, as to whom he should call and send into the harvest field, I would advise him to go into his closet and there seek for a broader comprehension of what the conception of the work may have been. We concede that God alone can call and qualify the ministers by whom he will essay to save the world, for one God called, God sent laborer is more efficient in publishing salvation than any number fitted, qualified, and chosen by men alone can ever be. And while we concede this and are waiting for the Master to carry on his work in his own way, it is our duty and should be our pleasure to do all we can to fit and qualify our children to fill their appointed places in life's contest; then if God pleases to choose a polished shaft from those who may have been educated in Graceland, we shall feel thankful; and if not, and he sends by the hands of others, we shall give him praise for his wisdom and his mercy unto the world.

If asked then, Is the College at Lamoni founded by the church for the purpose of educating men for its denominational ministry? I answer, No. Nor is it to be used as a means of teaching the denominational tenets of the church; the teaching of dogma and church practice to be left to the elders of the church in their calling and the church in its ecclesiastical character as a work specifically belonging there. Speaking for myself, and I believe correctly representing those associated with me as the Board of Trustees in erecting the building; and Board of Directors in carrying the school on, I feel safe in assuring the people that the character of the institution shall be in keeping with the pledge made to the public in the inscription on the stone at the door that it shall be non-sectarian.

It is to our interests that men shall be taught the value of political liberty, that love of country and devotion to republican political institutions as demonstrated in the establishment and perpetuation of the government of the United States of which we all are so justly proud. To fully appreciate and value human political liberty, men must by study become acquainted with the history of the nation; learn what the principles upon which the government is based are; then having the inherent love of place of birth and home active in heart and brain, men become citizens of worth to the State in proportion to the effort they have made to perform the duties of citizenship. The danger to the State being greater from the uneducated within its bounds, let us then see to it that our own hamlet shall do what it can to make of our rising youth men upon whom the burdens of state may safely rest.

Hon. H. M. Towner, Judge of the Third Judicial District of Iowa, was introduced and delivered a very able and instructive address. Provision for reporting the speakers verbatim had been overlooked, and we are compelled to give the address in a greatly abridged form, which we very much regret:—

ADDRESS.

Judge Towner referred to the systems of education prevalent in the old world, where the few were provided with magnificent universities, and the many were allowed to remain in ignorance. Our forefathers adopted a different plan. They sought to rest the entire foundations of government on an enlightened and educated citizenship. He spoke of the founding of Harvard College in whose support the Colonists gave a sum from their scanty means equal to all the other public charges. The immigrants who settled these western prairies carried with them the spirit and the purpose of their colonial forefathers, and have everywhere planted schools and colleges.

The speaker said he had little sympathy with those who had no commendation for institutions of learning whose graduates were not counted by the thousands and whose endowment funds were not counted by the millions. He had no criticism to make of those; they had their place and their work. But he would confess his sympathies were largely with the smaller colleges, which had sprung from the necessities of enlightened communities, and which afforded at the threshold of Christian homes education for the children of the west. And as he recalled the sacrifices made in founding them he did not believe all the rewards of the future would come alone to the children of the larger, but he was sure that from these humbler halls would come those whom the world would acknowledge its heroes and leaders.

The speaker referred to the trial of the Dartmouth College case, and Webster's great argument in behalf of his Alma Mater, in which he referred to the college as "a small college," and as, "one of the lesser lights in the literary horizon of our country," and yet it held all his fealty and affection. The speaker said that the little New Hampshire college had more honor on that day than mere numbers and wealth could have given. The true honor and glory of educational institutions consist in the youth they prepare for noble and useful life. The speaker quoted from Professor Bryce's American Commonwealth in which he said: "The European observer conceives that his American friends may not duly realize the services which these smaller colleges perform in the rural districts of the country. They set learning in a visible form before the people. They give a chance of rising in some intellectual walk of life to many a strong and earnest nature who might otherwise have failed."

That was to be the objects of this institution. From humble beginnings, indeed, our greatest institutions of learning had grown. The speaker spoke of the humble origins of Yale and Harvard which had been established by the unselfish devotion of noble men. He expressed the hope that the institution they were establishing might receive such assistance and benefactions as would place it beyond the chance of failure and make its existence perpetual.

The speaker said one of the great objects of a higher education was to teach the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, the inculcation of an elevated, unselfish, and devoted patriotism. He spoke of the ignoble scrambles of selfish ambition in which the better and higher ideals of patriotism were lost and said that what was needed was the trained and educated mind to know the best, and to demand the best. The tendency among educated men to sneer at patriotism and to decry politics was to be deplored. Our country was worthy the best thought and the best service of the best men. He hoped to see the influences that went from this institution on the side of these higher views. The speaker told of the mission of Protagoras to Athens, not to teach music, or geometry, or astronomy, but how to become good citizens of the state. That was a worthy object for any institution of learning. He hoped that the dignity, and responsibility, and exceeding privileges of an American citizen would be impressed by all the influences that should rule the place. The speaker told how Germany had risen from the humiliation of Jena by national education, until she had become the arbiter of power in Europe, and a leader of the intellectual thought of the world. Such was the power of education when applied to the service of the state. And it was not only good policy; it was our only safety. The dangers that threaten the republic are not from without but from within. Only by integrity and intelligence could the firesides of the nation be preserved.

The speaker referred to the address of President Joseph Smith and strongly commended it for its breadth and liberality of thought. He was glad that within these walls the utmost liberality of thought was to be allowed consistent with safety and sobriety. License and anarchy were not liberty. He also commended the institution because it was nonsectarian and would make no distinctions on account of sex. He said that while he approved of the fact that it was to be free from sectarian influences, he hoped that moral restraints would not be lacking. He believed no system of education was complete which neglected the moral side of man's nature.

"I do not say," said he, "that every good man is an intellectual man, nor that every intellectual man is a good man; but I do say that I believe that an intellectual man has a better chance to be good because he is intellectual; and a good man has a better chance to be intellectual because he is good."

The speaker referred to the multitudinous educational movements of the day, and congratulated the people that they had decided to bear their part in the mighty movements now being put forth for the uplifting of humanity. He wished them the fullest realization of their plans, for if they were fulfilled nothing but good would result. Let our endeavor be to build happy homes, where intelligence and virtue ever abide; where greater knowledge leads to greater love, and where larger wisdom leads to larger reverence. Let our proud boast be that here the children of the state in the light of that knowledge and wisdom, do all their duty in the fear of God and for the good of man.

The following is Elder J. R. Lambert's address in full. It is excellent in tone and valuable in its suggestions:—

Mr. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen:—The purpose had in view by those who supervised this beautiful structure, and established this college school, was to furnish suitable opportunities to our sons and daughters for acquiring a superior education, without having to send them abroad; and that those who are abroad might be able to place their sons and daughters where they will be properly protected from those immoral and hurtful influences which too frequently surround institutions of this kind, while they are securing a similar education.

The religious community which has taken this matter in hand, and proceeded thus far with the work, believes that the cause of humanity is the cause of truth and right; and that the cause of truth and right is the cause of God. They believe that all good is of God, and that it should be diligently sought, learned, and received; that true education is a precious boon which all should prize; that, so far as they are concerned, they have been divinely instructed to "seek learning even by study, and also by faith;"

to learn words of wisdom out of the "best books." They believe that some of the sources from which they are to draw needed information, and with which they are to become acquainted, are "things both in heaven, and in earth, and under the earth; things which have been; things which are; things which must shortly come to pass; things which are at home; things which are abroad; the wars and the perplexities of the nations; . . . and a knowledge of countries and of kingdoms," etc.

As Mr. Morris puts it in the preface to his work entitled "Science and the Bible,"

"Two great volumes have been laid before man for his instruction, and from which his ideas and science all have been derived—the material works and the inspired word of God. These being the production of the same wise and unchangeable Author, the harmony subsisting between them is universal and complete."

Scientists tell us that we should learn many useful and important lessons from the material world and the great forces found therein. We concede the statement to be right. The Bible does not oppose this thought.

"The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard. Their line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world."—Psalms 19: 1-4.

"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things which are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse."—Romans 1: 20.

It is therefore our duty, to seek so far as we may, knowledge from the works of God, in the heavens and in the earth, by study, as well as by faith.

It is eminently fitting, too, that the people who are committed by such expressions and sentiments as these, and who believe that they are obligated to do all within their power to benefit humanity, should be the first to offer to their sons and daughters, as well as the sons and daughters of all others who may wish to avail themselves of like privileges, suitable and safe opportunities of entering into and exploring the vast and rich fields of literature and science. How could they do their whole duty and do less than this?

There are people yet to be found—and good people too—who believe that to thus open the way for the acquirement of a superior education, is simply to offer an opportunity to become proud, and, per consequence, to become less useful both in church and state. This is a great mistake. True education humbles rather than exalts. But in the true sense of worth and honor, it exalts, and does not abase. If months and years of proper tuition, especially in the advanced branches of learning, does not make its intended recipients more humble, more liberal, and more charitable, it is because they are not in possession of valid minds, and, therefore, are not susceptible of receiving a true education.

"Knowledge is power;" and power for good, always, if rightly applied. Salvation in this world, as well as in the world to come, is dependent upon knowledge received by us. Knowledge is needed in all the professions and avocations of life; and, all other things being equal, he who is best and most completely educated, will best fill his station in life, whether he is a farmer, common laborer, merchant, lawyer, teacher, statesman, or minister of the gospel.

If the work of educating is a progressive work, as it certainly is, then every institution of learning should be, in some sense, in advance of those which have preceded it. Such, we trust, will be the case with "our college." And in order to make our educational work valid and complete, two things, broadness and trueness, must enter into it, and everything of a dissimilar character must be excluded. By broadness, we mean, first, that the whole man should be educated. "Educate the head to think, the heart to feel, and the body to act."

Uniform development of the intellectual, moral, and physical man is what is needed. And, in the second place, we must not limit the fields of operation for the human mind, nor the operation of the mind in the illimitable fields which it is permitted to occupy. Man was made "in the image of God," and there is no line of limitation which has been reached beyond which others may not go. Man has never progressed so far in the realm of knowledge, but what with more time and opportunity he may go farther.

It is not enough to learn to repeat the statements of the text-books, for these books were all made by men, and their positions and statements frequently need to be criticised and tested. It is important, therefore, that a college faculty be composed of broad-minded men and women who are able to leave the beaten track whenever the interests of truth demand it; and thus, by example as well as precept, teach the student the invaluable habit of thinking for himself.

By trueness, we mean that the student should be taught to think and act correctly, for it is by thinking in a true and logical manner that we arrive at correct conclusions. It is, too, important to us, and indispensable to our success, that we inculcate correct principles. We are confronted with scientific, political, social, and religious problems which demand solution; hence the best thought and action which can be had, are, and will be, needed. While we may not be able to move far, comparatively, we can, nevertheless, master, in a sense, some fundamental principles which belong to these different departments, and thus start and continue in the right direction.

Very much depends upon this. The effect will be to replace the ranks which are now occupied by too many men and women who can think only in certain grooves and channels which are all too narrow and uncertain to be used as standards. For instance, there are some scientists who can only think according to a certain scientific creed; some religionists and politicians who can think only along certain denominational and party lines.

The moral nature of man needs to be developed as well as the intellectual. There is a great disparity between the development of these qualities of the mind in our age. We have many strong intellects, but entirely too few who are heroes in a moral sense. Why is it? We never can become truly useful in society, and fill the positions we were intended to fill, until we have a proper appreciation of the pure and the good. Not only this, but we need a correct knowledge of others' rights and privileges, and a disposition to respect them, making no difference between the King on his throne and the beggar by the wayside; between those who dress in silk and broadcloth, and those who are necessarily clad in the poorest garments—both tattered and torn.

The demand for moral courage and strength is great and important. We should so educate our sons and daughters that when they become convinced that they are wrong, they will have the courage to change, as well as the ability to furnish sound reasons for their conversion. "Wise men change; fools never." On the other hand, all need that sense of right—and the courage to execute the thought—that will enable them to strictly adhere to their native convictions until they are prepared and willing to profess conversion, and furnish reasons for the change, without any regard to their social, political, or religious surroundings. This wholesale policy business, outside of the lines of truth, and right, and conscience, is one of the crying sins of the age; and any people who wink at it, are certainly not aware of what they are doing.

If the following statements were true when published, the conditions set forth are certainly no better now:—

"The country is in a bad way; that is the honest truth of it. The man that does not see that trouble of the most serious character is brewing, and who laughs idly at professed danger, is a fool and will yet be ground to powder. There is discontent, distrust, and dissatisfaction about us everywhere. The fact is that our social and political fabric is rotten."—Chicago Inter-Ocean, July, 1878.

Broad and true education will not only unfold and strengthen the mind, but it will correct that which is wrong. It teaches us what we may do, and how to do it; what we may not do, and how to avoid it. It both instructs and disciplines the individual. College students who are seeking a superior education should be a pattern and proper example to students of the common school in all matters of morality and decorum.

On the lines of truth and right, according to the avowed purpose for which this institution of learning was established, we may expect success; but on any other lines we may not expect it, either in college or out of it. Let all bend their energies to sustain so worthy an undertaking, not only by furnishing means to lift the debt now hanging over the building, and furnishing students for the school—both of which are important—but by using their influence in every legitimate way in favor of the right and against the wrong, in church, town, and county.

Example is more potent than word. Let us see to it that this great teacher shall be a true and abiding inducement to parents to send their sons and daughters here to receive a higher education.

If we wish college students to become broad-minded and liberal, we must be so ourselves; if we are anxious that they should become Christians, or continue to be Christians, as the case may be, then let Christianity, pure and complete, be taught in a consistent manner, in the church, Sunday school, and family, and its precepts enforced by true and consistent lives. If it is wrong for the college student to indulge in rough and vulgar conversation, let us avoid such conversation ourselves; if it is wrong—as it certainly is—for the college student to chew and smoke tobacco, let us avoid this popular evil ourselves; if we desire our boys and girls, young men and young women, to think pure thoughts, and perform noble deeds, let us so think and act.

It is true, this institution is not for the purpose of engaging in religious exercises, or teaching religion in any form. Anything which looks toward the union of church and state, in the least degree, is not only contrary to the spirit and genius of our government, but it is alike contrary to the spirit and sentiment of the principles of the faith and doctrine of this religious community, by which constitutional principles they are bound. But we can and should, through the work of the pulpit, press, Sunday school, and home, manifest to these students, while they are with us, and to all others, that we have a greater love for God, the truth, and the right, than for anything else.

Success to the enterprise. May it soon become a known honor to this community; yes, more, an honor and blessing to the town, county, and state. An honor and blessing to untold hundreds who shall be made wiser and better, and more useful among men, because of the things which they have learned within these walls.

LIFTERS AND LEANERS.

"In which class are you? Are you easing the load Of overtaxed lifters who toil down the road? Or are you a leaner, who let others bear Your portion of labor and worry and care!"

SELECT READING FOR FEBRUARY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

OUR fourth corner-stone is self-reliance. There is a sense in which every human soul is isolated from every other; it stands before God as a unit, responsible for its individual acts, in short, it stands alone upon its own foundation. In a modified sense this is true in its relation to its fellows. Being able to stand alone, makes all the difference between a strong man and a weak one. It has been well said that the great want of the age is men—"men who are not for sale, men who are honest, sound from center to circumference, true to the heart's core; men whose consciences are as steady as the needle to the pole; men who can tell the truth and look the world and the devil right in the eye; men who neither brag nor run, neither flag nor flinch; men who can have courage without shouting to it; men in whom the courage [current] of everlasting life runs deep and strong; men who do not cry, nor cause their voices to be heard in the street, but who will not fail nor be discouraged; who know their message and tell it, know their place and fill it; mind their own business, will not lie, are not too lazy to work, not too proud to be poor; men who are willing to eat what they have earned, and wear what they have paid for." Such men are self-reliant men, not blown about by every wind of doctrine or whiff of public opinion. To make such men and such women, they must be trained to self-reliance from childhood.

Emerson says that self-trust is the first element of success, the belief that if you are here God put you here for cause, with some task strictly appointed you, and that so long as you work at that, you are well and successful. True self-reliance is founded on faith in God. If it have any shallower foundation it is not self-reliance, but self-conceit; but with its true foundation it becomes an element of great value in character. Especially is self-reliance necessary for Americans, for to them—the people—is committed great political and religious power. Hence, they need to be trained to self-reliant, independent thought and action; to weighing carefully each question brought before them, and to deciding upon its merits for themselves.

Do you say this is too difficult a lesson to teach children? Not at all. We are continually, though often unconsciously, teaching them the one lesson or the other, the lesson of self-reliant independence, or of dependence and indecision. If we constantly choose for the child, deciding all questions in matter or in morals for him, we are decidedly not training him to be self-reliant. The choosing may be so simple a thing as between two playthings, or between two articles of diet, each equally unobjectionable; but if we choose for him, or allow him to choose first one, then the other, swaying back and forth uncertainly, till in very vexation of spirit we make the choice for him, usually to his great disgust, we are training him to two things: vacillation and distrust of his own judgment—neither of them very serviceable equipments for after life. But give him to understand that he must make the choice himself, promptly yet deliberately, because irrevocably, and then abide by the consequences, and you are teaching him an invaluable lesson. Our dotting love would shield children from the consequences of their own bad choosing; it is often better to let them suffer the consequences, that in the future they may choose more carefully and wisely.

Train them to be self-reliant by throwing them upon their own responsibility. One way to accomplish this is to give each child some definite work to do, and hold him responsible for the doing. A few years ago I went to visit a friend whose "sons are all daughters." The youngest, a bright little miss of seven years, is my especial pet and always claims me as her own particular guest. I arrived about sundown, and in her delight at my coming and in her efforts to entertain me, Sala forgot her allotted task. After tea we were seated around the fire and Sala was entertaining me with an account of her school experiences, which were still a novelty, as she had just commenced attending school; suddenly she sprang up, exclaiming, "Oh! I forgot," and rushed out of the room, out of the house into the darkness. "What is the matter with Sala?" I asked. "Nothing, only she forgot to get her kindling," her older sister replied, "and she has gone to the wood-house after it." The little girl realized that this was her work, and that if she did not do it it would be undone, and her papa, when he came down in the cold the next morning to make the kitchen fire, would find no kindling ready. This feeling of responsibility made her break away from the pleasant group in the sitting-room, and gave her courage to go out into the darkness to do her neglected duty. If she grows to womanhood, I feel sure my little Sala will be a self-reliant woman.

Another way of training to self-reliance is by allowing children to make purchases by themselves. Of course, this presupposes a training in distinguishing qualities of goods, and a knowledge of the prices to be paid for them. We know a wise mother who carries on this training very systematically, commencing it when the children are quite young, by allowing them to purchase small, simple articles, like handkerchiefs, and continuing it as they grow older, until they can be trusted not only to purchase all sorts of dry-goods, but to do the family marketing. Some of these children are grown and show the good results of their training in self-reliant manhood and womanhood.

I have another friend, the mother of an only daughter, whom she idolizes with a blind affection. The mother is a wonderfully capable, energetic woman, possessed of what Mrs. Stowe calls "faculty," and is such a good judge of all sorts of goods that her friends esteem it a great favor if she will accompany them when they go shopping. She thinks her daughter made of altogether finer clay than common mortals, herself included; much too good to be burdened with common duties, like shopping and housework, so Inez was never allowed to buy so much as a pocket handkerchief for herself, nor to have any share in, or care of, the work of the household. At eighteen Inez was married, and removing at once to a distant frontier town, was thrown upon her own resources. But she had no resources and no self-reliance. Trained servants were not to be had; most of the work as well as the care of the house came upon her. She must do the family marketing and shopping; but she did not know a "chuck" steak from a porterhouse, and could be easily cheated on dry goods. Her husband's income was limited, and wise economy was necessary to make both ends meet. Worst of all, she had no confidence in her own judgment. Her bitterest enemy could not have wished to inflict on her more trouble and distress than her dotting mother caused by neglecting to train her to self-reliance. Hers may be an exceptional case; if so, it is exceptional in degree only, not in character. Your children may not go out to the frontier, as did the daughter of my friend, but in the most sheltered homes they will find abundant use for good judgment, decision of character, and that self-reliance which results from the possession of these faculties.

Closely allied to self-reliance, is self-respect. Teach your children to respect themselves by showing that you respect them. Froebel was wont to take off his hat to any little child he met, bowing, as he said, to the possibilities that are in him. There are possibilities enough wrapped up in every little child to command the loving respect of every parent. If children are undervalued, doubted, snubbed, they are made to lack true self-respect; lacking this when fourteen or sixteen years old, they will never gain it, but sneak through life as though they had no proper place in the world. Destroy self-respect and you break down one of the strongest barriers against degrading vice.

On the other hand we need to guard against the vanity and self-conceit which seem innate to young America. These are the vices of shallowness, a shallow nature, superficial education, and need, for their correction, such a going down to the bottom of things as shall convince young America that he does not know as much as he thinks he does. A wise parent will devise many ways of pricking the bubble of his self-conceit, always doing it good naturedly.—Childhood. Its care and culture.

What help might properly begin when requiring a child to choose for himself?

How may selfishness be fostered by failing to form in a child the habit of self-reliance?

What other evils may result? In what other ways than those here mentioned may a child be trained to be self-reliant?

MARYVILLE, Missouri.

Editors Herald:—Having read so much about economy and charity, I would like to give my views. While it is the duty of every one to live within his means and lay up a little for old age, and no one can respect himself who goes in debt for things he can possibly get along without, if he does not know where the money is coming from to pay for it; but is economy and giving the right kind of charity? Does not that make paupers?

Is there not more good done by every one living as well as he can all over the country? What will make better times? We so often hear people say that such a person wasted so much money on a funeral; perhaps one hundred dollars for coffin, fifty for flowers, forty for carriages, five hundred for monument. They think it would have been better to have helped the poor. Has not such as he helped the poor? Their money is not wasted. Some one has made a living by honest work making coffins; some by raising flowers, etc. It is charity to buy if you can afford it, while it is not a necessity; and those who are not able, should live within their means. If anyone can afford to live well, let him do so, it helps others.

Some of my dearest friends are people who live in luxury and drive by in their carriages, and speak as pleasantly to me going on foot. And I feel perfectly independent and glad they are able to live as they do. Their living in luxury has been the means of me being able to make an independent living, when had all economised and given me a little, I should have been a pauper. So it is, clear through. The lady who buys one rich suit helps the farmer who raises the grain to feed all. The man that raises the wool, the people who feed the silk worm, the factory girl, the merchants, the clerks, the dressmaker. If we can afford to wear the thirty-five dollar suit, let us wear it, and give the tailor a chance. He does not want charity, he wants work. If we can give work to those who need it; that is what they want.

No able-bodied man or woman with any self-respect wants alms. A lady said to me the other day we are all living too extravagantly, that is what makes hard times. I told her that if every one went to economizing the poor would starve. Factories of all kinds have closed because the demand had lessened and thrown thousands out of work, that means suffering. If the demand would increase the factories would start up again; that would give relief. There have been prayers offered for the poor, for there to be a way opened up that they could get the necessities of life, and that same person would cry extravagance if the saints would dress nicely and furnish their homes with expensive furniture. And yet we would like for all to be fed, and employment will do that and make a market for the farmers' products. If my views are wrong I stand ready to be corrected.

MRS. H. B. T.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 26.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing we have baptized four more, making just fifty at this place since the first day of last January.

The Christmas tree and entertainment was a perfect success. It is written, "Men do not gather grapes of thorns, nor figs of thistles," but what is there that a Christmas tree will not produce? Well, everybody was happy with the beautiful gifts plucked from the evergreen, while old Santa Claus considered there was no exception to the rule and hung on a fat turkey for R. E., all of which was appreciated, and the next day beside the festal board we gracefully sustained the old adage, "Preachers love poultry." "Mrs" was always found where "Mr." might have been, so Mrs. Grant was getting everything that came our way. But little things work marvelous changes sometimes, for the "s" was left off once and it read "Mr.," so the preacher walked off with a fine rocking-chair. Then came the turkey and a few more nice little presents; so taking it altogether old Santa knew what he was about.

Bro. Rathbun was the happy recipient of an elegant overcoat, while all the rest shared bountifully.

Happily yours,

R. E. GRANT.

THE WHITE-SEWELL DEBATE.—NO. 3.

DEAR READER:—In this my third affirmative in support of, "Do true baptized believers in Christ of our day have a scriptural right to claim or possess the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit as promised by Christ to his disciples?" etc., I desire to call your attention to the statement: "It is written that 'God is no respecter of persons.'" This being true, men and angels are forbidden to preach a gospel diverse from that which Jesus commanded to be preached to "every creature," as found in Mark 16. Here it is stated by him who spake as never man spake that "He that believeth [of every creature in all the world] and is baptized, shall be saved." This is a universal promise, reaching down to "all nations" to the end of time. (See Matt. 24:14.) "He that believeth not shall be damned." This as universal as the other.

"And these signs shall follow them that believe." This reaches to "all nations," as universal as do the other two. The promise to be "saved," and "damned," and "signs to follow," is a promise as wide and sweeping to "every creature" in "all the world," and as universal and unchangeable as is the command to "go preach the gospel." The creature "saved," and the creature to be "damned," and the creature to whom "signs" were promised to "follow," were all members of the same "all nations" (Matt. 24:14), and "every creature" "in all the world" (Mark 16:15), where the gospel should be preached. These "every creature" were promised "signs to follow," when hearing the gospel, by "believing and being baptized."

But, Mr. Sewell argues that the "them" and "they" of Mark 16 refers alone to the apostles! Elder Sewell's strained grammatical analysis of Mark 16 is, to say the least, a disaster to his whole theory. It is marvelous, strange, if the pronouns "them" and "they" refer alone to the eleven apostles that Christ addressed in that commission as being the only ones who could enjoy the "signs following," how it was that others outside of that "eleven," who believed years afterwards, enjoyed the same kind of "signs" spoken of in Mark 16! Even one of the signs to follow the "them" and "they" (Mr. Sewell's eleven), was: "They shall take up serpents." The only man we have any record of in the "old book" of doing such a thing, is Paul; and at the time Christ spoke to Mr. Sewell's "them" and "they" of taking "up serpents," Paul was a violent persecutor and believed as little in "signs following the believer," as does Mr. Sewell. Paul was no part of Mr. Sewell's "them" and "they," but was one of the them and they that Christ referred to in the commission—being one of the "every creature" that in after years heard, believed, and was baptized.

We have no record of Mr. Sewell's "them" and "they" laying hands on Paul either; but we have record of one Ananias, who was one of Christ's them and they of the "every creature" laying hands on Paul. The signs of Mark 16 followed Philip, Stephen, the twelve laymen of Acts 19, Ananias, Cornelius and his house, the Corinthian Gentile brethren, and many others; but none were of Mr. Sewell's "them" and "they," but were of Christ's "every creature." A further investigation of this point would seem useless. However, a grammatical analysis of the text itself might be in place. In considering this text three items are to be considered: 1. Who is the speaker? 2. To whom is he speaking? 3. Of what is he speaking? Mark is the speaker here and he is quoting Jesus. It is Mark who says in verses 14-17: "Afterwards he [Jesus] appeared unto the eleven. . . . And he [Jesus] said unto them [the eleven], go ye [eleven, second person denotes the person addressed] into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He [generic term, he who, or anyone who] that believeth [of every creature] and is baptized shall be saved, but he [generic term, he who, or anyone who] that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe [of every creature]."

Mark says Jesus is the speaker. The apostles are the ones spoken to, and "them that believe," of "every creature," are the persons spoken of. The law of language is, a pronoun must agree with the antecedent in gender, person, and number. Therefore: "In my name shall they [third person, denoting the person spoken of, not you, second person, the ones addressed, but they, the believer,] cast out devils; they [the believer, third person, not you, second person] shall speak with new tongues; they [the believer, third person, not you, second person] shall take up serpents; and if they [the believer, third person, not you, second person] drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them [the believers, third person, not you, second person]; they [the believer, third person, not you, second person] shall lay hands on the sick and they [the sick, third person, not you, second person] shall recover."

Here Mark drops the quotation made by Jesus to the eleven and of all believers. He then takes up the relation of facts in verses 19 and 20, how they went forth and preached the gospel and how God worked with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Thus showing how both preacher and the believer were affected under the commission.

By what law of language Mr. Sewell can use the pronoun "them" found in Christ's language in verse 17, to be antecedent to the pronoun "them" in verse 20, where another's language is being used altogether, when Christ's utterance ended with verse 18, I am puzzled to know. At a single glance anyone can see that Mark drops the quotation made from Jesus at the end of verse 18.

Elder Sewell argues that people did not receive the miraculous gifts as the result of believing and being baptized; but these gifts came by apostles' hands! I ask, If "belief" is not a prerequisite to receiving the "gifts" from God, would God bestow these "gifts" upon a wicked person by the laying on of apostles' hands? Let our readers ponder Mr. Sewell's desperate struggle to escape present revelation from God to man. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. . . . And these signs shall follow them that believe."—Christ.

He that believeth not, and apostles' hands are laid on them, then these miraculous gifts shall follow!!—Sewell. Christ vs Rev. C. W. Sewell, you see.

The Holy Spirit produced the same miraculous result, whether received under the hands of the apostles, who were spoken to in Mark 16, or under the hands of Ananias (Acts 9: 17); and Paul (19: 6) years afterwards, or, when given by God direct (Acts 10: 44-47). Thus it was not apostles' hands that gave miraculous gifts, neither was it Ananias' hands; nor was it any other man's hands." "For to one is given by the Spirit [not by apostles' hands, as Mr. S. will have it] the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healings by the same Spirit; to another miracles," prophecy, tongues, etc.—1 Corinthians 12. So you see plainly that all of these "gifts," whether of faith, knowledge, wisdom, tongues, prophecy, healings, etc., flow from one Holy Spirit, to the baptized believer in Christ. This abiding Comforter is received by reason of an intelligent belief and obedience to Christ and his doctrine. This doctrine is, faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. (Heb. 6: 1-3.) The Holy Spirit, once received by obedience, then God gives by it, "manifestations [of gifts] of the Spirit," to "every man to profit withal." (1 Cor. 12: 7.) There is but one Holy Spirit, and the "gifts" from that, you have seen, are faith, wisdom, knowledge, healings, prophecy, etc. Will Mr. S. say, "We have no 'miraculous' faith, wisdom, knowledge, healing, etc?" If you have faith above that of an unregenerated man, where did you get it? If from God, it is a miracle—something that could not be received without the intervention of God. If you have "knowledge," above Robert Ingersoll, where did you get it? If from God, it was a miracle in receiving it. If you have no "supernatural" faith, wisdom, knowledge, tongues, prophecies, etc., from the one Holy Spirit, what preëminence have you above Mr. Ingersoll? Not a whit; unless it is, "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." (2 Tim. 3: 5.) The truth is,

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.—James 1: 17.

Therefore, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. . . . And these signs shall follow them that believe."

Now, since God has said, "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal;" and that manifestation is of faith, wisdom, knowledge, healing, tongues, prophecy, etc., why not every "true baptized believer in Christ, have a scriptural right to claim, or possess these gifts?" No reason why, if ye are not of little faith. Mr. S. chidingly banter me to attempt to show a new truth ever revealed to a Latter Day Saint! Well presumably here is one:—

And whatsoever thing is good, is just and true; wherefore, nothing that is good denieth the Christ, but acknowledgeth that he is. And ye may know that he is, by the power of the Holy Ghost; wherefore I would exhort you, that ye deny not the power of God; for he worketh by power, according to the faith of the children of men, the same to-day and to-morrow, and forever. And again I exhort you, my brethren, that ye deny not the gifts of God, for they are many; and they come from the same God. . . . And I would exhort you, my beloved brethren, that ye remember that he is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and that all these gifts, of which I have spoken, which are spiritual, never will be done away, even so long as the world shall stand, only according to the unbelief of the children of men. . . . And now I speak unto all the ends of the earth, that if the day cometh that the power and gifts of God shall be done away among you, it shall be because of unbelief.—Book of Mormon, pp. 544, 545.

For want of space I will give but one more:—

For behold, thus saith the Lord, This people begin to wax in iniquity; they understand not the Scriptures: for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord, wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph [who was sold into Egypt]. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: For, I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me.—Book of Mormon, p. 116.

This gives no uncertain sound, and forever silences the infidel's attack upon the Bible in regard to it teaching and favoring polygamy in the acts of David and Solomon. It also condemns Utah Mormonism, and gives the deathblow to their pretended revelation favoring polygamy, which they have fraudulently tried to palm off on Joseph Smith; which theory was so gloriously defeated in the late famous "Temple Lot Suit."

Mr. Sewell thinks I misstated him when saying he "sneered and wrote sportingly" of some things regarding the Spirit's power. Let the reader call to mind how Mr. Sewell brought up and argued the case of Balaam, Saul, Caiaphas, etc.,—wicked and unprincipled men enjoying miraculous gifts, in order to offset my argument made in Jesus' saying in Mark 16 and Paul's in 1 Corinthians 12:3. Mr. S. to answer this quotation of Paul's, says:—

Then sinners must receive it in order to conversion.

If this is not "sneering" at and ridiculing Christ's and Paul's sayings about Spirit power, then I frankly admit I don't understand Mr. Sewell's language.

Mr. S. shows the weakness of his cause in his attempt to answer my exegesis on the "more excellent way," when seen in the light of the sayings of the leading men of his own church. Editor J. H. Garrison of the Christian Evangelist for December 12, 1889, when answering the question; "What is 'that which is perfect,' in 1 Corinthians 13:10?" says:

It is that perfection of knowledge which is to come, when God's purpose shall be realized in his children, and they have been conformed to the image of his Son. Then the partial knowledge we have now in the flesh shall be "done away" as the stars are hid by the effulgent light of the rising sun. This the apostle illustrates by the progress of the individual from childhood to manhood: "When I was a child, I spake [prattled] as a child, I felt as a child, I thought as a child; now that I am become a man I have put away childish things." So shall it be in our spiritual growth from the condition of babes in Christ "till we all attain unto the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." This opens up a glorious destiny for every child of God.

Thus, Elder Garrison with an unprejudiced mind decides this question in my favor.

I cannot close this part of the subject without introducing the testimony of one of the brightest lights of Mr. Sewell's church,—Rev. Moore. The Christian Evangelist for December 18, 1890, in speaking of Elder W. T. Moore, LL. D., who was installed President of Missouri Bible College, at Columbia, Missouri, January 21, 1896, says:—

W. T. Moore, of London, in a recent address, draws the following glowing picture of the apostolic church when it is realized on the earth: And should the Apostolic Church finally be reproduced, thereby bringing Christ to the earth again in personal power and rest giving influence, what would then be the prospect before us? Let me ask you to give the imagination a little play at this point. Try to picture to yourselves, first of all, a united christendom, thoroughly illustrating the seven unities in Ephesians, with considerable emphasis on the "one Lord, one faith and one baptism!" This would give a practical reproduction of the living Christ in every place where there is now a local congregation. Imagine again these places multiplied at least a hundred times; and yet this might not express anything like the increase that would take place. And now think of all these local churches as animated by the Divine Spirit, guided by the divine word, walking in the divine commandments, attending to the divine ordinances, living the divine life, and manifesting the divine ministry in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting those in prison, healing the sick, carrying the gospel to every nation, and preaching it to every creature! Is not this picture enchanting? And yet, is it not within the range of a possible realization? Certainly we cannot doubt it. Does not Christ still live and reign in the heavens? And is it not true that he must ultimately live and reign on earth? Surely if the picture I have drawn could be made real, there would then be no need of human organizations to complete the work of the world's redemption. All our social schemes would then be seen to be utterly useless in the light of that socialism of which Christ is the author, and of which his true church is the earthly exponent wherever it exemplifies the divine graces by living and manifesting the divine life. The full realization of this splendid ideal is what the world is waiting for, and until it is realized we must continue to trust, pray, labor, hope, and patiently wait.

I am truly glad to turn the light upon Mr. Sewell from so eminent a man as is Elder Moore. Mr. Moore says it is an "enchanting picture," and in the "range of a possible realization." That is it; "true baptized believers," have a "possible" chance to "realize" these "gifts" by "coveting," praying, and living for them.

Mr. S. plunges into Ephesians 4, and wants to know if there will be any "wind of doctrine," etc., after we come to the "fullness of Christ"! I smile and ask: "How readest thou?"

Mr. S. had better wait till we get to that state of perfection, through the appointed means of "gifts unto men." (Eph. 4: 8-11.) The Church of Christ is on earth; the war is now on, and the battle is now raging against "every wind of doctrine" by God's appointed servants, "earnestly" contending "for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Now; Mr. S. makes another leap and says: "If they have actually got these gifts and can prove it, I would accept the whole proposition!" We will prove you. Here is evidence that would have stood in any court on earth at the time of its transaction. The following is found in Hayden's history of the Disciples, page 250:—

It cannot be denied that Joseph Smith was a man of remarkable power over others. . . . Ezra Booth, of Mantua, a Methodist preacher of much more than ordinary culture, and with strong natural abilities, in company with his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, and some other citizens of this place, visited Smith at his home in Kirtland, in 1831. Mrs. Johnson had been afflicted for some time with a lame arm, and was not at the time of that visit able to lift her hand to her head. . . . During the interview the conversation turned on the subject of supernatural gifts. . . . Some one said, "Here is Mrs. Johnson with a lame arm; has God given any power to men now on earth to cure her?" A few moments later, when the conversation had turned in another direction, Smith rose, and walking across the room, taking Mrs. Johnson by the hand, said in the most solemn and impressive manner: "Woman, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, I command thee to be whole," and immediately left the room. The company were awe-stricken at the infinite presumption of the man, and the calm assurance with which he spoke. The sudden mental and moral shock—I know not how better to explain the well attested fact—electrified the rheumatic arm—Mrs. Johnson at once lifted it up with ease, and on her return home the next day she was able to do her washing without difficulty or pain.

This testimony is from Elder Hayden, of Mr. Sewell's own church; and he testifies that the case is a "well-attested fact." Mr. Kennedy in his book on "Mormonism," pages 121 and 122, verifies the statement and adds:—

Upon her return home she discovered that she could use it equally with the other, and thus it remained until her death, fifteen years later.

The same argument used to explain this away would set aside every miracle recorded in the New Testament if applied.

I have in my possession many sworn testimonies from eyewitnesses of notable cases of healing among our people; but space will not allow their insertion. I will content myself by giving one more that came under my own observation, and is invertible and true:—

STATE OF MISSOURI, }
County of Clinton. } ss.

Personally appeared before me a notary public in and for the State and county aforesaid, Ellsworth Moorman, to me personally known to be of lawful age, of a sound mind, and a reliable, truthful man, who on his oath deposes and says: In the year 1875, my hearing became deficient from some unknown cause, till finally the auditory nerves absolutely refused to perform their functions, and I became totally deaf and oblivious to all around except what I could see. Later on one evening during that year, Elders W. C. Nirk, of Rhodes, Iowa, and I. N. White, of Clinton, Missouri, administered to me, and when I awoke next morning my hearing was perfectly restored, not only to its normal condition, but was much more acute than before I was afflicted. And to-day after fifteen years, I can say I never have had a relapse since; all of which I attribute to the power of God through his servants' administration.

(Signed) ELLSWORTH MOORMAN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of August, A. D., 1890. (My commission expires December 18, 1893).

MRS. E. MOORMAN, Witness.

Now, dear reader, I leave the merits of this question with you; hoping and praying that as time glides along we will qualify ourselves by obedience to the divine word of God, and be ready to enter into the "marriage supper of the Lamb," and enjoy the merits of the millennium with Christ for a "thousand years."

Ever, your obedient servant,

I. N. WHITE.

P. S.—Questions will be answered by addressing me at Independence, Missouri.

MIRACULOUS GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT.

REPLY TO I. N. WHITE.—NO. 3.

Dear Reader:—As Mr. White's third and last article is in, this my third reply will close this discussion. You now have before you the strongest arguments that can be made in favor of the continuation of spiritual gifts in the church. You now see the strength of his position. I so completely overturned his former argument on Mark 16 in my last that he makes no effort to reestablish his demolished premises, but gives us a new line of argument. His assertion concerning the promises of Mark 16 that "this reaches to all nations as universal as the other two," is begging the question or merely asserting the point to be proved. He thinks it strange that if the "them" and "they" of Mark 16 refers alone to the apostles "that others outside the eleven who believed years afterwards enjoyed the same kind of signs." This is not strange to one acquainted with logic. This passage affirms that these signs shall follow the "them," but does not say they shall not follow any others. They might follow many other classes. This passage only affirms they shall follow the "them."

We will now examine his grammatical argument: He says, "And he [Jesus] said unto them [the eleven], go ye [eleven, second person denotes the person addressed] into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He [generic term, he who, or anyone who] that believeth [of every creature] and is baptized shall be saved, but he [generic term, he who or anyone who] that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them [] that believe [of every creature]." I have inserted into this quotation that blank parenthesis [] to show what he lacked of filling out his argument. If he could have inserted in this parenthesis what he had in his others (generic term, he who or anyone who) his argument would have been worth something. But this he could not do for the "them"—the word to be explained, will not admit of any such explanation. It has no such meaning. Here I might for argument's sake abandon my former argument of the "they" and "them." For the above argument from Mr. W. when explained shows that if "these signs" should "follow" any portion of the believers in any age of the world the promise is fulfilled. Such "signs" did "follow" many believers in the apostolic age, therefore the promise is fulfilled though no such "signs follow" any of the believers of this age. Again Mr. W. says: "The law of language is, a pronoun must agree with its antecedent in gender, person, and number. Therefore "in my name shall they [third person denoting the person spoken of, not you second person, the ones addressed, but they the believer] cast out devils." (See his whole argument). Now let us apply his law of language. He transgresses his law with it right before his eyes. He seeks to find the antecedent of they (that cast out devils, etc.) when it is not the pronoun under discussion. We admit that "they" as used five times in verses 17, 18, agrees with "them that believe" in first part of verse 17. But the question under discussion is, What is the antecedent of "them" in the expression "these signs shall follow them that believe?" It cannot be found in "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," for while "he" and "they" may agree in gender and person, they cannot agree in number, for one is singular and the other plural. Looking back to verse 15 we find "them" in the expression "He said unto them." These two pronouns of verses 17 and 15 agree; but we must now find an antecedent to "them" of verse 15. In verse 14 we have "afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat and upbraided them with their unbelief," etc. Here we have the pronoun them again and it has "the eleven" for its antecedent third person, common gender, and plural number. Thus we have followed the pronoun "them" of verse 17 back through verses 16, 15, into verse 14, where we find "the eleven" for its antecedent. Then beginning at verse 17 and reading forward we find "they" of verses 17, 18 refers to "them that believe" for his antecedent. Thus we see that Elder W's law of language when properly applied gives "the eleven" as the antecedent of this whole clause.

Again Elder W. says: "By what law of language Mr. S. can use the pronoun 'them' found in Christ's language in verse 17 to be antecedent to the pronoun 'them' in verse 20 when another's language is being used altogether when Christ's utterances ended with verse 18, I am puzzled to know." I can help him out of his puzzled predicament by simply reminding him that Mark as an historian first tells what Christ said should follow them and in his own language what did follow them. "The Lord working with them [the apostles] and confirming the word with signs following." Now, dear reader, if you have followed us closely or will reread our articles you will see that I have met every argument he has made on Mark 16 and either turned his argument against him or showed that his reasoning was fallacious and have defended my exposition of it against every argument he has made.

In my last article I put Paul's language and that of Mr. W. side by side and showed that one pointedly contradicts the other. To offset this he gives us the following: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. . . . And these signs shall follow them that believe."—Christ. He that believeth not and apostles hands are laid on them then these miraculous gifts shall follow!!—Rev. C. W. Sewell. Christ vs. Rev. C. W. Sewell you see." Is it possible that Mr. White's failure has driven him to such desperation as this? When I placed him against Paul I gave his exact language verbatim. But in the above he puts words in my mouth that I never used in my life; nor have I said anything from which such a conclusion can be drawn. Such a thought never entered my mind till I saw it in his article. I spoke of the Holy Spirit coming on certain wicked men, but my language does not warrant his putting such language in my mouth. This is another evidence of Mr. W's inspiration (?). He says: "Will Mr. S. say we have no miraculous faith, wisdom, knowledge?" etc. I will say we have none in the sense in which we are discussing the word "miraculous." Everything I know and believe about God and eternity was given to the world by miracle, but it takes no miracle to enable me to learn it and believe it. But he asks where I got my faith. "So faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."—Rom. 10:17. Any miracle about that? I. N. White believes faith comes just that way. All he says by way of comparing me with Ingersoll is as much against him as me, for according to the teaching of the Reorganized Church if Ingersoll were to be converted to their faith he would receive no miraculous gifts from God by the Spirit till he believed, repented, was baptized, and had hands laid on him. For once Mr. W. has surprised me. I said he would not notice my demand that he tell us "one new truth . . . which they have received that is worth anything towards salvation." But he gives us two quotations from the Book of Mormon. Please read them. I cannot requote them in full. What does his first quotation show? The burden of it is that "these gifts . . . which are spiritual never shall be done away." So that is a new truth is it? That is what Mr. W. says for he gave the quotation as a new revelation. I grant it. I accept it, and that settles this debate. Mr. W. has surrendered the question. He took up the Book of Mormon to read us one new truth and he read "these gifts which are spiritual shall never be done away." So then that is one truth not taught in the Bible, for if it is in the Bible then it is not new when found in the Book of Mormon; hence he has acknowledged that the proposition he has been trying to prove by the Bible is really not in the Bible. I am sure Mr. W. did not intend to say that. It was his "inspirational Spirit" (?) that guided him into that truth.

His second quotation is about David and Solomon to condemn polygamy. I admit it does condemn it, but is that a new truth? Paul forever settles that question in few words: "Nevertheless to avoid fornication let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband."—1 Cor. 7:2.

Again he brings up the charge that I wrote "sneeringly" of the Spirit, and offers in proof the fact that I spoke of Balaam, Saul, and other wicked men who received the Spirit. Mr. White had argued that because Philip, Stephen, and other good men received the Spirit therefore good men of our day should receive it. According to that argument it follows that because wicked men then received it that wicked men of our day should receive it. But I said, "This proves too much, therefore proves nothing;" showing that I did not believe his argument nor mine.

Again he cites that I said, "Then sinners must receive it in order to conversion;" and says, "If this is not sneering and ridiculing . . . I don't understand Mr. S's language." Here is what I said found in my first reply: "No man can say that Jesus is Lord but by the Holy Spirit." If this power is only imparted by the Holy Ghost dwelling in the man in a miraculous way, then sinners must receive it in order to conversion, which Elder W. does not believe;" and I thought he knew I did not believe it.

Now I know all our readers can understand that if inspired White cannot. I was not "sneering" at the Spirit or Paul, but showing the inconsistency of Mr. White's interpretation of Paul's language. I believe what Paul said just as he said it.

After failing to sustain his proposition by the Bible, admitting that it is a new revelation through the Book of Mormon, he proposes to prove it by the "leading men of his [my] own church." Suppose he could show that I contradict forty "leading men" instead of two what would it amount to? They are not inspired. It matters little to me what Garrison or Moore say, but what does Peter, Paul, and other "leading men" of the New Testament say. But when I put Mr. White against Mr. Kelley it was different. They claim to be inspired but when they contradict each other it shows their claim to be false.

He "smiles" over what I said on Ephesians 4, but while he is smiling he admits the truth of my position thus: "The Church of Christ is on earth; the war is now on, and the battle is now raging against every wind of doctrine." Paul tells us these inspired men would continue "till" a certain time and that after that there would be "wind of doctrine." As the wind of doctrine is now here the time for these inspired men to vanish away has come and they are gone. If you will read Ephesians 4:11-16 carefully you will see these inspired men were for the work of the ministry; for the edifying of the body till such time as the church would be able to "make increase of itself" (add new members by preaching the gospel) and edify itself. If the words spoken by inspired men edified the body why will not the same words when read, studied, and spoken edify the body now?

As to his testimony in evidence that these "miraculous gifts are actually possessed by the Reorganized Church," I simply state that they are insufficient. Like evidence can be compiled in support of a score or more different sects, parties, and individual leaders of the nineteenth century. Here is one. One George Miller, who was a saint at the the death of Joe Smith, and was taught by the twelve to expect young Joseph would succeed his father, was led by a vision to accept James J. Strang as the successor of old Joseph. The Watson-Blair Debate page 180 says: "Mr. Strang's claims were sent to him there [in Texas] and he had a great vision in which he saw Mr. Strang. He started to praise God in the vision, and they pulled him out of the bed, and it was sometime before he could see the objects around him by reason of the effect of the light of the vision. . . . He came at once to Beaver Island and bore testimony that God had shown him in vision that James J. Strang was the lawful successor of Joseph Smith in the prophetic office and presidency of the church." Will Mr. W. accept this? If he will not, he must excuse me for not accepting his pretended miracles. He claims that they have twelve apostles, with many prophets and other inspired teachers on earth now. If they have, history ought to be repeating itself thus: "And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul [Smith or Blair] so that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them and the evil spirits went out of them."—Acts 19:11, 12. Or the newspapers should contain something like this:—

What shall we do with these men? for that indeed a notable miracle has been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Independence (Missouri), and we cannot deny it.—Acts 4: 16.

They that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day was added unto them about three thousand souls.—Acts 2: 41.

Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed and the number of the men was about five thousand.—Acts 4: 4.

Of this number the records I have kept show that two thousand five hundred and ninety-two (2,592) were new baptisms.—Minutes of General Conference, 1896, page 5.

And this is the work of all their apostles, prophets, priests, elders, etc., for one year. If apostles have the same power now that they had in first century, why can't they do the work they did?

Now, dear reader, you have our arguments before you. It is for you to study them and decide where the truth lies. You have had a discussion between a man that claims to be inspired of God—guided by the Holy Spirit as were the apostles of old, and an ordinary man who claims no inspiration—no supernatural wisdom—no guidance by the Spirit only as it came to him through the words of the Spirit contained in the Bible. What think you of this inspired man's claims? Have I not met all his arguments—at least all his main or strongest ones? Did I not meet him on Mark 16? also 1 Corinthians 12, 13, and Ephesians 4?

By way of negative argument I have shown that these gifts were temporary—only intended as a means of edifying the body or church till the will of God was completed. That the New Testament is an all-sufficient source of edification. I next showed that Paul had foretold that these spiritual powers would be done away. In his wreckless effort to overturn my position he twice squarely contradicted Paul. His whole effort on this chapter was in direct conflict with Mr. Kelley, one of his own inspired men.

Reader, do you believe a man who does this is himself inspired? Has God given him a mouth and wisdom which cannot be gainsaid? But I leave the matter with you.

Yours for the truth,

C. W. SEWELL.

HALF FARE PERMITS—LOCAL MINISTERS.

1. One rule of the Western Passenger Association provides that pastors of local churches, having no other occupation than farming, are entitled to half fare permits. This rule may not apply to any other class of ministers, hence others should make necessary explanations, or apply under other rules. See application blanks, which may be obtained from local agents, or from B. D. Caldwell, Chairman, Chicago, Illinois.

2. All but General Conference appointees have been referred to general missionaries in charge for indorsement, for obvious reasons. This system is regular and a protection to the interests of all concerned. Applicants should fill out blanks and forward to the Chairman, who has a list of general missionaries in charge, and will correspond with them. However, where applicants are well known and manifestly within the rules, local indorsement may be sufficient and reference to the missionary in charge unnecessary. (See rules.)

3. As many wish information, it is necessary to state that rules governing issuance of permits are strict and will not be departed from by the Association; hence it is impossible for any but those who can comply with them to obtain permits. The blank forms contain detailed information for all classes of ministers.

4. Ministers in territory of the Central Passenger Committee—east of Chicago, St. Louis, Peoria, and west of Buffalo, Pittsburg and Wheeling—should apply to F. C. Donald, Commissioner, Monadnock Building, Chicago.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendices—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will aborn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

HOW ALCOHOLISM BREEDS DEATH.

INTERESTING RESULTS OF THE STUDY OF THE DISEASE BY THE CHIEF OF A SWISS ASYLUM.

NEW YORK Journal: First generation—Alcoholic excesses, moral degeneracy, brutalization.

Second generation—Hereditary habitual drunkenness, attacks of mania, softening of the brain.

Third generation—Hypochondria, melancholia, suicide, homicide.

Fourth generation—Imbecility, idiocy, sterility, and the extinction of the species.

Thus, step by step, has Dr. Legrain, physician-in-chief of the asylum of Ville-Evrard, traced the fatal law of heredity in alcoholism. At the recent meeting of the Congress of Criminal Anthropology at Geneva, Switzerland, he gave the results of his investigations, which have extended over a long period of years, and showed how this disease, like any other bodily defect, is transmitted from drunken father to appetite-enraptured son; how in such degenerate soil the seeds of crime and madness develop, and ripen in the last generation into sterile idiocy and the final extinction of the race.

"I, myself," said Dr. Legrain, "have traced the course of four generations of drinkers in 215 families with these results:—

"In the first generation 168 families showed unmistakable symptoms of degeneracy. I found 63 cases of mild insanity, 88 who were mentally unsound, and 45 who were at times dangerously insane. Moreover, a great many of the children were weaklings and died at an early age, 6 out of 8 in one case and 10 out of 16 in another, these 6 latter who remained, by the way, being mentally unsound or feeble-minded, epileptics, or a prey to evil instincts.

"In 39 families I noted convulsions in a large number of cases, epilepsy in 52, hysteria in 16, and meningitis in 5; 108 families out of 215, almost exactly one out of two, counted among their members victims of periodical alcoholic delirium. Finally I found the extraordinary number of 106 families in which marked insanity had developed.

"In the second generation 98 observations gave me the following results: Fifty-four families had one or more members who were imbeciles or idiots; in 23 there were those who were morally irresponsible. Untimely births, extraordinary mortality, and hereditary diseases cause the children to die in appalling numbers. At this stage the fathers and mothers had become common drunkards, with but eight exceptions from the strict significance of that term. In 42 families I found chronic cases of convulsions and epilepsy in 40. Insanity to a very marked degree exists in 23 families at present. In the other 31 the children who remain are yet too young for me to state accurately regarding their future.

"In the third generation 7 observations gave me a total of 17 children. All of them are stunted mentally and physically, 2 are already insane, 4 are subject to convulsions, 2 to epilepsy, 2 to hysteria, 1 is afflicted with meningitis, and 3 with scrofula.

"Summing up the 814 cases I have cited, comprised in these 215 families, I have found that 42.2 per cent have become alcoholics, 60.9 per cent are degenerates, 13.9 per cent are morally irresponsible, 22.7 per cent have had convulsions, one-third have become subject to hysteria or epilepsy, and 19 per cent are incurably insane.

"In addition to these, 174 have disappeared from this world before, or almost before, having drawn their first breath. To these I might add 93 cases of tuberculosis or of other wasting and incurable illness, which brings the total of those who have died from hereditary alcoholism up to almost one-third."

Even more interesting than the study of a number of families en masse is the selection of a single individual from each generation, and marking the growth of mental and physical degeneracy in the direct descent from father to son through the four generations. There is no fifth, for the last of the line is a microcephalous idiot, with a brain so small and weak that that of a chimpanzee would be imposing beside it.

INSPIRATION OF AN AUDIENCE.
 ORATORS GREATLY HELPED WHEN THEIR HEARERS ARE IN SYMPATHY WITH THEM.

ONE of the peculiarities of the oratorical temperament is that it is subject to what our grandmothers called "vapors," or depression of spirit. In such a mood a molehill seems a mountain, and a grasshopper is a burden. Mental effort is impossible, and an engagement to speak in public as repugnant as is the sound of a dinner gong to a seasick passenger. The only cure for such an attack of spleen is to get, by hook or crook, the orator before the audience, where the excitement will put him mentally and physically on his feet.

In 1859 Thomas Corwin, Ohio's most eloquent orator, had consented to deliver the oration at the celebration of the Fourth of July on the Tippecanoe battle grounds. The night before the celebration Mr. Corwin called his son-in-law, Mr. Sage, to his room and told him that he had been unable to sleep and was much discouraged about his address the next day. He had tried to think over his speech, but his memory had failed him and he was afraid he would make a failure. His son-in-law advised him to dismiss the speech from his mind and go to sleep.

The next morning Mr. Corwin felt so indisposed that he announced his inability to speak. The marshal of the day finally persuaded him to ride out to the grounds and take a seat on the platform, where he might explain to the people why he was unable to deliver the oration, and thus lessen their disappointment.

At the proper time Mr. Corwin rose to make his apology; but as he looked over the audience of forty thousand persons, that "sea of upturned faces" stirred both body and brain. He made a few commonplace remarks, and then struck upon the first sentence of the manuscript he had prepared.

"It is all right; he will speak," whispered Mr. Sage to the president of the day.

It was all right; the orator went on and spoke for two hours. The manuscript he had prepared was the introduction of the speech—a page and a half of legal cap—which Mr. Sage had read the day before. The audience made the sick man well and an orator again.—Youth's Companion.

AN EXTRACT AND COMMENTS.

A SISTER writing from Independence, Missouri, sends some extracts from a discourse by Rev. L. M. Walters, of Christ Church, Kansas City, Missouri. She prefaces the letter pleasantly and winds up with a cheerful testimony, worthy to be repeated:—

January 4, 1897.

Snow drifting considerably and a cold wind blowing continually, in fact old winter sniffing the icy air with delight intrudes upon our foolish expectancy; and of course we must "hail" his royal presence whether we would or not.

To tell it plainly the wind blew away our morning Journal, hence this trouble to copy a few lines from a neighbor's; and now see what the religious world is coming to, or rather how the minds of men are being prepared to receive the truth if they would.

"I protest again and most solemnly against that spirit of Christianity which denies the right of the most earnest and searching investigation of things spiritual. There is a skepticism in the church to day that insists on the literal interpretation of life and the universe.

"It shuts up all the windows of the soul against the light that shines out and down upon us from heaven through the Word, and through the exercise of faith. It scoffs at the mystic (?) who says he has gone into the closet and communed with his Father, God. It ridicules the faith and joy that makes brilliant the eye, bright the countenance, vigorous the whole frame of the enthusiast (?) who has heard the angel voice announcing that his prayer is heard and his soul is accepted at the throne of God. It denies the right to believe that the Spirit of God bears testimony with man's spirit that he is a child of heaven.

"Let us be conservative and not condemn simply from a name. Let us understand the efforts of God to reveal himself, recognize truth coming from whatsoever source it may. The teacher of public morals and religious truths should be governed by two principles in all his ministrations. He should have exact knowledge of the things he does promulgate and he should be possessed of the largest spirit of toleration. The age in which we live requires this more than any previous time. Truths have been strained, doctrines have been perverted, and the world has been misguided while the masses are more and more awake to the question, 'What is truth?' Often in the history of the church, when evangelical piety seemed to be waning, almost lost, God has been secretly working and where it was least expected, to preserve his name and restore his power. . . .

"Many whom we think to be directly opposed to truth may hold half truths and be searching for the whole truth, and, properly guided, they may be brought into a clearer light than ever before revealed."—Rev. L. M. Walters, Christ's Church.

Alas! how near and yet how far!

In placing all these inspiring words in juxtaposition with the plain unvarnished truths of the gospel as revealed in latter as well as in former days and seeking an agreement between the two, the thought presents itself, how difficult, in the light, pure and undimmed, of heaven (undimmed by tradition and priestcraft) is the solution of this problem to the sectarian and the worldly, and how easy to the true Saint whose soul has been lighted up by the Spirit of God, and who has taken for his guide and stay the unperverted word of truth, as contained in the gospel.

What a glorious testimony, in the midst of all the skepticism, the perversity and the hypocrisy of the world, is this, "I know this work is true!" and the most cheering thought of all is that the good Lord has "reserved to himself" thousands of faithful witnesses in this our day, who bear this testimony.

Brother Joseph, at the beginning of this, the new year, how much we have to be thankful for! This mortal life and health are nothing compared with "the hope and comfort and consolation," the gift and blessing of the Holy Spirit; and these will attend his saints both here and beyond this vale of tears. May our Father in heaven comfort and strengthen you in all your losses—

"There are gains for all our losses,

There are *balm*s for all our woes"— and bring us all together again, those the loved ones who are gone and all his saints to praise him in songs of joy.

Your sister in the faith,

ABBIE A. HORTON.

FOR RIGHT AGAIN.

AT a late birthday celebration at Hawarden, Mr. Gladstone said, concerning the unspeakable Turk: "While up to the present the career of the Sultan, who is the greatest assassin in the world, has been triumphant, all these triumphs of wickedness and iniquity are doomed. I have a strong idea, however, that the iniquities have not yet reached their close. Nevertheless, a better day is in prospect for the Armenians, as the weight of disgrace now upon the shoulders of the six powers is so great as to force them to action." Mr. Gladstone is a prophet of both moral and political freedom, in behalf of which he has spoken out fearlessly and wielded a strong influence. Though bearing the weight of many years, he yet lives to denounce oppression, in the denunciation of which he becomes eloquent and commands attention and the admiration of those who love the cause of humanity. Notwithstanding his advanced age he may live to see many of his hopes realized in a larger freedom where now there is cruel oppression. Events are rapidly being transformed and culminating in this dispensation of political and social commotion and change. Mr. Gladstone has done much directly for the uplifting of mankind and should he pass away before all he has hoped to see is realized, may be gratified in knowing that the educational influences of his personal career have been and will continue to be great for good. In his case it may be said that the good deeds that men do live after them and cannot be interred with their mortal remains.

It is in the providences of God that great men have been and are placed in positions of influence for good—men the chief quality of whose greatness has been and is their goodness and largeness of heart. They are, we doubt not, among the called, the chosen, and faithful in their spheres of action. "Men who their duties know, and knowing, dare maintain."

The political and social reforms championed and successfully maintained by such master spirits should encourage every lover of truth to continue steadfast in his adherence to principle. What has been done and in the face of strong compacted opposition, both of selfishness and tradition, should inspire every reformer to be faithful to duty in his sphere of action. It is written both in the divine word and in the acts that have transpired in our own times, that wrong cannot prevail and must go down before the spirit of reform and progress. And that spirit is an impelling force having in view the application of true principles to all phases of man's life and being, politically, religiously, morally, and socially. It is a glorious culminating period in the history of mankind, and one that will test the integrity of every man; an advanced revolutionary period in which principles are to be tested, and truth and merit recognized as the only correct bases of civilization and permanency. Those who are intelligently preparing to be classed as "counted worthy to stand" among the things that "cannot be moved," are constantly applying the test of truth to their general principles, and thoughts, and actions. To take an intelligent comprehensive view of individual life and action is to find satisfaction and vindication; to decline or fail so to do is to suffer loss and disappointment. All truth is one, and its application to any one phase of life but naturally suggests the turning of its light upon all other conditions, that men find themselves governed by proper standards and walking "in the light" in all that pertains to life here and hereafter.

Every true man is a reformer, first of himself, which self-reform is constant and qualifies him to lend his influence in behalf of the general forward movement. The application of the principles of self-control, self-abnegation, and other principles lived and taught by Jesus the Christ, is necessary. The principles he taught are scientific principles and must be adopted in practice by any man who would enter into life in its true sense. Jesus Christ was the interpreter of truth and humanity, and the teacher and example of a perfect life. All modern progress has been secured to us by the recognition of some principles which he has taught us. The world will become what God designs it to be only by a complete application of all principles of truth. "Zion cannot be built up except it be by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself"—the word of God to the church through the latter-day seer—is a statement of this truth in essence, which commends itself to the thoughtful, truth-loving men and women in and out of the church who have been designated "the honest in heart," and who discern in every principle of progress and in every voice raised by loyal men against oppression, the influences of good at work in behalf of a redeemed humanity; and are confirmed and strengthened in the truth as they discern the hand of God at work to vindicate truth and to redeem the world.

To those who "are spiritual" the providences of God are plain, and they are blessed with largeness of heart and broadness of mind as by faith they are thus "renewed in knowledge." The heritage of God's children is as of old an abundant one to those who are "rich in faith" and faithful "in obedience" to principle.

We join in sympathy with Mr. Gladstone and with every man who challenges the cause of right, in whatever land. Their example serves to renew our courage and to increase our steadfastness.

QUEER CONDITION.

A UNIQUE condition of affairs exists in Lane County, Kansas, the board of county commissioners having declared the county insolvent. The credit of the county has been good hitherto but because of a failure of many of the taxpayers, local and nonresident to pay their taxes, the county is unable to meet its indebtedness, and interest on its bonds. Quoting from the text of a dispatch in Kansas City Journal for December 29:—

Edward Helvie, chairman of the board of commissioners, made the following explanations of their action: "We have stopped payment of interest upon our bonded debt for the simple reason that Lane County is insolvent. We cannot raise enough money by taxation to meet our interest, and that is the whole story. Of course, we took this course with great reluctance, because this county has heretofore, among all the counties of Western Kansas, maintained its credit at the highest. Our home people are not repudiators. They pay their taxes promptly, but not so the nonresident property owners. For instance, the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Company owns ninety quarter sections of land in the county, upon which they have not paid a cent of taxes for nearly three years. Other loan companies and Eastern individuals are delinquent the same way. The county has bought in land at tax sales until it can buy no longer.

"If the bondholders want to complain they must lay the blame at the doors of their neighbors in the East, who own land here, collect rentals upon it and refuse to pay taxes. Our home people would cheerfully do their share, but they cannot carry the whole burden, and so we have reached the end."

The bonded indebtedness of the county is $125,000. $109,000 of this is in bonds issued in behalf of the Santa Fe road through the county.

It will be seen from what Chairman Helvie states that the county has bought in the land left to go to sale for taxes until it can no longer buy; and of course has all this bought in land for sale. Why does no one buy? Is it for political or financial reasons? It would look like the latter. For, if the land was really valuable for occupation then the county owning the land could find ready sale at the prices necessary, and thus fill up the lands made vacant by the failure of Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage, and other companies engaged in loaning money on western lands to pay up their portion of the taxes. It is apparently what might take place if the general government should assume similar functions of re-taking lands from real or supposed occupants, in the way advocated by some.

BRO. W. H. KELLEY, writing from Temple, Ohio, sends a cheery letter dated January 1. He reports that the spirit of matrimony prevailed to an extent among them, Bro. Brockway and Sr. Biggs, Sr. S. Gillespie and Mr. R. Newton, having gone over to the ranks of the married. The mission work in his field was moving along, Brn. Smith and Moler making their efforts felt in the Philadelphia district, Bro. Smith quite successful. In Maine all going nicely, with an exception. Bro. F. M. Sheehy had done a good work for a season about Scranton, Pennsylvania, East Pharsalia and Coshocton; had been having a sort of running fight with the Brigamites, "the end not yet."

Bro. Kelley also writes:—

It is well to know all of the friends we have, so I present the name of Judge Canfield, of Chardon. I met him in Court recently and he took special interest in following up our acquaintance. . . . His father entertained Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon and he remembers them very well, and has no prejudice against them, but has, it seems, always befriended our people and spoke very flatteringly of the work being done here now, as it comes to him. He seems to know the history of our people since they left here. Was counsel for Brigham Young when Ann Eliza put in for a divorce, and took the ground they were never married, etc.

We notice this report from Judge Canfield, with pleasure; as it is indeed a pleasant reflection that when men of honor who knew Joseph and Hyrum Smith back in the days a half century ago speak of them now, it is to speak well of them as men, without either indorsing or denouncing their religion. Only the religious bigots and overzealous and tyrannical churchmen, jealous of their creeds have the words of condemnation against them for their faith's sake.

DISTRESS OF NATIONS.

SOME idea of the distress that prevails in India may be had from the brief items that follow. It is said that murmurs of discontent are so widespread in India as to threaten a final uprising against British rule:—

BOMAY, Jan. 6.—The mill operatives and their families are quitting the city en masse, thus adding a quarter of a million unemployed to the country districts. It is now estimated that 325,000 persons have fled from the city as a result of the spread of the bubonic plague, scattering contagion in the villages up the country.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 7.—At a meeting of the council to-day Sir John Woodburn said the timely rains in November and December had saved India from the greatest calamity of the century, so widespread and severe was the drought. A large area sown with the assistance of the November rains had been greatly benefited by rains last week. In spite of this the situation was grave. Nearly 750,000 persons were already in receipt of relief, and the task of providing for these enormous numbers was gigantic. The government had given, and was giving unstinted help in men and money.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. MAY, Independence, Missouri, January 7:—

I am well pleased with the Church History. I have read it through and reread several portions of it. I consider it a grand work and well worth the money. It excels all other histories written of our church, as far as I have seen. I have three others besides this last one. I have been giving lectures on church history for the past five months at our Independence Zion's Religio, and I assure you that I appreciate the finding of many missing links and added information not found in any of the other church histories. I will advertise it all I can in the district. We have book agents in most all our branches who will take orders. We shall have one put in the Independence common school library and also one in Kansas City, Missouri, and one in Kansas City, Kansas, public libraries.

Bro. Joseph Carlson, Havelock, Iowa, January 7:—

The knowledge contained in Herald of late demands appreciation. May its usefulness never decrease. Rough roads render holding meetings in the country now unpleasant; shall endeavor to occupy when travel is better. Elder McDowell's late efforts in these parts have wrought much good. Some of the new converts affirm that God showed them the wrong and the right way. We hope God may assist us in giving others the opportunity to know him.

Elder R. C. Evans, of London, Ontario, writes:—

Have run through Church History; think it a gem; should be in every home. Ministers behind the times who do not read it.

Bro. Henry Sparling, Springfield, Missouri, January 14:—

Meetings still continue at this place with increased attendance and interest; baptized three and others to be baptized on Sunday.

Bro. G. T. Griffiths, Akron, Ohio, the 12th:—

All well here; preaching every night at Krumroy, to crowded house; one third of the people cannot get seats; some nights people come for miles around, and there are five other meetings going on at the same time.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. H. F. DURFEY, writing from Thurman, Iowa, reports himself doing what he can locally in the interests of church work. He has preached twenty sermons since the last conference of the Fremont district, including a series of lectures at McPaul, which gave the people a better understanding of and interest in our work. He is superintendent of a flourishing Sunday school, in which he notes the progress being made by the young. He regrets time lost in past years that should have been given to the study of the word, and admonishes the young not to neglect their opportunities.

Bro. R. A. Taggart, of Redfield, Kansas, suggests that an editorial item in HERALD of January 6, should state that Brn. Alfred White and E. W. Lloyd had labored with good effect in that region of country. The saints desired that Bro. I. N. White visit them and reply to a lecture delivered against the faith. They also desired a visit from Bro. F. C. Keck. Saints have the good will and sympathy of the people.

Sr. Maggie Moran reports a prosperous branch of thirty members at Hillman, Michigan, as a result of the labors of Brn. F. H. Brooks, J. Davis, F. M. Cooper, and others; aided, indirectly, by efforts of enemies who have sought to destroy the work.

Bro. James Moore, Elk Fork, West Virginia, writes that Bro. G. H. Godby was successful in defending the work in discussion with a minister of the Winebrennarian Church at that point. Bro. Moore and his family are contending for the faith.

Bro. D. W. Shirk wrote from Minatare, Nebraska, December 27, relating events that confirm him in the faith.

Bro. C. E. Hand, president of the Eastern Iowa district, sums up his efforts during the year, also the results of his labor, etc. He regrets that some who bear the name of saints are careless in their conduct, by which course others are discouraged or hindered. He wisely admonishes some that it is unbecoming the profession of a follower of Christ to use intoxicants, to attend the dance, or to indulge in card playing. The low standards of some who practice these evils hinder the cause and the good sought to be done by other and faithful saints. He hopes all will unite for the good of the work in that district and honor every principle of the law of God; also that local laborers will be energetic and prompt in doing what they can. Many of the saints have aided him, to whom he extends thanks.

Bro. J. C. Foss closed a series of meetings at Vinal Haven, Maine, January 4, a point where a branch flourished in the Martyr's day, and which, according to the statements of old inhabitants, richly enjoyed the gifts and graces of the gospel. One old sister yet remains firm in the faith taught in the days of the Seer, unmoved by efforts of Brighamite elders to induce her to follow the church in the salt land. Bro. Foss found the people favorable to the Reorganization. Local brethren had aided him materially in his labors.

It is stated that Greece, Roumania, and the Balkan states have decided to act with Russia on eastern political questions and that Austria is apprehensive of the outcome.

Bro. S. C. Good, of Chicago, forwards two dollars ($2.00) to the College fund, a good and timely contribution.

The Peoria Latter Day Saint Sunday school forwards through its secretary, Sr. Hester Young, ten dollars ($10) to Graceland College fund with copy of resolution of branch appropriating same. We hope to see the time when every young man and woman in the church will be interested in promoting the growth and maintaining the reputation of this institution of learning. It is not to be expected but that occasionally incidents may arise in the history of the school that are deplorable, but these will be readily condemned by the faculty and Directors as other classes, and it should be remembered that the rude incidents cannot be placed to the discredit of the College but to those who are not sufficiently manly and discreet to maintain proper decorum when not in the presence of a professor. And whatever may occur the friends of Graceland College can rest assured that it will be promptly rectified. Let us not then look upon the dark side altogether in the attempt to develop this institution of learning, but occasionally at the hopeful, and leave to the opposer the work of sowing doubt and discord, while we move forward in solid phalanx battling for this, as any and every other good work.

Presidents Joseph Smith and A. H. Smith left Lamoni on Friday the 15th for Independence, Missouri, and other points.

Bro. P. B. Seaton, of Puryear, Tennessee, writes under date of the 11th. Saints at Foundry Hill had provided material and finished their church at the close of the year, and it was now ready for dedication, when the missionary in charge could give it attention. They hoped that others of the ministry would also be present at the dedication. Bro. Seaton had kept up local appointments, preaching forty-one sermons, baptized some, and performed other duties.

Sr. Jennette Strauss, of Lamoni, will furnish back numbers of Zion's Ensign to any of the ministry who may desire to distribute them in their fields.

Sr. L. M. Hinkley, Cedar Grove, Carroll County, Tennessee, writes that Brighamite elders were operating in that region, and thinks the "true" Latter Day Saints could establish the work there. She asks prayer in her behalf, also that some one not having use for the HERALD after reading will send it to her.

Bro. J. W. Burget, of Cleveland, Ohio, wrote on the 6th inst. that he had spent two weeks in the city of Toledo in the interest of the work. Prospects fair; the few saints there energetic in trying to get the work before the people. He would revisit that point soon.

A number of important victories are credited to the Cubans in late dispatches. The Spaniards are said to have been several times defeated, near Havana. The Vatican is said to sympathize with Spain, in the interest of "peace and quietude."

The Spaniards report having killed 7,100 insurgents in the Phillipine Islands, to have arrested 2,170, of whom 400 were deported.

Bubonic plague at Bombay, India, January 14: 3,394 cases, 2,356 deaths.

Special attention is called to the notice of the Church Secretary, concerning half fare permits, in this issue; from which it will be seen that ministers engaged in any secular occupation or business whatever, including the selling of church or other publications, are not entitled to permits. For particulars see notice. Association officers have been repeatedly urged to early action on applications. They are crowded with business, but acting promptly as possible.

Russia is said to be greatly concerned over the arbitration treaty lately negotiated by the American and English Prime Ministers. She is said to fear that it may practically amount to an alliance offensive or defensive, in which event Great Britain might be given moral if not actual support of the United States in disputes growing out of the Eastern question. The treaty, as understood here, does not contemplate so wide a scope however, but simply the submission of differences arising between the two nations. The treaty finds both favor and opposition among United States senators.

Recently elected governors of several states have assumed office without unnecessary function, display, or other costly incidents usual to inaugural ceremonies; a saving to the people, an example of simplicity worthy of commendation, without respect to party. In this connection the recent example of an ex-Governor in donating half his salary to his home city, on taking the office of mayor, is also worthy of note. The times now as of old demand true men who love the people more than display and wealth.

Western Pennsylvania people were startled by two shocks of earthquake on the 12th inst. Shocks were felt at various towns, but no visible damage done.

The United States Senate has passed a bill to open to settlement all lands acquired from the Indians free of any payment beyond minor office fees, and to release from payment those who have heretofore settled on said lands. The number of acres involved is 33,252,541.

French Anarchists in large assembly protested against the torturing of Spanish Anarchists at Barcelona.

Dr. Grenier, member of the French Chamber of Deputies, is a rigid Mohammedan. He advocates free marriage, polygamy, and other features peculiar to his faith.

At a meeting of the College Board of Trustees held January 14, 1897, the following resolution was adopted. It is published in the interest of the institution and for the benefit of those who desire to secure for themselves eligible locations in the College plat. Funds are needed, and those disposed to invest have added inducements in lessened prices and growth of the institution:—

"Whereas the College incorporation holds a large number of lots in Graceland addition that it is desirable to sell in order to immediately aid the college; and

"Whereas, it is the wish of the Trustees to place these lots at such low and reasonable prices as will enable any and all parties wishing a home near the college to educate their children, to secure the same,

"Therefore, be it resolved that for the period of six months beginning February 1, 1897, all unsold lots in Graceland addition be reduced in price one third from the present established rates."

Original Poetry.

THE ANGEL MESSENGER.

BY J. S. STRAIN.

In latter days an angel came
The gospel fullness to proclaim,
To free men's souls from error's chain
And bring them to the truth again.

He came not to the halls of wealth,
Nor where the rich and mighty dwelt,
Nor to the men of earthly lore,
But brought his message to the poor.

Unto an humble boy he came,
Who had no wealth or earthly fame,
But one who sought from day to day
To find the straight and narrow way.

God did unto his prayer attend
And unto him the angel send
To show him where truth could be found
On golden plates beneath the ground.

"What can I do?" the young man cried,
"I am unlearned and young beside."
"I'll give thee wisdom," saith the Lord,
To bring to light my hidden word.

"No worldly wisdom can translate
What has been written on these plates,
But unto thee I give the key
That shall unlock the mystery.

"But men and devils shall combine
To thwart thee in this work of mine,
But fear them not, but faithful be,
And thou shalt my salvation see.

"Go on, translate it, page by page,
Heed not the wicked, let them rage;
So did they unto Christ thy Lord,
When he proclaimed his holy word.

"The long dark night of gloom is past,
The glorious truth has come at last,
The mystery's solved, men shall be free,
All hail the glorious jubilee!

"Go preach my gospel," saith the Lord,
"That all the earth may hear the word;
Then will I come to earth again
And ever with my people reign."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Ah, shepherds appointed to watch o'er the fold,
Is it true none are straying without in the cold?
Do none wander weary on bleak mountains bare,
Away from the sheepfold and your watchful care?

Have you left none to fight their hard battle alone?
Have you wandered in search of the bleeding and torn?
Persuaded, encouraged, and prayed them to come
To His sheltering arms, from the darkness and gloom?

TWO SHEEPFOLDS; THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

"I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine."—John 10: 14.

One fair Sabbath morning was still veiled in gloam,

When I slept, in fancy, within my own home.
Is that home dear to me? I have passed as a proof

Full twenty years 'neath its sheltering roof.
Half waking, I dreamily placed things aright
As they merged into view by the gray morning light,
And finding no article where it belonged
My thoughts into drowsy confusion were thronged.

New scenes in the place of the old ones were pressed
Till fully awakened and sorely distressed,
Great billows of sadness and homesickness swept O'er my soul, like torrents with flood gates unkept.

Sweet dewdrops afford not full moisture for flowers,
They oft need refreshing by copious showers;
Just so mental storms moral strength doth impart,
And grief's deep emotions do freshen the heart.

As daylight and sunlight dispelled the dark air,
So cheerfulness came with the brief morning prayer.

A few hours later, of wisdom in search,
I wended my way to the little brick church.
How strange that this edifice, lowly and quaint,
Should seem temple-like to a Latter Day Saint.

I entered, was seated, felt restfully thrilled;
Saw pews, aisles, and rostrum with worshippers filled.
The faces were new, but the friendliness old;
And this thought kept rising, "One shepherd, one fold."

A hymn was announced, The Good Shepherd its theme,
And 'mid the sweet singing, a tinkling 'twould seem,
Like silver-tongued sheep bells, by slender necks swayed,
Kept time; then the brother most fervently prayed,

"That God send his angels to guard his own flock
That feeds in the valley and climbs the steep rock."
The sweet second song with a theme like the first,
In ripples of melody over us burst.

Then when the announcements were made from the chair,
The speaker arose, and his shepherd-like air
Reminded me so of those Bethlehemites
Who tended their flocks upon Judea's heights.

His keen eyes, his gray hair, and full flowing beard,
Suggested those shepherds who trembled and feared

At sight of the angel, who stood at his post,
To herald the song of that heavenly host.
Now, thought I, his text will refer to the morn
When Jesus, the babe in the manger, was born.

But not so; from Matthew he hastened to read
Where Jesus told Peter His sheep he must feed.

"And," added the speaker, "I know what Christ means,
For I am familiar with sheep-tending scenes;

Good shepherds, I know, are kind, watchful, and bold,
They care for the tiniest lambs of the fold;
Give shelter, clean water, good, nutritious food,
And their sheep are never hard driven, but wooed."

Now, while thus the brother continued to talk,
Straight out through the chapel door I seemed to walk.
Directing my steps to the north and the east,
I soon reached the hillside. The preaching had ceased,
And the shepherd was coming, fast followed by sheep O'er whom he a watchcare did lovingly keep.

They gathered around him, the flock one and all,
Each trustfully waiting to answer his call.
They looked very restful, contented, and full,
With white, cleanly faces, and long, silky wool,
Sleek, well kept, and gentle, and not over driven,
They scampered away when permission was given,
To roam over pastures well watered and green,
The happiest creatures that ever were seen.

The whole scene, of which I obtained but a glance,
Was so grand, that naught could its beauty enhance.
The spacious inclosure! Its limits extend Till blue skies and green earth, in circle shape blend;
Abundance of fodder, grass, shelter, and shade,
A more perfect sheepfold could never be made.

Half wishing to enter, but missing the gate,
I turned my steps homeward resolving to wait.
But hearing a sound like the stamping of feet,
Loud shouts and coarse oaths, then a piteous bleat,
I paused; as about me quick glances I cast;
I saw in the distance a sorry contrast
To the first happy fold. How altered the scene!
A gaunt, crooked shepherd, with indigent mien,
Too shiftless to work, and too cruel to care,
Kept his herd in a pasture treeless and bare.
No broad streams of water, no gurgling rills;
The hungry sheep rambled o'er high, barren hills,
Or huddled together in pitiful plight,
With no signs of food or of shelter in sight.

No gamboling lambkins as yearly increase,
Just smutty-faced old sheep, with torn, dirty fleece,
Bleating for nourishment, quaking with fear,
They shambled away when the shepherd drew near.

Close followed by wolf pack, and harrassed by hound,
A more wretched sheepfold could never be found.
By pain-sharpened instinct the poor creatures drew

Away from the beasts and all passed out of view.
 Back towards the first sheepfold I ventured to look;
 There stood the good shepherd with mantle and crook,
 Still calling and petting his beautiful sheep,
 And they near his person delighted to keep.
 Some able assistants, kept, lest they should rove,
 The blithe little lambs in the midst of the drove.
 And as I approached them, none scampered nor stirred,
 So I stood and admired the whole beautiful herd.
 Just then I observed that a lamb of my own
 Who, under my care rather restless had grown,
 Was picked up and placed in the green pasture too,
 So quickly I followed as mother sheep do.
 Then out spoke the keeper with clear, ringing voice,
 "Between these two sheepfolds you must make your choice."
 While listening to hear him the sentence repeat,
 I found I was still at the church in my seat.
 The preacher was there still explaining his text.
 I could not arouse; felt confused and perplexed.
 The speaker still looked as I sat half asleep,
 Just like an old shepherd, the people like sheep.
 Collecting my scattered thoughts, rubbing my eyes,
 They turned to the timepiece, and to my surprise
 The hand o'er one space on the dial had passed,
 Since I inadvertently looked at it last.
 Five minutes had scarcely elapsed by the clock,
 Since his talk began about "feeding the flock."
 Now fully awakened, the spirit of peace
 Pervaded my soul; nor yet doth it cease.
 I would that God's children this blessing should share,
 Because it was given in answer to prayer.
 Oft asking the Father to lead and advise,
 I knew not as yet that the act had been wise
 To leave friends and home and with strangers abide.
 And now these two pictures are placed alongside,
 Could words make it plainer than thus I am shown,
 That Christ, the true Shepherd, is leading his own
 Lost, scattered sheep from the ends of the earth,
 To save them from pestilence, cruelty, dearth?
 Lest I, when he called me, though willing inclined,
 Prove heedless and wayward by lagging behind,
 He in his great mercy, my safety hath sought,

And into his fold hath my precious child brought;
 And I lured thereby, must now make choice between His flock, and the world's sheep, hungry and lean.
 His sheep know his voice and his call they will heed,
 Hence, they in due time, will all Zionward speed.
 He after inspecting the regions around,
 Hath chosen this place for a gathering ground.
 These broad fields and pastures are at his command,
 He'll feed his own flock with a bountiful hand!
 True Christians shall stand in these valleys by throngs;
 These hills shall reëcho their praises and songs;
 And thousands of saints shall rejoice in their souls,
 That God in his wisdom directs and controls.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. MARTHA RAMSEY, Ysleta, Texas, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union that God may be pleased to restore her son and only living child to health, who is sorely afflicted, and that he may live to hear and obey the gospel. His sufferings are great and if God does not relieve him soon he cannot live.

BIOGRAPHICAL TEACHINGS.

BY EMMA HOU GAS.

ALL men are by nature imitators. As our bodies are nourished by the meat we eat, so our souls are stimulated by the inspiration drawn from the lives of others. Imitation in man is hereditary. In the beginning man was near to God and could comprehend him better than man alone can now. The history of the Israelites establishes the fact that man must imitate. After they had lived in Egypt a short time they were without a leader, or some one to guide them and show them what to do. And what was the result? They must follow some one, and their own leader being gone they wandered away from God and followed after the idolatrous nations. They wandered so far from God that when he again sought to bring them to him they were unable to comprehend him and consequently the spiritual law which had been given them had to be taken from them and the law of carnal commandments given instead. They must be guided by some individual and individual laws given.

If we study and love the thoughts, deeds, and actions of some noble character we are raised to a higher plane of thought and action, and consequently nearer an appreciation of the good and beautiful, and in a better condition to know God and to receive him.

In fact, man was made in the likeness of God, and imbued with enough of the Spirit of the Divine to inspire him with a desire to be like God. In the endless treadmill of life man must climb or fall, and when he climbs he must have a mark as the height of his aspirations. Owen Feltham has said, "He that means to be a good limner will be sure to draw after the most excellent copies and guide every stroke of his pencil by the better pattern that lays before him; so he that desires that the table of his life may be fair will be careful to propose the best examples and will never be content till he equals or excels them."

In the beginning, God gave to man all that was good, noble, eloquent, and lovable, and it has been perpetuated in the recorded lives of the world's great men. George Wilson says when he reads the life of a great man he thinks about, and reads about, and dreams about it, and pictures it to himself in all possible ways, till the character of that man grows into a living being beside him, then he puts himself into that man's shoes and becomes, for the time, the man himself, and thinks and does as he did. And since man must have examples of good ever before him he must needs study man. Carlyle says, "Not only in the common speech of men, but in all art too—which is or should be the concentrated and conserved essence of what man can speak and show—Biography is the one thing needful."

In the language of Samuel Smiles, "Man is of all things in the world the most interesting to man." The joys and sorrows, sufferings and achievements, in fact all that relates to human life has attractions beyond all else. It is that interest in man that keeps up the circulation of so many periodicals, and binds people together in families, societies, churches, and nations. It is that peculiar interest that leads Mother Grundy to don her bonnet and start on her afternoon round. It is that love for and interest in mankind that inspires our missionaries to turn their backs on home and all that is near and dear to them and face the cold and bitter world. It is that interest in the welfare of nation and home that calls the politician to the halls of state,

The interest man takes in others as individuals is manifested in many ways. Portraits are painted, busts carved, monuments are raised, and anniversaries celebrated. Emerson says, "Man can paint, or make or think nothing but man." And Carlyle says, "Man's sociability of nature evinces itself in spite of all that can be said, by this one fact were there no other, the unspeakable delight he takes in biography." How great is the interest taken in this one branch of literature. All our novels are but fictitious biographies. We are pained to see so much time, effort, and talent spent on that which is fictitious and so little on the real, for the picture of a life well recorded, be it ever so humble, ought to excite an interest greatly beyond the imaginary. That which is quite commonplace may be invested with interest as the outcome of human life, but the lives of our good and great especially are useful beyond measure. The number of souls whose lives have been influenced by such persons, while perusing the pages fraught with the noble thoughts and deeds and actions of an illustrious example, have had their hearts inspired with a desire to ascend the heights of usefulness and honor will never be recorded. In reading of another's early life, how their actions took a decided course, of their likes and dislikes, their difficulties and obstacles met and how overcome we are strengthened in a determination to go on in the battle of life believing that what has been done can be done.

We notice in reading the biography of all our great men and illustrious women as well that they were all lovers of humanity in general and lovers of books as well. Among their books and usually their favorite ones are a few biographies. "Plutarch's Lives" was the one book of the early life of Benjamin Franklin, and was read and loved by him all his life. It was also the great favorite of such minds as Schiller, Napoleon, and Madame Roland. By it the heroic souls of Henry IX., of France, Turenne and Napiers were nurtured. "Plutarch's Lives" is a book that has interested man for nearly eighteen hundred years and attracts and rivets the attention of all classes to-day, and why is this? It is because it treats of great men who have occupied prominent places in the world's history, and also because he had the power to portray the individual character of his heroes. It is probable that no one book, the Bible excepted, has influenced and directed as many minds as Plutarch.

But the great book of biography is the Bible and it is as Samuel Smiles says, "The most sacred and impressive of all books, the educator of the young, the guide of manhood, and the consoler of old age. It is as he says, one "series of biographies of great heroes and patriarchs, prophets, kings, and judges all culminating in the greatest biography of all"—that of the life of Christ. None but the Christian heart can appreciate and realize how much devolves on a knowledge of the life and works of that one character.

It is in the study of Bible characters we get our spiritual strength, our wisdom, our nurture, and our admonition. It is in character study we get our history of both God and his people. It is in the study of character we learn meekness, patience, kindness, temperance, and godliness, each and all exemplified in the life of some individual. There our souls drink in the lifework of Jesus and the plan of salvation. We cannot establish the principles of the gospel without studying biography.

The great mission of biography is to show man at his best, and since we have decided that nowhere do we find characters so illustrious and worthy of imitation as in the Bible, and as the Bible is the text-book used in our Sunday school we deem it proper, practicable, and profitable that it be studied in our Sunday school.

To illustrate our point we will take the life of Moses. Now in our Sunday school lessons we began with his birth and lesson after lesson we added new circumstances and special features to his life study until now we have completed it in the lesson the Death of Moses. In our review each Sabbath there was a connecting link between that and the previous lesson and an especial effort made to impress the prominent features deeply until each pupil ought to be able to review his whole life. As an examination for the pupil and also to make a permanent impression we would ask the pupils to write as best they can the history of his life, fixing a set time at which the work must be finished being sure to give time enough for all who will apply themselves. This work need not be confined to the senior grade for the intermediate can do it as well, and even the infants will tell their little stories too. These papers may be read as circumstances dictate. There may be an extra session called for the reading of them, or one may be read at the close of each Sunday's work until all are read. One of our intermediate teachers invited her class to her home one afternoon and they read their stories there to each other and this together with a little supper prepared by the teacher served to treat the little ones to an afternoon of instruction as well as a pleasure. We know of no better way to impress moral lessons, truths, and principles on the child's mind than to associate them with some person. And as we are all character builders in our Sunday school taking children of all ages from the prattling, plastic child to him on whose brow blooms the "flower of old age," we think it one of the best methods of making our work a permanent success.

WE have asked, and now ask again, that our workers send short articles—just a few lines. Tell us how the work is progressing in your field; how many new schools you have organized; ask questions of interest anywhere along the line. While our long articles are full of merit, we do not feel that we conserve the best interests of the work in publishing them in full, so we trust that no offense will be taken if we simply make extracts according to space.

District superintendents, may we hear from you? Do you want a question box? If so will you help to fill it? If we have space for two hundred lines why not divide it between ten rather than have one person use it all? What think you? Let the nature of your responses show what you think.

We hail with gladness the Teachers' Institute as an added feature in our work.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE,

Baroda, Michigan.

Dear Sister:—The Sunday school work at the Woodbine reunion was the best that was ever done there, and the crowning feature of the afternoon exercises which had been set apart especially for the Sunday school work, was after Sister Devore had explained in a forty-minutes talk, the methods that had to be adopted for Sunday school work in the far-off islands where she had labored faithfully for such a long time. Immediately at the close of her graphically told experience, Brother Chatburn offered a resolution which was numerously seconded and unanimously carried by all of that vast audience of fifteen hundred persons raising to their feet. The resolution was as follows:—

"That a vote of thanks be tendered Sister Devore for her untiring, brave, self-sacrificing, affectionate devotion to the Sunday school work in that far-away land; and this is to express our love to her for her faithful duties and to all those to whom she administered the loving words of life."

MALAD CITY, Idaho, Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:—In a recent letter from R. J. Anthony published in your columns we noticed that Bro. Morgan Jones was credited with eighty-five dollars subscribed on the Malad chapel. It should have been seventy dollars. The debt was cancelled on the 24th inst., Bro. William Johns and others assisting us in gathering the subscriptions. The saints subscribed liberally according to their means and fulfilled their promises exactly, as also did the outsiders, almost everyone who was approached contributing a little, and not a promise broken.

The saints feel well over the result, especially as we have over thirty dollars extra to apply toward repairs, which the building is in need of. The donors on the subscription in order of amount subscribed are as follows: [Omitted.—EDS] The amount raised being $212.75, not including money for rent of house for school purposes.

We are making an effort to reach the young people here by means of a Religio. In the three or four sessions held the attendance has increased from about twelve to nearly sixty. We will meet to-night under unfavorable circumstances, however. Hoping still for Zion's weal, I am as ever,

S. D. CONDIT,

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 4.

Editors Herald:—While at Scranton, Pennsylvania, I learned of the existence of a branch of the Utah Church in Cohocton, Stuben County, New York, of some twenty members or more. I met Elder McFarland in Scranton, who is in charge at Cohocton. He had come on to attend a conference that was held in the suburb of Scranton. Elder S. W. Richards, from Brooklyn, was in charge. He is a man of over seventy years of age; has been in the church since a boy. Twelve years of his life have been spent away from home doing missionary work. He is a man of pleasing manners and well preserved for his years.

In conversation with him he took the ground that no unmarried person can be saved in celestial glory. They may, as Jesus said, become like the angels who neither marry nor are given in marriage, but can never go beyond that and get where the gods are. When I expressed my anxiety because I had a sister die who had never been married, he encouraged me by telling that it could be made all right if I was a member of their church, by going into one of the Temples in Utah and getting married for her by proxy. The following prerequisites are needed however; I must find out who the man is that would be acceptable to her, and also if he is now willing, then take my wife, or any female for that matter, to the temple, and be married by proxy for my sister.

I inquired, "How about the children?" seeing (as they teach) that glory depends somewhat upon the number of posterity we have. He said that all children not old enough to be responsible are of course saved, but that the mothers of these children, having lived and died in sin, are damned. This leaves a large percentage over there without mothers. These little ones are divided among such as my sister, who had none. So as the matter now stands I may yet be uncle to a number of little almond-eyed Chinese, Japs, or kinky little Congoites.

Much ado is made by these Utah men over the temples they have, and the wonderful work being done in them for the good of the race, such as endowments, baptism for the dead, marriage for eternity, marriage by proxy, sealings, etc.

I beg to be excused for irreverence, but looking at it from this distance and among hard-fisted Yankees, the revenue that comes from such a monopoly looks suspicious as a motive. Talk about "trusts," "syndicates," and "combines" in modern Babylon! They are not to be mentioned for they deal with material things in this world, but Utah's Zion takes in the world beyond. She has only one real competitor, and he only on a small scale; viz., the Roman Pontiff. I believe he still has control of purgatory notwithstanding the A. P. A. The modern Yankee has beaten the old world Italian even in the business of apostasy.

I asked Elder Richards what explanation he had for the doctrine of blood atonement as taught by his leaders. He said that at the time they made those speeches he was away on mission work. I asked if the church had ever taken any action to nullify such teachings. He did not know as it had. It seems to me the matter stands just where Brigham Young left it when he said: "The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle being in full force, but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force." Until the church in Utah takes action against such things they stand committed to them by their own record, and when opportunity offers will practice them when the obstacles—"wickedness and ignorance of the nations"—that now "forbid" are removed. I have not met one of them yet but what affirms a belief in polygamy, but say they are not sent out to teach it. Whether they teach it or not, I can't say; but this I can say, their new converts tell me they believe it and have stood in argument with me on the subject.

I want to say to the saints that for a handy little instrument to have on hand to meet this issue Bro. Etzenhouser's pamphlet, "The Books and Utah in Contrast" is the best I know of. It is a veritable little monitor.

When I learned of the branch of Utah Mormons at Cohocton I felt anxious to investigate and inquire into the causes of what to me appeared to be a sort of an anomaly in that part of the country. At a rural district four miles from town I found them. They are mostly farmers and confined chiefly to two families named Cooley and Campbell and those who have married into them. I had started for the home of Elder Cooley, but missed my way and brought up at the home of Mr. Hez. Campbell, whose wife gave me refreshment with a dinner and rest. I had walked four miles in a snowstorm to get there. From her I learned that the elder Campbell, her husband's father who lived near by, was not one with them as Brighamites; but she could not really tell me what he was, only that he was a Mormon, but not their kind. I made my way to his house and was pleased to find him what he called an "old Josephite." He had joined the church in 1837 and remained true to his early convictions, refused to follow the dictation of Brigham and associates. He is a relative of Bro. Fred Campbell, formerly near Independence, Missouri, who is well remembered for his manly qualities, but now gone to his rest.

With his aged wife and granddaughter Minnie, I made my home. I announced my mission as having come to present the true side of the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints. A meeting was given out for the following night, especially for the Mormons, as I did not feel to make any public attack on them until they had a fair chance to stand from under. The time came for the meeting, house prepared as well as my argument, but lo! "the best laid plans," etc. There were two came. One Elder Wilsey had been around during the day and told them not to come as I "was no different than a sectarian." I hardly expected such treatment from them, as I was so kindly disposed towards them and only asked to be heard. They make so great claim that people persecute them and will not hear them but missjudge them, I was not looking for them to give me the same dose they found fault with others for giving them. I afterwards charged this Wilsey with inconsistency and hypocrisy. He admitted he had so advised them, and appeared to be obtuse to the moral phase of the matter.

I obtained the use of the union church for Sunday evening. In the morning went to hear the regular pastor (Evangelical). He invited me to preach for him, which was acceded to. It had been noised around that I had come to expose Mormonism, which brought out many that might not otherwise have come. They heard a gospel discourse on "faith and repentance to this generation." The Brighamite element were conspicuous by their absence. I believe not one came. As the elders had succeeded in keeping their flock away from me, I went to their meeting Sunday afternoon held in a private house, thinking I might get a chance to reach them there. The meeting was closed without the chance; however, we had a kind of a wholesale "powwow," minus the pipe of peace, both men and women taking part. The answer to the charge of apostasy, with the evidence taken from their own books, was met with, "Josephite lie," "rot," etc. I was plainly told that "the Devil my father had sent me there." It was a bomb least expected when blood-atonement, Adam-God, idolatry, and the inconsistency of placing the Martyr before the world as a liar and hypocrite by having a revelation in his possession commanding polygamy as essential to celestial glory and the rejection of it to bring damnation, and at the same time publicly saying over his own signature that it was a "false and corrupt doctrine," and threatening one Hyrum Brown, of Michigan, with expulsion from the church for teaching it, were presented.

I have no doubt that blood-atonement is absolute now in Utah, for these young elders whom I met say they now hear it, although born and bred there. One of them said that if I could prove my case he would quit and go home.

The pressure brought to bear upon Elder McFarland was such that he agreed to send for the books I quoted from. If he don't I shall, for they must meet the issue. One family said that if my points turned out to be true they were done with Brighamism, for they joined what they supposed to be the truth as taught in the books. Their eyes are now being opened to the deception imposed upon them. I am hopeful that the leaven of truth will continue to work there until all who honestly want to serve God will see the true light and be saved from the meshes of that terrible apostasy.

No doubt some of the people think it is a "Josephite lie." It is hard for anyone to believe that any man would publicly teach such horrible things as Brigham and Grant have taught. Jesus said, "If the light which is in you become darkness, how great is that darkness?" And if the salt loses its savor it is good only to be cast out and trodden under foot of men; also, when the unclean spirit is allowed to go back into a man when once cleansed he takes seven other devils with him more wicked than himself, and the last state of that man is worse than the first, (Luke 11:24.) Brigham was once cleansed, but when he lost the Spirit of God by violating a commandment of God, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her shall deny the faith and shall not have the Spirit" (D. C. 42:7), he lost the Spirit. To be deprived of the Spirit means spiritual death. Not even an apostle can trifle with Christ's commands. The divinity of the command is shown by the transgression of these men.

An attempt was made to shut me out of the union church on the grounds of my belief that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. A meeting was called by a man who was one of the trustees and he addressed the people mainly upon the point that Joseph and Oliver received the Aaronic priesthood, which he claimed was done away, hence the claims of these men were false and unscriptural. At the conclusion of his speech the audience called for me to reply, which gave me a chance for defense, all we ever ask.

While there I preached several times, making two new openings, having good attendance. The people are learning that for a man to believe in the mission of Joseph Smith does not mean an indorsement of the Utah philosophy. These Utah elders have been around there for a year or more and are doing comparatively nothing as far as preaching is concerned. Places were opened for me there, all I could ask for. I learned from Elder Gill that they intend to send out two thousand more missionaries. If they do as those I have seen, it will be a long while before they will preach to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, unless peddling tracts can be called preaching. They are told by their leaders, I presume, that the Josephites are a broken-down set, fast dying out, to fulfill what Roberts calls Brigham's prophecy. He ought to give the full schedule of the "Lion's" prophecies—"The mouthpiece of God to all mankind." Doubtless when these young men serve out their two years' enlistment and return home they will have learned by experience that the Josephite movement is far from dying out.

I at first thought that this sending out such a large number of men would be a damage to us; that the people would get us confused. I find though if we follow them up it is a benefit, for it makes the lines more distinct between us. "All things" will "work together for good," likely.

We are well here in the "Hub." Church work in good condition with us. This week Boston has unusual attraction, besides a sensational murder trial. Sam Jones, Francis Murphy, and Moody are holding forth in different parts of the city; and so the world moves.

Yours hopefully,

F. M. SHEEHY.

GARDEN GROVE, Cal., Dec. 27.

Editors Herald.—I felt while reading Bro. Griffiths' letter, requesting the people of his mission to fast and pray on a certain day for the sick of the mission, that the keynote of advance had been sounded. Not only in his mission are many laying on beds of pain and in many ways suffering for the need, it seems, of the "healing Spirit," but such is true of all the missions. And I think a greater measure of the Spirit made manifest through all the gifts at our assemblies, would greatly aid and comfort.

And a glance from the spiritual to the financial is not encouraging. To me it is the most discouraging of all I now see; Temple Lot, Evanelia, and the like are matters that can be accounted for; but to see in this the hour of battle our force being reduced because we are not able to keep them at the front, is not so easy to explain. It is said that man's necessity is God's opportunity. It seems to me that his opportunity to aid the church has come, and that if he does not very soon aid in a more marked degree, the faith of many will be sorely tried, to say the least. The loss of the Evanelia, Temple Lot, shortage of funds causing the return of faithful ministers, with possibly a decrease in spiritual power, are all having their effect on the saints. The question may be asked, Can nothing more be done than we are now doing? If not, we are free; otherwise we are not.

Bro. Griffiths thought in his mission that there could be, and he did exactly what the history of six thousand years shows us the people of God have always done. As individuals when in straightened circumstances we pray, and why not as a church?

Of course, half-hearted praying will not do, and the way to make it whole-hearted praying with very many is to fast. I have never been much of an advocate of fasting, as some know, as most people fast. I cannot see any reason in supposing God more willing to grant favors when I am hungry than otherwise. I have been taught that suffering is not pleasing in his sight, and if we do not suffer, then what is the object? And if we do, I am just as much at sea. I can see how a fast might be profitable, to abstain from eating one or two meals a day at stated times and give the amount saved for the cause. The amount saved would amount to considerable and the sacrifice considerable more; but I would not be understood as saying that a fast without a donation would be of no avail; for as is our faith, so it largely is. Many have obtained great blessings by fasting in ways they thought proper.

I am convinced that if missionaries would take hold of and continue to sound this note, much good would result to the cause; but the head must direct, and as directions come so let us all act. For my part I would like to see something done to build up and help the cause we all so dearly love.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

DELOIT, Iowa, Jan. 5.

Editors Herald.—For nearly five years I have been trying to point mankind to "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." The blessed story of his triumph is always new. How thankful we ought to be for the restoration of the real gospel!

The closing weeks of '96 were spent in Cherokee County, Iowa, where I preached twenty-five times. Good interest at Silver Center, near Quimby, and some will ask for admission into the kingdom ere long. Prejudice is fleeing and truth is finding place in the hearts of many. The few saints in that county are awake to the interests of the church; not only in their conduct before their neighbors, but are observing the law of tithes and offerings also. On December 29, I received a telegram saying my mother was very sick. I found her in a critical condition, but thanks be to the good Lord, she is much better. Bro. J. T. Turner requests me to begin a series of meetings in the saints' church at this place, Thursday evening.

Elder C. E. Butterworth has been preaching here for a week or so, and his efforts were appreciated. I may be in the northern part of the district again in about three weeks.

C. J. HUNT.

BELMONT, Neb., Dec. 30.

Editors Herald.—I left home November 7, and arrived at Bro. Ed Weed's and held two meetings, then walked on west to the Rockford schoolhouse and held four services. Was assisted the last evening by Bro. Weed, then we moved on west, Bro. Weed taking me in his cart to the Pioneer schoolhouse, where we remained at Mr. Richardson's and held eight services in the schoolhouse. We were treated with the greatest kindness and respect, and great interest was manifest and some Book of Mormons were ordered. We then moved on west to the Pole Creek schoolhouse, close to the western boundary of Cherry County. We went to Mr. Joseph Fairhead's, trustee, to obtain the house. He received us kindly and entertained us while here. We held meetings Saturday evening and on Sunday morning and evening; then we made arrangements to hold meetings every other night for two weeks, as the interest was good.

On Monday we went on west to Bro. Haywood's, where we were truly made at home. Here we met Bro. J. Shepard, of the Elkhorn branch, and our meeting was a happy one. We held meeting in the schoolhouse that evening, and on November 24 baptized William Ewert in the Niobrara River. We then returned with some friends to Pole Creek and held service in the evening. I then parted with Bro. Weed, and it was with regret for I had been with him long enough to truly appreciate his friendship and love. May the good Master bless him and his. I returned with Bro. Shepard to Bro. Haywood's and continued the services, assisted by Bro. Shepard, until December 7.

The four places named above are new openings, and great interest is manifest. On the 8th the cash for my fare was placed in my hand by Bro. Haywood, and Bro. Ewert took me to the town of Gordon, where I took train for Hay Springs, where I arrived safe in the evening and was met by Bro. George Corbin, who took me in his wagon to the Alliance Hall, some four miles from town, where I had the pleasure of listening to a stirring discourse from Bro. D. M. Rudd. Would to God there were thousands of such men in the field working for the good Master. Here I rested a few nights, and truly had a feast, listening to Bro. Rudd set forth the truths of the great latter-day work, assisted by his chart of the dispensations. We prevailed in our request that he would turn east and work some in those new fields we had opened. May God bless his labors.

I remained in the Elkhorn branch until December 24; spoke four times in the Alliance hall, once in Bordeaux schoolhouse; and seven times in Phillips schoolhouse. Bro. Shepard brought me in his buggy to this place on Christmas, and I held service in the Evergreen schoolhouse on the 26th. Here I had to shake the parting hand with Bro. Shepard. How hard it is to part with those we learn to love! Have held service every night in the Evergreen to date and am now going to try for a house in the town of Belmont. J. S. LEE, The Hunter.

GRAYSVILLE, Ohio, Jan. 5.

Editors Herald:—Since arriving home, October 4, I have not been idle; was called to Centerville, West Virginia, in November, to assist in dedicating a new churchhouse. There I met Brn. D. L. Shinn and G. H. Godby, the latter for the first time. Together we held several meetings. Bro. Shinn left for Pennsylvania in a few days, and I returned home. Bro. Godby would still continue for a time.

I found letters from Sinking Spring and Middletown, Ohio, to go and help them. On Thanksgiving day I left for Highland County; held twelve services, and baptized three, all good material. I was loth to leave, for there was a splendid interest awakened, but advices from missionary in charge were to go to Middletown in Butler County, some thirty miles north of Cincinnati.

On December 11 Bro. P. Puckett took me in his cosy carriage to Hillsborough, where I took train for Middletown by way of Cincinnati. I found a number of warmhearted saints and began meetings in a nice hall which is wholly under the control of the branch. Held ten preaching services, assisted by Brn. Jones and Rhoads. The assemblies were usually small, but very attentive. I felt well in presenting our faith, and do not think it will prove a fruitless effort. There are a number of brethren there who are amply able to hold regular preaching services, and they proposed to undertake it and begin at once. They are noble men and God will bless them if they but move humbly forward. The editor of the Signal kindly permitted a number of articles from my pen to appear in his paper. Sister Edith Wren will be permitted to write articles bearing on the faith of the church, which will appear from time to time; so the editor told me. She is able to defend our claims, and will use the opportunity so kindly offered her.

Sr. Lula Jones and I drove over to Seven Mile to the cosy home of Bro. A. L. Yingling and family. They are strong in the faith and demonstrate their faith by their works. I enjoyed the visit and would be pleased to return some day and present the truth to the people of that community. My time was limited and I bade them good-bye on the 21st of December, and came to Byer's Station, remaining over night with Bro. J. L. Goodrich, and was met by Sr. Devore on the 22. We staid with Bro. Vinton Goodrich that night, and started to Marietta, Ohio, next morning, remaining over night with Bro. and Sr. Lon Shinn, formerly of Clarksburg, West Virginia. Next morning we moved on to Woodsfield, Monroe County, and were met at station by two of my brothers who conveyed us to their home, in sleighs.

This is the first time we have met them since returning from the "islands." Sister C. A. Lucas is the only remaining saint here of the Monroe branch. She is still in the faith.

Last Sunday night I preached in the district schoolhouse where I received what little education I have. The house was crowded; there were quite a number of my old schoolmates present, who listened attentively while I spoke at length on "What must I do to be saved?" They said the house was at my service, and wanted to hear more; so I promised them I would hold a series of meetings after our return from Belmont County. I trust that at least some of my relatives may obey. The people would be glad to see Bro. L. W. Powell again. I wish he could be here now.

Wife and I have not forgotten the saints in California and the unlooked for serenade given us the last night we staid at Bro. Smith's, in Santa Cruz. Let that band remember they are not forgotten; God bless them all. Our sojourn among them was made pleasant, and our experience at Woodbine was the same.

With a prayer for all,

L. R. DEVORE.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

ANOTHER year has been gathered into the garner, another milestone on our pathway we have swiftly passed. The record has been made up consisting of joys and sorrows, hopes and disappointments, sunshine and shadows; and with a firm conviction that from the experiences of the past we shall be the better prepared for the future, we turn with hopeful eyes to the dawning of the new year whose pages can only be read as they are turned by the unerring hand of time. Then let the creaking door of the old year go shut, with a prayer that a better one may open; for to us as saints the world's brightest years are to come, and to the grand culmination of which we are swiftly speeding.

We are living in an age of the ideal, when the whole church through divine illumination will make resplendent the name and glory of God among men and reveal to them the joys of immortality before the gates of death are opened to admit them to the everlasting kingdom of our God and his Christ.

We commenced a series of meetings here, continuing up to Christmas eve, when the children had an enjoyable time at the saints church, under the guiding hand of Superintendent George Thorburn. William J. Richards, the born singer, with his proficient choir, stirred the very depths of our soul with Christmas anthems, with Mrs. Allie Thorburn organist. The tree was beautifully adorned with presents for old and young. We noticed "Fate" Booker's lengthy form as he plucked the presents from the topmost boughs of the tall cedar. "Fate," like Uncle John Kinman, is five feet eighteen inches in his stocking feet. Ladders are useless to such men.

At such times, as a rule, there are always a few pessimists who are ever ready to cry, "Lord, they have killed thy prophets and digged down thine altars." We remember reading, "Master, we found one casting out devils in thy name and we forbade him because he was not a follower of us." The Master said, "Forbid him not; for he that is not against us is for us."

The Duke of Wellington once observed an officer in his army doing very effective work with a field gun. The Duke rode hastily to the spot and calmly said, "Captain, that was well aimed, and you are one of my greatest gunners. But that will do; those are our own men you are slaughtering."

A letter is handed us from Bro. Joseph Tanner, of Bevier, district president: "Come at once to assist me in debate with one W. G. Halley, of Holiness fame;" a man whom we had succeeded in making mad at one of our meetings a few weeks ago, by answering his silly questions. Selecting Bro. Tanner as his target he seeks revenge in debate. We are off to the battle.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:—Elder J. W. Wight has come and gone, coming to quarterly conference December 5 and 6, and remaining with us until the 9th inst., when he left for Moorhead. We were sorry to see him go. The result of his thirty-seven sermons, was the baptism of twelve, who desired their names enrolled in the book of life. Others are almost persuaded to enter the sheepfold. May God's Spirit so work upon them, that they will cry out, "Men and brethren, what must we do?"

Bro. Wight left many warm friends here, and a royal good feeling among the saints. To say that his sermons were grand does not do them justice—often sublime is better.

The Apostle Paul tells us, "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance;" all of which was fully realized during the late meeting held here, by "them that believe."

Come again, Bro. Wight, and "stay all winter" next time.

Fraternally,

GEO. M. SCOTT.

ENTERPRISE, Idaho, Dec. 23.

Editors Herald:—I started about the 1st of November and preached one week in each of the following places: Cold Spring Creek, Jacksonburg (eight miles east of Mountain Home), and Bruno. From the latter place I went to Little Valley and did some preaching, thence to Carrol Creek and stayed all night with William Evans, a man at war with all religion. His mother had been an invalid for fourteen years. Not being able to take a step they carried her as a child. In the morning as I had my team ready to start on my journey, the son came out and desired that I should come and see his mother before leaving. I did so and she wished me to pray for her, and I was never blessed more in my life, nor felt the power of the Spirit more than during that prayer. I went away in about ten minutes, left them all rejoicing, her praising God. I have been at this place eight days and am ready to start for Oregon again. I can truly say that I was never in all my travels treated as well as at this place. Any elders traveling through will meet with warm receptions and are kindly invited to stop.

Will you please remember poor unworthy me in your prayers that I may be kept humble so the Spirit may be my guide.

Yours in hope,

LEVI WILSON.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 14.

Editors Herald:—On New Years' day I had the pleasure of organizing a branch of seventeen members, at Ladd, Illinois; Bro. Frank Izatt presiding elder, C. Malcor deacon, Adam Fletcher treasurer, and Thomas Turner secretary. Mainly through the efforts of Bro. Fletcher, who is a leading man of the town, a union church has been built, which the saints have the use of, alternately with the Methodists; so that the little branch has a good start, and though considerable prejudice is manifest at present, we believe that will soon be overcome, if the saints will exercise wisdom and let their light shine. Notwithstanding the rain (and it did rain) on Sunday, the services were well attended and a good interest manifest.

In the morning I attended the Union Sunday school, and by invitation spoke to them on the lesson—the resurrection and second coming of Christ. In the afternoon I preached to the saints. There was a number of outsiders present. But in the evening to our surprise a large audience greeted us; the Presbyterians adjourning their meeting to join ours, their minister failing to appear. I had excellent liberty in presenting the word and the indications are favorable for a good work.

From Ladd I was called to Sandwich to preach David Rogers' (brother of I. L. Rogers) funeral sermon. The funeral was a large one, Mr. Rogers being an old and highly respected citizen. He was not a member of the church, though a believer, but like many others, deferred the one act of obedience till it was too late. But he was a friend to the church, also to the poor, therefore has gone home to his reward.

We have been trying to get our work established in the city of Aurora. We have about a dozen members there. Principally through the efforts of Bro. F. T. Haynes and Henry Atkins. We have held several successful meetings there. Those who come out to hear seem interested. An effort is now being made to obtain a permanent place for meetings. We hope the way may open soon for an organization of a branch. We believe a good work can be done there,

I have been out of the city most of the time of late, Bro. F. M. Cooper taking my place here. I have more calls than I can fill, but do the best I can. I think this has been the busiest year yet; but the Lord has blessed me with good health and I enjoy my work. I think the work in the city is in good condition. Our Young People's Society is growing nicely. The members are all alive.

I go to Millersburg next week by request to aid in a series of meetings there, and remain in Kewanee district till after conference, which convenes at Kewanee, February 6.

Yours in bonds,

COOKS POINT, Texas, Dec. 16.

Editors Herald:—On the 27th of July, in company with Elder Benjamin Goodman and wife, and Scott Perkins, I set out for Elkhart, Texas; my companions for Limestone County, they to visit relatives; I to preach the gospel. After five days' travel by team our wagon broke down near Winona. Here I bade adieu to my friends and boarded Nahum's chariot, reaching Elkhart that evening, July 31. I was met at the station by our worthy brother and elder, James W. Bryan, who kindly took charge of me till the 2d of August, when Bro. George Hughes conveyed me by buggy to his place, Percilla. Bro. Tipton lives here and is our representative here, he being a priest in the church, doing what he can for the work. He has the respect of those out of and in the church.

A Methodist revival was in progress when I arrived at this place, at the conclusion of which I preached four times without much effect. Here I was prostrated with fever the most of the month, my comfort being kindly looked after by Sr. Hughes and Bro. J. C. Tipton. I also preached at a place called Enon, in which some good was effected I think. Bro. Bryan is our only preacher in all this region of country. He is laboring faithfully. The 10th of September found me in the city of San Antonio. After preaching here a week I went to Kerville, by wagon, with our missionary, L. L. Wight, a distance of seventy-five miles to attend a debate between Elder H. P. Curtis and J. A. McArty, of the Christian Church. I acted as moderator for H. P. We had a good time here and felt quite proud of our young champion. He defended the claims of the church in a masterly manner. I wish we had many more such men as H. P. Curtis.

After the debate I returned to San Antonio, where I labored till October 8. The 10th found me at Pipe Creek. After laboring here a week I went to Medina City, where I held a few meetings with Elder Wight, returning to Pipe Creek on the 23d when the district conference convened, which passed off pleasantly, and the 29th found me again in San Antonio; when on the 9th of November in connection with the district president, I organized the San Antonio branch. H. P. Curtis is pastor of the branch, N. C. Powell teacher, H. Hutson clerk. On the 1st of present month I came to Hearne, Texas. Here I labored for one week, which resulted in four additions to the church. Bro. Sam Hay is in charge here.

On the 13th I reached this point, where I am at the present. This is the home of Bro. Emery W. Nunley. We are holding a week's meeting here with fair attendance and good liberty. Bro. Nunley is partially disabled by a fall from a wagon a short time ago. He may have broken a rib, but his condition is not serious. I feel encouraged, but we need more help in this great State. Better provisions must be made for Texas, it seems to me. Pray the Lord of the harvest to send more laborers into the field.

At work,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

FULTON, Iowa, Dec. 23.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Savanna, Illinois, where I was busily engaged in gospel work for over one month. After two weeks' labor there my wife came over from Fulton, at the earnest solicitation of the saints, and helped me a great deal, especially in fireside preaching and in ways too numerous to mention.

Bro. L. E. Hills, of Marion, Iowa, preceded me at Savanna and had appointments out, and had preached once. This brother is doing nobly in the cause, and is received well by all. During my stay four were baptized, and many friends made to the cause. Some promised to be baptized in the spring, should I return, or any of the elders go there. The zeal of God's children at that place must certainly win souls to Christ; for like Paul's testimony of the Romans, I can say that their zeal is spoken of for miles distant. Those who were baptized are excellent people, all heads of families. The congregations were very good, and attentive throughout.

I believe there will yet be a branch of the church at Savanna.

This (Fulton) branch will celebrate Christmas by having a Christmas tree.

I expect to go into the northwestern part of this district before New Year's day. I feel much encouraged in the work.

Yours in hope,

J. R. SUTTON.

DAVIS CITY, Iowa, Dec. 25.

Editors Herald:—Leaving home on the 11th and meeting Bro. Jones at Davis City on the train for Chariton, Mr. Ream met us there with team and took us out south about seven miles. We held six meetings with fair liberty; some interested in the gospel. One lady said she was with us in principles, but not in the church yet. They said they would purchase the Inspired Translation and Book of Mormon soon.

We left them for Lucas on Friday, the 18th. On arrival at Lucas Bro. C. H. Jones was requested to baptize four precious souls into the kingdom of God. Bro. Jones preached at night and assisted in confirming them.

Bro. David Daniels requested us to go north about eight miles, also sent appointment that we would be at the Curtis school-house. We met a good crowd there. There are some good people up there; some are investigating and some say they have no fault to find with our doctrine, although they say they don't see the necessity of being baptized again. They don't understand the authority of the church that God has again called man in these last days.

I left Bro. Jones at Lucas, Iowa. He is a good worker for the Lord. He preaches in the pulpit and by private talk. He will go back to-morrow to hold meetings a few days. I think some will join the church there before long. Mr. Crooks treated us well, for which I feel to thank him, also others, for their hospitality and the kindness of the noble saints and friends. My prayer is that they may comprehend the glorious gospel of these latter days.

Yours in bonds,

NEPHI LOVELL.

Original Articles.

THE RIVER SIDON. WHERE IS IT?— NO. I.

EDITORS SAINTS' HERALD:—In answer to the question in a recent Herald article, "The River Sidon, where is it?" I will here present such evidences which apparently are extant, whereby the river can be located; but in order to locate said river beyond a doubt I shall have to locate some of the principal cities of the Nephite account that were near to it, by their remains still extant, as also of a "strip of wilderness" land, etc.

The committee on archæology has evidently located on the wrong part of America to find a river that will answer to the River Sidon. And if the committee will carefully consider the following accounts of ruins of ancient cities and fortifications in Central America, in the vicinity of the Usumasinta River, and Honduras, and Mexico and also the meaning of symbols and representative figures on the Gemelli chart, I believe it will be convinced that they have made a wrong location for the River Sidon, in South America.

I will first refer to the ruins and their location of an ancient fortified city in Honduras, which reads:—

At Tenampua, . . . twenty miles southeast of Comayagua, near Flores, is a hill of white stratified sandstone, whose sides rise precipitously to the height of sixteen hundred feet above the level of the surrounding plains. The summit forms a level plateau one half a mile wide and one mile and a half long from east to west. On the eastern half chiefly, but also spreading over the whole surface of this lofty plateau, is the most extensive group of ancient works in the whole region. . . . In the center of the eastern half of the plain and consequently in the midst of the principal ruins, is what may be regarded as the chief structure of the group, commanding a view of all the rest. (This group of ruins and their location to each other are shown in the fourth volume of Native Races of the Pacific States, pp. 73, 74.)

As to the original purposes to which the structures of Tenampua were devoted, speculation points with much plausibility to religious ceremonies and temples in the case of the enclosures and larger pyramids; . . . while the strong natural position of the works on a plateau with high, precipitous, and at nearly every point inaccessible sides, indicates that defense was an important consideration with the builders. The supposed reservoirs favor this theory, which is rendered a certainty by the fortifications which protect the approach to the plateau at the only accessible points, on three narrow ridges. . . . These fortifications are walls of rough stone from six to fifteen feet high and ten to twenty feet thick at the base, according to the weakness or strength of the location. Gullies on the slopes which might afford a cover for approaching foes are carefully filled with stones, and the walls themselves, which also have traces of towers at intervals, while presenting a perpendicular exterior are, terraced on the inside for the convenience of the defenders.—Ibid. p. 76.

This brief account of the ruins of an ancient fortified city in Honduras, its high location and supposed purpose by the learned writers show that it had been at a remote period the capital or religious center of the aboriginals of that part of Central America. And according to its location as shown on the map of Mr. H. H. Bancroft in his fourth volume; and the location of the beehive figure at 80 on the Gemelli chart the two locations are identical in a geographical sense, for each location shows to be southeastward from the boundary line between Honduras and Guatemala, and about midway between the east and west seas, the Atlantic and Pacific. It is seen that the beehive figure on the chart, that it is located on the end of the line leading from a curve figure at 54, called Culhucan by the writers; they have applied this location, however, to a city by that name in Mexico which is an error, for it represents South America, south of the equator. It will be seen therefore, by the line of travel from Culhucan to the Beehive, that the people which first located in Honduras traveled from South America, and the number of tribes which made the journey is shown at 53. And to show this to be correct I will refer you also to the curved figure at 4; and also to the conical figure in the large square, which shows its location to be northwest from the curved figure at 4. In a geographical sense, therefore, it represents Central America from the boundary line of Guatemala to the Isthmus of Panama, the north part of South America to the isthmus not shown on the chart. At the southeast part of the neck or isthmus is located a female and at the northwest part is a male which looks across the land to the female, with the signification, this is our country! The group of five chiefs at 7 represent the same company as at 53, the female and male located on the conical figure being significant of the whole, the Beehive figure representing the location of their capital city in that country, who had traveled from Culhucan, South America.

I will now refer to the Nephite account of the journey which Nephi and his people made, when they left a part of the original company from Jerusalem in the land in which they first located, and settled in a country that was "nearly surrounded by water," which they "called the land of Nephi." For the account of the journey and name which they called their second location in America see 2 Nephi 4: 2-5; and for the nature of its location being nearly surrounded by water, see Alma 13: 11; and that their capital city was fortified, see Jarom 1: 4; Mosiah 5: 2; 6: 2; 10: 2, which show that the city of Nephi was on a high location, and also that it was fortified.

Again, in regard to the land of Nephi being nearly surrounded by water, look at the showing of the space within the large square, northeast and southwest of the conical figure if that country is not represented as nearly surrounded by water as shown on the chart answering to the location of the land of Nephi.

And again, do not the five chiefs at 7 represent the same number that formed the company of Nephi which settled in Nephi? And furthermore the symbols as attached to the head of the first chief show that he had traveled from a south country, and also that he had traveled on water to that south country, from an eastern country, by way of the south, and landed from the western waters, or sea. Such significant symbols answer in every particular to the history of Nephi, from Jerusalem to "the promised land," to his father Lehi. The land of Lehi being that part south of the equator, it being called "The land south," in Helaman 2:27. And according to tradition of the Colhuas, of Mexico, it was "the land of their fathers." It is apparent that the word Colhucan and Colhua is from Lehi and Nahua from Nephi, and "means son," which would be in harmony with the Nephite account of Nephi being the son of Lehi.

And as the abridged history does not state what course of travel Nephi took when he left his brethren and traveled many days in the wilderness, it is difficult to trace the route he took and the place where he located; hence we have to be governed more or less by Alma's account of the place where he located. Now a place merely surrounded by water infers that it is surrounded more by water than by other lands, which is not the case with the place the committee has located on for the land of Nephi in South America. Jacob, the brother of Nephi, states, or calls the land an "island," which is more or less in harmony with Alma's account, and by the showing of the Gemelli chart, the conical figure within the square, almost any person would conclude that it represented an island. But by the location of the female at one end and the male at the other, show that it is not the case. It is evident, therefore, that the Gemelli chart gives the desired information of the location of the land of Nephi, as also the course of travel which Nephi took to it when he left his brethren in the land of Nephi.

I will now call your notice to the reports of the learned writers to the locations of the ruins of ancient cities and fortifications along on the northwest side of the boundary line between Honduras and Guatemala; and at the head of the Usumasinta River, which apparently are the ruins of the Nephite account of cities and of fortifications; the ruins of fortifications being the ruins of the forts which the Nephites built on the southeast and south borders of the land of Zarahemla, in order to protect themselves against the Lamanites, who at that time had possession of the land of Nephi, and the Nephites had united with Zarahemla and his people and formed themselves into one government, in the land of Zarahemla, the Nephites being the rulers of the land of Zarahemla, did as a natural result take the lead in defending the country against the invasion of the Lamanite nation. But before I refer, however, to the locations of those ruins I will first refer you to an important group of ruins of an ancient city, supposed to have been one of the great cities of the Votanic empire, called Tulha, and located in Chiapas, which reads:—

Some thirty-five or forty miles southward from Palenque, on another of the parallel streams which unite to form a branch of the Usumasinta, is another important group of ruins, which may be called Ococingo, from the name of a modern village, five or six miles distant towards the west. The same traditions that tell us of Votan's great Maya empire, and of Xibaiba, allude also somewhat vaguely to another great capital called Tulha. Juarros perhaps following Ordonez, applied this name to the ruins of Ococingo, and most authors have followed him in this respect. I need not say, however, that the only authority for this use of the name is the traditional existence in the shadowy past, of a Tulha in this region.—Native Races of the Pacific States, vol. 4, pp. 346, 347.

Dupaix describes them [the ruins] as located on the slope of a hill, on the sides of which are some stone steps, and as consisting of five structures. . . . Stephens also describes the ruins, or the principal ones at least, as located "on a high elevation." . . . Stephens also speaks of an open table, probably the former site of the city, protected on all sides by the terraced structures which overlook the country far around. There is also a high narrow causeway, partially artificial, extending from the ruins to a mountain range, and bearing on its summit a mound and the foundations of a building, or tower. Of these ruins Mr. Stephens says "there was no place we had seen which gave us such an idea of the vastness of the works erected by the aboriginal inhabitants."—Ibid. pp. 350, 352.

For the location of these ruins, look for the name Ococingo, on the Bancroft map in his fourth volume, then get the Gemelli chart and compare the location of the eagle at 31, with the location of the ruins. None will or can dispute but what Mr. Bancroft's map where the ruins are located, that the place does not represent the northwest part of Central America. Nor can any person after comparing the country called Yucatan

Guatemala, Chiapas, and Tabasco, with the lay and shape of the large figure where the eagle is located on the Gemelli chart, dispute that that country does not represent the same place as shown on the chart—northwest from the line between Honduras and Guatemala, to the isthmus of Tehuantepec; and farther, that such is the case compare the country as shown on the Bancroft map southeastward from said line to isthmus of Panama, with the figure at 28 on the chart. It is therefore seen, that the two figures just referred to on the chart represent the same country as the Bancroft map of Central America. The figure at 28 represents the same place as at 2. The conical figure within the square which is a representation of the then location of the eagle, the symbol of its chief in the land; but as the land appears at a later date, the people who first settled it left it as shown by the human skull on its summit, and located at 31. Its occurrence being shown at 5 and 6, which is also shown at 12 in the act of traveling. The journey or symbols of travel from the first part are shown at 21 and 26, and continues round about to an oblong space at 27, where three females are located. The first has the rabbit and cane attached to her head, which are the symbols of north and west in geography, which shows that the company of ten chiefs and their families traveled to the northwest, when they left the conical shape country, which is in perfect harmony with the lay of Chiapas from Honduras. Compare the two figures on the Gemelli chart at 28 and 31 with the lay of Chiapas to Honduras; the site of the two cities, however, being that of the eagle and skull.

The symbols of history when the journey of the ten tribes was made are shown at 68 and 56, it being between the seventh and eighth cycles, and which was made at a time when war was in the land, as shown by its symbols by the temple and on the line of travel at 17 and 26, which is in harmony with the date in history of Nephi, when he left Jerusalem, to the time when Mosaiah was commanded to leave the land of Nephi and travel into the wilderness, which is also shown on the chart at 59 and 60, as also represented by the bird at 5.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

HE FIXES THE SABBATH.

S. W. GAMBLE ELUCIDATES FOURTH COMMANDMENT FOR JEWS.

Saturday Idea Is Excluded and the Movable Nature of the Day Is Expounded—Dr. Emil G. Hirsch and Other Hebrew Scholars in Chicago Are Convinced of the Value of the Discovery—Rules are cited in Proof.

S. W. GAMBLE of the South Kansas Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church has announced the theological discovery that the Jewish Sabbath was not Saturday, but was a changeable day, and that "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy" never referred to Saturday.

It is difficult to estimate the importance of the discovery which is detailed below. When first presented to the great theologians they say "It is impossible," but when they give it careful attention they gladly and cheerfully indorse it.

The Christian Endeavor of Chicago, which has for one of its aims the "Rescue of the Sabbath," through its editor, Edward F. Cragin, who gives special attention to this department, learned of the discovery some months ago.

SENDS FOR MR. GAMBLE.

After careful investigation Mr. Cragin was satisfied that it was correct, but "to make assurance doubly sure," Mr. Gamble, the father of this discovery, was sent for to come to Chicago and present this new theory to the leading biblical scholars and theologians of this city. Mr. Gamble's experiences here were interesting, as he went from one theological seminary and from one Hebrew scholar to another.

It may not be generally known to the readers of the Tribune that Chicago is the greatest theological center in America, if not in the world. The Congregationalists have their largest theological seminary here, as have also the Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians. There are also theological seminaries of several other Protestant denominations, including German Lutheran, Evangelical Lutheran, Protestant Episcopal, besides Catholic and Hebrew schools.

Lack of time prevented Mr. Gamble's visiting all of them, but the following testimonials will show some of the results of his visit.

CONDENSED STATEMENT.

This is the condensed statement:—

"The Sabbath of the Jews, from the exodus until at least after the crucifixion, occurred on fixed dates—that is, on the fifteenth day of Abib, or Nisan, each year, because it commemorated their freedom from Egyptian slavery on that date. It occurred the same day of the week with the fifteenth day of Abib until the day of Pentecost. The week including Pentecost contained six workdays and two Sabbaths. The six workdays followed the day of Pentecost Sabbath, which would bring the next Sabbath after Pentecost on the next day of the week to what it had been preceding that time in the year, making a change of the Sabbath day at Pentecost to the next day in the week each year.

"The same law holds good in the count of the Sabbath years and the year of jubilee. Each jubilee period was a perfect cycle in itself. The last week of years in each jubilee period contained six work years and two Sabbath years."

SCHOLARS INDORSE PROOFS.

The Rev. Galusha Anderson, to whom the matter was referred by President Harper of the University of Chicago, says:—

"Mr. S. W. Gamble—Dear Sir: I have examined the proof of the above statement and find it to be entirely correct, and I cheerfully indorse the same. Very truly yours,

"GALUSHA ANDERSON.

"Professor in the Divinity School of the University of Chicago."

Professor Samuel Ives Curtiss, who is famous throughout the West as being one of the leading Hebrew scholars, and who is professor in the Chicago Theological Seminary says:—

"S. W. Gamble—My Dear Sir: Your contention that the seventh day is not equivalent to our Saturday, but must have fallen often on every other day of the week, including, of course, Sunday, seems to me to be well established. Yours very truly,

"SAMUEL IVES CURTISS."

DR. HIRSCH'S VIEW.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch says:—

"I have no hesitancy to give it as my opinion that the theory advanced in this statement rests, as far as the earlier periods of Jewish history are concerned, on great plausibility. I have no doubt that the old Sabbath was in no connection with a fixed week. But the documents show that at a much earlier period than is here assumed the Sabbath of the Jews was observed on the seventh day of the week. To reconcile all the passages of the Bible is a task which I must leave to others.

"EMIL G. HIRSCH.

"Rabbi Sinai Temple."

It will be noticed that Dr. Hirsch recognizes the truth of this discovery, that Saturday was only used as Sabbath but once in seven years—that is, from the exodus to the Babylonish captivity, thus making over 1,000 changes in the week day on which it was observed. He thinks that the Jews observed Saturday as the Sabbath before the destruction of Jerusalem, while Mr. Gamble and others who give this matter careful study think that the custom of observing the Sabbath every Saturday came between the second and the fourth centuries of the Christian era.

It is needless to say that the publication of this matter, which the Tribune obtains from the advance sheets of the January issue of the Christian Endeavor, will lead to new study. As the discovery of America changed all geographical studies, so this discovery will revolutionize the study of the Sabbath question.

THE SIMPLE STATEMENT.

This article will be followed later by another one showing the scriptural authority for the Christian Sunday, or the first day of the week.

The following is the simple statement for ordinary readers:—

“The weekly Sabbath from and after the exodus occurred on fixed dates—like one’s birthday or the Fourth of July. Therefore, it came on a different day of our week every year.

“The word ‘Sabbath’ means ‘cessation, rest.’ Neither ‘Saturday’ nor ‘seventh day’ expresses the thought of Sabbath.

“Saturday is not mentioned in the scriptures.

“‘Seventh day’ is frequently used in the Bible where it does not mean the Sabbath. (See Lev. 14: 9, and Lev. 14, 40–42, and parallel passages, where shaving, washing clothes, plastering and house-cleaning were commanded to be done on the ‘seventh day’ after certain occurrences, but, of course, not on the Sabbath.) Again, Lev. 23: 39, says: ‘On the first day shall be a Sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a Sabbath.’

“While ‘Sabbath’ means ‘rest,’ there is nothing in the word to determine its length. Identically the same Hebrew word is used in Lev. 23 to express Sabbath (day) that is used in Lev. 25 to mean Sabbath (year).

COUNTING THE SABBATH DAYS.

“Leviticus, twenty-third chapter, is devoted to an explanation of counting and keeping the Sabbath days. Abib 10, 14, and 16 every year were to be work or secular days. Each of them would come on Saturday once in seven years, but never on the Sabbath.

“Abib 16 came on the ‘morrow after the Sabbath’ every year; in other words, it always occurred on the first day of the week. Therefore, in seven years every day of our week would become the first day of their week.

“In the first month the fifteenth, twenty-second, and twenty-ninth days came on the weekly Sabbath every year. In the seventh month the first, fifteenth, and twenty-second days came on the weekly Sabbath every year. There is no lunar or solar calender that will locate these dates perpetually on Saturday.

“I once had a short interesting conversation with an eminent scholar, who said: ‘Saturday is the only Sabbath the Bible recognizes.’

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

“I followed this statement with the following questions, and received the following answers:—

“‘Upon what date did the Bible require the Passover lamb to be slain?’

“‘On Abib 14th every year.’

“‘Upon what day was it eaten?’

“‘On Abib 15th every year.’

“‘Upon what date was the wave sheaf offered and the harvest commenced?’

“‘On Abib 16th every year.’

“‘Was Abib 15th always a Sabbath day?’

“‘Certainly it was.’

“‘Was Abib 16 on the first day of the week each year?’

“‘Yes. Upon that date they began to count the seven weeks towards Pentecost.’

“‘Very well. Will you furnish me an accepted solar or lunar calender that will locate Abib 15 on Saturday every year, and Abib 16 on Sunday every year?’

“‘O, I see. I see. It cannot be done. I had never thought of it before.’

EIGHT DAYS IN THE WEEK.

“‘In the count of the Sabbath days, the week that included Pentecost contained eight days—i. e., six work-days and two Sabbaths. Six days’ work were commanded to be done in the week following the Pentecost. Therefore, the Sabbath, the day before Pentecost, and the day of Pentecost could not both be the same day, much less both be Saturday every year.

“‘In making the count of the Sabbath years, and years of jubilee each jubilee period was a complete and perfect cycle in itself. The last week of years in every jubilee period contained eight years, six work years, and the seventh Sabbath year, and the jubilee year, making two Sabbath years. Each jubilee period began on the first of the six work years.’”

STATEMENT FOR SCHOLARS.

The following is the statement in full for the careful perusal by scholars anywhere:—

“The Sabbath of the Jews, from the exodus to the resurrection of Christ, occurred on fixed dates, like Christmas or the Fourth of July. Therefore it came on a different day of the week each year.

“The word ‘Sabbath’ means ‘cessation, rest.’ It has a different meaning from ‘seventh day’ or ‘Saturday.’ ‘Saturday’ is not used in the scriptures. ‘Seventh day’ is used frequently in the scriptures when it does not mean the Sabbath (see Leviticus 14: 9, and Leviticus 14: 40–42, and the parallel passages, where shaving, washing clothes, plastering, and house-cleaning were commanded to be done on the ‘seventh day’ after certain occurrences, but of course not on the Sabbath).

“While ‘Sabbath’ means ‘rest,’ there is nothing in the word to determine its length. The word ‘Sabbath,’ as used in Exodus 20: 8; Leviticus 23: 15, 16, and Leviticus 25: 2–8, is identically the same word. In Exodus 20 and Leviticus 23 the word ‘Sabbath’ means ‘a day,’ while it is used six times in Leviticus 25 to mean ‘a year.’

“In the study of the Jewish Sabbath we will use the fourth command of the book of the Jewish law as a basis. The Lord told Moses to speak unto the children of Israel, saying, ‘Verily, my Sabbaths shall ye keep’ (Exodus 31: 13). ‘It is a sign between me and the children of Israel’ (Exodus 31: 17). ‘Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant’ (Exodus 31: 16).

“How Not to Better Social Conditions” is the title of an article by Theodore Roosevelt in the January Review of Reviews. Mr. Roosevelt is permitted to publish a letter addressed to him a few months since by the Hon. Thomas Watson, then the candidate for Vice-President on the Populist ticket with Mr. Bryan. This letter was occasioned by Mr. Roosevelt’s article in the September Review of Reviews dealing with the Vice-Presidential candidates. The letter is a most important and interesting contribution to what may be termed the personal literature of the last campaign; it puts its writer in a new light, and must lead to a thorough revision of the opinions about “Tom Watson” entertained so generally by his political opponents.

There are many lives that need the sunshine of sympathetic words and kindly smiles, and since they cost the giver so little and are valued by the receiver so highly, why not give them out each day? They will shine like jewels in your crown, and may help some discouraged one to take heart again.

THE HOLY SPIRIT AS A PROMPTER AND DIRECTOR OF CONDUCT.

THE question as to what extent the Holy Ghost may, or does prompt and direct men in their conduct towards their fellows, and in the affairs of personal interest in life, is a pertinent one and may be very profitably considered.

The gift of the Holy Ghost is promised as the result of obedience to the gospel in the rite of baptism, and is to follow the laying on of hands, as is evident upon inquiry, text and argument. The promise made on Pentecost day is that those who were baptized should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. No exception and no exemption from the rule in the promise is to be found in the word; nor could there be, for the eleven stood up before the people filled with the Holy Ghost and spake as the Spirit gave them utterance.

The Savior, in teaching the disciples in regard to the Holy Ghost, as stated by John 14: 26, said:—

But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

In the fifteenth chapter and twenty-sixth verse, the Comforter is stated to be the Spirit of truth which proceedeth from the Father, and that it should testify of Jesus.

Paul was of the opinion that in the distribution of the gifts of the Spirit, or the manifestation of the Spirit, a certain discrimination was exercised and every man was ministered to by the giving to him such as he had need, as determined by the Master, according to his will.

There being but one Spirit, as we are all moving forward in "one hope of our calling," there can be no conflict, if in understanding the quotation from John 14, we construe the "all things" which the Spirit was to teach to refer to those things of which the receiver stood in need, as might be determined by the Master, things temporal, so far as knowledge of them might be required by the disciple, in his life and work here and hereafter; things mental, so far as to fit and qualify the man for the duties of life; and things spiritual, so far as his spiritual duties toward his God and his fellow men might make it essential to his life and success.

While the promise seems to convey the idea that the receiver of the Comforter was to be led into "all truth," it seems proper to understand it in the way that the statement in Mark 16 is to be understood and applied; that is, that the promise is of a general character, and the word "you" is to mean the collective body, as "these signs shall follow them that believe," the word "them" to signify the whole body of believers, and not that all the gifts there named are to attach to any one, or every one individually who might hear and obey.

Paul understood it in this way, for he argued that to one was given the one gift, and to another a different gift, but all were from the same Spirit and to be manifested in the one body, the church.

This Comforter, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, is a remarkably comprehensive power; and in its extensive supervision over the affairs of mankind in relation to the work of redemption and salvation it would necessarily take cognizance of every man's condition, his abilities, necessities, surroundings, and usefulness, in such manner as would best qualify the particular man for whatever duty, position, or calling in which he could best serve the great common cause. Hence, as a prompter and director of human action the Holy Ghost was to be a moving factor.

There are to all the things which man takes cognizance of, thought, impression, words, statements, facts, things material, and things immaterial if there are such, the wrong and the right, commonly speaking, or as Paul says, "I speak as a man;" and the evident intention of the Master, the Lord of Life, by whom the Father of all truth sent life and immortality to the world, was to so provide in the gospel economy an agent by which the disciple might know the truth of everything within the possible range of human knowledge, by the ministration of the Spirit of truth. This would of necessity greatly affect human conduct; because, every man born into the church, the kingdom of God, would put himself into position to receive the Spirit of truth, and yielding to its presence and its dictates would become wise in thought, belief, and conduct in the particular sphere in which he was called, by circumstances, or choice, or the dictates of prudence and his best good to move; and give him a proper estimate and understanding of the things of life with which he had to do. In such case this Spirit of truth would have much, very much to do in shaping every man's life and destiny, as it is apparent it was intended to do.

We may make application of this inquiry by asking, Is this Spirit of the truth of all things, by which we may be led into the knowledge of them, so far as our life and sphere in which we move are to be in any wise affected by them, present and at work with us? Do we permit it to prompt and determine any portion of our conduct? If so how is it that we make mistakes in judgment regarding things seen and known of every day? How is it that we do things that are productive of annoyance and distress to others? Why do we find so much in ourselves to condemn, so much in others to find fault with? Do we put correct estimates upon what may, or must result to ourselves and others in determining questions of conduct in the inner affairs of domestic life, the relation we bear to the household of which we form a part; the saints as a branch, the officers of branch and district; the church as a body, its officers; the work of the Lord as being done, or attempted to be done; our neighbors, Jew or Greek, of the faith or out of the fold, Christian or infidel, believers or unbelievers, rich or poor, white or black, bond or free, pleasant or unpleasant, hateful or friendly; the town, its officers, its good; the county, the state, and the Nation? If not, why not?

The "manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." For this reason we conclude that every man who places himself within the radius of the Spirit's action is considered alike by the Spirit in apportioning the gift; so that all are equal in the dispensing what the Spirit may have to bestow. All conditions of men, the places where they dwell, the privileges they enjoy, the burdens they bear, their ability great or little, their energy of disposition or lack of push are taken cognizance of; and, the apportionment to the individual is made in a wise discrimination, these all considered.

The Book of Mormon commends that men should pray over their labors, their flocks and herds, their fields and the products of them; which means decidedly that accompanying the labor that is necessary to each effort to procure the things by which life is sustained and blessed there should be a recognition of God, whence come all good things, and with such recognition an expressed desire for the guidance and support of the Spirit of truth in every condition and vocation in life. This includes every species of calling, legitimate for saints, believers in Christ to engage in.

The Bible teaches that men should "pray always." This can mean nothing less than that men should always be mindful of the source whence come life, all its powers, all its blessings.

The revelations of God to the church enjoin the duty of prayer upon the Saints; to the intent and purpose that every man and every woman may be provided for unto every good word and work.

The power to accomplish much good is in man, and he is urged to make use of those powers; and as each one is to give an account for himself of the stewardship in the talents, powers, and things of this world intrusted to his care, it is but just and right that God who is judge of all, should have made a provision by which these agents unto themselves should be given a wisdom superior to their own by natural endowment, by the exercise of which they could make a proper use of the things intrusted to them, and thus be able to give a faithful and proper account in the judgment, upon which the Judge could justly award the meed of eternal life, and say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee to be ruler over many." This, the Giver of Life has done; and his saints should awake to the full consideration of the fact that the Spirit of truth may and should be a prompter and director in all the affairs of the true child of God.

A VISIT TO INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, AND THE RESULT.

SOMETIME last year the Editor received an invitation to visit Independence, and with a few of leading minds in the church to meet with Elder J. R. Haldeman, and some others of the leading men of the Church of Christ, sometimes called, The Hedrickites, because that Granville Hedrick was the chief actor in its organization. Several things occurred to prevent this visit, until after the turn of the year; when by previous understanding by letter, the Editor, accompanied by Bro. Alexander H. Smith, went to Independence; and inviting Brn. May, Harrington, and Garret of the Independence branch to make a part of the conference, met Mr. Haldeman and his associate brethren, on Saturday, January 16. The result of the meeting, as agreed upon to be furnished the HERALD, Ensign, and Searchlight, is given in the minutes below.

We state, in justice to Mr. J. R. Haldeman and his brethren, that we of the Reorganized Church were received by them in a cordial, friendly spirit, and that apparent frankness and cordiality prevailed during the entire session.

It was not intended as a conference for dispute, or debate, but for the purpose of a frank statement of those present of the views held by them as individual representatives of their respective bodies of believers. The controversial dispute being deferred to further opportunity and occasion; if any should ever be demanded, or required. Nor was it intended as an official representation of the two bodies for the supposed settlement of differences; so that nothing that was done should be regarded as the official action of either body of believers.

We commend the minutes to the readers of the HERALD, and bespeak for the members of the Church of Christ present in the meeting kind and fair treatment by our elders when they meet them in ministerial intercourse.

Minutes of a conference held in the Church of Christ on the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri, beginning Saturday, January 16, continuing the 18th, 19th, and 20th, 1897.

There were present of the Church of Christ, Brn. Richard Hill, J. R. Haldeman, G. P. Frisbey, George D. Cole, and James A. Hedrick; of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Brn. Joseph Smith, Alexander H. Smith, Roderick May, George E. Harrington, and W. H. Garrett.

The assembly was organized at two p. m. (the 16th) by the selection of President Hill to preside, and W. H. Garrett clerk. After prayer the object of the meeting was stated to be for the purpose of the interchange of thought, regarding the differences existing between the two organizations, that there might be a unity of effort in the prosecution of the work of the Lord.

It was agreed, so far as the fundamental principles of the gospel of Christ are concerned, both organizations believe the same, as per copies of the Epitome hereto attached.

We believe in God the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost.—Matt. 28: 19; 1 John 1: 3; St. John 11: 26.

We believe that men will be punished for their own sins, and not for Adam's transgression.—Ecc. 12: 14; Matt. 16: 27; 1 Cor. 3: 13; Rev. 20: 12-15.

We believe that through the atonement of Christ, all men may be saved by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel.—1 Cor. 15: 3; 2 Tim. 1: 10; Rom. 8: 1-6.

We believe that these ordinances are:—(1st). Faith in God and in the Lord Jesus Christ.—Heb. 11: 6; 1 Pet. 1: 21; 1 Tim. 4: 10; John 3: 16, 18, 36; Mark 11: 22; John 14: 1.

(2d). Repentance.—Matt. 3: 2, 8, 11; Luke 13: 3; 24: 47; Ezek. 18: 30; Mark 1: 5, 15; Acts 2: 38; Rom. 2: 4; 2 Cor. 7: 10.

(3d). Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins.—Matt. 3: 13-15; Mark 1: 4, 5; Luke 3: 3; John 3: 5; Acts 2: 38; 22: 16; 2: 41; 8: 12, 37, 38; Mark 16: 16; Col. 2: 12; Rom. 6: 4, 5; John 3: 23; Acts 8: 38, 39.

(4th). Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Deut. 34: 9; John 20: 21, 22;

Acts 8:17; 19:6; 1 Tim. 4:14. Acts 9:17; 1 Cor. 12:3; Acts 19:1-6.

(5th.) We believe in the Resurrection of the Body; that the dead in Christ will rise first, and the rest of the dead will not live again until the thousand years are expired. Job 19:25, 26; Dan. 12:2; 1 Cor. 15:42; 1 Thes. 4:16; Rev. 20:6; Acts 17:31; Phil. 3:21; John 11:24; Isa. 26:19; Ps. 17:15.

(6th.) We believe in the doctrine of Eternal Judgment, which provides that men shall be judged, rewarded, or punished, according to the degree of good, or evil, they shall have done. Rev. 20:12; Ecc. 3:17; Matt. 16:27; 2 Cor. 5:10; 2 Pet. 2:4, 13, 17.

We believe that a man must be Called of God, and ordained by the Laying on of Hands of those who are in authority, to entitle him to preach the Gospel, and Administer in the Ordinances thereof. Heb. 5:1, 5, 6, 8; Acts 1:24, 25; 14:23; Eph. 4:11; John 15:16.

We believe in the same kind of organization that existed in the primitive church, viz: Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, Evangelists, etc. 1 Cor. 12:28; Matt. 10:1; Acts 6:4; Eph. 4:11; 2:20; Titus 1:5.

We believe that in the Bible is contained the word of God, so far as it is translated correctly. We believe that the canon of scripture is not full, but that God, by his Spirit will continue to reveal his word to man until the end of time. Job 32:8; Heb. 13:8; Prov. 29:18; Amos 3:7; Jer. 23:4; 31:31, 34; 33:6; Ps. 85:10, 11; Luke 17:26; Rev. 14:6, 7; 19:10.

We believe in the powers and gifts of the everlasting gospel, viz: the gift of faith, discerning of spirits, prophecy, revelation, healing, visions, tongues, and the interpretation of tongues, wisdom, charity, brotherly love, etc. 1 Cor. 12:1-11; 14:26; John 14:24; Acts 2:3; Matt. 28:19, 20; Mark 16:16.

We believe that marriage is ordained of God; and that the law of God provides for but one companion in wedlock, for either man or woman, except in cases where the contract of marriage is broken by death or transgression. Gen. 2:18, 21-24; 7:1, 7, 13; Prov. 5:15-21; Mal. 2:14, 15; Matt. 19:4-6; 1 Cor. 7:2; Heb. 13:4; D. C. 42:7; 49:3.

We believe that the doctrines of a plurality and a community of wives are heresies, and are opposed to the law of God. Gen. 4:19, 23, 24; 7:9; 22:2; in connection Gal. 4th and 5th chapters; Gen. 21:8-10; Mal. 2:14, 15; Matt. 19:3-9. The BOOK OF MORMON says: "Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be ONE WIFE, and concubines he shall have none, for I, the Lord, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me saith the Lord of hosts."—Jacob 2:6-9.

We believe that in all matters of controversy upon the duty of man toward God, and in reference to preparation and fitness for the world to come, the word of God should be decisive and the end of dispute; and that when God directs, man should obey.

We believe that the religion of Jesus Christ, as taught in the New Testament Scriptures, will if its precepts are accepted and obeyed, make men and women better in the domestic circle, and better citizens of town, county, and State, and consequently better fitted for the change which cometh at death.

We believe that men should worship God in "Spirit and in truth;" and that such worship does not require a violation of the constitutional law of the land. John 4:21-24; Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 58, par. 5.

We claim the privilege of worshiping Almighty God according to the dictates of our conscience, allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where, or what they may.

Agreed: That the Book of Mormon is a divine record, and that the redemption of Zion must be by purchase.

Agreed: That what is known as the King Follett Sermon, and the Book of Abraham are not accepted as the basis for doctrine.

Agreed: That we believe in the literal gathering of Israel, and the restoration of the "ten lost tribes."

Agreed: That the City of Zion will be built at Independence, Missouri, and that the saints of God will gather there.

Agreed: That Christ will reign personally upon the earth and that the earth will be restored to its paradisaical glory.

Agreed: That we believe in the restoration of the gospel, and the angel message through Joseph Smith the Seer.

Agreed: That we believe there are individuals in the different factions who hold the priesthood.

Agreed: That where there are six or more regularly baptized members, any one of which, who is an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, there the church exists.

Agreed: That an organization is necessary, and such an organization as the number of the members, and the will of God enables them to attain to.

Agreed: That wherever a branch exists the power of church extension exists, also to its fullest extent when acting in accordance with the law.

Agreed: That any man holding the priesthood and possessing the proper qualifications may be chosen by the church, by acting in accordance with the law, to act in any specific position.

Agreed: That the law of consecration is necessary to the establishing of Zion.

Agreed: That faith and righteousness are chief essentials for the possession of the Melchisedec priesthood.

The foregoing fourteen (14) agreements represent all the conclusions reached in this council, it is further agreed that no individual opinion expressed during this conference shall be used as a basis for any argument intended to be used to the detriment of any person participating in this council.

VATICAN SYMPATHIZES WITH SPAIN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 12.—Archbishop Martinelli, the new Papal delegate, while denying that he has been in any way instructed to act as intermediary between the Cubans and Spain, declares that the church is on the whole in favor of Spain as against the Cubans. In explaining the situation he said significantly:—

"This is only natural for many reasons. The close connection between the government and people of Spain and the Vatican presupposes an inclination toward the side. The Vatican has always been in favor of established governments and against rebellions. Moreover, the policy of the Pope and of the Catholic Church has always been towards peace and quietude. Throughout the world, if you take the history of Rome, you will see that the efforts of the Popes have always been directed towards this end."

The above press dispatch is given for what it may be worth. If true, and the item seems to come from direct and authentic official sources, Catholic Spain has the sympathy, prestige, and support of the official heads of the Roman Catholic hierarchy at the Vatican. Such "is only natural," as stated by the Papal archbishop, for Catholicism has, as of old, in more than one modern instance sanctioned the policy of compulsion to absolute rule in the interest of so-called "peace and quietude" when rebellion against her authority existed; or when peoples showed a disposition to contend for liberty and progress.

There may be liberal elements in the Catholic Church, and we are disposed to credit it with every measure of good to which it is entitled, but there remains strong ground for distrust of its high claims and exalted protestations in this respect.

Text-books of United States history used in Catholic schools are so copiously illustrated by cuts and filled with elaborate descriptions of the services of Catholic priests in American affairs, that one not taught to swallow the teachings of that church without question sees the evident disposition and effort to teach Catholic youth and others that Americans are largely indebted to Jesuit and other Catholic missionaries for the rights and privileges they now enjoy under our free institutions.

With due credit to the Catholic missionaries referred to, many of whom were brave and sacrificing advocates of their faith, it yet remains true that their services were but incidental and not largely positive nor prominent in securing and in promoting our present system of government, and that the influence of other Catholics has been strongly against Americanism. It is a Jesuitical policy that favors monarchical institutions and oppression in and by the old world while professing to favor freedom and liberality in the new world.

The city and Church of Rome belong to a dead, rejected past. We look elsewhere for the representative policies of truth and freedom—forces of equality, education, and progress, that are ruling and destined to entirely emancipate the world. The Vatican is true to its past if in sympathy with Spain. It supported the Spanish monarchy in its religious and political persecution of the Netherlanders, of the French and other Protestants, including the massacre of the Huguenots in Florida. Its "policy" is a matter of history.

CHRISTIANITY, SO-CALLED, AT JERUSALEM.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 11.—Official advices from Jerusalem show there has been further trouble among the worshipers at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. It appears the Roman Catholics were opposed to members of the Orthodox Greek Church entering the church by a certain door on the eve of January 6—the day observed by the Orthodox Church as Christmas.

The latter insisted upon their right to enter and the result was the two factions became involved in a serious fight which did not end until the Turkish authorities intervened. Some of the combatants were badly injured, but it is not known whether anybody was killed.

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher, owned by the Greek Church, has been so frequently the scene of disturbances between rival fanatical sects of Christians (so-called) that Turkish soldiers are stationed there by the Sultan's government to preserve order. No doubt the Mohammedan and other disbelievers in Christianity make the most of such spectacles, not knowing that all such exhibitions are foreign to the teachings of Him whose supposed sepulcher is marked by the church to which so many flock in pilgrimage, and to whose memory such violence and unseemly behavior is false. There is need of a true interpretation of Christianity at home and abroad—an exhibition of it in teaching and in practice, that the heathen, including such as profess it, but who distort it, Christianity, may cease to imagine vain things, or misconceptions of the faith of Christ. There certainly is growing need that those professing it refute by intelligent understanding and wise practice of their faith the prevailing errors that in so many forms are exhibited as expressions of Christianity. If responsibility is coequal with enlightenment and opportunity, the people of God have an important work before them. Its importance is indicated in the mission given them of being "the salt of the earth" and "the light of the world."

We hope to see "the faith" represented at Jerusalem, as of old, in due time, and that the truth may appear in vivid contrast with the perversions taught and practiced in the name of Christ, so vivid that all may readily discern and know the truth. We shall see it in due time, as the faithful work of God's people shall cause the influence and power of truth to be more widely proclaimed and established. A brighter day has dawned and is now well toward its more clearer progression.

The truth is yet to stand in opposition to medieval and oriental errors and superstitions, as it has come in contact with and refuted other religious and general errors. It will have full expression and correct interpretation if the people and ministry called to represent it fully receive and practice the love of the truth. May the "richer blessings" of Ephraim's children soon be carried to the sons and daughters of Judah, at Jerusalem and in all the world, that fanaticism and darkness may flee before the light and power of Christ the Savior of man.

LIBERALITY IN RUSSIA.

THE following concerning increased liberality and toleration in Russia is of sufficient importance to justify full insertion. It is to be hoped that the statement is not in excess of the truth. Some of the statements made seem almost incredible, or "too good to be true." Other nations that have contended for liberty, including America, will be gratified and encouraged by the hopeful indications of the coming world-wide enjoyment of civil and religious liberty—the rights of man:—

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Apropos of the now known tendency of Nicholas II. toward a liberal and pacific regime, advices from Warsaw and other centers in Poland concur in speaking of a marked change in the restrictive measures enforced against the people by the authorities, greater freedom being allowed to the press and the public. The St. Petersburg Novoe Vremya has opened its columns to advocacy of the conciliation of Poland, a larger degree of toleration for the Catholic Poles, and the cessation of restrictive measures throughout those now wide regions where the Russian Government has the adhesion of the people.

The Novoe Vremya has long been the fierce enemy of the Catholic Poles, and this change of front is therefore significant. The Czar's recent action in resisting the pressure of the Moscow authorities to punish the riotous university students by deporting them to Siberia is another favorable sign of better times in Russia.

LOSS OF LIFE BY EARTHQUAKE.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A special from Teheran, capital of Persia, says that 2,500 persons perished as a result of the earthquake which occurred on Kisham Island January 11. Kisham Island is the largest in the Persian Gulf, and is situated about fifteen miles from its entrance. Its population is estimated at 5,000, mostly Arabs.

A special dispatch from Bombay says that three severe earthquake shocks have occurred there.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. G. PITT, Chicago, Illinois, January 22:—

I am holding a series of meetings here with good interest. Prospects point to an ingathering. Saints feel well and the work is in good condition. Next week I hope to open meetings at Joy.

A Salt Lake dispatch of the 20th says:—

The legislature in joint session to-day took two ballots for United States Senator. Both of them resulted as follows: Thatcher, 21; Rawlins, 16; Henderson, 17; Lawrence, 4; Goodwin, 3; Nebeker, 2.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. CRILEY requests that we call attention to his special notice in this issue. From the statement of indebtedness there presented it appears that an average of but one half of the subscriptions due on last year's account on HERALD, Hope, and Autumn Leaves has been paid! This is the ground of his appeal, which he earnestly asks all indebted to the office to heed.

We were not prepared to learn that there were so many delinquents for the past year, in the face of repeated efforts to promote promptness in payment of accounts among the Herald Office patrons. We are aware that times are hard, but do not believe the list should be so greatly out of proportion that one half of our subscribers should owe the office for the publications of the past year. Ten per cent would be bad enough as a delinquent proportion, but fifty per cent of unpaid subscriptions would ruin any publishing business.

Bro. Criley's appeal, especially when backed by such figures, should be regarded by every one concerned and be given such attention as it deserves—by remittance of amounts due. Surely the Herald Office list should not be left in such condition as the figures given show.

Inasmuch as under a late ruling of the Western Passenger Association ministers accepting its permits are required to cease acting as booksellers, it is hoped that the general ministry will, as they deem necessary and proper, act in an advisory way in urging the saints to purchase the church publications for their own good and the good of the work in general. Regular agents are requested to urge this feature of church work and interests upon the saints and friends on every proper occasion.

Rumor states in a prominent English publication that at the celebration of her coming jubilee Queen Victoria will abdicate in favor of the Prince of Wales.

The London Chronicle's correspondent at Rome says the Pope has heard of the signing of the Anglo-American treaty with satisfaction, and that he would wish the Papacy to be regarded as a permanent arbitral tribunal for all nations, but he is glad to see the principle adopted in any form. Many who are not unwilling to see the Pope gratified by seeing arbitration adopted remember that the Holy Father has an especial interest in the growth of Roman Catholicism in America and Great Britain and that it is contrary to the spirit of our institutions to make the Papacy or any other religious organization an arbiter in our political affairs; also that the Papacy should modestly refrain until its services are asked for.

Sharp shock of earthquake along the southwestern coast of Mexico, early in January, destroying several houses and injuring three people by falling walls at Acapulco.

Mother Earth is displeased or disturbed in some way. In addition to earthquake shocks already reported, vibrations of unusual strength accompanied by a rumbling sound were experienced at Red Bud, Illinois, January 18, and "a violent earthquake" at Laibach, Austria, same date, also accompanied by rumbling sounds. The disquiet increases both upon the surface and below it, also in the atmospheric elements above. The cyclone, a few years ago a comparative stranger to us, is now a frequent visitor. The earthquake visitations are significant both in number and destructiveness. They are unwelcome terrorizing guests, but seemingly are not to be escaped from unless the inhabitants of the world "repent" and "learn righteousness."

Berlin advices state that Russia is borrowing vast sums of money, negotiations having been made with French bankers for sums running up to two and three hundreds of millions; German bankers also having been sounded, because of vast sums already loaned by the French to Russia.

The branch at Lamoni, in anticipation of the demand for added room for the sessions of the coming General Conference, has begun the erection of a gallery addition to the church, which is estimated to add seating room sufficient for three hundred people. It is placed at the east end with wings running along the north and south sides of the building, in "U" shape. The pulpit has been lowered, some of the seats at the east or rear end of the lower floor of the auditorium been raised, and other changes made that will add greatly to the general comfort and capacity of the "brick church." The gallery is reached from the vestibule in the main entrance by winding stairs through the towers.

Much of the carpenter work has been donated, and freely so, by the workmen. Saints and outsiders have contributed in willingness to further the good work, and all is being done in the same excellent spirit, as it should be. The Lamoni saints hope, by this move and by others yet to be made, to provide every essential comfort for visiting delegates and saints to the next General Conference.

Official correspondence published at London on the 21st shows that on October 20, 1896, the Marquis of Salisbury proposed that the ambassadors at Constantinople should formulate reforms to be enforced by the powers. The Russian minister replied November 18 saying that the Czar had decided that it was impossible to agree to coercive measures against the Sultan. But on November 25 a further communication was received stating that the Czar would not object to advise the Russian minister relative to coercion should the Sultan prove recalcitrant and refuse to adopt reforms unanimously adopted by the ambassadors. At the end of December France consented to the proposals of Lord Salisbury, to which Germany, Austria, and Italy had previously agreed.

The poor health of the Pope has caused a stir in the Sacred College concerning his successor. There are said to be three groups of Cardinals, each of which desires to fill the place, and among whom there are also many personal ambitions; viz., the diplomatic, the bishop, and the foreign Cardinals. The second group is thought to be the strongest and if successful the new Pope would probably be Cardinal Ferrari, Archbishop of Milan, or Cardinal Svampa, Archbishop of Bologna. Indications are said to favor the choice of the latter.

Deaths from bubonic plague, week ending January 21, 470. Deaths are so frequent that it is difficult to get parties to carry corpses to the Hindu and Mohammedan cemeteries. There is general fear of the disease. Certain infected quarters of the city of Bombay have been destroyed by fire, and it is feared that many large quarters will have to be consumed to stamp out the plague, which has assumed such terrible proportions that the resources of the municipal officials are completely overtaxed. In the native town 5,000 shops and hundreds of dwelling houses are shut or abandoned. The rapid spread of the pestilence and its virulence are causing excitement and alarm. People are dying hourly in the streets. Foreign residents have sent their families away and many others have fled. This with the prevailing famine which is causing the death of millions indicates the awful condition.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Dear Readers:—When the interest of the fathers is aroused and they unite their efforts with the mothers to assume the responsibilities that are just as truly and solemnly theirs as the mothers', then let the column be our Home Column.

What is a home in its true sense without the influence and help of the father sustaining the teaching and wise counsel of the mother? for usually it is the mother who has to see to the training of the "olive plants" surrounding their table. But God never intended that woman should bear all the responsibility of the purity of the race. This we know if we use with wisdom the knowledge we have learned.

Man was formed first; woman was given for a helpmeet, "and Adam and Eve . . . made all things known unto their sons and their daughters." (Gen. 4:12.) Adam and Eve, equal, don't you see?

Duties of parents are duties of fathers as well as mothers, and I have noticed that man being honored as head of the family is many times told plainly in the instructions given us, of the duty they, as fathers, owe to their children; and not to their children alone, but to themselves; and last, but most important of all, to God, who expects us to teach our children to walk in the ways of truth and soberness.

The work of the Daughters of Zion is a good one, and they have already done much in preparing the way for the uplifting of the life and morals of all who have given serious thought to it, and when the Sons of Zion also work to bring mankind nearer to that "ideal" so far above us, our vision will be cleared, our gropings after nobler life be rewarded, our bodies be better fitted for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit and God's blessing be ours to such degree that Satan will be hindered and his power to lead astray and degrade the saints will be lessened, and the time will sooner come that a righteous and pure people be prepared for the coming of Christ our King. The sooner, then, that husbands, and fathers, and wives, and mothers fully wake up to the work to be done, and live the precepts they teach, the sooner will they "attain that condition which the Creator designed for them."

I hope others will write on this subject. It will help to make us search ourselves and be more diligent in our duties.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. MARTHA BURKE, of Riverside, Michigan, desires the prayers of the Union for her husband, Charles Burke, that he may overcome the opium habit formed during a long and painful illness. His health is still poor.

[THE following was handed us for use in Autumn Leaves, but we think best to use it in the HERALD, and sincerely hope that it will be read by many who need just such honest, straightforward instruction. If the Word of Wisdom was heeded by our people, almost the entire ground would be covered.]

A WORD WITH PARENTS.

I HEAR much said on the management of little children. All parents wish their little ones to grow to honest, healthful men and women. How shall we help them attain such a degree of manhood or womanhood? First, by bearing better babies (read Dr. Foote on "Bearing Better Babies," 129 E. 28th Street, New York), both physically and spiritually. Then when they arrive at the age of understanding we can consult a good phrenologist, and if there are any deficiencies, these can be cultivated, and if any excesses they can be restrained. Then by the very best influence, and hygienic living, they may grow to be good useful men and women.

Some may say, "I do not believe in phrenology." You don't? Then you miss a good thing. (Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise.) But is this bliss? When my oldest little boy was about thirteen years of age, Prof. Fowler (of the firm of Fowler and Wells) told me the state of his health when born and what to do to make him a healthy man; also what occupation he would be best fitted for, and all came true. That advice has been a great help.

Much depends on the food we eat and how we eat it, also on the health-giving atmosphere. How many are there who call themselves Christians who never ventilate, but breathe the poisonous air over and over, and soon begin to have all kinds of ailments, and the doctor is called, when all this trouble might have been prevented by bathing, massage, diet, and pure air. Sometimes they die, and their friends say, "The Lord saw fit to take our brother, or sister away." O fudge! They killed themselves by wrong living. I would as soon take poison as live in such an irregular way. A good, pure atmosphere is worth more than gold; and we can have it without money and without price.

Why so many dishonest children? Because they are not corrected from the very first wrong. I tell you if they are stamped right and raised right, there is little to fear.

I remember while living in Buffalo, New York, my oldest little boy, Mitty, went to clerk for a firm and soon found they were dishonest. He came running home as fast as he could and said, "Mamma, do I have to work for a dishonest man?"

"No, no! Never work for a dishonest person."

Then he went in a large hardware house where he collected and deposited money in all ways, and while there several offered him higher wages than he was getting, because he was so honest and trusty. What a comfort that our children are all that we could wish them to be!

Another: While at school he noticed a poor little boy watching him while eating his dinner, so Mitty asked him if he had any dinner, and he said he had not. Then Mitty gave him his dinner and came running home and said:—

"Mamma, there was a poor boy at school who did not have any dinner, so I gave him mine. Will you give me some more?"

"Certainly I will." So he ran off as fast as he could, and how happy he felt in giving the little fellow his dinner.

My youngest, Willie, was playing with some little girls along the street. He rolled a stone on the pavement after the girls, and it bounded and went through a druggist's window. Many people were on the spot in a moment, and the druggist was very angry, but no one knew who broke window. Willie stepped up to him and said,

"I broke the window, but am very sorry."

Then he came home and told me what he had done. I told him to go and tell the man he would bring a man to fix it. So he paid for it, and then the druggist wanted to hire him because Willie was such an honest boy.

To-day they are both filling very honorable positions. Some people are not particular enough in watching every little error, thinking there is time enough after they get older. I think we cannot correct them too soon.

Reading good stories with a moral, I think, is a great help. I used to tell them stories, and often made up a story to fit the occasion, but they always had a good moral. This was before they were old enough to read for themselves.

THE CHILD'S RELATION TO THE BIBLE.

WHILE waiting in the railroad station for a train a few months ago, I picked up an Adventist tract, when my attention was called to certain passages of scripture which were familiar to me; but which were explained in a far different way from what I had always understood them. My remembrance of the incident is that I could not call to mind anything to show that the explanation was wrong.

Then came this thought: possibly a mistake is made in allowing children to read and commit passages from the Bible, or any other important writing, at their own pleasure. Further: Maybe the Bible text ought not to be used without restriction, in grades lower than the Bible class.

Step into a Sunday school class and see a little tot struggling through the verse that it is his turn to read, the teacher pronouncing almost every other word, then tell me, if you can, what the impression made upon his mind by that so-called reading. It is a familiar truth that the first impression is the most firmly set. Isn't it important then that it should be a correct one?

In our study of literature in college it was urged that care should be exercised in the selection of books to read. There are books which would do actual damage to the mind if read before we are prepared for it, while if we wait until the mind is properly developed it may be read with great profit. We cannot get the full benefit of a book without previous preparation. For instance, take some popular works like Shakespeare's. Of course the young people like to appear well read so they are eager to read these writings and will probably begin with Hamlet, or Julius Cæsar, or Henry VIII., while they may never have seen a brief history of Rome in Cæsar's time, nor learned anything about who Henry VIII. was; and, when you ask one who has thus read about the speech of Antony or Brutus, you are answered with a look of blank surprise.

The first perusal of a book is the most searching. The first time it is new and strange ground and every energy is concentrated to find all there is in it. Afterward, if we read the same book, it is with less care and the mind is allowed to follow the line of thought that was traced out at the first perusal. If any wrong conceptions were had, any false impressions made, they are more liable to be emphasized, fixed more firmly in the memory than they are to be corrected by a second reading. I do not say that a person cannot find much good that was overlooked at the first, but the ordinary reader does not.

My position is best illustrated in the public school course. A child who is properly classified will be given a book adapted to his mental caliber and if the teacher is wise the first canvass of the book will be the most thorough. Then after a general review a more advanced book is placed in his hands.

I have had pupils in United States History who would come to the class with a puzzled look on their faces and when questioned about their trouble with the lesson, would say, "I can't understand it; there are so many big words there." That was just the trouble. They had taken up the complete history before they were ready for it. But in order that the course of study might be carried out, their minds must be crammed full of confused ideas about "Articles of Confederation," "Emancipation," "Reconstruction," "Nullification," "Ratification," etc.; and it is almost as disastrous to the pupils as Grant's "hammering campaign" was to the Rebel soldiers. Give the child a history of his country in words that he can understand and he will not say it is dry and uninteresting.

I used to enjoy the contest of learning verses to be recited in Sunday school, but I can think of but one portion that I have remembered from childhood and that is very imperfectly remembered. It is this:—

"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made,

In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. That was the true light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the world."—John 1:1-9.

I delighted to run over those big words, but little did I know what they meant. I did not know what "Word" meant nor why it was begun with a capital letter. In fact there isn't a single thought of any importance nor a lesson of any kind that was impressed upon my mind.

The infant that is fed upon solid food before its teeth have appeared to indicate that it is ready to dispose of such food will suffer physical harm. The ambitious boy who tries to do the work of a full grown man will surely fail and may be stunted in his growth as a result of overexertion.

It is certainly as true that the undeveloped mind of the child will be injured by dealing with those things that are adapted to fully matured minds. Therefore I say, keep the Bible away from the child. Don't allow it to be used as a plaything for the wee ones even. Don't have one of these big family Bibles with pictures in it on the center table. About its only use is to catch dust anyway. I have a notion to believe that the Bible is getting to be too common in our time. It lies around the house so much that we are losing respect for it, especially its contents. It might be a good thing if we should have a Bible famine for awhile. We might take more interest in it then. You remember the great Reformation, which paved the way for the latter-day Restoration, followed just after those bonfires were made of the biblical books.

What then shall we do? Let us have a simplified story of the Bible illustrated properly, one that doesn't have pictures of angels with wings. If there isn't any published that is suitable, let a committee of our literary and kindergarten talent be appointed to arrange such a story, quoting such passages as may already be adapted to the child-mind. A book of this kind is just as authentic as King James' or the revised. These translators gleaned the thought from other languages and wrote it in ours; you may translate the thought from our language into that of the child. Then this can be used in the Sunday school Quarterly in place of the present scripture text. I have suggested one book of this kind. I do not mean to say that two would not be better, one for primary and another for intermediate grades.

Children who have been trained after this plan will certainly have, when they have grown to maturity, a higher estimate of and a greater interest in the Bible proper; will be able to comprehend its sayings much better; and will get more out of it every way than they do under the present system.

V. W. GUNSOLLEY.

November, 1896.

THE truths of the above article are apparent to the thinker. Bible truths that are beyond the scope of child mind will not prove food for spiritual growth and if presented at this time will have lost their savor when the mind has developed to their proper reception. Child study is winning a prominent place in the minds of educators, who are seeing that they must understand the nature of the being that receives the truth as well as the truth to be received. Could our leaders in this latter-day Sunday school work realize the many questions in the minds of earnest teachers as to plans for primary work we believe that efforts would be made to systematize the work as fast as possible and furnish in leaflet form or through the Sunday school column outlines for study along different lines, but especially the primary. While we trust our column is not barren of results we trust that the association may make it still more useful. More workers may be reached through our column than in any other way; for it is the worker who is looking for more light. The sluggard is satisfied with what he now possesses.—ED.

BYER, Ohio, Jan. 4.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing my experience has been much varied. I have had seasons of joy, and seasons of grief. In July last I buried my mother, one week later my little son three years old, and three weeks later my daughter twelve years old. The last two died of that dread disease, diphtheria. In all this I have tried to be faithful and to console myself with the thought that God doeth all things well.

For the past four months I have been actively engaged each Lord's day proclaiming the word, about three Sundays of each month in our own branch, which meets in two different places, Richland and Wheldon, which are about eight miles apart. The other Sunday has for the past three months been spent with the Limerick saints and on last Sunday I was at Wheldon, and preached on Saturday night, Sunday morning, and at night. The Lord was surely with us. We had sacrament service in the morning which was very spiritual. Three sick folks were presented for administration. All received a great blessing. Sr. Nancy Moore aged something like seventy who had not been able to speak for several days, besides suffering other afflictions, was healed almost instantly. She said to me that if I would administer to her she would be able to attend baptismal services which were to be near by. Just after preaching services I arose and administered to her, also to a little child, which was healed under my hands, and then went into the pulpit. After the sermon, was rejoiced to hear the aged sister speaking strongly and clearly and saying, "O, I can talk as well as ever!" It was my happy lot at this juncture, to lead my only sister and her husband to the "wattery grave."

Thus you see the Lord is truly blessing and giving "the increase," while "the heathen rage and the people imagine a vain thing."

To God be all the praise. There is a good interest at both Wheldon and Richland, and some are near the kingdom who I think will soon be brought in.

Your brother,

V. M. GOODRICH.

ELLENBORO, Wis., Jan. 3.

Editors Herald:—Since preaching at Elmdale I have preached at Bunker Hill and Union schoolhouses in Grant County. At Bunker the attendance was light principally owing to the mud, and partly to the prejudice of the people, of the school-teacher especially. I attended Sunday school for the purpose of announcing my meetings and was invited by the superintendent to take part in the Bible class of which the school-teacher was also the teacher; and as the rule was for each one in the class to read consecutively, I supposed I would read with the rest of course as the superintendent had invited me to, but when it came my time the teacher called the name of the next in the class and asked him to read. My feelings were perhaps not so smooth as they should be, but I could not but think that this life does not end all. So I composed myself and announced my meetings at the close of the school and each night for two weeks found the fire either taken out or put out when we came for evening meeting. If she got any consolation out of it she is welcome to it. Perhaps she will find a fire sometime that cannot be quenched. Though I received several invitations to preach there, very few came to hear, and but little good was done.

From there we went to the Union and met the worst opposition that I ever met anywhere. It was with difficulty that I could keep the boys still long enough to make the others hear. After meeting, though I had told them we had no place to go, we were left alone in the schoolhouse and were compelled to walk three miles to find lodging. Next night the same, only the boys blew out the lights as soon as church was out and hallooed, "Love in the dark" and similar expressions, and would jam and crowd, even women and children. Next night I told the janitor that I would blow out the lights but he misunderstanding me, blew them all out but one which was close to the door. I stationed myself by it and waited for all to get out but when they were all out but about ten of the boys they made a rush for the lamp but I secured it and was walking back with it when one of them jerked it out of my hand and blew it out and then rushed out on the porch and when I came out they were standing on the porch with backs to the building. I faced them and said: "Now, boys, I have borne with you long enough, you have treated me with contempt and insults, and besides have transgressed the law. Monday I go to Lancaster [the county seat] and you can prepare to pay your fines or go to jail. I'll do just what I say." Next night the boys were all absent and I rather feared an attack, but resolved to do my duty if I died in the attempt! I'd rather die doing right than doing wrong. Had a very peaceable meeting and near the close the boys all came in and took front seats and were very quiet, and after meeting they came to me and apologized and asked pardon, and I agreed to drop the matter providing they would behave as they should.

I continued my meetings over two weeks with the best of attention; the boys usually sitting near the front. The result was I left a number believing and some may be baptized. Thus a little firmness with God's assistance brought good out of evil. This also is but a common experience of the elders.

On account of rain I am doing nothing but read my history. If the weather keeps this way I may soon start for home. Some of your readers, especially Bro. Pender, may be interested to know that J. L. Gardner, of Advent fame, has turned infidel, according to reports. When last heard of he was chopping wood on Sunday. Sent his license to Elder Sheldon with his resignation. Bro. Pender remarked to me more than once that he thought Gardner was an infidel at heart. Thus has fallen another opposer of the saints.

In bonds,

APPLEDORE, Ont., Dec. 10.

Editors Herald:—We often feel cheered by reading the letters and editorials in the Saints' Herald. Bro. Lake is giving this district a visit. He was at the opening of the saints' church at Wallaceburg at the time Father was called to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Ralph Mather. He was a member of the church for some years; he was afflicted with rheumatism, which prevented him from meeting with the saints very much. He was administered to several times, and always received a blessing from the administration. He departed this life November 22, with the hope of coming forth in the first resurrection; funeral sermon was preached by Elder George Green at the Ruscom. He leaves four daughters and five sons; Ralph, Samuel, Thomas, Maggie, and Annie, who live near the Ruscom; Lizzie and Belle who live in Detroit; William and Joseph who live in Lamoni, Iowa. His remains were interred in the Comber cemetery.

Also on December 4, Elder George Green was called to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. and Sr. George Thorpe's infant son, Samuel. His little earthly tabernacle was interred in the Wallaceburg cemetery. So we are constantly reminded that this is not our abiding home. We hope to prove faithful and at last meet with the pure and the good.

Your sister,

MARY M. GREEN.

MANCHESTER, England, Dec. 28.

Editors Herald:—We are trying to push the work forward here by means of tract and lantern. For some time past we have carried the principal church tracts from door to door. This enables us to meet and converse with people of all shades of opinion. It requires courage and perseverance to prosecute our work in these islands. Spasmodic efforts are of little use. The effort must be persistent. Much of our work at present is sowing; others may reap.

We pray that God may bless you in your efforts to make our official church paper a success. We think it incomparable. Kind regards to our brethren of the office.

Your fellow servant,

W. R. ARMSTRONG.

BLAIR, Neb., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—I am in Blair attending the Scott-Adams debate at present, but last evening was the first I attended.

Bro. Scott did nobly. He showed up his side of the question in a masterly manner. The question opened last evening was: Resolved that the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2: 44 is still future and is to be set up at the second coming of Christ. The soul sleeping question closed Sunday evening. Those who heard it say that Bro. Scott did splendid all through.

I was in Fremont yesterday, and by Bro. Mintun's request got the testimony of members of different churches, who attended the Seaton-Mintun debate. The general testimony was that Bro. Mintun was in every respect a gentleman, while Seaton, when he found he could not meet Bro. Mintun in argument, resorted to vituperation and ridicule. More than one, members of other churches and business men of the town, said if they had been abused as Mintun was, their temper would have caused them to resent, perhaps with blows.

The work goes fairly well in this district, so far as I have learned. The saints are trying to live right. There are, of course, exceptions. Owing to hard times they are nearly all financially embarrassed, so but little money comes in as church funds.

Yours truly,

J. M. STUBBART.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—It is a little over a year since my wife and I were baptized by Elder T. Taylor, and we have been blessed through obedience to the gospel, with the testimony of the Holy Spirit that the work is true; and I am striving to bear my humble testimony to this fact. On November 16 I was invited by one of the ministers of the City mission in this town to give them an address on the subject of "Salvation" in their meeting room named Fairlie Hall. I accepted the invitation and on the night of the above date I went along with several of my brothers and sisters of the Northeast Manchester branch, of which I am a member. The meeting was opened with singing and prayer, after which it was given into my hands. I opened my remarks by saying that I would say nothing but what I was commanded by my heavenly Father, after which I read Matthew 1: 20, 21, and spoke a little on these verses; I then read Matthew 3: 13-17 and John 3: 1-7, and spoke as I felt led by the Spirit as to how I understood the above passages.

I was listened to very attentively, and when I had finished my remarks I threw the meeting open to all present and sat down. I had no sooner sat down than the minister got up and tried to disabuse the minds of the people with regard to what I had said, which caused quite a consternation. My prayer is that the good Lord will bless my feeble efforts to his honor and glory, and lengthen out my days that I may do something for him who has done so much for me. Should he spare me and my dear wife until the 13th day of December, 1896, we shall celebrate our silver wedding day, and our united desire is to remain faithful to the covenant we have made with him to our lives' end, and finally be received into his kingdom.

Yours in bonds,

EDMUND HOWARTH.

ALBIA, Iowa, Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—I am again in Monroe County. Am holding meetings in what is known as the Morris schoolhouse, three miles southeast of Cedar mines. Have been here since Sunday the 10th inst. The people here give me a respectful hearing, and come out in good numbers also. We have held meeting every night through the week so far and expect to continue another week. I meet the young people each evening at seven o'clock and we sing till 7:45, then we try to tell them the gospel story. The Master has stood by and helped me so far. I do not know what the results may be, but feel that all will be well as long as his blessing is given in the preaching of the word. I am staying most of the time with the family of Bro. James Londen. The people around here are kind and invite me to visit them at their homes, and I do so as circumstances permit me. I am very well pleased with my Church History and sometimes I show it to those who are outside of the fold telling them that it would not only be fair but wise to read of this work as it is seen by those who have obeyed it, and whose lives have been spent therein. I am here away from human help in the preaching of God's word, and were it not that the Spirit gives me help I would be lonely indeed. Pray for me.

Your brother in Christ,

A. M. CHASE.

LUCAS, Iowa, Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:—After reading the good letters from my brothers and sisters from the different parts of the world, and as all of them testify to God's goodness and mercy and the truth of the latter-day work, I feel led to add my testimony. For surely if anyone has more cause to rejoice than another, I have, for, while I verily thought I was "walking in the light" and doing my heavenly Father's will by uniting with the Baptist Church and trying to live a consistent Christian life, God in his love and mercy permitted me to hear the gospel in its fullness, and Oh! how great and glorious was the light that the Holy Spirit shed upon the blessed word that I thought I had taken to be "as a lamp to my feet" and supposed I had been following its teachings all these years, but as the whole truth was revealed to me, I could hardly believe I was reading the same Bible, and as I read on I found that while I had exercised faith in God, and repented of my sins, I had not been baptized for the remission of my sins, by one having authority, or had hands laid on my head for confirmation, and gift of the Holy Ghost, and I also learned (greatly to my surprise) that the church of which I was a member was not organized according to the pattern as found in the Bible and as Christ organized his church. I cannot tell how thankful I am that I can now say I am a member of a church fully organized with all the gifts and blessings Christ promised the believer, and now that I have obeyed all the principles of the gospel, all that remains for me to do to inherit eternal life is to "continue in the doctrine." My prayer to God is that I may be numbered with the faithful ones, and with them be permitted to enter the celestial glory. May God bless the Herald and its readers.

Your sister in the one faith,

FLORA KEPHART.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 20.

Editors Herald.—What may prove the beginning of our winter in St. Louis in the shape of a mild snowstorm is now falling upon us. Matters of particularly local, as well as general church interest, which we may not describe, are upon us. Take heed unto yourselves, and to the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, is an enjoinder necessary and worthy of attention by local ministers in the church of God everywhere, and how indescribably sad and portentous of disaster to me is the lawlessness and even opposition to discipline or enforcement of church law almost everywhere observable.

Church interests are improving but the room for improvement is still too large for rest or relief from vigilance or offensive operations against strongholds of the enemy of the Church of God.

Considerable sickness prevails among saints just now, employment scarce, and hard service for light pay when work is attained or retained.

The sounds of violence and report of crime in this city is something fearful, and "perilous times" are not a prophecy but a fact. Money, valuables, or persons are guarded as never before, and "riches are become slippery" as foretold by the Seer. Four St. Louis murderers sentenced yesterday, with many others on the docket. Thieves multiply in number, and increase in boldness, a few steal to be caught, and put where shelter and food may be had if but in association with criminals.

A woman's stock exchange organized this week and fine rooms fitted up where rich women may gamble in grain and stocks and endeavor to beat some other person out of their money by this polite way, just the same as men do. Fashionable religion, devotion paid more to dress, and exterior correctness according to the standards of man's device. "Lovers of pleasures, more than lovers of God." Surely Paul was a prophet, and the Spirit of truth must have foreseen our day in order to describe the events and conditions which so truthfully portray the state of society and the conditions of mankind as it exists to-day.

"Say nothing but repentance to this generation."

"Behold, it is a day of warning, and not of many words."

Shall we not make our ministrations emphatic as watchman of Zion, or as ambassadors of the warning message which God has given us to proclaim to this generation?

Propositions for discussion with the Utah representatives in this city, commencing next Monday night, affirming the leadership and succession of the respective churches have been signed, and we hope to be able to satisfy the people concerning the stability of the claims of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In the faith,

M. H. BOND.

BLAIR, Neb., Jan., 18.

Editors Herald.—The discussion between Bro. C. Scott, and Elder Almus Adams of the Church of God, began January 11. Have now held seven evening sessions of two hours each, discussing the first two propositions both of which relate to the nature of man and whether the spirit is conscious after the separation from the body.

Elder Adams sought to maintain the position that consciousness belonged to man because of the combination of the earthly elements of which the body was and is formed. He admitted that the spirit is the life-giving principle, yet claimed it was nothing but the breath, and at death returned to God—or up into the air—who gave it; hence necessarily argued that when Elijah was translated he only went up into the air,—not "into heaven" as the scriptures say.

This error was overthrown by a proper application of Job 34:14, and Isaiah 42:5 wherein it is shown that man possesses both breath and spirit; and that the "breath of life" (Gen. 2:7), or "breath of the Almighty" (Job 33:4) which gave life to the combination formed "of the dust of the ground" (Gen. 2:7), is more than the air; and that it returned to God who gave it.

Elder Adams advocated that the knowledge man obtained and all it was possible for him to obtain is through the five senses; seeing, hearing, tasting, smelling, and feeling; but it was clearly shown, and stands uncontradicted that "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding" (Job 32:8), and that will (Math. 26:41), knowledge (1 Cor. 2:11), and power to choose, (Isaiah 26:9), are attributes of the spirit; and that the ability to receive testimony (Rom. 8:16), to glorify God (1 Cor. 6:20), or of becoming cleansed from filthiness (2 Cor. 7:1), are attributable to the spirit, and that "that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6), hence proved the spirit a reality as much as the body, and a conscious entity instead of being altogether "wind," as the nature of Elder Adams' argument would indicate.

Elder Adams could not see but one death, yet light showed that one could be dead while they lived (1 Tim. 5:6; Math. 10:22), which was in "trespasses and sins" (Eph. 2:1.)

Elder Adams confounded the life or consciousness of the spirit with "eternal life" or "spiritual life." It was proven clearly that while man could kill the body that he could not kill the soul (Matt. 10:28), and that while it said that it was possible for the soul to be destroyed in hell, yet it nowhere said that the soul would be destroyed.

It was shown and not contradicted: 1. That God is the Father of our spirits. (Heb. 12:9.) 1. That God formeth the spirit of man within him. (Zech. 12:1.) 3. That there are spirit entities which enter into bodies, and are cast out by the power of God, and that while within they at times know more than the man, (Mark 5:7,) and at other times show greater power; all of which is adverse to man's good (Mark 9:26); also that they may go out and make choice to return, and seek others to go with them (Matt. 12:43-45); thus proving there were living entities not having earthly bodies, having power and intelligence; while Elder Adams claimed that all these passages referred to physical diseases, and that the idea of disembodied spirits, or casting out devils, was a heathen idea. 5. That there are angelic spirits. 6. That the wicked are turned into hell (Ps. 9:17), go down into the pit (Ezek. 32:18), or hell (Ezek. 32:21), and are conscious therein; and that Christ visits them and preaches to them (1 Peter 3:18-20); and that after the second resurrection that death and hell will be cast into the lake of fire. (Rev. 20:14.) And, 7. That the souls under the altar were conscious. (Rev. 6:9-11).

This presents only a brief outline of a few of the many thoughts presented.

The sentiment of the people generally is that Bro. Scott did well; one lady who believes in the unconsciousness of the spirit between death and the resurrection stated that she believed that Bro. Scott was able, if he had a disposition to, to take a lie and prove it to be true, or at least it would take a very smart man to meet his arguments in behalf of the truth. This is one way of setting aside the force of evidence and argument.

Saints are feeling joyful, and much encouraged, and some interest is being shown.

Begun on the second subject of setting up of the kingdom of God as referred to in Daniel 2:44 last night.

More anon.

J. F. MINTUN.

KRUMROY, Ohio, Jan. 18.

Editors Herald.—I arrived here on the 8th inst. and began preaching the same evening in the Fox schoolhouse, and continued my efforts until last night, the 17th. The people have come to our meetings for miles around, and one third of them could not be seated, and the best of attention was given me throughout the services, by both old and young. The good Lord greatly blessed my weak efforts from the beginning to the end. To him be the praise.

I have baptized five and there are many others very near the kingdom. One of the five baptized was Bro. Frank Spriggle's wife. Bro. Spriggle has lived an upright life ever since he came into the church, and that is the reason why so many have such faith in the Latter Day Saints' doctrine. Bro. Palmer lived here some years ago and did a good work for the Master. It was this brother who helped to sow the seed of the gospel in these parts. The writer preached a great many sermons two miles from the Fox schoolhouse years ago. Brn. Bond, Powell, Parrish and Williams preached in a grove and schoolhouse two miles south five or six years ago. I shall return here the latter part of February and hold a week's meeting.

Before coming here I held preaching meetings in Akron and baptized four there, and Bro. Powell baptized one a few days before, which makes ten baptized into that branch within the last few weeks; and the end is not yet. On about the 27th of December I organized a branch at Akron, the old Lakeview branch having about gone down, as some had died, and all had moved away, only a few left in Akron and Canton. We have now about twenty-one members in the Akron branch. Bro. Hugh Palmer was ordained an elder, and also elected president; Bro. James McConnaughy priest; Sr. Wike clerk, and Sr. Jenkins treasurer.

I blessed two here yesterday which makes forty-two children that I have blessed since April Conference; hence it is that if all those children grow up to serve our heavenly Father, surely the Lord will have workers in this part of his vineyard to advance his grand cause among the people.

Notwithstanding the hard times, and many other things that have transpired to try the faith of the saints within the last few years, the good Lord is abundantly blessing those who are putting their trust in him. The saints should remember that this is a day of great trial; yes, and a day of great sacrifice; therefore, much patience, implicit faith in the sure promises of God are absolutely necessary on the part of God's people if they would be successful in the Christian race in which they have begun, that in the end all may be able to reach the golden strand.

I feel encouraged by the cheering influence of God's Spirit to continue in the warfare, and to do all within my power to bring souls to a knowledge of God and his blessed gospel. With love to all, I remain,

Your brother in the covenant,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

HOT SPRINGS, Utah, Jan. 16.

Editors Herald.—Since New Years' day I have been in Salt Lake City, Ogden, Plain City, Hot Springs, Willard, and north of Willard, visiting among friends and saints. Of course I preached in the city and at Ogden, and am to occupy there to-morrow, if I am able to get out anywhere; over a foot of snow last night, and still is snowing.

I met a Bro. Jansen and his wife at Ogden, of the Brighamites, from North Willard, that will unite with us, so they say. Bro. J. Toombs and I visited them yesterday. He claims he has seen me in a vision four years ago, and that I would give him the proper instructions. You know what I have to tell him and all others—to turn their "Agars" and "Ishmaels" out; but they don't hesitate to tell that "Agar" and "her son" are not out in the wilderness yet. I have some interesting talks with friends of that side.

It has always been a question in my mind, and is yet, whether this land of salt is well adapted or not to grow and nourish saints after they are rescued from the snares of this community. Glancing at the condition rather confirms the doubtful side. While we may do good work here in "rescuing the perishing," I am satisfied that we cannot more than others, build much of a Zion in Utah. "As it was in the days of Noah," I think would be the best policy. Many have been contaminated and lost already; children especially are exposed to the withering blasts of apostasy and corruption. "Come out of her," and "partake not of her sins," I think stands good—preserve what we have first, and then save more if we can, and at as little sacrifice as possible.

I know that the plea is made to "hold the saints to establish the work," etc., but in many cases this plan has served to disestablish more than to establish. Of course my experiences are not very extensive among the saints; in the future I may change.

Bro. and Sr. Toombs are of great strength to the work through these parts, but cannot always preserve all.

I was very sorry to learn that Bro. H. N. Hansen had to go home.

Yours, etc.,
J. T. DAVIS.

CARROLL, Iowa, Jan. 14.

Editors Herald.—Having carefully read Volume 1 of our Church History I am prepared to say that I like it very much. The candid and unassuming way in which the claims of the Palmyra Seer and the church are presented adds great strength to the volume. Publishing the full text of the revelations in connection with the circumstances that made necessary the instruction which they contain is grand. No one can fully appreciate this history unless he reads with care the revelations which it contains. I never read those revelations without receiving the testimony of the Spirit that they are authorized of God. Praise God for the witness of the Holy Spirit.

Last Sunday I met with the saints at Defiance and preached for them. In harmony with the vote of the Galland's Grove branch and all the members present at said meeting I ordained Bro. Ichabod McCord to the office of priest, and the Spirit witnessed to me that his call and appointment and ordination was in harmony with the mind and will of the Spirit. He is to take the oversight of that part of the Church of God who reside at Defiance and vicinity and preside over their meetings under the care and directions of the president of said branch and district officers. Humility with faith and prayer and perseverance will secure the blessings of God and the spiritual growth of the church.

I came to this city Monday and on Tuesday Elder J. K. Nelson, pastor of the Church of God at this place, accompanied me a distance of five miles and back over a very rough road to see the trustees about securing the use of their church for the remainder of the week. We secured the use of their church and I commenced services at once. I mention these items because it is so seldom that a minister of any other church but our own will treat one of our ministers with such Christian courtesy. How I wish he could understand the importance of our message. All goes well.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

MONTOUR, Iowa, Jan. 19.

Editors Herald.—Sr. Mary J. Vennell, who is always wide awake to the interest of the church, and ever anxious for her neighbors to hear the gospel message, engaged the Smith schoolhouse for preaching, a new opening. Then she wrote for me to come and occupy. I opened up on the 9th with a fair crowd, and the congregation kept getting larger every night except when we had stormy nights. Several are investigating. If the weather permits I will stay here over three Sundays.

Mr. and Sr. Vennell gave me a good stopping place, and a number have invited me to come and see them. May the Lord bless the seed sown here, that it may bring some into the fold.

In bonds,
J. S. ROTH.

WEST LIBERTY, Ill., Jan. 15.

Editors Herald.—I have received the first volume of the Church History and read it about half through. I think it is a grand work so far as I have read it. No one that loves the truth and desires to be well informed in regard to the rise and progress of the church can afford to be without this important History. All the brethren in the field especially should not fail to send to the Herald Office at once and get this work. Brethren, you will find it to be a great help to you in your work. In fact every family of saints ought to have one. When the second volume is published I expect to forward the cash at once and obtain one. I am busy at work in the Master's cause and desire to labor on.

I remain as ever your brother in hope of the gospel,
F. M. SLOVER.

THE RIVER SIDON. WHERE IS IT?—
NO. 2.

I WILL now refer again to the places shown on the chart where the ten tribes traveled to at 27. On the head of the third person is attached a water symbol, which shows that where these ten tribes traveled to that it was settled on and also that there was water connected to it, and that its channel is on the east side of the place, and runs northward. Such being the case it is in harmony with the location of the ruins at Tulha, as shown on the Bancroft map; it also answers to the location of the city of Zarahemla of the Nephite account of it being on the west side of the Sidon River. I hold, therefore, that the Usumasinta answereth to the Sidon River and the ruins at Tulha—the site of “the great city of Zarahemla.”

The question might be asked, If the place at 27 is the location of the ruins at Tulha, why is it thus shown on the chart?

It is thus shown, apparently, on account of the ancient system of using symbols denoting their course of travel and their place of location in a geographical sense. Hence by those symbols we have to trace out their routes and locations. By the same symbols can their history be traced, the year when it began, and for four hundred years by the Botturini and Gemelli charts.

I will now refer you to the reported ruins of cities and fortifications near the head of the Usumasinta River, which reads:—

Like Patinamit, Utatlan stood on a plateau, or mesa, bounded by a deep ravine on every side, a part of which ravine is believed to be of artificial construction. The barranca can only be crossed and the site of the city reached at one point, from the southeast. Guarding this single approach at a distance of about half a mile from the village of Santa Cruz, are the ruins of a long line of structures of carefully laid hewn stone, evidently intended as fortifications and connected one with another by a ditch. . . . Crossing the barranca from the fort Resguardo, we find the table which was the site of the ancient city covered throughout its whole extent with shapeless masses of ruins among which the foundations of a few structures only can be definitely made out.—Native Races of the Pacific States, vol. 4. p. 125.

This account of the ruins at Utatlan is in harmony with the Nephite account of the location of Manti, at the head of Sidon River. (See Alma 22: 3-16; and chapter 26.) The twenty-fourth paragraph of this chapter shows that the entrance or approach to the “city of Manti” was from “the wilderness side,” which by reading the account it shows that the wilderness side was southeastward; and the wilderness referred to was the wilderness that divided the land of Nephi from the land of Zarahemla. It is evident, therefore, that the ruins at Utatlan is the site of the ancient city of Manti.

Again:—

On the hacienda of Carrizal, some twenty miles north of Guatemala [city], we hear of cyclopean debris, or masses of great unhewn stones heaped one on another without cement, and forming gigantic walls, which cover a considerable extent of territory on the lofty heights that guard the approaches to the Motagua Valley.—Native Races of Pacific States, vol 4, p. 118.

And:—

The ruins of the ancient Patinamit, “the city,” the Cakchiquel capital. It is near the modern town of Tecpan Guatemala, fifteen miles southeast of the lake [Atitlan lake], and forty miles northwest of Guatemala. The aboriginal town, to which Brasseur de Bourbourg would assign a very ancient, pre-Toltec origin.—Ibid. 121, 122.

And also:—

Extending eastward from the region of Huehuetenango to that of Salama in the province of Vera Paz, a distance of nearly one hundred miles, there seems to be a line of ruins, occurring at frequent intervals, particularly in the valley of the Rabinal and about the town of that name. A map of Guatemala now before me locates seventeen of these ruins. . . . All the ruins along this line would seem to belong to the class of those occupied by the natives, chiefly Cakchiquels, at the time of the conquest, most of them being the remains of fortresses or fortified towns, built on strong natural positions at the river mouths, guarding the entrance to fertile vallies.

Opposite the mouth of the river Rabinal, where the Pacalah empties into the Chixoy, or Usumasinta, are the ruins of Cawinal, visited by the Abbe Brasseur in 1856, and by him pronounced the finest in Vera Paz. They are situated on both sides of the stream in a fine mountain-girt valley, the approach to which was guarded by a long line of fortifications, pyramidal mounds, and watchtowers, whose remains may yet be seen.—Ibid. pp. 130, 131.

I will now quote briefly from the Nephite records to show its harmony with those from the Bancroft work, that the locations of their fortified cities near the head of the Sidon River, along on the southeastward borders of the land of Zarahemla, which were built to protect themselves against the invasion of the Lamanites, are apparently identical with the locations of these ruins, which reads:—

And it came to pass that they [the Lamanites] took their camp and moved forth towards the land of Zarahemla, in the wilderness. . . . Moroni, on the other hand, had been preparing the minds of the people to be faithful unto the Lord their God; yea, he had been strengthening the armies of the Nephites, and erecting small forts, or places of resort; throwing up banks of earth round about to enclose his armies, and also building walls of stone to encircle them about, round about their cities, and the borders of their lands; yea, all round about the land; and in their weakest fortifications he did place the greater number of men; and thus he did fortify and strengthen the land which was possessed by the Nephites.—Alma 21: 31.

And now it came to pass, in the eleventh month of the nineteenth year, on the tenth day of the month, the armies of the Laman-ites were seen approaching towards the land [city] of Ammonihah. . . . But behold, how great was their disappointment; for behold, the Nephites had dug up a ridge of earth round about them, which was so high that the Lamanites could not cast their stones and arrows at them that they might take effect, neither could they come upon them, save it was by their place of entrance.—Alma 21: 34.

Now if King Amalickiah had come down out of the land of Nephi, at the head of his army perhaps he would have caused the Lamanites to have attacked the Nephites at the city of Ammonihah; for behold, he did not care for the blood of his people. . . . And behold, his chief captains durst not attack the Nephites at the city of Ammonihah, for Moroni had altered the management of affairs among the Nephites, insomuch that the Lamanites were disappointed in their places of retreat, and they could not come upon them; therefore they retreated into the wilderness and took their camp and marched towards the land of Noah, supposing that to be the next best place for them to come against the Nephites; for they knew not that Moroni had fortified or had built forts of security for every city in all the land round about; therefore they marched forward to the land of Noah with a firm determination; yea, their chief captains came forward and took an oath that they would destroy the people of that city. But behold, to their astonishment the city of Noah, which had hitherto been a weak place, had now, by the means of Moroni, become strong; yea, even to exceed the strength of the city of Ammonihah. . . . And behold, Moroni had appointed Lehi to be chief captain over the men of that city; and it was that same Lehi who fought with the Lamanites in the valley on the east of the river Sidon.—Alma 21: 35.

Now behold, the Lamanites could not get into their forts of security by any other way save by the entrance. . . . And thus were the Nephites prepared to destroy all such as should attempt to climb up to enter the fort by any other way, by casting over stones and arrows at them. . . .—Alma 21: 36.

And it came to pass that the captains of the Lamanites brought up their armies before the place of entrance and began to contend with the Nephites to get into their place of security; but behold, they were driven back from time to time, insomuch that they were slain, with an immense slaughter. . . . Thus the Nephites had all power over their enemies; and thus the Lamanites did attempt to destroy the Nephites, until their chief captains were all slain; yea, and more than a thousand of the Lamanites were slain; while on the other hand, there was not a single soul of the Nephites which was slain. There were about fifty who were wounded who had been exposed to the arrows of the Lamanites through the pass, but they were shielded by their shields, and their breast-plates, and their head-plates, insomuch that their wounds were upon their legs: many of which were very severe.—Alma 21: 37.

And it came to pass that when the Lamanites saw that their chief captains were all slain, they fled into the wilderness. And it came to pass that they returned to the land of Nephi to inform their king, Amalickiah, . . . concerning their great loss.—Alma 21:38.

These extracts are sufficient to show that the cities of Ammouihah and Noah were located on the southern boundary or borders of the land of Zarahemla, and northward of the strip of wilderness that divided Zarahemla from Nephi and located also near to the head of the River Sidon. And by the account, that the chief captain of the Nephites at Noah, being the same captain who "fought with the Lamanites on the east of the River Sidon," infers that the city called Noah was west of the river. It is evident, therefore, that the location of Noah answereth to the location of the ruins at Patinamit, as shown on the Bancroft map.

Now in regard to the strip of wilderness that divided the land of Nephi from the land of Zarahemla, it is seen by Mr. Bancroft's map, that there is quite a space between the Honduras line that divides it from Guatemala, and the locations of those ruins, which space apparently, more or less of it, was the strip of wilderness of the Nephite account, which extended from "the east sea to the west sea." (Alma 13:11; 22:2.) And by reference to the Gemelli chart, it shows that northwest of the beehive figure, the city of Nephi, such a strip of land is shown on the chart. And it shows, too, that it is located on a rough mountain country like the southeast part of Guatemala.

There are other evidences in favor of the southeast part of Guatemala being the location of the narrow strip of wilderness, and that Utatlan is the site of the ancient city of Manti; by the ruins of an ancient bridge on the Usumasinta River, a short distance down the river northward, which reads:—

Along a rough descent . . . we looked down upon the valley of the Chixoy. The little town of Sacapulas, on the hillside, above the right bank of the river. . . . Over the river was a bridge of six piers with hewn logs. . . . A short distance up the river were two brick and stone arches of a more ancient bridge, extending from the town side. Originally it was nine feet wide and about two hundred and fifty feet long. Its age we could not learn; but a large sand-box tree (Hura crepitans) seven and half feet in circumference had grown up in the very midst of the paved approach. . . . The tiles used in the arches were thin like those in old Roman structures. Frank sketched the bridge, and we followed in thought the river until it became the River Pasion, then as the Usumasinta (the ancient river Lacandons).

From this high land, . . . we caught a glimpse of Santa Cruz del Quiche, high enough, but seemingly in a valley, for mountains like the hills about Jerusalem guarded it on every side.—The land of the Quetzal, pp. 113-118. Wm. T. Brigham, A. M.

The location of the ruins of this ancient bridge to that of the remains at Utatlan, now called Santa Cruz del Quiche, and called also by the Quiche natives, the "road of waters," (N. R. P. S. vol. 4, p. 124,) is worthy of more than a passing notice having been connected with the Nephite history in their journey when traveling to and from the land of Nephi, after they had located in the land of Zarahemla; notwithstanding the silence of their records of a bridge having been built over the river for the convenience of travel from one land to the other. It is evident, however, that bridges were built over their large streams for that purpose, as relics of bridges have been found in other parts in Central America, and Utatlan being also called the "road of waters," infers that the bridge referred to, had once been on the main route of travel through that part of Central America. The course being in harmony with the account of the Nephites when they traveled from Zarahemla city to the Nephite country by way of Manti; and also when they traveled from Nephi city to Zarahemla, etc. (See Alma 12:1; 15:3-6.) And that Manti was on the west side of the River Sidon, (see Alma 20:5-10.) These references show also that Manti was located some distance from the river, which shows the harmony of its location with the location of the ruins at Utatlan on the Bancroft map, and the ancient name of the river, as quoted, the name being "Lacandon," shows that it has in it the roots of "Sidon."

There is another group of important ruins which is worthy of our deepest consideration, located about forty miles northwest of Tulha, called Palenque, and reported to be the most grand of all, and also that the relics of art as found among the ruins exhibit the most beautiful native art of any found in America. The ruins are located as follows:—

As we go southward from the gulf coast, and reach the boundary of Chiapas the face of the country changes rapidly from marshy flat to undulating hills of gradually increasing height toward the Pacific. . . . Herè is an earthly paradise, the charms of which have been enjoyed with enthusiastic delight by the few lovers of nature who had penetrated its solitudes. The natural advantages of this region seem to have been fully appreciated by aboriginal Americans, for here they reared the temples and palaces of one of their grandest cities, or religious centers, which as a ruin under the name of Palenque has become famous throughout the world, as it was doubtless throughout America in the days of its pristine glory many centuries ago.—Native Races of the Pacific States, vol. 4, pp. 288, 289.

The topography of the region is not definitely marked out on the maps, and the nomenclature of the streams and mountains is hopelessly confused; but many parallel streams flow northwestward from the hills, and unite to form a branch of the Usumasinta.—Ibid., p. 297.

The location of these ruins and their nature, infers that it is the ruins and site of the city of Bountiful; yea, the location of the sacred city of the Nephites, where Jesus Christ appeared unto them and ministered to them in person, after his resurrection in the year 34 A. D. For the symbolic and representative figures as found among the ruins give such evidence in the matter; as also does its location, it being northward from the ruins at Tulha, which answers to the location of the city of Zarahemla, as before shown. The ruins at Palenque, therefore, answers to the site of the city of Bountiful, which was located on the northward borders of the land of Zarahemla, and near to the borders of the Jaredite country, and "narrow pass or neck of land" which divided the two countries. (Alma 24:3.) Hence it is seen that all the country between the two seas from the Honduras Bay, to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, constituted the land of Zarahemla, of the Nephite account, which was also "nearly surrounded by water." (Alma 13:11.) Compare our modern map of Central America, with this part I have described above, and see if it is not in harmony with each other?

And as a former name of the river Usumasinta was called Lacandon, having in it the roots of Sidon, so also is it seen that Guatemala has in it the roots of the name of the country called Zarahemla by the Nephite records.

THE STICK OF EPHRAIM.

W. T. BOZARTH, of Denver, Colorado, writes October 24, 1896:—

BRO. COOPER:—

I see you take the ground that the tribe of Ephraim wrote the Book of Mormon instead of the tribe of Manasseh. Now will you please give me the proof, page and paragraph in the Book of Mormon, that Ephraim's posterity ever came to this land or that they really wrote the Book of Mormon?

In reply we would state that we know of no passage within the Book of Mormon that states in so many words that the Book of Mormon was written by the tribe of Ephraim or that their descendants immigrated to this continent; neither is it declared in the book that the descendants of Ephraim did not make up a part of the colonies that immigrated to this continent at different periods of time; neither does it state that all the colonizations that took place were of the tribe or seed of Manasseh only.

If the fact that the Book of Mormon is the stick of Ephraim or the stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim depended entirely for proof on tracing the lineage of Ephraim through the immigrants who formed the different colonies, it would probably fail, or prove as difficult a task as to prove that the immigrants who formed the different colonies were of the seed of Manasseh only, or that the stick of Judah was written by the tribe of Judah or his lineal descendants. To prove, as is assured by some, that the Book of Mormon was written by the unmixed seed of Manasseh, the direct lineage of the wife of Lehi, as well as the lineage of the Jaredites and all other colonists who at different periods settled in this land, must be traced.

Before proceeding to answer the questions as propounded it will be well for us to consider, in a Biblical sense, first, what constitutes the stick of Judah. We will then be the better able to determine what it takes to constitute the stick of Ephraim. The stick of Judah we understand consists of the writings that were in the possessions of Judah, Benjamin, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, and accepted by them as the dealings of God with the children of men from the beginning, together with the recorded teachings of Christ and the apostles and other writers of the New Testament; or, in other words, the Old and New Testaments, familiarly known as the Bible; but how many of the different tribes are represented as writers in the books of the Old and New Testaments is not easily determined; but suffice it to say that all the records or writings accepted by Judah as the representative head is the stick of Judah. Paul, one of the most voluminous writers of the New Testament, says, "I am of the stock of Abraham of the tribe of Benjamin;" yet Paul, in a Biblical sense, was a Jew or of the house or nation of Judah, and the Book of Mormon says, speaking of the New Testament, that it came from the mouth of a Jew, evidently signifying Judah in a national sense. But it is not declared anywhere in the Testaments, Old or New, that either was written exclusively or perhaps even partially by the tribe of Judah, or directly by Judah himself or his lineage; yet the Prophet Ezekiel (37:16-20) denominates it the stick of Judah, notwithstanding it is written to the children (tribes) of Israel his companions. We understand, therefore, that the stick of Judah is so called, not from the fact that it was written exclusively or even partially by the direct seed or lineage of Judah, but from the fact that it is accepted as a standard of the faith and practice of the seed of Abraham coming through the house of Judah as a representative head for the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and the half-tribe of Manasseh. We are now ready to consider the stick of Ephraim.

Since the stick of Judah is the record of the nation of Judah consisting of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, so likewise the stick of Ephraim, or the stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim is the record of the whole house of Joseph, consisting of the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh; and as Judah is the representative head of the two and a half tribes, so Ephraim is the representative head of the house of Joseph, as "he set Ephraim before Manasseh:"—

And he blessed them that day, saying, In thee shall Israel bless, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and as Manasseh: and he set Ephraim before Manasseh.—Genesis 48:20.

So whatsoever was written by the seed of Ephraim or Manasseh and those who may have adhered to them, is the record of Ephraim, for unto

Ephraim pertained the chief blessing:—

And his father refused, and said, I know it, my son, I know it: he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great; but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations.—Genesis 48:19.

It follows then that the writings or records written by or to either tribe of the house of Joseph, including the books of Moses or of other prophets and accepted or adopted as their polity, whether on the eastern or western continent, must of necessity be entitled "The stick of Ephraim." The title therefore of the Book of Mormon as the stick of Ephraim is not dependent upon the uncertain tracings of the lineage of Ephraim as its authors, but it has for its foundation the word of God:—

Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, [that is the whole house of Joseph, both Ephraim and Manasseh,] the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.—Ezekiel 37:16-19.

To this agrees the word of the Lord to the Palmyra Seer in Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2:—

Behold, this is wisdom in me; wherefore marvel not for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth, and with Moroni, whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fullness of my everlasting gospel; to whom I have committed the keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim.

The foregoing prophecy of Ezekiel has a double signification, and the Book of Mormon, as a completed record or stick, a double application.

It will be readily seen by the sixteenth verse that a prepared stick or roll is without title, but when written upon, to, or for any tribe or people, it becomes the stick of that tribe, house, or people, as the word of the prophet clearly signifies: "Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, [that is, a prepared roll without title], then write upon it, For Judah, and the children of Israel his companions," (that is, the tribes and fragments of tribes great or small of the house of Israel who may have adhered to or consorted with Judah,) and this record now becomes the stick of Judah.

The second signification is more clearly pointed out by the prophet concerning the stick of Ephraim: "Then take another stick and write upon it, [the prepared roll or stick], for Joseph, the stick of Ephraim;" that is, write the record or stick of Ephraim for Joseph or the house of Joseph, both Ephraim and Manasseh; therefore whatsoever is written for either house of Joseph is the stick of Ephraim.

The Book of Mormon as the stick of Ephraim has a double application, first, as a record it pertained particularly to the inhabitants of this continent; in the second place, in the latter days it was delivered by the angel to the seed of Ephraim by way of Gentiles so-called; and now when thy people shall speak unto thee saying (as they everywhere do), "What meanest thou by these?" (no doubt sticks), "say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim," or the seed of Ephraim which has been scattered or sifted through all nation, and join him unto the stick of Judah.

If therefore the Book of Mormon is a true record, it follows as a necessity that it is now in the hands of the seed of Ephraim whose lineage has been lost by the way of Gentiles and they can be known only by revelation or by their adherence to the standard or stick of Ephraim and the stick of Judah combined, "for the rebellious are not of the seed of Ephraim."

We submit the above for the columns of the Herald with the hope that it may awaken interest and investigation in others who may be able to give us the true light upon the subject, if this is found to be incorrect; asking the prayers of all saints for my deliverance from my deep affliction and helpless condition,

In gospel bonds,

Dictated. I. N. W. COOPER.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The convention of the Spring River district will meet February 15, 1897, 9:30 a. m., for business. It will be election of officers for coming year, and each school is requested to appoint delegates and instruct them in regard to election. Don't fail to instruct them. In afternoon thirty minutes of session will be taken up with teachers and superintendents normal class. Also entertainment in the evening. Each Sunday school is to appoint its own committee on program, and all work for the banner and make entertainment a success. If any Sunday schools send their report to me, please send in time, so I can forward them to Weir City, Kansas, (where convention is to be held,) in plenty of time for convention.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, about..... 4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about.... 1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

NOTICES.

To the Officers of the Branches of the Ohio District:—In consequence of not having district conference before the General Conference of the church, and in order that the General Church Recorder may be better enabled to make a correct report of gains and losses to the church, I therefore request the officers of the several branches to make out complete report of all gains and losses in each branch since their last report and forward the same to the district secretary, A. B. Kirkendall, Creola, Vinton County, Ohio, not later than the 25th of February, 1897.

JAMES MOLER, Pres.
LIMERICK, Ohio, Jan. 23, 1897.

TO DISTRICT PRESIDENTS AND SECRETARIES.

It is necessary in the execution of the work of the church to have a record of the territorial boundaries of every district, for the information of the Presidency and other general authorities, and for the benefit of all concerned. District presidents and secretaries are therefore requested to forward to the Secretary of the Church a statement of the boundaries of their respective districts, by counties, being particular to designate clearly the counties of each separate State, where portions of two or more States are included in their districts.

Where boundaries have not definitely been defined, they should be given as clearly as possible, and subsequent actions defining boundary lines be reported.

Prompt responses are requested that general work may be facilitated. It is hoped that reports will be received from every district in the United States, Canada, Nova Scotia, and Great Britain, before the General Conference of 1897; and from the Australian districts as soon thereafter as possible.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

HALF FARE PERMITS—LOCAL MINISTERS.

Under date of January 14, 1897, Chairman Caldwell of the Western Passenger Association gives notice that the "note" under Rule No. 1, which reads, "This to include clergymen who are pastors of churches of such denominations as do not believe in a paid ministry, provided their only other occupation is farming," does not apply to ministers of the Reorganized Church. He says: "You will observe that the clause concerning farmer-pastors applies only to such denominations as do not believe in a paid ministry, and we have never classed the Reorganized Church . . . in the category referred to, it being our understanding that there is, in your denomination, a class of workers (called missionaries, we believe) who do receive support from the church and, while we understand fully that the local pastors themselves do not, yet that would not alter the fact that they belong to a denomination which does recognize, in a sense, a paid ministry."

This interpretation denies the half fare permit privilege to all except ministers "engaged solely in religious work, having no other business or occupation," and whose names are not included in General Conference appointment lists or indorsed by general missionaries in charge.

TO ALL MINISTERS CONCERNED.

Under date of January 13 the Chairman of the Western Passenger Association states that applications have been received from a number of ministers general and local whose statements "show that part of their work is selling church publications;" that "at the last meeting of the Clergy Committee the question of the sales of books or periodicals of any kind, religious or otherwise, was taken up and fully discussed and the decision reached was to the effect that clergy credentials could not properly be issued to publishing agents of any character, even where the agents themselves derived no personal profit from their sales; in other words, the selling of books or publications is considered secular work, and those engaged in it . . . must travel in the same way as do agents of secular publishing houses . . . even though such works are entirely denominational, would not alter the matter; and hence we would not feel that it would be proper for us, from information at hand, to approve the applications to which we refer; however, we will await any further communication you may wish to make on the subject before taking definite action."

After consultation with President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley, who with the undersigned were appointed a committee on railroad permits by the General Conference of 1896, notice is hereby given that ministers accepting half fare permits will be required, under the Association ruling, to cease acting as agents for church or other publications, or from engaging in any secular business or employment while holding unexpired permits; and that Chairman Caldwell has been notified that all ministers of the Reorganized Church holding permits have been so instructed.

Particulars have been given that all concerned might comprehend these rulings.

Branch clerks have been thus instructed in the past by General Church Recorder, Bro. H. A. Stebbins, in his "Suggestions to Branch Clerks" in Herald some two years ago. If these suggestions are carefully heeded it will save yourselves and district clerk and Bro. Stebbins much extra trouble and expense of correspondence in future to rectify mistakes. THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayments of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

HE FIXES THE SABBATH.—NO. 2.

S. W. GAMBLE ELUCIDATES FOURTH COMMANDMENT FOR JEWS.

Saturday Idea Is Excluded and the Movable Nature of the Day Is Expounded—Dr. Emil G. Hirsch and Other Hebrew Scholars in Chicago Are Convinced of the Value of the Discovery—Rules are cited in Proof.

DECALOGUE IN DEUTERONOMY.

"THE ten commandments copied into the Book of Deuteronomy are the real copy of the 'two tables,' for Moses says: 'These words the Lord spake . . . and he added no more; and he wrote them in two tables of stone and delivered them to me.' (Deut. 5: 22.) 'These words' immediately follow the ten commandments and constitute a certificate to the correctness of the copy. The ten commandments in Exodus 20 were written by Moses before he went up into the mount to get the tables, hence they are not a copy of the tables.

"There is one side to the fourth commandment that is entirely overlooked in the study of the question—i. e.: 'Six days shalt thou labor.' After the six days of labor the seventh day is to be a Sabbath. We will briefly discuss the reason given in this fourth commandment why they should hallow it. 'Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath.'" (Deut. 5: 15.) Their

Sabbath was to commemorate the date of their deliverance from slavery, Abib 15. On the evening of the 14th of Abib they killed the lamb in Egypt, and after midnight Pharaoh sent them word to depart out in haste. So the next morning, Abib 15, the people were freed and started rejoicing toward Canaan. (Ex. 12.)

FORCE OF MODERN INSTANCES.

"We cannot celebrate the declaration of our independence on a fixed day of the week, for it occurred on a fixed date; neither can the colored people celebrate their emancipation on a fixed day, but upon the proper date.

"Hence, when Moses wrote the book of Leviticus (a commentary or explanation of the ceremonies taught in Deuteronomy for the instruction of the descendants of Levi), in order that they might properly execute the fourth commandment, in its relation to the special Sabbath services he wrote the twenty-third chapter to make it plain. He calls all the feasts 'holy convocations' or 'Sabbaths' because as the colored people take great delight and indulge in feasting in commemoration of their freedom from slavery, so did the children of Israel, on every Sabbath, but more especially the 'special Sabbaths,' which contrasted their toil, suffering, and slavery with freedom, harvest, and fruitage. Hence, Leviticus 23 states that on 'the 15th of the first month,' the month of Abib, they shall have 'an holy convocation, ye shall do no servile work therein.' (Leviticus 23: 7.) In verse 11 the next day is called 'the morrow after the Sabbath.' Verses 15 and 16 read: 'Ye shall count from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven Sabbaths shall be complete.'

VIEWS OF BIBLE CRITICS.

"Josephus, Adam Clarke, McClintock and Strong, Robinson, Jamison, Fausset and Brown, 'Pulpit Commentary'; S. H. Kellog in 'Expositors' Bible'; J. G. Murphy, Bishop Elliot, C. J. Ellicott, Smith in 'Bible Dictionary'; Bush, and many others of the best Bible critics, agree that the

'count' to begin 'on the morrow after the Sabbath' began on Abib 16, hence Abib 16 was the 'first day of the week' and Abib 15 'the Sabbath,' and Moses says (Lev. 23: 41), 'It shall be a statute forever in your generations.' In Lev. 24: 5-9, the law of shewbread is explained, which was to be put on the table 'every Sabbath . . . continually . . . by an everlasting covenant.' 'On the first day in the second year, on the first day of the month . . . the tabernacle was reared up.' (Exodus 11: 17.)

"And he set the bread in order upon the table of the Lord, as the Lord commanded Moses' (verse 23). This service was performed only on the Sabbath, hence if Abib 1 was a Sabbath, then Abib 8, 15, 22, and 29 would also be Sabbaths in the second year as they had been in the first.

"In Matthew 28: 1, the 'Sabbath' Christ lay in the grave was the 'passover Sabbath,' Abib 15. John 19: 31-42, shows that Christ was buried on 'the Jews' preparation day,' the day before the Sabbath of the passover, which John 19: 31 describes, 'for that Sabbath day was an high day.' It is therefore seen that the Jewish Sabbaths at the time of the crucifixion were on the correct dates, Abib 15, 22, 29, etc.

DATES IN GOSPELS.

"The three events are described in John 5: 48, and Luke 6: 1-5; and Luke 6: 6-11, according to Strong, Lightfoot, Doddridge, Newcomb, Townsend, Gresswell, Jarvis, and Robinson, in their 'Harmony of the Gospels' as occurring on the 'feast of the passover, and the next two successive Sabbaths.' Therefore, on Abib 15, 22, 29, two years before the crucifixion. Hence, since Abib 15, 22, and 29 were Jewish Sabbaths, and occurred on Saturday in the year in which Christ was crucified, there is no lunar, solar, or any other accepted calendar that will locate the three events described above on Saturday, but they were on the Sabbath. The word 'Sabbath' is used twenty-five times in regard to those three occurrences, and yet not one of them can be located on Saturday.

"Let us consider briefly the first requirement of the fourth commandment, 'six days shall work be done.' Some will say, 'But these were in addition to the regular Saturday Sabbath.' Let me see if I can illustrate the fallacy of such a theory: Suppose Abib 15 came on Tuesday, and Wednesday was the morrow after the Sabbath.

"Tuesday, Abib 15, and the next seven Tuesdays would be Sabbaths, and Wednesday the day of Pentecost. But, while I believe there is no Bible authority for it, I will suppose that Saturday, Abib 19 and the next seven Saturdays were Sabbaths, could you work six days in each week, and yet keep Tuesday and Saturday in seven of them, and Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday in one week?

WORK ON THE SABBATH.

"I want to point out another difficulty. The command teaches that 'on the Sabbath of the Lord thy God thou shalt not do any work.' (Deut. 5: 14.)

"On Abib 10 every year they arranged who should eat the passover together, and selected a lamb of the right size, a male, without spot or blemish. (Ex. 12: 3-5.) On Abib 14 the families had to butcher and dress and cook the lamb and prepare for the Sabbath (Ex. 12: 6-11), and Abib 16 the first ripe grain was waved in the temple and the harvest began.

"These three dates would come on Saturday frequently, but could not come on the Sabbath of the Lord, because all three of the things would be a violation of the clause, 'thou shalt not do any work on the Sabbath.' In consideration of these and other reasons I conclude the Jewish weekly Sabbaths were on fixed dates, and therefore on every day of the week in its turn.

"Seven weekly Sabbaths appear between the 15th of Abib and the day of Pentecost. The Pentecost occurring 'on the morrow after the seventh (weekly) Sabbath' (Lev. 23: 16.) You need to note an unnoticed point right here—namely: that while the day of Pentecost was on the morrow after the Sabbath it was also a Sabbath, not only in the year of the exodus, but perpetually during the Levitical dispensation. It being the day that the Lord on Mount Sinai delivered the ten commandments to the people and said: 'In six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.' (Ex. 20: 11.)

COMMAND AS TO WORK.

"God also instructed Moses to tell the Levites that 'Ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day (the morrow after the seventh Sabbath, Lev. 23: 16,) that it may be an holy convocation unto you; you shall do no servile work therein; it shall be a statute forever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.' Lev. 23: 21. So we learn that the seventh week of harvest had eight days in it, the last two, both being Sabbaths. This fact throws the first day of the week one day farther forward at this point in the year than it was before the pass-over. "To illustrate, it is almost universally conceded that the first day of the week, Abib the sixteenth, in the first year of the exodus, was Sunday and the Sabbaths between the pass-over and Pentecost were on Saturday. Admit that to be true. Then Pentecost, the morrow after the seventh Sabbath (Saturday), would fall on Sunday, but since it is also a Sabbath and to be a 'statute forever' throughout their generations, the day following it would be the first day of the week (Monday), and by noticing the fact that the 'Sabbath in which Moses brought the two tables out of the mount' the Jews say was the 'seventeenth day of Thammuz,' hence the fast on that day every year 'to commemorate the breaking of the two tables of stone.' Ezekiel says, 20: 10-13, 'Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness. . . . I gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them. . . . My Sabbaths they greatly polluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury "upon them in the wilderness to consume them." So the Lord sent Moses to them, "Thammuz the seventeenth," and found them worshipping the golden calf.'

THE CREATION SABBATH.

"If the twentieth day of the second month of the first year of the exodus was the 'creation Sabbath' as some contend, the first year of the exodus would end on the creation Sabbath. This is the first Sabbath that we have the account of its observance, it being designated by the absence of the manna. See Ex. 16: 16-23.

"And from what has gone before it is clear to my mind that the year ushered in with a Sabbath. Let us run the survey a little. The seven weekly Sabbaths counted from the sixteenth of Abib brings the seventh Sabbath out on the fourth day of the third month, and the day of Pentecost, the fiftieth day on the fifth day of the third month, or the sixty-fifth day of the year.

"There we make another landmark on the straight line from the resurrection day, or first fruits day, or Lord's day, and not Sunday as yet, although it corresponds to our Sunday. But the names of the days as we reckon them were unknown then. From Pentecost we review the survey, and on the return to the beginning corner, Abib sixteenth, we find seven weekly Sabbaths marked above the line, and thence back to the beginning of the year we mark three more Sabbaths and conclude that the year commenced on a Sabbath. On our return from Pentecost we have Sivan 4, Jyar 27, 20, 13, 6. Abib 29, 22, 15, 8, and 1 as the Sabbath days.

SCOPE OF THE WORK OF BRANCHES.

WHERE DO YOU SPEND YOUR SUNDAYS?

TO THE Lovers of Temperance, Order, Good Government, and the Welfare of Mankind:—

"The Sabbath was made for man," for his benefit solely, not for his destruction.

Lounging about places of public resort, where beer drinking, smoking, swearing, gambling, or even long or tiresome rambles upon the street or in the country are indulged in, or at home reading sensational literature are not best for you nor a safe example for your children.

"Man shall not live by bread alone," neither does he when he lives at his best. "The Sabbath was made for man;" a day of rest, and for the cultivation of the higher faculties of the soul; the study of the physical, moral, and spiritual laws of his being. The school of study is the Church of God, where the gospel of Jesus Christ as taught by himself and his apostles, is preached every Sabbath at eleven a. m. and eight p. m. Prayer meeting six p. m., also prayer meeting Wednesday, eight p. m. Sunday school every Sunday 9: 30 a. m. Come and bring your children. Chapel, 2518 Elliott Avenue, (near Benton.)
M. H. BOND, Pastor,
Residence, 2512 Slattery St.

The foregoing copy of a handbill shows that the St. Louis brethren are alive and at work in a practical way among the people, trying to turn some aside from the popular drift that follows or moves with the world-tide of human affairs; from the limitations of human thoughts and ways to the breadth and goodness of the divine; into the channels of godliness. We are glad always to learn that our people are letting the world know who, what, and where they are. There are many legitimate means by which this can be done, among which is a proper system of advertising, connected with other lines of effort. It is necessary in these days of many attractions to get down among men and obtain their attention, otherwise comparatively few are reached and brought to the light.

Business men recognize the necessity of working up trade by personally visiting their customers or by sending representatives to see and talk with them, to explain the merits and advantages of what they have to offer. Something in addition to standing newspaper advertisement is essential. Cold type is good, but warm words of friendship and sympathy must also be heard and felt. The honest heart is awakened and touched by contact with other true and generous natures, hence the need of active, personal work continued among the people, to bring them to hear and to feel the power of the word.

Ways of sin, and pleasure, and sensationalism are held up before the masses and retouched and reclothed to secure and to retain their attention. While such forces are at work and constantly advertised, the people should also be informed that truth with its power for happiness here and hereafter is within their reach, ready to bless them with solid satisfaction, of which the sense-pleasing vanities of the world are but shallow counterfeits—phantoms of pleasure that perish with the using.

Error in its multiplied forms is but a misrepresentation, a counterfeit, or a perversion of the true. Men and women require social enjoyments and friendly communion by nature, and will seek and find such in the world if not supplied through other and legitimate channels. If they cannot have the safe and permanent, they drift into the dangerous and fleeting vanities that appear at every turn. We repeat therefore what heretofore we have tried to state, that our work when properly interpreted will correct these evils by offering means by which such dangers will largely if not wholly be averted; by which evils will be unmasked, neutralized, resisted, and overcome by the positive forces of truth. Well organized and prosperous branches composed of intelligent, large-hearted men and women will supply to their membership and to others seeking truth and light such real attractions that none capable of appreciating good will exchange the shallow vanities of the worldly life therefor. The preaching of the word, the spiritual fellowship and communion in social service, the teaching and lesson hour, the musical and literary exercises, all combined into the harmony of a great whole, a systemized supply for young and old, should and will always prove attractions stronger to the honest in heart than the world can offer.

Men and women of true hearts and spiritually educated under the strength and refinement of the spirit of the gospel develop a capacity for true happiness not known by the world. The worldly-minded have not known nor has it entered their hearts to comprehend the strength and beauty of what one attuned to spiritual harmonies has realized in this respect. It also forms the only natural basis for a social development of human nature and by which "the fellowship of kindred minds is like to that above."

What the families of earth need is this gospel organization and fellowship that all may be taught from on high, be rightly directed and normally developed, and saved here and hereafter.

There are many ways by which we can go into the highways and byways and compel the people to come in; and one not to be overlooked and an important one, is to show them that the spiritual life is normal and wholesome in its tone; that it brings prosperity and happiness here and now, as well as hereafter.

Men and women and young people are largely trained by the circumstances of this life to judge matters from the standpoint of utility—by what they can see of present practical benefit to them in life conditions here. They have been taught in such lines that they have largely been led to look upon religion as something beyond or foreign to things of earth life, hence reject it or put it off as a quantity attaching only to the far-away future. The comprehensive character of the gospel is revealed in our work, and reaches the whole life of man both here and hereafter; hence it appeals to men and women, and to young people with life before them, in a double sense; in the consistent and natural sense. He is a wise minister, if not a masterbuilder, who presents and interprets it to men in the strength of its fullness and grandeur; and they well developed in the gospel life whose personal characters have been rounded out by receiving the love of the truth to that degree that it has touched and fashioned all the powers and gifts of their natures.

It is not difficult for the intelligent mind to grasp the thought that Deity cannot design the accomplishment of less than the perfecting of humanity; also that the race has the capacity and must comply readily with the conditions necessary to reach a perfect condition; also to admit that willingness, "readiness of mind" to do, must accompany every effort to be made in the strivings for advancement.

We have heard that the services of many of our branches are increasing in these lines of comprehensive usefulness and are glad to note their growing power for good as lights to the world in this peculiar generation, in which God has established his work to reveal the light and life of Christ to the world.

The character revealed in the Master's life drew the masses toward him and he lifted them up to communion with himself. We understand that the Christ-character must be manifest in the life of his disciples if they are to reflect him and his light to the world. The higher a light is raised the more widely are its rays diffused and seen. The higher the life of anyone, the wider and stronger the scope of his influence for good. This is true in both individual and in collective representation of the truth.

May our branches grow in power for good as lights to the people that shall burn so clearly and so steadily that the honest in heart shall see plainly the Life and the Light of men revealed by their unity and other works for good. True men and women who love the truth will consecrate themselves to its interests by seeking to discern and to do all in their power for the cause.

AN ANGEL IN WAYNE COUNTY, NEW YORK.

SISTER MARY A. HINES, of Independence, Iowa, sends us the following cut from some eastern paper:—

ROSE, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Recently there has been considerable excitement in this, the southeastern part of Wayne County, especially among those who are superstitious. The agitation was caused by the appearance of what was supposed to be an angel. The object—whether an angel or something else—was seen on the Sunday afternoon preceding election, but not until recently were the facts made public, those having seen the object being afraid of ridicule.

H. E. Newton, proprietor of the Newton house of Savannah, E. Everhart, of South Butler, J. Pritchard, Slyburgh, and a dozen or more other persons living along route which the so-called angel passed, have testified as having seen this strange phenomenon. Newton, it is thought, was the first person to see the vision.

He was out for his usual Sunday drive when, chancing to glance skyward, he was awestricken to see, floating about 300 feet from the ground, an object a little larger than a man. As near as he can recollect, the vision was about one fourth of a mile from him and looked like a picture of an angel he used to see when a boy in the Sunday school papers. It apparently had on a white robe, had wings that were motionless, a remarkably handsome countenance and long golden hair, which floated out behind, making a weird, but beautiful spectacle as the sun's rays now and then illumined the wax-like face and golden tresses. Its facial features were plainly seen. The vision soon floated northward.

As Mr. Newton wiped the perspiration from his brow he had no doubt of his senses, but firmly decided not to say anything to anyone, fearing they would think he had been drinking "spirits," or was making false statements. However, he had not been the only witness to this remarkable vision. While others had seen it, but like Mr. Newton had decided to keep their own counsels regarding the strange sight, James Peters, a farm hand, could not stand the suspense of keeping a secret any longer. Yesterday he related what he had seen to a number of men congregated in the Newton house. He described the vision as he saw it. He was given the laugh, but no sooner had the jeering ended than Landlord Newton remarked:—

"Peters is telling the truth, gentlemen. I saw the same thing not a mile from here, about half an hour earlier than Peters says he saw it."

Intelligent people here think that if anything was really seen it was merely a mental hallucination acting upon the optical organs.

Whatever the object was, it floated towards Slyburgh, where it was last seen just at dusk. Inclosed is a sketch of the vision made by a local artist under direction of both Mr. Newton and Mr. Peters, although the former says no artist that ever lived could depict the sublime beauty of the mysterious one's soulful face.

It will be remembered by the HERALD readers, that some sixty odd years, or more ago, another man saw an angel in this same Wayne County, New York; and, not having the fear of ridicule, or of his neighbors in his and told the people what he had seen, It caused him a great deal of trouble, and led to his death finally; but it is possible that angels still guard holy treasure somewhere in that region—and may come to those who wait. Who shall say that Messrs Newton, Everhart, and Pritchard did not see an angel? Why should angels not be seen?

BRO. DAVID CHAMBERS DEAD.

ELDER DAVID CHAMBERS, of the High Council of the Church, died at his residence in Persia, Iowa, January 27, 1897, after an illness of several months. The particulars of his life of devoted service to the church and its people are given in the obituary furnished by Bro. Charles Derry, a companion and collaborer, which appears in this issue of the HERALD.

Bro. Chambers was a man of God, both by profession and example. His life-work is an inspiration of good to God's people. A faithful steward has gone to his reward.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. M. TERRY, St. Joseph, Missouri, January 25:—

Two-days' meeting past, Brn. J. T. Kinman and C. P. Paul in charge; good spiritual meetings, saints encouraged, attention to word excellent, two baptized. Bro. Kinman will continue meetings at Aspey mission this week; much sickness; many blessings among saints; enemy awake, but saints generally on watchtower. The battle is on, but victory for the right assured.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRN. G. T. GRIFFITHS and M. T. Short have opened up the work at Bellaire, Ohio, opposite Wheeling, West Virginia, in a way that promises to be fruitful for good to a considerable degree, judging from the way the campaign has been carried on. Handbills announce the opening effort of Bro. Griffiths and its continuance by Bro. Short, in one of the leading public halls in the city. In addition to this advertising, Bro.

Short has written four lengthy articles for the Wheeling papers, in which the faith and history of the church, including the mission of Joseph Smith, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and the true faith in contradistinction from the latter-day apostasy, are set forth for the information of the public. We notice side by side with Bro. Short's articles an advertisement of "Prof. Chas. M. Leon," a "clairvoyant," "the Isaiah of the nineteenth century," located in the city of Wheeling; an all-around "hypnotist," "psychic medium," etc., etc., who announces himself ready to advise people on anything and everything in general. Bro. Short gets after the wonder workers in general in a sermon, also by means of a lengthy article on "hypnotism," which appears in the Register of the 17th, in which he makes good points against spiritism in general and in favor of the truth in particular. He has succeeded in reaching many directly by his pulpit work, and has no doubt accomplished much through his press articles. We trust the fruits of his labors will be abundant for good to the cause in the Ohio Valley.

The Civic Federation of the city of Chicago has found many people in a condition of starvation and wretchedness and has taken systematic steps for general relief. It is also doing good work in the schools, where it has succeeded in inducing the introduction of text books and studies designed to educate the rising generation in the principles and problems of good government. With such teaching and training, in connection with the inculcation of the spirit of patriotism, it is hoped that the western metropolis will be rescued from the rule and corruptions of professional politicians. The latter class increases daily both in number and in resort to dishonest and questionable combinations and practices at variance with the general good of the people. It is to be hoped that all cities will introduce a campaign of education—a crusade against the ward and ring politician, with a view to the suppression or extinction of that undesirable quantity. We profess the principle of government by "the people," which correctly interpreted is opposed to the rule of or rule by rings.

Sr. Dora Vickery writes from Garland, Alabama, that she is comforted by letters from the sisters and brethren and broadened in mind by the general spirit of what appears in their communications. She asks prayer to abide faithful in the great work of gospel discipline and education.

The contributions to the college fund as reported by the committee contained several errors in names. A contribution from Bro. Manchester should have been credited to Bro. Asa Manchester.

ERRATA.—In Bro. F. M. Sheehy's letter published in HERALD of January 20, the second paragraph in third column, page 40, should read as follows: "I have no doubt that blood-atonement is obsolete now in Utah, for these young Elders whom I met say they do not now hear it," etc. In the Church Secretary's notice, same issue, page 47, third paragraph, read "facilitated."

Here is another royal butcher and wholesale slaughterer of God's creatures, and who showed precocity in such brutality when but fifteen years of age. Who is responsible for such early training? Who is responsible for the suppression of such teaching and practice and the inculcation of the spirit of "Glory to God, peace on earth, kindness, justice, and mercy to every living creature"? Everybody for the latter—are they not? "Nearly half a million head of game have been killed by the Earl de Grey during the last twenty years, his average being 25,000 head a year. He was only fifteen years old when this record commenced. In December, 1884, he shot at fifty pheasants in three minutes and killed forty-nine of them. In this immense total, which places the Earl at the head of the sporting shots of the old world, are included eleven tigers, several rhinoceroses and elephants, a number of lions, bison, Russian and Rocky Mountain bears, and wolves."

Vienna advices report the steady growth of Slav influences in Austria, and which are causing great perturbation if not consternation among the German element of the empire. Bohemia is clamoring for independence; the de-Germanization of the city of Prague has been already going on for some months. The names of the streets have all been changed from German to Czech on red and white tablets—the national colors. Another source of disquietude is the progressive Russification of Bulgaria, which since the death of Stambuloff has steadily gone forward, widening the gap latterly forming between Austria and Bulgaria, in spite of the apparent friendliness of their relations. The vexation to Austrians is all the greater because it weakens the military situation on the Danube, which it was hoped would be entirely secured by the entry of Bulgaria into the arrangement between Austria and Roumania. With the command of the Bulgarian Black Sea ports, Russia is in a position to reinforce the army of the principality at any moment without risk of interruption. The reentry of Bulgaria into the Russian sphere has completely modified the situation in southeastern Europe to the great disadvantage of Austria; and it makes Russia more than ever the master of Turkish affairs.

Legal prosecutions against George Jacob Schweinfurth, the Rockford messiah, have been withdrawn. The moral influence of the opposition has been such as to induce him to look up new quarters, however; it now is stated that he will locate a new "heaven" somewhere in Indian Territory.

Fourteen hundred bodies have been recovered from the ruins resulting from the recent earthquake on the island of Kishm in the Persian Gulf.

Press items continue to make reference to the declining health of the Czar of Russia. He is said recently to have swooned from nervous exhaustion.

Rumor says that Pope Leo will shortly issue an encyclical letter on the question of arbitration; also that another American cardinal will shortly be created.

Great distress is reported among the working classes of the cities of New York, Chicago, and St. Louis. Charitable organizations are aiding city and county officials in relieving want, but much suffering continues from poverty and the rigor of the winter weather. Eighteen thousand unemployed are said to have arranged to parade the streets of St. Louis on Washington's birthday.

The House and Senate of the United States have practically passed legislation excluding emigrants who cannot read and write the English or their native language, with conditional clauses concerning illiterate aged persons dependent upon those qualified for residence.

France and Russia are reported to be desirous of concluding treaties of arbitration with the United States. Other nations also are said to favor entering upon similar agreements with the American government. We have yet to learn that European and Asiatic powers are considering the question of treaties looking to arbitration of difficult political questions arising in the East.

Distress by plague and famine continues to increase in India. The Russian minister of the Interior at St. Petersburg declares the whole of India to be infected with the plague. One tenth of the cattle have died in some districts. It is feared that cholera may follow the plague.

Smallpox caused forty-seven per cent of the deaths in Havana, Cuba, January 22.

Famine prevails in Rhodesia, South Africa. Thousands of emaciated natives besiege the native officials at Buluwayo for food. Natives are exhuming cattle that died from rinderpest and which were buried six months ago. They devour these, hence a terrible mortality prevails.

The recent cold spell extended from the northwestern limits of the United States to the orange groves of Florida. The blizzard swept over Great Britain with disastrous results to sea and land traffic, causing the usual distress attending such visitations.

By advices from Bro. J. C. Hitchcock we learn that a four nights debate between our brethren in St. Louis, and some Utah elders closed in that city on January 28. The brethren are well satisfied with the result, and the confidence of the saints is strengthened. We await particulars. We are informed that the elders in St. Louis stated that Elder B. H. Roberts would come to Lamoni and discuss the subject of Succession. We are ready to arrange with Elder Roberts or any other representative man of the Utah Church to discuss the issues both in Lamoni and Salt Lake City.

If such arrangement is desired by any responsible party we would be glad to hear from them.

Berlin advices of the 29th state that the trip of the Czar and Czarina to Rome and London, arranged for April, and the visits to St. Petersburg of President Faure, Emperor William, and Emperor Francis Joseph, arranged for May, June, and July, have been postponed on account of the poor health of the Czar and Czarina and their need of tranquility. A prominent German writer predicts the establishment of a regency or a council of regents in Russia and a more aggressive Russian policy.

Havana advices of the 28th ult. state that a number of Spanish officers with their companies, arms, and supplies of ammunition have deserted to the Cuban army, because tired of Spanish immorality and injustice and wishing to champion a more noble cause.

President Joseph Smith arrived home from Independence, Missouri, on Monday, the 1st inst.

We insert the following addressed to Bro. Joseph Smith, by permission of Bro. Pope, that others may profit by his example and that others in turn, including the publishing department of the church, may be benefited by the payment of outstanding amounts due on HERALD subscriptions and general accounts.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1897.

Dear Brother Joseph:—In looking over some old records this day of memory papers, etc., I find an item of twelve shillings and three pence owing by me to the church for many years, and in order to settle this account please find inclosed $3, which being placed to my credit will pay my share of the $30,000 now owing to the Herald Office.

Your brother in bonds,

EDITED BY FRANCES.

We insert the following by request; and while the poetry is not good, there are some points in it which parents will do well to consider.]

THE CHILDREN'S PLEA.

O, listen all parents, to the children's plea,
And see if your faults you can more plainly see.

You tell us that we must our parents obey,
Please listen to what all the children may say.

One of the apostles in the Bible, you see,
Said, "Provoke not your children, lest discouraged they be."

O, how many times we have wanted to go
To Sunday school and church, but you said no,

Simply because you had trouble we know
You would not attend, neither would let us go.
How many times you have both laid abed,
And would not get up to help dress us instead.

And yet you tell us that we must obey,
We ask, is it right to stand in our way?
We need your prayers at morning and night.
How often you neglect to do this that is right.

Many times in folly you both do engage;
If we do the same thing you correct in a rage.
O, how often and often we have wanted to go;
How easy it was for you to say no.

Sometimes our clothes you do not prepare,
Then of course we must fail to always be there.

We want you to see these things in our light,
And try in the future to do what is right.

Don't hinder us because in trouble you've got;
Because you don't go, don't make us stop,
But let us go on and learn every day,
The lessons that God has placed in our way.

Don't provoke us to anger lest discouraged we be;

We know you have faults you don't want us to see.

Don't stand in our way neither morning nor night,
But always have prayer. We know this is right.

Don't use bad language and expect us to be Free from such faults. 'Tis plain all can see
We will do what you do when out of your sight.

We need your example if we ever do right.

Your example is of more force, don't you see,

When you do that which you always want us to be.

When in your doing you show us the way,
This gives us courage and we love to obey.

If you are selfish we see it. Don't think we are blind.

'Tis hard to deceive us. We all have a mind.
When we see you are trying to do what is right

We all want to help you with all of our might.

How often you scold us until we feel blue
For doing the things we all see you do.
How can you expect us to always obey
Unless you set the example each day?

God gives you the power to control for our good,
But to boss and to drive us this you never should.

God gives you no right to abuse your own child,
He commands you to set the example meanwhile.

You tell us how good you all used to be.

Your parents were better than ours, we can see.

You ought to be better than your parents have been,

If with you we must live and not commit sin.

We want you to help us; don't stand in our way.

We children should then be glad to obey. Now we love most dearly. We bid you good-night;

Let us all try together to do what is right.

MRS. ELLA MYERS.

MEDINA, Texas.

Dear Home Column:—I come to you at the beginning of the New Year, praying for your continuance in good works as in the past. I have been cheered and strengthened many times, and my prayers ascend daily for those who contribute the good lessons to others not so gifted or in circumstances which will not admit of their doing so. I am one of the Daughters of Zion, one of the scattered ones, and, sad to say, I have never had the opportunity of meeting with an organized Union, but I try to keep the hour, and I have been blessed many times in so doing. I trust that we may all grow stronger in the good work in which we have started out, and keep our lamps trimmed and burning and our vessels full of oil, that while we sleep we may not be taken unawares should the cry be sounded, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh."

Sr. Ettie Albright desires the prayers of the Union for health and strength to raise her little one, and that obstacles may be removed, that she may live for the Master more perfectly, and I also ask your prayers that, if it is God's will, he will remove an affliction which troubles me much. He has commanded us if we are afflicted to pray and to pray for one another.

Yours in faith,
MRS. SOPHIA WIGHT.

SACO, Maine.

Dear Sister:—I am one of the isolated. I have the church publications and don't think I could live without them. I could exist, that is all. How the church has advanced in the past fifteen years! I am trying to keep up with her. She is putting on her beautiful garments. When the Prayer Union started it came to me, "This is the way the church will put on her beautiful garments." I asked a good brother. He said, "It is one way." Since that time I have seen other ways. I am all there is left here. Sr. Perkins is away in Alfred, Sr. Wood is in the insane asylum. She gives no trouble but is very melancholy. She is in the best ward. I don't forget her before the Lord.

Dear sisters of the Prayer Union, please remember her before the Lord.

I am patiently waiting the time when the Lord will raise up a people here. There are fine people here in Saco. The York Mills have been shut since May 23. There is hope that they will start before long. I have been dependent on my youngest son, since he has fair wages and is a good son to his mother. When I shall see him serving the living God, only mothers know how glad I shall be. But all things good have to be waited for, and I will patiently wait our Father's time, because he gives us grace and patience.

Yours in the one faith,

SARAH M. SULLIVAN.

Patience, O mortal, patience yet awhile!
What though the man of feeble courage prates
Of dolor and of death, joy yet shall come
To him who waits.

Though fierce the fight that Want and Sorrow wage
With Man upon life's battlefield, yet fate's
Grim visage softens, and she smiles at last
On him who waits.

Patience, O mortal, patience yet awhile!
How long soe'er thy evils here, the gates
Of glory do but wait to open wide
For him who waits.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—NO. 1.

A SUNDAY School Institute, for the preparation of which a committee of three consisting of T. W. Williams, J. F. Mintun, and W. N. Robinson was appointed in September, 1896, at the Woodbine reunion, met in the saints chapel, Council Bluffs, Iowa, December 26, 1896, at ten a. m., and was called to order by chairman of the committee, T. W. Williams.

The organization consisted of T. A. Hougas superintendent, Sr. Anna Salyards and J. F. Mintun assistant superintendents, W. N.

Robinson secretary, J. F. Mintun assistant secretary, Joseph Roberts chorister, George Chrestensen usher in charge, and T. W. Williams, Srs. D. W. Blair, and David Krahl to prepare reports for local papers.

The committee on entertaining those attending, Bro. C. A. Riley and Srs. A. Stuart, Emma Beebe, and Mary Beecroft were sustained.

T. W. Williams gave a hearty welcome to the church, to the homes of the saints and the city; and urged all to feel free and at home.

T. A. Hougas responded accepting the greeting accorded on behalf of the visiting workers, following by outlining the work of the Institute in a general way, and saying that he had come to be benefited and to benefit so far as possible, and hoping that all had come with a like object.

Short speeches were made upon the topic, "What we have come for," by W. N. Robinson, J. F. Mintun, D. J. Krahl, Charles Fry, A. Badham, Frank Durfee, Joseph Roberts, William Landers, C. O. Leeka, Roy Epperson Bro. Pratt, and Srs. Anna Salyards, T. A. Hougas, Roxana Gaylord, William Landers, Ethel Skank, D. H. Blair, and Nora Gaylord; all of which bespoke an earnestness which was prophetic of the success of the Institute.

W. N. Robinson, as instructor, brought out the following items connected with the duties of officers of local Sunday schools:—

SUPERINTENDENT.

Qualifications:—

1. Should be a live man; punctuality and promptness in all his work proof of life.
2. Should be a godly man.
 - a In every word and act;
 - b At all times and places.
3. Should be an earnest man and completely imbued with his work. By this he would prove himself to be both a live and godly man. Difference existed as to whether the characteristic of life or of godliness should be preferred, but this difference existed principally because of a difference of understanding what would be considered a live man, in contrast with a godly man.
4. Should be a competent man:
 - a In knowledge;
 - b In disposition.
5. Should love his fellow man.
6. Should be a humble,
7. Sympathetic,
8. Social,
9. Prayerful,
10. Orderly, and broad-minded man.

Complement: Should be an example in every good word and work.

Duties:—

1. Should open and close school on time, or see that it is done.
2. Should be in his place at least ten minutes before time of opening the school.
3. Should greet the other officers, with the teachers and pupils so far as possible consistent with his other duties.
4. Should visit the class:—
 - a To see whether and how the lesson is being taught;
 - b To give suggestions;
 - c To gather items connected with general review.

5. Should direct labors of assistant superintendent.

6. Should conduct general review, or to see that it is done by another where he can select another more competent.

7. Should be in charge of teachers' meetings.

8. Should visit the teachers at their homes:—

a To become better acquainted;

b To encourage them in their work;

c To induce them to attend teachers' meetings.

9. Should select teachers after consultation with the assistant superintendent. While he may consult pupils, yet should their selection be an unwise one he should decide according to his judgment. Should an agreement not exist as to choice between him and the assistant superintendent, his judgment should be exercised, and acquiesced in by the school.

ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT.

Qualifications:—

Nearly or quite as capable as superintendent.

Duties:—

1. On time with the superintendent.

2. Greet teachers, pupils, and visitors.

3. Counsel with superintendent.

4. Lead the school in responsive reading.

5. He should have no classwork where possible for him to be free therefrom.

LIBRARIAN.

Duties:—

To have charge of all books and papers belonging to the school except perhaps the class books. Some difference existed as to whether the secretary or librarian should have charge of and distribute papers and class books to teachers. Majority decided secretary should do this work.

As to how the report of the attendance of scholars should be made, was considered quite at length; some thinking it should be made from class books, others from envelopes, and yet others from a specially prepared list of the names of scholars in each class, and with pencil attached distributed to each teacher, and each scholar recording his own presence, these to be gathered by the secretary while class book should be in charge of librarian.

Time did not permit a further examination of the duties of the secretary or treasurer.

J. F. Mintun as instructor on the subject of district officials brought out the following thoughts among others:—

1. District Superintendent; who should be selected:—

1. One who is best able to visit the local schools of the district.

2. Local Sunday school laborer if one available.

3. Missionary if one is found willing to assume duties, where local laborer is not available.

4. One who has the confidence of the schools of the district.

5. One not less qualified than he should be to be a local superintendent.

Duties:—

1. Should visit each school personally, but if impossible to do so, to do so by correspondence.

2. Should take the general oversight over the local schools.

3. Should use every legitimate means to organize new schools.

4. Should the local superintendent fail to recognize his rights, he should try to gain the confidence and respect due him; but when this has failed he should in a quiet and discreet manner assert his rights.

5. Should insist on review work and use of blackboards by kind persistency; if then he fails, attend business meeting of school and show value of such work, and give instruction how to use blackboard and conduct review work.

6. Where he sees the need he should suggest changes in classes.

7. When it is possible he should be present at business meetings.

8. He may pay his own expenses, but where district is able it should provide for his necessary expenses:—

He should formulate circular letter, and where practicable, consult with the assistant superintendent before sending it to the secretary for circulation.

DISTRICT SECRETARY.

1. Should copy and send out circular letters.

2. Should send programs of convention with blanks for school reports about one month previous to the convention.

3. Should suggest any needed improvement in regard to secretary work to local secretaries. Time limited any further work upon this subject.

Sr. Anna Salyards as instructor on subject of "Teachers' meetings" brought out many excellent suggestions some of which are the following:—

Objects:—

1. Teachers to prepare lessons more fully.

2. Decided upon knotty questions, whether to use or not, and if brought up by scholar how best to dispose of them.

3. Study of methods of illustrating and making lesson of practical benefit.

4. To assist in preparing for general review.

Preparation outside of teacher's meeting:—

1. Lesson study.

2. Methods of teaching to be studied on night of monthly business meeting, and on a separate night than teachers' meetings.

3. If teacher cannot attend teachers' meeting should devote the hour upon which meeting is to be held in preparing lesson. It was concluded by the majority that the early part of the week was the better time for holding the teachers' meeting, giving the rest of the work for the teachers to make special preparation for applying the lesson to their classes.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 7.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

IN closing our last we said we were off for the "battle," we hope Bro. T. W. W. will not criticise us too sharply, for every eye nearly is now turned towards struggling Cuba. Her patriots are making a brave and earnest fight for freedom, and we believe have the right to hope and expect our sympathy. Can we turn a deaf ear to the cries of those who are reaching out towards us, struggling to establish a government similar to the one set up by those inspired to so build? The sons of America are brave and generous; they have sealed with their blood their sublime faith in free government and human liberty, and it seems to me we should at least bid the Cubans God speed to their sacred cause. Our mind is wandering and these are merely jots by the way!

Arriving at Bevier we found Bro. Tanner restlessly awaiting us with his war paint on. W. G. Haley, the Holiness preacher, his opponent, also on hand. The preliminaries were soon arranged and the battle was on, and for six nights it raged with a rehash on the part of Rev. Haley, Bro. Tanner following out along the church lines that are usual in such controversies, doing exceedingly well in presenting the doctrines of the church, (and especially so when taking into consideration the fact that this was his first effort in debate,) and in such striking contrast with Rev. Haley, that it was apparent to all that Rev. Haley had nothing to present nor could he break the strong logical arguments of Bro. Tanner.

The debate ended with the unanimous verdict for the truth, even Rev. Haley's moderator finally disavowed all religious organizations and declared he would "jine" Mr. Ingersoll's church.

On Thursday night while the Rev. Haley was making an onslaught upon Joseph Smith, imagine our surprise to see our big-hearted John A. Robinson arise in the midst of the audience, where he had been in hiding, with, "Mr. Chairman, I arise to a point of order." After the shock was over we asked him to state the point of order. "Joseph Smith's name cannot be dragged into this question. Mr. Haley is affirming his church, and Joseph Smith had nothing to do with it, nor should his character be assaulted at this juncture." This in John's own inimitable style was like a bolt of lightning from a clear sky, and so confused Rev. Haley, that he could not recover during his time.

Rev. Mr. Haley assaulted our position, our local interests demanded a reply, which has been amply given by our young Bro. Tanner.

Hastening back to Higbee we found Bro. Turpen with matured plans for visiting Boonville, to which city we repaired at once, there making new acquaintances and warm friends by telling the gospel story. The "Cochran" families (the only saints we met are very intelligent and well-to-do farmers and are among the very best citizens of the country. Isolated as they are from all branch privileges, they are certainly gospel lights and are letting their light shine in a very substantial way as the Bishop's agent's books will testify, neither do they forget the missionary's needs. May our Father bless them is our prayer. We have our plans laid for a thorough bombarding of Boonville in the no distant future.

I wish in this letter to present a thought for the consideration of the ministry. Many of our brethren believe in life insurance as a safe and profitable business measure, and without some such safeguard, oftentimes distress and wreckage occurs at the demise of a minister, whose all is the little pittance his family receives. Now why not, by the consent of the Bishop, make him the President of "The Ministers' Fund," with an initiation fee of ten dollars. One hundred ministers would place one thousand dollars in his hands to be used by him in any way he deemed wise until wanted, to be paid to the wife of the deceased, which would pay off the debts or lift the mortgage from the home, thereby keeping the wife and family from being an extra burden to the church. After thus paying another assessment made upon the members, etc., and thus the money would be within the church instead of insurance companies. Contribution to this fund would be in order from anyone desiring to do so. I can see many advantages, by this fund, to the ministry and also to the church and with the proper safeguards, a power for good in many ways that will be apparent on reflection. The families will have an interest in such a fund and will keep up the assessments to protect themselves against wreckage and disaster.

KALKASKA, Mich., Jan. 18.

Editors Herald:—I again take my pen in hand to inform you and the saints of the visitation of Mr., or as he styles himself Rev., Joseph Musser among us. He spoke for seven evenings at Corps schoolhouse, closing on the 14th. His efforts here resulted in stirring up and awakening to new life some that have not heretofore paid heed to any sort of teaching, while others were more fully convinced of the true teaching of the gospel. He succeeded in organizing another Sunday school, to be a union Sunday school, taking its lessons from the Bible, beginning with the second chapter of Acts; also a society known as the Union Christian Aid Society. His speeches here were mild compared with those that he made at Boardman last winter.

Bro. John Hanson occupied the floor for three nights between his lectures with greater liberty than ever before at this place, and to a fair audience. The saints in this part of the branch are firm and unwavering and feel that good will result from the stirring up we have had. Yesterday some of us attended the Musserite Sunday school and felt repaid for so doing. We can truly feel and say that "all is fair and all is bright and all is well when we do right."

Praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your brother in Christ,

RIVERTON, Iowa, Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—We are still alive in the interest of the work intrusted to our care, and never felt better, or enjoyed more of God's Holy Spirit. The last three weeks has been fraught with good to me. God has graciously remembered me in my labors amongst the people, both saints and nonmembers. And quite a number have expressed themselves satisfied with the truth of the doctrine; but not altogether satisfied with the latter-day Seer and Prophet. But we shall labor with them patiently and lovingly, as we have done in the past, feeling assured that God's Spirit will work with them enabling them to see the "true light" and obey, that they may have "life more abundantly," as promised by the Master.

I am laboring as my Father gives me strength of body and power of mind, filling all the calls I can, but fully realize the "harvest is great and the laborers few." And others of this district are doing what they can to spread the truth. May God speed the work, and help us to work in harmony with his will and the order and rule of his church in humility of heart, is my earnest prayer. Still believing the right will ultimately triumph, I am yours fraternally,

HENRY KEMP.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Dec. 14, 1896.

Editors Herald:—About 9 a. m. of November 3 quite a number of the saints were gathered on pier 8 in San Francisco to bid farewell to the missionaries who were to sail that morning on the barkentine "City of Papeete" to the Society Islands mission. There was the usual pleasurable sorrow in this which attends the leave-takings, but after all others had spoken the good-bye, Brother Luff and the missionary clasped hands, and the embrace and salutation of those two betokened a pure brotherly affection and grief at parting seldom witnessed by mortals on this earth, but after it there came over the spirit of the outward bound missionary a peace and quietude of mind surpassing anything this earth can bestow—a high resolve to continue worthy of the esteem of his fellow-laborers and of our loving Savior—our Master. During my few days of travel with Bro. Luff I enjoyed very much his companionship, counsel, and preaching. Surely God is with him, and the saints of the Pacific Slope will be blest if they pay heed to his counsel, and esteem him highly for the work's sake. He is humble, true, and worthy of your confidence.

But the tug-boat is alongside, all hands ashore is loudly called out, and slowly we move away from the pier and those kind-hearted, generous saints, and from the land of America. As we move out into the stream, handkerchiefs are waving, and Bro. Luff's last of all to cease waving a good-bye to the two who trustingly are going to toil and labor in the distant field. At last all faces, then the forms are lost to view, and soon we are across the bar, the tug-boat has left us, bidding us good-bye, and with all sail set and a strong fair wind we proceed on our voyage.

After the usual incidents of such a voyage we arrived on the 28th of November at Taiohae (Ti-o-hi), a harbor in Nukahiva, one of the Marquesas Islands. After a stay of twenty-four hours we continued our voyage and arrived here on Monday, December 7. The saints here made us welcome and we are at home in the parsonage adjoining the chapel. Bro. Pai is self-installed as my teacher; he speaks English a little and so helps me in learning their language. On Sunday I spoke twenty-five minutes in the Tahitian language, how well I cannot say, but they were all much pleased and thought they understood me. I converse with the natives sufficiently to make myself understood generally. I brought with me a small hand press, type, paper, and ink, and hope to use them after our conference in Kaukura. Those tracts which I brought written by Bro. M. H. Forscutt concerning "Peter being at Rome" are very highly appreciated by the brethren here.

I called upon J. Lamb Doty, Esq., the American consul, and also upon His Excellency the Acting Governor. The Consul assured me that I would not meet any further trouble in our missionary work. The Governor also said that perfect religious liberty is to be enjoyed here, and that if we obey the laws of the land we should be at liberty to propagate our faith. (The former Governor and the chief of the maritime department have been recalled; these were the men who caused us so much trouble when we were here before; but a new order of things now exists, more in harmony with the spirit of liberty and generosity which France so de lights in being accredited with.) I then called upon the chief of the maritime department to obtain a copy of the record of the official inquiry into the loss of the Evanelia; but they would not permit me to copy it, but read it in my hearing. It states that "the loss of the Evanelia occurred because of being overloaded. And although the vessel had been on the drydock, the topsides had not been recaulked, and by reason of the heavy cargo the topsides were submerged, which would necessarily make considerable leakage. And the pumps were not used. And that she had on board twenty-nine tons of copra and two and one half tons of shells and about ten tons of ballast. And that a reasonable amount of skill might have saved the vessel as the island of Tikehau was but a few hours sail away—to leeward, if care had been used and the pumps worked."

I also visited the merchant who owned the cargo. He said substantially as above about her loss. He did not think Bro. W. McGrath did intentional wrong, but by reason of lack of experience, and knowledge in handling a vessel, and through an excess of zeal and ambition to excel, he unwisely refused to listen to the native captain's urgent advice not to load so heavy—and so the Evanelia, the jaded and overloaded horse, was driven to her death.

We have engaged passage in a trading vessel to Hikuero, Bro. Case having left word for us to come up at once as many of the saints are gathered there diving for shells. We will leave in a few days for that island. Emma and I are well, and enjoy the sanctifying influence of that Spirit promised us, and hope to continue worthy of it and to be directed by it. Peace to all God's Israel.

J. F. BURTON.

POLLOCK, Mo., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—Bro. T. W. Chatburn and the writer parted at Bevier, he to remain and assist Bro. J. A. Tanner, and I came here to assist Bro. J. F. Petre in the work he had in hand. I find he has a number of openings for preaching and he says the interest is good. So we will do our best to tell the people the gospel story. Am in good health and spirits and hope to be able to convince some of the angel's message.

In gospel bonds,

M. M. TURPEN.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Nov. 25, 1896.

Editors Herald:—Taking leave of my family in the island of Hikuera, about four hundred miles east of here, I arrived here about a week ago; came down to meet Bro. and Sr. Burton, also to try and adjust some matters of importance in our mission work.

Was very much disappointed in not meeting Bro. and Sr. B., also to find that all my mail had been sent up the group but two days previous to my landing, so I know but little about whether they are coming or not. Still we shall hope to meet them ere long, as they are very much needed in the mission. The need for laborers is great, we should have at least three good energetic workers. Bro. Jansson informs me that he must leave the mission field next spring, and Bro. Hawkins is too old to travel. So you see I am left alone, I truly hope that it may be but a short time. This is an important mission and should be cared for. In my circuit around the islands to the eastward I find some of the branches nearly in a disorganized condition, and it is owing to their being neglected so long. Our ship is lost, but we can get passage on the trading schooners though they are very inconvenient; and thus keep the goodly begun work moving onward. I know the sacrifice is great, "but after the sacrifice cometh the blessing." There are honest-hearted people in this mission and I for one shall do what I can to help them. Prospects are not very flattering for the work at present but our efforts have not been fruitless entirely, having baptized one in Hao, two in Hikuera, and three in this place on Sunday last.

I desired very much to counsel some with Bro. Burton, but shall start back to-morrow for Hikuera, seeking the Lord for wisdom and guidance and shall try and hold the fort until some one arrives to lighten the burden.

On our trip to the eastward islands, we were received with kindness and believe that much good was done. Mrs. Case did a good work in setting in order the Sunday school following Sr. Devore's plans of carrying on the work. She had a very great deal of writing to do on the Sunday school books of questions and answers, also about six weeks' work making a complete copy of the Tahitian English Dictionary. I hope for the benefit of those who may come to do labor here, that the good brethren who have taken away the only copies of said book obtainable, will remember to please return them to the mission.

We have for two months past been among a large gathering of people, who had assembled for the purpose of diving for pearl shell. They began diving the first of this month and it is a beautiful sight to see the hundreds of boats and canoes sail out over the lagoon until many of them are lost to view in the distance.

Shell seems to be plentiful. It was estimated that they dove about twenty-five tons the first day and sell it for $0.70 per kelo—good money.

We have been holding meetings in the cocoanut grove, as we have no house of prayer, but being authorized by the brethren I purchase material while here for a building 30x72 feet, 12 feet high.

We were in the island of Hao when we heard of the loss of the "Evanelia." I expected Bro. Burton to be in Papeete ere I could come down, hence my delay in furnishing your readers with a full account of the affair, the foundering of our little "gospel boat." No one, saving those who have labored here, realizes the loss we sustain by being deprived of her. We feel very badly over the matter, being the ones who have to put up with the many inconveniences of mission work in South Seas, traveling from island to island; it is very hard for a white woman. Most of the traders are very kind to us, for which we are truly grateful. We shall try and be thankful for small favors and make the best of it, grumbling as little as possible.

Everything belonging to the ship was lost, excepting the sextant, compass, dishes, (which, by the way, were left in the mission house,) and six mattresses for beds. All our mail was lost. I had written a long descriptive letter to Herald, of our trip from Manihi to Hao, telling about how we were pleased with the ship, her management, comforts, etc.

I give below, for the benefit of all your readers, a letter written us by Bro. W. S. McGrath, telling all about the foundering of the ship. I would say however that we placed the vessel in his care, with the understanding that no bufa (dried cocoanut) was to be taken on board her.

To those who have expected letters from us; please remember, that we are sometimes for two months without an opportunity to send mail, and then should it get mislaid or lost it may be longer still; and to the brethren who have written me in regard to the organization of Sons of Zion and Zion's R.-L. S., in my judgment these people are not yet prepared for that work. I would gladly cooperate with you, could I see any possible show of carrying the work on successfully among the islands. I believe however that when we get the press and have more printed matter that we may do something in that department of the Lord's work. May God bless you in the work.

"Oh, 'tis pleasant, 'tis reviving
To our hearts to hear each day
Joyful news from far arriving,
How the gospel ins wits way."

I left my wife in fair health; she rejoices that the Lord healed her in answer to prayer, of a sore affliction. Our little Cicely has never been sick a day and is dear comfort to her parents.

Your brother and coworker,

HUBERT CASE.

On board the Teavaroa, off HIRAKI, Sept. 5, 1896.

Dear Hubert and Alice:—I suppose by this time you have heard of the foundering of the Evanelia, but knowing that it is hard to get anything straight from the natives I take this opportunity of acquainting you with the facts of the case. I do not try to shove the blame onto anybody else. I suppose if there is any blame attached to it, it belongs to me; but if such is the case I am paying for it; and if it is not so, I am in for it anyway, as I am undoubtedly doomed to spend the rest of my natural life paying up the debt which the sinking of the vessel has piled upon my shoulders. I was doing what I thought best.

I did nothing to speak of on the way down; no cash business at all, in fact; and things began to look rather blue. If I went into Tahiti without paying expenses the first trip it would be a deadener to me, and if I couldn't pay expenses the first trip what would I do the second?

When I arrived at Arutua I bought two hundred and sixty dollars worth of shell, paying cash for it. When we left there we got into that gale which swept through the group about the 19th of July. It was touch and go whether she would live through it or not. We could not "lay to," as we had land on our lee, so had to work off shore. That night off San Francisco was nothing to it. We finally got off shore, and at 3:30 a. m. the wind abated; but there was a tremendous sea.

The next evening we arrived at Rairoa (Avatoru), but found all the people were up at the weather end making bufa. Alex. Brander came aboard and wanted to charter the vessel to take his bufa down to Tahiti as the Eunice had been cast ashore in the gale and her bottom all stove in. I told him I wouldn't take bufa in the vessel. He said two hundred dollars to fill her up and go down to Tahiti, but I refused. He represented that I would have to clean and paint the vessel down at Tahiti anyway; that I would be under the same expense without the bufa as with it, all the difference being to fumigate the vessel in Tahiti (which we would have to do anyway or be eaten alive with rats) and to clean her out inside and repaint her, which would make her just as good as she was before, besides being about one hundred and fifty dollars ahead. Still I refused, though it was a big temptation, as I knew that that money would help to make me come out square. Brander went inside that evening. I went inside next day, but it took two days to get up to the rahui. When I got there the people wouldn't even come aboard to see what we had, so all I sold was about five dollars to a Catholic. They wouldn't sell their bufa for love or money, so it began to look blacker still. That evening I took an invoice of all the goods I had left and the business I had done, and found I was two hundred and seventy-six dollars and fifty cents in the hole, without counting the five days it would take us to get to Tahiti.

Brander asked me again if I wouldn't take his offer, and said if I wanted to come back for another load or two he would like it; for if I didn't they would have to charter another schooner, or send it down in boats, which he did not like to do. I asked him if he would guarantee me three loads. He said he would, and would give me freight back from Tahiti. In that I saw a chance to get square, to fix up the vessel in good shape and be a little ahead, so I took it. We filled her up, and filled up the cock pit and around it with bags. That was on Friday. We were two days going on to the settlement, on account of calm. When we got there Narrii was there with the Henry. As we sailed by him he said that that was the first time she ever looked like a vessel. Her copper was about five inches under water, but her chain plates were about two inches out of water. She was deep, but not overloaded.

On Monday Narrii said he wished we would take a couple of tons of shell that came off the Eunice and leave some of the bufa. I said all right, so we did so, and at noon left. We got out all O. K. Prior to sailing I let down a line with a weight on it through the pipe where the old iron pump was formerly screwed on, and found about five inches of dirty black bilge water, which showed that she was not leaking any. The line came up almost as black as if it had been dipped in ink. We sailed along down to the end of the island and there had a head wind. She worked fine, never worked better. When about five miles from the point an oar dropped overboard, and I, being at the wheel, wore ship and picked it up and then put her in stays without slacking off the jib sheet. Mr. Healey made the remark, "That gives a good exemplification of how quickly a vessel would pick up a man who had dropped overboard, providing the vessel handled like this one. Why, he would hardly have time to get wet!" We stood across toward Tikehau, and when about half way across, the wind hauled a little ahead, so we tacked ship. She tacked splendidly, it being unnecessary to ease off the flying jib sheet. About two minutes after tacking she began to act funny, as though "sleepy"—a kind of loggy at the head. I asked Healey to have a look forward and he had only got to the cook house when he turned around and said: "By Jove, old man, you had better lower the boat as she is going down by the head! The heel of the bowsprit is under now!" I dropped the wheel and ran forward and a glance told me she was sinking at the bows. I sung out to throw overboard the shell and bufa and lower the boat. Antoni and Healey cut away the boat, while the rest of us slung the shell and bufa over. Though I don't think we were three minutes doing it, in that time she was bows under. We lowered away the sails; that is, what we had time to. The foresail would not come down all the way; the staysail was set, and as she gradually sunk she swung around and the breeze caught the staysail and laid her over to one side, but she was half under water then, the water being away back of the galley. Then she stood head first as straight as she could go. The last thing we saw of her was the end of her main boom. Healey, Antoni, and one sailor were in the boat; the rest of us staid by her until she went down, which wasn't long. Just as I saw she going to make the final plunge I dove off her, and as I came up among the wreckage I noticed my chest "bob" up almost in my face. It was just going down again when I grabbed it and managed to hold it up until I swam over to the boat. Besides considerable provisions and stuff I lost one hundred dollars French money, one hundred and twenty-five dollars Chili money, and all the mail, and all my clothes. The remainder of my cash was in my box, and, that's all I saved. I had been utilizing the captain's chest for stowing articles in, and as the heaviest things were on the top, when it got in the water, not being locked, everything went down except what would float. As near as I can get at it I am about fifteen hundred dollars in debt. I am going now to Hikuera until the rahui is off there, when I am to go on the "Punau" in Jack Stuart's place.

The government made an examination into the affair and took the captain's license away from him because he allowed the supercargo to give orders on board. They only took his license away for six months. The old "moke" swore to a string of lies as long as the moon. But as luck would have it they (the officials) took it for what it was worth and then called me in and asked me to tell them all about it. I had Mr. Mervin's brother as interpreter. I told them how it happened, and they asked me my opinion as to the cause. They tried to make out that she was overloaded; that is the "Society Commercial" did.

1. I said that if a vessel was overloaded she would not work good. The commodore said that was true, whereas the Evanelia never worked better.

2. They said she was leaky. I said she was not, and brought up the fact that the sailors had to pour water into her and then pump it out again, as she stunk like rotten eggs with bilge water. They said that it was probably after the load was put in her that she leaked in some of the seams above the copper. I told them the vessel had the load in her three days, and that just five hours before she went down I had sounded the well and found five inches of black bilge water which the pump would not suck. I further said that had it been a gradual leak the vessel would have gone down stern first, as she was loaded well by the stern. The commodore said that was true.

3. They said, "Weil, didn't she swamp or capsiz?" No, she did neither, as her deck forward was dry until she went bows under;

besides, there was no sea on at all and a very light breeze. Then they asked what I thought made her sink. I said she must have sprung a butt forward and the water rushed in and she began to go down forward, then the water in her rushed forward, which also helped to set her down; and that as she was full of bufa forward the water couldn't run aft very fast until she went bows under, and then the water flowed in the fore hatch and she went down just as fast as the water worked through the bufa and the air worked aft.

They said that was the conclusion they had arrived at themselves, and were glad to see that I who had been through it held the same opinion.

That is about all I have to tell you about it, I think, except that they read the captain an awful lecture. All they said to me was that I shouldn't have given any orders, and that if it went into court I might be liable to a fine and imprisonment.

What Metuaore will do about it I don't know, as I did not see him, he being on Tikehau. The natives say it was a judgment of God upon us for putting trade into her. It has relieved the mission of an elephant, I think all will admit, though I can't say that I am glad.

Write to me, and tell me what you think about it. I expect I will be in Hikuera when you come down, or if you don't come until the opening I may be up there in the "Punau," and it is needless to say you will be welcome aboard any time you wish to go on her. Love to Alice and baby.

Yours as ever,

WILL.

SOUTH RAWDON, N. S., Jan. 5.

Editors Herald.—Since last writing I have had an opportunity of breaking up new ground. All the elders and about all your readers know what that means as a rule, so I need not wear our dear old English language out over that, save to say that twenty sermons were preached and two baptized. A good feeling for us is obtaining in that section. We next visited Amberst. There was no waving of banners or flourish of trumpets, but we had a few good meetings among the few saints and the interested friends. The cause is gaining slowly but in a peculiar, silent, sure way, even in that hyperreligious town. The "fort" is held by Sr. Quigly and some of her family with Sr. Thompson of Fort Lawrence some two miles away. Home at Christmas: found all well. Enjoyed the visit home immensely, also the kind letters and substantial tokens of remembrance that came from different parts of my own immediate field as well as from the land shadowed by the glorious stars and stripes.

We appreciate such things and breathe a fervent prayer that the kind Father will abundantly supply with all the needed blessings of life all those who sacrifice for the cause' sake and those who are laboring therein. The cause is looking up in this neighborhood. The officers are manifesting a greater disposition to magnify their calling. It is a truth that no branch can be prosperous until the officers fall into line. The law must be adhered to before success can possibly come. And who can expect the members to keep the law if the officers do not?

Two weeks or more have passed away since writing the foregoing and all goes well. The saints and friends have caused the elder's heart to rejoice in more ways than one. It is not altogether a selfish joy that fills one's soul when the temporal affairs are looked after by the members in an ungrudging manner, for we know that those who do so will be blessed of the Lord. We are well and feeling encouraged.

I have just read the White-Sewell debate. That Mr. Sewell possesses a goodly degree of smartness is apparent, but I pity, or would pity the cause he champions were it not that Mr. Sewell and the world with him will be much better off when it is relegated to its proper place, to be found only among the back numbers of history concerning the fallen obstacles that hinder for awhile the onward progress of this grand latter-day work.

Yours,

H. J. DAVISON.

SCOTT-ADAMS DEBATE.

BLAIR, Neb., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—Propositions 3 and 4 related to the same subject, Elder Adams affirming that the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2:44 would be "set up at the second coming of Jesus," and Bro. Scott affirming that it would be established before the second advent, in the last days. Three nights each were used in these affirmations. Both agreed as to the time when the dream began its fulfillment, and the various governments that should follow, and the times when each were established, except the one referred to in Daniel 2:44, and no dispute existed as to when the Roman kingdom was divided; and both agreed that the ten kingdoms would continue till the second coming of Jesus Christ.

Bro. Scott claimed, and proved that the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2:44 was to be established in the last days, by Daniel 2:28 and Micah 4:1, 2, and would be in existence when Jesus came to begin his millennial reign on the earth, by Matthew 13:24-30 with Matthew 13:36-43, showing that angels would be sent to gather tares out of his kingdom at and before "the end of this world, and Matthew 24:14, Revelation 14:6-15, Matthew 13:47-49, Matthew 20:1-7, and Isaiah 24:1-6; and that when he comes again he would destroy the wicked, and the nations as nations, and thus preclude the possibility of its being set up as a small stone to roll forth until it fill the whole earth, or as a grain of mustard seed, and then grow till it became a great tree, or like leaven which would by its gradual working leaven the whole lump; besides when Jesus came he would reign supreme over all the earth; see Zechariah 14:5-9 and elsewhere.

Elder Adams held that as it was in the days of Noah few were saved, and from those few God reseeded the earth, so from the few who would be saved at the second coming of Jesus the whole earth would be reseeded, and thus would the little stone grow and fill the whole earth during the thousand years.

Elder Adams claimed that the only way the Devil would be "bound" would be by people obeying the gospel, and it being impossible for him to overcome them, and that he would be sowing tares during the thousand years, and that the gospel spoken of in Revelation 14:6 was to be preached during the millennium, and that Babylon will then be put down; but, he could not harmonize this with chapter 14 verses 13, 14.

Elder Adams held that the restitution would not begin till Jesus comes again, but Bro. Scott showed conclusively that Elias must first come (Matt. 17:11, 12); that this gospel of the kingdom must first be preached "in all the world" (Matt. 24:14); that an angel would come to a young man and announce the rebuilding of Jerusalem "as towns without walls" (Zech. 1-6); and that the former and latter rains would be restored (Joel 2:21-27).

When Elder Adams could not answer argument produced by some scriptural passage, then he would try to array some other passage against it and then ask Bro. Scott to straighten it out, and Bro. Scott was so successful in this that it increased faith in the harmony of the word of the Lord, and gave the people to understand that as a people we believed in God's word as he revealed it.

Many assertions were made by Elder Adams which would be of little value to the general reader, but from first to last Bro. Scott took positions and maintained them.

The saints feel well over the results and met yesterday to partake of the Lord's supper, and rejoiced much in the presence of God's Holy Spirit.

I spoke yesterday in the Christian Church at eleven a. m. Small attendance on account of extreme cold.

Elder Adams is quite sick with the la grippe. He was unable to hold any services Sunday. Considerable sickness in and near this place.

I begin services at Desota to-night.

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

MINATARE, Neb., Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—I left home on the 28th of November, after a stay of a few weeks preparing for winter, and made a stop at Clearwater, where I spoke once and made the acquaintance of some of the saints, and then I accompanied Bro. Mintun to Inman, on the 30th, where I remained only until the through train that would carry me into my field.

I arrived in Hay Springs at four o'clock on the morning of December 1, where I was met by a conveyance from Bro. James Shepard's. Began meeting in the Alliance hall that night and continued, preaching twenty times at the Hall and Bro. Shepard's home.

From there, at the earnest request of Bro. Lee and Shepard I went with Bro. S. to the home of Bro. G. Heywood and spoke there ten times and once at a schoolhouse about seven miles east. In these meetings I was assisted by Bro. Shepard and Weed. Bro. Weed's home is about forty miles away, but he was on hand when he learned an elder was to be in his reach, to render what assistance he could.

I remark here that although the saints in Northwestern Nebraska are few and poor, they now have a movement on foot to purchase a tent for the use of the gospel workers in this part of the State; a good move if they can succeed. I next went to near Dakota Junction where I spoke three times to small but interested audiences, and thence to Belmont, being conveyed and assisted by Bro. Shepard. At a point near ten miles east of Belmont the ice was cut and three souls were born into the kingdom, Bro. J. S. Lee officiating.

Bro. Irvin Mengel conveyed me from Belmont down here on the North Platte River, on the 15th inst., and after a ride of sixty miles or more we were ready to rest when we reached the home of old Bro. and Sr. Knapp at about seven p. m. We were made welcome as soon as they were informed who their visitors were. The next night I spoke to a few (it being stormy) in an old sod church, and on Sunday morning, although it was cold, we started out to find Bro. J. L. Detrich's home, and arrived there in time to find Bro. D. W. Shirk there, and they were preparing to start out and find the missionary, having learned from some one by mail that we would be on the river on the 15th. Begun meeting that night and have been holding all the week with fair attendance and interest.

I expect to continue on the river for a week or ten days longer and then move on to Banner County, and from there work my way east for General Conference.

The work is not flattering, yet it is in quite good condition throughout the mission. Bro. J. S. Lee has been laboring quite acceptably since about October 1, and expects to stay in the field until April.

In the conflict for truth, your brother,

D. M. RUDD.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 18.

Editors Herald:—Brother Joseph Luff has been called home by telegram to the bedside of his eldest daughter, who is reported "Just as low as can be; very little hope." The brother himself was and had been suffering from "grip." He was a sick man when he left us, and our hearts were drawn out in earnest prayer to God for him and his. I learned also that Sr. Penfold, of San Jose, now with her daughter, Sr. J. C. Clapp, at Santa Cruz, is very dangerously sick,—paralysis of the brain.

We hear of sickness and death on every hand. I lost my eldest brother on January 11, he seemed to have awakened to the necessity of living better. Would to God all could awaken to the same necessity. We are glad the kind Father still cares for us.

We note a change for the better in our meetings since New Years. The most of our people are earnest and zealous, and respond when necessity calls. Times are hard, money very hard to get. May the Lord sustain his saints in all the world, and help them to follow their great Head, Jesus Christ, and his true servants. In hope,

C. A. PARKIN.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 19.

Editors Herald:—On Saturday and Sunday the 16th and 17th Bro. Arnold Nesser and the writer held a two-days' meeting at Pleasant Grove branch, near Clarksdale, Missouri. Our first meeting convened Saturday morning, although the elements without were agitated, the weather being so inclement that but few were present. The writer was called upon to speak for the benefit of the small but appreciative audience, who had bravely come through rain and mud to assist in making the meeting a success. Truly the Spirit of promise attended us, and we rejoiced under his divine influence.

The social meeting convened at 2:30 p. m. While but few in number on account of the inclemency of the weather, we were made to realize the truth of the statement of Jesus, "where two or three are gathered together in my name, and are agreed as touching one thing, there I will be in their midst." We had a time of rejoicing which all present will certainly remember, and when the Spirit rested upon Bro. Arnold Nesser he spoke in prophecy, and it was grand beyond description. The little house of worship fairly shook, and "angels were hovering round."

Bro. Nesser occupied the evening hour and a goodly sized audience greeted him. We were comforted by a pleasing and very profitable discourse full of instruction and admonition.

The Lord's Day dawned upon us beautiful and clear; the clouds had disappeared; it was evident the elements were under control of Him who reigns on high and doeth all things well. At eleven a. m. the writer was again called upon to dispense the word, Bro. T. T. Hinderks offered a prayer that seemed to thrill with the Spirit which inspired the mind of the speaker. O Lord, why so blessed, so unqualified in wisdom as I, and limited in knowledge? All is explained in the grand words of prophecy: I will take the knowledge of the kingdom from the "wise" men of earth, and the "understanding of the prudent shall be hid," and it shall be "revealed unto babes." Social service immediately after the preaching, and a grand time was experienced. The Spirit of God attended us, and we were made to rejoice because of the assurance we received that the Lord was pleased with our efforts, and the promise of better things which are awaiting the saints if faithful. The blessed gift of prophecy was manifested in our midst, and all felt happy and united.

At 7:15 p. m. the writer again, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit discoursed upon the grand and marvelous plan of salvation. We had two days of successful meetings, they ended with all feeling good. We could sing by the Spirit, "There is a land immortal, the beautiful of lands."

While with the saints in that locality the writer was cared for by those who he believes are "for life enlisted in the army of the Lord." They are those I love in the gospel, and wish to have them my friends in this life, and to meet them in that beautiful land where parting shall be no more. This the promise to all those who live according to the knowledge they receive in this life if faithful and obedient to the perfect law; such men and women of God as Brethren Head and family, Marks and family, Babbitt and family, and Brethren C. P. Faul, John Krahl, and many others too numerous to mention. It does my heart good to go among such people who love the work of the Lord. A kind reception is always tendered those who go in their midst.

Bro. Arnold Nesser and the writer assisted by the Spirit of God did our best to make the meetings a grand success; the saints were valiant too. I think all realized a good time was enjoyed.

Yours in gospel bonds,
GILBERT J. WHITEHEAD.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—The discussion held at Blair, Nebraska, between Elder Almus Adams, of the Church of God, and myself, beginning the 11th inst., is now a thing of the past. Thirteen sessions of two hours each were held.

Elder Adams affirmed for three sessions that man is wholly mortal, and has no conscious existence between death and the resurrection. I affirmed the conscious existence of the spirit of man between the death of the body and its resurrection. He affirmed that the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2:44 would be set up at the second coming of Jesus. I affirmed its existence prior to the second advent, and would be set up in the latter days. Mr. Adams did the best he could, no doubt, from his stand, but I could not see that he sustained his positions; nor could I see that he moved ours. I am confirmed in our views by the discussion. Bro. Dian Carter told me the saints at Blair were satisfied with the results of the debate.

Bro. J. F. Mintun acted as moderator for our side, and did well. Different parties, including two lawyers (one the county attorney) acted chairman during the debate. We were made welcome among the saints and friends at Blair during our stay, and made headquarters at Mr. and Sr. Frank Frankville's.

Called on, visited, and took tea with Mr. Ireland and family, now resident at Blair, who for some years lived west of Lamoni, and are known to some of the early residents of Lamoni, including Brn. Dancer, Hudson, and others. Was entertained royally by them; they attended the debate throughout. Brn. Stubbart, F. A. Smith, Cushman, Belleville, Owens, of the ministry, attended all or some of the time; also Bro. Whitman. All seemed cheerful and encouraged in the great work.

Brother Adams' brethren looked somewhat sad and discouraged as the debate drew to a close. I hope they were enabled to see the silver lining to the truth of our great message. I preached once while at Blair, by invitation of the Disciples, in their church, and twice at Omaha, on the way to Blair, and once on my return from Blair. I see a decided improvement in the condition of the work at Omaha, since I was there in 1892-93. Brother F. A. Smith is evidently doing a good work there. A number of our young brothers and sisters there, are moving the Sunday school work to the front, and I hope they will thus continue.

Bro. Mintun is pushing along in his mission quite gallantly against odds, and needs helpers. We may surely hope for good from the labors of our young brothers, Owens and Belleville, in time to come, if they continue to remember that their wisdom and strength come from God.

For the truth,

C. SCOTT.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—The saints of Philadelphia and Camden have been cheered and encouraged by the presence and wise counsel of Bro. W. H. Kelley the last few days. B. H. Roberts of the Brighamites is now making an effort in this city; he had an audience of about two hundred last night. We propose keeping our eyes upon him. To-day I go to Hornerstown, New Jersey, for a few days. Some few are sick among the saints. All feeling well in the work.

THE RIVER SIDON. WHERE IS IT?— NO. 3.

I WILL now refer you to the account concerning the narrow neck of land, or passage, that led from the Zarahemla country (the same country that was also called Bountiful), to the north country, the land Desolation:—

And now it was only the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite, on the line Bountiful, and the land Desolation from the east to the west sea; . . . there being a small neck of land between the land northward and the land southward.—Alma 13:11.

This text shows that the line between Bountiful and Desolation, and the neck of land between the land southward and the land northward, is identical or the same place; and also that the land Desolation and the land northward is identical, it being northward of said line; and also that the land Bountiful and the land southward is the same, it being southward of said line. Hence it was across the neck, or on that line from the east to the west sea, the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite. Such being the case, it infers that the neck of land was not at that time, in the history of the Nephites, settled upon; but was held as a place of reserve, by them. Mormon in his abridgement of the records does not state whether the distance of a Nephite journey was by walking, running, on horseback, or by riding in a chariot. The records show, however, that it had reference to a time of war with the Lamanites, as seen by the context, which reads:—

And it came to pass that the Nephites had inhabited the land Bountiful, even from the east unto the west sea, and thus the Nephites in their wisdom, with their guards and their armies, had hemmed in the Lamanites on the south, that thereby they should have no more possession on the north, that they might not overrun the land northward; therefore the Lamanites could have no more possession only in the land of Nephi, and in the wilderness round about.—Alma 13: 12.

This text shows clearly that the distance a Nephite could and did travel, of which the record states that it was done by some method common among the Nephite people, when war was in the land, and the neck of land is referred to, apparently, to show by the distance across it, the distance that was counted on by those people the distance of a day's journey in the time of war. Helaman's record informs us, about forty years later in their history, that the line or neck of land between Bountiful and the north country, that it was fortified from the west sea a day's journey, which was also done in the time of war, leaving one third of it at that time unfortified; that part towards the east sea, which apparently was not so much in danger of being traveled by the Lamanite army to get possession of the north country because in that part was located the city of Bountiful, which was more or less at that time protected against the Lamanite invasion according to the records. The account reads:—

And in the fifty and seventh year, they did come down against the Nephites to battle; and they did commence the work of death; yea, inasmuch that in the fifty and eighth year of the reign of the Judges, they succeeded in obtaining possession of the land [city] of Zarahemla; yea, and, also all the lands [cities], even unto the land which was near the land [city] Bountiful; and the Nephites, and the armies of Moronihah, were driven even into the land [city] of Bountiful; and there they did fortify against the Lamanites, from the west sea, even unto the east; it being a day's journey for a Nephite, on the line which they had fortified and stationed their armies to defend their north country. . . . And all this was done in the fifty and eighth and ninth years of the reign of the Judges.—Helaman 2: 8.

This extract or quotation shows clearly that those references, by the records, of the distance of a Nephite day's journey was under the circumstances connected with war, when he had to carry dispatches of the movement of the armies, etc. It is evident, therefore, with this consideration, that the Panama Isthmus does not answer to the neck of land of the Nephite account but it is evident that the Isthmus of Tehuantepec does, by the following account of the distance the Mexican natives traveled carrying dispatches at the time of the Spanish Conquest, as noted by Mr. W. H. Prescott:—

Communication was maintained with the remotest parts of the country by means of couriers. Post-houses were established on the great roads, about two leagues distant from each other. The courier, bearing his dispatches in the form of a hieroglyphical painting, ran with them to the station, where they were taken by another messenger, and carried forward to the next and so on till they reached the capital. These . . . dispatches were carried from one to two hundred miles a day. . . . In this way intelligence of the movements of the royal armies was rapidly brought to court.—Conquest of Mexico, vol. 1, pp. 42, 43.

It may seem an incredible short space of time, considering the distance of the capital was near seventy leagues from Cortes' camp, . . . tidings were carried by posts, in the short space of four and twenty hours.—Ibid. p. 313.

Now, if the Mexicans by their system of travel could travel such a long distance in a day, why not the Nephites under like circumstances? Furthermore, the Nephites had horses and chariots in their time, which they could use for such purposes, (see Alma 12: 24; and, Nephi the son of Nephi, 2: 4,) whereas the Mexicans had to make the distance on foot, as quoted. And without doubt, too, the method was the same, both the Mexican and the Nephite—the Mexicans being descendants of the same race of people as those called Nephites and Lamanites. And in regard to the neck of land and the line that divided Desolation from the land Bountiful, the query might be, what extent of the neck constituted the division of those lands? By reference to the Bancroft map of "the boundary line between the Mayas of the south and the Nahuas of the north," it is located northwest of the Tabasco River, and runs from the Gulf of Mexico to the Tehuantepec Gulf, on the Pacific; and without doubt it was the southward part of that division of those lands in the time of the Nephites. Moreover, it is evident by the showing of the Gemelli chart that the line or its vicinity, was the southward line or part of the neck; for northwest of the conical figure at 52, is the water symbol which answers to the location of the Tabasco River. The conical figure just referred to represents the same location as at 27; and also as the location of the eagle at 31 on the chart.

These considerations show, therefore, that Mexico proper is the southward part of the land which the Nephites called Desolation; and that southward of the line, on the Bancroft map from the Gulf of Mexico to the Tehuantepec Gulf to the vicinity of the Honduras Bay as before stated, is the land which the Nephites called Zarahemla. Hence it will be seen that when Mormon made the treaty with Aaron, the Lamanite king, in the year 350 A. D. (Mormon 1: 6), which was done in Mexico, is evident; and which at that date also it is seen that the seat of the Nephite government was located in Mexico.

And furthermore, that Mexico was the Nephite seat of government at that period of their history, and also that it was the country to which Mormon and his people fled from the Lamanite army when they fled to the north countries, from "the borders of Zarahemla, by the waters of Sidon," is also evident by the following account:—

And it came to pass that in the three hundred and twenty and seventh year, the Lamanites did come upon us with exceeding great power, inasmuch that they did frighten my armies; therefore they would not fight, and they began to retreat towards the north countries. And it came to pass that we did come to the city of Angola, and we did take possession of the city, and make preparation to defend ourselves against the Lamanites. . . . We did fortify the city with all our mights; but notwithstanding all our fortifications, the Lamanites did come upon us, and did drive us out of the city. . . . And we marched forth and came to the land of Joshua, which was in the borders west, by the seashore.—Mormon 1: 3.

This account shows that when Mormon and his army fled from the Lamanite army, who by the reading of the context, as quoted, were located in the borders of Zarahemla City, by the River Sidon, fled to the west seashore, but made their first defense against them (the Lamanites) at the city of Angola. And in tracing out Mormon's course, and the ruins of a fortified town or city to answer to such a city, and its location, and name, I will now refer you to the following account in the work of H. H. Bancroft:—

Five or six leagues from the city of Tehuan-tepec . . . in the southwestern corner of the province, have been found the remains of an aboriginal fortification or fortified town. . . . The principal remains are on a lofty hill, the cerro of Guiengola, but the fortified territory is said to extend over an area measuring one and a half by over four leagues, the outer walls being visible throughout the entire circumference at every naturally accessible point. Besides the protecting walls there are remains of dwellings, all of stone without mortar, except a cornice on the larger walls. Three fortresses covered with a coating of hard plaster are mentioned. Ditches accompany the walls and add to the strength of the works. . . . Several natural caves are spoken of by Arias, and one of them, seventy feet deep, showed traces, according to the German traveler Müller, of having been formerly inhabited. The latter also found vestiges of dwellings scattered throughout the vicinity. . . . A correspondent of Hutchings' Magazine in 1858, describes a wall of rough stones four feet thick and thirty feet high, said to extend nine miles. This writer speaks also of buildings with pillars in their center, and of quarries from which the stone was originally taken. . . . On the top of a high hill, surrounded by other grand ruins, are two pyramids of hewn stone in mortar.—Native Races of the Pacific States, vol. 4, pp. 368, 369.

Such is the significant and remarkable account of the ruins at Guiengola.

First, it seems that their nature, and location from Tulha, they being southwest of the ruins at Tulha, as shown by Mr. Bancroft's map, is in harmony with the location of the city Angola, and course which Mormon took when he fled from the Lamanite army to the west seashore, from the borders of Zarahemla.

Second, it is evident, too, that the name of the place where the ruins are located is a corruption of "Angola." The distance, too, from Tulha, according to native tradition, "the rebels were followed" from a chief city, by their pursuers a distance of "sixty leagues," to a place called "little Tlapallan."

Third, the date, too, which refers to the account of the event, it being calculated by the writers that it occurred in the year 338 A. D., and which was also after "the Empire had been long at peace," all goes to show the harmony in data also with the Nephite, that peace and prosperity had been in the land for about three hundred years prior to the time when the war broke out among them. (See Nephi the son of Nephi 1:2-11; Mormon 1:1.) For the traditional account see N. R. P. S., vol. 5, p. 210.

Another account which refers to the same event states:—

A Mexican document, known only through Brasseur de Bourbourg, and by him called the Codex Gondra, furnishes some additional information respecting the overthrow of the Nahua power in Central America, and especially respecting the house of Nonoual alluded to in the Perez document, as follows: "The manuscript begins with a description of the twenty wards of the great city of Tollan, or Tolhá, Huey Tollan. . . . The author relates the events that precipitated the ruin of the throne, occasioned by the minority of the last Chane prince, whose guardianship was claimed by two powerful families, one called the Chichimec-Toltecs and the other the Chichimecs of Nonohualco. The quarrel terminated in the insurrection of the latter. . . . On their departure from Tulhá, Xelhua, the chief of the Nonohualcos, went to consult the oracle of Culhuacan [Palenque], which enjoined him to depart."—Ibid. 229.

This account brings the matter and facts face to face, for it confirms even the account which Mormon himself gives of his age when he was appointed the chief of the Nephite people, he being only "sixteen years old" (Mormon 1:3), at the time. The name, too, in the account, of the chief, Xelhua, apparently refers to the same person, as the twentieth or last name in the Chiapean-Tzendal calendar, that represents the twenty names of the rulers of the Votanic Empire of Central America who was called Aghual. Mormon was also the twentieth ruler of the Nephite government in Zarahemla. Xelhua being also the last Chane prince of the Empire, which shows clearly by tradition, and the native charts I have quoted from, that he was a descendant of Nephi, whose symbols were the eagle and "feathered serpent," called "Quetzalcoatl," in tradition of the Toltecs and Nahuas, is also in harmony with the account that Mormon was a descendant of Nephi (Mormon 1:1), and also a minor and the last ruler of the Nephite nation, which in tradition shows to have been the same as the Votanic Empire. The feathered serpent was the symbol of royalty.

After Mormon had defended his people on the borders of the west sea, for about eighteen years he retreats with them northward:—

And now the Lamanites had a king, and his name was Aaron; and he came against us with forty and four thousand. And behold, I withstood him with forty and two thousand. . . . And behold, all this was done and three hundred and thirty years had passed away.—Mormon 1:3.

And it came to pass that in the three hundred and forty and fifth year, the Nephites did begin to flee before the Lamanites and they were pursued until they came even to the land of Jashon, before it was possible to stop them in their retreat. And now the city of Jashon was near the land where Ammaron had deposited the records unto the Lord, that they might not be destroyed.—Mormon 1:5.

And it came to pass that in this year [345] the people of Nephi again were hunted and driven. And it came to pass that we were driven forth until we had come northward to the land which was called Shem.—Mormon 1:6.

I have now traced Mormon's apparent course from Zarahemla to the west sea coast, and from thence northward to the city of Shem. The question now is, Where was the city of Shem located? According to Mormon's own history it was located in the "northward" country; which was northward of "the land of Zarahemla" (Mormon 1:1), as I have before shown. The records show, therefore, that the city of Shem was in Mexico, on the gulf coast.

It is seen, too, that the account of Mormon (Mormon 1:1, and par. 6), has reference to the same place, and which infers that the city of Shem had a hill or pyramid within its borders; it being the place where Ammaron "did hide up the sacred records" of the Nephites (Nephi the son of Nephi 1:11). And without doubt, too, it was the same place where Ether hid up the Jaradite records, that were found by the people of Limhi. (Mosiah 5:9; 9:26).

Again, if the traditions of the Mexicans have any weight in the matter concerning the nature and use of the city of Cholua, that was destroyed by the Spanish army, which name means in our tongue, a "place of flight, or fugitives," (N. R. P. S. vol. 2, p. 127), it is evident that Cholua answers to the location of the city of Shem; for it is seen that Cholua has in it the roots of Xelhua who was the leader of the people that was driven out of Tulha; and the name too, which means that it was a place to which a people fled, as a place of refuge, shows that it is in harmony with Mormon's account of fleeing from the Lamanite army to the city of Shem, where he fortified himself against the Lamanites and for four years defeated them when in the year 350 A. D. he brought the Lamanites to terms by the treaty of peace, and divided their lands of inheritances, Mormon 1:6.

Respectfully submitted,

SIMON SMITH.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, about..... 4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about.... 1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

4-2t Business Manager.

Branches not in districts are each entitled to one delegate and one vote.

The rules governing "representation" and the "restrictions of delegate voting," are as follows:—

"Each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. [Scattered members in districts, including those enrolled on records of disorganized branches, who are not recorded as members of other districts, may be included in the enumeration of membership.]

"The delegates present at conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference;—

"Provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation, (the full delegation not being present,) they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

"If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's workings see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.
"But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold.
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart.
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold."

She was first cousin to Thomas Reed, late speaker of the house, second cousin to Mr. Sewall, who ran for vice president on the Democratic ticket in the late Presidential election. She was also sister to Mrs. Phebe Woodruff, the first wife of Pres. Woodruff, of the Utah Church. She was married to Captain Luther Scammon, November 12, 1837, at Scarbro, Maine. Soon afterwards she cast her lot with the Latter Day Saints. With true womanhood she rejected the "flood of iniquity" brought in by B. Young and company. She visited her sister Phebe at Utah and testified that her sister revolted at polygamy and despised it in her heart, but yielded to it at last to keep peace in the family. Sister Scammon clung to the original faith of the L. D. S. with such a determined will that it astonished her many friends and neighbors. She was baptized into the Reorganization by Elder M. T. Short, about 1878. She died triumphant in the faith, leaving four sons, William, Samuel, Edward, and Ezra; one daughter, Mrs. Sarah Hoover, all leading and respectable citizens living near Cherokee and Columbus, Kansas. William is the only one that has ever embraced the faith of the mother in fact. During the funeral services the house was packed from floor to gallery. The M. E. pastor presided and the Presbyterian pastor, of Cherokee, made the opening prayer. The M. E. choir rendered fine music, the selections being very appropriate for the occasion. I was at my very best, God in his loving kindness giving me such a flow of the Spirit for the occasion that the words spoken during that hour can hardly be forgotten by that people. Many comments of an encouraging character were offered me personally; while others sent consoling words to me by special friends, which cheered me in the knowledge that God had not forgotten his work while in the hands of his unworthy servant. At one time during the service there seemed to be a conduit opened up into heaven; and while under that grand and glorious influence a testimony was given to the speaker of the acceptance of the deceased's work, and of her glorious triumph over life's trials. I have been made to say in honor to the Master of this great latter-day work, Glory to him in the highest, and praise to his wonderful name! I. N. WHITE.

CHAMBERS.—David Chambers, youngest son of David and Mary Chambers, born June 16, 1841, at Glasgow, Scotland. Baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ in the year 1849, at Glasgow. Emigrated to this land in 1856. Ordained an elder by Elder Charles Derry, February 26, 1866. United in marriage to Miss Mary Ann McKee, June 21, 1867. Ordained to the High Priesthood at a General Conference in Lamoni, April 15, 1890, and set apart as a member of the High Council at the same conference by President Joseph Smith. He was appointed Bishop's agent and acted in that capacity until his death and faithfully discharged that duty. He acted as president of the Spring Creek branch, now known as the Persia branch, for several years. He was chosen by the voice of the Little Sioux district as president of the same, and further appointed by the general missionary in charge to act as missionary in charge over said district, holding these three latter offices up to his death, which occurred on the 27th of January, 1897, at his residence in Persia, Iowa. Every position unto which he was called he filled with honor to himself and to the success of the cause. He labored with untiring diligence and unswerving fidelity and to the satisfaction of the church. I believe it can be truly said of him, His counsels were given in wisdom, his rulings were just and merciful, his teachings were plain and pointed, in perfect harmony with the Spirit and letter of the gospel of Christ. He was an unswerving friend to virtue and an unyielding foe to vice. A thoughtful, loving, and faithful husband, and although his life was not cheered by the prattling tongues of childhood as the fruit of his own loins, yet his house was made the home of the fatherless and the homeless, to whom he was always a kind and indulgent father. David was a true friend to the poor and the families of the missionaries dependent upon his care, yet always true to the interests of the church that trusted that care to his hands. He was a man of God and a shining example of faithfulness in all committed to his trust, and his life was one more indubitable evidence that there is power in the gospel to lift fallen humanity up to the high standard of virtue, and place it within the pale of salvation and eternal life. In all his terrible suffering he never murmured, and although he desired to live for the comfort of his faithful companion and the interests of God's cause, yet he was perfectly resigned to the will of God, come life or death, realizing that "his life was hid with Christ in God, and whether living or dying he was the Lord's." Never could woman more faithfully perform her part of the marriage contract than did Sister Mary Chambers. Ever mindful of his welfare, in sickness or health, in poverty or in wealth, a constant watcher at his side, seeking to comfort and give ease, hiding the tears that gushed from the fountain of her heart until "the silver cord was loosed and the golden bowl was broken" and she was left alone to wait the glorious reunion where parting shall be no more. Sermon by Elder C. Dery, assisted by Elders J. Seddon and W. A. Smith.

BARRETT.—At Hillman, Michigan, January 1, 1897, wife of Bro. George Barrett, aged fifty-one years. Deceased was born at Urbana, New York; was baptized by F. H. Brooks, September 16, 1894, and remained faithful till summoned away to the rest that is only for those that will rise with glorified bodies in the morn of the first resurrection. Funeral service by Bro. J. H. Blackmore.

WHITE.—At Hillman, Michigan, December 27, 1896, wife of Mr. Eugene White. Deceased was born at Canisteo, New York, June 12, 1875; was baptized December 6, 1894, by J. Davis. Funeral service by Elder George Jenkinson.

CLOYD.—At Osceola, Iowa, January 5, 1897, Louisa Cloyd, mother of Green Cloyd, at the home of her son, aged 78 years, 4 months, 19 days. Was born in South Fork, Kentucky. She was the mother of twelve children, six dead, leaving six bereaved ones and eighteen grandchildren. After coming to this State she embraced the latter-day work was baptized by her oldest son, in 1892. She lived a true and consistent Christian, faithful to prayer and also to her testimonies. Bore all her afflictions patiently. Sermon by the M. E. pastor. Her place is vacant here. She is resting in peace to await the resurrection morn.

SHAW.—Edith Annie, daughter of Harrie and Sr. Lizzie Shaw, born January 9, 1893, died October 22, 1896. The little one was sick a little over a week, being taken with that fatal malady, membranous or diphtheric croup. Its suffering was intense, and though administered to the Lord deemed it best not to interfere. Funeral services in charge of T. W. Williams. Just four days after his sister, Lester Joseph succumbed to the same disease. He was born January 14, 1891, and died October 26, 1896. Though a crushing blow to the loving parents, may the good Father assuage their grief and reconcile them to their loss. Funeral in charge of C. A. Beebe.

HANSEN.—Sr. Bertha Mary Hansen was born February 16, 1822, and died January 3, 1897. The deceased was born in Denmark and on May 7, 1843, was united in marriage with Hans Hansen. She united with the church in 1851, and with her husband came to America in 1857, landing in Florence or at Winter Quarters. They remained here about three weeks and then repaired to the Iowa side of the river, locating in Pottawattamie County where they have ever since resided. They repudiated the assumptive leadership of Brigham Young and on the advent of the elders of the Reorganization they willingly obeyed. She was privileged to see all her children except one grow to manhood and womanhood, the majority of whom have united with the church. She was quiet and inoffensive and if there lives one who is her enemy we know it not. Funeral services by T. W. Williams. Interment in Hardin Township cemetery, Pottawattamie County, Iowa.

HALBROOKES.—At the home of her nephew, William Scott, with whom she had made her home many years, near Chesterfield, Tennessee, January 7, 1897, Sr. Hannah Thomas-Halbrookes. She was born September 7, 1809, in Iredell County, North Carolina. She had been religious for years before, but after hearing the gospel in its fullness she embraced the same, being baptized by Elder John Thomas, August 15, 1888, and was in full faith until death. She was widely known. Many distant relatives and friends will mourn her death. Interment in the Baptist cemetery near her home. Funeral services conducted by S. Reed.

FRAZEE.—Clarence E., son of Mr. Thurman and Sr. Lucy Robson Frazee, was born at Sand Run, Ohio, December 12, 1896, and died December 26, 1896. Funeral December 27, 1896, in the U. B. chapel, at Sand Run, Ohio, by James Moler.

THORPE.—On the 11 Con Chatham Township, Kent County, Ontario, the infant son of Bro. and Sr. George Thorpe. The funeral services were conducted by Elder George Green, after which the little earthly tabernacle was interred in the Wallaceburg cemetery.

KLINGBACK.—Master Charles Klingback, of Emmet, Idaho, writes me of the sudden death of his mother, Sr. Annie Klingback. He states that "she was taken sick at one o'clock and died at four, December 21, of paralysis. Her age was 41 years and 6 months." Sr. Klingback has resided in the Payette Valley, near Emmett, since about 1863. She united with the Reorganization there, being baptized by her husband's uncle, Fredrick Klingback, who had the names of those he baptized there recorded on the Mottsville, Nevada, records. The church has lost a zealous advocate and exemplary member. She leaves a husband stricken with cancer and four boys from about six to fifteen years of age to mourn their great loss. She was also a consolation to the aged parents of her husband, who, by reason of infirmity, have long depended upon her for Herald news and such cheer and comfort as her loving, sympathetic nature sought to bestow. May heaven grant the bereaved relatives that consolation that no other source can furnish. S. D. CONDIT.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will aborn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

HE FIXES THE SABBATH.—NO. 3.

S. W. GAMBLE ELUCIDATES FOURTH
 COMMANDMENT FOR JEWS.

*Saturday Idea Is Excluded and the Movable
 Nature of the Day Is Expounded—Dr.
 Emil G. Hirsch and Other Hebrew Scholars in Chicago Are Convinced of the Value of the Discovery—Rules are cited in Proof.*

ROTATION OF THE SABBATH.

"In the second year we find that it also began with a Sabbath. If the ten Sabbaths above enumerated were on Saturday the first year of the exodus they would be on Sunday the second year and on Monday the third year, and so on: so that in seven years the Sabbath is shown to be on every named day of the week as we now name them. Yet it always came on the seventh day as they calculated. For, as we have shown, the seventh week after the passover every year had eight days, the last two of which were Sabbaths. The same law holds in making the count for the Sabbath of years. In every fifty years (or jubilee) period the seventh week of years had eight years in it—the forty-ninth year and the fiftieth year. This period was followed by six years of work, which would make the first Sabbath year of the second period come on the fifty-seventh year, which would bring the ninety-ninth year next to the one hundredth year (the second jubilee), thus making the second forty-ninth year the ninety-ninth instead of the ninety-eighth year.

GENERAL STATEMENT.

"The weekly Sabbaths of the Jews commemorated their freedom from Egyptian slavery, which occurred on Abib 15. Each week contained six days, which were considered secular, although one of them might be a 'holy day or Sabbath.' Each week contained one or two Sabbaths. The first day of the week was the day which immediately followed the single or double weekly Sabbath.

"The week including the day of Pentecost contained eight days. The first six were secular and the last two were Sabbath days.

"In the weeks of years the last week, or the week containing the forty-ninth year, and the 'year of Jubilee,' contained eight years, the first six of which were secular, or work years, and the last two were 'Sabbath, or 'rest years' to the land.

THE RULES.

"In the calendar appended to this article adjust the slide so that Abib 1 will be Saturday. Read Leviticus, twenty-third chapter, and you will find the Sabbaths from Abib 15 to be on Saturday to Sivan 4. Sivan 5 was the Sabbath upon which the ten commandments were spoken from the top of Mount Sinai, on Sunday that year, and Thammuz 17 was the (Sunday) Sabbath upon which Moses broke the two tables when the people were worshipping the golden calf. Sunday, the first, fifteenth, and twenty-second days of the seventh month were weekly Sabbaths. The year would end on Saturday, the sixth day of the week. The starred dates are the weekly Sabbaths.

"In the second year push the slide up one place, and Sunday will show the weekly Sabbath dates until Sivan 4, and Sivan 5 and the rest of the fixed weekly Sabbath dates will be on Monday to the end of the year. The year will end on Sunday, the sixth workday. Readjust the slide by pushing one place higher each succeeding year, and the weekly Sabbath dates will be seen to be on each day of the week in succession in seven years.

FINDING WEEKLY SABBATHS.

"For finding the day of the week upon which the weekly Sabbaths occurred in any given year after the exodus and toward the crucifixion of Christ: First adjust the slide so that the year of the exodus will find Abib 1 on Saturday. Take the chronology of the authorized version of the Old Testament. Subtract the given date from the year of the exodus to give the number of years. Divide the number of years between the two dates by seven. If the number is exactly divisible by seven the year would begin on Saturday. If there should be an excess after thus casting out the sevens, slip the slide up as many places as there are units in the excess number.

"Illustration: Usher gives the exodus as 1491 B. C., and the dedication of the Temple by Solomon in 1004 B. C.

being the excess after casting out the seven in 487 years. Slip the slide up four places from Saturday and the year will be seen to begin Wednesday, and the dedication Sabbath and Feast of Tabernacle Sabbath in the seventh month, 8, 15, and 22, will be seen to have occurred on Thursday (2 Chron. 7: 8-10).

JUBILEE AND SABBATH YEARS.

"In studying the Bible you will find the jubilee and Sabbath years were to be counted from the time the Israelites became settled in Canaan.

"Six years of work were to be done, followed by a year of rest to the land, 'a Sabbath to the Lord.'

"Count seven Sabbaths of years, the space of which are 'forty and nine years.'

"The trumpet is blown in the seventh month of the forty-ninth year, proclaiming the jubilee.'

'The jubilee was to occur every fiftieth year and to immediately succeed the forty-ninth year in each jubilee period. Hence after keeping the forty-ninth and fiftieth years both as Sabbath years you begin the count with the year 51 as the first of the following six work years.

'In the study of the law of Sabbath years and jubilee years in Leviticus 25, the chart, diagram No. 2, will show:—

'Always 'six years' for tilling the land between the Sabbath years.

'The forty-ninth and fiftieth years in each jubilee period to be together.

'The 'three years' supply' of food given in the year preceding the year in which the trumpet proclaimed the coming of the jubilee would furnish the necessary food, at the proper time, to last through (1) the forty-ninth, (2) the jubilee, and (3) the year in which the new crop was grown after the jubilee, thus meeting all the biblical requirements.'

TRUE BIBLICAL CALENDAR.

Following is the true biblical calendar and rules for its use during the Levitical dispensation, by the Rev. S. W. Gamble of the South Kansas Conference of the M. E. Church.

NEPHITE, OR ANGEL? WHICH?

THE years 1878 and 1879 were years of trouble in the branch of the church at Plano, Illinois. Business was dull, the times hard; and during the fall of 1878 and all of the year 1879 there was considerable sickness among all classes. This sickness was of a typhoid type, with lung and throat complications quite baffling to physicians. The branch was quite large, but owing to circumstances there were not more than three or four elders available for visiting the sick as the law provides.

Brethren F. G. Pitt, H. S. Dille, and the writer were the most available, and part of the time the only ones who could be relied on to answer calls for ministerial assistance. These calls were numerous and came at all hours of the night and day, and it was quite a usual thing for these three to be out from supper time till near midnight answering to requests for ministrations. Nor were the requests all made by those who belonged to the church, quite a number of the neighbors and friends of the saints having learned of the effective benefits derived from administration, availed themselves of the faith and asked to be visited, which of course was granted.

One thing was annoying, and to us elders seemed anomalous to say the least of it, and that was that among many, both the members of the church and those not of the church, physicians were employed; and, sometimes, both doctors and elders would be found at the bedside of the sick at the same time, or following each other at intervals.

This seemed to work well for a time, but finally became irksome in thought to the elders, and perhaps also to the doctors; though none of the latter complained that we heard of. The sick seemed satisfied and not many died.

One night at the close of a long and tedious day a good part of which was spent in going from place to place, visiting and administering to the sick, the writer, after a talk with his companion elders had about concluded that he would refuse to go to places where a physician was employed, justifying himself with the saying: "They appeal to medicine, let them take the benefit of their appeal, or suffer the consequences." Before retiring to bed he told his wife that he had about concluded not to answer any more calls to administer where a doctor was called. That he would first ask, "Have they called a doctor?" And if they had to let the matter drop, and refuse to go.

With this conclusion he went to his room and to bed.

The house was one in which the front door opened upon a stairway leading directly to the upper part, a door to the right leading to the parlor, one to the left leading to the dining room. The room occupied by the writer was at the head of the stairway to the left. The night was clear, the moon shining fairly bright, so that objects in the room could be seen quite easily. Immediately upon lying down and before sleep had brought unconsciousness, the writer heard the hall door below open and shut, and then the walk of some one coming up the stairs. On reaching the top the person turned into the open bedroom door, took the chair, a common wooden bottom windsor chair, away from the door against which it had been set to keep it open, and coming forward to the front of the bed placed the chair opposite and sat down, took off his hat and said, "Good evening."

The action was one so natural and so characteristic of good nature that no wonder or surprise was excited in the mind of the writer, and he had a good chance to see what sort of a visitor had come at that hour, before he made his errand known.

In appearance the man was one of a common type, about five feet seven inches in height, round, compactly built, weighing about one hundred and forty to fifty pounds; hair a little grey, cut close to the head, but not shingled, a rather oval face having a full beard of apparently a fortnight's growth, a little tinged with grey; a pair of kind, shrewd, twinkling gray eyes. He was clad in a suit of gray tweed somewhat worn, a white shirt with standing collar and round the neck an old-fashioned stock, black, not very wide, with a small bow at the front.

After sitting down he put his foot upon the front rung of the chair and dropped his hat, a hat fashioned something like the derby, with a higher crown, and napless, on his knee; and looking at the writer said:—

"Your name is Smith, I believe."

To this the writer replied, "Yes, sir."

Then followed the following conversation:—

"There is a church here in Plano called the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, I believe?"

"Yes, sir, there is such a church here."

"You are a member of that church?"

"Yes, sir, I am."

"You are also an elder in that church?"

"Yes, sir."

"I understand that they believe in the apostolic doctrines, and in the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick."

"Yes, sir; you are correct. They so believe."

"There is a great deal of sickness in Plano now; and has been for some time?"

"Yes, sir."

"You and your fellow elders are called upon to administer a great deal?"

"Yes, sir. We are going pretty constantly."

"You administer to those in and out of the church?"

"Yes, sir."

"Some of those to whom you are called have physicians attending them also?"

"Yes, sir. Some do not care to trust to administration of the elders alone."

With a twinkle in his eye he then said:—

"You elders seem not to like this."

"No, sir; we do not."

"You think that those who are sick should be satisfied with either the doctors or the elders; and ought not to call both?"

"Yes, sir. We think it a little inconsistent to rely, or seem to rely, on both."

"You would have more faith if the elders alone were called, where you go to administer?"

"Well, yes; I think so."

"You have about concluded not to go and administer in case where a physician is called?"

"Yes, sir; I had about made up my mind to that course."

Then, changing the hat on his knee to his hands and whirling it around a time or two he rested it again on his knee and said: "May I ask you a few questions, and will you answer them?"

"If your questions are proper ones and I can answer them, I will cheerfully do so."

"By what power is the healing of the sick by the laying on of hands by the elders wrought? is it by the power of God, or is it because of some goodness or power in you elders?"

"It must be by the power of God, for there is certainly no power or special goodness in us as elders by which it is done."

"When you are called out to administer to anyone sick, do you know whether they will or will not be healed?"

"No, sir. I wish I did."

"When you go to administer to one who has only the elders, can you tell me whether the power by which he is healed, if healed at all, is the power of God, or the power of man?"

"I have already told you, sir, that I understand it to be by the power of God. I make no claim to any power in man to heal the sick."

"Well, do not be impatient, just answer my questions, and we'll get along all right. Now, when you are called to administer where a doctor has been called, is it the power of God by which they are healed, or the power of man?"

"The power of God."

"Where no physician is called, and the power is manifested by the sick being healed; by whose wisdom is it directed?"

"I do not understand your question."

"You say that it is the power of God by which the sick are healed; I ask whose wisdom is it that determines whether the healing power shall be sent, or exercised so that the sick shall recover."

"Why, I suppose that it is the wisdom of God. Surely it is not mine when I administer, for I should have all to recover."

"You believe then that in each and every case where no doctor is called to the sick and the elders are, that it is the wisdom of God that determines whether the sick one shall recover or not; as he in his goodness, knowledge, and power may decide. If he decides for recovery, the power is sent, if not it is withheld?"

"Yes, sir, I suppose that is about the idea of it?"

"Now, when you go where both the doctors and the elders are called, by whose power are they healed?"

"Why, you have asked me that before."

"Have I? Well, how do you answer it now?"

"I answer as before: It is the power of God by which all healing is done."

"In such cases where the faith of the sick one, or those surrounding them, is not strong enough to trust in the administration alone, and a doctor is called as well as the elders, by whose wisdom is it determined whether the power to heal shall be present and exercised; the wisdom of God or the wisdom of the elders?"

"The wisdom of God, of course."

"You think then that in both instances, where the faith is strong and the elders only are called, and where the faith is weak and the doctor as well as the elders is called that it is the power of God by which the sick are healed if healed, and that it is the wisdom of God which determines in each case whether the power shall be exercised and the sick person healed, or whether the power shall be withheld and the sick one left to the result that may follow without the intervention of divine power?"

"Yes, sir; decidedly so."

"You have no means of knowing when you are called to administer whether the issue will be recovery, or otherwise?"

"No, sir; we can only go and do what we believe we are commanded to do and leave the result in other hands than ours."

"Well, then, believing as you say you do, that the power by which the healing is done is the power of God; and that in each instance where an administration is had, whether the the elders alone are called, or a doctor is also called, the healing power is sent or withheld according as it is decided by the wisdom of God, do you not think that it is your duty, the duty of the elders who believe and teach the doctrine of the laying on of hands, to go when called and administer according to such belief and teaching, and leave the matter in God's hands to send the power and heal, or otherwise as he may in his wisdom decide, whether a doctor has been called in or not?"

Somewhat reluctantly, "Well, Yes; I suppose so."

"I think so too. Good night!"

The person then rose, took the chair, set it back against the door whence he had taken it, put on his hat, went out of the door and down the stairs out of the front door closing it after him, the same as any ordinary, careful visitor would. The writer then turned his face on his pillow and went to sleep. And from that day to this when called to visit and administer to the sick has gone when he could consistently without asking or caring whether a doctor had been called or the elders alone. He believes the visitation was intended to teach him his duty, and incidentally the duty of the elders generally, in the matter of administering to the sick and suffering, whether the faith of them who were administered to was weak or strong. He has no theory to advance whether this visitor was man, Nephite, or angel; he only knows that he was waking and in the possession of his faculties at the time. And that he had no fear of his visitor, and neither thought to ask who he was, nor whence he came, not being impressed at the time that it was anything out of the ordinary and having neither curiosity nor anxiety about it. His appearance was that of the average citizen of a half century or more ago; his manner quiet, pleasant, and yet convincing. Was he Ne-phite, or angel?

UTAH IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE.

THE choice of the Utah Legislature for United States Senator has fallen on Joseph L. Rawlins, he receiving 32 votes, Moses Thatcher 28, Henderson 1, Brown 1. Mr. Rawlins has once before represented Utah in Congress, and will doubtless represent the people in an able manner. Mr. Thatcher was beaten, which will likely be the cause of some complaining among the young Democrats, as it is thought he was the choice of the people as against church domination in politics.

WE have the following from the Librarian of the State University of Iowa, concerning the Church History, volume 1 of which was presented to that institution and others:—

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Jan. 27, 1897.

Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Lamoni, Iowa.

Gentlemen:—The Library of the State University is in receipt of a copy of Volume 1 of the History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

A hasty scanning of the pages convinces me that you have undertaken an important work and that the work is well done. Your resort to original documents and the statements of eye-witnesses for facts, is especially to be commended.

The value of history depends upon the truthfulness of statement.

Please accept thanks for the volume.

Very truly,

J. W. RICH, Librarian.

SALT LAKE CITY'S IMMORALITY.

A SHORT time ago we clipped some extracts from the Salt Lake Argus on this subject, and some thought perhaps that the Argus was too sensational to be reliable.

Since then a Rev. Mr. Lockwood, of Salt Lake City, in a public address spoke of these crimes in unmeasured terms, which aroused considerable feeling. Then the Ministers' Association of the city took the question up and declared by resolution that the denunciations of Mr. Lockwood were abundantly justified by facts.

The Argus of January 23, 1897, now criticises the ministers for condemning the unfortunate criminals alone while they spared the men high in society who for the sake of gain cater to this immortality and crime. The Argus boldly names some men of high standing, and charges them with the responsibility of the existing corruption.

We repeat what we said before, that the dominant church there "is only responsible so far as its teaching or practice condones, or encourages these crimes." But again we are led to ask: Can this be true?

The Argus' charges and comments are as follows:—

As the Argus has repeatedly pointed out, there are sin blots on the municipal escutcheon which should be wiped out; there are foul dens which should not be permitted to exist, and there are depraved men and women in the community, occupying high and low stations, who should be taught that they cannot ride rough-shod over respectable people and who should feel the weight of the law's iron hand, but the existence of these blots and of these depraved creatures does not warrant Rev. Lockwood and his colleagues in denouncing Zion as a modern Sodom and Gomorrah or in proclaiming to the world that this city is a sin-infested spot which needed a cleansing such as the Augean stables of old received. As a matter of fact, and notwithstanding the evils alluded to, Salt Lake is one of the cleanest cities on the continent, and what vice there is here is due to the fact that men of prominence cater to this element by renting and leasing houses in which carnivals of sin can be held. The Argus has already paid some attention to the delectable gentleman who have debased their religion and perverted their sense of common decency by leasing for immoral purposes the magnificent B. Y. Trust Company's building on Commercial Street, and could, if it desired, cite numerous others who have permitted their properties to become the assignation resorts and habitations of men and women who carry their heads high in their business and social circles.

It is on such people that the reverend critics should direct their batteries and not on the poor devils who have been forced to drink the dregs of degradation from the cup of circumstances. Let the ministers unmask the hypocrisy existing in high places and their work of stamping out evil will be more than half accomplished! Let them turn their pulpit searchlights into the consciences of the false exponents of the same doctrine they are paid to preach and show up the damnable hypocrisy which permits men to preach the gospel of Him crucified while carrying in their pockets coins which bear the odor of sin and vice! Let them turn their batteries of invective on the carcasses of these moral lepers, not on the defenseless police! Let them launch their anathemas at the heads of men who through sordidness have trailed their ecclesiastical robes in the gutter of turpitude, not on citizens who are in no way responsible for their hypocritical acts! Let them begin with George Q. Cannon, the president of the Brigham Young Trust Company, who has permitted a one-time honorable corporation to prostitute itself on the altar of Mammon, not on the harlot who must either sell her body or perish from starvation! Let them take Brigham Young, Jr., and Bishop Clawson in hand, and let them unmask the other worthies who have engaged, by proxy, in the unholy traffic in which women's souls and bodies are bartered for, not with the poor ignorant devil whose perverted mind makes of crime a virtue and of drunkenness a vice to boast of! Let Rev. Lockwood and his colleagues do these things and the better element of the community will be with them. But empty mouthings, veiled charges, and wholesale denunciations, cloaked by cowardly insinuations, will not work out the reforms needed. It will require honest work and brave work by the hands of clean men. The question is: Have these ministerial critics the courage to exploit their honest convictions, or are they, after all, mere pretenders as reformers?

Of the summer resort on Salt Lake known as Saltair, which is owned chiefly if not wholly by men high in church circles, the Argus has this to say:—

This immorality has become so deep-seated that it was recently the subject of a discourse delivered by a high official of the Mormon Church. His utterances from the pulpit were in direct opposition to the methods employed by the corporations in which he is interested, but they interested his hearers and conveyed to their minds the impression that he believed what he preached and not only believed it but practiced it. It was only another exhibition of the art of hypocrisy in which he is a past master. As a dust thrower into the eyes of the people he is without a peer, and while delivering this phillipic it is probable that in his mind there was no thought of the vice-breeding summer resort known as Saltair, a spot which should be damned for all time to come as being the most pernicious and soul-destroying within the borders of Utah. There, in the season, immorality holds high carnival, and drunkenness is never conspicuous by its absence. Depraved men and women make of it a meeting place; youths of both sexes permit their feeling and fancies to run riot, and if current reports are true scenes are enacted there which even a Boccaccio would hesitate to recount in print. That resort is controlled by men in high places; by men who are the moral censors, religious directors, and self-constituted political masters of nearly a quarter of a million people. These facts are only mentioned in order that the ministerial municipal critics, in case they engage in a crusade, will not waste all of their theological powder on the bombardment of haunts of vice infested by the ignorant and the naturally depraved. To be effective they should show no partiality. Any man or any clique, whenever righteousness is the shield, can successfully wage a warfare on the vicious and law-defying elements which constitutes the lower strata of society, but there are few who have the temerity to assail the upper crust, for self-interest is generally the master of duty.

What the ministers do no layman knows. If they begin a crusade such as they should they will find in the Argus a willing ally. But no partiality must be shown. A spade must be called a spade no matter where found. It is the same utensil whether it be used in burying the skeletons of the rich or in covering over the sins of the poor.

If the men thus accused are guilty they should be exposed to merited censure and rebuke. If they are not guilty as charged, then should the Argus be made to feel the penalty due to the slanderer. But whoever may be responsible for this condition, men who are traveling through the States portraying in vivid colors the crimes of the East and advising the people to flee to the purified and exalted society found in the "peaceful valleys" of Utah, should cease this condemnable practice of misrepresentation.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. GEORGE MONTAGUE, reporting his mission from Oklahoma, January 18, closes thus:—

The work in this part of the mission is progressing slowly but surely, and considering the very few there are to prosecute the work, and the scattered condition of the saints, I think there has been as much accomplished as could be expected. Bro. Hilliard's visit was timely and I believe profitable to the saints, and those that heard him were pleased and will give him a warm welcome when he comes again. There is great necessity for local labor in all this part of the mission and it takes much of the time of the traveling elder to labor with and teach the saints.

P. P. Kelley, the Attorney who conducted the case of the Temple Lot in the courts for the church, writing from Glenwood, Iowa, his home, January 28, says:—

I have just finished reading the first volume new Church History and find it a gem. While, as you know, I have recently been over a large part of the ground covered, still I found many things that were new entirely, and very many that would have been of service to me in my "bout" with those women in Utah, had I then known them as well as now. And I found other matters that would have been admissible as evidence in the "Temple Lot suit" to advantage of the church if I had known the full facts then. But then there are so many facts that it could not be expected for E. L. and myself to recollect all, and use them at the right time. But I am satisfied with the history we made in that case, and sometime all will come out right.

Bro. Richard Ferris, of Oakland, California, came across one of the old Latter Day Saints, and whose wife was a sister to Oliver Cowdery. He narrates some items of interest obtained from the brother, as follows:—

While at Sacramento recently I visited the family of what was in early days Elder Jackson, and who was at the dedication of the Kirtland Temple. He was one of many elders who, together with the Martyr, Joseph Smith, laid their hands on his wife's sister for the healing of a cancer which was on the top of her head and which was found to be healed on her waking up the next night, by noting that it did not pain her on touching it. He says that all the elders that could gather near enough to touch even a finger to her head in the administration were called upon. Elder Jackson's wife, who was much beloved by those who knew her, has been dead several months. She was a sister of Oliver Cowdery. Elder Jackson is now eighty-two years of age, is not identified. I believe, with any church. He and his family testify to many historical facts of the church under Joseph the Martyr. Among other things they all say that Oliver Cowdery on his deathbed called all around him and with a heavenly light illuminating his face testified that the Book of Mormon was true.

Bro. F. G. Pitt, Joy, Illinois, January 30:—

Bro. James McKiernan and I are holding meetings here every night with good interest.

Bro. R. C. Evans wrote of late:—

I am pleased to inform you that Canada is now in perhaps the best condition I ever knew it to be in. Bro. Lake is in Niagara Falls, feeling well after a pleasant visit at home. Brn. Shields, MacGregor, Gregory, and St. John are doing good work in the field. Branch officers are doing well in the main.

Bro. F. A. Smith, Omaha, Nebraska, the 2d:—

Our conference was a success and a fine time was had by all that were there. Everything was quite harmonious and a real spiritual time was had.

Bro. A. H. Parsons, Philadelphia, January 28:—

Elder B. H. Roberts is here putting in his best efforts. Bro. Kelley and I heard him last night. He is an orator; his sermon was the truth and set forth in glowing terms; but alas! behind the screen! It is darkness, darkness! Bro. W. A. Smith left for home on the 20th. Bro. Moler is at Hornerstown, New Jersey. Have the biggest snow of the winter.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. E. SARTWELL, Savanna, Illinois, writes of prospects for the cause there, where some now believe the word. Elders had come in answer to her requests, whose labors were well received. She thinks saints should not cease striving to get the work before the people.

Bro. Jacob L. Rust, living at Gladstone, Henderson County, Illinois, will be pleased to have the elders call on him in passing. Give him a call, good may come of it.

Sr. Ellen Jenkins, of Byrneville, Indiana, writes, that she is sharing with others the sacrifice required of an elder's wife, her companion being in the mission field and she alone at home. She is glad for the opportunity of making sacrifice for the cause, though feeling keenly with others the poverty resulting from the closeness of the times. She commends the local brethren in charge of the branch at Byrneville, as faithful in caring for the flock; who keep the members together and in the line of duty and thus prevent indifference and transgression.

Bro. D. E. Tucker, writing from Gordon, Alabama, January 26, reports better prospects for growth in some portions of his field. While some were careless to the spiritual interests of themselves and the work, others were sustaining the efforts of the missionaries. Some Brighamite elders had been compelled to leave Suwannee County, Florida, with instructions never to return.

Bro. F. M. Weld was at Dry Ridge, near Farmington, Iowa, in the Nauvoo district, on the 1st inst., holding a series of meetings. He was to go thence to Fort Madison and endeavor to plant the work at that point.

Bro. C. D. Freeman, residing at Brunswick, Cumberland County, State of Maine, desires the elders in that State to visit him and labor at his home. He united with the church at Oakland, California, in 1890.

The Omaha World-Herald, of January 30 and the Bee of the 31st publish very favorable notices of the late session of the Northern Nebraska district held with the Omaha saints on the dates named above. The ministry in the district and the work in the State, and in the city of Omaha, are mentioned in a manner that presents both to the friendly consideration of the people. The brethren and sisters of the district have evidently impressed the newspaper men favorably with their efforts. These repeated indications of growing favor in the eyes of the people widen the avenues of usefulness so favorably opening to the children of God. May none fail to fully occupy in every line of duty, that the work may obtain such influence as to reach the honest in heart everywhere. We have the best of causes and are therefore in duty bound to give it always the best of representation—an honorable mission surely.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard stopped off at Lamoni on the 6th inst., while enroute to the Nauvoo district, where he is to labor until near conference time.

Late arrivals at Lamoni: Bro. I. P. Baggerly from Texas; Bro. A. H. Smith from Missouri and Kansas; Bro. R. M. Elvin from outposts of the Decatur district.

Sr. Ida Brown writes from Beaverton, Michigan, of her growing faith in the work of God. The branch at that point had not flourished since Bro. J. A. Carpenter had been obliged to locate elsewhere.

Utah elders are operating in Denver, where they have rented a public hall and hold services every night. During the day they visit the people and distribute tracts. They also try to show that the Reorganized Church occupies an erroneous position. They discredit polygamy as an item of present practice but when pressed to it admit belief in that odious and degrading dogma. Bro. Shupe finds them poorly posted on church history, knowing little else than the traditions of their elders. They will be given the usual opportunity to meet the issues.

Some one sends us a copy of the Wheeling, West Virginia, Intelligencer, of the 14th ult., which contains an account of relics of American aborigines found in the Florida Keys.

A dispatch from Shreveport, Louisiana, dated February 6, states that thirty thousand people in the State are practically starving. A relief committee reports that that number will have to be supplied with provisions during the unfruitful season.

Berlin advices of the 7th state that the Czar has been put under a special regime with a view to improving his health, which shows a tendency to break down under the cares of state. The heir to the Austrian throne is a confirmed invalid. Rumor states that Emperor Francis Joseph, now in his sixty-seventh year, will set aside the salic law in favor of his granddaughter, the Archduchess Elizabeth.

Bro. Columbus Scott was called home, arriving on the 8th, because of the serious illness of Sr. Bass, mother of Sr. Scott.

“Three Angels share the lot of human strife,
Three Angels glorify the path of life.
Love, Hope, and Patience cheer us on our way;
Love, Hope, and Patience form our spirit's stay;
Love, Hope, and Patience watch us day by day,

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 1. THE LEAVE-TAKING.

NOVEMBER 4.—Twenty-four hours at sea. Yesterday morning at 7:30 we (Joseph and I), in company with Bro. Luff, left Bro. Anthony's, enroute for the City of Papeete, each of us carrying a grip and numerous small parcels, boarded a Castro Street car and rode to the ferry, a distance of one mile or more, then a short walk brought us to the mail packet, City of Papeete by name. Passengers and friends were already collecting on board. Sr. Lulu Morrison and little Grace were the first of our people to greet us; had risen early and come from Oakland to see us off. We appreciated the kindness and exertion very much, as well as the little box of crystallized fruit that Grace brought for us. Then came Bro. Wyatt, from Berkeley, Bro. and Sr. Kaighin, Sr. Knight and daughter, Sr. Lincoln, and Bro. Knight, all from San Francisco. The morning was clear and beautiful and the coming of those kind-hearted friends added much to the brightness and enjoyment of our last hour in San Francisco.

At the given time the tugboat came alongside, then there was the usual running to and fro, pulling and hauling, shouting and calling, the tearful good-byes, the “All aboard!” and then the plank was hauled in, the gangway closed, and the ship moved slowly from the dock. Loath to lose sight of the familiar faces of the dear friends, we still stood with fixed gaze upon them as long as we could recognize their features, waving handkerchiefs from ship and shore. When their features were no longer distinguishable we knew them by their position in the crowd. We knew Bro. Luff's handkerchief when it went up. When all the rest had disappeared we saw that one raised aloft for a final wave, and we knew that he felt far more lonely than any in the crowd. The rest could return to their own homes but he could not. Then I remembered of Sr. Kaighin pressing a small folded paper in my hand, and which I had dropped in my satchel without looking at until more at leisure, and went below to hunt it up. The note in which your gift was inclosed, Sr. Kaighin, rendered it more precious to us. Please accept our thanks for the same, and may you and all others who have conferred like favors upon us receive the promise of the Father.

But we were fast losing sight of San Francisco, so I hurried on deck again. There was a nice breeze blowing, but the waters of the bay were smoother than I thought they would be. On we glided, rejoicing in the glory of the morning and all the good things that the Father had bestowed upon us. With a feeling of both gladness and sadness we mentally said, “Good-bye, dear saints. Good-bye to San Francisco, to glint and glitter, the noise and clang of crowded streets, hurry and bustle of rushing to and fro, and withal to the numerous car fares and ferry tickets,” and with something akin to a sense of relief looked forward to days of quiet.

We passed the “Golden Gate,” the swell increased, and the faces of the passengers began to look white, and they made frequent short trips to the rail, and looked deep down into the sea. The reefs on either side of the harbor were breaking, sending the foaming spray far up into the air or against the rocks, and as we neared the great Golden Gate bar we saw that was breaking too, but not nearly so bad as when we crossed in the little Evanelia two years ago. And he who stood at the helm could not resist the temptation of taking the wheel again, though the long clerical coat was rather in the way. Sail was being made and the steam tug still pulled us along. So far we had cleared all the breakers. Captain Burton yielded the wheel to another. The gong sounded for lunch and I went below to make ready. Others who would have gone to their rooms had they not felt too weak to make the exertion still sat on the hatchway. I had no more than reached my room than I heard a big splash and a jingling of crockery. The curling top of one of the breakers had come on board, broken the pig pen, filled the fore-castle, and enough went into the mate's room to wet everything there, and gave those on the forward part of the “quarter” a heavy shower bath. At the same time some of the dishes jumped off the table. The more we neared the outer edge the heavier the sea got, but no more came on board. When across the tug dropped the hawser, blew three cheers from her whistle, men waved a good-bye with their hats and started back, while our good little ship was put on her course and all went below to lunch. But very few of the passengers were at the table; only three others besides ourselves.

The afternoon was very rough though the wind did not blow very hard; just a good full sail breeze, and a fair wind, too. It was evident, though, that there had been a heavy gale off shore, and we felt the "ground swell." It was too rough to be on deck, too cold to sit in the cabin, so all, myself included, betook themselves to their berths. The sun was shining pleasantly through the little window, making the room very cheery. After a little while of reading I closed my eyes, and while being rocked with the ship, gave myself up to a delicious reverie of living over again much of the pleasant past and in thought reaching forward to the future, and at the same time hearing Joseph snoring away in a lower berth. So the afternoon passed away. At supper there was only the captain, Consul Doty, Dr. Bryant, Mr. Burton and myself. At midnight the sea commenced to go down and the wind hauled more fair.

This morning was perfectly delicious. A nice breeze, not too much sea, the sky blue, sun bright. A little more sail made and wind from just the point that filled them all; that is, as near aft as it can be and fill them all. A splendid run off shore, sea going down gradually, and air not so cold, for all of which we felt thankful.

November 6.—For the past forty-eight hours we have been skimming along over the sea with wind almost aft and studding sails spread. All the sick folks have left their rooms and now the cabin is too full for comfort. Among them are two noisy children. I had laid down a system of work for myself which was: After the morning lunch of coffee and dry toast at seven I would go on deck and study till I had learned my page of twenty-four lines of Tahitian dictionary, and after the ten o'clock breakfast was cleared away,—which would not be till noon, for there were two tables of passengers,—while those Tahitians were taking their midday sleep, I would devote the time to writing till the half past five supper, after which I would take an outing on deck an hour or so, then spend the remainder of the evening in reading. This was all very well while the larger portion of the passengers were sick, but now there can be no regulations, being no place for sitting in the cabin except around the table. Everyone in the cabin has to sit at the table. Some talking English, some French, and some Tahitian makes too much confusion for even a partially deaf person. I made the attempt to write yesterday, but soon took paper and ink to our room; and O, the discomfort of crouching on the floor and using the one round stool for a writing table! When limbs became thoroughly benumbed I pulled out one of the drawers under our berth next to the floor and tried sitting on the corner of that. But it was not at all comfortable,—both feet soon got asleep,—so I gave up the effort and tumbled into the berth. This morning I have got my folding chair from the "hatch," so will be more comfortable. There are nine lady passengers, (ten—I forgot to count myself—including the captain's wife,) six gentlemen, and two small children. Three of the ladies are Sisters of Charity. So far we have had an unusually fine run, for which we fervently thank our heavenly Father.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—NO. 2.

THE social meeting in charge of T. A. Hougas at 9:30, December 27, resulted in great encouragement. The following are some of the thoughts expressed:—

J. F. Mintun rejoiced because of the effectiveness of the Sunday school in training the children of the missionaries, and the cheer brought to a lonely missionary to associate with the children in the Sunday school.

A. Badham rejoiced in the Sunday school because of the valued instruction he had received therein.

William Landers had been greatly benefited by the study of the Quarterlies in and out of the Sunday school. It had been the stepping stone to his spirituality.

C. A. Beebe rejoiced in the Sunday school because he had noticed that when children took interest therein they could defend the doctrines of the church, and most of them were spiritual. Those who did not attend were seen on the streets spending their time with the wild and reckless, and many of them were yet wild.

Proper training must precede baptism at eight years of age, and this training could best be received at the Sunday school, associated with their parents, and when they had been thus baptized it formed a tie that held them near the church.

Anna Salyards was not brought up instructed in the Scriptures. In her case the Lord had chosen one whom he could use. Was directed by the Spirit to make her home at Lamoni, and assist in issuing the "Lesson Helps." God regards the Sunday school as a part of his great work, and will sustain those who engage therein as in any other part of his work, as experience had given her evidence.

A sister whose name we have not, said that God had blessed her much in the Sunday school. She took a class of children not able to read and now she rejoiced in seeing them all in the church. God had spoken to her through the gift of prophecy and shown her that her place was to assist in the Sunday school to advance his glorious cause.

S. B. Kibler had no experience in Sunday school work till manhood. Began that work in his own home, and several from that effort were now workers in the church.

J. S. Strain began his Sunday school training early. Sunday school had given him a great love for God's word, such that he had carried his Bible through the war as his associate. The energy of those engaged in this work in the past was very commendable, but he rejoiced to see the more efficient methods used now.

Others spoke in a similar strain, the time being well spent, and the presence of the Spirit attested of God's pleasure in the service.

A paper on Primary work was read by Sr. Dora Young as follows:—

It was concluded that in no case should books on Bible stories be used to the exclusion of the Primary Quarterly.

In the examination of the proposed amendments it was unanimously concluded that several needed changes should be made to the Constitution and By-Laws of the Association as now published, but time did not allow of an examination of but few. The proposed amendments are to be published for further examination before being presented for final action at the next General Convention.

The Intermediate class work by W. N. Robison brought out the following items:—

1. Teachers' Preparation:—

a Study the Lesson:—

1. Intermediate Quarterly.
2. Senior Quarterly.
3. Other helps.

b Study of pupils.

1. In school.
2. In the home of the pupil.

c Study of lesson associated with the pupil.

Pupils' preparation:—

1. Opening exercises just behind primary, near front of room.
2. In class so as to best hold attention.
3. Teacher with her class always.

Reasons:—

1. Lead class in responsive reading.
2. Assist in review work.
3. Lead class to place for class work.
4. Have special oversight.

Golden Text and application.

Review lesson.

Senior class work by Anna Salyards was a practical illustration of how to teach the lesson, using lesson 13 of Quarterly for October, November, and December; closing with what would be considered a teachers' review.

The evening session was a temperance program, which fittingly showed the estimation the Sunday school workers have of the principle of temperance.

An essay entitled, "Neal Dow," was read by Mrs. Ballenger, showing the prominence this man has attained socially and physically because of his views on and practical application of temperance principles.

An excellent recitation entitled "Revelry" was very effectively rendered by Nora Gaylord showing in poetic strains what the curse of liquor had done.

Elder J. F. McDowell then gave an address, paying special attention to the position that should be occupied by members and ministers of churches relating to the cause of temperance. The evening was profitably spent.

The Review Work in charge of J. F. Mintun developed the following outline. Review:—

Object:—

1. To impress:—
 - a Through eye.
 - b Through ear.
2. To call attention.
3. Examination:—
 - a Of pupil;
 - b Of teacher.
 - c Association of thoughts.
 - d Contrasting of thoughts.
 - e Developing thought.

Preparation for:—

1. At teachers' meeting.
2. At home after teachers' meeting.
3. During class recitation.

Two special examples were presented of a combined review concerning which there was much criticism resulting in the conclusion that where the general review was conducted in same room at same time, a uniformity of lesson texts would be much preferable.

The teachers' training class in charge of T. A. Hougas developed much thought; various answers were given to the words "teacher" and "teaching," of which the following is an outline:—

Teacher—What?

1. Instructor.
 - a Instructor;
 - b One who imparts knowledge;
 - c Leader and guide;
 - d One who causes another to know.

It was thought best to decide what teaching is, then decide what a teacher is.

Teaching is:—

1. Imparting knowledge to others.
2. Instructing.
3. Causing another to know.
4. Developing the mental powers.
5. Preparing others for life's duties.
6. Qualifying others for action.

It was decided by a majority that the best definition is, "Teaching is causing another to know, hence a teacher is one who causes another to know." Quite a large minority thought other definitions equally as good.

Subject of Visiting Committees discussed under J. F. Mintun, instructor, resulting in the following items:—

Visiting committees. Of whom composed:—

1. Teachers.
2. Officers.
3. Other members best qualified.

Numbers:—

1. Commensurate with members in school.
2. Commensurate with work to be done.

Duties:—

1. Solicit new members;
2. Visit indifferent members;
3. Report to superintendent.

Discussion on subject of "selecting teachers" brought out the following items:—

Teachers.

How selected:—

1. By superintendent and assistant superintendent. Even where there has been consultation with the class the one selected must be decided by the above-named officers.
2. Governed by their adaptability.

Who qualified:—

1. One competent to teach;
2. One competent to govern;

3. One adapted to the special work for which one is to be selected;
4. A spiritual-minded person;
5. A lover of children.

Everybody should work in Sunday school and accept of any position to which they may be elected or appointed.

T. A. Hougas had charge of the above work.

Blackboard work. "Why? How?" By Joseph Roberts.

Essentials:—

- a Prepare your own work.
- b Must be short.
- c Must be simple.
- d Must be interesting;
- e Must be profitable.
- f The whole school must aid.

Objects:—

1. To present to the senses.
2. To review.
- A few kinds illustrated:—
 1. Blackboard analysis of lesson.
 2. Associating events with places.
 3. A new viewing of the whole.
 4. Forming contrasts.
 5. Forming comparisons.

The business of the Institute resulted in the passage of the following preamble and resolutions:—

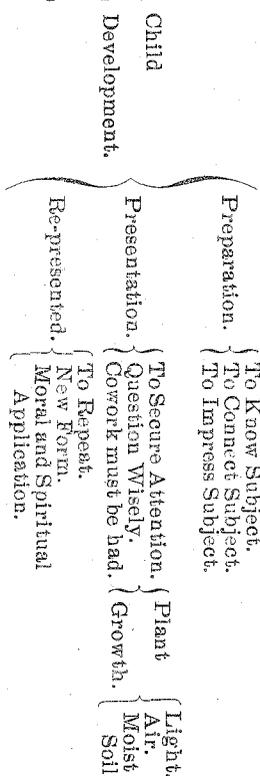

"Whereas, The Inter-State Sunday School Institute has been an unqualified success, therefore be it

"Resolved, That we request the General Association at its next Convention to arrange for its continuance.

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of this assembly that the Christmas and New Years holiday vacation is the most appropriate time for holding the next Institute.

"Resolved, That the chair appoint a committee to represent the wishes of the assembly to the next convention of the General Association."

Joseph Roberts illustrated the subject of "Systematic and Unsystematic Teaching," by the following diagrams:—

No one element in the child development can be dispensed with any better results than to dispense with any one element in plant growth.

A teacher has for his duty the entire development of the child, not only mental, but physical.

He did not believe there existed any person who knew all about teaching.

He did not think the Sunday school had any place for one who thought he did.

A "Sunday School Newspaper" by Charles Fry was quite interesting and will appear at a proper time.

The question about the nature of district convention brought out the following:—

The object of district conventions is for both business and instruction.

It would be proper to set apart a part of the time for a literary or musical entertainment, providing it could be done without infringing upon the time necessary to be used for business, or special school instruction. The nature of the entertainment should be in keeping with the spirit of the Sunday school.

A resolution of thanks was tendered to the saints at Council Bluffs for their hospitality during the institute. Truly their kindness will long be remembered by those present.

Thus closed a season of work that met the highest expectations of the most enthusiastic, and the benefits were such as to cause all to see the need of such assemblies.

NANTYGLLO, Wales, Dec. 29.

Editors Herald:—It is now over a year since I troubled your columns and I may say that the work of the Lord is onward in the Eastern district of Wales over which Elder A. N. Bishop presides. The local officers are doing all they can under present circumstances, adding a soul to the kingdom here and there, and we are trying to arouse the interest of the people at Nantyglo by firstly tracting the neighborhood. We have delivered quite a number of tracts called the Doniad which was prepared for the occasion by Bro. Caffall, to show that we are not Utah Mormons, and it creates a spirit of inquiry among the people, and now I think we shall be able to build firmly, if slow. The friends around us are even asking us for further understanding or tracts with our faith and doctrines, and some will carry the tracts for us. We cannot demur, but seize the opportunity with joy.

I had the privilege to accompany Bro. Bishop to the city of Gloucester on the 13th of December to open the work of the Lord there; we and others held forth by the aid of the Spirit. Bro. T. Griffiths, of Lydaey, baptized a young sister on the 14th, as result of the trip of one hundred and twenty miles, and I think the right man is in his place as president, a speaker of power as Peter of old, not afraid to declare the gospel of the Son of God. The young sister received a testimony of the Spirit and was satisfied that she had come fourteen miles to listen to such a glorious gospel.

There was a meeting of the officers of the district called together by president at Bro. Gould's house and Bro. Bevans, of Cardiff, on the 19th and 20th December, in regards to the best means of getting the gospel before the people, and the prosperity of the district in financial affairs. It was deemed wise to tract and have chats while so doing, until the district funds would become stronger, when we could move otherwise. Tithing and freewill offering was discussed and shown to be essential to salvation, but it was urged that we would not let our own district perish for lack of money, that by this advise of Bro. Bishop it is thought that more could be added outside the families of the saints that now exist. There was no motion passed against tithe or freewill offering, but rather all the officers of this district more fully understand the law. It was enforced by the president and Bishop's agent. All business was met satisfactory to furtherance of the gospel. Two were ordained at saints meeting at two thirty, one to office of priest and the other to the office of an elder, and I think our efforts of that Lord's day met the approval of God's Holy Spirit. It was present with us in power. The spiritual gifts were manifest, such as prophecy, that the Lord would give power to his faithful ones while declaring his gospel, also the gift of revelation and tongues and the interpretation thereof. Every officer felt to go forth to his duty with renewed vigor. It was also advised there and will be done to hunt up all dead members and try to induce them to do their duty; if not, take action as the law directs, so that the record books can be produced to headquarters correct. Hoping this will not be too long to publish I remain,

Your brother in Christ,

THOMAS JONES.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—There has been much rejoicing among the faithful here and a great stir and rattling of the dry bones of sectarian "hobbies" over the sword thrusts of one of truth's champions, one William H. Kephart, of Lucas, Iowa, a proselyte to this faith from the Baptist Church some four years since. The brother has his own conveyance and "sails right out amongst them" like an "old hand at the business," his score or more of years' experience as a Baptist itinerant serving him well in his new calling as a successful "fisher of men."

At Youngstown he preached thirteen times with unabated interest and good order and attention, even the young staying away from a dancing party to hear the old veteran, who succeeded in holding their attention to an unprecedented degree.

His services were called for here by a young convert from the Quaker faith, or "Society of Friends;" and a more beautiful sight than the baptismal ceremony in the clear flood of old Des Moines River under a cloudless sky, the glory of old Sol beaming down in bright acquiescence in the beauty and rightness of the holy act, can hardly be conceived; and we feel to pray God for many repetitions of the grand scene; and may his servant many times so graciously officiate.

Bro. Kephart left for other labors a week ago to-day, and the kind wishes of God's people follow him. He preached three times in Des Moines.

Yours,

W. T. MAITLAND.

HILLS, Minn., Jan. 22.

Editors Herald:—We are not among the fortunate, to live where there is a branch, hence are deprived of church privileges; but I suppose the scattered condition is for the spread of the gospel.

Bro. Peter Anderson has been among us at different times. He has done much good here. I think a lot of prejudice is removed. Bro. Anderson is a noble worker and is the right man for this mission, and I hope the conference will send him to this mission again. It takes patience to work in this mission, but I hope the work done will show in time. I hope the honest ones may be gathered in.

A word about the tent: We need a tent here in Southern Minnesota and Southern Dakota, and I wish to say to the saints of Minnesota and Dakotas: Let us each do a little and we will soon have enough to buy a tent. I think one for fifty dollars would be big enough. I think there is a certain class of people that would go to a tent meeting that would not otherwise be seen at meeting. Let us each do a little for the gospel in this field so wide before us. The harvest is great, but the laborers are few. Let us pray for one another.

In bonds,

O. H. MIDGORDEN.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—I closed a very interesting series of meetings at Webberville, Michigan, last week. Baptized one and left more near the door.

Came here on the 23d and found a very faithful and united working band of saints. They have rented a very comfortable hall for one month and that means preaching here for me one month at least. They are all workers. It is true that a small number of faithful, united, and earnest working saints can and will do more than five times as many that are quarrelling, kicking, and pulling in opposite directions. I hope to see a good work done here ere these meetings close.

Bro. C. H. Fish is a pusher and leaves nothing undone that can be done to make the work move; and I may say all are earnestly engaged in the good work.

Yours in bonds,

H. C. BRONSON.

P. S.—This will be my address for one month.

DES MOINES, Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—I returned to my field of labor, February 1, after one month's absence in Nebraska, where I held a debate at Blair already referred to in Herald.

After the debate I visited for one week at Omaha and Council Bluffs, and by invitation preached twice at the latter place, and thrice at the former, and attended the Northern Nebraska district conference held at Omaha, January 30 and 31. I will long remember the warm cordiality with which I was greeted in both cities by officers and members of the church, also by friends. Temporal needs were also supplied. I was blessed of the Lord in my efforts to tell the gladsome gospel story.

The Omaha daily papers treated our cause fairly and kindly during the conference. The conference and Sunday school convention work indicated a growth and advancement that are truly encouraging. I hope the noble workers will not be weary in well-doing.

Bro. Fred A. Smith, T. W. Williams, and J. F. Mintun with their helpers, are coming to, or rather staying at, the front, in their respective departments and fields, and are well liked. I am glad.

Bro. Swen Swensen, on his way to his field among some of the descendants of the north, stopped over at the conference at Omaha and cheered us with good reports of God's blessing on his labors.

The tri-yearly conference of the Des Moines district convenes at this city, February 13, at ten a. m.; Sunday school convention the day previous. Bro. T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, is now expected to be with and help us at that time. We are unable to advertise other visiting brethren at this writing, but all who may be able to attend from other fields will be welcome. Come, brethren, help and encourage us.

Am opening a series of meetings here in the city, and may find it essential to set forth the differences between the Reorganization and the Utah positions, as three of their elders are doing the city in their quiet way, and withal misrepresenting to an extent. Pray for us, saints; we need sustaining grace.

For the right,

REED CITY, Mich., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—I have just finished reading the "Church History," vol. 1. I am indeed pleased with it, although I have read much of it before, a sketch here and a sketch there. But to have it compiled in a volume together with much more in addition to the same, it makes it so much more grand.

It renews and adds much more to the old story as told to me twenty-five years ago when I first heard the grand news of the great latter-day work. I was then but a boy or young man, about eighteen years of age. As they told it I believed it, and when speaking of Joseph the Seer, I did not doubt a word; I believed it as much as I believed Moses was, or anyone God had sent, although I knew but little about any of them, not being able to read much.

On reading of the angel's message to Joseph it revives the Spirit I have so often felt while standing in his defense, which says, "Your name shall be had for good and evil among all nations." O, how true! Have I not proven it true? Yes, so many times I cannot now number them. "For evil" upon the part of his enemies, and "for good" upon the part of his friends.

I so often think of my foolishness, how, when I first heard the truth and obeyed it, and received the Spirit of God and many evidences of the truthfulness of the work, that on my return to the city of London, Ontario, and when trying to tell those with whom I conversed what a beautiful gospel I had found, I should be rather inclined to believe some of those many stories told against the prophet of God.

But I was alone, the only saint in the city at that time, and all I heard was bad. But after I was ordained, and commenced to preach the same gospel that he preached, yes, and while talking about it to others before I was ordained, some of the like slanderous stories were circulated about me, and I received some of the like threats, and mobbing, by my own relatives, and those who were once my schoolmates and friends. Ah, yes, when some of the same old stories that were once told against Joseph, was told about me, I said how foolish I was to believe, or partly believe, any of those scandalous tales. I knew they were false about me, and so they were of him.

While reading on in the "Church History," and contemplating the great work he did for the race, the trials and troubles through which he passed from those without and within the church, at home and abroad, and yet how calmly and nobly he endured, my heart rejoices. How determined for the right! "For, as God lives, truth, justice, and innocence shall triumph, and iniquity shall not reign." How fearless, while surrounded by enemies who sought his life; when Gillium came into the camp, and demanded to see Joseph, who stepped forward and replied, "I am the man!"

What an earnest desire for the elevation of fallen humanity! It seemed to be his daily prayer to God for the blessings mostly needed, not only upon himself and family, but the church and the world everywhere. "May humble repentance bring us both to thee, O God" (him and his brother William). His prayer for others, "O my God have mercy upon these men, and keep them in the way of everlasting life, in the name of Jesus. Amen." (Page 625.)

The reading of the Church History brings my mind to the testimony of Elders Taylor, Pack, and Bolton in Pratt's works. They agree with this history. Bolton says: "I personally know Joseph Smith. I have lived with him in his family; was with him morning, noon, and night, early and late. I saw him in most trying situations, with friends and enemies; and in all the time that I remained in his family I never saw the slightest act nor heard one word unbecoming a man of God—a just, upright, pure, prayerful prophet of God." One would come to that conclusion by reading the history. No wonder these men were willing to make oath to the truth of the above. We expect in volume 2 much more, and a continuation will be enlightening and very instructive, and will prove a benefit to all.

May we as members of the Reorganization remember too that God made choice of that seer and "his seed after him" to carry on this latter-day work, and in them "shall the kindreds of the earth be blessed." Let us not mistake the present Joseph's work. He was not sent to bring the Book of Mormon forth; his predecessor did that. He was not sent to give as many revelations as the church at first needed for their establishment; they are given. Do not say as did Bro. Watson in debate with Bro. W. W. Blair at East Jordan, when speaking of Joseph as successor to the seer, "Great heavens, what did he ever see!" Such forget when they read the revelations already given, which they profess to believe, that the successor was to "come in at the gate," as ordained of God to "teach those revelations" which God had given, and give more as God directs.

The saints who met in conference in this district at Freesoil last fall will not soon forget the evidence God gave us regarding the present president of the church, when they in a fellowship meeting sung the first verse of Hymn No. 1071, "We as the living witness," when the Spirit bade me repeat the second verse, which was left out of the Harp:—

"It was brought forth by Joseph,
The prophet and the seer,
Whose blood has sealed his mission,
Praise to his memory dear.
His e'lest son has taken his place
To lead God's people through,
And we bear our testimony
That he's a prophet too."

How the Spirit of God thrilled through almost every one present, and caused our hearts to rejoice in Christ our Savior! Alike occurrence happened in Bay City some years ago, which many speak of until this day.

Let us go forth in full assurance of faith, holding up the hands of the prophet of the Lord, that Israel may prevail. We see the seed of the Martyr at the front as God directed, endeavoring to reclaim the fallen by writing and preaching to spread the news of salvation to the world; one tract, "The Bible versus Polygamy" by David H. Smith; "Polygamy" by Alexander H. Smith; "One Wife or Many," by Joseph Smith; Joseph's reply to L. O. Littlefield, together with his teaching and constant warning through the Herald for wandering Israel to "return and remember the former commandments, and the Book of Mormon, not only to say but to do according to that which is written," etc. God forgive our sins, and bless and save us all. Amen. J. J. CORNISH.

CHEROKEE, Ark., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since anything has been said from this part. We are here with lots to do, opening new places and preaching to people that have never heard before of the restoration. Am feeling well; walked ten miles yesterday, came here and saw trustees of Christian church. Am billed to open the gospel cry within its walls this evening. Don't know, of course, how long they can endure sound doctrine. Am feeling well in body and spirit. I find plenty to do by working for it; no openings only as I make them.

We are making lots of friends, and some are very near the kingdom. Calls to come and preach are many, from places where we have pressed the work out into the frontier. I see a great need for all kinds of ministers. We need men to go out on the frontier and open the way, then we need good, solid workmen to follow up and build up the work. I also see a great need of lively, spiritual-minded men to preside or watch over the branches and feed the flocks of God, over which the Holy Ghost has made them overseers. Brethren, how can the body be alive when the head is sick or dead?

I am here reminded of a true statement made by Joseph Smith at conference four years ago. Said he: "Show me your branch officers and I will tell you just what kind of branches you have." O, brethren, you who are presiding over the different branches of this great Church of God, how can you afford to be careless in the least! Let me entreat you, one and all, as a brother in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to seek God in earnest, secret prayer for his Holy Spirit, then you can carry it into your branches, the saints will partake of it, and then and not until then will the different flocks over which you preside become lively stones in the building. I feel impressed to thus write, and I pray God the eternal Father to impress this solemn duty upon every presiding elder and priest, teacher and deacon in this entire Church of God. I feel sure that the Devil is almost conquered on the outside, but O! how is it on the inside?

I feel like saying to my brethren in charge of branches: Keep the Devil out of camp at home and I will insure victory. Yes, brethren, his stronghold on the outside is just about gone. The old, stale yarns are threadbare.

God is blessing me with greater liberty of late than ever before. The people simply sit and look and listen with astonishment at the simple story of the gospel. I never felt so determined by the help of God to strive for the mastery and to strive lawfully, as of late. Times are hard and it looks gloomy for food and raiment for wife and children, and clothing for the elder who has given up all for the work's sake. O, how I feel to bless our wives and children at home! Nobler missionaries never lived than the sacrificing wife at home with barefooted children. May God hasten the work and help us all to keep pace with it. S. W. SIMMONS.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 8.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

BIDDING—a hasty but reluctant farewell to the saints of Booneville, and after failing to obtain a church in which we could present our faith, we again set our faces northward by the way of Higbee, where Bro. Turpen was billed for a marriage ceremony. Leaving him by the wayside we hastened on to Bevier, where two other loving hearts were anxiously awaiting our coming, to pronounce the mystic words that would, for weal or woe, bind their lives together. Preliminaries over and at eight p. m. Mr. William Burns and Sr. Allie Richards amid a bevy of relatives and friends stood beneath the wedding bells and pledged their troth to each other for future life. The wedding supper prepared by the bride's parents was all that could be desired, and viewing it with various emotions we finally became too full for utterance.

The groom and bride looked the picture of health and happiness as they stood beneath the mistletoe. May our heavenly Father who Lightfoot treasurer. Delegates selected to temper the wind to the shorn lambs, give wisdom in every emergency that may strew their pathway with loving flowers of success and peace, is our prayer.

Here by mutual agreement we parted company with our companion and fellow servant, Bro. Turpen, who hath shared our joys and sorrows incident to the missionaries' life, and whom we have learned to love and cherish because of his kindly disposition, his able counsel, and moral worth. This parting becomes necessary from the amount of territory we wish to cover before the General Conference; our brother going northwest by the way of Pollock and through the northern part of the district, using the local help that may be accessible on the way, while we under similar conditions will go southwest and through the southern portion of the district, preaching our way westward towards General Conference, expecting to meet Bro. Turpen again somewhere in the "Far West."

Arranging with Bro. J. A. Tanner, district president, and in company with him, we started for "Puzzle Creek," fourteen miles to the southwest. Between riding and walking we finally arrived on the banks of the turbulent "Puzzle," named so because of its circuitous, zigzag, unique, crooked windings; and like the crystal maze, no man has been able to keep his bearing and follow its crazy windings through wood and swamp that so densely line its shores. When we entered the woods from the north side, we were traveling directly south with a stiff, cold, crisp wind blowing from the north, following Puzzle Creek for a short distance, when we emerged from its mazy banks to find the wind was blowing directly from the east, and the sun in his hurry to go down had slipped around to the north. The trees seemed to be more crooked and the old worm fences seemed to be more wormy, and Bro. Tanner's long nose was more to one side than we had ever noticed before, and we were surely "puzzled" to know just where we were "at." Darkness was settling its dusky hues around us and curious thoughts were rushing through our "puzzled" brain, when Bro. T. through the gloom espied a friendly cabin, to which we at once repaired, where we warmed our limbs and soon regained our bearings and were kindly directed to Bro. John Tryon's, where we arrived weary and tired with the day's tramp, doing justice to the good sisters "pone" and fried rabbit; and after the invocation by Bro. Tanner we lie down to rest in a fourteen foot square room with three beds and a family of nine and amid the talk of our "buddie," and the murmur of the children, and the "hush" of the mother, we drop off into the arms of morpheus to dream of the "Jots by the wayside."

Editors Herald.—I think a few words from me would be proper in the way of warning to all lovers of the latter-day work, as I have had some experience in leaving the Reorganization. I left the Reorganization for a lack of a clear understanding of lineal right to office and for doubts relative to the Book of Covenants, and such doubt was sufficiently strong to debar me from a fair investigation of the same, till the Hedrickites came in this part. From that time I have given it a fair investigation and have seen the beauty of its contents and am thoroughly satisfied that Joseph Smith was a true prophet up to the day of his death, and I have repented of my connection with the Hedrickite faction: I believe them to be wrong and also people who are largely stirring up strife and are causing divisions contrary to the doctrine we have learned. Believing after a calm investigation that young Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, is the legal successor of his father in the prophetic office and after obtaining a clear understanding of the Hedrickite position and weighing it carefully in the balance I find it largely wanting and desire and ask forgiveness from all the brethren who may have been offended by my past conduct and desire to warn all the brethren to be careful and not be led about with every wind of doctrine.

I hope that all the brethren will profit by my experience and not be subjected to the same mistakes I have of late passed through.

Your brother in the Lord,

S. T. MALOCH.

WAS IT APOSTASY?

APOSTASY: "Departure from what a man has professed; it is applied to religion."—Walker's Universal Dictionary.

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled. What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice, or by the voice of my servants, it is the same; for behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen.—D. C. 1: 7, 8.

The preface to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants bespeaks to every Latter Day Saint most positively, the internal inspiration and consequent authority of the revelations and commandments recorded therein, which are given for the guidance and government of the Church of Christ. Yet we believe that the authority by which they were given has the right to add to or take from that which is written, and that which is added to, or that which may be taken from, will not destroy the harmony and unity of that which has been before written, for we are assured that:—

God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.—D. C. 2: 1. (Sec. 30, Utah edition.)

And in conjunction with this matter we learn that:—

Although a man may have many revelations, and have power to do many mighty works, yet, if he boasts in his own strength and sets at nought the counsels of God, and follows after the dictates of his own will, and carnal desires, he must fall and incur the vengeance of a just God upon him.—D. C. 2 (30) : 2.

From this it is evident that the counsel of God is imperative in its claims upon all those who seek his approval. He is not given to double dealing. His way is plain. His paths are straight. His word, yea and amen to those who desire to be governed according to his law. His counsel is contained in his law. It is therefore to that law we appeal, seeing that it is given for our profit and learning whereby through obedience we may be justified and saved from the penalties of sin in ourselves. God has in that law declared the Book of Mormon to be:—

The fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, and to the Jews also.—D. C. 17 (2) : 2.

And warned the officers of the church that they:—

Shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them.—D. C. 42 (13) : 5.

They are also charged to teach others to do the same:—

Otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion.—D. C. 83 (4) : 8.

From which we understand that the church is under obligation to the law which she must obey, or suffer the penalty of her disobedience. Take the law of marriage as an example. It is full, pointed, definite, and imperative without "ifs," or "buts." To the Nephites it said:—

There shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none.—Jacob 2: 6.

Disobedience to this commandment amongst others cost the Nephites their name and place as a nation. Obedience to it obtained for the otherwise disobedient, skin-cursed Lamanites the promise of mercy.

For they have not forgotten the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto our fathers, that they should have, save it were one wife: and concubines they should have none; and there should not be whoredoms committed among them. And now this commandment they observe to keep; wherefore, because of this observance in keeping this commandment, the Lord God will not destroy them, but will be merciful unto them; and one day they shall become a blessed people.—Jacob 2:9.

The same law condemned the action of King Noah:—

For behold, he did not keep the commandments of God, but he did walk after the desires of his own heart. And he had many wives and concubines.—Mosiah 7:1.

The same law also denounced King Riplakish, who did not do that which was right in the sight of the Lord, for he did have many wives and concubines, and did lay that upon men's shoulders which was grievous to be borne.—Ether 4:5.

The same law has been renewed in this dispensation; for the Lord says:—

Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else.—D. C. 42 (14):7.

Wherefore it is lawful that he[man] should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.—D. C. 49 (65):3.

In harmony with this law, the church has enacted that any of its membership entering into the marital relationship should subscribe unto the following conditions:—

You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives.—D. C. 111 (109):2.

Upon the face of this agreement it would be manifestly impossible for the parties to it to marry again during their joint lives without violating this solemn covenant made before God and the church, and sealed in the name of Jesus Christ; for a subsequent condition imposed upon the minister officiating on behalf of the church, enacts that after the contracting parties have answered "yes," to the foregoing interrogation, he shall pronounce them "husband and wife," in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

And this rule became a law to the church when the Book of Doctrine and Covenants received the indorsement of the General Assembly at Kirtland, Ohio, August 17, 1835. And of necessity must continue to be the law of the church until removed from the statute book by the same lawful authority that caused it to be placed therein. Furthermore, it is worthy of note, that when the book was presented for adoption to the aforesaid assembly, composed of the several quorums and other authorities of the church, the quorum of the "Twelve" (amongst whom was then numbered Brigham Young) made the following solemn declaration to the preface as here given:—

The testimony of the witnesses to the book of the Lord's commandments which he gave to his church through Joseph Smith, Jr., who was appointed by the voice of the church for this purpose.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 300.

Then follows the testimony of the "Twelve," reading thus:—

We therefore feeling willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of all the earth, and upon the islands of the sea, that the Lord has borne record to our souls, through the Holy Ghost shed forth upon us that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men, and are verily true. We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper; and it is through the grace of God the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, in the which we rejoice exceedingly, praying the Lord always, that the children of men may be profited thereby.—Mill. Star, vol 15, p. 300.

The President of the church recognized and honored this same law; in proof of which we submit the following certificate of marriage:—

I hereby certify, that, agreeable to the rules and regulations of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, on matrimony, were joined in marriage, Mr. William F. Cahoon and Miss Nancy M. Gibbs, both of this place, on Sabbath, the 17th inst.

JOSEPH SMITH, JUN.,

Presiding elder of the said church.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, January 19, 1846.

—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 596.

These "rules and regulations" of the church on matrimony were affirmed from time to time by the voice and action of its leading ministry. On the 8th of May, 1838, the President of the church published a series of questions and answers in the "Elders' Journal," one of which was propounded and answered as follows:—

Do the Mormons believe in having more wives than one? No, not at the same time. But they believe that if their companion dies they have a right to marry again.—Mill. Star, vol. 16, p. 150.

In an editorial in the Millennial Star, August, 1842, Parley P. Pratt, then editor, alluding to charges made by one Martha Brotherton, says:—

But for the information of those who may be assailed by those foolish tales about the two wives, we would say that no such principle ever existed among the Latter Day Saints and never will; this is well-known to all who are acquainted with our books and actions. The Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and also all our periodicals are very strict and explicit on that subject, indeed far more so than the Bible.—Mill. Star, vol. 3, p. 74.

Even so late as July 11, 1850, Elder John Taylor, late President of the Utah Church, stated in answer to accusation of polygamy, etc., made against the church by his opponents, in a discussion held at Boulogne-sur-mer, France, that our views on chastity and marriage were those contained in the section of marriage. Doctrine and Covenants, section 111 (109). These and other quotations prove conclusively that up to the death of Joseph Smith, June, 1844, and afterwards, the marital relationship between the sexes had undergone no change whatever, but was maintained inviolate in its original integrity, according to the "counsel of the Lord." If polygamy or any other system of marriage, other than that implied in the command, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else," had (as now claimed) obtained in the church as represented by these men, then they erred before the Lord and his people, and thus set at naught "the counsel of God" and were following after the dictates of their own will and carnal desires, thus incurring the vengeance of a just God upon themselves.

The first public intimation we have of a departure from the marriage law, as stated in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, was received on Sunday, August 29, 1852, in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City; when that portion of the church represented by Brigham Young committed a most flagrant act of public apostasy in accepting as they did, from his hands and by his dictation, upon his bare say so, an instrument unverified by the handwriting, or even the signature of the man by whom it was claimed it had been executed, an instrument that absolutely changed the meaning of the terms marital purity and virtue, as they had been heretofore taught and defined by the church; an instrument purporting to be a revelation from God, commanding the adoption of polygamy, and concubinage, as the basis of the marriage relation of the sexes; professing to repeal all "covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances," etc., under conditions and provisions therein enacted, justifying and sanctifying that which the unchangeable God had already said was sinful. His word to the Nephites, through Jacob, was:—

Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me.—Jacob 2: 6.

The prohibition herein contained, included not only Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, but all others embraced in the term, "many wives and concubines." The Lord had declared in the statutes given to Israel, that kings should not multiply wives. These men—both father and son—had disobeyed this counsel, and like Kings Noah and Riplakish, already alluded to, had brought themselves under condemnation before God. The statement in the polygamous revelation that:—

I, the Lord, justified my servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; as also Moses, David, and Solomon, my servants, as touching the principle and doctrine of their having many wives and concubines.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 5, is in itself a sufficient refutation to the claim for inspiration made in behalf of this polygamous document. And were this the only instance in which it could be proven to be in conflict with the already revealed will of God, this of itself would be sufficient to justify every Latter Day Saint in rejecting the whole document as a fraud; but when we examine subsequent clauses, and find the same conflict with written law repeated, we are then more than justified—we are under absolute obligation to the law given to reject and resist to the utmost such transparent and baleful deceit. In November, 1831, the Lord thus spoke to the elders of the church touching these matters as follows:—

And now, I, the Lord, give unto you a testimony of the truth of these commandments which are lying before you; your eyes have been upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., and his language you have known; and his imperfections you have known; and you have sought in your hearts knowledge, that you might express beyond his language: this you also know: now seek ye out of the Book of Commandments, even the least that is among them, and appoint him that is the most wise among you; or if there be any among you, that shall make one like unto it, then ye are justified in saying that ye do not know that they are true; but if ye cannot make one like unto it, ye are under condemnation if ye do not bear record that they are true; for ye know that there is no unrighteousness in them; and that which is righteous cometh down from above, from the Father of lights.—D. C. 67: 2.

Those who claim that the revelation justifying the practice of polygamy and concubinage is from God, are under obligation to submit its claims, as well as its composition, to the test of those revelations before written and received by the church. By this means conflict in doctrine, if there be any, may be made manifest before all men. We therefore present the following as justifying our rejection of the so-called revelation:—

And verily I say unto you, as I have said before, he that looketh on a woman to lust after her, or if any shall commit adultery in their hearts, they shall not have the Spirit, but shall deny the faith and shall fear: wherefore, I, the Lord, have said that the fearful, and the unbelieving, and all liars, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie, and the whoremonger, and the sorcerer, shall have their part in that lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death. Verily I say, that they shall not have part in the first resurrection.—D. C. 63 (20): 5. Given in Kirtland, August, 1831.

Verily I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to my appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder, wherein they shed innocent blood—yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation: but they shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 6.

Comment here is needless; a more glaring contradiction of the revealed word of God could not be conceived, striking as it does at the root of perpetuity in the law, and the unchangeability in the lawgiver, suggesting an entire change of procedure in the redemption and salvation of man. At a subsequent period the late Brigham Young, then president of the church in Utah, introduced into that church the anti-Christian dogma of "blood atonement," and also denied the responsibility of man to his Maker, substituting Adam as the God of the human race, and the "only God with whom we have to do," upon this matter. The law in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants says:—

By these things we know that there is a God in heaven who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth and all things which are in them, and that he created man male and female; after his own image and in his own likeness created he them, and gave unto them commandments that they should love and serve him the only living and true God, and that he should be the only being whom they should worship. But by the transgression of these holy laws, man became sensual and devilish, and became fallen man.—D. C. 17 (2): 4.

Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, Saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is MICHAEL the Archangel, the ANCIENT OF DAYS! about whom holy men have written and spoken—HE is our FATHER and our GOD, and the only God with whom WE have to do. . . . I have given you a few leading items upon this subject, but a great deal more remains to be told. Now remember from this time forth, and forever, that Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. . . . If the Son was begotten by the Holy Ghost, it would be very dangerous to baptize and confirm females, and give the Holy Ghost to them, lest he should beget children, to be palmed upon the elders by the people, bringing the elders into great difficulties.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, pp. 769, 770.

Well might Brigham Young say:—

I have not the least fear of any division in this church, for I can turn them whithersoever I will. And the people said Amen.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 386.

That Brigham Young was instrumental for good, during his early career in the church, may be readily admitted. That he may have been a man of large executive and administrative ability is very possible. But this cannot condone his departure from the teachings of God's law.

For although a man may have many revelations, and have power to do many mighty works, yet, if he boasts in his own strength, and sets at naught the counsels of God, and follows after the dictates of his own will, and carnal desires, he must fall and incur the vengeance of a just God upon him.—D. C. 2 (17): 2.

In fulminating the dogma of the godship of Adam, "the only God with whom we have to do," Brigham Young denied the Lord Jesus Christ as the "Lord who bought him," departing from the teachings of Christ, "transgressing the doctrine," and thus bringing himself under condemnation For:—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God.—2 John 1: 9.

In these matters of marriage, and worship, if in none others (?) Brigham Young stands self-convicted of apostasy, having, as we have already shown, changed the marriage covenant and substituted therefor a system of sexual intercourse condemned of God; and as a crowning act of his infamy, seeking to dethrone the deity in his relationship to the human family; replacing the Creator by the one created; thus discrediting the gospel of Christ, bringing stigma and reproach upon the Church of God; causing the way of truth to be spoken evil of; fulfilling the prophetic words of St. Peter, uttered by the inspiration of God's Spirit over eighteen hundred years ago:—

But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ["licentious"—Oxford revised version] ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.—2 Peter 2:1, 2.

The claim that Joseph Smith taught and practiced such things is not an answer to the charge of apostasy preferred against Brigham Young, and the Church in Utah, who have indorsed his teachings. Even if it could be proven that Joseph Smith did so teach, and did himself practice such teaching, they were none the less "damnable heresies"; and every one of those who were addicted to them, "set at naught" "the counsel of God," and must stand convicted as breakers of the law.

The question at issue in this article is, did Brigham Young publicly teach and practice these things, as charged against him in this indictment. If he did, he taught that which was forbidden by the law of God, thereby disqualifying himself as a minister and servant of Christ; and when that part of the church represented by him adopted his teachings and practices, it departed from "sound doctrine," and became apostate from the faith which had been delivered to the saints"; forfeiting any previous right which he, or they may have had to represent the Church of God. As a church, "Mene, Mene, tekel" is written largely over her portals. The word of the Lord is to her to-day, as it once was to the Israel of the days of Jeremiah the prophet:—

Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls.—Jer. 6: 16.

But like the Israel of that day, she also replies, "We will not walk therein."

QUORUM OF APOSTLES.

To the Quorum of Apostles; Greeting:—Another year has rolled round and the time of our General Conference draws near. Many changes have occurred during the mission year so near its close, changes, too, which affect our work very seriously. Financial distress in all vocations has made it hard for the members of the church to pay tithing and freewill offering as generously as would have been done if the shadow of hard times had not fallen across every hearthstone. Distress has visited many homes of the saints in all the world, and still there is much cause for thanksgiving. The dark-browed angel of sickness and death has been busy in the homes of the saints, and some bright and noble ones have been called to pass through the dark valley. Our hearts have grieved at their loss. Still the Lord has been kind, and by his Spirit has drawn a goodly number towards him, and their names now swell the list of those who remain, to bear aloft the banner of our King, the Prince Emanuel.

The financial pressure has been heavy upon the church, and our Bishop has often been in trying times, with anxiety and worry of mind, to meet the heavy demand upon him; and sometimes the ministry have been called upon to bear with the best patience they could muster the failure to receive promptly the allowance made for their families; and some of them have felt justified in quitting the field to labor for the bread that perisheth.

It has been a year of trial and sacrifice, but I am glad that I am able to report an advance all along the line, of good solid work and a fair list of newly made members. However, I have to report that the changes which seem necessary in mission appointments, and which may arise, are of that nature that it is deemed necessary for our quorum to assemble at Lamoni at an early day. In consultation with President Joseph Smith, we have agreed that the 15th day of March is the most suitable for our convening, giving us some time to rest, if we are fortunate enough to arrange the missions ere the conference proper convenes. There is a new feature of mission work to be considered, if the Utah Church does as it is reported she intends to do. It is reported some thousand or more missionaries will be sent to the States the coming year, and if so, some measure must be arranged to meet the issue and the problem of reducing our working mission force, or increasing the resources in the Bishop's hands to enable him to overcome the difficulty so worrying the past year, and put to silence the many complaints made against him. Hence the members of the Quorum of Twelve will please note they are hereby notified to convene at Lamoni on the 15th day of March, 1897, to transact important business which may come before them. It is desired that all the members of the quorum in America be present; therefore, brethren, so arrange as to be in early.

It is not needful for me to remind the brethren that it will expedite our labor if each member arranges his report and recommendations to the quorum before convening, as far as is possible. Much unnecessary delay is occasioned when we neglect this work till we get together.

And while I am upon the subject of report, I wish to address a few words to the missionaries. When reporting to the missionaries in charge, condense your statements of labor done, and give more fully the particulars of the number and ages of your families and dependents. There has been quite a lack in the reports of the past. Do not say, "Allowance same as last year," for this necessitates a hunting up of the records to learn what you can so easily furnish in your report. Some of our brethren are so forgetful in these matters that we oftentimes have had to make extended inquiry to find out the number in family dependent, and then go back to last year's record to learn the amount requested to maintain their families; and sometimes the amounts have been changed during the year, by consent. We desire to avoid this confusion and extra labor, so let every man report particulars as above. Report to your missionaries in charge and not direct to the Quorum of Twelve. Those in charge will be expected to report to the quorum, summarizing or condensing. Do not send the individual reports made to you, but condense a report of what is reported to you. Some of the missionaries in reporting to those in charge make the mistake of sending in the reports made to them. This is done, I suppose, to save themselves a little work; but it is simply foisting it upon those in charge, and is not right. The law says, "Let every man learn his duty" and do it. All reports should be in the hands of those in charge as early as the 5th of March to enable them to draft their recommendations.

And now in conclusion: God has been good to us in the past year. We have had greater liberty of thought and speech; our pulses have quickened, our hearts throbbed and burned with delight, because of the presence of his Holy Spirit in greater power than ever before. So let us come together in prayer and thanksgiving, that God may aid us in more fully organizing the church.

May the ever blessed Spirit be and abide with us as his servants, I shall ever pray. Amen.

ALEX. HALE SMITH,
President of Quorum of Twelve.

Atchison, Kansas, Feb. 1, 1897.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, AND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS MISSION.

The last reports of the conference year come due on or before the first of March, from those who are not in charge, and on or before the 10th from those who are in charge of "fields of labor." Please be prompt.

In these reports state whether your desire to do missionary work for the coming year; and if so, state your preference of fields, number of dependents together with their respective ages; also, what amount of support will enable you to give your time to the work. Those who are in charge will be expected to furnish me with a full list with all these necessary items, together with their indorsement of the fitness of applicants, and a statement as to where, in their judgment, they had better labor. All these recommendations and requests will be respected and duly considered, but not always granted.

As to the prospect for the reappointment of the present force, so far as found worthy and efficient, I am not advised; nor can I say anything concerning the prospect of new applicants. All will have to take their chances in this respect. It will be no use to write to me concerning your prospect for appointment, for I cannot tell you.

Our ministers should be men of morality, and integrity, and wisdom; and none who are addicted to the use of intoxicants, as a beverage, or tobacco, are eligible for appointment.

I am necessarily confined to the house, at home, and a little with the pen is all I can do for the work at present. Each year should find us farther advanced in wisdom and in the construction of true character. If it does not, then, clearly, the enemy is gaining an advantage over us. We are living in "perilous times;" and they are the most perilous to those who do not know they are here, or believing they are here, have very vague and imperfect ideas as to where the peril lies.

I am your well-wishing brother and co-worker in the cause of truth,

J. R. LAMBERT,
Missionary in Charge.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 5, 1897.

CREDENTIALS OF DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

District officers are requested to forward credentials of delegates appointed to represent their districts in the coming General Conference, to the Church Secretary, as soon as possible, that a complete roll of delegates may be prepared, as provided for by resolution of General Conference, to facilitate the organization and work of that body. Credentials of delegates appointed at fall or winter conferences should be forwarded without delay, and of those yet to be appointed, immediately after appointment. It is desired that all credentials be in hand as early in the month of March as possible.

One certificate for each delegation, with number of members in district and names of its delegates, signed by the president and secretary of the district appointing, with name of district and place and date of holding of conference, is sufficient. Individual credentials are unnecessary.

Branches not in districts are each entitled to one delegate and one vote.

The rules governing "representation" and the "restrictions of delegate voting," are as follows:—

"Each district shall be entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members of said district, and one vote in conference for each delegate to which they may be entitled. [Scattered members in districts, including those enrolled on records of disorganized branches, who are not recorded as members of other districts, may be included in the enumeration of membership.]

"The delegates present at conference from any one district shall be entitled to cast the full vote of the district of which they are delegates, unless otherwise instructed by their district conference;—

"Provided, that in case of a disagreement of views among the members of said delegation, (the full delegation not being present,) they shall be entitled to cast only their individual votes as said delegates.

"No one delegate shall be entitled to cast, as representative in the same conference, more than twenty votes."

In bonds,

RICHARD S. SALYARDS,
Secretary Reorganized Church.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 1, 1897.

ENROLLMENT IN QUORUMS; ELDERS, PRIESTS, TEACHERS, AND DEACONS.

Elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, not members of quorums, may address applications for enrollment to the Church Secretary; who is authorized to receive all such applications, and to present them to quorums for their action; that vacancies in quorums may be filled, and new quorums be organized, in harmony with the law. (See D. C. 104:31; 107:43-46; 118:1; 120:10; etc.)

Applications should include statements of labor done during the year, whether in branch, district, or field; also all essential items of birth, baptism, and ordination, for records of quorums. It should be understood that the Secretary cannot enroll anyone in a quorum: quorums receive and reject as they may determine.

Some applications remain over. However, all not yet enrolled would do well to renew applications, that later labors may be known. Some have also been reordained—to other offices.

In bonds,

R. S. SALYARDS,
Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, Feb. 6, 1897.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINISTRY REPORTS.

Blank forms for reports of the ministry under General Conference appointment have been mailed to home or field addresses where most likely to reach the brethren promptly. Reports should be in the Secretary's hands as soon after March 1 as possible, and none later than March 15, to insure insertion in the "ministry reports" to be published previous to the convening of conference.

Any who fail to receive blanks will be supplied on application.

Please send at once to T. J. Martin, Detroit City, Minnesota.

WILKINSON—MAYER.—February 2, 1897, at the home of Mr. F. Mayer, Foster, Iowa, Bro. Wm. Wilkinson and Sr. Hannah Mayer, both of Foster, were united for life, A. M. Chase saying the words that made them one. Quite a number of friends and relatives were present, and after the ceremony at five p. m. all partook of a bountiful supper. The times may be hard, but there was no lack here. The band testified of their esteem by serenading them. All seemed to enjoy themselves. May they always be faithful and never less happy.

DIED.

HINTZ.—Sr. Mary Hintz, at her home near Rhodes, Iowa, February 1, 1897, aged 64 years, 3 months, and 15 days. She was a native of Germany; came to this country with her husband in 1863, and settled near Sandwich, Illinois, removing to near Rhodes in 1872. Their happy union was crowned by five children, three sons and two daughters. One little daughter and husband preceded her, leaving her in 1875, with three little ones, the youngest two years old. She obeyed the gospel, being baptized by Elder W. C. Nirk, April 4, 1884. She was a firm believer and a living epistle, and received many confirming testimonies concerning the truth. She manifested great anxiety to the last for her offspring, that they might be able to see the light as she saw it. Service by Elder W. C. Nirk.

BLAIR.—At Bellaire, Ohio, January 24, 1897, was born to Sister Elizabeth and Mr. John Henry Blair a daughter on the 27th. She was named Mabel Irene, blessed, anointed, and prayed for by Elders Morris T. Short and Lorenzo D. Ullom, a few hours after which she passed away; prayer at the home by Eldr M. T. Short.

BLAKE.—At St. Joseph, Missouri, on January 28, 1897, Eva Gladis, the babe of Bro. James and Sr. Emma Blake. Little Eva was blessed on the day before her death by J. M. Terry, from which time her suffering abated and almost disappeared until the death angel came and carried the innocent one to her rest. She was 16 months and 21 days old. Funeral sermon and interment at the De Kalb church, twenty miles east of St. Joseph, by J. M. Terry, assisted by Elder A. W. Head.

GAMMON.—At Provo, Utah, January 27, 1897, Bro. Thomas Gammon. Deceased was born June 27, 1820, in Brampton, England. He was married to Elizabeth Day, October 27, 1840, and shortly after moved to Neath, Wales. He and wife joined the church under Brigham Young, in 1848, and removed to America in 1850, stopping first at Council Bluffs, Iowa, where they remained one year, then moved to Newark, Missouri, where they lived until they moved to Utah. They arrived at Provo, Utah, September 18, 1853. He became dissatisfied with the rule of Brigham and his associates and joined the Reorganization September 1, 1871, being baptized by Elder W. W. Blair, at Salt Lake City. His funeral services were held in the Second Ward meetinghouse at Provo, January 28, 1897, in charge of Bishop Wride, of the Utah Church. The sermon was preached by Elder H. O. Smith, of the Reorganization. Bro. Gammon leaves a wife, one son, two daughters, eighteen grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. All of his family live at Provo, Utah, except one daughter and four grandchildren, who live at Independence, Missouri. His obituary, as published in the local papers, says of him: "He was an honest, industrious, and peaceable man, a good neighbor, husband, and father." A greater eulogy could be pronounced over no one. H. O. SMITH.

HAMMER.—At Runnells, Iowa, February 1, 1897, Mrs. Rebecca Hammer, aged 68 years, 11 months, and 16 days. Her maiden name was Ridgeway. She was born in Peoria County, Illinois, March 15, 1828; was married to Jonathan Hammer, April 6, 1845. Moved to Polk County, Iowa, in 1849. Seven children blessed their union, four of whom survive her. Mrs. Hammer united with the Christian Church at the age of sixteen years, and has since tried to live a Christian as she understood it. There was no church of her choice here and of late years she has attended the saints church. The funeral services were conducted by Elder W. H. Kephart in the saints chapel, February 2, 1897.

MANIFOLD.—At Fulton, Missouri, January 30, 1897, William C. Manifold. Born at Clarkson, Ohio, August 12, 1855. Married to Sr. Ida May Hollowell, of Farmington, Iowa, July 31, 1879. Deceased leaves a wife, father, mother, four brothers, and a sister to mourn his departure. At the request of his wife his body was brought to Farmington, Iowa, for burial. Short funeral services in charge of Elder F. M. Weld at the residence of her mother, Sr. Roberts. After services the Masonic Order, of which he was a member, took charge of the body and laid it away to rest in the old Farmington cemetery. The saints who attended Bluff Park reunion last August will remember him by the prominent part he took in the music, playing the cornet. He was thoroughly convinced of the gospel at said reunion but put off obeying too long.

CURTIS.—On December 25, 1896, at Kibbie, Illinois, Bro. L. B. Curtis peacefully passed away in full hope of a part in the resurrection of the just. He always tried to live a Christian life. He accepted the fullness of the gospel in the winter of 1892. He had the confidence and esteem of all who knew him. He was an affectionate husband, a kind, indulgent father, and a good neighbor. The same night his wife, Phoebe Curtis, died. She was baptized the same winter as her husband. She was firm in the faith, and told her children just before she passed away to send in their Christmas offering and be good children; they will be greatly missed by the church there and the neighborhood.

MATHERS.—At the Ruscom, Essex County, Ontario, November 22, 1896, Bro. Ralph

Mathers. The funeral services were conducted by Elder George Green, who had been a friend of the brother for thirty-one years. The deceased died firm in the faith. He was afflicted for a number of years. To him death was a welcome messenger, as he was prepared to depart this life. He leaves five sons and four daughters besides a number of relatives and friends to mourn his departure. His remains were interred beside Sr. Mathers in the Comber cemetery.

FREW.—At Youngstown, Ohio, January 17, 1897, Thomas Frew, Sen., aged 77 years and 2 months. Deceased was teacher for a number of years. He had a lingering sickness and longed for the summons to go home. He died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Sermon at the house by Elder D. M. Strachan. The remains were interred at Church Hill cemetery, Ohio.

LANN.—Sr. Luella Lann was born August 9, 1866, and passed peacefully away leaving a testimony of the work on January 10, 1897, at her home in Platte County, Missouri, near Edgerton Junction. She leaves a husband, seven sons, one brother, five sisters. She with her husband embraced the gospel in September, 1896, being baptized by Bro. William Summerfield. Bro. Lann, the bereaved husband, is far above the average intellect of their (the colored) race and could do good if his circumstances temporarily permitted. By the kindness of Bro. T. J. Mauzey and J. E. Moorman the remains were taken twelve miles for interment. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder J. M. Terry.

GOODWIN.—At California, Michigan, January 21, 1897, Sr. Anna Goodwin, aged 28 years and 21 days. Her husband had preceded her in death just thirteen months and one day. Through her instrumentality the latter-day work was enlarged in that region by securing a Latter Day Saint minister to officiate at her husband's funeral. She continued the investigation of the claims at the town hall, bringing her Bible and following the citations, when in the balcyon month of May, 1896, she, with nine others following, was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the Methodist society, by Elder S. W. L. Scott. She had anticipated the change, and with minute carefulness had given instruction concerning the bestowment of her property and full directions concerning the arrangements of the funeral. She often testified of "the great light and blessings" coming to her since her obedience to the gospel. The funeral sermon was preached to a full house in the Presbyterian church by Elder S. W. L. Scott. The obsequies were conducted by the L. O. T. M., of which order she was a respected member. She was pure, good, tried, and true. Sweet be her repose.

And when the kind Father shall call us to come
She'll welcome us there to her beautiful home,
Where death never comes, his black banners to wave,
And the beautiful flowers ne'er weep o'er a grave.

MCALLISTER.—At Columbus, Nebraska, January 9, 1897, in the 82d year of his age, Bro. James McAllister. He was born October 17, 1815, at Moncton, Ayrshire, Scotland; married Miss Mary A. Carson in 1834; united with the church in Glasgow; came to America in 1849, remained at St. Louis, Missouri, about two years; started West, and reaching Council Bluffs, lived there till 1857, when he came to Platte County with a colony of the saints, to make a resting place for those that crossed the plains with handcarts. After enduring all the hardships and privations incident to frontier life, in 1865 he united with the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. The writer was intimately acquainted with him for forty years. He was an honest, upright man in every respect. He was never obtrusive with his opinions, but always firm in maintaining what he believed to be right. The death of his wife about two years since was a seri us blow to him, and from which he never fully recovered. He made his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. N. Hensley, who, with untiring solicitude, ministered to his every want until the spirit took its departure to meet with his loved ones that had preceded him. He leaves three sons and two daughters to mourn his decease. The following extract from one of the local papers tersely portrays his life:—

"He was an honest, conscientious, upright man, who strictly followed the Golden Rule in this life, and was universally loved and esteemed by his neighbors and acquaintances.

"The funeral services were held at the opera house on Tuesday afternoon, and notwithstanding the extreme inclemency of the day, the attendance of friends at the last marked tribute of respect that could be paid the ending of his long, well-lived, and useful life, attested the esteem in which he was held. The services were conducted by Elder H. J. Hudson, a friend and acquaintance of thirty-five years, whose remarks were a living tribute to the life-work of kindness, and benevolence, and charity, ever displayed by his departed friend." H. J. HUDSON.

EVANS.—On the morning of January 3, 1897, Bro. Gomer Evans, engineer on the Missouri Pacific railroad, was killed by the locomotive and train being wrecked by a washout, the result of long and heavy rains. Death must have been nearly instantaneous, as he was found sitting in his cab dead with his skull crushed by wreck of car piled upon the cab. He was born at Blue Ridge, St. Louis, Missouri, July 11, 1859. He leaves a widow and five children, four girls and one boy, a father, mother, and one sister to mourn their sad and untimely loss. Funeral service conducted by Elder M. H. Bond, assisted at tomb by members of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

DODSWORTH.—At St. Louis, Missouri, December 23, 1896, at the home of her son, Sr. Elizabeth Dodsworth, aged 78 years, 9 months, and 2 days. She was born in the town of Leeds, Yorkshire, England; was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ in England about the year 1853. Came to this country in company with her husband in 1855. She was rebaptized into the Reorganized Church, May 5, and confirmed May 8, 1895, in St. Louis, by Elder M. H. Bond. Her husband died about three years ago. She leaves behind her, and living in this country, a son, a brother, and sister; and four sisters who are now living in England.

A large circle of friends and saints mourn the loss of a good mother, sister, and friend. A large concourse attended her funeral Sunday afternoon, December 27. Services conducted by Elder M. H. Bond. Text, Revelation 14:13.

SLOAN.—Thomas Sloan was born March 9, 1837, in Sussex County, New Jersey. In 1869 he and his brother Horace moved on the present home farm and passed through the hardships incident to border life in uncertain Kansas; making friends wherever known. Married Mrs. Malinda Wilkinson in 1879. Was baptized into the church May 27, 1894, by Henry Resch. Ordained to the office of deacon. Died January 22, 1897, leaving a grief-stricken family of wife, three daughters, one stepdaughter, and one brother, who deeply mourn his departure from the family circle. A true and faithful husband, a kind and loving father, a trusted brother, a consistent Christian man, known by all as honest and upright in all his ways. In the death of Brother Sloan the Solomon River branch loses one of its charter members, but he has gone to reap what he has been sowing. Funeral services were held in the Baptist church, Minneapolis, Kansas, January 24; discourse by Elder Henry Hart, of Broughton, Kansas. Interment in Highland cemetery.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

DISCIPLINE.

THERE is no better guaranty of good discipline than a firm, even temper. Good nature is a great power in this world, and nowhere more potent than in school. A cheerful teacher, who meets the peculiarities of his pupils in a good-natured, though strong manner, will have little trouble. Let the teacher try for one week to wear an unruffled face and manner, though the storms may rage within his bosom. Let him keep his voice even and kind, though he feel like thundering his commands.

No one can be a master of discipline without a keen sense of the humorous. A laugh in the schoolrooms seems to some teachers gross sacrilege—a punishable offense. It is a most helpful assistant to good discipline, a natural vent for feeling, a proper means of letting sunshine into the dusty atmosphere of our somewhat dusty work. When a funny thing happens in school and every face broadens into a smile and some unlucky wight bursts into a guffaw, how many teachers will preserve a sphinxlike aspect, frown in a doleful way, and reprimand everybody for that which ought to be hailed as a Godsend. A laugh in the schoolroom will dispel bad spirits, sweeten souring tempers, diffuse a spirit of good nature.

Let the teacher laugh with his class.

Let him occasionally repeat some humorous suggestions called out naturally by the subject in hand. Let him not be a buffoon, but let him be discreetly attentive to the humorous aspects of school happenings. He shall enjoy the reflex effects of an occasional merry laugh, cheering in his work, and lighting up the dull routine of the day and softening the asperities which seem sometimes to be in the very air. The teacher who can laugh at as well as with the pupil, and do it without angering him, can never be a poor disciplinarian.

I plead for a professional treatment of discipline and of school life generally. The law knows two great classes of offenses—mala in se, or offenses which are crimes because they are morally wrong, and mala prohibita, or offenses which are crimes simply because the State forbids them. The offenses of the schoolroom are almost entirely mala prohibita. Whispering, communicating, punching, striking, getting out of line, turning around in one's seat, etc, ad infinitum, are none of them crimes. They are wrong simply because the school forbids them. A scholar may do one and all of these and yet be a good boy, and perhaps, it may be said, a better boy than he who has not enough vigor or spirit to wish to do them. Now, it is absurd to treat these minor offenses of school life as crimes. I have actually known a teacher who would reprimand a pupil for some offense against school law, and meeting this same pupil on the street would cut him dead. She took his offenses as personally directed against herself, and had not the decency to treat this in a professional way. Now, it ought to be possible for a teacher to correct a pupil at twelve o'clock, and do it firmly and decidedly and play tennis at two o'clock with the same pupil. There is no inconsistency here. It is simply the natural thing to do.

I believe very few pupils are actuated by any worse motives for misconduct than mischief, the natural attendant of good health and animal spirits, yet I know many teachers make a personal matter of all violation of their order. The pupil should see that you are his friend, and that you enforce your orders because they are reasonable, and because the good order of the school demands it. Children are not altogether stupid in these matters. Let the teacher show that he rules in his professional character and he will make his labors easier and will secure better discipline. To get angry over every petty breach of order is to put a strain on the nerves which is as foolish as it is unnecessary. I believe in making the number of prohibited offenses as small as possible. We should allow our pupils all the freedom that is consistent with school order, and should do it gladly and cheerfully. But when a thoughtless youngster oversteps the line and transgresses a vital regulation, something should be said or done at once to quicken his memory and to assist him in mending his ways.

The teacher who would be a successful disciplinarian should feel and exhibit a genuine interest in his pupils. Sham will not do here. You cannot manufacture a show of sympathy. Children see through you and take your measure more readily than you suppose. It takes a big heart, a wholesouled nature, a generous disposition, to make a thoroughly good teacher.

The material with which we deal is very precious and very plastic. We hardly realize the influence on pupils of constant contact with teachers, their intellectual superiors, as well as their elders. We may do much to improve or spoil the manners and even the dispositions of our pupils.

We need to show ourselves the genuine friends of our pupils, and they can recognize a real friend as if by intuition. The best discipline rises into the realm of the greatest, noblest, Christian living, and that should be the standard of the ambitious teacher.

Whether we should rely wholly on moral suasion or use the rod, whether we should ever keep in at recess or not, whether we should compel a pupil to learn as a punishment a portion of the book he studies, etc., are all questions to be answered not categorically, but guardedly and with due reference to the pupil to be disciplined, the peculiar offense committed, the effect on him and on the rest of the proposed punishment, the teacher's character, and, in short, the whole environment.

Some teachers shout loudly for moral suasion and decry the birch and rattan. Well, I personally think that the rod is sometimes, judiciously used, what the old lady called her husband, "a perpetual means of grace." The teacher who worships moral suasion is adhering blindly to the name without a due consideration of the patent fact that moral suasion is often only a cover for inefficient and careless discipline.

One teacher can use the rod and it becomes an instrument of good in his hands. Another has the personality and magnetism to control by sheer moral force. Let the one wield the birch, let the other rule empty handed: neither should impose his own method on the other. Discipline is an outgrowth of the very essence of one's individuality and should be allowed to follow the outlines of one's peculiar powers.

We should not be sticklers for particular systems or methods, but each, in his own way, seek successful discipline. There are various avenues to the youthful heart, various methods of securing obedience.

Discipline is best obtained by him who is the truest gentleman, the most sympathetic man, the best friend of youth. If we cultivate our will-power strive to be tactful and sensible, look on the bright and humorous sides of school-life, keep cool and even-tempered, interest ourselves heartily in our pupils, and remember that the petty annoyances of the schoolroom are not life and death matters, but merely incidents to our chosen profession to develop its own rule of discipline.—Chas. O. Chapin in Journal of Education.

A GLANCE AT THE SOUTHERN NEGRO.
THE world should have been given clearly to understand that the white people of the South, as well as their brothers of the North or the East or the West, always intended to rule, and if there were just cause now to believe that the negro would still vote unitedly, and thus menace the South with negro domination, it is safe to assert that these States would remain a "Solid South" to the end of time. History clearly demonstrates this truth, that so long as Anglo-Saxon blood feeds Anglo-Saxon hearts, so long will Anglo-Saxon intellect and Anglo-Saxon will dominate inferior races. We believe, however, that the danger of negro rule now really exists only in the distempered imaginations of political demagogues. No one can produce any array of facts to convince the unbiased observer that the negro vote will be any more united in future elections than the white vote. This race has made wonderful strides in recent years, and they have seized upon every opportunity to better their condition. They have been given the best schools, colleges, and universities, and have not neglected their advantages. Their moral and intellectual improvement has been little less than marvellous. It is unprecedented in the history of any people. They are fast becoming qualified to act, to think, and to vote for themselves. The time has passed for them to ever again consent to become the mere tools of unscrupulous and designing office seekers. They carefully and conscientiously study the issues which are involved in every political canvass, and in many instances thoroughly understand them. Their leaders read political economy, and neither the tariff nor the currency question is a stranger to them.

The property interests which are possessed by this race in the South already exceed twelve millions of dollars. They have mastered many trades, become proficient in the industrial arts, and sometimes prominent in the professions. They need not now be told that their welfare is inseparable from the welfare of the South, and the time will soon come, if it has not already arrived, when they will support with their suffrage only those measures which their matured judgment convinces them will most certainly promote the prosperity of the section in which an all-wise Providence has cast their lot. They have come to realize that the people who gave them employment, who annually pay twenty millions of dollars taxes that their children may be educated, who make it possible for them to live in comfort and ease, and often in luxury and refinement, who labor side by side with them in the field or in the factory, are their best friends. With returning confidence and affection, they will be influenced as the weak are always influenced by the strong, and they will be found supporting the party which their employers support, because they will learn that the interests of the employer and the employee are one.—"Will The South Be Solid Again?" M. L. Dawson, North American Review, for February.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

A RETROSPECT.

It sometimes happens that men upon venturing into new realms of labor and duty, assuming responsibilities in fields of thought and action to which no previous experience had fitted them to act, resolutions are formed and opinions stated that after consideration and experience may either modify or change. Or, in the case of want of experience, the preknowledge sometimes attendant upon men in great crises may unconsciously to the main actors so shape the opinions expressed and the determinations stated, that after years of added knowledge and experience tend to confirm and approve the positions taken.

On April 6, 1860, Joseph Smith, accompanied by his mother, the widow of Joseph Smith, the Seer of Palmyra, attended a conference of men and women, who had been members and officers in the church at the time of the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, June 27, 1844, assembled at Amboy, Illinois, in pursuance of a call and previous appointment, and there asked to be admitted to fellowship upon their original baptism, they also having been baptized into the church in the days of the presidency of the Seer and his brother.

The widow stated to that assembly that her faith in the mission of her martyred husband had not changed; that her faith and confidence in the gospel as it had been given by the angel, and preached in the lifetime of her husband, were still unshaken; that she still believed in the latter-day work, as she had always done, and desired to pass the remainder of her days in the fellowship of the people of God; and that she wished her name enrolled among those who, like herself could not indorse the folly and wickedness that had come into the ranks of the believers and scattered the faithful, destroying the faith of many. She was by unanimous vote accepted, and her name enrolled on the record of membership.

Joseph, the son of the Seer, upon presenting himself to the assembly made an address, of which a longhand report was made. That report, fragmentary and broken as it necessarily was, was published in the Amboy Times, at the time, and afterwards published in the SAINTS' HERALD for May, 1860. From it the following extracts are quoted:—

... I came not here of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit. For some time past I have received manifestations pointing to the position which I am about to assume. ... I have come here not to be dictated by any men or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me. ... I believe in the doctrines of honesty and truth. The Bible contains such doctrines, and so does the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, which are auxiliaries to the Bible. ... It is my determination to do right and let heaven take care of the result. ... Some who ought to know the proprieties of the church, have told me that no certain form was necessary for me to assume the leadership. That the position came by right of lineage, yet I knew that if I attempted to lead as a prophet by these considerations, and not by a call from heaven, men would not be led to believe who do not believe now. And so I have come not of my own dictation to this sacred office. I believe that we owe duties to our country and to society, and are amenable to the laws of the land, and have always considered it my duty to act upon this principle. ... I will come to you if you will receive me, give my ability, and the influence my name may bring, together with what little power I possess, and I trust by your faith and prayers to be sustained. I pledge myself to promulgate no doctrine that shall not be approved by you, or [and] the code of good morals. ... I do not care to say more at present, but will simply add that if the same Spirit which prompts my coming, prompts also my reception, I am with you.

The son of the Prophet, Joseph Smith, was received into fellowship upon the baptism performed in the lifetime of his father; and upon the statements contained in his address was given the hand of fellowship and by vote chosen to preside over the priesthood of the church.

The spirit of prophecy had been with many of the members present at that assembly in Amboy, on that sixth day of April; and manifested upon several occasions at different places, that the son of the Prophet would be called and would take the presidency of the church. During the year 1859 such prophecies had been frequent; and it had been also predicted that such call and coming would occur at the April session of 1860. Many believing these predictions had gathered at Amboy to witness their fulfillment.

Neither Joseph nor his mother had heard a word of these predictions; no one having ventured to acquaint them with the statement of such having been made. A strong effort had been made in 1856 to interest young Joseph in the work of the reorganization, which effort had failed because the young man had himself received no direction or command to connect himself with the movement. Such failure had shaken the faith of some, but strong hopes were entertained that God would lead the son to the work of his father. No knowledge of predictions and prophecies stating that he would come to the Reorganized Church, or be present at the April session of conference of 1860, had reached young Joseph, prior to his being present at that session; and it was as much a matter of surprise and astonishment to him and his mother as to any others there.

Joseph has repeatedly stated in public and in private that he knew of no such prophecy having been uttered until made acquainted with the fact after reaching the conference and the prediction had been verified. He heard it there for the first time, the fact of the prediction having been made being testified to by several who were present at the times of its utterance and heard it.

No communication had been had between any of the members of the Reorganized Church and Joseph Smith, until near the meeting of the conference, and long after these prophecies had been delivered, so there was no collusion or knowledge of coming human events conveyed to and fro, from which conclusion could have been formed and prediction made thereon.

There are several points in the address, to which attention is now called after thirty-six years have passed, to discover whether events have justified the statements then made, or whether the positions were taken unfortunately, were ill-advised and weak in themselves.

1. I came here not of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit.

In this there is a clear, plain statement that no personal purpose for self-exaltation, or aggrandizement, or self-motive determined the coming to the church work; and that the direction of the Spirit, to the dictation of which all Latter Day Saints claim adherence and submission, was what led him to the step he was taking. He was a member of the church over which his father presided and in the work of which he laid down his life. He had an indisputable right to membership in the true body of believers, wherever that body was to be found. He had gone to the Lord for direction as his father had done before him. The answer of the Spirit came to him and he was directed to that portion then known as the New Organization, and called the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He went as he was directed and told the people why he had done so.

2. I have come here not to be dictated by any man, or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me.

There was nothing uncertain in this statement. The people there assembled were well acquainted with the efforts that had been made to build up the church, here and there, and how they had one by one failed. The man then before them had known something of the efforts to dominate others and so despoil the people of their rights. He knew that to yield subjection to divine dictation was to be safe, to submit to human was to fail. He proposed to be directed by the Spirit by which he had been told to come to the body which the Spirit recognized as the true believers; hence, he at the start gave a clear and positive statement as to the power by which he expected to be controlled in case of controversy, or dispute. He recognized the power by which he had been sent as the proper one to yield credence and subjection to. Those to whom he spoke and with whom he was to become associated, understood him clearly, and never thereafter presumed to mistake, or to misapply the position taken.

3. I believe in the doctrines of honesty and truth. The Bible contains such doctrines, and so do the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, which are auxiliaries to the Bible.

It is perhaps needless to comment at length on this statement. The basis is broad, and as substantial as the word of God. Paul held to similar views when writing to the Philippians. He wrote:—

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

Joseph Smith was of the same opinion when choosing his motto: "Truth, Diamond Truth."

If truth, honesty, and virtue are not to be the basic principles on which all spiritual structures and characters are to be built to stand, then these names mean nothing, and things are as when the fathers fell asleep.

4. It is my determination to do right and let heaven take care of the result.

There is in this no hint of disposition to yield to wrong dictation, or to foster wrong in any form. Has this been done, and is it now being done?

5. I pledge myself to promulgate no doctrine that shall not be approved by you, or [and—Ed.] the code of good morals.

This statement was prefaced by a statement regarding lineal right, which had been claimed by some as attaching in the case, and a distinct and clear avowal that however strong the claim to lineal right might be, other qualifications must exist or the claim must be ineffectual and unavailing. Then in the light of what he had said before the man pledged himself not to promulge doctrine of which they, the church, or the code of good morals should not approve.

From a consideration of the various claims made to succession to the church, and the many peculiar dogmas taught by the several leaders, it was essential to the harmony of belief and action that the one who should lead successfully should give pledge to the scattered hosts that he would not compromise their confidence, their spiritual interests, and church existence by the promulgation of theory or dogma of such a character that they could not approve of it, or that the code of good morals would not sanction and approve. Dogmas had been presented which the people of God could not in the light of the law and the code of good morals approve. Some of these had been denounced by the men composing that conference. They were fearful of a repetition of them, or their kind. They did not care to again place themselves in the power of false theology and false morality. They had the right to expect and to require a sufficient pledge to justify allegiance to rule hitherto precarious since the Prophet's death. Hence this pledge.

Joseph Smith, the son, was aware that men had essayed to lead and rule responsible only to themselves. That these men had instituted dogmas and practices subversive of the true faith, injurious to the peace and safety of the church, and destructive of the faith and liberties of the people. He knew that men were liable to the lures of ambition; apt to place too high an estimate on the attainments and privileges of self, and too low an estimate upon the worth, rights, and liberties of others, and thus to become a victim to false ambition; and knowing this he sought to identify himself with the people upon a true and solid basis for mutual existence and protection against lust of power and false ambition.

Joseph Smith the son of the Prophet knew also that more than one portion of the people left broken and scattered by the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith and the events that subsequently occurred, had either condoned or embraced doctrines and practices that were quite contrary to "the code of good morals." He had some reasons to believe that these dogmas and practices had crept in privily, and were fastened upon the people by compromise, and not by reason of command of God, or precept and teaching of the true leaders. He believed that Joseph Smith, his father, was not guiltily responsible for the most of these dogmas and practices; but that they had come in against his better judgment and moral protest, and that his father wakened to the danger there was in them to the church, too late to make successful resistance to them, the mischief having been wrought. He believed he had the right to protect himself against a possible recurrence of similar conditions, and so placed this proposition that the doctrines he would promulgate should be of that nature that they would receive the approval of the people, or lacking that approval should stand approved by the "code of good morals."

Men have sought to use this pledge, so made to the discredit of the Prophet's son, claiming that he weakly put himself into the hands of a set of apostates, promising to do their bidding. That these were to fashion his views, formulate his opinions, and dictate his doctrines. These men forget what the man had already said, the avowal he made as to who and what sent him there, his statement that he did not come to be dictated by man. They forget further that in the very sentence against which complaint is made, the son of the prophet put up a wall of protection and defense against the willful disregard of right and the laws of morality, should an attempt ever again be made to fasten doctrines and practices upon the church that contradicted, controverted, and displaced the morality taught in the word of God. He could have done no more, he did not care to do less, while protecting himself from a possible departure from right on the part of the people to offer them a provision of protection against himself. The pledge was not, therefore, weak in itself, nor an evidence of weakness on the part of the man; but was timely, strong in itself, and an evidence of strength in the man. Nor can it be properly regarded in any other light, with reference to the latter-day work and the conditions obtaining at the time it was made.

IS THERE HARM IN UNITY?

JOE SMITH IN KANSAS.

ATCHISON, Kansas, Jan. 28.—Joseph Smith, head of the Latter Day Saints Church, arrived to-day to unite all Latter Day Saints factions in the city with the Reorganized Church. Smith is working to unite all factions of Latter Day Saints in the United States, including the followers of Brigham Young.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil, January 29, 1897.

The above and similar rumors are afloat in the secular press about our late visit to Independence, Missouri, and Atchison, Kansas. For these rumors neither Bro. Alexander H. Smith, who was with us, nor the editor, is responsible. No reporter secured any information from either of us, either as to our object, or the result; and what has appeared like the above is a matter of newsmongering common to the daily journals.

The result of our visit to Independence has been laid before the saints. The visit to Atchison was of a similar nature, to converse with some, who, holding different views of the latter-day work, were desirous to see us and compare ideas in a friendly, peaceable manner, with a view to a better understanding of the positions occupied by each. Surely there was nothing wrong about this. And unless mischief makers intervene and make wrong out of it none will accrue to anybody.

It ought to be understood by this time that the good name of the church and the stability of its institutions are as dear to such leading men as engaged in this interchange of views as to anybody else in the church; and that they can as safely be trusted to take care of the interests of the work as anybody in the church. If they are not, it might be well to secure others to represent the work at home and abroad.

But suppose that there was truth in the statement from Atchison, published in the Nonpareil, what is there in an effort to unite in one all the broken fragments of the church remaining after the dispersion from Missouri, Illinois, and Michigan, that is either wrong in principle or in itself? Jesus has said, "Except ye are one, ye are not mine;" and that salvation is to be found in the "remnant." What wrong is done then by an effort to bring about a unity among the various divisions of this remnant? We have been taught and fully believe that the object of the latter-day work was to bring to pass a "unity of the faith." Hence we are neither ashamed nor afraid of an effort to secure this unity; no matter by whom it shall be made.

Dogmatic dictation and assertion of religious sanctity and seclusion of right were never compatible with gospel freedom, and they are as much out of harmony with the spirit of oneness now as they ever have been; and ought not now to be permitted to stand in the way of spiritual progress. They have hindered the world's progress a good while, so far as the primitive faith is concerned, and have been the bone of evangelizing processes among believers in the latter day work ever since the death of the Martyrs; and it seems to us that we will do well if we heed what was said to the church in 1887:—

That the work of restoration to which the people of my church are looking forward may be hastened in its time, the elders must cease to be overcareful concerning the return of those who were once of the faith but were overcome in the dark and cloudy day, fearing lest they should bring in hidden heresies to the overthrowing of the work; for verily, there are some who are chosen vessels to do good, who have been estranged by the hindering snares which are in the world and who will in due time return unto the Lord if they be not hindered by the men of the church. The Spirit says, "Come;" let not the ministers for Christ prevent their coming.

We are blessed if we do as the Lord says; if we do not so do, the loss is ours. No objection to such unity can be valid, unless the terms upon which it is secured are in themselves wrong. None being stated in the report, it should be understood that no principle was compromised.

WHILE we were at Independence this last month, eight of those whom the "Church of Christ," the Hedrickites, had recently baptized, gave notice to the "Elders of the Church of Christ" that they withdrew from that body, giving their reasons for such withdrawal. Some of these are those of whom the Searchlight has from time to time made mention as coming from the Josephites, or Reorganized Church. One of these, Bro. Edward Marks, made a statement at the Lamoni business meeting, Tuesday, February 2, confessing his act in joining with the Hedrickites and his reason for it, and asked to be reinstated in fellowship by pardon. This was done cheerfully and fully.

At our return home we found a letter from Elder Maloch, of Vera Cruz, Missouri, renouncing his recent fellowship with the Hedrickites and giving his reasons for withdrawing from them, and asking pardon of those who might have been hurt by his action in joining with them.

We certainly feel to extend the hand to one and all those who having been led into making such steps as uniting with other bodies of believers in the latter-day work, may choose to retrace their steps and return to the fold.

We regretted to some extent that the withdrawal of the eight above referred to took place while we were at Independence, for the reason that it might be inferred that our coming to the city may have had some influence upon their action; but having had no conversation with the parties before their notice of withdrawal had been placed with the elders, we have no reason to feel bad about it. Brn. Maloch and Marks seem to have sized up the situation to their satisfaction, at all events. See Bro. Maloch's letter in HERALD for February 10.

"OF GOOD REPORT."

A PROMINENT business man of Kansas City, Missouri, writing to Bishop E. L. Kelley, on business, says in regard to the Church History sent him:—

I will read it with great interest, for while myself a member of the Methodist Church, I have always admired the Church of the Latter Day Saints, for their fidelity to their religious convictions and their sturdy integrity and good citizenship. The general verdict among all outsiders here is that there are no better citizens, or more honorable, honest people than the Latter Day Saints.

The apostle expressed the opinion long ago that the saints should so live as to secure a good report from them without the church. It is a matter of which the saints abroad may well feel proud, that their fellow believers in the Lord in the "regions round about" are winning the respect of the outsiders by upright walk and conversation.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

THERE are rumblings both under the earth and above its surface, in Utah, as the following press dispatches show:—

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah, Feb. 10.—Last night this city was visited by the heaviest earthquake shock ever experienced in this valley.

It was so severe that the bell in the courthouse tapped five or six times. The shock was felt as far north as Logan.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Feb. 10.—In the Legislature to-day Senator Rideout introduced a concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of four members of the House and three of the Senate for the purpose of investigating the charges that undue influence was brought to bear upon members of the Legislature in relation to their voting for United States Senator. The resolution was laid over until to-morrow.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. J. SMITH, St. Clair, Michigan, February 6:—

I have been here about two weeks, preaching every night, and three have given me their names for baptism. The Methodist preacher here is doing all he can against us, but is very careful that we shall not catch him at it. His cowardly, underhanded work in berating the work behind our back is hurting himself more than it does us, however, and we shall be content to give him rope a little while longer and then "fetch him up standing" by and by. I send you clipping from the St. Clair Republican of the 4th.

"Elder W. J. Smith, of Detroit, has been holding meetings here this week in the City Hall in the interest of the Latter Day Saints. He will speak twice on Sunday next, at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m., in the City Hall. Mr. Smith is an entertaining speaker and handles his subjects well. His lecture on the subject of 'Mormonism' last evening was exceptionally good, the elder clearly drawing the line of demarcation between those of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints and the Brighamites. Go and hear him next Sunday if you can, it perhaps may do you good."

Sr. Josie V. Phillips, Dorchester, Massachusetts, February 2:—

The work is progressing well in Boston. Saints are feeling well in the gospel and can only rejoice that the Lord has led them into this his church when they listen to the word which Moody and "Sam" Jones are at present feeding to the starving souls of Boston. They truly have a "form of godliness" but deny "the power thereof." They use just enough Bible to deceive the unwary into believing that they are preaching the gospel; but the light which this work gives enables one to see the holes there are in their teachings. Two were added to our branch by baptism on Sunday, January 24; so the good cause moves on.

Bro. Jay Hoffman, Kansas City, Kansas, the 4th ult.:—

This leaves me feeling well in the work. Am doing a good deal of house-to-house labor with good results, four being baptized within a month. Our branch is in good condition spiritually, nearly all being alive to this great work. Great blessings are in store for that servant who honors his calling.

Bro. George W. Edwards, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, the 10th:—

A very pleasant surprise party was tendered to Bro. A. H. Parsons, elder of this branch, on the evening of the 9th, it being his fortieth birthday. Quite a number of the saints participated and a very enjoyable time was had by all present, recreation being had in singing and playing of various games. Refreshments were served later in the evening.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, Ottumwa, Iowa, the 12th:—

I baptized two last night at ten p. m. in the river here. They live at Keb. They divided my meetings for Keb, and had two here; but it was a mistake, I had a splendid interest at Keb.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A LOCAL newspaper clipping, place of publication not given, sent us by Bro. S. D. Payne, announces his meetings and states that large crowds attend.

Sr. Anna Nielsen, formerly of Nebraska City, Nebraska, but for the past two years located at Sheridan, Wyoming, writes of her recent reunion with brethren and sisters of the city, to which she has returned of late. She rejoices again in active communion with them and writes of the pleasure experienced in their fellowship. Sr. Nielsen loves the work and maintains it in earnestness of spirit.

Sr. Mary A. Pilkington, of Hite-man, Iowa, writes an account of a visitation received by her years ago, which then comforted her and to which she now looks back with satisfaction, believing it to have been one of those commissioned "to tarry" in performing the special mission assigned him.

Numerous letters are crowded out of this issue by other matter.

Bro. J. W. Burns writes that he and others of the Scranton, Kansas, saints were edified by the labors of Brn. Joseph and A. H. Smith, Joseph Luff, J. W. Hudgens, Davis, and others, who recently visited that city and met with the branch there.

Catholic authorities deny late rumors which stated that the church had removed Dr. Keane from the University of Washington because of his liberal tendencies; also that Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, was under disfavor for like cause.

The Ensign has greeted us of late donned in new dress from head to foot, which very much improves its general appearance. The world moves.

The Cretan situation is serious and may open up the European conflict which seems likely to begin at any time. The Cretans are in rebellion against the Turks. Greece has espoused their cause and has sent a fleet with the avowed intention of annexing the island of Crete and thus liberate it from Turkish rule. Austria and other powers have disapproved the action of the Greek government. English, French, Russian, Turkish, and other war vessels are present in Cretan waters to watch for developments and to take action in restoring order, as occasion may arise. A conflict between Turks and Greeks is probable.

Bro. Daniel A. Bressman writes from McLeod, Oklahoma, that saints there desire labor from Bro. W. B. Toney and others of the ministry. Two are ready for baptism, others are interested. "Oklahoma is the best mission in the world," he says.

A London press dispatch states that there is no foundation for rumors of the Czar's ill health.

The immigration bill as amended and passed by Congress provides for the exclusion of all who cannot read the English or their native language. However, illiterate wives and children of literate males are admitted with them under the provisions of the bill.

A published card for street distribution issued by the brethren of Philadelphia announces a sermon on "Utah Latter Day Saintism," by Elder A. H. Parsons. We are informed that many heard the effort and learned the distinction between true and false Mormonism, so-called. Elders of the Utah Church will learn, if they have not already learned, that their missionary efforts will have but little or no effect, unless they serve the purpose of bringing out more clearly the legitimate character of the Reorganized Church in contrast to the church in Utah. The "Gentiles," the American people, will not be converted by an organization whose violations of common law they have for years been obliged to deal with and compel obedience from. Not even the rhetorical eloquence of B. H. Roberts can cover up or excuse the false position of the organization in the valleys of the mountains. However, its own policy will aid in its final overthrow, for the young men now being sent out will learn the truth and the honest among them accept it.

Elder J. W. Wight arrived home on Wednesday, the 10th, called in because of illness in his family.

Advices dated Sunday the 14th are to the effect that Greece has practically declared war against Turkey by sending troops to Crete, where the Christians have opened fire on the Turkish forces. Grave complications are expected.

Bro. J. L. Goodrich was at Washburn, West Virginia, on the 6th inst., where he found the people interested in the doctrine and the branch united and alive. Bro. Jonathan Huffman, the branch president, was assisting him. Bro. Goodrich has been laboring of late in West Virginia, in the counties of Ritchie and Calhoun.

There is much sickness in the places where the saints dwell this winter, said to be the result of the unusually mild weather.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometime guest,
But oft for "our own"
The bitter tone,
Though we love "our own" the best.
Ah! lips with the curve impatient,
Ah! brow with that look of scorn,
'Twere a cruel fate,
Were the night too late
To undo the work of morn.

SELECT READING FOR MARCH MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

[WE now take up the first mentioned corner stone on which character should be builded. This is "loving faith in God."]

How shall I lead my child to Christ? is, to many parents, the most momentous question of their lives. It is a most momentous question; one which we approach with the deepest humility, knowing our insufficiency to answer it without Divine aid, and praying earnestly for that aid. "Guide us into all truth" is our prayer; without that guidance we may wander into error, where error is fatal to human souls.

How shall I lead my child to Christ? O, parent, tender and loving as you are, is there not a cruel fallacy in the very question, the fallacy that Christ is afar off from your little ones, and can only be found of them after laborious and conscious search? Is there not in your heart, back of the question and prompting it, the idea that your children must go on for a time in sin, not knowing their blessed Savior, wandering away from him, and only returning to him in after years by retracing their steps through the devious and difficult ways by which sin has led them away from him? Is there no place within the fold of the tender Shepherd for little ones? Is it like him who "carrieth the lambs in his bosom," to safely fold the sheep and leave the lambs outside? And yet this is just what we charge upon him when we believe, or act as though we believed, that our children cannot be converted and become really his until they reach maturity, or, as we vaguely say, years of discretion. If they are not his—his who bought them with his own precious blood—whose are they in the interval between birth and that uncertain period which our halting faith fixes as the proper time for their conversion? The inevitable answer may well shock us out of our inactivity, for there are in the wide universe but two masters of souls, God and Satan.

Do not misunderstand us as teaching that children are all right by nature and have no need of regeneration; that if left alone they will grow into the beauty of holiness spontaneously. Twenty-five years' experience with children in the schoolroom has convinced us that such an idea is a fallacy. What we do affirm is, that it is possible, and ought to be common, for the children of Christian parents to grow up Christians, and never know themselves to have been otherwise. This should be the expectation of Christian parents; we rejoice to know that this is the expectation of many, and we have never known this expectation disappointed, except in cases where the disappointment was easily accounted for by extraneous circumstances. The atmosphere of the home into which they were born may not have been such as to nurture growth of the spiritual life implanted in the infant soul, though where there is this expectation on the part of both parents, that is not often the case. It may be that the church atmosphere is so cold as to freeze out the tender shoot; its style of piety may be active and bold, but with a certain hardness and rudeness—a piety of conquest, rather than one of love. Worst of all, and most common, there may be in the church a spirit of skepticism concerning child conversions, a feeling that the conversion of a little child is of small account compared with the conversion of an adult. We see this manifested in the way conversions, or accessions to the church, are often announced—so many adults "besides a number of children." . . .

You are loving and tender of your children, will make any sacrifice to feed, clothe, and educate them; for their sake you gladly renounce ease, comfort, health, rest; yet amid all your loving sacrifices for them, do you not do their souls an irreparable wrong by distrusting the loving mercy of your God to them—his longing and his ability to seal them his, and bring them into his fold while still little children, like those of whom his Son said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven?"

We charge you by the love you bear your children, to answer this question truthfully to yourself and to God. And if the truthful answer must be "Yes," pray earnestly, "Lord, increase our faith," for, "according to your faith, so be it unto you."

"You will never practically aim at what you practically despair of;" if you do not practically believe your child can be united to God, you will aim at something lower and less. Conversion is but the beginning of the Christian life, not its full perfection. A Christian is one who has begun to love what is good, for its own sake; why should it be thought impossible for a child to have this love begotten in him? He is, in that case, only a child converted to good, and leading a mixed life as all Christians do. The good in him goes into combat with the evil, and holds a qualified sovereignty; and this combat goes on, if we may trust Paul's experience, till life's close. Why may not this internal conflict of goodness cover life from its dawn as well as any part of it? . . .

Of course he cannot understand the whole philosophy of religion, but a right spirit may be virtually exercised in children, when as yet, it is not intellectually received. They can be put upon an effort to be good because God desires it, and will help them in the endeavor; this is all that, at a very early age, they can receive, but it is sufficient; indeed, it includes everything—repentance, love, duty, dependence, faith. Nay more, if the Christian scheme, the gospel, is really wrapped up in the heart of the parent, and beams out in all his looks and actions, the Spirit of God may make this living truth as effectual, even before it can be taught in words, as the preaching of the gospel itself. What manner of men and women ought parents to be in all godly living and conversation! . . .

There is no age that offers itself to God's truth and love, and to the influence of his Spirit with such ductile feeling and such tender sensibilities as childhood. Its being placed under parental authority makes him to see the abstract principle of duty personified in his parents, and learning to obey them "in the Lord for this is right," is the first step towards learning to obey God. It is for this reason that teaching children obedience to parents is of such vital importance. When the child is brought to exercise true and loving submission to the good will of his parents, you will often see a look of childish joy, a happy sweetness of manner, a delight in authority, as like to Christian experiences as anything childish can be to anything mature. . . .

The Bible is one of God's appointed instruments in religious character building. Among the earliest lessons taught our children should be love and respect for the word of God. This lesson is unconsciously taught in every home where family worship is sustained. The impressions made upon children by seeing the whole household gather, night and morning, around the open Bible, to hear it read by lips they love and revere, go with them through life. We hardly see how professing Christians who neglect family worship can expect the conversion of their children. This neglect usually arises from "lack of time," the parents say. But this is simply saying to your children, "Our worldly business is more important than the service of God." You have all the time there is in the twenty-four hours; it rests with you to decide what use to make of it. The natural supposition is that you will employ it in that which you consider of the most importance. . . .

Let the prayer at family worship be short, simple, and couched in such language as the children can understand. Pray for just what you need, and feel that you need for that day. I remember a prayer I once heard by a father whose name, if I should give it, would be recognized as that of one to whom thousands have listened delightedly, but in his prayer were no flights of eloquence, only the simple asking for the grace which each one needed for his day's work—for himself, that as he went among men he might honor his Master; for his wife, amid her household cares; and for his children, that at school, and especially upon the playground, they might not do anything which the boy Jesus would not have done in their places. Such prayers are not mere words to those that hear them, they go with them out into the work of the day, to help and strengthen.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

The leaflet, "Gospel Teaching in the Home," may be used in connection with this lesson.

Latter Day Saints are instructed at what age their children shall be baptized. Read Doctrine and Covenants, section 68, paragraph 4.

What position do they occupy up to this time? See Doctrine and Covenants, section 28, paragraph 13.

Can it be proved that any more of those who enter the church in childhood are unfaithful to the teachings of the gospel than of those who accept it later in life?

What is binding on parents in order to have children ready for baptism at eight years?

Must it be a free choice on the part of the child when he is baptized?

One sister, now grown, remembers feeling hurt because arrangements were made for her baptism without consulting her. There had been no talk on the subject just then, though she had been taught the necessity of baptism prior to that time. There were others to be baptized and she was told to get ready and go too. She would have been willing otherwise, but as it was, she went with an inward protest.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

AT the request of the writer we publish in full the article on Uniformity of Texts. May we hear from the other side?—ED.

UNIFORMITY OF LESSON TEXTS.

IN accordance with a motion passed at General Convention last spring, that districts take into consideration the question of uniformity of texts—that the lessons for Primary Quarterly be based on same texts as used by Senior and Intermediate grades—and report their wishes to the general assembly, we took up the subject in our first district convention afterwards. Wishing more time to think upon the matter, the question was laid over for further deliberation. At our last convention it was decided upon, and after general expression of opinion from teachers and local officers, a motion prevailed unanimously in favor of uniformity of texts.

When the question was first brought up, some objection to the uniformity idea, giving as their reasons that the Senior texts were beyond the comprehension of children in the primary grades.

I have learned that this objection (?) has been entertained at other places. I put the question mark after "objection," for while this argument had been brought up a good deal as an objection, is it one? Is the supposition it implies a true one? Why, it is as foundationless as the idea is amusing that a text in the Old Testament could not be simplified as easily as one in the New Testament. If any evidence were needed further than reason, it is only necessary to use the observing powers to notice that the primary work, only goes over the ground that the Senior grade went over a year or two before, a demonstration which has been going on right along that the texts used for senior and intermediate uses, can be simplified to meet primary requirements.

This point seen, the question was settled with us. It took no argument to convince any of our teachers that the present difference of texts is a disadvantage to the general work and interests of the school. That has been making itself apparent ever since the system started.

In the first place, while it is a fine point, it is none the less a real one, that we lose by this division, the effects that are always reached by united pursuance of one course, in interest, sympathy, and the stimulus that competition with one another gives.

The line is drawn at the responsive reading where the interest of the school divides. It is not reasonable to expect children to give attention and be interested in something in which they have no part, and do not understand, because their teaching is upon different subjects. It is the same at review time. Instead of this being one of the most enjoyable features of the session, a lively, cheerful closing exercise, participated in by the entire school, thus uniting all classes in the understanding of the lesson, and sending the children away in bright spirits; instead of that, one half the school must go through the dull performance of sitting and waiting while the other half recites. It is particularly tedious to the children. They grow restless and disorderly, annoying the rest of the school, worrying the superintendent or the one reviewing, and it is a task upon the teachers that have charge of them. Besides, there is as much time again used as would be necessary for one review, and this drags to a tiresome length the feature that should be short and crisp.

It may be said that in some schools where they have primary room they have separate reviews anyhow. This is no argument against one text; not at all. A uniform text would serve under such circumstances just as conveniently, and it would accommodate the majority of schools that have no primary department.

But nowhere do we find the two text system more vexing and troublesome than in our teachers' meeting. It seems about impossible to make the meetings the success we should like to have them in interest and attendance on account of it. The primary teachers complain that they are not helped for their work by studying the senior text, and naturally there is no personal incentive to them to come. Those that do attend, do so out of desire to help the meetings for the other's sake, but derive little practical benefit for their own duties, and vice versa, it is the same with senior and intermediate teachers if the primary text is studied.

In some towns the primary teachers of all the denominational churches meet together for the study of the lesson, but in any one school and in our schools there are not enough of primary grade teachers, and of senior and intermediate grade teachers to hold separate meetings. We need the ideas and the presence of the unbroken number of our teachers to make the meetings of most profit and interest. It would be inconsistent to ask two nights a week for senior and intermediate teachers to lend their presence at the study of the primary text, and primary teachers to repay them by attendance when it is the senior's turn. So we have been compelled to resort to alternating: study the senior lesson one week, and the primary lesson the next. It is the best way we can think of, but it is not satisfactory, for obvious reasons.

We hope other district conventions have done, or will do as we have, and, acting upon the advice of the motion made at General Convention last spring, take this question into consideration. Things are allowed to run on sometimes, not because of merit in them, but because they are not looked into, or if their disadvantages are felt, it is neglected to report them, and they are put up with. But we are so anxious to have the present two-text system changed, feeling thoroughly sure it is disadvantageous in our working methods, that we would wish that district associations everywhere would investigate the question, too, and make their wishes known, that the general convention may be prevailed upon to take the matter up and act upon it.

We have looked at both sides of the question; considered the arguments against it as well as for it, and we have found that a uniform text would have all the merits, and none of the demerits of the present two-text systems, and hence we want uniformity of texts.

DON'TS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

BY JOSEPH ROBERTS.

DON'T be a superintendent for one day out of the week and the other six be a something else. Do you know what it means to be a Sunday school superintendent?

Don't teach Johnny to remember the Sabbath to keep it holy and that it's wrong for "little Johnny" to go skating with some of the neighbor boys on that day, when you go sleighing and spending the time in gossiping with neighbor Jones.

You have been told to always go before your school looking pleasant. Don't do it unless you feel that way. Be the same on the surface as you are in the center. Don't practice deception. The children will learn it of you. If you love the children and have the Spirit of the Maker in your heart, it will unconsciously shine in your face. Don't be a sham.

Don't get behind the stand and pray long and loud and ask for everything in existence and then, in the face of all this, ask God to create something else and give you. But get near your school and, while you are all standing with bowed heads, offer in the language, feeling, and needs of a child, a short prayer that the children may feel is from their own hearts.

"AS TO primary pupils' preparation, I have never been able to secure much home work, so accept it as a fact that all that the majority of the pupils get is in class-work. I teach just as if the class had not previously seen the lesson. Certain ones always know their lessons, but repetition pleases children.

"DORA YOUNG."

Letter Department.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—The long talked of discussion between the Utah elders and our elders at this place is at last a reality. Elders Bond and Archibald spoke in behalf of the Reorganized Church, and Elders Christensen and Ballard in behalf of the Utah Church. Two propositions were properly arranged and signed before the discussion commenced; the first, our people affirming that Joseph Smith the present President of the Reorganized Church was the legal successor of his father; and the second, the Utah people affirmed that Brigham Young was the legal successor of Joseph the Seer. This is not the exact wording of the propositions, as I do not have them at hand, but it is the substance of them.

Two evenings were used on each question, each side to have one hour each night. The first session was held Monday night January 25, and closed Thursday night January 28, the discussion lasting altogether, sixteen hours. We presume that this discussion in one way was no exception to the general rule; and that is, both sides think they come out ahead, at least we feel that way very much, so far as our side is concerned. In view of the fact that we have so many living witnesses, and an abundant supply of written and printed evidence at hand to sustain our position, we believe it only fair to admit that it is quite possible that we would be a little prejudiced against the arguments brought forth by the Utah people and therefore not give them the merit they were justly entitled to, and hence judge that we were more than victorious. There were a few in the audience who were not members of either faction, and some we believe not associated with any religious organization, and their opinion that we have heard expressed is that our opponents got very much the worst of it, and the general expression appeared to be one of commiseration for them; that they were young and inexperienced and were really to be pitied, as they appeared to be earnest and honest in their endeavors to maintain and defend the position which they occupied, though their cause must be dragged through the dark and cloudy times of Utah's early history.

In Elder Christensen's attempt to smooth over the manner in which the church in an early day in Utah handled their apostates, he said he believed there were two persons in the audience who had been out there in those days who were now members of the Reorganization, and he would call upon them and prove to the satisfaction of the audience the points he was claiming. The first one he called upon was Bro. J. G. Smith, a man who has resided in St. Louis for some fifteen or twenty years, and has a reputation in both business and church affairs entirely above reproach, a man also who knows from his own personal observation and sad though profitable experience enough of early-day Utahism to make a small volume for very interesting and surprising reading to the young and middle-aged members of both churches in question. Elder Christensen asked him the question if he had ever heard of anyone's life being threatened on account of their apostatizing while he was there in Utah. Bro. Smith arose and asked him if he really wished him to testify in the matter, whereupon Elder Christensen answered in the affirmative, but if the expressions of his face during the next few moments bespoke the feelings of the inner man it is safe to say that he was sorry that he had not said no. Bro. Smith stated in a pleasant, though firm way that brought conviction with his words, that he had only heard of it, but that his own life was threatened for that very cause, and that by an elder of the Utah Church. He also related other instances of as damaging importance to them. Elder C. then asked him if he knew that such instructions came from the head of the church. Bro. S. said he could not say, but one occasion where such actions existed it was the result of a local priesthood meeting. This evidence on the part of Bro. Smith, coupled with the evidence that had just been read where Brigham Young had said he would unsheath his bowie knife to take care of the apostates, certainly made a chain of evidence that would almost hang a man.

The other brother Elder C. referred to was Bro. Noah N. Cooke, who was for years a very faithful and efficient Bishop's agent in this district, and a man whose word is considered as good as law among his associates, so far as truthfulness is concerned. His testimony was also very strong, which made it quite apparent to all present that it would have been far better had Elder Christensen allowed the living witnesses to remain seated. He finally said he wanted to know the truth, and we believe in this he was correct, but these young men have been born and cradled in this belief, and their faith seems to have very much the same hold upon them that the Catholic faith does upon its communicants, "It's the religion that my parents lived, and hence it must be right." Neither of them has ever been beyond the borders of Utah until a few months ago, and it is quite evident their experience will do them good.

There is one thing quite sure; that is, these young men have intellect and zeal worthier of a better calling, and may our heavenly Father in his loving kindness open their eyes to the true way.

Your brother,

RICHARD B. TROWBRIDGE.

NORTH BRANCH, Mich., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—I haven't anything very discouraging to write I assure you, for prospects look very bright for the preaching of the gospel; requests come from all quarters to come and preach, all of which are very encouraging to the missionary, and especially so when it is said, "Come, and we will pay your fare." Of course it is perfectly right they should do that. But many times the missionary does not receive that encouragement, but is compelled to throw his pack on his back and take a tie ticket (of course one advantage with that kind of a ticket, it is good on any road), and navigate himself across the country. But will we falter by the way or give up in despair because we are left to exercise ourselves in this way? We say no, for our Captain whose name is Jesus, has said, "Follow thou me;" and we read that he traveled on foot to tell the people of the love of God. We are no better than he was, I am sure.

Notwithstanding the severity of the weather on Sunday last, I baptized one precious soul. May the good Lord bless those who have the courage to step forth in obedience to his commands. I came to this town of North Branch last Monday evening to hold a series of meetings in the Episcopal church, and on arrival found the church nice and warm, the arrangements having been made by Bro. Tebo and son. I have held forth but two evenings and cannot say what the result will be, but last evening the audience was nearly doubled in number over the first evening, and some have expressed themselves as being very much pleased with what they heard. We are having a little opposition in the cowardly bushwhackers' way; the Methodist pastor has appointed this week as a week of prayer in his church. I presume there will be some long and loud prayers offered that the wolf may not destroy their flock.

I spent a few weeks the forepart of the winter in Bay City. We held meeting in a little church in the southern part of the city. While there were none baptized, we allayed much prejudice and left some believing. I was associated with Bro. J. S. Keir while there, and I do thank the Lord for such men whose practical life is in harmony with their profession. And I do thank the good Lord, "who knoweth the weakness of man and how to succor them who are tempted" (D. C. 62: 11), that he has ordered that his ministers should go forth two and two; and when alone as I am at the present I often wonder, "When will the church observe that order?" I wrote an article entitled "two and two" some time ago, but have not seen it in print yet. Perhaps it got lost or found its way to the wastebasket.

The worst feature that I see with a great many of our people is that they do not buy and read the church books and papers, therefore they are not keeping pace with the work as they should. If we do not qualify ourselves so we are able to cope with the powers of the evil one, it seems to me it is only a matter of time when he will overpower us.

The Church History is indispensable to every one who wishes to qualify himself. I ordered a copy of it and sold it again before I got it read, but at once ordered another. I only hope I may be able to sell many of them.

Yours truly,

J. A. GRANT.

RIVERSIDE, Mont., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—Some time ago Mr. Johnson purchased a place that had been used for a saloon, and we thought it would be a good thing to convert it into a church; so the few saints here in the valley put our little mites together and sent for Bro. R. J. Anthony to come and occupy the old saloon house now turned to a better purpose. He had preached a few discourses here in the hotel two years ago and the people liked his talk; then he came here on the 28th of December and began preaching on the 30th with about forty people, and the people liked him from the first and the congregations increased right along. He made everything so plain that all could see the beauty of the gospel; at least they could see and understand the Bible better than ever before. We had splendid audiences until this late cold spell came; but it is too cold now to try to hold meeting.

Several seem to be interested and some are believing. I do wish and pray that some will unite with us. I have been alone here so long; it would be so good to have others, of like precious faith to associate with close at home. A few of the saints live about seven miles from here, which makes it difficult to meet together more than once in a long time. When a missionary comes we are only a little speck in this great valley.

Bro. Anthony's preaching has removed prejudice and people think differently of us now. Some came out of curiosity and were surprised. They thought we had a Joe Smith Bible and all such nonsense as that, but they found we had the truth.

After services one evening when Bro. Anthony had got through preaching an old man stepped up to him and said that was just the kind of preaching he liked to hear. He invited him to come and see him and stay a week with him. He said he had just come out of curiosity and to hear what we had to say. There have been some parties that have asked for the Book of Mormon. Bro. Anthony has sent for them and some of Voice of Warning. I do hope we will have nice weather soon, so Bro. A. can preach again. We do enjoy hearing him speak, for it is so seldom we ever hear one of the elders preach. He is a splendid speaker and we hope we can keep him here awhile, for the people need to hear the gospel. All they think of is going to dances.

We have started up a union Sunday school and hope it will be a success, for there are so many little children that have never been inside of a Sunday school. How I would love to be where there was a large branch of the church where I could go to church and Sunday school every Sunday and feel that the presence of God was near.

Bro. Anthony spoke on the Book of Mormon and every one was much pleased with it. We do so much appreciate his coming, for we know he is a good and noble man and is trying to do all he can. He is talking of going to Deer Lodge soon. We hope he will soon come again, for we will miss him. Bro. Anthony has been very kind to stay with us long as he has. Every one speaks so well of him and we are truly proud of him. A Presbyterian minister from Hamilton had some talk with him and asked some questions. He knew nothing about the latter-day work. Bro. Anthony loaned him his Book of Mormon and gave him plain pointers on our work.

Your sister,

MIMA JOHNSON.

YOUNGSTOWN, Iowa, Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. H. Kephart came into this locality, by our request the 31st of December last, and rendered efficient service for the Master for about eleven evenings, in our schoolhouse. His preaching was well received by the people who favored him above other ministers in that the best of order and attention prevailed throughout. We have reasons for believing that some good was accomplished, although none were baptized.

There are some here who are firm believers in the latter-day work, but for some reason have not the moral courage to obey. I know of a number of such in different places, and cannot but believe that they do not realize the responsibilities resting upon them as individuals, else they would not hesitate.

I would respectfully suggest that a tract be prepared especially adapted to this class of people, calling their attention to the fact that to a great extent we are "our brother's keeper," and that only through prompt and complete obedience on our part as individuals can we rid our skirts of others' blood.

I would also beg leave to suggest that some method or system be devised, and adopted by the church that would in some measure furnish protection to the generous, hospitable saints from the rascally humbugs who are taking advantage of the saints' liberality in various ways. Wishing all a happy, prosperous new year, I am,

In bonds,

BEAVER CITY, Neb., Jan. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am preaching four miles east of the above-named place; am having a good attendance and some are very much interested. I preach the restoration of the gospel and the things concerning the kingdom of God, and while I am making many friends to the church, it is not done without opposition—the preachers oppose me. Some say I have six wives and some say sixteen. One of the Methodist preachers is saying many hard things against me. He told the people that after I preached at the Needmore schoolhouse for awhile (southwest of Beaver City) they locked the house and would not let me preach any more, and that the people at the Duesenbury schoolhouse should do the same thing; but this was proven to be false by some of the people living near the Needmore schoolhouse in less than an hour after he told it.

There are no saints nearer than thirty-five or forty miles of this place that I know of, but I don't lack for friends. I have preached twelve sermons here and expect to stay for some time yet, then go south near Precept. I feel well in presenting the word.

In bonds,

Editors Herald:—Please make the following corrections in the article, "The River Sidon, Where is it?" First, in Herald for January 20, page 45, which reads: "When he left his brethren in the land of Nephi," should read, "When he left his brethren in the land of Lehi." Also in Herald for January 27, page 60, the first reference, "Alma 22:3-16," in curves, should read, "Alma 20:3-16." And also the name "Usumasinta," should be spelled Usumacinta, to be in accord with the name as quoted from Mr. H. H. Bancroft's History of the Native Races of Central America.

Yours truly,

SIMON SMITH.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday was passed pleasantly here. The sky was clear, the sun shone brightly, and light was radiant over city, snowdrift, and landscape. There was a full attendance at the preaching services who seemed to be favorably impressed and cheered on in the conflict. The prayer service also was well patronized and fervently participated in. The Sabbath school is in a progressive stage, attractive and instructive. It is under the management of Brn. Ephraim Squires and James Cox, etc., and Sisters Ella, Helen, Violet, and Elizabeth Squires, Anna Box, Potts, and others. The song service was very attractive. The Brooklyn branch also is progressing nicely under the management of Bro. George Potts as president, Bro. J. H. Pope priest, James Cocks teacher, William Clark deacon, and Anna Box organist, Thomas Lester Bishop's agent. These are supported by Brn. Joseph Squires, Thomas Truman, George Box, and other brethren, together with a number of active and well-grounded sisters, young and middle aged. Altogether the outlook is promising for Brooklyn.

Last Sabbath I was in Philadelphia and preached in the forenoon in the hall occupied by the saints for holding meetings, and in Camden at evening. There was a desired interest manifest in both services. I attended a number of meetings while here, visited a number of the saints, and it was easy to note the evidences of progress. Philadelphia is recovering from the apathy of the past and bids fair to assume her former strength and go forward. The younger element has taken hold with manifest interest in both the branch and Sabbath school. Brn. Hull, Bacon, Christie, Zimmermann, Stone, Copeland, and Sisters Kate Cameron, Hull, Parsons, Christie, Louis, Copeland, with many others, seem devoted to the Sabbath school work. Bro. Christie conducts a Sabbath school in Camden each Sabbath. There are some eighty-seven members in all now in the branch. The success of the work in no inconsiderable measure is due to the activity of Bro. A. H. Parsons, who though just now engaged in secular work keeps a vigilant eye on all that is going on and aids in every way possible. But what is not least, the work of Brn. H. E. Moler and William A. Smith has been very effective and has strengthened the cause both in Brooklyn and Philadelphia. These brethren are well commended and endeared to the saints. Bro. Smith is an especial favorite all along the line. As the saying goes, "He takes the cake." Both have returned to their respective home fields of labor, with the understanding that they will be active there until the time of General Conference. See how generous we are towards the West.

While in Philadelphia I went to hear Elder Roberts, of Utah fame, as did a number of the saints. We listened with interest to a well-delivered and forcible discourse on the principles of the gospel. The fall and atonement, faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, authority. It was able and interesting, etc. A real Latter Day Saint could safely indorse all that was said, except the closing, which was presented with raised hand and much emphasis, "This is what we believe out West and this is what we practice." That was just about enough to make the gods weep! But they can do but little harm, after all, except among silly folks, for the people are onto them. While procuring tickets among railway officials they stated: "There are the genuine Mormons in town also." They know the difference, and some, at least, are inclined to encourage our work as against what they are attempting to do, and our people are held in respect—known as a respectable body. It really takes a pretty cheeky person to represent that western institution with its terrible history this far east.

Bro. Parsons is caring for the flock in Philadelphia, and is up to time.

Fraternally,
WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

LYNN, Osage Co., Mo., Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:—We came here the 30th. Have held meetings in the little chapel with fair audiences, considering the weather, roads, etc. Preached in Methodist church in town, five miles from here, last Wednesday. Good audience, and am to preach there again to-night.

Something of a contrast from the dust, danger, noise, confusion, and crowded quarters of the city to the quiet and solitude of the wooded hills of Osage County, reminding one of Gray's lines:—

"Far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife
Their sober senses never learned to stray.
Along the cool sequestered vale of life
They kept the even tenor of their way."

The beauties of "still life" in Nature's primitive estates are all around us, and release from the perils of civilization, are appreciated, as a pleasant and profitable change. We are comfortably cared for at the home of Bro. James Wilson, an old veteran, with an honorable record, both in the army of the Lord and in the service of his country.

This region is the scene of former labors of Brn. Gillen, Bozarth, Jones, and others, who are all kindly remembered. Here, as elsewhere, the work of confusion, scattering and discord, has seemingly to a large extent obliterated the once goodly prospects for the church in this region. There are still those who love the truth, and whom past experiences will never suffer to be satisfied with anything else but the gospel as restored to us. But there seems to be a corresponding lack either of ability to apprehend the necessities that confront us, or of an unwillingness ourselves to submit to the operation upon our own life and conduct of the law which James declares to be "perfect." Wise presiding officers, who have wisdom and courage to resist the seductive influences either of the favor or frowns of those who ignorantly or willfully oppose decency, law, and order, are everywhere needed.

The discussion with elders of the Utah Church in St. Louis, which closed after four nights' canvass of the claims of the respective churches, simply left us, confirmed in the stability of the claims of the Reorganized Church. I have thought it strange that that church which was able to build costly and numerous temples in the West should neglect their interests or fail to guard their claim by sending out men as representatives who really seem to know so little about the actual history of their organization. To my mind these are signs of change—rapid changes, if not of disintegration, awaiting that body of people. Experiences like those in St. Louis must, with honest and intelligent men, inevitably lead to disquiet the mind and doubt concerning the claims of the Utah Church.

Dishonesty and ignorance are poor factors to depend upon for permanent building, and with dishonesty and ignorance of the facts of Mormon history withdrawn from the arena of conflict, the union of saving element from the partial wreck of gospel faith cannot be long delayed. This is our hope. May Zion's deliverance soon appear, is our prayer.

The great changes that have taken place in Utah history since the first missionaries of the Reorganized Church sounded the call for return "to the old paths" are to us a prophecy of the future. The generation of men that aided in or submitted to the dictation, tyranny, un-Christlike, anti-gospel methods of B. Young & Co., are fast passing away. The sons of those men, broadened and enlightened by world contact, are already disallowing the claim of wisdom, much less of heavenly authority, for the teaching and acts of their progenitors, and their future effort with regard to much of their past church history will be to obliterate, rather than to perpetuate. The Rocky Mountain fastnesses, nor the great American desert no longer offer obstruction to civilization's inquiry, and the white rays of the standard of the Son of Righteousness which the Lord by his Spirit is raising up against the enemy that swept in like a flood upon the Church of God, is beginning to penetrate Utah's spiritual gloom and night, and twilight that precedes the dawn is at hand.

We have suffered much and long, but I cannot but feel that a better day for the Church of God and for her faithful ones is nigh, and at hand.

In the year 1837 the Lord said to Thomas B. Marsh, "Pray for thy brethren of the twelve. Admonish them sharply for my name's sake, and let them be admonished for all their sins; . . . and after their temptations, and much tribulations, behold, I, the Lord will feel after them: and if they harden not their hearts, and stiffen not their necks against me, they shall be converted, and I will heal them."—D. C. 105:5.

The Lord does not have to wait like men to perceive the seeds that may lie deep down and obscured from human gaze in the hearts of men of "lustful, covetous desires" already among them, and which, if not at once uprooted and banished, may swiftly germinate and grow into speech, and into action. The temptation did come to the Twelve, and swift and strong-voiced passion listened, and yielded to, prepared the way for "much tribulations" to which history affirms witness. Their hearts were hardened, and the Lord could not, did not, has not healed them.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners;" and companionship with apostates from the pure gospel law hinder even naturally honest men like Wilford Woodruff, and shrivel up their spirit to the narrow gauge of anti-gospel, onesided theology, whose spirit is perhaps in a word expressed in the shibboleth of the faithful in Utah; viz.,

"Do you believe that President Young has the right to dictate to you in all things both spiritual and temporal?" Dissent from this un-American, antigospel, and senseless dictation, strange as it may seem, is still, by the simon pure and loyal Utah Mormon deemed apostasy. But it don't cost as much, and isn't as dangerous to apostatize as it was in 1852-56, and dissenters will multiply, and the bands of superstition, ignorance, and oppression will be broken, and the captives will go free.

Fair and open discussion of differences through public debate cannot but serve to enlighten the people who are anxious for the truth. If, as Shakespeare has said, "comparisons are odious," it cannot legitimately attach to anything save that which exposure may reveal as being a fraud or untrue. Evidently the Lord was of that opinion when he commanded the early elders of the church to "call upon" their "enemies to meet" them "in public and in private," promising that "the folly of their enemies should be made manifest," etc.

President Woodruff may be old and somewhat broken, but he has sense enough left to know that which we also know to be true, that the claim of appointment and succession for Brigham Young as President, Prophet, and lawfully called, ordained, and appointed head of the Church of Jesus Christ, when fairly tested, will be thrown out of court by a candid and intelligent jury of the public. How are the once mighty fallen when darkness becomes their defense and flight their safety! The light and facts of history, disaster, the law of God and the law of the land are the chief witnesses against them. The Lord hasten the day of deliverance for the honest in heart.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—Kindly inform our jovial "T. W. C." that "T. W. W." has never objected to the use of the word "battle" when properly applied to this latter-day work, but has ever contended that we are not savages and need not resort to barbaric customs and apply the "war paint." And though Bro. T. W. C. states that Bro. Tanner had "war paint on," I challenge his statement and leave it to Bro. Tanner to say whether he had or not.

Hopeful signs for the work in Council Bluffs. Several of the general ministry have labored among us recently. Bro. J. F. McDowell delivered a series of illustrated lectures, which were well received. Bro. McDowell creditably acquitted himself, impressing all with his ability to do justice to the subject in hand. Then came the indomitable Columbus (Scott); he who, to our knowledge, has never been left in midocean, but always succeeded in reaching land, except when the Second Seventy got him. He delivered several telling discourses. Bro. Swen Swensen stopped over between trains on his way to South Dakota, preaching once in Omaha.

Our branch has but little "iniquity" in it due, in a large measure, to the labors of Bro. Arthur Dempsey, who was ordained a teacher about a year ago, and who is doing excellent service in this direction. The law is being applied to all offenders and were it not that so much of the surface element from other branches flocks to the city, and by their actions, for a time, bring reproach on the work, we would have more than an average branch.

Have not labored as much this year in the city as heretofore, which has had its effect. What Council Bluffs needs is the undivided attention of an active minister. I have been the most successful when thus laboring. The district conference convenes in Council Bluffs, February 27 and 28. We would be pleased to see the missionary in charge present.

Will be in Des Moines over Sunday and then on to Fontanelle.

QUESTIONS ON THE DIVINITY OF THE BIBLE ANSWERED.

WILL you please answer the following questions?

1. Do you believe the Bible as a whole to be inspired? 2. Is it moral? 3. If so; why does it uphold slavery and polygamy, or rather sanction it? 4. Is it merciful? and if merciful, why in war did it raise the black flag? for it commanded the destruction of all—the massacre of the old, the infirm and helpless of wives and babes. (1 Sam. 15: 3.) 5. Did it not teach the law of revenge; and if not, why was the Jewish law an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth? Is this not savagery rather than philosophy? (Ex. 21: 23, 24.)

Again; let us leave the Old Testament and take up Christ. Why should we place Christ at the top and summit of the human race? Was he kinder, more forgiving, more self-sacrificing than Buddha? Was he wiser, did he meet death with more perfect calmness than Socrates? Was he more patient, more charitable than Epictetus? Was he a greater philosopher—a deeper thinker than Epicurus? In what respect was he the superior of Zoroaster? Was he gentler than Lao tse; more universal than Confucius? Were his ideas of human rights and duties superior to those of Zeno? Did he express grander truths than Cicero? Was his mind subtler than Spinoza? Was his brain equal to Kepler's or Newton's? Was he grander in death—a sublimer martyr than Bruno? Was he in intelligence, in the force and beauty of expression, in breadth and scope of thought, in wealth of illustration, in aptness of comparison, in knowledge of the human brain and heart of all passions, hopes, and fears the equal of Shakespeare—the greatest of the human race?

Now then understand me, please, I ask this for information, not through any spirit of fun. I honor man for his honest opinion; but when I read of such things as happening in the Bible, and again in the New Testament, even where Christ preaches the doctrine of eternal punishment for the sins of Adam and Eve, I cannot help but doubt the truth of the fact that these men I have referred to were in all respects his equal. How do we know he did these miracles? Josephus says nothing about them, and he is acknowledged the great Jewish historian.

Christ says: "I came not to bring peace but a sword." Again: "I came to set the father against the daughter," etc., "and a man's foes shall be they of his own household," how can you harmonize the loving, compassionate, all-forgiving spirit of Christ with such doctrine? It teaches that if one believes Christ he shall be saved, if not he shall be damned. How then is it the perfect law of liberty?

Why does orthodoxy differ so in regard to the Bible—that is the different denominations. For it seems to me that if God wished to reveal himself to man he would do so to all men alike, and by doing so there would be no question of its truth.

Now pardon me for intruding, please.

Yours in kindness,

A. C. SMITH.

P. S.—I do not expect you to answer this from the pulpit,—you may do so if you wish. I am not inviting a debate; it is simply for information. You may write your answers and give them to me if you wish to.

CORRECTIONVILLE, Iowa,
Sept. 5, 1896.

MR. A. C. SMITH,

Dear Sir:—In thus essaying to answer your questions, as handed me, permit me to say that your frankness and stated desire to learn, rather than ridicule, are really commendable.

1. To your first question, as to our belief in the Bible being wholly inspired, I answer negatively; from the fact that it has made no such claim for itself. To illustrate: It no more required a biblican historian to be inspired to record events of historical interest than it did or does any other historian.

2. As to its morality, I answer that as a standard it is supremely so. That it records immoral transactions, is true; but it does not hold them up as acceptable to God, or as practices to be either condoned or followed; by the fact of thus recording it makes prominent the contrast between the good and the bad, as well as portrays the weakness of man even though he be called of God for the performance of a special work. It also shows the honesty of the historian.

But we believe that many biblical statements having an immoral tendency are the result of transcription and mistranslation. Having what we call the "Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures," in the which the contradictions and glaring inconsistencies of the King James' Version are not found—this Inspired Version being the result of Holy Spirit aid—you will at once see where and why we stand as we do, on this point.

For instance: In King James' Version it says, in Genesis 6: 6:—

It repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.

The Inspired Translation says:—

It repented Noah that God had made man on the earth, etc.

Now which is the more reasonable? And this is only one of hundreds of corrected proof texts that might be noted did time permit. At the risk of being prolix, one more text is, however, submitted. 1 Corinthians 10: 24, in the King James', says:—

Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.

The Inspired Translation supplies the word "good" for "wealth," as also does the Revised Version.

3. In your third question you interrogatively affirm a proposition rather than being content with a mere interrogation. Since you thus tacitly affirm, will you kindly point out wherein slavery and polygamy are sanctioned by the Bible? You realize that the burden of proof rests with the one making an affirmation.

In the proper time and place, should you desire to continue, I expect to be prepared to affirm that the Bible sanctions neither of these practices.

4. In answer to your fourth question, permit me to offer the thought that mercy ceases where justice begins; and, whereas the Amalekites were commanded to be slain, it was largely the result of a long continued strife. And the reason given for such a command was that Amalek "had laid wait" for Israel when on their way from Egypt. And while the slaying was an act of justice, it was yet really more merciful to slay them, "both man and woman, infant and suckling," than to permit them to live and sin thereby be perpetuated as a result of transmission in harmony with the law of heredity.

5. No; it does not necessarily teach revenge, from the fact that the inference is that should an eye be destroyed, that the price should be paid for it as an act of justice rather than revenge, as seen in Exodus 21: 26:—

And if a man smite the eye of his servant, [not slave] or the eye of his maid, that it perish: he shall let him go free for his eye's sake.

The emphasis is mine, and for the reason that the portion thus emphasized is that which gives the interpretation. And we certainly should take the interpretation of the book rather than to use our own construction. Is it "savagery rather than philosophy" in the United States because our legislators have enacted capital punishment? What say you?

6. Christ occupies such position (1) Because he is the only Begotten of the Father; (2) He is the only one "that taketh away the sin of the world;" (3) He is the only one of all you have named who was raised from the dead, and thereby made possible the redemption of the race.

As to Buddha, Socrates, Epictetus, etc., etc., etc.. I am unprepared to answer intelligently, as I have not read their biographies. But granted all you claim for them, it does not in any way affect the question, for "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself." (2 Cor. 5:19.) Emphasize "world," and you at once see that there was a possibility of these men, whether living B. C. or A. D., to receive inspiration to the degree of qualifying them as indicated by you. At least we so believe, for he (Christ) "was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

He was in the world, and the world was made by him." John 1: 9, 10.

In John 17: 5 Jesus says:—

O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

This gives a key to "us" and "our" as found in Genesis 1: 2: "Let us make man in our image." Genesis 6: 3 declares, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man."

These and numerous other passages prove that by and through Christ, and "my Spirit," God operates on the hearts of the children of men, and, therefore, the ones you named might have received such operation.

If so, then, by the influence of such men the Hindoos, Chinese, and others of the race, have been benefited more than they would have otherwise been, is it not in harmony with the idea of what the Christian calls God's love and mercy that he should have thus inspirationally operated with them? Is it not merely your opinion that Shakespeare was "the greatest of the human race?"

That "Christ preaches the doctrine of eternal punishment for the sins of Adam and Eve," you will hardly find either in the New or Old Testament. If so, where? As a people, we claim to know that Christ "did these miracles," both by the testimony of witnesses and by our own experience in this direction.

The statement that Christ came not to bring peace but a sword, was a prophetic one; not that such was the aim or object of his coming, but the result of the opposition to the truth he brought as foreseen by him. Just so with regard to the division of households—a prophecy and being constantly verified in our experience. It demonstrates the prescience of Jesus and helps to substantiate his claim, as well as to show the existence of the power of good and evil in the world.

By the study of physiology we determine that there is a law of our being by which we are either rewarded or punished as we shall obey or transgress that law. Just so with regard to the Christ or gospel law. And instead of being an imperative and vindictive declaration as you infer, it was merely a statement of fact as prophetically presaged. Hence, in this sense, there never was a greater truism than

"he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned"—condemned. Why? Because he fails to obey, hence merits the punishment of disobedience. But that such punishment shall last forever, in the literal sense of the term, is not taught; but only so long as disobedience shall continue.

The reason for the difference in orthodoxy is that men accept their own interpretation rather than Bible statement. God can reveal to us only as we are in a condition or put ourselves in the way of receiving that revelation. And as we are free agents, and thus have the free exercise of our own will in the matter, your question is answered in the fact that the majority of professing Christians refuse to accept or believe in plenary inspiration by the which present revelation is made manifest; therefore they do not receive.

God cannot reveal "to all men alike," from the fact that by the exercise of our agency we fail to do, believe, and will, alike. I illustrate my thought by taking what we can demonstrate as a scientific fact—mathematics. We do not all understand this science alike from the fact that we have differing capacities and diversity of desire, as well as failing to execute alike. But is the science of mathematics at fault and to blame for the differences of understanding with regard to it? No more is God. If you say he has the power to make us all see alike, then he would make slaves of us did he so exercise.

But please remember that God will hold us responsible only so far as our capacity may reach, and a failure to exercise that capacity where the privilege is granted so to do.

Yours for truth,

J. W. WIGHT.

THE DIVINE SONSHIP OF JESUS CHRIST.

EDITORS HERALD:—Some years ago, probably fifteen, more or less, a semi-religious novel was published in England called "Robert Elsmere," written by Mrs. Humphry Ward. You may have read or heard of it. It is some time since I read it, though I have it in my library at home.

It attracted considerable attention on account of its literary merits, but more so on account of its ideas expressed as to the birth of Christ, claiming he was the real son of Joseph of Bethlehem, and not the divine Son of God.

This claim is made in such an argumentative, specious manner, so very plausible in its reasoning as to catch that class who are so easily carried about by every wind of doctrine; and their name is legion.

Some time after its appearance, the Rt. Hon. William E. Gladstone, ex-Premier of England, wrote a pamphlet in refutation of this doctrine. This pamphlet I did not see, but a Mr. Addison Norman, I think of Canada, thought Mr. Gladstone's pamphlet should be replied to, and that he was the man who could and would do so. I have read this, and have one, but not in my possession, having loaned it.

Mr. Norman claims that Jesus is the real son of Joseph and Mary, of Bethlehem; that he is not the divine Son of God, conceived by the Holy Ghost, as stated by Matthew and Luke; that the account of his conception and birth in Matthew 1: 18-25, and the annunciation, as in Luke 1: 26-38, are or were interpolations by the early heretics of the church to bolster up their false doctrine; that the discrepancy in the genealogy of these two books is, to say the least, extremely suspicious; that in none of the Epistles is any reference to his (Christ's) divine birth, and this omission speaks volumes.

It is also claimed that Luke 3: 23, "And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli," is the most positive proof of his carnal birth. The people supposed he was Joseph's son, and it is so stated, "being, as was supposed," etc.

Now, no particular notice need have been taken of this pamphlet with its monstrous claim, were it not that it has, with its specious reasoning, taken hold of some of the saints around here, one young man in particular being fully convinced that it speaks the truth, the Spirit bearing witness to it; so he claims.

I have preached on the divinity of Christ in the hearing of this young man, and so plain, so it was said, did I make it, that the others, who had been carried away by the pamphlet's plausibility, saw, and still see its false assumption. I have reasoned with him, showing the divine and miraculous birth of Christ to be one of the fundamental doctrines of this church, but all to no purpose.

He claims that any man of the race and seed of Adam could have redeemed the world, had he been good enough. I admitted this saving clause. He claims that in the preëxistent world all of the spirits were on an equal footing, but that Christ came to a higher standard by his own goodness, or by his perfect obedience, and if we, any of us, had been as perfectly obedient, we might have been as he was, a begotten son in the bosom of the Father, and the redeemer of the world.

To him Luke 3: 23, as in the pamphlet, is the most positive proof of Jesus' carnal birth; that the prophecy of Isaiah 7: 14 is doubtful as to its reference to Christ.

How can Jesus be the Son of God, and the son of David? Our brother does not deny the preëxistence of Christ, but denies his miraculous birth.

In proof of his divine birth I showed:—

1. The first Adam was the special creation of God.

2. In his first conflict with the enemy of truth he was defeated, and by his disobedience he and all of his posterity were condemned to die, and to remain in that state till some one, not under the sentence, would redeem him, and all. His and our patrimony was also lost and could only be redeemed in the same way.

3. God from before the foundation of the world knew what would happen, and he provided the remedy, Jesus Christ, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.

4. As the first Adam was the special creation of God so must be the second Adam, the Lord from heaven. If he, the second Adam, was the direct posterity of the first, of carnal birth; he was under the curse, in as hopeless a condition as any, and he could not, by his death, redeem himself, let alone a sin-cursed world. Therefore he must be one created in a miraculous way to be free to make an offering acceptable to the divine justice.

He (Jesus) is called the seed of the woman, not the seed of the man. (Gen. 3:15.) Born of, or, "made of a woman," not man. (Gal. 4:4.)

Isaiah 7: 14 is the prophecy of his miraculous birth, of which we read its fulfillment in Matthew 1: 21-25.

I also showed that Jesus is spoken of as the seed of David according to the flesh. (Rom. 1: 3.) That for the purpose of inheritance, of succeeding to the throne of David, he is, in the genealogy, both in Matthew and Luke, traced, both in the line of his putative father, and his mother, both being of the royal line of David, to that son of Jesse, and is therefore the legal heir to that throne.

Now our brother claims it is not possible to prove Mary to be of that royal line. In the Cottage Bible, in the footnote on Luke 3: 23, where it says Joseph, the putative father of Jesus, is the son of Heli, whereas, in Matthew 1: 16 he is said to be the son of Jacob, we read as follows:—

Being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph—Joseph being his mother's espoused husband, it was of course supposed by the world, that Joseph must be his father; but this expression strongly implies the contrary. (The real father of Joseph was Jacob (Matthew 1: 16), but having married the daughter of Heli, and being perhaps adopted by him, he was called his son, and as such was entered in the public registers; Mary not being mentioned, because the Hebrews never permitted the name of a woman to enter their genealogical tables, but inserted her husband as the son of him who was, in reality, but his father-in-law. Hence, it appears that St. Matthew, who wrote principally for the Jews, traces the pedigree of Jesus Christ from Abraham, through whom the promise was given to the Jews, to David, and from David, through the line of Solomon, to Jacob, the father of Joseph, the reputed, or legal father of Christ; and that St. Luke, who wrote for the Gentiles, extends his genealogy upwards from Heli the father of Mary, through the line of Nathan, to David, and from David to Abraham, and from Abraham to Adam, who was the immediate "son of God" by creation, and to whom the promise of the Savior was given in behalf of himself and all of his posterity. The two branches of descent from David, by Solomon and Nathan, being thus united in the persons of Mary and Joseph, Jesus the son of Mary reunited in himself all the blood, privileges, and rights, of the whole family of David, in consequence of which he is emphatically called "the son of David.")—Baxter. What may have thrown some considerable difficulty in the way of reconciling these genealogies is the Hebrew law, which obliged men, in certain cases, to marry the widow of their deceased brothers (see Deut. 25: 5, etc.), to whom their children are therefore reckoned.

I have given this somewhat lengthy quotation because it is denied that Mary is of the line of David.

I have not given a tithe of the arguments I advanced, nor the texts of scripture quoted, but thought it wise to give you this much of it, and ask if you will kindly enlarge on it through the Herald, inasmuch as this pamphlet has been much read, and I know not how much evil it may have done.

Any man who claims to accept the teachings of Joseph the Seer, and who rejects this as given, as taught by the Seer, is unworthy the name of "Latter Day Saint."

Such a monstrous claim is an acknowledgment that the Jews are right in what they say of the birth of Jesus; that is, that his was carnal, he is antichrist, refusing to believe in the Son of God. In 1 John 2: 22, such an one is called a liar, as well as antichrist. A partial acknowledgment of our dear Lord is, it seems to me, coming short of that of the Devil's, who acknowledged him to be the Holy One of Israel.

In Revelation 19: 10 we read of John's attempt to worship the glorious being who was making such wonderful revelations to him, but was forbidden, with the words, "See thou do it not: I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God;" teaching him that God only was worthy of adoration. Now in St. Matthew 14: 33, we read that the disciples were so impressed with the power of Jesus over the forces of nature, that "they that were in the ship came and worshiped him, saying, of a truth, thou art the Son of God." Also, in John 9: 37, the blind man, who had been restored to sight, when Jesus revealed himself to him, "he worshiped him," proving that inasmuch as he accepted that adoration, he claimed to be God as well as man, and worthy of that which the angel acknowledged that he, himself, was not worthy of. SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, about.....4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL AGENT OF THE BISHOPRIC.

To the Saints of the Little Sioux District, Iowa:—The removal by death of Elder David Chambers, Bishop's agent of your district, makes it necessary to provide for the work otherwise, and I have this day duly appointed Bro. Alma M. Fyrando special agent for the said district and for the purpose of settling the accounts of the former agent and making out and forwarding the district annual report to this office for the year closing March 1, and to your district conference March 6, 1897. Bro. Fyrando has authority to settle with all branch solicitors and perform all the work pertaining to the duties of the office of Bishop's agent until further appointment and notice. Bro. David Chambers was faithful in the trust imposed and we have lost a great and good worker in the interest of the truth. Wherein loss has come to us, however, gain has been to him, and to the wise decrees of Him who is just and gives care to all his children we are hopefully resigned. Invoking the blessings of the Lord in behalf of the children of faith, I am, confidently in the gospel hope,

Yours,

E. L. KELLEY,
Presiding Bishop.

TO DISTRICT AND BRANCH CLERKS.

During the conference year now drawing to a close nearly all the district clerks have done well in sending branch reports to the General Recorder promptly, and by this method the crowding of matter at the latter part of the season may be avoided. Only three districts in the United States are much behind in sending reports.

But it is necessary that the February and March reports should also be forwarded promptly after the conferences, in order that all the reports that time permits of may be placed upon the General Records before making out the annual report of the whole church. All who are concerned, particularly district presidents and clerks, will oblige by seeing to this matter without delay after their conferences adjourn.

Branch officers should also see to it that statistical reports are made out and presented to their branches before the conferences of their districts convene for the final sessions of the year.

During the year many district and branch clerks have promptly given information and corrections of records in reply to my inquiries. But many remain unanswered of the six hundred inquiries made about branch records and reports and other matters since last March.

In sending reports please send the original copies, and do not mutilate them by cutting off portions. Send the whole sheet, unless the report shows no changes at all. In that case cut the blank on the line between "Where Ordained" and "By whom ordained," and send me the two folds, one of which contains the statistical data of membership, etc.

Do not make the reports into a hard roll. If you have no large envelopes then fold the reports as usual and place them flat in some wrapping paper and tie a string firmly around the ends and across the package. Anyway a piece of manilla paper and a string is better than poor quality envelopes even if they are large sized ones. Many poor ones are all broken open when they arrive here and part of the contents may be lost for all that can be told, sometimes.

Do not send reports and other written matter at newspaper rate of postage. Pay two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof to make sure that the reports are sent according to law.

District clerks should have a regular statistical account with each branch. Make a tabular form on the back leaves of your district record or minute book, there showing each quarter (or regular reporting time) what branches reported and how many members, gains, losses, etc., each branch stated or was found to have. Then, when the next reports come it can be seen whether the new reports start with the number that the last preceding ones closed with, also if the numbers of officials agree, plus new ordinations or minus removals or deaths of officials. Frequently I receive reports that say that the previous report closed with quite a different number from what it actually did close with, as I prove by hunting the report from the files in the vault. A branch may not report for a year or two, but if you have such a tabular account you can turn to it and see if the present report is in harmony with the former report, or not.

Again, some reports do not agree with themselves, but have quite a different footing on the statistical fold from what is shown of gains and losses on the face of the report.

Also they may state that so many have been baptized, or received, or died, or have taken letters, and yet fail to give all the names thus required by the report, with the items of birth, baptism, etc., with the names added, and statement of how and when lost with the names counted out as no longer members of said branch. Therefore the necessity that all details should be examined and compared.

When any discrepancies or errors are found do not let such reports pass the conferences. The reports should be corrected, either by officers of the branch who are present, or they should be sent back to the branch for correction, unless the district clerk can and will make it his special business and interest to see that all corrections are obtained as soon as possible, either by correspondence or by visiting the branch and obtaining items and corrections.

All this would prevent some of the daily burden of writing to branches everywhere for a correction of their reports and records (to agree with themselves and with past records and reports) which is a large part of the labor as Recorder, by reason of carelessness and inaccuracy upon the part of those who baptize, or who act as clerks, or scribes, in trying to make a record of events. Thus there rises a constant conflict in regard to dates and places, and the evil seems endless. It is discouraging, after years of labor, to find that so little interest is taken by many and that the same ground has to be gone over and over year after year, in the effort to have the times and places of birth, baptism, ordination, etc., etc., agree, in the various branches where they are recorded.

SUGGESTIONS TO BRANCH CLERKS.

1. Always have a small memorandum book and a lead pencil in your pocket, and then if anything occurs in branch meetings or elsewhere that should be recorded you will be prepared to write it down, not have to trust your own or to some other person's memory.

2. In making out branch reports endeavor to classify the items by themselves; as, for instance, place all the new baptisms first on the report; then put next those who have been received by certificate of baptism (if any), and, third, the names of all who have united with the branch by letter of removal. Afterwards give the names of those removed by letter, and the deaths and expulsions. In many cases these various items are badly mixed together on reports, and not in the order of their dates either. Names of those baptized early in the quarter or half year are sometimes placed after those baptized later in the quarter, and interspersed with names of those received, removed, expelled, and died.

3. It is not needful to give the full items of those who are reported as removed, expelled, or dead, yet there are so many of the same given name, and so often the initials are left out by the clerk, that it would be well to write the birth date of each one thus reported lost to the branch, so that the district clerk and General Church Recorder may be certain as to the person thus removed, expelled, or died.

4. Always give the dates of death and expulsion, and when the branch voted letters to the persons named, and the name of the branch to which the letters are to be presented, if to any in particular. And so also in recording and reporting those received please give names of the branches from which persons are received, as well as the dates when they were received upon those letters.

5. Be sure to record all changes of name by marriage, and put the same on the reports from quarter to quarter. Often when this is neglected the persons are reported under other names than the church record shows, and sometimes it is much trouble to trace up who is intended, when death, expulsions, or removals of such are reported, and the names are not found on either Index or Record. Give the full names of the bride and groom, the date of marriage, and who officiated in the ceremony.

6. Be sure to spell all names correctly, inquiring also as to what the whole name is, first name and the middle name, or initial. Many people are called by their middle name, and then by and by some one reports them by another name, which, on correspondence being had, is found to be really the first name, whereas they are recorded and indexed by the middle name only. This causes confusion, delay, loss of time, and sometimes serious error. Fathers and sons and mothers and daughters are named exactly alike, or the first name and the initial. Besides similar names are found all over the church. Forty-seven by the name of Mary Smith are on record, thirty-six as Mary Brown, and many Elizabeths, Margarets, Davids, Johns, and Williams of many common surnames.

7. When written to by the district secretary, or General Recorder, for information, be so kind as to answer as promptly as you may be able, not put it off as a disagreeable task, until it is forgotten and gladly lost sight of. The Lord requires our stewardship over this matter to be as faithful as over any other trust committed to us, or as greater ones to others.

If the above rules were strictly and carefully adhered to it would save much of both labor and trouble over affairs that a little timely care would entirely prevent.

Please to consider these things and act accordingly, that the work may be done as commanded.

H. A. STEBBINS,
2t General Church Recorder.
LAMONI, Iowa, February 10, 1897.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINISTRY REPORTS.

Blank forms for reports of the ministry under General Conference appointment have been mailed to home or field addresses where most likely to reach the brethren promptly. Reports should be in the Secretary's hands as soon after March 1 as possible, and none later than March 15, to insure insertion in the "ministry reports" to be published previous to the convening of conference.

Any who fail to receive blanks will be supplied on application.

R. S. SALYARDS,
6-2 Church Secretary.
LAMONI, Iowa, Feb. 6, 1897.

ENROLLMENT IN QUORUMS; ELDERS, PRIESTS, TEACHERS, AND DEACONS.

Elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, not members of quorums, may address applications for enrollment to the Church Secretary; who is authorized to receive all such applications, and to present them to quorums for their action; that vacancies in quorums may be filled, and new quorums be organized, in harmony with the law. (See D. C. 104:31; 107:43-46; 118:1; 120:10; etc.)

Applications should include statements of labor done during the year, whether in branch, district, or field; also all essential items of birth, baptism, and ordination, for records of quorums. It should be understood that the Secretary cannot enroll anyone in a quorum: quorums receive and reject as they may determine.

Some applications remain over. However, all not yet enrolled would do well to renew applications, that later labors may be known. Some have also been reordained—to other offices.

In bonds,
R. S. SALYARDS,
Church Secretary.
LAMONI, Iowa, Feb. 6, 1897. 6-2t

The conference of the Fremont, Iowa, district will convene at Shenandoah, Iowa, February 27, 1897, at ten a. m. The brethren will please remember their reports and send them in time. There is important business to come before the conference and delegates to General Conference to appoint. Hence a full attendance is desired.

In bonds,
D. HOU GAS.

Conference of the Eastern Iowa district will convene with the Brush Creek branch at Arlington, Fayette County, Iowa, February 27, 1897; Sunday school convention February 26. A full attendance is desired as important business may be transacted. Branch clerks will please forward their reports at once to the following address that they may be corrected before conference.

WILLARD W. BEAL, Sec.
Box 323, WATERLOO, Iowa.

The Far West district conference will convene in St. Joseph, Saturday, March 13, 1897, ten a. m. We would be pleased to have a full report from all the branches in the district.

WILLIAM LEWIS, Pres.
CHARLES P. PAUL, Sec.

The Pittsburg and Kirtland district conference will convene with the Blake Mills branch, March 6, at ten a. m. The railroad station is New Philadelphia, about half a mile distant. J. H. Cramer, president of branch, has informed me that due preparation is being made, and that trains will be met on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday a. m., the committee wearing white ribbon. Brn. E. Miller and Roscoe Ollam, of Cleveland, will act as committee on railroad rates for C. L. & W. and Valley roads, they to confer with L. D. Ullom and Mrs. M. Brewster, of Wheeling, who may more directly reach the Wheeling & Lake Erie. Bro. Griffiths writes me that those going over Valley railroad change cars at Valley Junction and take the C. M. railroad to Canal Dover, where they get street car for New Philadelphia. The delegate system being in vogue the basis of votes is one for each six members. All branches should send delegates, and credentials by delegates stating number of members in branch. The division of district, organization of Sunday school work, also whether the district shall prepare for reunion work in 1897, are matters that will come up and should be carefully considered by branches and delegates instructed. A district president and delegates to General Conference are to be elected. Let us pray fervently and earnestly for divine wisdom and guidance for our district work and the work at large. Brn. Griffiths, Short, and others will be with us, we trust. All branch reports and other papers should be in the district president's hands by March 5. Send reports to R. Etzenhouser, Blake Mills, Tuscarawas County, Ohio.

R. ETZENHOUSER, Pres.

Nauvoo district conference will convene March 13 and 14, at Burlington, Iowa. We hope there will be a good attendance from abroad, as there is important business before us; election of district officers and delegates to the General Conference, etc. Will branch presidents be sure to get their reports ready and mail to our district secretary, R. Warnock, Farmington, Iowa, or myself, 1001 South 10th Street, Burlington, Iowa, not later than the first week in March. Also remember the twenty-five per cent collection that was ordered at our last spring's conference to be paid to the district treasurer, J.

L. Wright, 1001 South 10th Street, Burlington, Iowa, for the running expenses of the district. This resolution you will remember requires that all branches take up a collection once a month and twenty-five per cent be paid into district treasury. The financial part of our work should not be neglected. The brethren of the priesthood (this means everybody from deacon up) will please bring or send in their reports in writing. Brethren, come out and bring the Spirit of God with you that we may have a time of rejoicing.

F. M. WELD, Pres.

This is to notify the saints in the Southern Missouri district that the time of our next conference is now changed from March 19 and 20 to March 5 and 6. Let all the branches take notice and act accordingly. This change is made to comply with the late ruling of General Conference that provides that our report shall be sent to Brother Stebbins early in March. We hope the branches in the district will be well represented. Come, brethren and sisters, in the Spirit of Christ. Come prepared to take part in the Sunday school association to be held in the afternoon and evening of March 5.

C. J. SPURLOCK, Pres.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation: Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

MENTAL FUNCTIONS DEVELOPED BY RIGHT EDUCATION.

THE right method of developing in the mass of the population the reasoning power and general rationality which are needed for the wise conduct of life must closely resemble the method by which the intelligence and reasoning power of an individual are developed. Let me, therefore, present here in some detail the main processes or operations of the mind which systematic education should develop and improve in an individual in order to increase his general intelligence and train his reasoning power.

The first of these processes or operations is observation; that is to say, the alert, intent, and accurate use of all the senses. Whoever wishes to ascertain a present fact must do it through the exercise of this power of observation, whether the fact lie in the animal, vegetable, or mineral kingdom; whether it be a fact of physics, physiology, sociology, or politics. Facts, diligently sought for and firmly established, are the only foundations of sound reasoning. The savage has abundant practice in observation; for he gets his daily food only by the keenest exercise of this power. The civilized man, whose food is brought to him on a railroad, is not forced by these elementary necessities to keep his observational powers keen and quick, and many of his occupations call for only a limited use of the observing organs; so that systematic education must provide in his case against the atrophy of these faculties.

For the training of this power of observation it does not matter what subject the child studies, so that he study something thoroughly in an observational method. If the method be right, it does not matter, among the numerous subjects well fitted to develop this important faculty, which he choose, or which be chosen for him. The study of any branch of natural history, chemistry, or physics, any well-conducted work with tools or machines, and many of the sports of children and adults, such as sailing, fishing, and hunting, will develop this power, provided thorough exercise of the observational powers be secured. For the purpose we have now in view, it is vastly better that he study one subject thoroughly than several superficially. The field within which the power is exercised may be narrow or special; but these words do not apply to the power. During this training in accurate observation the youth should learn how hard it is to determine with certainty even an apparently simple fact. He should learn to distrust the evidence of his own senses, to repeat, corroborate, and verify his observations, and to mark the profound distinction between the fact and any inference, however obvious, from the fact.

The next function, process, or operation which education should develop in the individual is the function of making a correct record of things observed. The record may be either mental only,—that is, stamped on the memory,—or it may be reduced to writing or print. The savage transmits orally to his children, or his tribe, such records as his brain contains of nature's lore, and of his experience in war and chase; but civilized man makes continuous and cumulative records of sifted, sorted, and grouped facts of observation and experience, and on these records the progress of the race depends. Hence the supreme importance that every child be instructed and drilled, at every stage of his education, in the art of making an accurate and vivid record of things seen, heard, felt, done, or suffered. This power of accurate description or recording is identical in all fields of inquiry. The child may describe what it sees in a columbine, or in the constellation of Orion, or on the wharves, or in the market, or in the Children's Hospital, and its power of description may be exercised in speech or in writing; but for the benefit of the community, as distinguished from the satisfaction of the individual and the benefit of his family or associates, the faculty should be abundantly exercised in writing as well as speech. In this constant drill the conscience cannot fail to be refined and instructed; for to make a scrupulously accurate statement of a fact observed, with all needed qualifications and limitations, is as good a training of the conscience as secular education can furnish.

The next mental function which education should develop, if it is to increase reasoning power and general intelligence, is the faculty of drawing correct inferences from recorded observations,—a faculty which is almost identical with the faculty of grouping or coordinating kindred facts, comparing one group with another or with all the others, and then drawing an inference which is sure in proportion to the number of cases, instances, or experiences on which it is based. This power is developed by practice in induction. It is often a long way from the patent fact to the just inference. For centuries the Phœnician and Roman navigators had seen the hulls of vessels disappearing below the blue horizon of the Mediterranean while their sails were visible; but they never drew the inference that the earth was round. On any particular topic or subject, it may take generations or centuries to accumulate facts enough to establish a just inference or generalization,—the earlier accumulations may be insufficient, the first grouping wrong, or the first samplings deceptive,—and so the first general inference may be incorrect; but the method, rightly understood and practiced, leads straight to truth. It is the patient, candid, impartial, universal method of modern science.

Fourthly, education should cultivate the power of expressing one's thoughts clearly, concisely, and cogently. This power is to be procured only by much practice in the mother-tongue, and this practice should make part of every child's education from beginning to end. So far as a good style can be said to be formed or created at all, it is ordinarily formed by constant practice under judicious criticism. If this practice and criticism are supplied, it is unimportant whether the student write an historical narrative, or a translation from Xenophon, or a laboratory notebook, or an account of a case of hypnotism or typhoid fever, or a law brief, or a thesis on comparative religion; the subject-matter is comparatively indifferent, so far as the cultivation of accurate and forcible speech or writing is concerned. In cultivating any field of knowledge this power of expression can be won if the right means be used, and if these means be neglected, it will not be won in any field. For cultivating the habit of reasoning justly, however, there is one kind of practice in expressing one's thoughts which has special importance; namely, practice in argumentative composition—in the logical and persuasive development of an argument, starting from well-selected premises and brought to a just conclusion.

Let no one imagine that I am omitting poetry from systematic education. In that highest of all arts of expression, the art of poetry, the four mental functions or operations we have now considered—observing, recording, comparing and inferring, and expressing—may be seen in combination, each often exhibited to high degree. The poet's power of observation often supplies him with his most charming verses. Tennyson noticed that the ash put out its leaves in spring much later than the other trees, and this is the exquisite use he made of that botanical observation:—

“Why lingereth she to clothe her heart with love,
Delaying, as the tender ash delays,
To clothe herself, when all the woods are green?”

The poet's power of describing, and of stirring and inspiring by his descriptions, depends on the combination in him of keen observation, rare susceptibility to beauty and grandeur, spiritual insight, and faculty of inferential suggestion. In four lines Emerson puts before us the natural and spiritual scene at the Concord River, on the 19th of April, 1775:—

“By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard around the world.”

In twenty-eight words here are the whole scene and all the essential circumstances,—the place and season, the stout actors, their rustic social state, the heroic deed, and its infinite reverberation. What an accurate, moving, immortal description is this! Even for logical and convincing argument poetry is often the finest vehicle. If anybody doubts this, let him read again the Twenty-third Psalm, from its opening premise, “The Lord is my shepherd,” to its happy conclusion, “Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life,” or let him follow the reasoning of God with Job, from the inquiry, “Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?” to Job's conclusion, “Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.”

These, then, are the four things in which the individual youth should be thoroughly trained, if his judgment and reasoning power are to be systematically developed,—observing accurately; recording correctly; comparing, grouping, and inferring justly; and expressing cogently the results of these mental operations. These are the things in which the population as a mass must be trained in youth, if its judgment and reasoning power are to be systematically developed.—

KNOW THE “SMALL GRACES” OF LIFE.

Young men should not get the idea that to know the “small graces of life” is useless or frivolous. What we call the “social graces” are very valuable to a young man. That is the great trouble with young fellows who are earnest: they are too earnest, and upon all occasions. They can have a high aim in life, a lofty purpose, and yet not close themselves up to all social pleasures or amenities. Girls feel uncomfortable, and pardonably so, when they go to a concert or any other form of entertainment with a young man who constantly makes mistakes in little things. The small rules and laws which must be observed on all social occasions are not to be frowned down: they are important, and a young fellow makes a great mistake when he considers them beneath him or unworthy of his attention.—

CONFUSION AND A CONFESSION.

BRO. A. B. KIRKENDALL, of Creola, Ohio, sends us a copy of the Christian Leader, for December 15, 1896, from which we take the following letter, for which Bro. Kirkendall asks an insertion with comments:—

WANTED: A CHANCE TO GET AT THE MORMONS.

I have several times in the past year seen a call in the Leader for a competent man to handle the Mormon heresy. I wrote to Bro. R. B. Neal of such a man we have in Michigan, but he never replied. Mr. Joseph Musser, of Beaverton, Gladwin County, Michigan, is without a doubt the equal, if not the peer, of any man in the rank and file of the disciples in the United States in handling the Mormon question. In Michigan he is preferred before Bro. Clark Braden. Bro. Musser himself was a Mormon. He left them a few years ago, and since then he does little besides going about lecturing and debating against them. He has debated with all their strongest men in Michigan till they all avoid him. His recent debate near Howell, Michigan, was with a man imported from Missouri, and it was to their utter defeat. There are but few places where Mormons survive one of his series of lectures, or a debate. Through the wickedness of Mormonism this brother was bereft of his family. He is alone and goes at call to any place to give his help. He was never polished with a college education; and am informed that his sentences are not always up to grammatical law. But such are the damaging facts he has against Mormonism, and such is his mightiness in the use of the Scriptures, that no Mormon can stand before him in Michigan. Personally I have never met nor heard Bro. Joseph Musser; but among our ablest preachers in Michigan are men that attended his debates and lectures, and they without a single exception extol his ability. The M. E.'s of Michigan have offered him one thousand dollars a year if he will join their conference, and go about to rout Mormons that hurt their churches. But, though only a disciple of Christ for two years, nothing can induce him into sectarian ranks. I wrote him recently whether he would go South, if wanted. He now writes me he could go at once if you have need of him. He cares to do nothing but this one thing. Send for him; but pay his expenses and enough for a common living—he asks nothing more. Hand him all around Mormondom in the South, before he comes back, as he can stay among you for a year. L. W. SPAYD.

Owosso, Michigan.

It is pitiable to notice the contemptible things so-called Christians will condescend to do in their contention against a religious opponent. This letter and its publication in an organ devoted to the advocacy of a theory of religion is an evidence of this.

This Joseph Musser may be the ablest man among the Christians as a champion for their defense, or as a sting to their opponents, but it is an unfortunate admission for them to make that it is such a man that secures their admiration. In every place, with perhaps a single exception, where our brethren have any of them met this man, baptisms have followed; and Bro. Hyrum Bronson, who was laboring in Indiana, and then in Michigan, to whom the writer refers as the one "imported from Missouri," won an unmistakable victory when he discussed with him. It may be that these Christians can survive Musser better than they have Mr. Braden, but time will tell.

BORROWED TROUBLE.

THERE is some little unnecessary flutter and anxiety over two of the several things agreed to in the late interview between elders of the Reorganized Church and the Church of Christ.

Please remember that the interview was a purely personal one, and that neither body of people was officially represented, and that no one claimed or held authority to compromise anybody else; especially not the churches to which the persons belonged. One proposition which seems to be questioned by some; that "whenever there are six or more regularly baptized members, one of whom is an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon there is the church," was passed by the church officially years ago, and not one of those present at the interview had any right to ignore the statement, had he felt so inclined.

Another statement which seems to be questioned is the one which states that, "It is agreed that there are individuals in the different factions who hold priesthood." In this all that was intended was to state that priesthood being a calling or responsibility imposed of the Lord, could not be wrested from the individual by human agency, or the person called be relieved of such responsibility until it was answered for to the Judge in the final day of accounts, there might be individuals in some, possibly in all the various factions who had been called in the old-time church unto the priesthood, who had not forfeited that priesthood by wickedness and transgression, and if so that they might now hold it.

While thinking such might possibly be the case it was not intended to say that every person in every faction that had been ordained in that faction necessarily held the priesthood; or that such factions each and all of them were by such statement recognized to be the church, or any part of it; or that those in such factions as might hold priesthood as suggested were entitled to act for the church, and in the name of the church to induct members into such factions and thus into the church; it being understood that each and every case must stand or fall upon its merit the facts being all stated, and the time, place, manner, and actors in the baptism, call, and ordination all to be taken into consideration when the individual case came up for hearing and decision; the rules and laws of the church given of God to govern in each and every case.

Neither church, nor faction of the church, was recognized in the statement as being the church, nor was any right to be called the church affirmed or denied; leaving all such questions to be considered when the time and occasion might warrant, or demand.

Some have written requiring explanation, and asking how we could defend such and such statements. It is unnecessary for us to attempt any defense of the propositions referred to in the HERALD, as they were only intended as the expression of the individual opinions of those present on that occasion; such opinions expressed under the conditions in which the interview was held. In the proper time and place such explanation and defense may be offered as occasion and demand may justify. In the meantime it is given to the HERALD readers as an item of news.

"WAITING PRESIDENTS."

WE commend the article of Bro. James Caffall, entitled "Waiting Presidents" to the HERALD readers, especially those who have charge of meetings to conduct them.

To my mind it is a sad spectacle, and very reflective on Latter Day Saints, to see a president waiting fifteen or twenty minutes after the advertised time for a meeting to commence, wishing and hoping for a few to come, that he might open the meeting. I would suggest that there is no necessity for a president to wait over the time advertised if there is one beside himself present at that time; for Christ's promise reaches down to the twos and threes. And as I take it, it is better for the president to start on time with one, and dismiss when the one and the president have performed an imposed duty, than to wait half an hour after the advertised time. Moreover, punctuality commenced by a president may have a salutary effect on the laggards, whereas should a president wait for a congregation, it might encourage them to practice late attendance. Very much depends on examples.

Stated meetings in all regularly organized branches, time of gathering included, are decided upon by common consent; hence voting for a meeting to open at a stated time is tantamount to a vow to be present at the time voted for. A failure therefore to be present at the time, unless prevented perforce of circumstances, would be a violation of said vow. Further: I notice quite often that when a number of saints assemble before the time of worship, that much talking is indulged in sometimes of a boisterous nature; so that in some cases it becomes difficult for the presiding officer to command silence; and after he succeeds in this, there is quite a chattering going on while the opening hymn is being announced. And I have been praying myself when late comers have been waiting outside for the opening prayer to close, and have been annoyed because of the loud talk of the waiting ones. It may be attributed to thoughtlessness, but ought Latter Day Saints, especially officials, to be thus thoughtless about divine worship? I think not.

Still further: I believe it is the duty of the deacon of a branch to preserve order during divine worship; therefore, if young sisters or brothers so far forget themselves as to misbehave during divine worship, the deacon should make an example of them by a proper reproof.

I by no means advocate Pharisaical straightness, but believe we ought to evince inside and outside of the house of worship a becoming dignity, a gospel dignity suggestive of a medium course. A writer in popular quotations says: "Every fault of the mind becomes more conspicuous and more guilty, in proportion to the rank of the offender. Persons in high stations are not only answerable for their own conduct but for the examples which they may hold out to others. This joined to their advantage of education aggravates their vices, and loads them with a greater share of responsibility."

Whatever may be said of the above, certain it is that we will be held amenable to God for the use or abuse we make of the knowledge obtained. We therefore place ourselves under a grave responsibility in saying that we know, we have a knowledge of the everlasting gospel, for thereby, in a sense, we set ourselves before the world as beacon lights. And I may ask myself, when making this claim, if it comports with that found in Hebrews 5:12. We live and learn; thank God for this privilege.

And recent developments have induced me to resolve that whatever may have been my procedure in the past, the future will not find me imposing hands with a view to raising my fellows to positions of trust without some efforts to point out to the recipient the nature of duties attaching to the accepted position. Nor shall I overlook section 17, paragraph 14, of Doctrine and Covenants.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

REQUEST AND APOLOGY, BY BRO. JAMES CAFFALL.

THE following request from a special assembly of the officers of the Eastern district of South Wales, is sent us by Bro. James Caffall, with a request for its insertion in HERALD, with which we cheerfully comply:—

48 Repton Street, Lime House,

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald.—Please give publicity to the inclosed document. That complained of, as the document shows, is found in the first paragraph in the letter I wrote from Havod, South Wales, October 6, 1896, published in Herald of October 28, 1896, and runneth thusly:—

"The Eastern district, South Wales, convened at six p. m., in a dark, dingy, none-too-clean-looking room in the back slums of Porth, for which one pound was paid; but it was the only public room procurable."

If my understanding does not lead me astray, the only request of the special assembly is the withdrawal of the term "back slums," with which request I hereby comply. Should any further request be made visible in the publication of the minutes of the special assembly of officers of the district, I will duly consider the same. I did not cherish the remotest thought or wish of reflecting on any person; nor do I now cherish such a wish.

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

TIDNALLS, Jan. 5, 1897.

Dear Brother Caffall.—I am appointed to write you by a special assembly of the officers of the district held at Cardiff, December 20, 1896, respecting a letter which appeared in the Herald of October 28, 1896, written by yourself from Havod, South Wales, October 8, 1896.

The clauses over which we feel hurt are these:—

"The Eastern district, South Wales, convened at 6 p. m. in a dark, dingy, none-too-clean-looking, room x in the back slums of Porth."

The first part of the above item to where I affix a cross is true, though the district feels hurt that it should be published, they being fully aware of the condition of the room, and as they did their best they never expected to see it published.

The latter clause, "back slums of Porth," we as a district deny, as the building was situated in the main street of Porth and the room not more than a dozen yards from main street—anything but back slums.

Webster says back slums means a foul back street of a city, especially one filled with a poor, dirty, degraded, and often vicious population; any low neighborhood, etc.

Therefore I am requested to ask you to kindly withdraw through the Herald the words "back slums" and give the place the credit due.

Yours in bonds,

T. S. GRIFFITH,

For the Eastern district.

REQUEST AND STATEMENT.

THE Herald Office has sustained some considerable and unnecessary losses from unpaid subscriptions, because not notified to discontinue publications to subscribers who have deceased; also in some instances to aged brethren and sisters who have become too infirm to read. In some such instances the paper has run on and been either received and read, or destroyed; and no notice been given to stop sending until repeated efforts to collect amounts due have induced final reply. It is desired that wherever possible the office be notified of such and similar cases, that the publishing department, and the interests of the saints to whom it belongs, be protected against unnecessary loss and leakage. The Business Manager, in charge of the business interests of the office, and ever alert to avoid unnecessary drain upon its resources, and to contribute to its success, asks that prompt notice be given in such cases, that unnecessary loss be avoided, by the coöperation of those whose interests are mutual in thus aiding, as in every proper way, the cause.

Since the adoption of the rules published to govern the transaction of Herald Office business, one of which provides that delinquent subscribers be dropped at the expiration of one year's time, unless good evidence of payment is offered, a better order of things in this respect seems indicated. However, there yet remains the need of education in promptness in payment and in other business methods, in order to place the publishing department where it ought to be.

In this connection and as suggested, the following method of transacting business is stated that it may be known: All letters, including orders and remittances, are first received from the mail and entered upon the "register" by the Editorial Department. Those affecting subscription lists are then properly indicated or written on said lists, those elsewhere placed on the order books, or properly credited on account books, and filed in the business department. Thus two or three entries are made of all remittances. Receipts are also sent when orders cannot immediately be filled, the prompt filling of orders being considered sufficient receipt.

By this system one department checks the receipts or entries of another as a protection against errors. The effort is to fill orders by return mail. All not so filled are kept track of and attended to as soon as possible. All goods not sent by return mail are forwarded soon thereafter. Parties not receiving orders at once should wait a reasonable time before renewing.

It is the aim of the management to do everything in its power necessary to the proper and satisfactory conduct of its business relations with the saints.

FOR the benefit of the traveling ministry possibly affected by it Bro. J. C. Foss sends the following card:—

THE ONLY BOAT ON THE ROUTE.

Captain Archebell on steamer, Merryconeg, leaves Rockland for Portland (weather permitting) Tuesdays and Thursdays. Returning morning, leaves Portland Wednesday and Friday mornings. Saturday morning leaves Rockland for Bar Harbor. Returns on Monday.

PEACE A NECESSITY.

LONDON, January 6. — The Berlin correspondent of the Times reports the following is contained in the preamble by Emperor William to a Cabinet order. The Emperor says:—

"It is my will that duels between officers should be more effectively prevented than hitherto. Their occasion is often trifling and amenable to friendly compromise without prejudice to professional honor.

"When they have done so through hastiness or excitement the chivalrous course is to agree to a friendly compromise. It is equally the duty of the one insulted to accept the compromise so far as honor and propriety of conduct will permit.

"My will, therefore, is that a council of honor shall henceforth, as a matter of principle, coöperate in the settlement of affairs of honor. The council must undertake this duty with a conscientious endeavor to arrange an amicable settlement."

The Emperor of Germany deserves credit for his efforts to put a stop to the foolish, semi-barbarous custom of dueling among officers of the army, which so long has disgraced the German soldiery and the German universities. The principles of adjustment which he commends are manly, and contain much strong common sense.

It may be well to observe in this connection that the King of Peace, from whose teachings this earthly king evidently has imbibed his sense of right, has taught that men who profess his name should live in the spirit of amity and concord; that when offense is given or estrangement of any kind occurs, those who profess to follow him should prove themselves strong men and women, above the trifling littleness that would berate another or be guilty of holding malice, and seek one another, "be reconciled," and "live together in love."

It is a question whether men and women whose professed "citizenship is in heaven," from whence they "look for the Savior," etc., are really "civilized" in an earthly sense, much less in a heavenly, if guilty of the harshness and passion of hatred—who love not their brethren "whom they have seen."

These so-called "little things" require attention, because they are prevailing "roots of bitterness" that stand in the way of much personal and general good. They are among the discordant elements that must be eliminated from any body of people, religious or civil, before "lasting progress" can be made.

If the German emperor finds such roots of bitterness a cause for men in his army taking up the sword to destroy one another, and classes the practice as unworthy of soldiers, what shall be said of such influences among professed children of peace? "A house divided against itself cannot stand;" men who hate are in danger of consuming one another; spiritual death is a too frequent and inevitable result of human hatred and failure to become reconciled.

Our message is a proclamation of "peace." Let us carry in our bosoms "gentle peace," however great the apparent provocations to indulge in that that would seek to annoy and vex. He who gains the victory, who "overcomes," is he who seeks strength from God and prevails against the trying conditions about him. We turn again to Christ the Master, who, tried and tempted and subjected to every form of indignity and insult, rose in strength and wisdom above it all, and who calm and with the peace of God in his breast amid all trying scenes, proved himself worthy of the great station he was called to occupy, and looked with pity upon the weakness of men, and loved the race, despite its wickedness and perversity.

Let us have peace; first in our own hearts, then with all others, and extend the influences of peace, in branch, in district and everywhere. No one can grow up into the measure of the stature of Christ without gaining a mastery of himself by the possession of the Christlike nature, by keeping love of both God and man preëminent in his nature.

The German emperor is a war lord, but what he says in the interests of peace adds testimony in favor of that exalted virtue, and from his statements a lesson may be learned. Peace is an absolute necessity. It is of God, and constructive; while contention is of evil, and destructive.

A word from the law of God is opportune in this connection:—

My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another, and forgave not one another in their hearts, and for this evil they were afflicted, and sorely chastened; wherefore I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another, for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses, standeth condemned before the Lord, for there remaineth in him the greater sin. I the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men; and ye ought to say in your hearts, Let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds.—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 2.

OBJECT TO A CHURCH AT WEST POINT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—President-elect McKinley's Secretary of War will be asked when he takes office to rescind the permit granted by Secretary Lamont for the erection of a Roman Catholic church on the government property at West Point, just off the parade ground. Protestant ministers and laymen take the ground that no church, no matter of what denomination, should be permitted on public property, and a movement is on foot to appeal to the courts if the new Secretary of War fails to take action on the matter.

The Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, of Calvary Church, West Fifty-seventh Street, is regarded as the leader of the opposition to the erection of the church. He holds that in granting the permit Secretary Lamont exceeded his authority, and that for a permanent building to be erected on government property it is first necessary to obtain a special act of Congress.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is it permissible to take up collections in the church meeting house, on the Sabbath day, for the purpose of building churches, paying off church debt, etc.?

Ans.—Yes, if that is the best and most convenient time to reach all the membership. If it is right to build a church it is right to raise the money to pay for the material and work in the house so builded, by legitimate ways; and an appeal to the people directly stating the object for which the money is being raised is legitimate and proper.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. ROBERTS, Audubon, Minnesota, the 15th inst:—

Snow so deep can hardly get around. Will finish seats for tent to-day. The saints here are feeling well. Had a glorious prayer meeting last night. They are talking of building a church in town—something very much needed in this part of the country. All well and hopeful.

Bro. John Shields, Cedar Springs, Ontario, the 13th:—

I began meetings at the home of Elder George Shippy, two and one half miles from the above place, and have spoken there some ten times. We have quite a large attendance, good attention, and increasing interest. Elder John Shippy will be glad to learn that his brother Thomas and son-in-law, Mr. Maynard, are regular attendants. May they be led to obey, is our prayer. Elder Shippy and wife have been letting their light shine by upright life and conversation since they came out here from Chatham last spring, as reflected in the number and class who attend our meetings. Elder Green, district president, rules wisely and well. Calls are coming from all quarters for preaching. I hear Bro. R. C. Evans has been doing a big work in Toronto.

Bro. E. DeLong, writing from Saginaw, Michigan, February 14:—

Since writing for the Herald I have baptized one. I am here holding meetings every evening; the interest is good. Last evening the Baptist choir sang for us, which aided us materially. Effectual doors are being opened for us to occupy, for which we are thankful. One aged gentleman, Mr. Mills, the owner of two stores, has offered us the use of one free. So we feel that the gospel is being appreciated. The Saginaw Evening News contained the following: "The Latter Day Saints held a very interesting meeting last night at the home of Mrs. George Sugden, 641 Bundy Street. There was a large attendance and another meeting will be held this evening."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. H. N. SNIVELY, of Lamoni, has been doing some effective labor of late, in Grundy County, near the town of Spickard, Missouri, in the Far West district. He made two trips into that region of country, baptizing two and blessing one child on the first trip, and baptizing three on the second. He reports having enjoyed greater liberty than ever before in preaching, and in administering gospel ordinances.

Sr. Sarah Hoffman writes commending the labors of Brn. J. C. Crabb and J. W. Wight, at Moorhead, Iowa. Attentive hearers greeted the brethren during the severe weather and good was done.

Bro. J. C. Chrestensen reports a good conference of the Spring River district. Unity and large attendance "from far and near."

A dispatch from Athens dated the 21st says the fleets of the powers bombarded the insurgent position in the vicinity of Canea, on that date. No details are given. The same dispatch announces that the Greek dispatch boat Peineios has exchanged shots with a Turkish frigate. It is reported that Greek soldiers and artillery have been landed near Canea. The foreign admirals have warned Colonel Vassos, commander of the Greek forces on the Island of Crete, of their intention to attack his troops with four men of war anchored off his camp, should he attempt to advance to the interior of the island. Another Athens dispatch states that the warning of the foreign admirals only referred to a Greek attack on Canea, and that Colonel Vassos will continue to occupy strategic points in the interior of the Island of Crete. The Greeks are aroused and refuse to retire.

News concerning railway rates to General Conference will be published promptly on receipt of news of action of the Western Passenger Association, which is now considering our application for the usual reduction of one and one third fare for round trip tickets over its lines of road. We hope to announce said reduced rate at an early date.

At the late conference of the Decatur district Bro. R. M. Elvin was chosen to preside. He nominated Bro. H. N. Snively for vice president, the choice being ratified by the conference.

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 2.

OUT ON THE BROAD OCEAN.

MONDAY morning, November 9.—Still running down the "trades" before a fair wind and comfortably smooth sea. Had a nice fresh breeze yesterday and a bright summer day. Most of the days are overcast in this region on account of the great evaporation that is continually going on. The wind hauled some Saturday night so the studding sails were taken in and the yards braced up a little. I hear them now bracing the yards up still more and can tell by the cant and motion of the ship that she is "feil and by." The captain informed us yesterday noon that we were one thousand miles from San Francisco, which is one quarter of the distance, and thus far we have indeed had a splendid trip. The dignitaries among the passengers are, Consul J. Lamb Doty, Dr. Wm. A. Bryant, of San Francisco, and Elder J. F. Burton. Also a Mr. Atwater I shall number among the dignitaries, for he maintains his dignity of character and refuses wine and all kinds of liquor at sea, the only person on board, besides Joseph and I, who does. Some who do not make a practice of imbibing on shore think it not wrong to drink as much as is offered to them at sea, since it is all included in the passage fare.

Wednesday, 11th.—All goes well on board and we still have much reason to be thankful and joyful for the favors received from our heavenly Father. Have had a splendid run since last writing, and still the sea keeps so smooth. It is marvelous how the sea keeps so smooth, when for several hours at a time we will have a ten or eleven knot breeze. Monday evening we were treated to some music during the "dog watch," from a madeup "band." A part of the crew and one or two of the passengers got together on top of the deck load near the mainmast. And right here I will say that this native mate of the ship would make a splendid housekeeper, he keeps things on decks in such perfect order. There is a deck load of freight and lumber on top of it three steps high, then the quarter deck, but it is fixed so neat and orderly that one might think it an improvised platform for a picnic, with seating accommodations nearly all around it. Here the crew gathered with accordeon, fife, drum, two banjos, and bone rattles, with which they entertained us charmingly, while the good ship glided or plowed—she is deeply loaded—through the slightly pulsating waters of the great Pacific. The moon shone back of the clouds, and a clear spot of bright shining stars was just above us. Last evening the moon shone out clear and beautiful. Are now nearing the region of the doldrums. The cardplayers occupy the lower end of the table most of the time, both afternoon and evening, and the captain's wife and the French people from Tahiti are piecing quilts and cutting and making garments, at the upper end, while one of them runs the sewing machine in the bathroom just opposite. So far the bath tub has not been used. It was full to overflowing with parcels and small stores for the cabin, but they are pretty well gone now. The air is soft and balmy. Have donned thinner clothes. Have made a very comfortable change in the furniture of our room. Have exchanged the high round stool for one of the small folding chairs I brought, the one I took such comfort in on the Evanelia, and also got my little folding table in our room. Now I can write and study to my heart's content. Our poor little boat did not find any such smooth sea as this while coming to the islands.

Saturday, 14th.—Are now fairly in the doldrum latitude about eight degrees north; sailed into them about midnight Thursday night between latitude 9 and 10. The thick vapory clouds that had obscured the sun nearly all the way cleared away Wednesday afternoon, and the evening, as well as Thursday evening, was delightful. On Thursday evening the windward half of the quarter deck was literally covered with deck chairs and contented people. There were not chairs enough for all, and some sat on the "hatch." I believe it was the first time that all belonging to the cabin, captain's wife and all were gathered in the same part of the ship at the same time. The weather looked so clear and settled and the ship was going along so nicely we began to hope she was going to slip along past this much dreaded latitude without being deterred by contrary winds. But about midnight we ran into a rainstorm and it continued raining all day yesterday. Once in awhile very heavy rain squalls, but very little wind, and the sea smooth. The wind dead ahead, and continues to be. The weather is still getting warmer and warmer. Have dispensed with all bed clothes except the sheets and white spread. Yesterday was very sultry, so little wind and having to have the cabin closed up mostly on account of the rain. But this morning it is very pleasant. A nice breeze and doors and windows all open. That is, it is pleasant to those who have light clothes; but the poor "nuns" have to keep packed up in their head and neck gear that does not admit of a breath of air, and heavy dresses of blue flannel, about five widths gathered in around the waist. They are only young girls, all of them. The youngest and fairest, about eighteen years old, is very delicate. She was so overcome with the heat the other day she nearly fainted. The next youngest, who had more iron in her makeup, said cheerily, "O well, never mind; if you die you will get to heaven quicker!" And I have thought and wondered more than once while looking upon these young creatures, who have given up all the enjoyment of their youth, and even the hope of it together with the naturalness of their nature; that is, to love and be loved, in order to become more wholly devoted to their Savior, if indeed he did not look upon them in greater tenderness and in pity for them, as well as love for their devotion, breathe into their souls a consolation that we selfish, unsacrificing mortals know little about.

Monday, 16th.—Rained Saturday night again and a calm all day yesterday. The sailors took the opportunity to catch some fish, even if it was Sunday. Caught three large ones. I should think they would weigh ten or eleven pounds each. They were not so nice tasting as smaller ones, but it was fresh fish. During last night they caught a shark and passed a vessel. The latter is a very rare occurrence. We will soon be out of the doldrums now. Have got a fair breeze this morning. I do not mind if we do have a long passage, so long as the weather is good; that is, the sea smooth so I can write. We are as comfortable here as we will be anywhere, and have more time to write than I would have ashore. It has made me lonesome sometimes to think of ourselves in the little Evanelia away out here on this great ocean alone in the dark and surrounded by those heavy squalls. It was a peculiar mission, that of the Evanelia's. Peculiar because of the apparent contending power against her from the time we entered her till we left the islands—and before—speaking for myself. I went trusting entirely in God, and praying more continuously than ever before, and yet scarcely ever able to shake off the feeling that either we or I was under the displeasure of the Almighty. How I would like to have the veil lifted that I might learn these whys and wherefores. I have none of those feelings on this voyage. All within is peace, and this smooth sea and beautiful weather is all that a loving Father could give as tokens of his good pleasure. Blessed be his holy name.

Thursday, 19th.—Our "nice little breeze" that we had Monday morning soon forsook us, and from Monday afternoon till this morning there has been almost a dead calm and raining most of the time. But still we have drifted about eighteen miles in the twenty-four hours. Last evening, though the decks were wet from the all day's rain, the moon shone out beautiful. I donned my rubbers and took my chair out on deck where Joseph was. He goes by the title of Captain all the time here. All the rest gathered about the table as soon as it was cleared—after our five o'clock dinner that we do not get through with till half past six—and set about their favorite amusement of playing cards. When the steward finished washing the dishes and threw the bucket of slop overboard with pieces left from the table it was soon scented by a shark and we—Joseph and I—saw one come to the surface after it. He had swallowed one or two pieces when Joseph told the boy who was at the side to throw over the hook and catch him. It was already baited, and it was not much more than over till the shark swallowed it. Then the excitement of getting him on board brought all on deck. He was not very large, over five feet long. In a few minutes we saw another, and within an hour they caught three, all about the same size. This morning there was a nice little breeze, and the sky became so clear I thought we were out of the doldrums; but it soon dropped away and now there is another rain squall making up, so we are here yet. I have been busying myself this forenoon with ripping up my sateen dress—my birthday dress, Annie—and taking the lining out of it. This warm weather makes one feel like doing away with linings of all kinds. How glad I am that I made up the dress goods you gave me, Sr. Wixom, in a loose garment without any linings at all. It is the most comfortable wrapper I have.

Monday, 23d.—A most delightful morning. We are skimming along over the beautiful blue deep with a fair wind and a clear sky above us. The sun is hot, but the breeze pleasantly cool for being right at the Equator. Will cross to-day. Were in the doldrums just one week; were that length of time drifting through the five degrees. Thursday evening there was quite a gale of laughter in the cabin. Dr. Bryant, who is the chief instigator of amusements, started a paper and pencil to go the round of the table for each one to draft a pig—or perhaps it was a horse—with their eyes shut, and the grotesque looking figures that some made were laughable, especially for the young folks, and true to the old adage, there came a "blow" before morning, not exactly a gale of wind, but enough to have the light sails taken in. It lasted till about four p. m. on Friday. But it was the lize of trade winds that we wanted, so the good ship sped away before it in good earnest. All day Saturday and yesterday there was a good whole sail breeze but not a rough sea. Were it not that the Captain has to call at the Marquesas Island he could have been much farther on our way by taking the benefit of the westward current instead of stemming it. Bro. Burton donned his white pants yesterday.

Editor Sunday School Department:—May we be permitted to review a few of the thoughts we have heard expressed upon uniformity of texts? One argument used in favor of uniformity is convenience, and if that is one of the chief things to seek in this latter-day work, then I suppose we elders will soon have it easier.

Interest, sympathy. "The line is drawn at the responsive reading." And why so? The place of the text is but named in the Quarterly and read from the Bible by the school and why easier to read when we have uniformity than now? Then the review. "Children cannot be expected to be interested," cannot keep still, annoy others, etc. Suppose we had uniformity, could a superintendent make a review alike interesting to one of five years and one of fifty-five? Should not the primary teacher conduct her own review, whatever the text? One says, "I want to give the children a whole Bible, not a Bible with holes in it." Let us see. The same rules of educating apply equally to day and Sunday schools. The day school teacher is teaching the primary class numbers to ten; adding, subtracting, multiplying, etc. Mathematics with a hole in it. Let's teach them algebra and geometry.

The primary teacher is telling the children pretty little stories about Columbus and Washington. She is avoiding the horrifying atrocities of which history is full. History with a hole in it! Why not talk to them of Heary the Eighth's kindness in murdering his wives, or the beauties of Salem Witchcraft, then go on and tell them of all the beautiful butcheries that historians have written up? They must have the whole truth (?).

Grant now that we have uniformity and our lesson is the fourth one of the present quarter. A primary teacher humbles herself before a class of pure little children, and says: "Now, dear children, if you will listen I will tell you a sweet little story of a man named Abimelech. His father had several wives. Of course God had told men not to have but one wife, but lots and lots of them didn't mind. Abimelech's mother was the maid-servant or what we call the hired girl, and her folks lived in Shechem. Abimelech went and coaxed his mother's folks to help make him ruler, but his brothers, not being his own dear brothers, for they had different mothers, did not want him to be ruler. So when he found his brothers were angry with him he killed all of them but one who hid himself. He killed seventy of them on one stone. Then the people made him king. Then Jotham, the brother who got away, told the people that something bad would happen to them. So by and by God sent an evil spirit among them and they commenced war upon Abimelech. One time lots of the men and women came into a big house and Abimelech and his men set it on fire and burned them all up. But sure enough, something bad happened to Abimelech. A woman hit him on the head with a piece of millstone and hurt him so that he thought he was going to die, so he coaxed a man to run a sword through him and kill him. It wasn't brave to be killed by a woman. Remember this, little boys; when you get to be men if you need killing, coax some man to do it. Now see how many of you can remember this beautiful story. I think it will help you to be good this week, and it will be so nice to dream about."

Now, in sincerity, let us ask, What is the aim of the primary work? Is it simply a plan to keep the children still, make it convenient for the teachers and old members, fill the minds with just as much Bible as possible, regardless of its fitness to their needs. Is not its purpose a higher one? "Suffer little children to come unto me," are inspired words, and we believe their full meaning is broad. We are the guardians, the protectors of the little ones, and if we would have them come to Jesus we must take care that we do not block the way by giving them false impressions of God's word. We keep from them strong and unwholesome food because it retards growth and implants the seed of future disease. We keep them from hearing obscene language because it leaves impure impressions. We do not permit them to read criminal news, because it horrifies and tears down the walls of morality rather than building them up. Is ancient criminal news more wholesome than modern?

Our aim is not to crowd the young mind with facts. This is not education. We believe that "it is more important what we make the children love and desire, than what we make them learn." Our earnest aim should be to teach such things and in such manner as to promote a healthy spiritual growth, that when the time comes that they must know the disagreeable facts of past and present, they will have gained sufficient strength of purpose and power of resistance that they may not be overcome nor hindered from following him who taught in childlike simplicity.

If ministers of the gospel can find material for a life's work in the teaching of Christ and his apostles, cannot our Sunday school workers find therein material for a few years' primary work?

Our primary Quarterly is now good in an earnest teacher's hands, why not let well enough alone?

I have nothing at heart but the good of the work.

Ever praying for the good of the Sunday school, I am, Yours in bonds,

H. H. ROBINSON.

SR. ARVILLA CRICHTON, secretary of Zion's Hope Sunday school, of Nebraska City, assures us that their school is not on the decline. They have an average attendance of about thirty-five, and a corps of earnest teachers who have the interest of the work at heart. We are glad to hear such reports.

QUESTIONS.

1. In schools which have but one room, how large should classes be?
2. Should all engage in the general review? If not, who is exempt?

A SUPERINTENDENT, Iowa.

Answers:—

1. Primary, four to seven; Intermediate, five to eight; Senior, eight to twelve.
2. Yes. Why not?

T. A. HOUGAS.

QUESTIONS to be answered by anyone whose work is in this line. Answers must not contain upwards of one hundred words; less preferred.

Superintendents, what use do you make of the blackboard?

Primary teacher, what do you do with the blackboard?

District superintendent, do you see an improvement in your schools during the past year? To what causes do you attribute the same?

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 18.

Editors Herald:—Though I belong to the Egremont branch, in Canada, I have now for some months past had the privilege of associating with the saints here, and find that though many of them are but babes in the work, they are growing in grace and knowledge of the truth. There are also quite a number of Saints living at Alpine, where at present they have the use of a union church, and whenever the missionary help in the city is sufficient, our officers, Elder E. K. Evans and Priest Cavanagh, go and preach at that place, and their efforts are appreciated, which was shown by their giving a donation party for Elder and Sr. Evans last Friday evening. A large number of saints and friends assembled at the home of Bro. Norton, where a feast of good things was enjoyed by all.

During the evening Elder Daniels, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society, presented Elder and Sr. Evans with two beautiful quilts, flour, fruit, vegetables, a cord of wood, and several other articles. Bro. Evans replied, thanking all for their kindness. The Ladies' Aid deserves credit for the way in which it has been working of late, as this is the second donation party it has given lately, showing that the members are desirous of doing good. A number of them do not belong to the church.

An effort is being made to close the church against the saints there, but we hope it will not succeed, for much good may be done,

Elder Daniels is laboring in this city at present and we hope he may be the means of bringing some into the ark of safety who hitherto have been wandering astray. We have a very nice Sunday school here and all seem to come with the desire to learn. This I love to see, though I am not privileged to attend very regularly; for if educated in youth in God's law we will not be so apt to be led astray in after days by the evils of this world.

Your sister,

JENNIE MORRISON.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed you will find a clipping from the Los Angeles Herald, of August 24, 1896, giving an account of an accident and injuries received by Sister H. L. Tilton, of this place, on the afternoon of Sunday, August 23. The statement in detail is correct, so far as known to the writer of this article. On the same evening while the saints were gathering into our place of meeting for the evening service, a strange woman, who proved to be a Mrs. Doctor —, came to the hall with a note from Bro. H. L. Tilton to Bro. C. W. Earle to come at once, saying, "Wife badly injured; ask the saints to pray for her." Bro. Earle, Holt, and the writer hastened to her bedside, finding the message only too true. One was asked to take charge of the administration as he should be led in the matter, and recommended a short season of prayer by each of the three elders present; and so it was done. After prayer was the anointing with oil, then laying on of our hands, and an excellent prayer offered by Bro. Holt, and continued (by her request) by Bro. Earle, who asked the Lord that, if necessary, angels might administer unto her also. The one anointing, asked that the blessing might be of such a marked nature, that those having charge of her should be amazed, or wonder at the rapid return of her health, and that she should be freed from pain and suffering as much as possible; or words to that effect. Thank the Lord for his goodness in granting the above united request, for the same request was voiced by each one of the officiating elders; and to the glory and honor of God we truly testify to the literal fulfillment of said request, for neither fever, pain, nor suffering to the least extent, have been felt by her up till August 29, the last time the writer saw her, save when the attending physician and surgeon has been obliged to change the dressing upon the wounds; and he has repeatedly stated that during his entire experience no patient of his ever had such a remarkable recovery and freedom from fever and pain; saying also that he cannot understand the cause of it. He knows nothing of the administration. On the 29th, just before the writer of this went to the house, she plainly and distinctly felt two hands pressed upon her head, to her there was no other person in the room besides herself, seemingly in fulfillment of Bro. Earle's request that "if necessary angels might administer unto her." Our hearts have all been made to rejoice because of this confirming testimony; added to the many others we have received in regard to the powers of God attending this great latter-day work.

The lady doctor called to see Sr. Tilton two weeks later, and said it was a plain case of faith healing. I am also credibly informed that Sr. Sarah Vanfleet Mills has very recently been just as remarkably healed from a very dangerous case of blood poisoning, under the hands of Bro. N. Vanfleet and A. Carmichael. To God be all the glory for these blessings in our special time of the need of his help.

The statements herein written are true, and ought to have been forwarded to you long before now, but some things have conspired to prevent.

Yours in bonds,

R. R. DANA.

STILLWATER, O. T., Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—Having just read in the Ensign of the encounter the brethren are having with the "Followers," or "True Followers," as they style themselves, I thought I would write what I have learned of them from their own members, having lived here among them for seven years.

Six years ago, after hearing the first sermon from them, I thought the preacher must be a Latter Day Saint, but after conversing with him I found he wanted to date their origin back to Christ and the apostles. I tried to show him that that couldn't be, according to history, and he said he knew nothing about history. Since then I have learned from some of their leading members and elders, though they are loth to tell it, that one McDonald, formerly a train captain across the plains to Utah, and while snow-bound there one winter, learned a great many things about the Latter Day Saints; that afterwards he moved to Southern Kansas with his family and had the reputation of being a very bad man, so much so that his wife was afraid to go out walking with him alone, but he prevailed upon her going and, when out in the woods along the road he said to his wife, "You never heard me pray, did you?" and she answered, "No; nor never expect to." He then wanted her to go off the road a little to pray, and she positively refused to go, being afraid of him, so he went by himself and prayed and there, he claims, the Lord spoke to him and said, "Go preach my gospel." In a few days after he met a man along the road that claimed to be a Latter Day Saint and he baptized McDonald, and he then went out preaching the Follower doctrine. This was about twenty or twenty-five years ago when their church was started.

I have since learned from them that the man who baptized McDonald, claiming to be a Latter Day Saint, was John N. Burton, but who he was I was at a loss to know, until Bro. Heman C. Smith was down here a year ago and told me who Burton was, and that he was turned out of our church. He was accused of preaching and practicing free love.

Now if Bro. Charles Derry, or some one, can furnish us a history of Burton, as we are in a hotbed of Followers, it will be very thankfully received.

What I have written concerning the Followers I learned from them themselves, but don't think I ever would have got it if they had not had hopes of getting me to join them. They believe in faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, etc., and the signs following the believer; only they think it is a command to take up serpents. They have no organization, nor literature of any kind; and on all the rest of the Scripture each one has a belief of his own. They think the Sunday school is of no use, as it is too much like the world.

You can see by this that they were conceived in sin and born in iniquity. Their very fountain head is of the evil one, and it is the most perfect counterfeit I know of, unless it is a sect styling themselves Evening Lights; they leave off handling snakes, and attach in its stead holy sanctification. In fact, if there is anything in the way of an "ism" or "ite" that you haven't got, come to Oklahoma and you can find it.

I hope the missionaries may be able to visit us some time this winter.

Yours in gospel bonds,

S. J. HINKLE.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:—I think this is the first time in a year that I have attempted to write for the Herald, but I feel that I ought to write that the saints abroad may know I am still trying to act my part in the great drama of life.

During the year I have tried to answer all demands made upon me, and I feel that the dear Lord has blessed my labors. While working in St. Thomas the church was well filled, and several very nice people were baptized. One of them is worthy of special notice here,—Mr. Compton,—who for many years has been a leading light with the societies and at present, Grand Master of the County Lodge of Orangemen. He bids fair to be a useful member of the church.

On January 20 I was called to this city to solemnize the marriage of Bro. Pinkerton and Sr. Osbourne. The saints' nice hall was full to the doors. We had a splendid time. I have preached every night (save Saturday) and three times each Sunday since. The congregations have been large, and many lovely people are investigating. I have baptized nine persons since my arrival and expect to baptize five more this afternoon, and think more will follow Monday, who cannot be present to-day. All those baptized are grown, and among the nine are five talented persons. Mrs. Compton is a music teacher; Grandma Seaton plays the piano with great skill, playing at sight anything in the shape of music. Mr. Seaton is Chief Engineer of the Canada Bank of Commerce and has in charge fourteen persons connected with the bank. He is accomplished in music and a gifted singer, as is also his wife. Miss Warnock has been singing in the leading Toronto entertainments for some time. The four last-named never heard a Latter Day Saint sermon till I arrived here. They are friends of Sister Faulds, of St. Thomas, and knew of her condition for sixteen years—a cripple—and how she was instantly healed by the power of God.

Just a word regarding Sr. Faulds. On the 14th January, 1878, Sr. Faulds took sick. For eight months she was confined to her bed, and all that loving hearts and skillful physicians could do, was done. All doctors told the same story: "She will be a cripple for life; she has spinal curvature." She was completely powerless to help herself. She went in an invalid chair for one year and eight months. She then got so that she went on two crutches for three years, then she only used one crutch. Her strength increased so that by the use of a cane and three lifts on the heel of her shoe she was able to get around. Her suffering was awful to bear. The spinal disease had so drawn the cords that one limb was shorter than the other. She remained in this condition twelve years, when she heard the gospel; but to use her own words, "Pride stood in my way and I shut my ears to the truth; but during the years of 1894-95 more affliction came upon me and the cords of my hip were so drawn that I had to wear a cork sole on my shoe, one inch and a quarter in height. My suffering now was almost unbearable. In December, 1895, Elder R. C. Evans was preaching in this city [St. Thomas]. The gospel was again presented to me; my pride still stood in my way. My sufferings increased and at last I was administered to by Elder R. C. Evans. I received such relief that I knew it was the power of God, and on the 28th of February, 1896, I was baptized by Elder R. C. Evans, and from that hour pain seemed easier to bear. When conference convened last April, in Kirtland, Ohio, I sent a request for prayer in my behalf, by Elder R. C. Evans. On the morning of April 9 prayer was offered for me in the temple of the Lord, while I was here in St. Thomas. I felt the Spirit come upon me, but did not realize what it was; I felt a strange power come upon me and I retired to my room, slipped off my heavy boot, and laid down. Not five minutes after I laid down, I felt a hand laid upon the afflicted parts, and the cords relaxed. For a moment I felt afraid, but presently I rose from the bed, healed. The limb which for sixteen years had been bad, was made whole as the other. I know the hand of an angel was laid upon me, and since then I have been free from pain in my hip."

I have given the above from a letter written by Sr. Faulds last week. She had written a letter to the Seaton friends; Bro. Seaton bowed in prayer, requesting that if I was a true servant of God that when I came to his home that God would let his Spirit rest upon him and his household confirming the gospel I preached. I came, the Spirit was upon me the moment I entered the house, giving great light and liberty. When describing the history of Book of Mormon, I seemed to see the waves roll over the boats with a hole in the top and the hole in the bottom. I seemed at times to stand amid the ruined cities of Palenque; my feet seemed to touch the moss-covered roofs of Guatemala. The divine ones seemed sweetly near us while we told of the lonely boy as he bowed in prayer amid the clump of trees; now in Missouri amid hatred and prison bars, now in Illinois a victim of sectarian malice. The darkness from 1844 to 1860 seemed to come to memory, then the sweet white light of 1860 came upon us as we told of God's love and message to the seed of the prophet. All were in tears, and Bro. Seaton said, "It is enough; I wish to be baptized." I arose, addressed the mother, wife, and Miss Warnock; all said, "We also wish baptism." I have thought that if fifty had been in that room under that sweet Spirit none would have refused to obey the gospel message. Sr. Seaton had been sick, but that did not matter; her first outing was to go to Lake Ontario, where a hole was cut in the ice and she with six others was baptized. To God be all the glory.

The calls are more than I can fill; I am at it all day and sometimes nearly all night. A sample: Last Saturday I talked till I was tired out, reaching my room at two o'clock Sunday morning. I presided over prayer meeting at nine a. m., preached three sermons, then found my bed at three o'clock Monday morning. When I left London some time ago crowds thought I did wrong to leave. When I left St. Thomas large congregations thought it unwise for me to go. Now the people here say it is a sin to leave this city when so many are interested; but what can I do? The mission is large, with few missionaries, and all doing what they can. Will the saints soon learn that if they pay their tithing more elders could take the field. Then we would not be compelled to leave each place so soon.

I am requested to address the people on temperance in the Pavilion in this city. More than two thousand people are said to attend those meetings. Saints all along the line, have patience; we will fill our engagements as soon as we can. Please pray that strength be given me for my work.

R. C. EVANS.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—I closed a very interesting series of meetings about January 18. I was well cared for by Bro. and Sr. Clark, whom I found to be live saints, and willing to make a great sacrifice to get the restored gospel before the people; and I am satisfied their efforts will result in much good, as I was informed by their neighbors that their daily walk was commendable to the world. Bro. Clark is night engineer at the coal mines, and could not attend our meetings; but he hired a janitor and paid all expenses of the meetings, such as light and fuel. I also had the assistance of Brn. Merrill and Cook, of Des Moines, who attended our meetings.

After leaving Youngstown I returned to Warren County, and had the pleasure of baptizing Bro. and Sr. Bare's son Bertie, aged sixteen years. This was a cause of great rejoicing to both father and mother. There are a number more there very near the kingdom.

The Christian Union Church people of this place (Milo) have again refused us the use of their church, which so disgusted one of the best citizens of that place that he, though not a member of our church, circulated a subscription paper for a Latter Day Saints' church, and showed his faith by his works, for opposite his signature he signed for one hundred dollars. While at this place I saw the inclosed clipping in the Milo paper:—

"Get your eye on that little sprinkle of Mormonism. It has raised a little blister over at Summerset. Some one pick it just a little and let the water out. She will dry up and won't leave a scar."

I then started to look after that "little sprinkle of Mormonism," as I am the one who in God's hands sowed the seed there, and I am assured much of it has fallen in good soil. On my arrival there one of the M. E.'s best men met me and said: "Bro. Kephart, there has been two men here to knife you, but both bent their knives and left." I found that as soon as I went away from this new field the M. E. preacher and his colaborer came here and made an attack on me, and "Mormonism" as they called it, as follows: He had his regular appointment after Sunday school and during a few minutes' intermission he said I was trying to tear down other churches. Members of his own church told him he had said more about others in that few minutes than I had in two weeks, and when he got ready to preach the people had left and he had no congregation to preach to. He left an appointment for the next Tuesday evening, but as there were but fifteen or twenty to hear him, he told them when he left he would not come back again until he was sent for. He took for the subject of his discourse Joseph Smith, the Bible, and false prophets. I left an appointment there for February 16, and will use the same subject, and will give him an invitation to attend.

I am now at Runnells, and will stay here until I go to conference at Des Moines. I preached Mrs. Hammer's funeral sermon yesterday in the saints' church. Had a full house.

Yours in the conflict for truth,

W. H. KEPHART.

ELGIN, Cal., Jan. 31.

Editors Herald:—Although I have been a resident of the Dos Palos Colony, California, for the past five years, I don't remember to have seen a line from this place in the Herald. We have a community of eastern people here, mostly from Iowa and Nebraska; but some from several other States settled on small farms of from ten to forty acres each, taken from what was formerly a large ranch. There are two church organizations here, the Christians and Methodists, besides representatives of several other churches, the Dunkards, Brethren, Presbyterians, Adventists, and last and about least in point of numbers, Latter Day Saints. The Methodists have a church building but the Christians hold their services in one of the schoolhouses.

There is but one member of our church here (Sr. Foreman) besides my family. There has been preaching by our elders at occasional intervals ever since we have lived here; first by Bro. J. M. Putney and then by Brn. Burton, Clapp, Harris, Scott, and last October Bro. Joseph Luff preached for us a week; and although the preaching has all been good and the elders complimented generally by those who heard, the people seem very reluctant to leave their old traditions.

There have been five baptisms in five years, but three of them were children of the saints (one family having moved away since); one was a believer before coming here and one, only one, was converted and baptized from among strangers to the faith. But it is a long lane that has no turn, and as there are several interested and reading our literature now, I have bright hopes for better results in the future.

I am doing what I can by way of private talk and distribution of reading matter to keep up and increase the interest in the best religion on earth. Bro. Burton, who has been here three different times is always well spoken of and respected, and Bro. Luff is highly complimented and accredited with unusual ability. We wish they both could come again. Yours for the truth,

J. W. STEELE.

ACAMPO, Cal., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—We mourn the loss of the Gospel Boat and other things, but it should not lessen our faith. Remember that the Lord will have a tried people, and we must be tried and tempted, one in one way and another in another.

I have had many trials I never expected to have. I am not so overanxious to convert my friends as I was in years that are past, for the reason that the Lord knows the heart of every one and he will draw those that are his; he will lead his sheep. We know some are to be foolish and some wise. To see both should only increase our faith in the work. Some most near and dear to me sprang up like beautiful and lovely flowers, but when trials and temptations came, according to the word they fell back to the paths of the world, and like plucked flowers in the north wind! O may our heavenly Father give us his Spirit, and grace, and strength, and peace. I ask in fasting and prayer that we and our children may see the redemption of Zion.

KINGFISHER, O. T., Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—Since coming to Oklahoma I have labored in connection with Brethren Macrae, Toney, Hilliard, Butler, and Maloney. Bro. Hilliard's visit and labors were timely and much appreciated. Such testimonies as his have not often been borne in this land, and were very strengthening to the saints.

For good reasons Bro. Toney returned to his home in Indian Territory. On January 23, in company with Bro. Butler, I wended my way to "D" County, Oklahoma, where I met Bro. R. M. Maloney and the resident saints. After a few days labor among them I proceeded to organize them into a branch, to be known as the Canadian Center branch; R. M. Maloney in charge, and Sr. Maloney as clerk. The branch numbers fifteen members with good prospects of additions soon. The weather has hindered our work some this winter. We have had rain and snow till Oklahoma lands are pretty well soaked up. Calls come from every quarter, more than we have men or time to fill. There are a good many saints in Oklahoma but scattered a few in a place, so that organization is impracticable at present; but with continued effort of the missionaries coupled with the good examples of resident saints we may look for grand results for the Master's kingdom in the near future in Oklahoma.

While in "D" County, by vote of the branch Bro. Frank F. Vrooman was called and ordained to the office of an elder, under the hands of R. M. Maloney and the writer. We also blessed the young stranger that has come to bless the home of Bro. and Sr. Maloney, who bears the name of Richard Montague Maloney. May he grow to be a blessing indeed.

From here I expect to make my way to Stillwater, Payne County, Oklahoma, where I will labor till time to go to conference.

The ministry of the Southwestern mission will please take notice and address their March reports to me at Stillwater, Oklahoma; and let us have your reports in time, brethren. Yours for life,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

SCRANTON, Kan., Feb. 17.

Editors Herald:—Conference here 13th and 14th inst., was not largely attended, owing to a good deal of sickness and bad roads. Report from committee appointed to solicit money to buy tent, showed fifty-three dollars subscribed, nearly all of which is already collected. Committee was continued and another appointed to purchase tent. Additional contributions will be gladly received. Send to Bro. P. Cadwell, president committee, Burlington, Kansas.

Brethren will please send reports due March 1 to me at Topeka, Kansas.

Praying that the Spirit of the Lord may guide us, and that the coming General Conference may confer additional strength and success to the gospel of light, I am,

Yours faithfully,

DO THE ERRORS, WEAKNESSES, AND ILLITERACY OF MEN WHO CLAIM TO HAVE DIVINE MISSIONS INVALIDATE THEIR CLAIMS?

WHILE reading the History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as recently published, my mind has been impressed to consider the above question. Ever since this latter-day work began the world both professedly Christian and the avowed reprobate portion has taken every pains to search out and publish broadcast all the real or imaginary evidences of human weakness found in the life of its earthly founder and his colleagues, and it has paraded them through the press and from the pulpit, and even in the schoolroom, the college and university, for the purpose of blackening the character and destroying the influence of these men, that they may destroy the work they are seeking to perform. This was the course the Jews adopted against Jesus the Christ and his followers nineteen hundred years ago. This course is adopted to-day from the mistaken idea that whomsoever God has called to be coworkers with him in the redemption of the race must be free from all the weaknesses of human nature, incapable of stooping to the follies of the world, and almost infinitely above the gross evils that degrade humanity, and hence if he who claims to have a divine mission is found guilty of any evil, it is infallible proof that his claim is false.

They forget that if the founders and promoters of the conflicting systems now passing under the name of Christianity were weighed in their own false balance, they and their systems would be found woefully wanting in their claims as the chosen oracles of Christ.

It is not my intention to apologize for any wrong that may have been done by those connected with this work that I firmly believe God has established in these last days, no matter whether the perpetrator be prophet, apostle, or layman; but I purpose to show that this rule of judgment adopted by the enemies of this church would be equally destructive to the claims of every prophet and child of God that has lived upon the earth, Christ alone excepted.

It is written:—

The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one.—Psalms 14; Rom. 3.

I understand this language in a comparative sense, as Isaiah confesses, "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags," i. e., compared to the righteousness of God. (Isaiah 64.) At the time of the deluge there was a righteous Noah, and in corrupt Sodom there was a "righteous Lot," at least comparatively so. Among the captives in Babylon there was Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego; but none of these could claim infallibility nor perfect righteousness. Nor did the prophet of God in these last days claim perfect righteousness; he confessed his weakness and his sins in deep humility, which confession is a strong evidence of the desire of his heart to do right and only right before God and man. But to my task.

Holy Writ says, "God made man upright, but man sought out many inventions," wicked inventions. If any human being should have been above the allurements and wiles of Satan, our Father Adam should have been that man, with a nature uncontaminated and in a world where sin had never shown its hydra head. Yet he fell a victim to the serpent's cunning and all humanity has felt the curse. The history of the earliest patriarchs is too brief to enable us to know much of their lives, the murderous act of Cain is too well known, committed as it was ere evil had become rampant over all the face of the earth; the lust of Lamech is not hidden and has been the bane of humanity in all the succeeding ages. The fact that it is written that "Enoch the seventh from Adam walked with God," leaves room for the inference that even in that early age, those who did "walk with God" were comparatively few. It will not be denied that Noah was called and chosen of God as a preacher of righteousness and prophet of the Most High, yet in an unguarded hour after he had beheld the wondrous power of God in the great deluge, and his goodness in preserving him and his family and hearing the voice of Jehovah and "walking" with him, he is found guilty of drunkenness. Abraham, called "The Friend of God"—The Father of the Faithful—gave proof of his fallibility in taking Hagar to be his concubine, instead of trusting in the promise of God respecting his posterity. The fact that God afterward commanded him saying, "Walk before me and be thou perfect" is evidence that he had not hitherto walked perfectly before God. Jacob, the beloved and highly favored of God, like Abraham, with the divine presence, and also the ministrations of angels, was so human as to permit himself to become the tool of deceit, imposing upon his aged and blind father in order to cheat his brother out of his paternal blessing. Then in turn he becomes the victim of deception by the cunning of Laban in the affair of his marriage with Leah instead of Rachel whom he loved and for whom he labored seven years. He afterwards yields to the envious and jealous demands of Rachel and Leah in raising up seed by their handmaids.

I pause here to ask our enemies, Why do they not criticise the inspiration of the Patriarch Isaac and his inability to detect the deceit of Jacob? And the same question will apply further on. Passing over the acts of the twelve patriarchs, we come to a Moses, whom the Lord raised up to be an instrument in his hand to deliver Israel from Egyptian bondage. There has never been such manifestations of power as this man beheld, yet he sinned at the waters of Meribah, and his sin was so grievous that in consequence he was denied the privilege of entering into the promised land.

Aaron, the brother and coworker with Moses, and who had been eye-witness of the wondrous power of God in the plagues of Egypt—the destruction of the firstborn, the dividing of the Red Sea, and the delivering of Israel from Egyptian bondage—and was witness of the terrors of the Lord in the thunders on Mount Sinai, could so far forget himself as to yield to the people's demands and make a golden calf; and the people worshiped it and said, "These be thy gods, O, Israel."

Gideon, favored of God by angelic ministrations, and made a witness of the Almighty power, yielded to the lusts of the flesh and led Israel into idolatry. David, the Lord's anointed, and the sweet singer of Israel whose devotional Psalms have inspired the hearts of God's worshipers during all the succeeding ages, was guilty of the foulest crime that can stain the hand and heart of man,—adultery and blood guiltiness.

Solomon renowned above all men for wisdom, and to whom "the Lord God of Israel appeared twice," yet his heart was turned away from the Lord, he went after strange women and worshiped strange gods.

A man of God came out of Judah by the word of the Lord unto Bethel and prophesied against the king Jeroboam, and after delivering his message he turned to go home by the way the Lord had commanded him, but a lying prophet met and persuaded him to go another way; his disobedience was punished, a lion met him in the way and slew him. Here we find another instance of a prophet of God being deceived, proving that prophets have no claim to infallibility; but the word of the Lord, which they bear, never fails nor returns unto him void.

Hezekiah, the king whose life was lengthened fifteen years, and before whose eyes God caused the shadow of the sundial to turn backward ten degrees as a sign that his prayer was heard and answered; yet in his vanity he offended God by displaying his riches before the king of Babylon's messengers.

Isaiah, one of the most gifted of the prophets, who declared, "I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple," also declared, I am a man of unclean lips; and afterwards confesses, "We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags."

Coming down to the time of Christ, we find him choosing humble and unlearned fishermen to be his witnesses unto all the world. We find these men weak and yielding to envy and jealousy and sometimes full of doubts, notwithstanding they behold the omnipotent power of God made manifest through him. And among them we find a treacherous Judas betraying his Lord, a Peter to whom God had revealed the glorious and soul-cheering truth, upon which is based every righteous hope of humanity—that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God—is found in the hour of trial denying his Lord! Could human weakness be more evident? Yet to this man it was afterward said by his risen Redeemer, "Feed my sheep." We shall search in vain for perfection in any of the servants of God who have lived either in ancient or modern times, but we shall find a grand army who were marching on to that much to be desired goal in all ages. And many thank God who are still marching on until they shall have risen "unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Reader, none of these instances of weakness or wrong disprove the truth of the messages that those men bore to those to whom they were sent; nor do they even invalidate their testimonies, nor destroy the claim that they were honored of God to be his messengers. Neither did the fact of their weakness furnish any just excuse for rejecting their messages. Just as surely as God had spoken unto those men, just so surely did the promised blessings follow obedience to the word, or cursings to those who rejected it. God did not clothe men with infallibility, no true prophet of God ever claimed it, they only claimed infallibility for the word of God. This is the exact position of the ministers of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Neither do we claim that the weakness of ancient prophets is any excuse for wrongs on our part. We bow with reverence to the word, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." Yet with Isaiah we are ready to exclaim, "I am a man of unclean lips;" but we believe in striving for that "holiness" without which, it is written, "No man shall see the Lord." But the charge is made that Joseph Smith was an illiterate man! So were the Apostles of the Lamb, and it is said of Jesus he never learned letters. Paul assures that:—

Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence.—1 Corinthians 1: 26-29.

Gentle reader, God has not changed; hence this latter-day work is in perfect harmony with the work of God in all ages. Joseph Smith and his colleagues did not come to us claiming infallibility, and God has given us a rule by which we can test them.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.—Isaiah 8: 20.

When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken.—Deut. 18: 22. (Jeremiah 28: 9.)

Again:—

In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.—Matt. 18: 16. Try the doctrine taught and the revelations received by Joseph Smith and the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by the above unerring standard. Do not condemn without examination, nor accept the hearsay stories of priests and newspapers, or pretended histories written by our enemies, but weigh both sides and then judge a righteous judgment for, "With what judgment ye mete to others it shall be measured to you again," and while investigating seek the Holy Spirit's guidance.

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.—James 1: 5.

CHARLES DERRY.

EXPLANATION.

IN "Church History" lately issued from the Herald Office, I note the following:—

Joseph in his account of the conference held in June, says:—

On the sixth of June the elders from the various parts of the country where they were laboring came in, and the conference before appointed convened in Kirtland.—P. 192.

The statement of Lyman Wight is recorded as follows:—

On the fourth of June, 1831, a conference was held at Kirtland, Ohio, represented by all the above-named branches.—P. 193.

While the statement of P. P. Pratt is thus recorded:—

On the sixth of June, 1831, a General Conference was convened at Kirtland, consisting of all the elders, far and near, who could be got together.—P. 194.

To the foregoing I add the statement of Joseph Smith and Heman C. Smith, the compilers and authors of the present History:—

It will be observed that in the accounts given above there is a discrepancy of two days in dates; one, giving the date of the convening of the conference as June 4, the other two as June 6. The exact date is not important, only as it concerns the correctness of history. The difference could easily occur through a mistake of either the scribe or the typographer. June 4, of 1831, fell on Saturday, and the 6th on Monday. According to the custom which has since obtained the conference would be the more likely to meet on Saturday, yet it may have been on Monday.—P. 194.

The prevailing custom of district or quarterly conferences of the present convening on Saturday, would furnish no evidence that the General Conference of 1831 convened on Saturday. I might be asked, "How do you know it was a General Conference?" My answer would be, The organic law of the church provides that "every . . . high priest is to be ordained by the direction of a high council or General Conference."—D. C. p. 97. There was no "high council" in the church in June, 1831. High priests were ordained at the conference of June, 1831. The composition of that June, 1831, conference shows that it was a General Conference; for "all the elders, far and near, who could be got together, were met at Kirtland."

Some years ago Wheeler Baldwin, now deceased, who was chosen and ordained a high priest, June 4, 1831, gave me a minute and particular account of that gathering of 1831. He said that "the Prophet Joseph called the elders in from their fields of labor to meet in conference for important business;" that "the conference was set for June 6;" that "during the afternoon of June 4, most of the elders having arrived, and it being learned that a mob was forming to prevent the assembling of the conference, Joseph requested the elders to come together that evening." That "they met in a barn, and Joseph instructed them concerning the priesthood; its powers, privileges, and authority." That "Joseph named a large number for the office of high priest," and that he with many others was ordained that night, the mob not interfering with the proposed conference; that it met according to appointment on June the 6th, and that that which was transacted the night of June 4 was included in the proceedings of the conference of June 6.

This, to me, was and is ample explanation of the discrepancy in dates. He also spoke with great earnestness and feeling of the great power and manifestation of the Holy Spirit during that meeting of the night of June 4, when the "Melchisedec priesthood was manifested and conferred for the first time upon several of the elders."

Respectfully submitted.

"IF I WILL, SAITH THE LORD."

THE Utah Church in accepting as divine the alleged revelation teaching the doctrine of the plurality of wives, and insisting upon an acceptance of the same along with other things as being necessary to salvation, stands committed to that theory, and until acknowledging its falsity and their own error in accepting and promulgating it, must either stand or fall with its truth or untruth, whether they by force of circumstances practice its teachings or not. Regarding the often made claim of that church that the words in the Book of Mormon, Book of Jacob second chapter, "For if I will, saith the Lord of hosts raise up seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise they shall hearken unto these things," means a raising up of seed to himself by fleshly means, and in the very ways he had himself through his prophet characterized as abominable before him, seems to me to be too trifling and absurd to consider seriously were it not that it is used and has become a favorite means on the part of the Utah Church of catching the unthinking and unwary. God's law relating to fleshly generation is clearly taught in the Book of Mormon as follows:—

Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the work of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none; For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women.

Thus agreeing with his will as shown in Matthew 19:5:—

For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh.

See also Doctrine and Covenants 42: 7:—

Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart and shall cleave unto her and none else.

Also Doctrine and Covenants 49: 3:—

For marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

Why? Now comes an answer which was evidently intended to apply so long as the principle of fleshly generation shall continue:—

And all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man according to his creation before the world was made.—D. C. 49: 3.

We see then by this that there could arise no need of God commanding his people differently than by the rule he here explicitly says is entirely adequate for the purpose and was given that it might so accomplish God's purpose according to the spiritual creation before the world was made, making it impossible for any change to be made, so that the earth might fulfill its great destiny. Thus was God's own plan clearly stated regarding fleshly generation.

But what about those words, "For if I will, saith the Lord of hosts, . . . I will command my people"? It looks to me as if the answer may be found without much difficulty, in something like the following teachings under the new covenant:—

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.—John 1: 12, 13.

This is the only way God has ever revealed whereby he will raise up seed to himself, except in the single exception of the birth of Christ, the only begotten son of God, unless Paul was mistaken,—the new and living way, "the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father" (Romans 8: 16).

Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel: neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. [See a distinct recognition by the Apostle of the monogamic principle alone as being acceptable to God.] That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God.—Rom. 9: 6-8.

Plainly, that never was, never will be, God's way of raising up seed unto himself. But Paul continues to reason:—

The children of promise are counted for the seed.

The statement in the Book of Mormon evidently, in the light of God's word as given therein and in the New Testament and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, is as much as to say, Never mind any thought that may be presented to you of a necessity arising of raising up a people to God by any other means than the plan I have appointed whereby ye shall have one wife, and concubines ye shall have none; for if I will raise up children unto me I will command my people and they shall arise unto me by virtue of obedience to my commandment, and "not by the will of the flesh nor by the will of man, but by the will of God;" even by the law of adoption whereby the Gentiles become the children of Abraham, and also whereby even the children of Abraham who through sin have been rejected shall also become in the fullest sense the children of Abraham, according to the promise and by obedience to God's command which says to Jew and Gentile alike:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3: 5.

Hence except by obedience to God's spiritual law no one born of woman can become a seed or child of God, except by obedience to the new and living way. But by obedience thereto unto as many as will come shall be fulfilled the wonderful vision of Patmos:—

After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues, stood before the throne, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands.—Rev. 7: 9.

ORGANIZATION OF CENTRAL NEBRASKA.

A convention of delegates of the Clearwater and Evanelia Sunday schools met at Clearwater church, at five p. m. for the purpose of organizing a district association, previous notice having been given to all the schools of the district by J. F. Mintun by reason of authority given by Superintendent of General Association. The delegates were, Levi Gamet, of Clearwater Sunday school, Belle Wisdom, Mae Downey, Jesse Louchs, Hartman Ek, Morgan Crosser, Ezra Brumbaugh, and L. H. Downey, of Evanelia Sunday school. The association was called to order by J. F. Mintun and after opening by song and prayer Sr. Belle Wisdom was elected secretary. By motion it was decided that we organize an association of the Central Nebraska district. Said organization was effected by electing Sr. Belle Wisdom-Inman, district superintendent, Sr. Ella Neece, of Meadow Grove, assistant superintendent, Sr. Hattie Crosser, of Inman, secretary, Sr. Grace Smith, of Clearwater, treasurer. The following delegates were elected to represent the association at the next General Convention: J. F. Mintun and Belle Wisdom. The delegates were given authority that if either one were present at the convention the full vote of the district should be cast. The Zion Sunday school, of Shelton, Nebraska, requested to be a member of the association and was accepted.

DISTRICT ASSOCIATION SECRETARIES.

I have sent blank reports to each district secretary whose address I have. These reports I would like to have filled out and sent to me promptly after the last convention prior to the General Association meeting on April 3. Please have these blanks filled out as complete as possible and be sure to put on them the names of the officers selected for the coming year together with their post office address.

Please call the attention of the district convention to the proposed amendments as found in Herald of January 6, 1897, and have the convention instruct the delegates how to vote.

Send me the list of delegates chosen when you send the reports.

If you are not supplied with blanks, you can get both the reports from the schools to the district association and the district association to the General Association, also copies of the Constitution and By-Laws, at the Herald Office.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large.—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,

Herald, about.....4,000 "

Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

HIGH PRIESTS' QUORUM.

To the Brethren of the High Priests' Quorum, Greeting.—The members of the High Priests' Quorum are hereby respectfully requested to forward their annual reports to the quorum, to the secretary, Elder H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa, at the earliest convenience, so that he may have them all to present to the quorum by the 6th of April at the latest.

Please state amount of labor done and where, also the present positions occupied by you, present desires and determinations as regard this great work. It would be a pleasure to meet with as many of the quorum at the coming General Conference as circumstances will permit, and especially those who are actively engaged in the general ministry, or those who may desire to respond to such calls as the conference may determine upon.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES DERRY.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On February 20 I mailed a blank report to each member of quorum. Should any fail to receive same, if they will notify me I will mail them another. We would like to have all that can meet at General Conference. Last year there were not enough of our members present to hold a quorum meeting. Please answer all questions asked in blank report and send same to me not later than March 30.

ARTHUR ALLEN, Sec.

2210 Wabash Ave., KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Members of the Fifth Quorum of Elders are requested to send reports of labor done during the year, so that they may be received not later than March 20. A quorum resolution provides that names of members not reporting for two consecutive years shall be dropped from quorum record. Several failed to report last year. Brethren, let us make our report this year as complete as possible. Reports may be sent to President Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa, or to the Secretary at Ridgeway, Missouri. If any have failed to receive report blanks write to the secretary.

D. W. WIGHT, Sec.

SECOND QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Will the brethren of said quorum please send their reports to me at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, Box 222, by April 1, if possible. Those not having blanks please drop me a card and I will send them one at once.

S. D. SHIPPY,

President of Quorum.

FOURTH QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Please send in your annual reports to me by the 15th of March. It takes some means to run our quorum. We are in arrears about $5.65, and a little from each of the brethren will help our cause. Remember the resolution passed at our organization, that a member failing to report for two years will be dropped from the quorum. At our last report we had forty-three members, and last year only twenty-six members reported. It will be your own fault, brethren, if you are dropped. Those that have not blank reports, I will be glad to send them to you.

In bonds,

GEORGE EDWARDS, Sec.

803 Walnut St., KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Please take notice that an amendment will be offered as follows: Change Article five of Constitution of Local Societies to read as follows: After the word "semiannually," at the second meeting on January and July, or last meeting in January and July.

TO DISTRICT AND BRANCH CLERKS.

During the conference year now drawing to a close nearly all the district clerks have done well in sending branch reports to the General Recorder promptly, and by this method the crowding of matter at the latter part of the season may be avoided. Only three districts in the United States are much behind in sending reports.

But it is necessary that the February and March reports should also be forwarded promptly after the conferences, in order that all the reports that time permits of may be placed upon the General Records before making out the annual report of the whole church. All who are concerned, particularly district presidents and clerks, will oblige by seeing to this matter without delay after their conferences adjourn.

Branch officers should also see to it that statistical reports are made out and presented to their branches before the conferences of their districts convene for the final sessions of the year.

During the year many district and branch clerks have promptly given information and corrections of records in reply to my inquiries. But many remain unanswered of the six hundred inquiries made about branch records and reports and other matters since last March.

In sending reports please send the original copies, and do not mutilate them by cutting off portions. Send the whole sheet, unless the report shows no changes at all. In that case cut the blank on the line between "Where Ordained" and "By whom ordained," and send me the two folds, one of which contains the statistical data of membership, etc.

Do not make the reports into a hard roll. If you have no large envelopes then fold the reports as usual and place them flat in some wrapping paper and tie a string firmly around the ends and across the package. Anyway a piece of manilla paper and a string is better than poor quality envelopes even if they are large sized ones. Many poor ones are all broken open when they arrive here and part of the contents may be lost for all that can be told, sometimes.

Do not send reports and other written matter at newspaper rate of postage. Pay two cents for each ounce or fraction thereof to make sure that the reports are sent according to law.

District clerks should have a regular statistical account with each branch. Make a tabular form on the back leaves of your district record or minute book, there showing each quarter (or regular reporting time) what branches reported and how many members, gains, losses, etc., each branch stated or was found to have. Then, when the next reports come it can be seen whether the new reports start with the number that the last preceding ones closed with, also if the numbers of officials agree, plus new ordinations or minus removals or deaths of officials. Frequently I receive reports that say that the previous report closed with quite a different number from what it actually did close with, as I prove by hunting the report from the files in the vault. A branch may not report for a year or two, but if you have such a tabular account you can turn to it and see if the present report is in harmony with the former report, or not.

Again, some reports do not agree with themselves, but have quite a different footing on the statistical fold from what is shown of gains and losses on the face of the report.

Also they may state that so many have been baptized, or received, or died, or have taken letters, and yet fail to give all the names thus required by the report, with the items of birth, baptism, etc., with the names added, and statement of how and when lost with the names counted out as no longer members of said branch. Therefore the necessity that all details should be examined and compared.

When any discrepancies or errors are found do not let such reports pass the conferences. The reports should be corrected, either by officers of the branch who are present, or they should be sent back to the branch for correction, unless the district clerk can and will make it his special business and interest to see that all corrections are obtained as soon as possible, either by correspondence or by visiting the branch and obtaining items and corrections.

All this would prevent some of the daily burden of writing to branches everywhere for a correction of their reports and records (to agree with themselves and with past records and reports) which is a large part of the labor as Recorder, by reason of carelessness and inaccuracy upon the part of those who baptize, or who act as clerks, or scribes, in trying to make a record of events. Thus there rises a constant conflict in regard to dates and places, and the evil seems endless. It is discouraging, after years of labor, to find that so little interest is taken by many and that the same ground has to be gone over and over year after year, in the effort to have the times and places of birth, baptism, ordination, etc., etc., agree, in the various branches where they are recorded.

SUGGESTIONS TO BRANCH CLERKS.

1. Always have a small memorandum book and a lead pencil in your pocket, and then if anything occurs in branch meetings or elsewhere that should be recorded you will be prepared to write it down, not have to trust your own or to some other person's memory.

2. In making out branch reports endeavor to classify the items by themselves; as, for instance, place all the new baptisms first on the report; then put next those who have been received by certificate of baptism (if any), and, third, the names of all who have united with the branch by letter of removal. Afterwards give the names of those removed by letter, and the deaths and expulsions. In many cases these various items are badly mixed together on reports, and not in the order of their dates either. Names of those baptized early in the quarter or half year are sometimes placed after those baptized later in the quarter, and interspersed with names of those received, removed, expelled, and died.

3. It is not needful to give the full items of those who are reported as removed, expelled, or dead, yet there are so many of the same given name, and so often the initials are left out by the clerk, that it would be well to write the birth date of each one thus reported lost to the branch, so that the district clerk and General Church Recorder may be certain as to the person thus removed, expelled, or died.

4. Always give the dates of death and expulsion, and when the branch voted letters to the persons named, and the name of the branch to which the letters are to be presented, if to any in particular. And so also in recording and reporting those received please give names of the branches from which persons are received, as well as the dates when they were received upon those letters.

5. Be sure to record all changes of name by marriage, and put the same on the reports from quarter to quarter. Often when this is neglected the persons are reported under other names than the church record shows, and sometimes it is much trouble to trace up who is intended, when death, expulsions, or removals of such are reported, and the names are not found on either Index or Record. Give the full names of the bride and groom, the date of marriage, and who officiated in the ceremony.

6. Be sure to spell all names correctly, inquiring also as to what the whole name is, first name and the middle name, or initial. Many people are called by their middle name, and then by and by some one reports them by another name, which, on correspondence being had, is found to be really the first name, whereas they are recorded and indexed by the middle name only. This causes confusion, delay, loss of time, and sometimes serious error. Fathers and sons and mothers and daughters are named exactly alike, or the first name and the initial. Besides similar names are found all over the church. Forty-seven by the name of Mary Smith are on record, thirty-six as Mary Brown, and many Elizabeths, Margarets, Davids, Johns, and Williams of many common surnames.

7. When written to by the district secretary, or General Recorder, for information, be so kind as to answer as promptly as you may be able, not put it off as a disagreeable task, until it is forgotten and gladly lost sight of. The Lord requires our stewardship over this matter to be as faithful as over any other trust committed to us, or as greater ones to others.

If the above rules were strictly and carefully adhered to it would save much of both labor and trouble over affairs that a little timely care would entirely prevent.

Please to consider these things and act accordingly, that the work may be done as commanded.

H. A. STEBBINS,

2t General Church Recorder.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 10, 1897.

DIED.

HARGER.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, about one o'clock on the morning of February 9 1897, of debility, succeeded by an attack of la grippe, Roy George, son of Bro. George and Sr. Mary Harger, aged 8 years, 3 months, and 26 days. He was a good child, truthful and obedient, and doubtless would have been baptized had he lived until another season, as his brothers and sisters were after they reached the proper age. The parents are in sorrow over the loss of another boy, only one remaining, a lad of twelve, but they are patient and resigned, believing that the Lord will do all things well. Sermon by Elder H. A. Stebbins assisted by Elder A. S. Cochran. Elder Eli Hayer offered prayer at the house before the service at the chapel.

BASS.—At Lamoni, at eight o'clock a. m., February 10, 1897, at the ripe age of 75 years and 22 days, Mrs. Laura Anna Bass, relict of Seth P. Bass, who departed this life April 16, 1897. Miss Laura Anna Blowers was born in Vermont, and when quite young her parents moved to Marshall, New York, where she was raised and became acquainted with Seth P. Bass and they were married at that place December 14, 1843. In the year 1848 they moved to the western part of Michigan and settled in Lawrence County, and continued to reside there until 1884, when they removed to Lamoni, Iowa. Both have now passed to the other side at the full age, honored and loved by family and friends, and confident in the hope of the saints. Sister Bass was the kindest of companions; a woman of good deeds; an excellent mother; a worthy sister, and a noble-hearted friend. She leaves a grown up family as follows: Seth M. Bass, Lamoni; Mrs. Ludelia Munsell, Oklahoma Territory; Mrs. Flora L. Scott, wife of Elder Columbus Scott, Lamoni; Byron O. Bass, Lamoni; Mrs. Anna Braybrooks, Lamoni, and Mrs. Lulu M. Scott, Davis City, Iowa. The funeral took place at the saints' church, Lamoni, conducted by Elder Thomas

Bell, assisted by Elder Asa Cochran, E. L. Kelley preaching the sermon. "I am he that liveth and was dead," and "because I live, ye shall live also."

DEPUTY.—Lloyd, infant son of Charles and Mina Deputy, born April 26, 1896; died January 20, 1897, Woodbine, Iowa.

Like a sunbeam shone his presence
Through the home he truly blessed;
But the lovely blossom faded;
He has gone home to his rest.

AHLGREN.—At Crescent City, Illinois, February 5, 1897, Sr. Christiana Ahlgren, aged 44 years, 4 months, and 16 days. She was born in Brumby, Sweden. Emigrated to Streator, Illinois, some sixteen years prior to her death, at which place she resided until a year ago, when the family moved to Crescent City. Her remains were brought to the home of her brother-in-law, Bro. John Ahlgren, Streator, at which place the services were held on Sunday, February 7, at two p. m., conducted by Elder Jacob Stanley. A large concourse of people assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to one who was dearly loved and respected by both saint and friend. Lily of the Valley lodge, Daughters of Rebecca, turned out in full force and marched to the cemetery, a distance of two miles. The ceremony was very impressive. Deceased was baptized at Mission into the Streator branch, September 16, 1888, by Elder Thomas Hougas, of which branch she was a member at her demise. The last time she met with the saints in Streator just prior to her sickness she bore a faithful testimony to the truthfulness of the work, and as she lived she died, a faithful saint. Husband, one daughter, and four sons mourn.

COLEMAN.—Winnie Walter, son of Mr. James and Sr. Emma Jane Coleman, passed peacefully from this life February 7, 1897. Winnie was born February 12, 1896. The sweet little bud was called home to bloom in the paradise of God. Funeral at the Medina cemetery in the presence of a large assembly of sympathizing friends, conducted by L. L. Wight.

RAYE.—At Washington, Indiana, August 22, 1896, Bro. Charles Raye. Deceased was born March 2, 1814; was baptized by L. F. Daniel. Bro. Charles was firm in the cause till called to that rest that awaits the people of God. He was warned previous to his death, and he told his brother he was soon to pass from this life. He was liked by all who knew him. Remarks by M. R. Scott, Jr., assisted by W. C. Marshal and D. O. Stites.

FOX.—Frances Fox was born May 17, 1860, at St. Louis, Missouri, died at her home in St. Louis, February 5, 1897. She was baptized by M. H. Forscutt when eight years of age; she was married to William Fox, September 10, 1882. Sr. Fox suffered with a very trying and painful illness for about seven months prior to her death, bearing her trial patiently and often expressing her belief in the divinity of the gospel as taught by our people. She leaves a husband, three children, an aged mother, and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services from residence February 7, conducted by J. C. Hitchcock.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

ROGER WILLIAMS AND BAPTIST CHURCH SUCCESSION.

APROPOS to the discussion concerning the mode of baptism received by Roger Williams it may be in place to remark that the Baptists of this country really have but little interest in the matter as it may be considered as relating to them. Nor is it a very material point as to whether the present First Church, at Providence, R. I., is a continuance of the Roger Williams church, since the Baptists of this country derive neither their baptism nor their church organization from the Roger Williams company. That the baptism and church organization were both irregular, to say the very best for them, is an indisputable fact; and both would be repudiated by the Baptists of this country at this time. The facts of history show that the real Roger Williams church went to naught, and has no successor; but if it were otherwise it would not in the least affect Baptist history in this country, since the Baptist churches of this country came from English and Welsh Stock, and not from the Roger Williams movement. It always has seemed strange to us that Roger Williams would be put down in the list as a Baptist, and his irregularly constituted and short-lived organization be spoken of as a Baptist church, when the whole thing was a kind of historical phantasm, the passing of a shadow before the eye, that disappears forever, with no material trace of its being, and leaving but a lingering remembrance of its flitting darkness.—Baptist Flag.

REMARKS.

The narrow wing of the Baptist Denomination holds tenaciously to the doctrine of Baptist Church succession. That is, these narrow wing Baptists, claim that there is a succession of regularly organized Baptist churches from Christ and the apostles down to the present day. Of course the liberal wing Baptists hold to no such idea as Baptist Church succession. They are too well informed in church history to make any such absurd claim. But the narrow wing Baptists represented by the Baptist Flag are great sticklers for Baptist Church succession. The doctrine breaks down with "the Roger Williams church." Hence, these narrow wing Baptists are always trying to patch up this case, as we see in the foregoing from the Baptist Flag editor.

The indisputable facts of history teach us that "the Roger Williams' church" is the origin of the Baptist church, or Baptist denomination, in America. Roger Williams was baptized by an unbaptized man, and then Williams baptized those who constituted and made up the first Baptist church in America. David Benedict the great Baptist historian in his "General History of the Baptist Denomination in America," pages 441, 442, says this of Roger Williams and the church he founded:—

"In 1639, he [Roger Williams] was baptized by Ezekiel Holliman, a layman who was appointed by the little company for the purpose. Then he [Williams] baptized the rest of the company, and thus laid the foundation for the first Baptist church in Providence, and on the American continent."

* Every reputable historian gives substantially the same as Benedict here gives, in reference to the origin of the first Baptist church in America except a few partisan Baptist writers who hold to the dogma of Baptist Church succession. Of course these few partisan Baptist writers are not recognized as noted scholars, or noted historians. Here then the Baptist chain of succession breaks in two in the very first Baptist church "on the American continent." The editor of Baptist Flag can never weld this Baptist chain. But he tries to meet this difficulty by the bald assertion, that the "Baptists of this country derived neither their baptism nor their church organization from the Roger Williams company." This assertion he cannot prove to save his life by any reputable and nonpartisan historian.

Not only was the baptism of Roger Williams, and all those who constituted the very first Baptist church on the American continent, irregular and invalid, but Williams and his company were sprinkled, and, therefore, not baptized at all! President Whitsitt, the Baptist historian, and the head of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville Kentucky, says of the baptism of Roger Williams: "However, within the limits of the uncertainty which is freely acknowledged, the weight of evidence appears to incline very clearly towards the view that Roger Williams was sprinkled and not immersed at Providence in 1639" (A Question in Baptist History, page 164).

The editor of Baptist Flag attempts to unhook this chain of succession from "the Roger Williams church" and hook on to the English and Welsh Baptists. He says: "The Baptist churches of this country came from English and Welsh stock, and not from the Roger Williams movement." The English Baptists who were first called Anabaptists sprinkled up to the year 1641, then they began to immerse and called themselves Baptists, according to the Baptist historian W. H. Whitsitt. His book, "A Question in Baptist History," is written to prove this very proposition. So then, this Baptist chain of succession is snapped in two again when it is hooked on to English Baptists!

In speaking of the founders of the English Baptists from which the Welsh Baptists came, Whitsitt says in italics: "Immersion baptism does not appear to have been practiced or pleaded for by either Smythe or Helwys' the alleged founder of the General Baptist Denomination in England" (Question in Baptist History, page 11).

So much for the erroneous doctrine of Baptist Church succession. The whole truth of the matter is this: The chain of Baptist Church succession cannot, by any means, reach any further back than the year 1600. It is too short by sixteen hundred years to reach Christ and the apostles! — Church Register, Feb. 19, 1897.

THE FOUNTAIN HEAD OF THE MISSOURI.

THE researches of Mr. J. V. Brower, of Minnesota, at the headwaters of the Mississippi resulted, several years ago, in the final determination of the extreme sources of that river. During the summers of 1895 and 1896 Mr. Brower was engaged in similar explorations at the headwaters of the Missouri, and the complete results of his labors, together with an excellent chart of the region on a scale of one inch to the mile, are first made public in the Bulletin of the American Geographical Society, just issued. Two government surveys parties in 1872 approached within a few miles, east and west, of the ultimate sources, but, Mr. Brower says, they did not explore Culver's canyon, through which the parent stream flows; and that stream has not heretofore appeared on any map.

It might be thought that after reaching the district it would be an easy matter to locate the fountain head of the river. It was, in fact, the work of weeks. To identify the headwater branch of the Missouri it was necessary, first, to determine the relative importance of all the larger upper branches. This exploration was in progress for twenty-two days in 1895 before Mr. Brower was assured that the stream flowing through Culver's canyon into Red Rock creek, which, further down, becomes known as Beaver Head River, Jefferson Fork, and the Missouri, was the ultimate source of the great river. He proved this to be true by making his way with much difficulty up the canyon, impeded at every step by ledges, declivities, and fallen timber; and last summer he returned to make the careful survey of the whole district that has enabled him to produce this map of the towering mountains that hem in the infant Missouri, and of the tributary streams that feed it.

Among the excellent pictures which illustrate his narrative is one of the place where the stream has its birth, at the crest of the Rocky Mountains, about 8,000 feet above the sea level. This crest forms the boundary between Idaho and Montana, and the river takes its rise just within the southern border of the latter State. The rivulet is only two feet wide and two inches deep, drawing its waters from the snowy uplifts that rise a little above it. These waters, starting for the Gulf of Mexico, are 4,221 miles from it. They are 2,945 miles from the mouth of the Missouri, which exceeds the distance of the head sources of the Mississippi from the Gulf by 392 miles. There is every season to believe that the stream, starting from that mountain crest, is the longest unbroken current of running water in the world. — New York Sun.

KEEP THE CHILDREN IN AT NIGHT.

I have been told by one of our public-school "attendance officers," whose work it is to gather in the truant school children, that the mothers of such children are largely in favor of the Curfew. One old man said: Indeed he should be thankful for anything that would keep his children in at night.

Whether parental neglect arises from poverty, recklessness, or natural indifference, it is necessary to inquire; probably each contributes. The effect upon the children, however, is to deprive them of the home influence which in early life is invaluable. The only remedy seems to be compulsory responsibility, as indicated by the Curfew Ordinance. And if it is necessary that such protection should be afforded to children in a city of one hundred and fifty thousand population, how much more is it desirable where the population is so much greater—so large a proportion of the children thereof having been surrounded by vice from birth.

Beyond the advantages to the youth and right-thinking parents, the aid thus afforded to the police in the suppression of crime must be considered, as also the additional comfort afforded to citizens who are compelled to be abroad at night, in being freed from the shocking sights and sounds which greet the eye and ear in many portions of our city.—From "Curfew for City Children," by Mrs. John D. Townsend in North American Review.

An Englishman's study of the longest reign in British history is contributed to the Review of Reviews in this diamond jubilee year of Queen Victoria's rule by Mr. W. T. Stead, who traces the growth of imperial dominion and the influence of the royal family from the point of view of the typical British subject. The article is illustrated with a large number of portraits of the Queen and of members of her family circle. Many of these portraits are rare, and are now published for the first time in America.

Cardinal Gibbons, when importuned for an opinion upon the everlasting subject of the Sunday newspaper, said: "I desire to give you, my brethren, two admonitions regarding Sunday newspapers. First, select none but the best, such as are clean, possessing a high moral tone, and which will give you food without poison. Second, resolve not to read Sunday papers till you have first assisted at divine service and heard the Word of God. As on communion day you do not break your fast until you have partaken of the holy eucharist, so let the voice of your heavenly Father be stamped in prayer on your heart and memory before you give your attention to things terrestrial."

You who are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year, meaning to clear them up some day,—if you could only know and see and feel that the time is short, how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do. — Phillips Brooks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Will you please explain in the Herald Matthew 5: 24-27; also Matthew 8: 4?

Ans.—It is difficult to explain anything so plain, apparently, as this teaching of the Savior; but it takes more than the number of verses referred to. The Teacher began his instructions at the opening of the fifth chapter, the first twelve verses of which teach the Beatitudes; then, addressing the disciples, he tells them; first, that they are the "salt of the earth;" second, that he came to fulfill, not to destroy, the law; third, that their righteousness should be of a better kind than that of the Pharisees, who kept the law. He then begins contrasting the oldtime theories of conduct with the gospel requirements, and the subject of verses 24-26 begins with verse 21, and not at verse 24. The whole tenor of the texts from verse 21 to 26 is that no sort of offering is acceptable if hatred or enmity toward man was cherished in the heart. It was a contrast drawn between the inexorable command, "Thou shalt not kill," and its consequences, attendant upon the "judgment," and the principle of love for man dwelling in the heart, from which no man was in danger, and against which was no law. If therefore a man has hatred or malice in his heart toward his brother (his fellow man), he is not worthy to offer a suitable and acceptable offering, prayer, gift, donation, or song of praise, or any other act of devotion, at the altar of worship to God. If, therefore, a man remembers, even at the altar, that his fellow man has just cause of complaint for injury, in word or deed, against him, he should leave his gift unoffered by the altar, and straightway make reconciliation; or discharge himself from obligation to the offended one by a faithful effort to set the matter right. Not until he has done this is he justified in offering his gift on the altar.

The teaching in verses 25 and 26 is an enforcement of this principle; for if a reconciliation is not effected, or honestly attempted, then the cause upon which the individual might be made to answer at the law remains, and if proceeded against he must pay the last farthing; or, in other words, if the cause for offense was not removed by an individual effort for settlement and it was left for formal complaint and prosecution under the law, then the law must have its course, and he who refused or neglected to come to an agreement with his adversary, (the one having cause of complaint against him,) while there was an opportunity before an appeal was made to the law, would be compelled to take the decision of the judge before whom the complaint was made, and would not be released until the last farthing was paid, the utmost condition of the decision was complied with.

We are aware that some think and possibly teach that the adversary referred to in the text (verse 25) is the Devil, the adversary of souls; and the prison means hell or the pit; but the context does not to us justify the conclusion. The words "thine adversary," indicate that it was a personal opponent that was meant; and the word "whosoever" occurring in verses 21 and 22 show that it was an adversary of anyone made so by just cause of complaint, and not the adversary of all that was meant. The prison referred to was any prison into which a man might be cast for debt or misdemeanor; and they imprisoned for debt in those times. That the teaching from verse 21 to 26, inclusive, was intended to apply to individual personal conduct, under the old law and under the new covenant, in contrast, and not to the final adjustment at the Judgment day, is further seen by an examination of the rest of the chapter, where personal conduct is referred to directly.

It is, perhaps, permissible to make an application of the principle, reasoning by analogy, to the operation of the gospel, its teaching, obedience, disregard of salvation for obedience, the loss of it for neglect or refusal, the Lord the Judge, the Devil the Adversary, the prison hell or the pit; the utmost farthing the punishment, etc.; but we can see no warrant for making this a doctrine of the teaching of the church in the word itself.

Matthew 8: 4 is a personal direction of the Master given to one living under the law, but upon whom he had exercised his marvelous healing power, to go to the priest of the ward, parish, or portion of the city, or the synagogue where he belonged and make an offer of the gift provided for in the law as a testimony of his having been healed. This will be found by reading Leviticus 14. The man in this case was under obligation to the law of Moses, and could not mingle with his fellows until the priest having charge should have certified to the fact that he was free from the leprous taint. In order for the priest to do this the gift must be offered and the ceremonies performed. Jesus did not minister at the altar under the law of Moses, but healed the man under the gospel economy; and recognizing the duty of the man to observe the law to which he was subject gave him direction what to do to get recognition of his having been made free from the leprosy. It was a direct and clear acknowledgement of the Savior, in action, of the principle involved in the statement, "Render unto Cæsar the things that be Cæsar's, and unto God the things that be God's." It also involves the teaching of the principle that he "came to fulfill" not to break the law.

Q.—What would be considered due notice of called meetings, as found on page 24 of Book of Rules?

A.—There is nothing on page 24, Book of Rules, relative to called meetings. Reference is had to such meetings on pages 9 and 10; and if this is the reference had in view by the question, we reply that the "due notice" required is notice given at such time or times, and at such place or places as will insure the attendance of all who may be entitled to be at such meeting and who may care to be there; such a notice as will give everybody interested an opportunity to attend if they wish to be present.

Q.—Have branches a right to grant letters of removal to members living in the immediate vicinity of the branch and not intending to move away, for any cause?

A.—It is not usual to give such letters, nor is such giving of letters provided for in any church rule.

The question as to the right of a branch to do so turns upon the right of a branch to make its own rules of government and procedure. This right is not questioned, but such rule would hardly be in accord with the public polity and good fellowship of the church.

Q.—Is it customary, or right, for elders of the church to baptize persons who do not intend to become members of said church?

A.—We know of no such custom.

Q.—Is it right, or proper for district authorities and traveling elders to go into branches and call meetings, and reorganize them, and not adjust difficulties when they are known to exist?

A.—No such procedure is provided for in the general laws of the church. It is practicable, however, to believe that such conditions might occur as to make such an action on the part of a general officer of the church necessary to protect the church from internal broil and dissension. This would be an extreme measure, however, justified only by an emergency.

A QUESTION AND ANSWER.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Jan. 23.

Editors Herald:—There seems to be some misunderstanding among the saints and priesthood in this Southwestern Missouri country concerning the law of tithing and the redemption of Zion. I am satisfied that the revelations are plain upon these subjects and would like to ask the following question: "Has the priesthood the right to preach the Doctrine and Covenants as it reads?" Please answer in the Herald. In bonds,

Z. DECKER.

[THERE ought not to be any question as to this; for, if we are not to teach the revelations to the church as they are, how can we teach them at all? for if one was at liberty to put his private interpretation on them so should another be so privileged, and where would it end? We therefore answer, Yes.—ED.]

□ PEACE, LOVELY PEACE.

A BROTHER writing to Bro. Joseph Smith personally from Weir City, Kansas, where a matter of difficulty has long been pending and troubling the branch, says:—

I am glad to inform you that peace is restored in the Weir branch; all difficulties settled, acknowledgements made to all wrongs, and forgiveness asked. This is the spirit that now prevails. Many a tear was shed last evening, tears of joy. □ Let all rejoice with us. In bonds, etc.

We take the liberty of publishing this letter, though it was personal, and not written for publication, feeling assured that the pleasure it gave us will be felt by all; by those who have not known of trouble at Weir City, as well as by those who have known of it and felt keenly the sore bitterness arising from it. We congratulate the saints at Weir City, one and all, upon this most beneficent result. May new vigor be created in the branch and district and the "heralds of the cross" arise afresh with armor clad to push the victories of the truth, the truth of the Son of Peace.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. C. Evans, London, Ontario, the 24th:—

Have never been more busily engaged than since the new year; nearly every night on the platform. Have baptized seventeen since January 28, and more have given their names.

BRO. ALEXANDER H. SMITH arrived home on Tuesday, the 23d inst., in care of Bro. James McKiernan. He was taken quite seriously ill at Montrose, Iowa, with la grippe, which brought on a sickness similar to pneumonia. At present writing he is still quite sick, but is resting comfortably.

Sr. Gibson does not know of any of the faith near them, and has not heard a sermon by one of the elders for nearly three years, and is "hungering for the word of God."

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 3.

THE MARQUESAS ISLANDS.

WEDNESDAY, 25th.—From Monday noon, when we crossed the Equator, till Tuesday our good ship had made the distance of three hundred miles. To-morrow we expect to sight land again, but probably will not reach the harbor of Taiohea till Friday. The land is very high, so can be seen a long way off. Yesterday was really cool, but to-day is warm, warm. The captain has had an awning spread over the forward end of the "quarter" these last two days, and all are out under it in reclining deck chairs but me. I wield the pen all these smooth days, trying to get that "crying baby," as Sr. Page says, off my hands. So far, there could be nothing in the way of a sea voyage more delightful than this has been. Surely the prayers of the saints and loved ones in our behalf are being heard. And those who are with us, who think not to acknowledge the source from which all blessings come, enjoy with us and accept them as their right. "Ye are the salt of the earth," said Jesus to his people many years ago, and it is as true to-day.

Thursday, 26th.—Thanksgiving Day, and O, such a delightful day. I believe the best we have had in every way but speed. The wind that has been "abeam" since last Friday, hauled last night about aft and now the yards are squared, studding sails set, and we are being gently rocked along over the almost placid ocean. The large awning is spread, and passengers lounging in deck chairs in a state of perfect comfort, some reading, some studying, some crocheting, and some snoozing. We expected to have seen the land this afternoon but wind is lighter so it will not be seen till the moon rises, probably, which will be near midnight. Will have to tell you to-morrow what we had for dinner to-day, since it is too late to write after dinner—six o'clock. I treated the mate to a bit of original poetry this morning, which made quite a laugh. I had left my folding chair out one night and there came a heavy rain that blistered the back all up and it dropped off, and I felt rather delicate about asking for a piece of canvas for it, so asked in a delicate way as follows:—

You see, Mr. Lunn, I'm quite in despair
About my little folding chair,
Because the back is gone.
I left it out in the rain one night,
Next morning 'twas in a sorry plight,
So if you have a canvas patch to spare
The size of that space in the back of my chair,
I would like to tack it on.

Mr. Lunn said I should have the "patch" (a little later). While sitting here this afternoon I have glanced back over the past year, recounting my blessings, and find I have very much to be thankful for. I believe it has been the best year of my life. If not the best of my life, it is for the past twenty years of it. For besides numerous other blessings, we have this year obtained title to the place we have been buying and paying for over and over again for the past twenty years, (but it was never really ours before,) and have also obtained title to our mountain home. I have taken a trip back East without trespassing financially on any other year, and received very much pleasure from the visit. Have had better health than for many years. Have been able to supply little necessities in many incidents that have made hearts glad. Have also received so much of love, kindness, and good will, substantially, as well as other ways, in all our travels, that my own cup of gladness has been full to the brim almost constantly. And withal we have been able to pay more tithing this year, counting from last Thanksgiving Day, than ever before in one year, to complete the work of sending in the tithes of all we possess. Truly we have been abundantly blessed. The Master might very appropriately use these words to us:—

"I've done, I've done this all for thee!
What hast thou done for me?"

In answer I could only say, "Lord, I have acknowledged it all as coming from thee, and have received thankfully and been happy.

Friday, 27th.—The breeze yesterday became so very light that the land was not seen till eight o'clock this morning. One island is looming up quite clearly, but I understand we have to pass two before we reach the one at which we stop. The wind is light again to-day, making only about four and one-half miles an hour, so we will not get in till to-morrow. It looks good to see land again, but it is only an atom in this broad expanse of waters and scarcely looks like real genuine land. Our dinner was unusually plain yesterday, but good; chicken broth first, then dressed chickens baked, with green peas, beets, and potatoes. After that when the plates had been changed, cold asparagus was served, then fruit—canned cherries. Our apples are about gone, I think. The asparagus is very large and tender,—is served just as it is taken from the cans or tin boxes. Each one makes a solution to suit himself on his plate, of olive oil, vinegar, pepper, a little salt, and some a little mustard. It is eaten without anything else save a bite or two of plain bread if one chooses. Everything else is taken off the table. Our steward is kept on the run most of the time while waiting on the table. The captain made a change from having two tables, to extending the one the whole length of the cabin, and these sixteen have to be waited upon about the same time. For breakfast and dinner the plates are changed—and victuals also—three times, after the soup, and before the dessert.

Monday, 30th.—Well, we have been to the Marquesas and out again, so I have got quite a long story to tell to-day. On account of wind dropping away Friday afternoon we did not get in till Saturday morning. Could have gotten in some ten hours sooner had it been daylight. Got up quite near the Meka-hiva Island, where the mail packet stops by dark, but kept off till morning, and as soon as daylight the passengers began to make a muster to see all the land that was to be seen. The islands are very high, bold, rocky, and barren mostly. There is a low green shrub that neither yields fruit nor fodder. Coconuts must grow somewhere besides the few trees that were about the little village of Taiohea, the seaport, for they brought off some hundred sacks as cargo, and there are a few bananas, pineapples, oranges, avioas, limes, and Tahitian apples, also mangoes and breadfruit, but at this season all are green except the pineapples, and they are about gone. We were lucky enough to get three. Yes, and tamarinds in abundance. It was really beautiful sailing around those high, bluff points into the harbor, where the eye is greeted with new sights at every glance. The hurrying and scurrying about decks, pulling and hauling of ropes, furling up, and lowering away of sails was in vivid contrast from the quiet of the bright, beautiful morning, the placid waters of the bay, and the seeming inactivity on shore. But not long after the City of Papeete rounded the point the natives flocked to their boats and canoes and came paddling out to look at the vessel and people. But none were allowed to come on board. They have to be kept in rigid subjection there, for the thirst for blood and craving for human flesh still remain with the majority of them. A French officer came from Tahiti on the Tropic Bird with us two years ago who had been a policeman at these islands for some years, who said he was in fear of being eaten by them all the time and the only way he escaped was by keeping them in terror of him. We saw some of the wild ones. They looked more like the New Zealanders than the Tahitians. Faces were tattooed in a manner that gave them a savage look. After things got snuggled away and cargo being discharged, and some of the passengers gone ashore, the captain asked us if we would not like to go ashore too. Bro. Burton replied that we would like to very well provided we could get off again when we wanted to, but that he would not like to have to remain ashore too long. The captain said there would be no trouble about that; there were two boats afloat and he would send one whenever we wished one; for us to come down to the landing and hail if one was not there. Three o'clock was the given hour, Joseph saying he could not call loud enough to be heard off here but we would be seen plain enough at the landing, so ashore we went. All the principal buildings face the water and there is only one little narrow road, more like a broad footpath, along in front of the few dwelling places until one enters the grade to go over the mountains, except one shady dell where the Catholic Bishop lives, and where nearly all the fruit is kept inclosed and for their own use. Few indeed of the poor natives of the village get any. So we sauntered along sometimes in the shade and sometimes in the boiling sun. I was in search of trophies, and remembering Sr. Jessie Butterfield's weakness in that line, I picked up a large pebble that had been washed by the ocean till it was like honeycomb, and put it in my pocket for her. Then we went into the principal store to see what they kept to sell. Very much was the same that one would see in a country store in America for the reason that they came from America. But I saw some very pretty mush, or drinking bowls. They came from France. The pattern was so odd I purchased two of those for curiosities in the hope that one at least would live to go home with me.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. PHYNESS PELTON, of Dighton, Kansas, requests the prayers of the Union, in his behalf, as he is greatly afflicted and desires the faith and prayers of the saints, that the Lord may be pleased to restore him to health and strength.

Sr. Clara J. Steele, of Addison Point, Maine, requests you to offer your prayers in her behalf March 11. She has been and is a great sufferer with cancer in the throat. The doctors gave her up two years ago and now she is going to try and see if God will heal her. We also ask the saints of the Eastern Maine district to fast on that day, March 11, and she will at the same time call the elders to administer to her.

Mrs. John McRae, Fairbank, Iowa, sincerely desires your faith and prayers that she may be restored to perfect health if it be God's will. She has been severely afflicted with her head all winter. Is quite deaf. Also asks that the elders pray for her.

Sunday School Department.

HINTS FROM SIGHTS.

WE have seen ten minutes valuable time taken from a Sunday school and devoted to promiscuous reciting of verses.

When verses were called for, a fumbling of Bibles would commence, verses half learned and less understood would be repeated in a manner to provoke merriment rather than nurture reverence. A day later even a participant could not call to mind the part he had taken.

We have seen a teacher take half the class time in hearing who had committed the most verses, a prize, of course, lying at the end of the race, which prize always falls to the acute memory.

This indiscriminate crowding of the mind with Bible verses goes no farther toward building up Christian character than piling up of brick, mortar, and timber does toward building a house.

We have seen a teacher go through with the questions in the Quarterly, then, with a self-satisfied air, go over to visit with a teacher like unto herself, while her class amused themselves as best they could. Just how, is best not repeated.

We have seen papers distributed in the midst of work where all was attention, but attention fled and confusion came.

We have known teachers to teach Sunday after Sunday without any record of their work; have seen them hand out Quarterlies without making any note of the recipients, and a week or two later hand out again to several of the same.—ED.

WE glean the following from an article read at the Nauvoo reunion by Sr. H. E. Birchell, of Ottumwa, Iowa:—

That a Sunday school should be maintained if no better place of meeting than a private house can be had.

Two rooms are better than one as the best results in primary work cannot be had without a separate room.

The primary work being the most important, requires the best teachers.

Teaching is individual work and the good teacher adapts herself to the individual needs of her class.

The most spiritual-minded is most child-like, exercises most patience, and adapts herself most to individual need.

The disposition to inspire others is a necessary qualification for superintendent. The superintendent who labors simply from a sense of duty always has a dull school. Love of work is better than sense of duty. Superintendent should encourage all the other workers, not forgetting to have a smile of welcome for the youngest child.

The chorister and organist are not without their trials, so need the sympathetic help of the superintendent. Teachers who attend teachers' meetings and come prepared for their work are not often troubled about keeping up the attendance. Evidently something is wrong when boys and girls drift away from the school.

Instill the love of Christ into the minds of the young. Keep the A. B. C. out. This is the work of the day school. Teachers can do as much good with those who cannot read as with those who can. She can tell the lesson in story form, and question on what she has told.

Our own church Quarterlies should be used by all means. Poor results are obtained without helps; nor can the best results be obtained by supplies picked up here and there. Every live school needs a paper and the Hope finds a cheerful welcome with most children.

Prizes should not be granted for mental superiority, but rather for attendance and good behavior.

If members of other churches are present, make them welcome; ask them to lead in prayer if they are persons who are in the habit of leading in public.

Let the school join in repeating the Lord's prayer that the smallest child may feel that he too is helping the work along.

"PRIMARY work must be done largely by story telling assisted by the blackboard. Sketches, not necessarily artistic, may help in securing attention. Quick, rapid, suggestive work counts. Build as you talk. Give two or three points, then review. Frequent repetition fixes facts."—Dora Young.

Quality of work counts more than quantity.

IN schools well advanced, an occasional written review is not unprofitable. Let the superintendent the preceding Sunday distribute slips containing review questions. Then on review day let each class in presence of teacher write answers from memory. Sign name to paper, place in class envelope, and pass to superintendent. Afterward let each teacher examine class work: This way of conducting review should not be done in classes where one or more cannot write.

THE boy who sees his father and mother still in the Sunday school is not anxious to graduate himself out of it.

Godfearing children: Moses (Heb. 11: 23-26); Samuel (1 Sam. 3); Little maid (2 Kings 5: 2, 3); Jehoshaphat (2 Kings 11: 21; 12: 2); Josiah (2 Kings 22: 1, 2); Daniel and his companions (Dan.); John the Baptist (Luke 1: 76-80); Jesus (Luke 2: 41-52); Timothy (2 Tim. 1: 5; 3: 15).

nation, the institutions of learning and houses of worship, did not come along by chance, or spring up in a brief while. It took ages with sunshine and rain, storm and tempest, for the sturdy forest trees to gain their full development ere the hand of time could lay them low again. The winds that did not uproot the growing tree told the rootlets to look out for the returning blasts. The wild waste of waters that did not engulf the merchant's fleet bore the precious cargo on her heaving bosom. Adverse waves bathe some weary pilgrim's feet, and contrary winds waft homeward many a golden argosy.

In that everything of either utility or beauty has to come along in their times and seasons, why should we wish to reap the day we sow, or eat of the fruitage before the orchard has time to bud, blossom, and bear? A childlike trust, a humble heart, a resignation fraught with fortitude and unbounded patience will soften the asperities of life and bridge many a turbid stream. This eternal fretting and surmising is a moth-eaten garment, and a fig leaf covering that does not cover. Jealousy, envy, surmising, and an evil eye are the rotten strands in a worthless rope, and don't you forget it. A person full of hope, alms, forbearance, and forgiveness has an inexhaustible mine of the rarest and richest treasures. Some people I like, both them and their ways, while with some others their habits, manners, acts, and general demeanor are questionable. I do not know how to begin to look with favor upon consumption, rheumatism, or any other disease; but the sufferer may have my sympathy, esteem, and love. I have not altogether mastered the secret of loving ardently an unlovable person or thing, but through grace divine I may yet get higher and see more beauty in the African diamond after it has been to Amsterdam. When I ask you to bear with me in the rough and pray for me too, as well, I know full well I ought to reciprocate. The Lord is extending to me marvelous light and liberty, hence my brethren should bear with the banner-bearer.

Yours ever,

M. T. SHORT.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a series of meetings at Vinal Haven. I preached thirty-three sermons, very near the ground where the saints held their meetings in the old organization. I baptized two on Monday, a man and his wife, in the very place where they baptized in the Seer's day making three that I baptized since I commenced operating there. Others say they will obey. I told them I should never coax them to go into the water, but that when they made up their minds that they could live to the gospel requirements, nothing would please me better than to see them make their covenant with the King of Peace.

There is a very good class of people living there, on the island. Some are very much prejudiced growing out of reading the book by the wife of Brigham Young and the stories told by one Mr. Josiah Massen, who tells the people he was fifteen miles from Carthage when he heard the guns at the time they shot Joseph Smith. I questioned him on his foolish statements:—

"Did you see Joseph Smith?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you hear him preach?"

"No, but I heard him at a meeting say that what he said was just as if God himself was present and spoke the words himself."

"I said: Mr. Massen, suppose you write this lady a letter, and I read it to her, would it not be just what you would say to her if you should appear before her and speak to her yourself?"

"Well, yes; I suppose it would."

"Just so, my friend; so the prophet was telling the people what God had revealed to him to tell them, and it is just as if God himself was standing before you himself delivering the same with his own mouth, and you and I will find it so in the day of judgment. Christ represented his Father and spoke the words of God, but the people would not believe him or what he said, and killed him. They did the same to Joseph Smith; and you are peddling lies and slandering the character of as noble a man and as good a prophet as God ever had on earth. His name is used for good and evil, as the angel said it would be."

The old man lived at La Harpe, Illinois.

"Well, Joe Smith and others said there was to be a choosing day."

"What do you mean or understand about a choosing day, Mr. Massen?"

"Well, they said four women would choose one man, and when the day came they took my wife from me or she went with them."

"Well," I said, "Mr. Massen, she was just as big a fool as the one who took her."

"Was that done while Joseph Smith was alive?"

"No, it was done by Brigham Young, after Joe was shot."

"Were you a member of the church at the time your wife left you?"

"No, I never joined them."

"Well, now tell me about the morals of the so-called Mormons about Nauvoo, before the death of the prophet—were they a bad people, or did their morals compare favorably with the other religious church people, such as Methodists and Baptists?"

"O, they were about the same. I got acquainted with one man by the name of Gurvey, one of the Mormon ministers; he was as nice a man as I ever saw. I did lots of work for him."

I shall look after the interest of our cause on the island till April Conference, as others intend to obey. My health is not very good, but I feel that I have labored harder the past year than I have any year since I started out in the ministry. I would to God that our cause in the East was in a healthy condition, with each member doing his duty; then the gospel would spread through this eastern country. But I must be still and see what the Lord will do. I was kindly cared for while on the island, at the house of Bro. and Sr. Raymond.

Yours ever,

J. C. FOSS.

STANBERRY, Missouri.

Editors Herald:—I do not presume to correct Mrs. H. B. T., but reading her letter suggested a few thoughts to me: The luxurious living of the wealthy may benefit the middle classes, but it does not help the starving poor. The profits derived from the sale of luxuries are not evenly divided. The merchants and the manufacturers get to be millionaires, while the clerks and factory girls remain poor. What did Christ say about the rich? Did he not tell a certain rich man, "Sell all that thou hast, and give unto the poor, and come and follow me, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven?" If a millionaire is a true disciple of Christ, he will not remain a millionaire very long; and the same will apply to them who are less rich.

It is also a fact that a great many poor people do not do as well as they might. But there always has been and always will be a certain class of poor which cannot help themselves. Rent is so high they cannot make enough to pay it and have a living besides; land is so high that they cannot buy a few acres; and they have no education to enable them to engage in anything else; the towns and cities are now overrun with competent people seeking positions. What is to become of the incompetent ones. I apply all these things to myself. I am a widow with a small income. Suppose I should lose it, I have no education; I have not enough physical strength to enable me to do a half day's hard work. I would be too honest to steal, too proud to beg, and I would not commit suicide like some do under such circumstances; so I would be obliged to do like a good many others have done, starve or freeze to death. Some one buying a rich suit or having a costly funeral, would not benefit me in the least. Who is to answer for existing conditions? The Bible says, "The love of money is the root of all evil."

Christ will come to reign on earth some of these days, and he will set things right. I think Lazarus will live with Christ, while the rich man will inherit the place he has prepared for himself. When the gospel of Christ was first preached, the "saints sold their possessions and goods and parted them to all men as every one had need, and they did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, and the Lord added to the church daily."

We saints who claim to have so much more light than others should do a great deal better on all lines, than sectarians or the world; but I am afraid we are like the people were in King Saul's time; we want to be like others around us. If I was able to buy a twenty-five dollar silk dress, I would buy a ten dollar wool dress (which I think is ever so much nicer and more durable than silk) and use the other fifteen dollars for gospel purposes and to help the starving poor, the suffering Armenians, etc. Let the people of the world, who are not interested in this restored gospel, buy the silk and costly furniture; and let the saints lay up for themselves treasures in heaven.

Charity means something more than giving to the poor; it means love. We should love one another as Christ loved us; and we were once of the world, hence we should deny ourselves that the gospel may be preached to others. Lord help us to come up higher, is my prayer.

SELLA.

GREGVILLE, Ala., Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have opened up the work in Greene County, Mississippi. I left several interested in the restored gospel.

I found some Brighamites there. The Utah Church has a number of missionaries in these woods of Mississippi and Alabama. They travel by foot from Dan to Beersheba, all over the country, two by two; "without purse or scrip" is their motto. They baptize people to swear them in before dipping them. I would like to know what kind of an oath they take. I know one thing; they are mighty hard to get out of bondage.

I came to this place in response to Bro. John Amerson's call for me to defend the doctrine. The debate closed last night. Four days was the agreed time, but my opponent, Bro. J. B. Hobs, concluded two days would be enough; therefore we used one day for each church. J. B. Hobs, Campbellite, came to stay six months or down Mormonism. He stated at the close of our debate that he would not remain here much longer. The only point he tried very hard to make was that the church did not exist before Pentecost; organized first at Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. He seemed to think the salvation of mankind hinged upon that error. Campbellism is not doing much in these parts. It is not popular here like in the Southwest.

The saints at Flat Rock are rejoicing. They have the truth and can stand the test against everything. The branch is growing rapidly, about fifteen additions during 1896. Several of the Pleasant Hill saints were with us during the debate, and went back home satisfied that there is nothing better than the pure gospel of Jesus Christ and the kingdom of God.

Bro. Hobs advanced one thing new to us all. What do you think it was? Ah! "It will never do to court a young lady with the Bible. She will not listen to that!" Bro. Hobs is not married, I presume, is the reason.

I have another debate on hands to come off in July at Berrydale, Florida, with Mr. Hanes, said to be one of the Campbellite's able men, which will be my twentieth discussion, if it comes off. I am busy in this great work and expect to be all my life, but conflict within and without is my lot every place I go. The Devil is not gone out of business yet. He fights us both inside and outside.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.

Editors Herald:—At the direction of Bro. G. T. Griffiths I organized a branch of ten members at Fayette City, Pennsylvania, on the 14th. This is the second branch on territory where the Bickerton movement once flourished, but has about run its course.

What is left of it is a humiliation to its former better existence. Bro. Arthur Bickerton, recently baptized by Bro. Griffiths, is a nice-spirited old man, and accepted with appreciation the office of teacher, Bro. Robert Perrie being president, G. W. Hull priest, and J. M. Kennedy deacon. They have rented a nice hall and start well.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

No. 1762 Springfield Avenue,

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—The work in this town is gaining ground; new openings can be made in different parts of the town, and many express themselves as ready to hear. Many are the requests for to bring our tent and set up in different parts of the town as soon as the season opens.

The last two seasons with the tent we made many friends, who are now working in our favor from the labors of such. I have received two invitations from the country saying that they will care for me just as long as I can stay. I shall endeavor to fill such calls as soon as I can. My time is fully occupied with the city and surrounding country. The president and priest of our branch are both absent at present, so we have to help all we can to keep the work moving.

We have succeeded in arousing the feelings of two Christian preachers and a Seventh-Day Advent preacher, and prospects look good at present for a fight.

As I had to leave my home of twenty acres in Howell County, to care for the work here, I will sell it to some good Latter Day Saint on their own terms. There is a good branch there and work can be had on the fruit farms close by. Write me for particulars to the address above.

HENRY SPARLING.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Southwest Texas district closed here last night. The seating capacity of our hall proved insufficient for congregation that gathered to hear us; many new faces, to us, and I never have spoken to a more interested or attentive congregation in this city. We are greatly encouraged and are led to hope anew for good work in this place.

I can safely say that the prospects are brighter than they have been for over twelve months. Saints are more united and more zealous for the work. Both branches of the city (San Antonio and Oakwood), will in the future unite their strength and, if we can, rent a hall together in the center of the city.

A joint priesthood meeting of both branches will be held this coming Saturday night, and the work will move out under their direction. We hope for a great work here and believe we have good reasons for such a hope.

I would have been glad to meet you in the coming General Conference, at Lamoni, but it is a long way from here. It costs twenty-four dollars and forty cents from San Antonio to Kansas City by railroad. The railways in Texas not grant half-fare permits, hence our traveling is more expensive. May the Spirit of our Master be with you all in conference to be held. Bro. I. P. Baggerly is our delegate.

We are glad to add that we have just returned from administering the ordinance of baptism to a promising young man. I believe many more are near the kingdom. Rumors of a debate with the Christians here soon.

Your brother in Christ,

H. P. CURTIS.

WOODBINE, Iowa, Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—I was much pleased in reading Brother R. Ferris' statement respecting the Jackson family, and their testimony respecting Oliver Cowdery; and I wish to state in harmony with it that while visiting Father and Mother Chapin, old-time saints, and intelligent, upright people, then members of the Columbus branch, Nebraska, but now passed to the blissful beyond, Sr. Chapin, who was well acquainted with Oliver and his sister, Mrs. Jackson, told me that Mrs. Jackson declared to her that Oliver Cowdery testified upon his deathbed, to the divinity of the Book of Mormon. I am the more pleased to add this statement because the enemies of the truth have circulated the report that he desired his testimony.

I will also add that another old-time saint, Elder James M. Adams, also gathered to his reward, told me that Oliver Cowdery testified of the same to him and explained the manner of translation of that record.

Yours respectfully,

CHARLES DERRY.

THE UTAH MORMON CHURCH IN ST. LOUIS.

It has often occurred to mind, that there are plenty of people in this world who have thought that the Devil was not religious, or at least was neither concerned nor interested in churches or ministers, save in their destruction or overthrow. But there are churches, and churches; and so of religion and ministers, etc. But the Book of Mormon informs us that His Majesty is the founder of one church at least, and it might prove a difficult task to undertake to demonstrate that he is altogether unrepresented in the management of more than one church.

I do not wish to lay more to the charge of this already—as I believe—overcharged individual; but for the sake of humanity I would rather believe that they are the victims of evil, rather than its willing propagators.

St. Paul has told us through an expressly spoken message by the Spirit of God, that in the "last days" there would be some who would "depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy," etc., etc. It seems to be a quite clearly demonstrated fact that if a fulfillment of this prophecy has ever taken place, its fulfillment can truthfully, and without malice, be laid at the door of that organization known in nineteenth century history as the Mormon Church in Utah. This church has been, in the past summer, and is now being at least partially represented, in this city, by its missionaries. I say partially, because of their attempts and very apparent anxiety to repress important facts in which the people who are in search of the truth are, or should be, properly interested.

As a sample of fair and honest representation, so far as it went, I think I may safely refer to the open defense of their absolute belief in the doctrine of polygamy, by Elder B. H. Roberts; and if equal candor had been manifested in explanation of what a great many of his audience certainly believed to be valid objections to his position, we certainly should have less or nothing to say. I sincerely feel thankful, however, to Elder Roberts for this much of a public attempt at defense of their past record, and the unequivocal commitment of himself and of his church to a belief in the divinity, inherent practicability, and righteousness of the doctrine of plural marriage, or of polygamy. My criticism begins, however, with the ending of his sermon. Brethren of the Reorganized Church, some of whom were present, at its close, asked the privilege of a question, which was emphatically and persistently denied, and up to date this denial has been steadily and strenuously persisted in.

The statement comes from parties residing in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, where Elder Roberts has recently been holding services, that he had reported the organization of a branch of their church in St. Louis; that a number had been baptized, among which were several of our people of the Reorganized Church; and that the writer had refused to go into a discussion, etc.

We are neither by qualification nor inclination a controversialist after the manner or mode of a public religious discussion, have never considered it our "forte;" but under the peculiar circumstances which the Utah misrepresentatives have placed us as a church, if there is one thing which we have sought most anxiously and earnestly to bring about, during the last summer, it is an opportunity to enlighten the citizens of St. Louis concerning the differences that exist between the Utah Church and the Reorganization, and to present to a jury of the public in a plea relating to the theories and practice of the respective churches, dating from the time of organization and as respectively demonstrated in their histories.

Our public reply to the polygamy sermon by Elder Roberts, with challenge to discussion not only upon that but upon other serious differences involving the right and title to name and public credit, was presented in its substance in manuscript to the City Editor of the Republic, and an unequivocal promise that it should appear in the following Sunday issue was given to the writer. The reasons for its nonappearance are not altogether clear. It is a fact, however, that one of the Republic's prominent reporters, Miss Ada Patterson, (a lady who, by the way, before the advent of the Utah elders, including Mr. Roberts and his well-advertised combination into St. Louis, had frequently attended our services, and had reported us fairly) we learn was once a resident of Utah, known to be favorable to the Utah propaganda and reporting their sermons and showing favors betimes that exhibited what seemed to us a liberality not exhibited toward us in the sermons before alluded to, at least.

Mr. Roberts has been and still is a prominent and strong man in the Democratic party in Utah, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical powers have forced him out of prospective State service into church service. Newspaper circulation and patronage by people who have got the money, in Utah or anywhere else (and they have got hold of considerable of it) is desirable, and the superficial showing made with Elder Roberts at the head of affairs seemed to attract support from a few people who may not have been interested in the facts concerning Utah Mormism.

The Utah Church has money, and they have spent quite a little purse in St. Louis in an effort whose result to date must evidently show a large balance to be charged to the sinking fund.

We congratulate them, and the citizens of St. Louis upon the success of their failure. We are of the opinion that they will never get along well, in the same neighborhood with the Reorganized Church, in the proselyting of honest and intelligent people.

Elder Roberts is a good talker, was well advertised, and supported by a contingent of good singers from the famous church choir of Salt Lake City, and drew quite a congregation of curiosity seekers to the fine hall on Olive Street for a time, and the power wielded by the god of this world drew the attention and favor of the Republic representative; but the polygamy sermon was, we think, too candid or raw for even the St. Louis public; and no matter what the real status of sentiment or fact of morals as a city, the naked truth is still unpopular, and a fairly stripped and naked and dirty old lie as is the doctrine of polygamy, will need more than the eloquence of Elder Roberts to persuade to a belief in the divinity of its origin.

I have credited Mr. Roberts with candor in the delivery of this sermon. I may be mistaken in this; it may be an apology for Utah Church history only, after all. At any rate, the doctrine of lust, though titled religion, and submitted to by ignorance, has not proved a good success in any respect, and we are waiting for the time when that church will honestly confess to God and to the Church of Christ which they have so grievously wronged and misrepresented, their error.

We have no war to make upon men, much less upon those whose sires and mothers once fought the fight of faith in defense of our angel-restored gospel. Our hearts yearn, and our fellowship we long to test upon the grounds of the original pure gospel faith, and the truth that makes men free, and not slaves to the dictum of an ecclesiastical hierarchy, whose likes, in Babylon, they once so freely condemned in the day of their freedom from errors that had once destroyed and hindered the Church of Jesus Christ. But loyalty to God, and the commandment of Jesus Christ, must not be subverted to the destructive influences of the so plainly and easily proved latter-day apostasy. And we stand with our standardbearer, the son of him whose memory we all profess to revere, and the knowledge of whose high and heavenly calling so many of us share in common, this son, God-appointed, and lawful heir to the presidency of the church, with the word of the Lord in his mouth, openly presented and legally tested and supported by a ministry whose calling and labors are so wondrously attested by the Holy Spirit's presence and power and raising up again out of the mire of just reproach the gospel standard against the enemy which forced an entrance, and swept in like a flood upon the Church of God, turning growing favor and prosperity into ruin and just reproach, God and good men and women into enemies, furnishing priestcraft and ignorance with weapons they were never able of themselves to forge against the Church of Christ upon earth.

We are not unmindful of the dangers of boasting, and the perils that beset those who are over-confident of the immediate triumph of any cause. But I see no hope for the people of Utah but to confess and abandon their defense of past history; and, failing in this, their trials will, in my belief, multiply. The present position concerning polygamy is not only uncertain but unsafe, and will, though no worse result overtake them, in the end subject them to such criticism as will disfellowship them from the thoughtfully honest among all people.

A tree is known by its fruits, and a church that undertakes first to silence the voice of reason and of fair question by the arm of force and persecution and, when that becomes impracticable or impossible, refuses open court and fair competition as to facts of history, then, evidently its claim to ethical or spiritual authority is disannulled.

It has been in the history of the past no small part of the work of some of the men in Utah to criticize and point out the dangers of an apostasy which made the Church of Rome both a fact in history and a menace, not only to human liberty, but to life itself save upon terms of dishonor.

If the world has been saved from the clutches of priestcraft and the inquisition that threatened Liberty's death, it has been through an open Bible and the free use of voice and pen. The voice of inspiration tells Latter Day Saints that God raised up men to frame the Constitution of this country and to the end that the pure gospel of Christ might freely be proclaimed without hindrance, without the prohibition of the State, or of any state church; and by that sign did the Church of Christ go forth, conquering prejudice, producing its strong reasons, multiplying its thousands, unhindered and unlet save by the very methods which the Utah Church have been in the past and are yet seeking to enforce.

What shall we say of the inconsistency of men sent out to preach, with the word of the Lord in their hand, given in the year 1831, which says, "Wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and in private; and inasmuch as you are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest. Wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord. Verily thus saith the Lord unto you, There is no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper"—D. C. 71: 2.

What is the matter with this church in Utah if an apostasy from the faith in latter days is not foreshadowed in the word, nor a fact in history, why this fear to discuss? why a seal placed upon the lips of the missionary by the heads of the church? why, when urged, that "the truth shall make you free" and that truth can never be vindicated by the simple and unquestioned proclamation of dictation of any one man upon earth, will these ministers and Utah representatives immediately step into the rear of the procession with the priests of Rome saying, "The boss has shut our mouths, he is our brains and our conscience, his will is superior to any written law or word of God"?

But signs of weakness presaging disaster seem to be at hand. The record is denied; the most creditable evidence is answered as being a slander. Even Brigham, the once infallible, even his utterances and public statements are discounted, or their authority denied, and it is altogether a tiresome task to attempt keeping up with their rapid turning of corners.

People unacquainted with the facts are liable to be misled by the reports given by the Republic, and statements that have gone out concerning Utah Mormon success in this city. Elder Christensen, and another elder who has been sent to take the place of Elder Fackrell, now returned to Utah, hold meetings in a small hall upon Sundays. Their church up to date, as shown by the record, which I happened to have the privilege of examining, shows a membership of seven instead of fifteen, as given to the newspaper. Two only, have been baptized, the others are old members of the Utah Church, and are not known to the Reorganized Church. Four of these have attended their meetings only twice since the advent of the elders here in this city. Poverty, I was told, however, by one formerly of their number, prevented them. They are now "in Zion," at Utah and are not likely to apostatize. Hellman, the only one of the Reorganized Church baptized by them told me the other day that Mr. Craft, the painter, who was baptized with him, is an honest, but like himself, a deceived man, Hellman, the pillar and ground of their boasting, has got through with them, and has written us a good letter in apology for his action, is entirely cured of polygamy and authority claims, by what he has learned by actual contact in fellowship with them, and asks forgiveness of the church for his treatment of the church and of the brethren in their attempts to reason with him in regard to his association with the Utah people. Hellman is an honest man, and was the best and most promising fruit of their labors, which has now turned to gall; and the net result of expenditure of money and talents of Elder Roberts cannot be especially gratifying to the managers of the Utah Church. When I asked the reason for the discrepancy between the published statements and their church record, I learned that all of the elders or missionaries, as well as their "chief singers and players upon instruments," were included in the number although their membership is in Utah.

Their meetings are now thinly attended; four or five in the morning, to a dozen as the maximum number, in the evening, are reported as the present size of their congregations. Elder Roberts' last visit, though specially announced and regularly advertised, attracted not more than twenty people, at the evening service. Small congregations of themselves are no reproach, however, else were we often reproached.

In letting out a little of the wind that has been pumped into their boom I have no desire to even tell the truth for the sake only of defeating an opponent. My criticism is against their anomalous position, and their misrepresentation of the latter-day work, and the work of its founders or heavenly-endowed agencies.

That there are many, very many, honest and sincere people in Utah who are still under the influence of their one-sided position is without doubt true; but the Church in Utah has been, and still is the greatest stumblingblock in the way of the Church of God that exists in the world to-day.

"He that is of the truth" "cometh to the light." The men who led these people to "the salt land," left the ancient landmarks of safety, and joined the long procession with those who in the past have first persecuted until liberty's voice aroused the indignation of freeman to a successful protest, then laid the argument of silence upon those ostensibly sent out for their defense.

We have no complaint to make against the St. Louis Republic, save in their refusal, after giving pledge, to give us a chance to relieve confusion in the mind of the public concerning the position of the two churches. The papers in St. Louis, including the Republic, have treated us otherwise in a courteous way, but discrimination against the loyal, lawabiding, open-to-all-opposition position maintained by the Reorganized Church, cannot in reason be justified.

We are glad of Brother Hyrum Smith's effort in the Herald. Elder Roberts' book upon "succession" can, and should be answered by a book or document published by this church. Elder Robert's sermon on polygamy with synopsis of our reply as published in Ensign of October 17 gives the substance of the reply which the Republic failed to publish.

St. Louis, December 19, 1896.

AGAINST VIVISECTION.

CONGRESS is being asked to pass a law sanctioning the horrible practice of vivisection; and in order that the humane, Christian people of all beliefs may see and pass judgment upon the necessity of such a horribly atrocious practice, I send these, hoping in the cause of the poor, helpless, suffering animals, you will find room for them at once in your columns.

Lest the readers should find it almost impossible to believe that such atrocities can be carried on by men professing to be Christians in the nineteenth century, I have only to say that these examples are not the worst by far, and that they are taken from English medical magazines and other publications:—

THE HORRORS OF VIVISECTION.

The following useless and shocking experiments were performed by Dr. Castex, in the laboratory of Dr. Richet, member of the Society for Psychical Research. The language used is that of Dr. Castex himself.

First experiment. Large watchdog extended on the vivisection table on its stomach, the four limbs and head fastened, but not too tightly. . . . With a large empty bottle I strike a dozen violent blows on the thighs. The animal by its cries, more and more violent, indicates that the bruise is great and vividly felt.

Second experiment. Large hound. The animal is fixed like the former. Placing myself at a certain height that my mallet may strike with greater force on the part to be experimented upon, I give with all the strength of my right arm twelve successive blows with a great wooden mallet, some on the shoulders, some on the back, and some in front. As in the first case this dog indicates by his cries that the bruises are very painfully felt, after which he falls into a sort of sleep, broken by moans, for ten minutes, after this, again he wakes agitated, and seems to suffer much more than the first dog.

Third experiment. Large female dog, with large stone bottle I make violent contusions on the sides of the hips. Thirty-seven times my arm falls with all its force. The animal indicates by its cries and movements that the blows affect it painfully.

Fourth experiment. Large hound, fastened as the rest, upon the vivisection table. Anæsthetic injected into abdominal cavity. As soon as the animal is half asleep I begin to twist its limbs in the way most suitable to sprain the articulations, and I push the movement to the degree at which I feel that fracture is imminent. The animal indicates by its cries that it feels intense pain. I prolong the movement for three minutes for each articulation.

Fifth experiment. Large slut. I proceed this time without anæsthetics, thinking they have nullified previous experiments. The animal is fastened on the vivisection table. I dislocate successively both her shoulders, doing it with some difficulty. The animal, which appears to suffer much, is kept in condition of dislocation for about half an hour. It struggles violently in spite of its bonds.

Sixth experiment. Poodle dog; replaced on the table without anæsthetic. I dislocate his two shoulders. The animal utters screams of pain. I hold him twenty minutes with his shoulders dislocated and the elbows tied together behind his back.—London Magazine of Medicine.

O, the horrors of it; the inhumanity of it; the brutalizing power of it! Imagine if you can, dear reader, followers of the gentle Nazarene, the Lord and Savior, imagine men professing to love that Savior, committing such atrocities! And what for? The best medical authorities tell us it is of absolutely no use.

Lord Shaftesbury says:—

It is an abominable sin.

Professor Lawson Tait, M. D., says:—

I do not believe that vivisection has helped the surgeon one bit, but I know it has often led him astray.

Sir Charles Bell, President Society Arts and Sciences, M. D.:—

Experiments have never been the means of discovery, and the opening of living animals has done more to perpetuate error than to confirm the just views taken from the study of anatomy and natural motions.

Mr. R. T. Reid, Q. C., M. P., Solicitor General, says:—

There is no question whatever that the most frightful tortures have been inflicted upon animals and are now being inflicted uselessly.

Says Lord Coleridge, upon vivisection:—

The mind of Christ must be the guide of life. "Shouldst thou not have had compassion upon these, even as I had on thee?"

Mind this, heed this, you M. D's, who profess Christ.

I wish evermore the utmost success to all protests against the inhuman practice of vivisection. It does not bear to be thought of. How it must excite the righteous indignation of the All-merciful Creator! It is singularly sad that there should need to be an agitation on such a question, for one would think that the least enlightened conscience would perceive the evil of such cruelty and the most hardened heart would retain sufficient humanity to revolt against it.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

The idea that the poor suffering victims are anæsthetized or will be in the future, is false and misleading.

The very fact of the vivisection is to have the effect of the operation seen when the animal is in a normal condition, save the shock, which of course must be taken into account both with the dog and the man; and even if chloroform is applied it is as in the fourth experiment only, a half-way thing, and only for a few minutes. When the animal comes out of the drowse and remains out for the rest of the time, from a few minutes to hours; for remember, reader, that many of the victims of the hellish cruelty are kept alive for days, to be experimented upon every day or when the devilish wish comes upon the operator.

A CHAPTER OF HORRORS.

Dr. Legg's experiments on cats at St. Bartholomew's Hospital included a great variety of tortures. Among others their stomachs were opened while the cats were pinned alive to the table; their livers were transfixed with needles; the stomach sewn up and the poor suffering creatures left until death ensued, some surviving as long as twenty-six days.—St. Bartholomew Hospital report.

Edinburg Medical Journal:—

Burns were produced by sponging the chests and bellies of dogs with turpentine five or ten times in quick succession setting fire to it each time; and scalds by pouring over the dogs eight ounces of boiling water nine times in quick succession. All the dogs died in from a few hours to five days. No Anæsthetics used.

Professor Mantagassa has recently investigated the effects of pain on the respiratory organs. "The best method he finds consists in planting nails sharp and numerous through the feet of an animal in such a way as to render the creature almost motionless, because that in every movement it would feel its torment more centrally."

To produce more intense pain it was found useful to employ injuries followed by inflammation. An ingenious machine (say rather a devilish one) constructed expressly for the purpose enabled the professor to grip any part of the animal with pinchers with iron teeth and to crush or tear or lacerate the victim so as to produce pain in every possible way. One little guinea pig far advanced in pregnancy endured such frightful tortures that it fell into convulsions, and no observations could be made on it. In a second series of experiments twenty-eight animals were sacrificed, some of them taken from their nursing young, exposed to torture for an hour or two, then allowed to rest an hour and then replaced on the table to be crushed or torn for periods ranging from two to six hours. Tables are appended by the professor in which cases of great pain are distinguished from those of excessive pain, the victims of the last being "loaded with nails in every part of the body." Now, listen to what this fiend in human form says: "All these experiments were performed with much patience and delight." (Mantagassa's experiments on action of pain, 1880.)

MORE HORRORS.

The body of a pregnant slut at point of delivery was cut open to observe whether in her dying and mutilated condition she would attempt to caress and lick her little ones.

The forehead of a dog was pierced in two places with a large gimlet, and a red hot iron introduced through the wounds, and was then thrown into the river to see if the power of muscular motion in swimming was lost. In other words, if he would be able to swim. (From "Torture Chamber of Science.")

Professor Goltz says:—

A very lively young dog which had learned to shake hands with both forepaws, extracted the left side of the brain through two holes first of December, causing lameness in the right paw. On being asked for the left paw the dog immediately laid it in my hand. I now demand the right, but the creature only looks at me sorrowfully for he cannot move it. On my continuing to press for it, the dog crosses the left paw over and offers it to me on the right side, as if make amends for not being able to give the right. On January 13 a second portion of the brain was destroyed. On February 15 a third, and on March 6 a fourth. This last operation caused death.

Nice, Christlike work, is it not?

Mr. Bracket writes:—

I inspired a dog with a great aversion to me, tormenting him and inflicting pain as often as I saw him. [No anæsthetic.—J. S.] When this feeling was carried to its height, so that the animal became furious every time he saw or heard me, I put out his eyes. I could then appear before him without his manifesting any aversion, but if I spoke, his barking and furious movements proved the indignation which animated him. I then destroyed the drums of his ears and disorganized the internal ear as much as I could. When intense inflammation had rendered him completely deaf, I filled up his ears with wax. He could now no longer see or hear. These operations I afterwards performed on another dog.

Experiments on a dog, from "The case against vivisection," by Mark Thornhill, Esq.:—

Skin removed from both legs; one incision above the knee, another at joint of the foot; separated the skin of the lower part of the leg from that of the upper part and the foot. No anæsthetic.

Twenty-two experiments on one rabbit, causing excruciating cramps. No anæsthetic.

March 31. Body of a dog six times opened and sewn up.

Fifty-one dogs had portions of the brain hemispheres washed out of the head, which had been pierced in several places. This was repeated four times. The mutilated creatures and their behavior studied for months. Most of them died of inflammation of the brain.

Rabbit fastened to a board, head pierced at 5:30 p. m. It remains tied down all night. At seven a. m. is released and immediately drops over and dies.

May 22. On a dog, irritation of sciatic nerve. Dog gave sharp cries of pain and gasped violently. He was then bled three times and after third bleeding made efforts, violent, to escape. Fresh initiation for twenty-six seconds; chest then opened and artificial respiration introduced; periodical initiation of nerves and bleeding until death ensued.

Monkey's skull cut into and various portions of the brain [touched?] with red hot iron wire.

Bracket's experiments on dogs to test their affection:—

Dog's eyes dug out; organs of hearing destroyed; then tortured in all possible ways to ascertain the limits of affection. To the end the dog still licked his hands.

Another female dog cut open to see if she would in her agony exhibit maternal affection to the puppies cut out of her.

Six dogs subjected to a partial destruction of the brain by corrosive acids; two of them kept alive for other [devilish] experiments two weeks later.

A dog taken from her young; its mammary glands, nursing ones, cut off; put down among its young, mutilated, bleeding, dying, whom it could no longer nurse, but only licked in its dying agonies.

December 6, 1880. The spinal cord of a dog cut. On the following day the lumbar part of the cord crushed, and right sciatic nerve cut.

A frightfully painful atrocity.

Kind, humane, Christian people are trying to have Congress pass a law forbidding the devilish practice. In the name of humanity let us do all we can to have that law passed. All very well to say, "A doctor must have nerve," but he need not seek it by such an infernal process as vivisection. "For Oh! it hardens all within and deadens all the feelings!" Suppose, O Christian friends, that there was a superior race of beings dwelling among us and that they regarded us as we regard our dumb animals, and perpetrated upon us and our children the atrocious deviltries which the vivisectionists do upon the poor brute, how long ere we would rise in rebellion against them and either do or die? Imagine young infants, young maidens, O mothers and fathers, extended on the vivisectionist's table and there suffering like those poor animals! Imagine your young infant, O parents, your betrothed, young man, suffering those terrible tortures! Is it any worse than for the poor brute? Have they not intelligence in their sphere as we have in ours? Do they not suffer pain equally as acutely as we do? If not, why vivisect expressly to observe the manifestations of both pain and love?

We are the providences of our dumb friends, as gods to them, remember; and "The merciful man is merciful to his beast." Help, O kind, Christian people to have the law passed forbidding this horrible practice.

"He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the good God who loveth us
Hath made them one and all."

DR. J. J. STAFFORD.

P. S.—If each father or mother would send a letter to the member of Congress for their district asking him to use his influence against the passing of a law sanctioning the horrible practice, it would undoubtedly prevent it from passing.

charge and the district presidency. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that this district may hereafter transact business by the delegate system provided for in the Book of Rules with the following proviso: Any members attending conference from any branch in the district shall be entitled to voice and vote providing they be counted out in the number of the membership of the branch to which they belong and the number of their delegates lessened according, beginning with the last chosen. Thus making it both an individual and a delegate conference. The district clerk was made the committee on credentials for future conferences. J. W. Peterson, E. M. Wildermuth, W. A. McDowell, and F. Hackett were chosen delegates to the General Conference. Priests, teachers, and deacons were made ex officio members of the district conferences. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that no conference in the future shall vote to change any action of any previous conference until sixty days notice shall have been given through the official church paper. Elder J. T. Hackett was recommended to the Quorum of the Twelve for a missionary appointment to Southern Wisconsin. Henry Southwick was elected president, J. T. Hackett vice president, and B. C. Flint clerk of the district for the ensuing term. Preaching by W. A. McDowell, W. P. Robinson, and J. W. Peterson. The funeral sermon of Grandma Iliff was preached Sunday at eleven a. m. by J. W. 3. That the only qualifications of delegates shall be church membership and good standing.
4. That, at their last regular business meeting prior to the assembling of each district conference, or at a special meeting called for that purpose, each branch shall choose its delegates.
5. That, if a special meeting is called, at which the delegates are to be selected, then the time, place, and object of said meeting shall be plainly announced, so that the members may be informed of the purpose of said meeting.

8. That, in cases of grave importance, affecting the interests of the church or the district, the branches may instruct the delegates to cast a majority and a minority vote.
9. That the president or clerk of each branch shall make out and sign a certificate of appointment, giving the date of the branch meeting, the names of the delegates chosen, and the number of votes said branch is entitled to, and forward the same to the conference.
10. That the entire vote of a branch may be cast by the delegate or delegates who may be present from said branch, unless they have been otherwise instructed. Provided, that no delegate shall be privileged to cast more than twenty votes.
11. That in case all the delegates are present from any branch and uninstructed, and there is a disagreement between them upon any question before the conference, then each delegate shall only cast his proportion of the entire vote of the branch.

12. That, in case all the delegates are not present from a branch, and such division of sentiment occurs, then those present shall be entitled to cast only their individual proportion of votes as said delegates.

13. That, in all routine business of conference, delegates shall vote only as individuals.

14. That all ordained ministers of the church, in good standing who live within the limits of the district, whether they belong to organized branches or not, are ex officio members, and shall be entitled to voice and vote in the conferences.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,

Herald, about.....4,000 "

Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

Business Manager.

LAMONI, Iowa, January 22, 1897.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Western Passenger Association has granted reduced rates to the coming General Conference and conventions, naming the dates as requested, from April 4-20. While the conference does not convene till the 6th, the 4th is named in order to permit attendance at the Religio and Sunday school conventions.

Reduced rates are granted under the following conditions:—

1. Going tickets must be purchased not earlier than three days before the first date named, and not later than three days after, Sunday not being counted as a day in any case. In other words, tickets may be purchased on any date from April 1 to 7, inclusive, but not later than the 7th.

2. The rate is one and one third fare for the round trip. The rule is to purchase full fare tickets on the going trip. Passengers must, in all cases, obtain certificates with every ticket purchased, which certificates, when signed by the Church Secretary and stamped by the railroad agent at Lamoni, will entitle purchasers to return trip tickets at one third the usual fare; provided that one hundred tickets are purchased; and, provided further, that ministers holding half-fare permits are not entitled to this reduction; nor are tickets purchased at fifty cents or less to be counted.

Where passengers can do so, it is better to purchase a through ticket to Lamoni and obtain one certificate. Where several tickets are purchased, separate certificates must be obtained with each.

Tickets on the going passage may be limited or unlimited, according to the rules of roads selling them; but return tickets are good only for continuous passage, and not later than three days after the 20th—to the 23d inclusive.

Purchasers should hand in their certificates promptly to the Secretary, that the local railway agent may be notified of the required one hundred being purchased.

The following lines of road will sell tickets on the certificate plan:—

Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha; Hannibal and St. Joseph; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; Jacksonville and St. Louis; Minneapolis and St. Louis; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island and Peoria; St. Louis and San Francisco; Sioux City and Pacific; Wabash; Wisconsin Central Lines; Burlington and Missouri; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph and Grand Island; Union Pacific.

elders in charge and the local saints. Permit us to suggest to the local saints at the several places, where the above meetings are to be held, that your humble servants are constrained to believe that it would be pleasing unto our heavenly Father, that all who can, would make the Sabbath of these meetings a day of fasting, that God may grant unto his servants the Holy Spirit to the uplifting of the work throughout this district and that God shall graciously bless the approaching General Conference. Be it remembered by one and all of the household of faith that "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that tolleth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all."

In view of this, the saints will see that the expenses of the ministers are met, that your stewardship may be approved of your lawgiver, for the word of Christ, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself" is still applicable to the professors of the "new and everlasting gospel."

Let all the affairs of life be auxiliary to the work of the Lord that we may "enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come; even immortal glory."

The brethren appointed will continue the meetings if the interest and their time will justify. Let unity prevail that the peace of God may abide.

Your servants in Christ,
ROBERT M. ELVIN,
President.

Assistant.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 24, 1897.

BORN.

DUGAN.—To Bro. Chas. F. and Sr. Emma C. Dugan, at Barnett, Missouri, a son, and named Gomer Wallace. Blessed February 1, 1897, by J. B. Gouldsmith.

BOWER.—To Bro. Michael and Sr. Rosa Bower, January 25, 1891, at Cross Timbers, Missouri, a daughter, and named Sinia Arminda. Blessed February 7, 1897, by J. B. Gouldsmith.

MARRIED.

YOUNG—SENIOR.—At the residence of Bro. B. D. Allen, in Kirtland, Ohio, February 17, 1897, by Elder L. W. Powell, Bro. James B. Young to Sr. Maggie Senior, both of New Waterford, Ohio.

DIED.

DARNELL.—At Mineral Wells, Texas, Mrs. H. A. Darnell, only daughter of Bro. and Sr. Ramsey. Born at Bandera, Texas, June 23, 1869; died July 7, 1896, aged 27 years and 14 days. She was taken without any relatives near to administer to her in her last illness. She leaves three little boys, the youngest two years old. Though not a member of the church she believed the doctrine and regretted there were no saints living near her. She exhorted those that were not prepared to meet their Lord and come before the judgment bar of God to repent. Her parents mourn but not as those without hope.

WALTER.—At the home of her daughter, Caroline Hand, near Tama City, Iowa, January 27, Sr. Frances Walter; was born in Bowenhoyed, Elsass, Germany; her age being about 81 years. She emigrated with her parents to America, settled near Cincinnati, Ohio. She united in wedlock with Mr. Ignos Walter. In the year 1852 they came from Ohio to Iowa; settled near Chelsea, Tama County, where they with those that were given to their care shared the trials and hardships attached to a frontier life. Mother Walter was very sincere and earnest in her religion as a Catholic, a lover of light and truth; hence when she heard the gospel she wished not to trifle with the things of God but moved forward to receive more and honored her God by striving to keep all of his commandments by obedience to the gospel ordinances. Her life she desired to devote to her God and those that the Lord had given in her care and proved a friend to suffering humanity as far as her means and surroundings would admit. With bright hope that our loss is her gain, may the Master bless and comfort those that mourn. Service by Elder William C. Nirk.

SWAIN.—At his home in Harlan, Shelby County, Iowa, February 7, 1897, Bro. John B. Swain, aged 72 years and 1 day. Said brother was born in Wayne County, Indiana. His parents were Friends or Quakers. Was married in Indiana to Miss Irena Whiteinger in May, 1848, who survives him. Of this union were born twelve children. Six are now living. Bro. Swain settled in Galland's Grove in 1859, where himself and wife first heard the gospel. They believed and embraced it under the hands of W. W. Blair and E. C. Briggs, and were baptized by Bro. Blair, July 29, 1861. He was ordained an elder November 18, 1867, under the hands of John A. McIntosh, since which time he has been a zealous worker in the cause of the Master. His home was always a home for the traveling elders. He died very suddenly. He has been afflicted for about one year so that he could not walk. He was feeling as well as usual, ate a hearty supper, and was taken into the front room and was talking with those present. His wife was sitting by him reading. He laid his head back and was dead in a moment. He died in full faith of the gospel work. Six children, twenty-five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren mourn. Funeral on the 9th at the Latter Day Saints church to a very large congregation. Sermon by Elder J. W. Chatburn, assisted by Bro. William Booth.

SHERMAN.—At Bevier, Missouri, May 30, 1896, to Sr. Hannah and Mr. George O. Sherman, a son. On June 4 he was named Ralph and blessed by Elders Charles Perry and Francis A. Evans, his grandfather. On the following day he passed away. Being the only little bud of promise in the family circle they were loth to part, but are able to say it was the Lord who gave and his it was to take. Services at the house by Priest Daniel Edmunds and at the grave by Elder J. T. Williams.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. CONSERVATIVE REACTION IN THE CHURCH OF GERMANY.

THE signs of a reaction against radicalism in the German church have been detected by close observers in recent times and noted in these columns. The extent of this new movement is described in the Evangelische Lutherische Kirchenzeitung of Leipsic, the ablest representative of the conservative and confessional standpoint among the church papers of Germany. In No. 2 this influential journal contains a significant article entitled "Vexilla regis prodeunt!" (The standards of the King are advancing!), of which we here reproduce the substance:—

At the opening of the present year we have reasons to look hopefully into the future. In more than one place we see the beginnings of new and better times. The liberal theologians no longer present a solid, closed phalanx, as was formerly the case. The "Protestantenverein," once such a powerful organization of liberal theologians and churches, has been hurled to the ground, and its phalanx has become an object of ridicule. In reality even "Ritschlianism," the newer school of neological theology, exists only in name as yet. The masses that formerly crowded around the great teacher Ritschl, and swore by his words, no longer exist. Some have turned to the right and have become more positive and evangelical in their teachings and in fact are beginning to be ashamed of being called the pupils of Ritschl; while others have gone to the left and already consider "the last of the church fathers," as Harnack calls Ritschl, as too old-fogyish and are searching for a more thorough radicalism. Even their influential organ, the Christliche Welt, is no longer the power that it was. The recent convention of its friends at Erfurt showed that there exists a deep chasm between the representatives of various types and kinds of liberal theology, and that these people are united only in their opposition to conservative teachings. How a rupture can be avoided in the ranks of the liberal hosts who differ so decidedly in principle is hard to see. Nor is the new "National Social" party attracting any great number of adherents. Its two journals, the Hiele and the Zeit, are both financially embarrassed. In other words, the liberal and liberalizing forces within the German church have in recent months lost considerable ground, and the beginning of the end seems to be at hand. On the other hand, the defense of the old faith has grown internally and externally. Although among the University men there have been very few who have undertaken to defend the olden views of the church with reference to the divine character of the Scriptures, the rank and file of the pastors have boldly come to the front in this good work, and the anti-critical biblical literature is now greater than it has been for many years. To counteract the influence of neological teachings by the University professors of theology, courses of lectures and special schools in the interests of the old truth have been successfully carried on in a number of places, and will as long as needs demand be continued. One thing at least has been achieved in this way, namely, to rob the so-called infallible "scientific" theology of its halo, and to show that a theology can be "scientific" and at the same time evangelical. Then in another direction, too, positive thought has made itself felt to a noteworthy degree. In nearly all the provincial synods of Prussia the so-called "Professor question," i. e., the teachings of the University professors contrary to the confessions of the church, was up for discussion, and in each case the representatives of the church decided more or less sharply against the liberalizing tendencies current at the universities. The Bavarian consistory went so far as to declare that this was not a struggle between two schools of theology, both of which were equally entitled to recognition, but between faith and unfaith.

It was high time that something should be done. Christ was being again crucified by those who should be His defenders. But recent events have shown that in Germany the Protestant church is at heart thoroughly evangelical and loves its Bible above everything else. Indeed, all signs indicate that the church is preparing for a new triumphal march. Vexilla regis prodeunt!

These statements receive a singular corroboration from an unexpected source, namely, the Chronik of Leipsic, itself an exponent of liberal theology. In No. 2 it furnishes statistics of the theological faculties at the nine Prussian universities, from which it appears that the conservatives are much stronger numerically than the liberals. In the old Prussian provinces there are sixteen liberal and twenty-six conservative theologians in the University faculty, and in the newer provinces eight liberals and nine conservatives. In the last two years fully twice as many conservatives as liberals were appointed, showing where the sympathies of the Government are.—Literary Digest.

Fleckenstein

THE NEW THEORY OF INSPIRATION. FREQUENT reference is made nowadays to the Polychrome Bible which is being printed under the editorship of a committee of the "higher critics" of America and Europe. This Bible, as its name indicates, is printed in several colors, each color standing for a certain period in literary construction, and every passage in the Bible being printed in the color of the period to which it is assigned by the critics. In this way the composite construction attributed to a book like Genesis stands out at once before the eye.

Mr. William T. Stead, of the London Review of Reviews, publishes in a frontispiece (January) a portion of a chapter of Genesis as it is to appear in its various colors, and sets himself to explaining the attitude of the higher critics toward the Bible, and to "make plain to plain men" the effect of their work upon the traditional theories of inspiration. We reproduce here Mr. Stead's explanation, which, as will be readily seen, is made by one in close sympathy with the new methods of treatment. Mr. Stead writes as follows:—

"For many years past so much has been said about the higher criticism and its bearing upon the Bible, that it is really time to try and make some of its conclusions plain to plain men. The result at which scholars such as Wellhausen, Cheyne, and Driver have arrived is by no means only of a negative kind. It is as positive as the theory of evolution, and quite as comprehensible. And what it comes to is this: In their opinion the whole of the old mechanical theory of the inspiration of the Bible has gone by the board as completely as the old mechanical theory of the creation of the world in a six-days' shift. But just as Darwinism suggested an infinitely more marvelous and divine theory of the creation of the world than the artless tradition of the Hebrews, so modern scholarship claims to have replaced the old theory of a God-dictated Bible by a theory of its origin far more divine.

"The frontispiece from the Polychrome Bible, with which I begin the New Year's number of The Review of Reviews, illustrates more clearly than any amount of description the way in which the new theory works. By printing a fragment of a single chapter, each section of which is printed in a color representing the period in which internal evidence suggests that it was compiled, the composite nature of the passage is as clearly brought out as a view of a transverse section of the world's surface in a text-book of geology illustrates the formation of the strata of the earth's crust. This chapter of Genesis, instead of being written off, as it were, at one sitting by Moses, doing dictation for the Almighty in the fifteenth century before Christ, is now, when subjected to the close analysis of modern scholarship, said to have been built up by a succession of unknown editors, the earliest of whom probably lived about 640 B. C., and the latest about 500 B. C. The evidence for this is to be found in the structure of the language, the style of the authors, and all these minute differences of words and allusions which would enable any school-boy—to take a simple example—to pick out from a page of poetical selections what was written by Chaucer, by Shakespeare, or by Kipling. The old theory of the authorship of Genesis is now put on a par with a claim that such a Chaucer-Shakespeare-Kipling composite was written with his own hand by Alfred the Great.

"The discovery of the composite nature of many of the sacred books and their comparatively late origin has necessitated a change in the theory of inspiration. Much of the Old Testament as we have it is not so much an original work as a kind of review of reviews of the history and traditions of Israel. As it is my duty monthly to sieve and sift the voluminous mass of periodical literature, summarizing, condensing, and extracting in order to get the main ideas of the writers into definite focus and manageable compass, so a succession of editors are held to have dealt with the traditions and ancient writings of the Hebrew race. Imagine this present number of The Review of Reviews carefully reëdited and condensed a hundred years hence by another editor, whose standpoint, although the same as mine admitted of very wide divergence in the matter of political and social perspective, and then two hundred years later let another editor reëdit the conglomerate mass so as to make it accord more closely to the altered needs of the new time. If then the resulting reëdited recasting of the previously twice-edited compost of condensation and extract were to be regarded as fixed and definite, and were not altered for a thousand years, we should then have a result not dissimilar to that which we are now said to have in the first six books of the Old Testament.

"Where then, according to the new theory, does inspiration come in? On this subject it is absurd to dogmatize. It may be sufficient to suggest in roughest outline some leading features of the new doctrine of inspiration.

"Divine inspiration is not to be found in a mechanical concatenation of words and syllables. The divine inspiration entered not primarily into a book, but into the life of the Hebrew race. There it germinated and grew until it bore fruit in certain preëminently inspired personalities, such as Amos and Isaiah. These prophets and holy men of old thus became the channels through which flowed into human consciousness the conception of the divine character and purpose which found its decisive culmination in the person of Jesus Christ. Their sayings and writings, which were reverently collected and transmitted, formed the raw material upon which successive editors worked. The various books of the Old Testament mirror more or less accurately the various phases or stages of the evolution of the God-idea. Some are believed to be comparatively free from editorial handling or condensation. Others, notably the so-called books of Moses, are very much edited indeed. But the inspiring idea of God and of his Kingdom dominated, although in very varying degrees, the prophet, the editor, and the race. The sacred writers, although inspired, were not infallible, but whatever errors they may have made never eclipsed the central truth which they themselves often but imperfectly understood.

"Such at least may be taken as the opinion of the more believing members of the school of higher critics. They may be right or they may be wrong. Probably they are both. But whether right or wrong, they affirm as unhesitatingly as the most rigid of the upholders of the older theory that the source of the inspiration of the sacred writers was divine, and that the soul of their teachings was the revelation of God."—Literary Digest.

SENSIBLE CONCLUSIONS UNDER PRESSURE.

THE campaign for United States Senator in Utah, lately terminated by the choosing of Joseph L. Rawlins over Moses Thatcher, has resulted in a wide divergence of opinion among the dwellers in the mountain State, and some political situations that to those of other States of the federal compact appear peculiar and strikingly suggestive.

The decision of Mr. Thatcher, of Logan, Cache County, a member of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles of the Utah Church, not to sign the manifesto written and presented by the Presidency to the Twelve for their signatures, declaring that no leading officer of the church should accept political office without first obtaining counsel and consent of their superior officers in the church, cost him his place in the quorum, from which he was deposed because he refused to sign it. His reason for refusing to so sign was that the leaders of the church, the Presidency having disavowed intention or purpose to interfere with the members of the church in regard to political preferences, left him free to act as his choice might determine, without fear of interference, and that he had accepted the statement of political freedom thus made by the leading authorities as having been made in good faith. He for this reason refused to sign, and his brethren deposed him. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Thatcher was proposed to the Legislature as a candidate for the United States Senatorship and was defeated by a vote of 31 to 29. Since the election Mr. Thatcher has been made the recipient of several enthusiastic public receptions. At one of these held at Logan, the home of Mr. Thatcher, of which the Salt Lake Tribune has a report in its issue for February 16, in response to a request for a speech, among other things said:—

He had voted for the anti-polygamy manifesto although it tore his heart strings, severed family ties and bastardized his offspring, but felt that 2 per cent of the people must not endanger the peace and safety of 98 per cent. He meant it honestly when he raised his hand voting with his quorum in favor of religious liberty, and honor demands the same meaning now.

He who thinks because we are surrounded by the walls of Statehood that it is safe to violate obligations is mistaken. He cited history in support of this. He had not laid aside the church for political position, but for the honor and liberty of the people. The Constitution, he stated, must be maintained inviolate. God's law is to abide by constitutional law.

It is a dangerous and unlawful power which can make man a Democrat one day, a Republican the next, and a Populist the day following.

When any church undertakes political control it reaps the whirlwind. No man can long ride two horses going opposite directions at the same time. He asked no man to follow his footsteps nor say a word in his behalf unless because conscience made him.

He referred to blocks of five and six which could be turned in the Legislature any way and time. The people of the State were not so anxious for the election of Moses Thatcher, but for the triumph of the principle involved.

The great Democratic leader referred to one who at the commencement of the fight stood fast a short time, but when the shot and shell rained got under cover and left his followers exposed. He advised the people to choose their own political leaders, then support them no matter what came.

We remember meeting Hon. Moses Thatcher at a meeting held by Bro. R. J. Anthony and self, in the basement of the Tabernacle at Logan, on the night of September 25, 1889, on which occasion we spoke on the marriage law as understood and held by the Reorganized Church. In that discourse we made it the duty of God's people in this dispensation as in all others, to keep the law of God; and used the quotation from the Doctrine and Covenants requiring the church to maintain the constitutional law of the land; and the further statement that "he that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the law of the land."

A year from that meeting to a day, on September 24, 1890, President Wilford Woodruff issued a manifesto virtually abandoning the dogma and practice of plural marriage; which manifesto was presented to the October conference held in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, and by an affirmative vote was ratified—no negative vote being called.

We are pleased to note these expressions of loyalty to the constitutional law of the land made by Hon. Moses Thatcher in the form reported by the Tribune; for the reason, that it is an indication that once free to think untrammelled by enshackling alliances, men think wisely and straight.

STILL PURSUING THATCHER.

THE following is from the Salt Lake Weekly Tribune for February 23, 1897:—

George W. Thatcher and Moses Thatcher, who have held the positions of president and trustee, respectively, of the Brigham Young college at Logan for the past twenty years, have been deposed by President Wilford Woodruff of the Mormon Church.

Two days after the close of the Senatorial contest each of the gentlemen named received a letter from President Woodruff, bearing date of January 29th, informing them that he had been contemplating a change in the personnel of the board of trustees of the Brigham Young college at Logan for some time past, and requesting their resignations.

The resignations were not tendered, and some days later the gentlemen received a second communication from President Woodruff notifying them that they had been removed and that M. W. Merrill and Orson Smith had been appointed to fill the vacancies thus caused.

It is understood that an attempt was made by the deposed trustees to hold a meeting of the board shortly after they received President Woodruff's first communication, but Bishop Preston of this city declined to meet with them upon the ground that they were not members of the board, and the contemplated meeting was abandoned.

The Brigham Young college at Logan was endowed by President Brigham Young, who on July 24, 1877, conveyed to certain trustees, named by him, about 20,000 acres of land in Cache County for the benefit of the college.

Moses Thatcher and George W. Thatcher were appointed by President Young as trustees at that time and served continuously since their appointment.

The provision of the trust under which President Woodruff has deposed the Thatchers is as follows:—

"The said trustees shall hold their office during the will and pleasure of the said party of the first part, his heirs or assignees, and shall be subject at any time to removal by him or them, or until the estate shall be fully settled up by the executors of the said party of the first part, and the executors discharged from all responsibility connected therewith. These said trustees shall be appointed and hold their office during the will and pleasure of the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints who believes in and carries out all the revelations given by the prophet, Joseph Smith, Jr., and President Brigham Young."

THE INAUGURATION.

THE inaugural ceremonies at Washington, March 4, presents one of the sublimest spectacles that human governments can possibly show; one probably never equalled since the gathering of the people at the foot of Mount Sinai. On that day one man who had held the reins of government over a Nation, the like of which is not now to be found on the earth, voluntarily presented himself before the representatives of the people over whom he had ruled and there laid down the rule he had held, resigning it into the hands whence he had received it, and witnessed the placing of another in the seat of power which he was so voluntarily vacating.

This scene, that of two citizens of the Republic standing in the open air, before a venerable Judge of the highest court known to the Nation, itself the creation of the Government which he represents, there in the presence of assembled thousands, one to lay down, the other to take up the sceptre of office, the rulership of a great Nation, is one of extraordinary beauty, grandeur, and significance.

Of these two men neither wore an insignia of rank of any sort. The venerable Judge wore the long black gown of his office; but neither cross nor badge. His head bore no flowing wig of curled and powdered hair, as his compatriots of the judicial bench in other lands have worn; but standing uncovered in the Divine and human presence his gray hair shone in the morning sun like an aureole of dignity and human greatness.

The ceremonies took place in the midst of massed hundreds of citizens in citizens' dress, the exceptions to the rule being representatives of royal courts abroad. American citizens, whose rulers were changing places and functions by their choice, stood near and around the three central figures of the group on the platform. No armed guard clad in glittering and bespangled uniform stood near them. No guard of honor or safety crowded between the people and their sovereigns. They were sovereign in their own right, every man of them, and valued no trapping or gear of earthly pomp or courtly preferment; but were as citizens—American citizens—both the civic and military guardians of their own peace and the nation's safety. Such a scene is calculated to cause the citizens of the Republic to reflect with pride upon the form of national government that has made it possible.

Mr. Cleveland bore his part in these striking ceremonies in a manly and dignified manner; sober, thoughtful, and strong, doubtless weary of the arduous labors as a public servant which there ceased for him, and glad that they were ended.

Mr. McKinley bore himself as one who was neither doubtful, nor afraid; though he must have known what scenes of care and labor awaited him. His confidence in the stability of the institutions he was assuming the duty of sustaining gave him an appearance of assurance which his after experience may seriously try; but he must also feel that as the chosen ruler of a great people he will demand and receive the cordial support of all.

With us in Republican America the cry is not, "The King is dead! Long live the king!" but rather, "The citizen has ceased to be ruler! The citizen is ruler! Long live the Republic!"

AGITATION IN WEST VIRGINIA.

BRO. M. T. SHORT has a characteristic way, all his own, of getting after those that oppose themselves to the work. We give a portion of a sample instance, with the reply, gleaned from a West Virginia paper. We note that the declination is also characteristic of some who refuse to do more than to skulk about and fire from a supposedly safe shelter; but who seem to fail to note that the average mind is apt to question why anyone should hesitate or fear to expose a "transparent delusion." After stating matter to be affirmed by disputants, Bro. S. says:—

Please come to time and face the music, or ever after hold your peace. An honorable war is far better than an ignominious peace. The terrific lightning purifies the atmosphere; the running streams sparkle with beauty and health; the ocean current fructifies the British Isles; and a theological tournament would surely stir the stagnant pools of Modern Babylon.

Remembering what a gnat can do for an elephant, and trusting that you are not too large to see us, and believing that a friendly, orderly investigation of our relative claims would be right and conducive to great good, I am, etc.

Editor Herald:—In your issue of February 3 there is a communication from a Latter Day Saint that has recently come into Marshall County in the interests of such a transparent delusion that I feel called upon to say to the public by way of explanation that under no circumstances could I be induced to enter into any debate. The cause that I have the honor to represent only requires Christ to be preached to the people. If Elder Short believes that Joe Smith was a prophet, I have no disposition to combat that kind of a delusion. If he wants a debate he will have to look outside of Moundsville. In the future I will content myself with treating challenges for public debate with the same silent contempt that I have done in the past, with due respects toward all who may honestly differ from me.

A MAIL FROM THE ADVENTISTS.

TOO MANY PREACHERS, OR THE FIELD NOT LARGE ENOUGH, WHICH?

ON the last Sunday of 1896 we attended service at an Advent church in a city near Boston. The audience was quite good; the pulpit theme was, "A review of the past year and the signs of Christ's coming at hand."

The preacher was serious and very earnest, evidently believing what he preached; impressively and with solemn effect he urged upon the people the evidences of the "day of the Lord" as ready to break on the world at any moment. The audience seemed quite in sympathy with the preacher's views, and freely responded to his powerful appeals; and all seemed to realize, more or less vividly, that awful events await us in the near future.

But a singular feeling came over us as, looking around, we counted four preachers, all of the same faith, sitting in the audience closely listening to their ministerial brother's earnest words. An Advent preacher proving from the holy word that the great judgment day is at the very doors, and four other Advent preachers, holding the same views, and sincerely believing that the "end of all things is at hand," simply listeners; their voices silent! And close by we knew of three more Advent preachers, seven in all, in one locality; all silent on that holy day; and the burning day of God close upon an unprepared world.

And yet all those men, every one of the seven, were in good health; well equipped, able preachers; with ripe experience, and enjoying the confidence of the people. Seven Advent ministers, in one locality, able-bodied men, with nothing to do but listen to the one man out of the eight.

We inly said, What does this mean? Who is responsible for this state of things? Is the Advent ministry a calling so popular and so well supported that men are rushing into it so rapidly that out of eight, only one can find a place to be heard on a fine Lord's Day? It could not be laziness on the part of those preachers, or fullness of bread, for we personally knew that every one of those seven idle preachers greatly desired to be at work for God, preaching his gospel of warning and preparation, on that day; but there were no open doors. And yet, on that same Lord's Day, within an area of fifty miles, there were a large number of Advent churches destitute of preaching.

How is this spectacle to be explained? Mostly in one way: There is among us no system, no plan, no arrangement for the employment of our preachers and the supply of our churches.

Our country churches, all over the land, are not half supplied, while for every church in the cities, there are plenty of aspirants.

Our young preachers are not specially averse to the more congenial city pastorates; and our city churches, many of them, touched with the prevailing selfishness of these times, are anxious only for their own success, no matter what becomes of the cause and the poor country congregations. And so the aged and middle aged preachers, who bore the burden in the heat of the day when they were younger, no longer able to breast the wintry storms, and lay down at night in cold rooms and colder beds, and not much wanted in the snug city parishes, are left without work; although their ripe experience and matured abilities are just what are needed for the healthy and solid prosperity of our great work and cause; and just what would save not a few of our churches from divisions, weakness, and decay.

But the grave question is: How long can a people, never numerous or strong, manage to keep itself in motion with so large a per cent of its limited ministerial talent, unused, ignored, idle? Any religious people that fails to utilize its men and means is already on the highway to swift decay. And the Advent body is no exception to this tendency.

Let our wise men, the seers of our Israel, our councils and conventions, ponder this matter at the opening of this new year. And know this—if there is no remedy to be found and applied, the decadence of our denomination is certain and swift. Only our Lord's immediate appearing can avert our humiliating weakness. But there is a remedy; and it is not yet too late to apply it.

Some one sent us lately a copy of The World's Crisis, and Second Advent Messenger, an Advent journal published at Boston, for January 6, 1897, from which we clip the foregoing wail, or at least it sounds like a wail.

There is in it a frank acknowledgment that the Advent people of that particular branch of believers in the second coming of Jesus is neither numerous, nor strong, and that there is no "system," "plan," nor "arrangement" for the successful employment of their preachers, or the supply of their churches.

To us it seems quite natural that Boston being a sort of center from which this band of believers radiate in the east, it should be a rallying center also, and a few preachers, more or less, at a meeting to hear one of their own number descant and discourse on the subject of their hope, ought not to be so strange a thing as the Crisis makes out of it.

But it is evident that the Crisis sees a possible decadence of their denomination, and that quite near.

It ought to have been suggested to the writer of this extract that there might be causes aside from the desire of young men to crowd to the city pastorates to the neglect of the country charges, which is resulting in decadence.

The believers in the second coming of Jesus, other than the Latter Day Saints, are sadly divided among themselves in regard to several theories held to be more or less essential to denominational existence. There are First-day and Seventh-day Adventists; the age-to-come, and the soul-sleeping branches; the Christian Advents and the Advent Christians, and possibly others, some holding one view of the time, place, and circumstances of the coming and some another—all persistently holding to their respective positions, with great stress on the particular item of faith that separates the mass.

Some have from time to time set the time of Christ's second coming, reasoning from the chronological data supposed to be found in types, symbols, prophecies, and their alleged fulfillment. It may be that the people by whom the Crisis is issued are one of these unfortunate setters of time—we think they are—and this setting of times coupled with the repeated failure of their prophetic calculations and prognostications based upon them, has placed them in the position of having cried "wolf, wolf," when no wolf was either heard or seen; and has brought the denomination into distrust with many, who believe in the coming but are at sea as to the when it will be.

This with the continual contest between the first and seventh day theories has resulted in creating indifference even among the ministry, for the contest being waged for victory makes now and again converts both ways from the contending hosts, and sometimes loses able champions to either side by an utter abandonment of the faith, both as to the coming and the word itself. Several of such cases have occurred.

We commend a consideration of this wail to the elders, with a view to the suggestion that they may profit by the contemplation of there being places within reach of their homes where congregations might be found to whom they might preach; rather than gathering in numbers to hear some one of their own faith, on ordinary occasions.

Apropos of this setting of time for the Savior to come, the Christian Herald, has issued a wall calendar and almanac for 1897, and in it winds up by advertising a work published and for sale at No. 20 Tudor Street, E. C., London, England, entitled "Future Wonders of Prophecy," and predicts the coming of Christ, the Second Advent, April 23, 1908.

The Lord may indeed come on that day; but, if he does, the Christian Herald and World's Crisis, will have to do a much better job of preaching the gospel between now and that day, than they have done heretofore, or the prophecy concerning his coming, made by the Lord himself, found in Matthew 24:14, will remain unfulfilled; which would seriously endanger his reputation as a true prophet.

REDUCED RATES TO CONFERENCE AND CONVENTIONS.

REDUCED rates to General Conference and Zion's Religio and Sunday school Conventions, have been secured—one and one third fare for the round trip. See particulars in Miscellaneous Department.

The Western Passenger Association authorities have notified the Secretary that our request for reduced rates would be presented to other associations. Favorable action will extend the reduced rate privilege to other territory. Results will be duly announced.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. J. HUNT from Deloit, Iowa, late date says:—

The conference at Dow City was a good one; business passed off pleasantly, meetings well attended and spiritual. Brn. C. Derry and J. C. Crabb, of the Little Sioux district, were present. Brn. J. F. McDowell and Bro. W. W. Blalock, the latter a "Christian," are in debate at Defiance. I hear that the "Christians" are feeling bad over the effort to put down "Mormonism."

Bro. Levi Gamet, Clearwater, Nebraska, writes:—

The tent scheme advances nicely, about twenty dollars being subscribed in this locality, others not heard from. The interest continues good at Clearwater. Bro. Mintun goes to Inman to-day, but will return and continue meetings in town on Wednesday and over next Sunday. We are having the use of the M. E. church building; that is, they control it, but it is owned by Congregationalists.

Brn. W. S. Macrae and E. A. Pratt writing from Nicely, Oklahoma, late date, state that they could use reading matter to advantage. They say:—

Please say to your readers that we can use their surplus literature, sermons, Ensigns, tracts, etc. This field is new and broad, and only two or three missionaries to work it. Literature will do a great part to educate the people, and prepare them for the preached word. If any can, send a few cents to Bro. Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa, and order some tracts sent to our address. Hopes received also.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, Lincoln, Nebraska, March 1:—

I go from here to Davy, Lancaster County, to hold a series of meetings; and from there I contemplate going to Agnew, Nebraska, for the same purpose. Plenty of opportunity for work, but a great deal of sickness through the country. We had a real good conference at Nebraska City two weeks ago. Pres. A. H. Smith was with us.

Sr. Ella Miller, Nevada, Missouri, late date, offers a suggestion:—

I appreciate Brother Stebbins' "Instructions to District and Branch Clerks" very much and have clipped the same from Herald and fastened in the "District Record." Trust others whom it may instruct will do likewise.

Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, Crenshaw, Pennsylvania, the 2d inst.:—

The true-hearted, generous band of saints here rejoice in the addition of four to their number and other excellent friends made.

The whole place is astir over "the delusion." The end is not yet. I have enjoyed the stay. Earnest effort and sacrifice on the part of saints here with consistent lives before men, are telling. May they be kept faithful unto the crowning day. Off to-morrow for district conference, and then westward.

Bro. D. E. Tucker, Berrydale, Florida, the 22d ult.:—

Conference over and the saints strengthened and encouraged, and some resolved to live better lives and to strive for a closer walk with God. Winter is now over here and the peach and plum trees are in full bloom, and the field now open again for missionary work, and plenty of it to do, which I love to see, as we can't do much here in the winter season. Glad indeed to know the good Lord is feeling after the different factions of the church, in his own way. Let the good work roll on.

The saints will be pleased to learn that our excellent brother, Joseph F. Burton, is fully alive to the interests of the Master's work. In a letter from Papeete dated December 22, he states:—

I preached in the native tongue on Sunday morning again, occupying about forty minutes; but using much scripture quotations helped me out. Yet I was able to make my comments fairly well,—of course stammering,—but in the testimony meeting in the afternoon, while speaking to the natives of the necessity of living Christ-like that we may obtain his blessings and be prepared for either death or his coming, I felt very well indeed, and most of the time spoke as fluently as I could desire. The brethren here said that I spoke very plainly. At least they showed by moistened eyes and bright countenances that they partook of the same good influence that the Holy Spirit gave me. . . . Emma also spoke a few words in the testimony meeting in the Tahitian language.

This is good news. The Lord will help those who put themselves into his service. Not yet four months of experience among the Tahitians, and making himself understood by them is an excellent record. May God bless the missionaries. Bro. Burton had joined Bro. Case at the place of holding conference, in January.

Bro. E. C. Briggs, of the Twelve, writing from Grand Rapids, Michigan, February 19:—

I have been laboring in many parts of my mission during the year; from north to south, the elders generally have been doing well. Taken as a whole all have done well and are alive in the work. There has never seemed to be so much anxiety to hear the word in all parts as this year. Steps are being taken this week to open to us, by law, three union churches in this vicinity, that have been closed against the church in the last few weeks. This movement is made by those outside the church who have been aggrieved by such closing of these buildings, so the saints are not involved, except it may be that when the suits are tried the effort may be made to plead that we are not a religious people within the meaning of the contract when these union churches were built. I think we should be prepared this year to crowd our work to its utmost in these parts. It would seem that the enemy is combined, from the Utah elders to the last sectarian to fight us; and yet it only serves to help open doors for our elders with renewed life and hope.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. D. W. SHIRK writes that he has located at Minatare, Nebraska, near which he finds some scattered saints. Bro. D. M. Rudd's labors had interested many, who commend him and his works. Prospects good for additions to the church.

Bro. M. G. Maudsley, of Maquoketa, Iowa, writes that he finds some good saints in that region of country.

There is scarcely a doubt that the conditions growing out of the Cretan trouble are such as to make the situation in the East one of utmost gravity. The Cretan crisis is rapidly merging into the larger question of the fate of the Ottoman Empire, and it is becoming strongly probable that its radical solution will speedily be forced upon Europe. It has repeatedly been declared by Lord Salisbury and other high authorities during the last year that the only possible solution of this question is by the sword. But a short time ago Mr. Balfour assured the British House of Commons in solemn language that a general European war was inevitable if the partition of Turkey was attempted. The powers have given Greece six days to withdraw her forces from Crete. This she refuses to do, but is calling out her reserves instead. Turkish troops are being massed on the Macedonian frontier and open war between the two nations is probable. King George of Greece declares that his nation would rather be obliterated from the map of Europe than to withdraw and permit further massacres of Greek Cretans by the Turks.

The editors are obliged to decline much of the obituary verse that is sent in; for two reasons: lack of space, and insufficient merit in the lines composed. None need feel hurt at this action, as it is simply a matter of necessity and in the interests of our readers. Were we to publish all such matter sent us, the HERALD readers would be deprived of much else of value and necessary to be put before them. As it is, much has been inserted that is not, correctly speaking, "poetry." While the sentiments of grief and affection are appreciated, the worth of matter and the space at our disposal are also to be estimated and appreciated, as all things should be, according to their merits.

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 4.

A COOL WAVE.

WHEN we got to the lower end of the village we saw a niau house,—like the fireplace conundrum, with a back, two sides, and part of a front,—where sat a small woman with a baby in her arms, and we drew nigh. But it was to see more closely the evenly square front yard built up at least two and a half feet from the ground, of rocks, and the top was leveled off with smooth, glossy cobblestones, flattened on the top. Most of them were oval, varying in size, some as large as two and a half feet one way and one and a half the other. The floor of the "fare" was the same only smaller cobbles and much more glossy. I wondered if it was from the constant wear of bare feet. We had passed two native women sitting on the side of the road under a large tree in front of a house, and the one who gave us the most friendly greeting in look, broad smile, and bow, came at once to where we were and invited us to step upon the stone square and sit down on the front side of the house in the shade of the heavily projecting niau eaves and get cool, which we did, she sitting on the stones in the sun in front of us. She was very sociable, could understand and also speak a few words of English, but we talked mostly in Tahitian. I spoke of the tamarind trees in front. She said, "A too much tamarind." She learned that we would like some, and when we were ready to go again took a basket and we went with her to where the branches of great trees hung clear to the ground, just loaded with large pods of tamarinds. They were much larger than any we saw in Tahiti. When the basket would hold no more we shook hands with her and said good-bye, Joseph left a twenty-five cent piece in her hand, but she quickly reached her hand out and dropped it into his pocket again, saying, "No, no; you my friend." We learned from the consul that that house was the residence of the last queen of the islands.

Fearing we might keep the boat waiting we walked back, though most of the way we could be plainly seen from the ship. Got to the landing quarter before three, but no boat there. The sun was very hot upon that little jetty, but we thought they would see us in a few minutes and send the boat. Now perhaps I had ought to make a clean breach over all the connecting circumstances from that time till this, and simply say we got off all right in time. But that would not give the saints at home the incidents of the voyage, and our experience during the same. For some cause, we do not yet know, the captain would not send the boat. Joseph stood there in the blistering sun two hours. We could see them all on deck and knew, almost, who each one was. And they saw us, too. I could not stand the hot sun, so walked back and forth twice and sat under a tree at the shore; but the sand flies bit hard. This was a public snub. The natives, seeing the captain would not send the boat in, would not take us off. While there we amused ourselves looking at the natives loading the copra into square barges that they towed to the vessel with rowboats. They carried the sacks on their shoulders through the surf up to their waists, and when the loaded barge came to shore the natives ran out to her, a perfect line of them, and one stood in the barge loading the flour on their shoulders, putting three sacks of flour on the shoulder of each man, and they ran in and up to the store with it. After the last barge had been unloaded and the men left off work and were going home, Joseph went up and asked an officer to send one of the men off with us, and he did so for a Chili quarter. As soon as we got to the vessel, the captain and consul went ashore, and the boat was going more or less till ten in the evening. We had retired before the captain and bulk of the passengers came on board, though those of the family of French people came early and seemed more friendly to us than ever before, but when morning came we found a very cool atmosphere for such a hot climate. There seemed to be a conspiracy against us. We were feeling dreadfully hurt ourselves and it was a very quiet breakfast. The young French ladies would not even look towards me. The consul tried to stand by us by not being ungentlemanly in his demeanor; in fact, he, only, remained at the table till we had finished eating. But on board those ships it is a very independent person who will venture to smile in the direction that the captain frowns.

The ship was gotten under way early next morning; that is, Sunday morning. There was a delightful breeze and the day was cool and beautiful, and the people were cool too. All day we were left severely alone, with the exception of just enough politeness to fill the law. Prior to this we were as well used—and a little better in some respects—as any on board, although we did not take their wines or brandies, neither sip deck coffee as all the rest, while the gentlemen smoked their cigars, and both sexes chatted and made merry. We felt keenly this ill treatment, but we, too, must study our own interests and say nothing. These men in authority have no competition to fear, and they seem to like to be overbearing at times simply to show their authority. But all such things work together for good to those who love the Lord. While thus feeling so badly, not so much because of the present, but fearing that the influence of these influential people here on board would be exerted against us in Tahiti, when we were thinking they were so friendly, in my depression I sought out my favorite volume, "Afterglow" (not saying it was the only good book I read). I had looked at it twice in packing up my books before deciding to bring it with me. The binding was so delicate, and it was Sr. Walker's Christmas gift to me, and I was very careful not to have it soiled. But I remembered I had found "heart's-ease" between its leaves many a time, and knew there would be times, aye, many times when I should feel just such a need. And now this day was the first time in more than two years that I had looked within it. I opened it unwittingly and read a few beautiful lines that I had never seen before. They came home to my soul in a way so sweetly comforting that I forgot but what the Master was speaking those words to me. I will reproduce them for the benefit of many another whose burden seems heavy:—

"Child of my love, 'lean hard,'

And let me feel the presence of thy care.

I know thy burden, child—I shaped it,

Poised it in my own Hand, made no proportion

In its weight to thine unaided strength.

Before ever I laid it on, I said,

'I shall be ever near, and while she leans on me

This burden shall be mine, not hers,

So shall I keep my child within the circling arms

Of mine own love,—Here lay it down, nor fear

To impose it on a Shoulder which upholds

The governments of worlds—yet closer come,

Thou art not near enough; I would embrace thy care,

So I might feel my child reposing on my heart;

Thou lovest me? I doubt it not,

Then loving me, 'Lean Hard.' "

There was a power back of those words that gave them all the force of having been uttered by the loving Father, while feeling his encircling arms of love, and I thanked him for the circumstance that brought it all about. And all I read during the day in the Bible was as though written expressly for that occasion, till it seemed to me that the Lord wished us to know that he had taken cognizance of the whole circumstance. And I could not but think had the captain known that he who shapes the destinies of men pleads the cause of his saints, he would not have thus put us to open confusion. But perhaps he is a little sorry even now,—since the tide seems to be turning in our favor,—for when he came on deck this morning he bade me a very polite "Good morning," even touching his hat, such as I have not seen him do before.

THE TWO-TEXT SYSTEM.

MUCH has been said and written of late concerning a uniformity of the texts to be used in teaching the different grades in our Sabbath schools. District conventions have considered the question, and some have arrived at the conclusion that such uniformity would have all the merits and none of the demerits of the present two-text system. And a late writer said, "It is as foundationless as the idea is amusing that a text in the Old Testament could not be simplified as easily as one in the New Testament."

This decision of the convention and this statement of the writer at once show the question open to consideration upon two lines; namely: Whether a uniformity be desirable, and whether such uniformity should be established by causing the primary lessons to conform to the senior texts, or vice versa.

Let us consider the first question, why are there different grades in our Sabbath schools? Is not the fact that we do grade them an evidence that we perceive that the needs and capabilities of pupils of different age and development differ also? All admit this. Then is it not also recognizable that a primary pupil could not keep up with the strides of the seniors, even should they start together and an attempt were made to simplify those lessons? It would be like a grown person and a child passing together through a field of flowers: The grown person gathers right and left with rapidity and strength and purpose, while the little child, hurried along by the side of the elder, would grasp here and reach out there, but because of his small stature, because of the shortness of his little arms, he cannot reach so far nor so quickly, nor carry with precision what he may gather; and he will be fortunate indeed if when the field is passed he finds one poor crushed and worthless blossom in his weary, baffled fingers. Did he stop with sweet childish leisure to gather the beautiful flowers, to look in their bright faces, and with keen delight and appreciation drink in the fragrance and meaning of each tiny floweret, he would be left, Oh, so far, behind in the tramp after treasures! This is peculiarly applicable to the search after the precious pearls of truth in the Sabbath school and its lessons.

Now concerning the objection made about the inconvenience some encounter at review time. Should a uniformity be established, in order to make himself perfectly understood by all in the school, would not the superintendent have, after all, to question the primaries by themselves, or at least to frame his questions to suit their small understandings? Would it not be as easily accomplished by addressing a few questions to the older ones and then, did he notice little restless movements turn and say, "Now primaries," and a bright question about their lesson meets with such hearty response that all the school smiles with interest in the "little tots."

In order to simplify the senior lessons to meet the needs of the primaries it would necessarily follow that much of interest and value would be left out, and thus, would the young child have gained a clear and comprehensive study of the four or five chapters which are often embraced in a senior lesson? And at review time would it be reasonable to suppose that the primaries would give a perfect and comprehensive attention to the questions on a senior lesson of which their own knowledge was so fragmentary?

Is not the other way after all, the better one?

As it now is, lessons are adapted to the children and they may take a whole lesson to a few acts of Jesus contained entirely in a few verses, and they learn, understand, and assimilate the small amounts fed them, and though slow, their progress is a sure and safe one.

Now about the teachers' study. In large Sunday schools where there are a number of primary teachers, it is certainly best for them to hold separate meetings for study—not simply because their lessons are different, but because they need, in such a greater degree, the helps and benefits of interchange of thoughts and ideas, as to the best way of gaining and holding interest, the best methods of teaching children, of illustrating the lesson. This would be of equal benefit were the texts identical with the senior.

Where the schools are small could not a portion of the evening be devoted to a study of each lesson? Is there a need for a primary teacher to sit disinterestedly by while the senior lesson is studied or vice versa?

We are not children! Surely we can glean truth from a study of all that is good.

Now then, where should this uniformity (were it desirable) be placed? Should the primary lessons be brought into conformity with the senior lessons as they now are? Most emphatically do we say, No.

We surely know that the basis of child-teaching, and of kindergarten work, is the application of principles. Do not the children learn by imitation? and are not those lessons impressed indelibly upon their pliant minds, by performance and application of those truths taught them?

What then has the child to gain by a study of genealogy, of prophecy, and Old Testament mysteries which have often proved a stumblingblock to older people, and have furnished all our advanced men with strong meat? Is this for our babes? Ah no! Keep them studying the gospel and its plain teachings, which they can apply in their daily lives. Let them learn of the Christ and his gentle virtues. Let them be taught of his love, and learn to love their fellow creatures. Let them be taught his forgiveness and learn to forgive and be merciful to their playmates.

Tell them how Christ prayed; of his faith, and his humility; tell of his reverence, his sacrifice, his faithfulness to duty; and show them how to follow in the footsteps of their Elder Brother.

You remember the motto on the school-room walls, "We learn by doing," which the wise Professor wished to modify in the intermediate rooms by making it, "We learn by study;" and in the senior rooms, "We learn by thinking." This is so true of the primary, the intermediate, and the senior work in our Sabbath schools; and the primaries should be taught the first principles.

What safer and more firm a foundation could you lay for a religious training?

Remember the building we are helping to rear, and make the foundation on the Rock of Strength. Oh, do not take the little lambs from their safe shelter in the bosom of the tender Shepherd, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not!" Rather, yes, far rather, let the intermediates and seniors return to that close association with Christ which a careful study of his life affords. That would be best.

Let us take the primary lesson text as the standard and enlarge upon them to meet the requirements of the older pupils. Surely this is more reasonable than the opposite course would be.

Again do we most earnestly urge upon you to leave the little ones with Him who "took them up in his arms and blessed them;" and that a most serious and irreparable injury would be inflicted upon them should you decide that the foundation of their religious instruction in the Sabbath school be formed of a curtailed, rapid, and but fragmentary study of the mysteries, prophecies, and problems of the Old Testament.

Let us be careful of the training of the children, for it is written, "Their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

Desiring only that which shall prove best for all,
AUDIE ANDERSON.

NEW HOLLAND, Ill., Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—It may be interesting to some of your readers how we are operated upon by the Spirit at times.

On coming to this place in the train I felt an anxious desire to preach the gospel. I have some very fast friends in the town. I have sold some of them goods for fifteen years. I am always welcome.

I had hoped for an opening of some kind. The bell rang; a lecture on Napoleon is the subject. I go, listen to an eloquent lecture by the Rev. O'Neal. My train is delayed next morning, and we engage in discussing the lecture, and thought produced questions, until I am asked if I believe in experimental religion. I ask the questioner to define it. I begin to preach; for two hours question after question is propounded, until I travel the gospel road from its birth to its final triumph. I am told by a Mr. Price that I have given him more hope, more comfort, and joy than all the teachings of his life together. "Tell me about your church." I do, and astonishment is the expression on face and feature and tears come to the eye and joy to the heart, the joy of a devoted father who had lost a son.

When I showed them that the hearts of the children would be turned to the fathers and the fathers to the children, and the work of redemption would go on and on, it seemed to Mr. Price as if an angel of light had come across his path.

"I surely will read your book," said he. "I have given you a synopsis of Mormonism from foundation to capstone," said I. "My home is yours hereafter," said he.

The Spirit that is burning in my breast while I write approves joyfully of the work done.

Fraternally,

J. A. ROBINSON.

AUDUBON, Minnesota, Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—I bade farewell to loved ones at home on the 2d of January, arriving the same day at Stewartsville, Missouri. Was met at the depot by my son, J. W. Roberts, who conveyed me to his home five miles out in the country, where I enjoyed a pleasant visit with him and wife. I spoke twice on Sunday in the city of Stewartsville and had a good time with many of my old friends and neighbors. I also spoke four times at the Pleasant Grove church, and twice at the Gorman church, baptizing one at the last-named place. I enjoyed much of the Spirit while among the saints at the above-named places, and thank them very kindly for the manner in which I was cared for. May God bless them, is my prayer.

On the 22d I bade farewell to old Missouri saints and off for the north country, arriving at this point in due time and in the midst of a howling blizzard. Found the saints and friends in fair health and glad to see the Dutchman back again and ready for duty. The continuous cold and stormy weather has hindered much in holding meetings, it being too cold for teams to stand out; hence I have labored in connection with others in making seats for the large tent, and I am glad to say that the seats are all made and are in good shape. I am very thankful to those who have come to my assistance, both in labor and money, to accomplish the end sought for; that is, to have comfortable seats for the world's people to come and hear the gospel, and not a luxury for the saints of the Northern Minnesota district, as has been intimated by a former writer to church papers. We are glad to state that the large tent purchased a year ago was purchased for the entire mission, and it was so stated by the writer when the call was made for means to make the purchase.

God is blessing his children up in this cold country, we are having genuine good meetings, young and old, all are taking hold with full faith, and are having grand testimonies of this latter-day work.

The snow is now about four feet deep on a level where the wind does not strike it. Other places it is drifted up to the roofs of the houses, etc. Trains hardly ever get through anywhere near their regular time.

I have read the Church History and find that a long-felt need is being given to the church. I hope and pray that every family of saints will have one of these histories placed upon the center table of their sitting rooms for inspection by those who chance to visit with them.

I am hoping and praying for a good General Conference, and I can truly say that its success is sure if all come with the Spirit of Christ with them. May God bless one and all, is my humble prayer.

In bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

WHICH IS YOUR PATTERN?

"GOOD morning, brother; you have a fine lot of hogs; I suppose they will pay your rent?"

"Well, no; the fact is, I don't know how I can pay my rent; I will have to kill about three more for summer meat, too. I killed two, but they are about gone. I never see you butcher any; it must cost you a good deal to buy all your meat."

"We don't eat much; two or three dollars would pay for all the meat we eat in a year; you know the Lord says in the Word of Wisdom that it should be used sparingly, and it is pleasing unto him that it should not be used only in times of winter, or cold, or famine. How is Sister Johnson this morning? I saw the doctor stop here.

"O, she is pretty poorly; it seems some of us are sick nearly all the time; why, it has cost us over sixty dollars for doctors and medicine this fall and winter! How is it you folks keep so well?"

"Well, I can tell you how I account for it: we try to keep the Word of Wisdom; we eat very little meat, we drink neither tea nor coffee, and we have no faith in patent medicines or doctors; but we always keep a bottle of consecrated oil in the house and use it for all ailments, and are nearly always blessed in using it."

"We believe in these things too, but we don't seem to have faith enough to put them into practice somehow. I suppose your folks are getting ready for General Conference?"

"Yes, we expect to attend most of the time and keep our share of the visitors; but there is time enough to prepare."

"Why, at our house they have been sewing and fussing for two weeks. I'm glad it don't come to Lamoni very often; you see we all have to have new clothes, and it will cost over fifty dollars; we don't like to appear shabby and everybody else dressed well!"

"That's just what my wife and I were talking about the other day, and we concluded to wear what clothes we had so we could pay our tithing. You know, some of the elders had to go home to provide for their families this last year. If they spend all their time in the ministry we ought to make some sacrifice to help sustain their families. You have not been to prayer meeting lately?"

"No, I had to attend the lodge."

"But, didn't you know that those that belonged to the lodge had changed the night for prayer meeting, so they could attend both?"

"No, I didn't know that. But why don't you come and join the lodge?"

"Because I don't believe in secret societies; the books speak strongly against such; and, excuse me for speaking plainly, I don't believe anyone belonging to the secret societies of the world can be a good, true Latter Day Saint. But I must be going; I want to go to town and pay for my church papers for the coming year."

"That reminds me that I owe the Herald Office six or seven dollars; but I can't pay it just yet, it's hard to pay anything these hard times. Good morning, call again."

Question: How many thousands of dollars will we spend this coming General Conference for fine clothes and to make a show that would do more good paid into the church treasury? Remember the Lord has said, "Let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the workmanship of thine own hands."

ALBERT.

LAMONI, IOWA, February, 1897.

CAIN HILL, Mo., Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—As I have not reported through your columns since September (I believe), I shall not attempt to tell your readers of all my success and failures, but will say that I have been busily engaged when not prevented by sickness in my family.

In the month of December I heard of some Utah people at Denmark, and went to see them, and found two of their elders present. The elders are pleasant young men, very well educated, full of faith and zeal for their cause, but altogether without ministerial experience. I spent several days with them and while there I preached five sermons. The elders were present at each service and seemed to be somewhat interested while I endeavored to set forth the claims of the Reorganization and exposed the erroneous doctrine taught by the Utah Church. Two, who had given their names to be baptized into the Utah Church, when they heard some of the mistakes of Utahism desired something better, so I baptized them into the Reorganization. I asked those elders to discuss the issue, but they declined, saying that they were counseled to shun discussion.

I speak a word of warning to our scattered members everywhere, and especially to those living in the South, as the Utah Church is flooding this southern part of the United States with her missionaries. They will make inquiry, and wherever they can hear tell of a "Mormon" they will go, and if they should happen to belong to the Reorganization the elders will say, "Well, there remains but very little difference between us since the church in Utah has ceased teaching and practicing polygamy," etc. Now, brethren, do not be deceived. I sounded the faith of the Utah Church while I was in company with these young elders at Denmark, and am prepared to say that the Utah Church still holds the doctrine of polygamy as a holy principle and seeks to uphold it by the Bible, but claim it is suppressed by an ungodly act of the National Legislature. I read the revelation authorizing plural marriage in their Doctrine and Covenants, also read their defense of its practice in their Compendium, and I am in possession of a tract treating on doctrine which one of these young elders gave me and it teaches that, "Marriage is honorable in all, whether monogamic or polygamic and the bed undefiled," etc. And in this same tract the Utah Church censures the Congress of our United States of America for the passage of what they call "that infamous Edmunds bill," which you well know prohibits the practice of plural marriage.

The tract referred to gives dates of historical occurrences as late as 1889, while I believe the Edmunds bill prohibiting plural marriage became a law in 1882. Does that look like they are not teaching plural marriage now? Brethren, it does not make people of honorable reputation think any more of you to harbor these missionaries while they plant their work in communities, neither does it make the way any more easy for us. But, to the contrary, people will look upon you as one of them and will very likely turn a deaf ear to you when your own missionaries visit you. Brethren, look out for them.

After leaving the neighborhood of Denmark, in Jackson County, I came to Bald Knob, White County, and began to preach in a private house, the church doors all being closed against me. While at this place Bro. J. M. Smith, a priest, who lives at Cato, Arkansas, joined me. Bro. and Sr. Sands and others of the saints did all they could to make the meeting a success, but so far as converting the world is concerned, our meeting was a failure; but the saints were strengthened, and after preaching about a week we closed.

From there I went to Lawrence County, accompanied by Bro. Prince, of Bald Knob, to a neighborhood where he thought we might do some gospel work; but alas! they had all the gospel they wanted in that vicinity; so I went next to Sharp County, near Center, the place where I met King, a leading Campbellite, in discussion, in January, 1896. While there I attended the last of a four-days' debate between a Baptist and a Campbellite who was hired by the same people that hired King to meet me in the debate referred to, and it was somewhat amusing to the writer to note the conflict in teaching of these two Goliaths of Campbellism. King taught a perpetual succession from the day of Pentecost, while Lasley taught a complete apostasy. How is that for the unity of the faith, even in Campbellism? I found quite an interest in our work at this place, but was summoned home to the bedside of wife and oldest son, both sick with lagrippe, but both were soon up again. I have spent the most of the months of January and February in Oregon and Howell Counties, Missouri. The rest of these two months were spent in Sharp and Fulton Counties, Arkansas. We closed our meeting here last night and will go ten miles west of Thayer to-day.

In bonds,

JOSEPH WARD.

FONTANELLE, Iowa, Feb. 23.

Editors Herald:—Eight months have passed since our Braden encounter and we are again at Fontanelle. Evidences of the late "unpleasantness" still remain, and will long continue. Lifetime friends have been estranged and in instances have become bitterest foes. Methodism is at a low ebb, and our friends (?) the Christians or Disciples are not having an ideal paradise. Your readers will remember that the M. E. minister, Rev. J. C. Hall, refused to defend the claims of his church as agreed, and demanded an apology from me for saying that he provoked the discussion, and publicly accused me of falsehood. My authority for the statement was Bro. E. Blair. Rev. Hall read a paper signed by two of his members to offshoot Bro. Blair's statement.

Since returning here I have received the following from one of the men who signed his name to Rev. Hall's denial:—

"FONTANELLE, Iowa, Feb. 18, 1897.

"To all whom it may concern:—

"This is to certify that on the 17th of March, 1896, I heard Rev. J. C. Hall, pastor of the M. E. Church, state concerning Elder T. W. Williams, of the R. C. of J. C. of L. D. S., that he 'sneaked off like a dog;' and farther: in answer to a question of Elmer Blair's asking if he would meet Elder Williams in debate, stated that he would meet Elder Williams any time and anywhere; and farther: that on the day of the closing night of Elder William's discussion with Elder Braden, Rev. J. C. Hall came to me and in haste secured my signature to a paper the opposite of the facts stated above, which when I considered their import realized were untrue, and I hereby desire that truth may obtain and in the interests of justice voluntarily sign my name certifying that the facts stated above are true.

"Signed, EDWARD SCHWANEBECK."

This man was a member of the M. E. Church, but has since left it. One of the stewards of the church told me that Hall by his action had incurred the displeasure of his people, and I am assured that he has the contempt of the majority of the people. He lacked considerable of getting his salary last year and is still further behind this year. The members did not desire his return this year. Numbers have left the Methodist Church.

Braden has not yet been paid for holding the discussion and has written for his money; there is a fear that he will sell their church unless the money is forthcoming. Surely it is hard to "kick against the pricks." I think Braden is right in insisting on his pay though. It will be all he'll get. These people will never talk debate with the Latter Day Saints again. A prominent church worker recently said, "We know Mr. Williams is a ——— man, but then he tears our churches all to pieces, so we'll not go to hear him." The church members, especially Methodists, are keeping their promise; but there are many interested who are not creedbound. The seed sown is not uprooted and we will reap in time.

Took dinner yesterday with a Christian family. They believe the work as far as they have investigated. When the weather abates several will in all probability obey. Bro. John Lentz baptized one recently. Numbers are investigating. La grippe has been prevalent here, so our audiences have not been very large. Brn. Butler and Lentz have been holding meetings in the country, and report success.

My sojourn in Des Moines was very pleasant. I preached nearly every night while there; attended district conference, and by invitation prayed for the senators in the capitol. I do think the interests of the work call for an active representative to care for our interests in Des Moines—one who can devote his entire time to the work. Brn. Scott, Roth, and Kephart are doing good work in that district.

Shall return to Council Bluffs for Sunday.
T. W. WILLIAMS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—After examining my surroundings I find that I am back again in this land of snow and blizzards. About the 10th of November last I was taken sick with sciatic rheumatism and grip, and was so bad at times that I could not turn in bed, and was finally compelled to go home and stop all gospel work; and now after near three months sickness I am back again, trying to tell the gospel story.

On my way here I made a stop at Windom my old home and by request spoke last Sunday to my old friends and neighbors there. A Mr. Gillum volunteered to find a place for me to speak in and went to some of the trustees of the popular churches but failed to get one for fear that some of the members would not like it. But said that if he could get a hall they would go and hear me. So he hired a hall and I wrote three notices to give to the pastors of the three leading churches for them to read at their Sunday morning service, but only one was read. The pastor of the Baptist Church was man enough to read the one handed to him, but the others would not. However a good congregation came out at three p. m. to hear what I had to say, and I found that the fire was still burning upon the altar, and that fresh fuel had been added, and for over an hour I told them the old story. When I had finished the Mr. Gillum that had secured the hall arose and said that they had heard what I had to say and told them that they knew that every word of it was gospel and then took up a collection for the use of the hall and got one dollar and sixteen cents. Many came and took me by the hand and among them the trustees that would not let me have the church and said that they could indorse all that and seemed well pleased with my effort. Some said that there was some power behind that for they knew that I could not speak that way of myself. I think good was done, and shall go back again when warm weather comes, and make a stronger effort, and hope to reap, or trust that others may.

This has been a very cold winter here and because of snow and cold it is almost impossible to do any work out in the country on the prairies. The most the missionary can do is to keep the fires burning and hold that which we have gained in the warmer weather. Shall try and push the work from now until conference time and by thus doing will have places ready for those that are sent here next year. Bro. Peter Anderson is working his way south and expects to be at the coming conference.

Hoping to abide the conflict, I am for truth and right,
E. A. STEDMAN.

GOOSE CREEK, W. Va., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you I have preached twice in the court house in Harrisville, and had other meetings arranged, but recalled them on account of the weather and high water. Sr. Mary Cross is very sick, and expected to live but a short time.

The brethren of Harmony branch, Ritchie County, are building a church. They expect to have it ready for dedication by the coming summer, and want Bro. L. R. Devore to prepare himself for a big crowd.

I met Brethren Godbey and Biggs at Goose Creek, who had been holding a series of meetings here. They left me to continue awhile, and they commenced preaching about two miles from here. On the second night they were egged, and on the third night also. Only one egg hit Bro. Biggs, on the ankle; and one struck the wall behind Bro. Godbey and splashed on his Bible, which was open before him. There were from four to five dozen thrown in all, and some within a few steps of Bro. Godbey, and still he came through the "fire" without getting the "smell" of eggs upon him. Some of the eggers say he cannot be hit. The parties are known, at least some of them, and there is evidence sufficient to convict them. No arrests have yet been made, but I think soon will be. Brethren G. and B. are good soldiers. This is Bro. B's first experience. They left this morning for Cabin Run branch, in Doddridge County. I shall start for home this evening. My wife has had the diphtheria, but is getting better.

In bonds,

BRUNER, Mo., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—We are still trying to move the cause of Zion in the hill country of the Ozarks or "the land of the big red apple," as it is called. The missionary force here are few in number, but by the help of the local brethren we are keeping the leaven at work. I organized a branch on Sunday, the 24th, at Bruner, Christian County, Missouri. Elder John R. Wedlock was chosen president, Bro. Merritt priest, Bro. William Lewis clerk. They expect to build a church soon. A lot has been offered for that purpose. This branch bids fair to be a prosperous one, as it has good members and a good corps of officers. Bro. Wedlock, the president, has baptized about eighteen persons this conference year. Is that not good for a local elder?

Elders McGuire, C. M. Bootman, J. H. Tibbles, and S. T. Mayloch have aided in ministerial labors. Elders Sparling and W. R. Pickering labor in Springfield.

I wish to say to the priesthood and others who read this letter, Let us in the Southern Missouri district push the work by using all the means in our power, financial and otherwise, that the work may prosper. Finances are low, it is true; but we can all do something; hence let us labor diligently now while it is called "to-day," so that at the harvest we may "come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves."
C. J. SPURLOCK.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Feb. 16.

Editors Herald:—Last evening our district conference closed its work, and all through it was profitable and instructive. Last Friday evening there was held in the church by Elder T. A. Hougas, of Hendersonville, Iowa, a Sunday school teachers' review. On Saturday morning the Sunday school workers held a convention, and in the afternoon. In the evening they held their entertainment. During the afternoon Apostle A. H. Smith and his son, Elder F. A. Smith, came in. Elder F. A. Smith left that evening for his field of labor, while Apostle A. H. Smith remained and preached morning and evening, Sunday, and last evening, three able and powerful sermons, which were full of light and information to all present. The attendance was good and those present interested.

In the afternoon of Sunday, Elder T. A. Hougas addressed the saints and outsiders, on the topics of Sunday school work, then he left for his home that evening.

On Monday the saints assembled in our church for conference business. In the forenoon and afternoon valuable instructions and directions were received from Apostle A. H. Smith, concerning the work. Then the conference closed by his able and powerful sermon Monday night. It was a peaceable, harmonious conference.

I felt glad to be among the saints again, and to hear the gospel preached in plainness and power by God's chosen and authorized servant, whom I have not seen for years; and it was a great pleasure to meet and hear him, and I felt glad to meet his son, Elder F. A. Smith, and shake hands with him, as this was the second time I had seen him in Nebraska City, in our church, and now he is a minister, preaching the same gospel his grandfather, Joseph the Seer, and his father, A. H. Smith, was and is preaching to the world. I do rejoice to hear the seed of the Martyr proclaiming the gospel which he received from the angel to proclaim throughout the whole earth, and I am glad that I have obeyed that holy message and am numbered with the saints here on earth with a glorious hope to be numbered with them in the celestial kingdom of God.

I met others of the priesthood whom I had not seen for several years and all faithful and true in the gospel. To me it was a very pleasant meeting at this conference with the saints, both new and old members. Elder W. E. Peak will preach here to-night.

My prayer and desire is that the Lord will bless his saints and ministry with prosperity, so that all may be able to help this work onward, both financially and spiritually, until the end of the world, that we all, in return, at the last day, may receive eternal life and glory.

Your sister,

ANNA NIELSEN.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:—As the missionary year draws to a close I am led to contemplate the past; and looking over the mission assigned me I ask, Have we made any progress in our work? In answering the question I believe I can safely answer, Yes. While some discouragements arise, yet I have much to encourage me.

In the past few months I have labored in Park City, Sandy, Pleasant Grove, and Big Cottonwood, outside of the city work I have done; and in that labor I find my encouragement. At Park City I spoke three times in November. There I met my first surprise, not only in the courtesy shown me by the Mormon people, but by the amount of people that came and seemed anxious to hear. On Sunday night, by invitation of the Bishop, I occupied the hour of their meeting, and there was not standing room for the people. Forty to fifty turned back and went home, unable to get access to the building.

In January I spoke five times at Sandy, and had a full house each night, and I believe good was done.

On January 25 I began meetings in our little chapel at Pleasant Grove and spoke thirteen times. The roads were bad and the nights dark and stormy, but the house was comfortably filled each night. Much prejudice was removed from the minds of those who attended, and there were strong indications of an addition to our numbers in the near future. While there I received a telephone message that Bro. Thomas Gammon, of Provo, was dead, and to come the next day and preach the funeral sermon. I did so, the meeting being held in the second ward meetinghouse; and Bro. Gammon being well known, I had a full house to speak to. The people gave me excellent attention, and by the help of the Spirit I was enabled to tell them some truths in regard to the purposes of the perfect law and its effect upon us in preparing us to live and in consequence preparing us to die.

On February 9 I began a series of meetings at Big Cottonwood ward house. I held forth four nights, and here I met with the greatest surprise of all, my audiences numbering from one hundred to one hundred and fifty people each night. I had excellent liberty in telling them my message, and from reports since I believe it was not in vain. The people there seem to be thoroughly awakened, and I am sure the seed sown will bear good results. This was the first place in all the five years of my work in Utah and Idaho where anyone in the audience and not members of our church had ever offered to assist me financially. I received at the close of my last meeting one dollar and seventy-five cents. The house cost a dollar per night, so it materially assisted in defraying expenses. There was some talk of making up a purse to pay the expenses of another week's meetings, as some wanted to hear more; but it did not materialize in cash, so I had to close.

I am trying now to raise money to buy a tent for this mission, and should I succeed it will enable us to reach a vast number of people that otherwise we cannot reach. If any lover of the Utah people—and I feel that there are many such in the church—should see this and feel that they would like to help in so laudable an enterprise as purchasing a tent for missionary work here, they may send in their mites to me at Box 335, Woodbine, Iowa, and it will be duly credited and very much appreciated indeed. The saints in Utah have responded nobly, according to their ability. Cannot their brethren outside be as generous and help?

Our "Religio" Society, of Salt Lake City, held an entertainment February 15, which netted twenty dollars. The sisters, as usual, were at the bottom of it, and deserve much credit for their zeal and labor for the good cause. The proceeds will go towards paying for a new organ for our little chapel here. The entertainment gave so much satisfaction that they are talking of repeating it sometime in the future. We are few, very few, in number, and work under great disadvantage; but by persistent effort hope to at last succeed. We are told to cast our bread upon the water and after many days it shall return, but the heart sometimes grows weary with the waiting and "hope deferred maketh the heart sick." But patience, ye brave toilers everywhere, and God will give you victory.

ROCKLAND, Maine, March 1.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote you I baptized one more at Vinal Haven, making four at that place. I see that la grippe made its appearance among the western people a few weeks ago, and I then wondered to myself if the old general would soon visit old Maine, and one week ago he arrived and commenced giving orders to many to take their bed. Some two hundred cases in this city. I have been in doors and in bed one week. My wife is now in bed, and my daughter just coming down. The squall has come, and we'll be obliged to make the best of it.

Yours,

J. C. FOSS.

BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

MANY of the saints where I travel do not have a proper understanding of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and it is for the benefit of those who desire to learn more about this book that I pen these lines. Not that I can explain satisfactorily everything in it, but as I have read the book carefully, and realize its truthfulness, even as much as I do the truths contained in the Bible, I see the necessity of each member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints making themselves familiar with the teachings of this sacred record. The book of Doctrine and Covenants purports to contain revelations from Jesus Christ, given through Joseph Smith and his son Joseph, for the establishing and building up of the Church of Christ in these last days. But, says one, How can I have a knowledge for myself of the truthfulness of the book? In answer to this question I will say, the first thing you should do is to be truly anxious about the matter, and be willing to make all inquiry about the book; read it for yourself, and ask God to help you to know of its truthfulness. Now let me ask you this question: You are satisfied that you belong to the true and only true church, are you not? Of course the answer would be in the affirmative. Then I will say, that inasmuch as you acknowledge the church is right you must at the same time virtually acknowledge the truthfulness of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants as the church is established on the revelations contained in this book. Now you can doubtless see that it is impossible for one to be true and the other false.

In further proof that revelation in this age was and is necessary, let us remember the apostate condition of the churches or sects of so-called christendom, at the time of the organization of the Church of Jesus Christ by the instrumentality of Joseph Smith. One said this is the way, and another this is the way, and so on; each differing from the other, and none of them claiming that the church should be the same in organization, doctrine, and practice as was the church in the days of the ancient apostles.

This being the case, and as the Scriptures say the wisdom of man is but foolishness with God, what else could God do that man might know the true way and be extricated from the errors of Rome—gross as they were—and the lesser errors of the Reformers, but speak again from heaven in plainness to men on the earth, and thus reveal his will and pleasure to man again. This is not only reasonable, but in harmony with the revealed will of God to former day saints on the eastern continent.

For further proof of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, if further proof you seek, let us now carefully examine the revelations in it and see if they harmonize with the Bible. We will begin this examination by examining the principles of the gospel by reference to page 91:—

If you have not faith, hope, and charity, you can do nothing.—D. C. 16: 4.

And rely upon the merits of Jesus Christ, and be glorified through faith on his name, and that through their repentance they might be saved.—D. C. 2: 6.

As many as repent, and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved.—D. C. 16: 4.

They shall receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands.—D. C. 34: 2.

The heavens shall shake and the earth shall tremble, and the trump of God shall sound both long and loud, and shall say to the sleeping nations; Ye saints arise and live: Ye sinners stay and sleep until I shall call again.—D. C. 43: 5.

Having thus far examined the principles of the doctrine of Christ, as revealed in the Doctrine and Covenants, and finding that they agree with the revelations in the Bible, we shall next see if the Book of Doctrine and Covenants teaches that we can be saved without obedience to Christ:—

Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved.—D. C. 16: 4.

Still in harmony with the Bible, as you can clearly see on pages 65 and 66. We are commanded to

Shall we obey this commandment and be blessed, or shall we reject it and lose our hope of eternal life? Are we afraid of learning too much about Christ? I hope not. Then let us seek and we shall receive line upon line, precept after precept, so long as there is a true prophet of God in the church. One thing we must all learn, however, and that is this, that in order to receive more revelations we must learn to live according to those already given. Let us now see what suffering the people of God have endured when they have willfully rejected present revelation. The people who lived before the flood, and rejected what was revealed through the prophet Noah, were destroyed. Those who rejected the revelations as given through Moses and the prophets, and our blessed Savior, suffered greatly in many ways, according to the inspired record of the Bible. Now let us briefly examine and see what are the facts in the case relative to those who have rejected latter-day revelations as contained in the Doctrine and Covenants 83: 8:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth on the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.

This revelation was given in 1832, and was the means of causing many of the saints to repent no doubt; but others did not keep the former commandments as they ought, and "because they treated lightly the things which they had received," we see that at the death of Joseph there was great trouble,—the church split up into factions, many being deceived by Brigham Young and others. But why all this? Ah! alas! alas! The reason is clear. It was because the saints failed to keep the commandments given in the Doctrine and Covenants up to June, 1844—the date of the Prophet's death. Shall we allow history to repeat itself, and suffer in a like manner from the same cause? God forbid. Then let each one study God's law, till we are familiar with its teaching, and live by every word of it. The commandments of God are not grievous, but his yoke is easy, and his burden is light.

PREACH THE WORD.

EDITORS HERALD:—Paul says to Timothy to preach the word, and then proceeds to foretell that the time will come when men will not endure sound doctrine, but turn their ears away from the truth and be turned to fables; and further enjoins him to make full proof of his ministry. (2 Timothy 4.)

It is a deplorable yet well-established fact that the ministry of the present age have been the first to turn away from the truth and to teach man-made doctrine, perverting the plain teachings of the sacred Scriptures, giving their own interpretation of the text, though Peter says that no scripture is of any "private" interpretation. Instead of keeping constantly the Master's great commission, and preaching faith, repentance, and baptism; these cardinal principles are made a secondary consideration, especially the latter. When spoken to of the matter they very blandly inform us that the first principles of the gospel had become stale matter, and were matters of controversy—in fact had become an old song.

Well, the dear people must be pleased, therefore they set about to find matter that is not objectionable, or something that will tickle the ear and be in accord with their very refined and esthetic tastes. It is no wonder that men learn to speak lightly of the truth.

In 1 Timothy 4:16, Paul said to Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

First, to be properly qualified to teach, and then continue to preach the word, with the results above-named—save himself and those that heard him. To cease to heed this injunction would entail upon him the loss of his own soul and the souls of them that heard him.

Yes, the precious old story no longer pleases. The fashionable, pleasure-seeking, sin-loving, godless multitude don't want to be told of their sins, or of a judgment to come. "Tell us about the sins of others—anything but the gospel," they say. Let me ask, What has the doctrine of predestination, election, total depravity, or any of these questions to do with the salvation of our race? What has the higher criticism, woman's suffrage, or any of the thousand and one abstract theories to do with the atonement, with faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, or gifts and blessings of the gospel? Verily, nothing.

We remember the time when men knew nothing of these ear-tickling theories, but clad in their homemade garb, their souls fired with the love of truth, they went into an old log schoolhouse filled with the simple-minded, honest-hearted people, and opening the well-thumbed old Bible preached Christ and him crucified, and sinners were made to tremble, God's children to rejoice, and souls were made glad in a Savior's love. These godly men knew nothing of this modern slush. But O, how changed the scene! Now we see the notice in the Sunday paper that Rev. So-and-so will begin a series of Sunday evening lectures on theosophy, the social evil, Where is hell and what is it? Where is heaven and what is it? Sunday or Sabbath, etc., etc.

What has this to do with repentance? The prophet in Doctrine and Covenants says to God's priesthood to preach "repentance" to this people; and when Jesus sent his disciples on their first mission he told them to preach repentance.

God forbid that the ministry of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints shall ever so far forget their high calling as to pander to the sinful and depraved tastes of sinful men. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation, and to attempt to introduce a substitute will result in the withdrawal of the Spirit, and bring a sense of shame and condemnation. "Preach the word."

Convention met at Dow City, February 25 and 26; William McKim president, Fred B. Shumate secretary. February 25 and part of February 26 was devoted to institute work, the chief features of which were: Addresses by James Baker, R. Wight, W. A. Carroll, and William McKim. First session 10: 30 a. m., second session 2: 30 p. m. "Sunday school management," in charge of William McKim. "Teachers' meetings and value of them," conducted by Sr. Nellie Rudd. "Primary class work," in charge of Sr. Baker. A short session illustrating the proper procedure for a teachers' meeting was held, General Superintendent T. A. Hougas in charge. Third session, 7: 30 p. m.; topic for the evening, "How to classify the Sunday school," in charge of Superintendent T. A. Hougas. Limitation of number in class was thoroughly discussed, also classification and arrangement of classes. The question, "Who should be judge as to promotion?" was taken up, the prevailing theory being that the teacher and superintendent should confer. The order of work, as follows, was suggested by the General superintendent: 1 Song service, (5 or 10 minutes before opening.) 2. Responsive reading. 3. Prayer. 4. Song. 5. Roll call, (of teachers). 6. Class work (30 or 35 minutes). 7. Review work (superintendent or one he appoints). 8. Secretary's report (of present session). 9. Song. 10. Benediction. Fourth session, 10:30 a. m., social meeting, prayer and testimonies of Sunday school benefits. "Blackboard work" in charge of F. B. Shumate. "Benefits of blackboard

Reports were received from Deloit, Auburn, Galland's Grove, Salem, Harlan, and Dow City schools. The secretary was requested to notify the treasurer to make an assessment of $15 pro rata on the different schools to defray expenses of the district. On motion $1.15 as an assessment on the Harlan school was used to defray the traveling expenses of Superintendent Hougas. Following are the delegates appointed to the General Convention: D. M. REDUCED RAILWAY RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Western Passenger Association has granted reduced rates to the coming General Conference and conventions, naming the dates as requested, from April 4-20. While the conference does not convene till the 6th, the 4th is named in order to permit attendance at the Religio and Sunday school conventions.

Reduced rates are granted under the following conditions:—

1. Going tickets must be purchased not earlier than three days before the first date named, and not later than three days after, Sunday not being counted as a day in any case. In other words, tickets may be purchased on any date from April 1 to 7, inclusive, but not later than the 7th.

2. The rate is one and one third fare for the round trip. The rule is to purchase full fare tickets on the going trip. Passengers must, in all cases, obtain certificates with every ticket purchased, which certificates, when signed by the Church Secretary and stamped by the railroad agent at Lamoni, will entitle purchasers to return trip tickets at one third the usual fare; provided that one hundred tickets are purchased; and, provided further, that ministers holding half-fare permits are not entitled to this reduction; nor are tickets purchased at fifty cents or less to be counted.

Where passengers can do so, it is better to purchase a through ticket to Lamoni and obtain one certificate. Where several tickets are purchased, separate certificates must be obtained with each.

Those who travel over two or more different roads should purchase tickets to junction points, when possible, and thus cover each line of road with one ticket and its corresponding certificate. Take particular notice, that while going full fare tickets may be purchased at any station on roads of the Western Association, some roads name special junction points at which only, as we understand, they will honor certificates for reduced fare on the return trip; hence tickets should be bought to the junction points named by said roads, which, so far as heard from, are as follows: Missouri Pacific: Omaha, Kansas City, and St. Louis. Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific: Des Moines, Ottumwa, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, and Kansas City. Chicago and Alton: Chicago, Peoria, Louisiana, and Kansas City. Certificates from the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern Road, will be honored for return passage at reduced rate by the C. R. I. and P., M. and St. L.,

St. L. K. and N. W., C. B. and Q. and R. I. and P. Rys. For information as to best routes, apply to ticket agents.

Tickets on the going passage may be limited or unlimited, according to the rules of roads selling them; but return tickets are good only for continuous passage, and not later than three days after the 20th—to the 23d inclusive.

Purchasers should hand in their certificates promptly to the Secretary, that the local railway agent may be notified of the required one hundred being purchased.

The following lines of road will sell tickets on the certificate plan:—

Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha; Hannibal and St. Joseph; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; Jacksonville and St. Louis; Minneapolis and St. Louis; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island and Peoria; St. Louis and San Francisco; Sioux City and Pacific; Wabash; Wisconsin Central Lines; Burlington and Missouri; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph and Grand Island; Union Pacific.

MASSACHUSETTS REUNION.

In behalf of the reunion committee and by our secretary, I have been requested to make a report of our recent doings and to invite the cooperation of all interested saints in the Massachusetts district. It has been decided by the committee that the reunion this year shall be held sometime in August. A more definite date will be arranged and notice given later. The committee has already been favored in the choosing of a location by a committee that was appointed by the Dennisport branch, to assist and invite the holding of the reunion at that place. During the late district conference our committee gave careful attention to the necessary incidents in relation to the matter and we found many strong points in favor of Dennisport; together with this, that there was a good feeling among the saints favoring this location. Our secretary desires that all the branches may have equal chance and has requested that if there are other locations, and branches that will take part in the work, that they shall appoint a committee and communicate with me at the earliest moment. Let all remember that the committee this year intends to have all arrangements made and announced by the month of June. We intend to make the reunion a success. Let all the saints think about it, talk about it, and do all in their power to help the committee and advance the work. We began immediately after being chosen. Now let the saints begin their work by making their plans and arrangements to attend the reunion. Address all communications to Dr. J. S. Lawton, Brockton, Massachusetts.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, about.....4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

FRANK CRILEY,
7-4t Business Manager.

The cold, exacting hand of death
Our household has invaded,
And snatched from us the loved one;
Our home indeed is shaded.

Home shaded with dark loneliness;
Mother smiles not as of yore;
Mother's ears are turned to deafness;
Her sweet songs we'll hear no more.

God of mercy, hear the pleadings
Of a husband's broken heart,
And the wailing of the orphans
As from one they're called to part.

With the one who felt their sorrows,
And who brightened life with love,
May we live that in the future
We may dwell with her above.

JOSEPH TEMPEST AND CHILDREN.

WARNOCK.—At Farmington, Iowa, February 12, 1897, William Warnock. Deceased was born in Armagh, Ireland, June 1, 1807. Was of Scottish descent, and brought up in the Presbyterian Church. To them were born eleven children, eight of whom preceded their father to the next better state; and three, Robert, Sarah, and Susan, with their mother, remain to mourn their loss. He united with the church in Canada in the year 1837. One year later he removed with his family to Caldwell County, Missouri. In 1842 he moved back to Canada, where he remained until 1871, when he brought his family to Farmington, Iowa, and lived there until the time of his death. He cast his lot with the Reorganized Church, and lived a consistent member of the church ever since he became acquainted with it. His house was always a home for the elders, and many of them were made glad by his financial help. His family are all members of the church, and, like their father, delight in helping forward the work. His death was like one passing into a pleasant sleep, after a long day's labor. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them." Thus after 95 years, 8 months, and 12 days of earth life he passed peacefully away in the presence of all his family, to await the resurrection of the just. Four brothers and four sisters are left to mourn their loss. His mother preceded him to the better land but a few months; father and two brothers some years before.

KING.—Sr. Ann, wife of Bro. Wm. R. King, February 14, 1897. Was born September 12, 1833, at Merthyr Tydvil, Glamorgan-shire, South Wales. Her parents came to this country when she was quite young. She resided for many years at Carbondale, Pennsylvania, where she was united in marriage to Wm. R. King, September 14, 1850, who, with three sons, two daughters, and nine grandchildren, is left to mourn. Sr. King was a devoted wife and mother, and was loved by a host of friends for her sterling qualities. She was a consistent member of the Primitive Methodist Church for some time previous to her affiliation with the latter-day work. She was baptized April 10, 1892, at Angus, Iowa, by her son-in-law, Elder Wm. Johnson. It was a source of joy to the saints to hear her bear testimony of this glorious gospel. She was willing and ready to go. Blessed assurance. Sr. King was visiting with her eldest son at Fraser when stricken. Interment at the new cemetery at Pilot Mound. Funeral services and preaching in charge of Reverend Smally, of the Evangelical Church, of Dayton.

ROLLETT.—Mabel Dove, daughter of Brierly R. and Hattie A. Rollett, February 18, 1897, aged 3 years, 8 months, and 27 days. She was a scholar of the Pleasant Grove Sunday school. She had saved twenty-seven pennies, and it was her desire that they should go to the Sunday school. She was a loving little daughter to her parents and all who knew her. Funeral at the Pleasant Grove church, February 19; discourse by Elder T. T. Hinderks, assisted by Elder L. L. Babbit, after which her little form was laid to rest in the Pleasant Grove cemetery until the first resurrection. "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Moral-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concern- ing the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one de- sign in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæ- ology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American abori- ginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

THE FUTURE OF THE HOLY LAND.

COULD Palestine again become, what it was of old, a land flowing with milk and honey? This is a problem of more than sentimental interest, and it is a pleasant surprise to learn that there are some specialists who maintain that this is possible, and that Palestine could easily again be made one of the most productive countries on the globe. That certain cities, such as Jerusalem, Nazareth, and others, have been enjoying in recent years unprecedented prosperity, in fact even "booms," is known to the general reader; but that by systematic irrigation and cultivation the barren tracts once so productive would yield a rich abundance is interesting information. From the pen of a German specialist, whose account is found in the Columbus, Ohio, Zeitblatter, No. 6, we glean the following instructive data:—

It is easily possible that Palestine should now again become the "South" (the Neged), and the granary for the entire Southeastern region along the Mediterranean, and for Europe. In the country west of the Jordan the entire level district along the coast has the best of water-supplies and is capable of sustaining an immense population. The conditions there are such that oranges, cotton, tobacco, and sugar-cane could be raised easily and in great abundance. On the higher tablelands of the west Jordan districts nothing is necessary but the preservation of the quantities of water that accumulate during the rainy season and utilizing these during the dry months. The whole region would thus be admirably adapted for vegetable gardening on a grand scale. How readily this end could be accomplished can be seen from what has already been done in this line, chiefly by the members of the German Templar Society in Bethlehem, Nablus, Tshenin, and other places. The relatively poorer success of the Jewish agricultural colonies, which have been planted there by the dozen in recent decades, chiefly through the instrumentality of the Rothschilds and other Jewish magnates, is to be attributed not to the barrenness of the soil, but to the poor work of the colonists. But everywhere in this district it is possible by irrigation to raise the finest of oils, oranges, wine, etc., than anywhere else along the southeastern portion of the Mediterranean; and there would be no lack of markets, especially as Egypt is so near. The entire Ghor, or Jordan valley, could be converted into a tropical valley. The dates that ripen here are regarded yet, as they were in ages past, as the best that are known, surpassing even those of Egypt. To this add oranges, cotton, sugar-cane, bananas, and especially fine vegetables raised during the rainy season, all of which grow here under most favorable conditions. Access to markets is easy. Jericho, by way of Salonica, only five days removed from Berlin and Central Europe, only a short distance from Jerusalem, and some degrees warmer than Cairo, could readily be made again what it was in the days of King Herod, a magnificent winter resort, whose attractions would be increased by the hot medicinal springs of Aines-Sultan and by the magnificent surroundings of the Dead Sea near by with its thermal fountains, e.g., Ain Dshidi, Hamman-ez-Zerka, the Callirrhoe of antiquity, and centuries ago a fashionable resort. The Jordan is rich in fish and could itself be an attraction for tourists. In fact, the entire valley could be made a health-resort.

The east Jordan country, in its whole length and breadth from Moab to Mount Hermon and the Hauran, is naturally one vast wheat-field, than which none better can be found. The fruitful districts, which now, when the harvest is over at the end of May, become for the rest of the season a sun-scorched desert which the inhabitants must for the time being leave, could readily, by building reservoirs to receive the superabundant rains of earlier months and using these for irrigation during the dry season, be made inhabitable all the year round, and could also be cultivated with abundant success during this time. Such was its condition in earlier centuries before the Arabian Bedouins took possession, as is attested by the ruins of hundreds of villages and cities scattered throughout this territory. In fact nature herself suggests this remedy, for during the winter months in many places natural lakes are formed which fill up with water. To the present day there are also many old cisterns, open and covered, which were used for irrigation purposes. This is particularly the case at Bosra, the converging point of a number of old Roman roads and at one time the commercial rival of Damascus. The ruins of an immense system of aqueducts can yet be traced, the chief of which, called that of Pharaoh, still has a length of forty-four kilometers. The indications are that in the flourishing period of this east Jordan district an extensive irrigation system existed and was utilized to good advantage.

The cultivation of Palestine, surrounded on two sides by desert districts, is only possible by careful attention and under the protection of a strong hand. If these are absent the hopes that it may become again a land of milk and honey will be doomed to disappointment. At that time, when Palestine was governed with a firm hand it was a veritable garden of the gods. Under favorable circumstances it could become such again, could sustain millions of inhabitants and supply other lands with its superabundance. Whether or not this is to be realized depends on its political future.—Literary Digest.

THE RESTORATION OF PALESTINE.

MANY stories have been afloat during the past year concerning the restoration of Palestine into the hands of its former inhabitants and rulers, the Hebrew people. It was proposed in one quarter to raise a fund sufficient to buy the country outright from the Turkish Government, and another project embraced immigration and colonization of a sufficient number of Jews to occupy and control Jerusalem at least, if not a larger portion of the Holy Land. None of these projects, it may be said, has had the approval of the Jewish people generally, and none of them has received any countenance in the Jewish press. In an editorial on "The Future of Palestine" the New York Observer brings up these points for discussion. For one thing The Observer objects to any scheme of restoration that seeks to convert Jerusalem into a mere commercial center. The thought of making it a great mart of trade, it says, "irritates the sense of incongruity." It should be kept apart from such usages as a place of sacred memories and associations. Farther than this The Observer says:—

"From time to time the old notion of the purchase of Palestine by a syndicate of wealthy Jews, or by the contributions of the whole Hebrew race, and its reorganization as a Jewish principality, governed as closely as may be according to its earlier traditions, is revived. And there is probably no insuperable obstacle in the way of such a project, save in the lukewarmness of the Jews themselves. The Porte is sadly in need of money, and though Mussulman feeling might revolt against it, with the necessary pressure from the powers the sale might be made, the more easily that it would not thwart any great political design. There is plenty of administrative talent among the Jews, a large number of officers and soldiers for the maintenance of order, and an ample population for the new principality in the great body of poor Jews throughout the world who would be attracted to it. But the wealthy Jews have never favored the scheme. They dislike to leave the great commercial capitals in which they are settled, and where their power is clearly recognized; and they fear lest, in the bitter anti-Semitic hatred now prevalent in many countries, the reestablishment of the Jewish nationality would lead to their expulsion. As the great body of the Jews are excessively poor, they can do nothing without the rich, and are likely, moreover, to excuse non-action on the ground that Jehovah will in His own way and time bring His people back to the Land of the Covenant.

"A 'restoration,' then, through the efforts of the Jews themselves, must be the only hope. And that it will be brought about by the voluntary efforts of others is exceedingly improbable. Under any notion of the fitness of things, Palestine ought, when the Turk is driven across the Euphrates and the Ottoman Empire is partitioned, to revert to the Jews. But all the plans which have thus far been suggested to restore it to Christian control have been negatived at the outset by the jealousy of the Russians for the safety of the Holy Places. It was that safety which formed the popular Russian pretext for the Crimean war. With passionate reverence for the Holy Places an unchanging tradition of the Russian peasantry, there is no reason to believe that the Czar will permit the transfer of Palestine to any save a great power, and that power Russia. Probably if before the Ottoman break-up the Jews desired to buy the Holy Land, and Europe consented, he might acquiesce on condition of a European guaranty. But there is little present reason to believe that he would consent to such a reversion as a part of the final partition of Turkey. It would seem, then, that the hoped for 'restoration' may never come, and that although Palestine will again become cultivated and prosperous, to the Jews it may always be a land of promise."—Literary Digest.

JONAH THE BOOK FOR OUR TIMES.

Ancient Pharisical Jews thought that the predictions against the nations must be fulfilled or God could not be a God of veracity and justice. So think some dogmaticians now. But God is a God of grace. God changes his decree of destruction even though men cannot reconcile such change with divine justice and veracity. God is sovereign in his justice as well as in his mercy. The doctrine that God must be just, but may or may not be merciful, is an error that has no basis in Holy Scripture or in a sound ethical philosophy. God is as truly, by necessity of the divine being, merciful as he is just. He is as free in his exercise of the one attribute as the other. He reserves the right to recall his messengers of wrath by the swifter angels of love.

Jonah represents only too well the Jew of Nehemiah's time, the Jew of the New Testament times, and also the Christian Church in its prevailing attitude to the heathen world. If the Roman Catholic Church had learned the lesson of Jonah, its theologians would not so generally have consigned the unbaptized heathen world to hell fire. If the Reformers had understood Jonah there would have been more of them than Zwingli and Coelius Secundus Curio, who thought that there were some redeemed heathen. If the Westminster divines had understood Jonah they never would have coined those remarkable statements of the tenth chapter of their Confession, in which the entire heathen world and their babes are left out of the election of grace. The present century, brought face to face with the heathen world, is beginning to learn the lesson of Jonah. Jonah is the book for our times. Though written many centuries ago as a beautiful ideal of the imagination to teach the wonderful grace of God in the salvation of repenting heathen and their babes, it has been reserved for the present age to apprehend and apply its wonderful lessons. The repentance of Nineveh is a prophetic ideal.—From "Works of the imagination in The Old Testament," by Prof. C. A. Briggs, D. D., in North American Review.

A BLAST FROM WITHIN.

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 27.—The Rev. Edward Davis preached recently at the Central Christian Church on "A General Roast—Protestants and Romanists Especially." It was the first of a series of sensational Sunday evening sermons to be delivered by him. He said:—

"The religious kingdom is not only on the defensive against the advances of the hosts of hell; it should engage in an aggressive warfare. Christendom should make conquest of the continents and convert the heathen to Christ. We should remember, however, that we are heathens to those that are heathens to us. The ultimate creed will have demonstrated its inherent truth; Confucianism, Brahamism, Mohammedism, Romanism, Protestantism, are being held in the balances, and all but some one will be found wanting. Of the world's 1,500,000,000 people, over one-half are idolators. If the Pagan is true, I would rather be a Pagan than a Christian.

"To Christianize the world, Christendom must be an undivided kingdom. There is truly in Christendom but one Christ, but the hundreds of armies are not fighting for him, but for themselves—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Congregationals, Episcopalians and others of lesser number in ambuscade. These divisions, however, unite in Protestantism to the Church of Rome. With them I protest against Rome's iniquities. But the church of Protestantism should not forget that they are the daughters of Rome. Romanism is the Juggernaut of truth; Protestantism is a tactic of the devil. The champion of truth must protest against all error until the representatives of the sects shall be willing to unite on the basis of God's word. The Protestant ministry is afraid to trust God's truth without using men-made creeds for its interpretation. Romanists answer the vapid arguments of the sectarian with vapidly. Not all the erudition of the Church of Rome, concentrated in the voice of Yorke, can present a theology that a reasonable man can consistently accept. Nor can Wendte well represent the Christian creed, disbelieving as he does in the divinity of Christianity's author. Protestantism cannot consistently protest against Rome so long as its inhuman creeds consign infant souls to hell, require the baptism of irresponsible children and distort scriptural doctrine to the theology of the dead dark ages. Protestantism is wrong as that against which it protests. I am glad I can stand alone, if need be, on the truth of God's word and fling to the winds the inhuman creeds that have damned as many souls as they have saved."

The foregoing is sent us by a brother, and is cut from the Denver Times for February 3, 1897.

The proposition that the "champion of truth must protest against all error until the representatives of the sects shall be willing to unite on the basis of God's word," ought to be specially grateful to the elders of the latter-day message, coming from a denominational, a sectarian preacher as it does, however much he may think and say he is standing alone. For sixty years and more these elders of the New Covenant have been crying into the ears of both Catholic and Protestant, the gospel truths of God's word, and Catholic and Protestant alike have turned to them ears deafened by pride of sect and private opinion. And it is pleasing to these men laboring so faithfully to warn the world, to have now and again a man among the sectaries to rise up and accentuate their message of warning by indorsing, unconsciously to himself, that message. It gives evidence that God has neither forgotten the world in its great need, nor the ministry he has called into the field of religious controversy.

Let the good work of the Spirit poured out on all people still go on; say we all.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

ROME, March 3.—The Pope has appointed a commission of prelates, whereof Bishop Keane, formerly of Washington, is a member, and Cardinal Satolli is President, to study matters to be discussed at the next National Episcopal Synod in the United States.

I learn on good authority that Mgr. Radiul Tedeschi will be Papal envoy to study the Manitoba school question on the spot.

The probabilities of Archbishop Corrigan's immediate elevation to a Cardinalate is still a subject of contention, but it is still impossible to make an absolute statement one way or the other.

Does Rome hope to fix upon a policy by which she may absorb the Episcopal Church in America?

NEW YORK, March 3.—At the invitation of the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, pastor of the brick Presbyterian church, a number of prominent clergymen and laymen met in the vestry of that church and organized the Church Service Society of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

The organization is the outgrowth of the informal discussion of church matters at the last general assembly, in 1896. It was then determined that some movement which would correct some of the inconsistencies of service and worship in the church should be undertaken, and a number of prominent members of the clergy met at Dr. Van Dyke's church last October to formulate a plan of operations. The following officers have been elected. . . .

OTTAWA, Ont., March 9.—The condition of political affairs in Canada, which has made it necessary for the Dominion Government to ask for the appointment of a papal ablegate to investigate the attitude of Roman Catholic bishops toward Premier Laurier, has decided the government to take a further startling step.

It will withhold the issuing of a writ to fill the vacant seat in the county of Champlain, Quebec, until Parliament meets, when it will announce that owing to the attitude of the bishops it will be impossible to hold a free election under the Queen's writ.

Parliament will then be asked to amend the criminal code, making it a criminal offense to exercise spiritual control over elections.

"A MISSIONARY FAREWELL."

THE following from the Deseret News of February 23, 1897, will be read with interest, as it relates an incident which is in harmony with a very prevalent custom in Utah. Read carefully, and ask: Is this a consistent way to send out a missionary to represent the Crucified One?

A MISSIONARY FAREWELL.

BEAVER CITY, Utah, Feb. 16, 1897.—Yesterday there convened in the assembly hall in this city one of the most auspicious gatherings of the saints ever held in the Beaver Stake, consisting of members of the High Priests', Seventy's and Elders' Quorums, together with their wives, daughters, and sweethearts, numbering in all about two hundred and fifty persons, who had met at the invitation of the Elders' Quorum for the purpose of tendering a farewell party to Brother George C. Murdock, one of the presidency of the quorum, who leaves here to-morrow for a mission to the Eastern States.

At one p. m. the congregation was called to order by First Counselor Benson, and the exercises were commenced by singing the hymn, "We Thank Thee O God for a Prophet." Prayer was offered by Elder William Pothsingham, followed by music by the brass band.

Stake President C. D. White delivered an address of welcome to all present during which he said he thought these social reunions of the Latter Day Saints were productive of much good, tending to an increase of confidence of one another, and a better feeling among the people. He gave a few words of encouragement to Brother Murdock.

Recess was then taken for one hour, during which time refreshments were partaken of freely.

Upon being again called to order, an excellent program was carried out consisting of songs, speeches, etc.

Bishop Mumford addressed the congregation for a short time, eulogizing the presidency of the Elders' Quorum in their untiring efforts to awaken an increase of attendance of the elders to their meetings.

Remarks were made by Elder John R. Murdock, expressive of his thankfulness that he had a son who was accounted worthy of performing so important a mission to the sons and daughters of a fallen world. He trusted that through the blessings of the Lord his son might be able to accomplish much good.

Counselor Benson made a few closing remarks, during which, in behalf of the Elders' Quorum, he presented Bro. George C. Murdock with a book, Ready Reference, and a hymn book, as a token of the respect and good will of his brethren.

Benediction was pronounced by Brother W. J. Bikeley, and the meeting adjourned until 7 p. m., the people to again meet at the large room in the academy hall for the purpose of enjoying themselves in the dance.

At the latter hour they met at the academy hall as per adjournment, when the aged, middle aged, and the young men and maidens blended in one harmonious throng, and wended their way through the merry dance.

Everything passed off in the most pleasant manner.

ENOCH E. COWDELL.

"NOT NECESSARILY CRAZY."

BRO. JOHN SMITH, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, sends us the following:—

A man can have revelations from God if he wishes, and not thereby give anyone a right to call him crazy, the Supreme Court of Iowa rules. The decision was rendered in an action to recover for libel. Plaintiff had instituted proceedings to compel a creamery to cease operations on Sunday, announcing that he took this action in obedience to a revelation from God. One of the proprietors of the creamery, therefore, circulated the report that the plaintiff was insane. The sanity of the man favored with revelations was established to the satisfaction of the court by medical testimony, and the injurious report was adjudged to be malicious as well as unfounded and not privileged.—Ex.

A TRIBUTE TO "MORMONISM."

THE Argus of Salt Lake City, is to publish a serial on "Mormonism: Fact and Fiction." Its first installment appeared in its issue for February 13, 1897. Though it is evidently written from the standpoint of an unbeliever and scoffer, it contains the following splendid tribute to "Mormonism:"—

Civilization, so-called, of to-day, and for three or four centuries, is made up of the most savage customs and the most barbaric idealisms possible to conceive. Every history, profane or so-called Biblical, is all founded on a stratum of semi-logical guess-work, upon which is built any structure of possibilities. The ways are too long and the methods too devious to dwell upon in so brief a recital as this must necessarily be, and hence it is but truth and justice to say that of all the structural creeds of the past—from the beginning to the present—none have developed, where known, so strong a faith, so broad a religious courage, such indefatigable labor of love, such honored trust, such strong and indestructible fabric upon which to battle for the right, as the Mormon religion.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. M. RUMEL, Clearwater, Nebraska, March 4:—

Bro. Mintun has done a good work here of late. Ten were baptized while he was here and we expect two more next Sunday—all grown people. Others are very near. We feel to praise the Lord.

Bro. I. M. Smith, Blake Mills, Ohio, March 8:—

The district conference has just closed at this place. All passed off nicely. Business was done promptly and in a business way. The sacrament and social meeting was splendid. The saints were blessed and strengthened, and seemed inspired with new vigor. May the blessings of heaven attend them.

Bro. J. B. Roush, Eaton, Colorado, the 8th:—

I had the pleasure of baptizing two candidates at Flora Vista, New Mexico, a few days ago. The work there is in a promising condition. Bro. Gillen did some baptizing in Denver yesterday, and I expect to trouble the waters at this place this week; so the work is gaining a little in this mission. Our conference at Denver the 27th and 28th ult., passed off very smoothly. Not a very large attendance but a peaceful session.

Bro. D. R. Jones, Sheridan, Nevada, February 27:—

We parted with Bro. E. B. Morgan on the 27th of last month, when he left for his home in Iowa. He was a congenial and pleasant companion; he made friends wherever he went. He has a humorous way of attracting the people. He has improved wonderfully since he came here last July. He preached a splendid discourse and had a large audience. He and John Arthur Davis did good work in Nevada, especially among the old members that were nearly dead, but who were much revived by their good counsel. May the God of mercy increase their usefulness for good, is the prayer of all the saints of Nevada.

Correction:—

In the last Herald, where my statement is found respecting O. Cowdery, I am made to say, "I am the more pleased to add this statement because the enemies of the truth have circulated the report that he desired his testimony." The word "desired" should have been denied. Please correct.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOSEPH BEDWELL, of Standley, Indian Territory, writes of the confirmations of the truth received through efforts to do duty and to study the word of God. He rejoices in the provisions of the gospel for growth in grace.

The Secretary has of late obtained the following additional addresses of Chairmen of Passenger Associations. Those laboring in their territory who wish to correspond with them for the purpose of obtaining half-fare permits, should write them for application blanks: William Fleming, Chairman Trunk Line Association, New York; N. E. Weeks, Chairman New England Passenger Association, Boston, Massachusetts; Joseph Richardson, Commissioner Southern States Passenger Association, Atlanta, Georgia; W. W. Kent, Chairman Southwestern Passenger Committee, St. Louis, Missouri.

Bro. W. J. Kearns, of Carsonville, Michigan, writes of evidences that confirm him in the truth. He loves the work of God.

Bro. F. A. Smith forwards with his letter of this issue some printed outlines or comparisons between the organization and belief of the early Christian Church and those of the Campbellite Church, used in a late discussion. The latter's representative retorts by a counter-comparison, which, however, simply shows that names of present-day apostles are dissimilar from early ones. Further, "deponent saith not."

Bro. G. W. Blair, Post Master at Lamoni, suggests that to facilitate the handling of mail addressed to General Conference delegates, it be addressed in care of those with whom they stop, or of the conference. Note it, those who care to avoid delay and aid satisfactory distribution.

Sr. Ella Cator, a granddaughter of Bro. Samuel Powers, residing at Marion, Iowa, writes of her interest in the work and inclosing a substantial evidence of that interest—a check for tithing, to the Bishop. She is doing what she can to teach friends the truth, in addition to aiding the church work in a financial way.

The city of Wyoming, Pennsylvania, has suffered great damage by the caving in of surface ground over coal mines. The post office is now twenty-five feet below its original location and still sinking.

Bro. John W. Kent, writing from Trinidad, Colorado, writes a good letter narrating his ministerial experiences in Arkansas in company with Bro. J. W. Jackson, and alone. He found interest, opposition, kindness, and sickness during his labors, with the greater blessing of divine help. He returns thanks to saints and friends for hospitality, and for care during illness.

Lamoni is located on the Grant City branch of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad. It is two miles from Bethany Junction, a station on the branch line running from Chariton, Iowa (on the main line), to St. Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri. This for the information of those who have never visited the city of the saints. Those purchasing railroad tickets should be careful to select the best routes; and, when two or more roads are traveled, to buy tickets to the junction points named by some lines connecting with the Burlington, to obtain the benefit of the reduced fare on certificate plan. See Secretary's notice.

Bro. John H. Lake, of the Twelve, arrived at Lamoni on Friday, the 13th inst.

District secretaries will please observe the rule and report their total enrolled membership in all cases, when sending delegate credentials to the Church Secretary. Some have failed so to do, hence this additional request.

Sr. Mary A. Twaddle, writing from Tulare, California, the 2d inst., recounts some marked cases of healing, also some angelic ministrations enjoyed by the sick, in answer to patient trust and abiding faith in God. Bro. Walter Scott and wife, formerly of Santa Cruz, had located at Tulare, and Bro. Scott was preaching the word. Conference of the Central California district would convene there April 16. Saints desired a large attendance; all who come will be made welcome. Letter crowded out by extra demands on the HERALD, by conference business.

Bro. F. G. Pitt writes under date of the 13th from Chicago that he hears that that city is to be made headquarters of the Brighamites the coming year; that they are to publish a paper and enter upon an active missionary campaign. Bro. Pitt also writes that our people feel secure, fearing nothing from the onslaught or oncoming tide, and hope to do good among the men sent out by the Utah Church. It may be as Bro. Sheehy states it has been in the East, that the work of the Utah elders has tended to bring out the true faith in strong contrast to that taught in the West.

Bro. J. W. Gillen arrived at Lamoni on Saturday, the 13th inst. and Brn. Joseph Luff and J. M. Terry on Monday, the 15th; the two first-named to meet with the Twelve, the latter to act on the auditing committee on the Bishop's and Herald Office accounts; so conference business has begun.

Brn. E. C. Briggs and F. M. Weld are also to be included in the list of Lamoni arrivals engaged in preparatory conference work.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Do burdens press sorely? Just ask Him for grace;
He'll give it, and help thee 'keep sweet';
Let sunshine and gladness illumine thy face,
'Twill help some one else to 'keep sweet.'
Do troubles oppress thee? Let God be thy stay;
'Tis easy to sigh, but 'tis better to pray;
Thy sunshine will come in his own blessed way;
So trustingly try to 'keep sweet.'"

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 5.

THE ARRIVAL.

TUESDAY, Dec. 1. — A most glorious morning! A nice fair breeze. All sails drawing, and studding sails set also. The hallowed influence produced by the reading of those lines I referred to still remains. That together with a dream I had, in answer to prayer the evening before, has done much to prepare me for what may await me in the near future. The Lord showed me in the night vision the long mountain road I had to go over. Without the personal knowledge I received, the dream itself would have given me much sadness, for I was alone. I had started in a company of a few others at the foot of a mountain, but I alone was on foot. The rest were in vehicles, my husband with them, and seemed to forget that I could not walk as fast as the horses, and I was being left far behind. I was carrying a burden, but it was light, an infant child of one of the company. With it I hastened on with all the speed I could make, lest they would get out of my sight, and I was in great distress of mind. How I wished they would look back; but none did. I said within myself, "How well my strength would have held out to go all the way up this mountain if it was not that I had to run." But run I did; still I could not keep them in sight. There were turns in the road and soon they were lost to view altogether. Then I perceived that night was coming on apace. In deep distress of mind I fled on and on, following the wheel tracks until the darkness shut them from view. Presently the road forked in three ways. I could not see the track. Which way should I go? I resolved to take the one that led straight ahead and did so till I came to where it terminated at a caved off grade. Regretting my loss of time I turned and fled for the other one. I saw it, and how it could be more quickly gained by crossing a short plot of withered grass. But I had not seen that there was a barrier to be surmounted before it could be gained—a low barbed wire fence. I laid my burden down close under the fence where I could take it from the other side, but in my haste I forgot it till I got a little way along the road that was a slight down grade. If I was in perplexity before, I was doubly so now, and as I retraced my steps I tried to think where I had left it. At length remembering the wire fence, I hastened there, and was delighted to find it again. But it had wakened and was crying for its nourishment. In my despair I pressed it to my face and commenced weeping bitterly myself, which ended my perplexity by waking me.

And now I scarcely know why I have written this. Two years ago this first day of December we entered the harbor of Papeete in the little schooner "Evanelia," joyful and yet sad. I little thought then that we would ever wend our way back here again. How one step leads to another. How I hope I may have wisdom given me that I may not either in word or deed give offense in any way to the powers that be in these regions, where one will be made an offender for a word.

Wednesday morning, 2d. Still pleasant and beautiful but breeze light. Possibly we may see the island of Rairoa this evening, but it is doubtful, the wind is so light.

Sunday, 6.—We did not make the land till Thursday, then it was not Rairoa but one a long way up above it. From Thursday noon till Friday noon was almost a dead calm. The captain expected to make the upper end of Rairoa and run between it and Arutua, but he made it far down to leeward Saturday morning, which was yesterday, and so had to run down to the lower end and pass between it and Tikehau—as we did two years ago—which took nearly all day. It all looked very natural, and brought tears to my eyes as I called to mind the heartfelt gratitude with which we sang, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!" And again my heart repeats that song of praise. While coming through the pass we meet quite a heavy head sea which increased as we got farther along between the islands, and all around the horizon had the appearance of stormy weather, and has had for the past two days, though we only had a good whole sail breeze and an occasional rain squall. And this morning as we get farther along and see what a heavy sea there is, though it is going down all the time, we know there has been a bad storm down here, and again we recognize the loving Father's care in letting the two days' calm rest upon us to prevent us from sailing into the storm. With the wind we had last night we expected to have gotten to Papeete this afternoon, but will not do so unless we have a much stronger breeze. (Sr. Walker, you must excuse this writing, it looks as if my pen was drunk. I am perched up in the upper berth, resting my portfolio in my lap, and the ship tumbles about so I cannot keep steady.) There is not wind enough now to keep her steady on this heavy sea. The rearing and plunging of the ship last night made some of the passengers sick, but to me it was the most restful night for some time. The wind and tumbling of the sea made the air much cooler. I went to sleep about eight o'clock in the evening and slept soundly till 6:30 this morning. I think we have had much warmer weather than when in the "boat."

We are very sorry indeed to learn, as we have, that Captain Salmons, the man who has been such a friend to our people and missionaries, has lost over seven thousand dollars by the sinking of the Evanelia. Were it not for the implicit confidence I have in God, who rules from the heavens, and who is able to soften the hearts of men, and to make good his word that "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord," I should tremble with dread and fear of taking—or being one of the number who shall take—up the work here against such odds as we shall have to meet. I think he is too good and honorable a man to blame any who are not to blame, but having lost so much, he will not feel like taking missionaries free of charge as he used to do.

Papeete.—Dear Sr. Walker, and readers of the Column:—It is with great pleasure I write you all to-day, Tuesday, the 8th. We got in the harbor early Monday morning, but it was near noon before we got ashore. A few of the brethren were waiting to conduct us to our new home. They had no reception prepared for they had been disappointed so often they scarcely expected us. The hills, the harbor with its surroundings, all looked as natural to me as if I had lived here for years. The day was much cooler than when we landed the first time. The saints, what there are of them here, soon gathered about us, expressing their pleasure at our return. My own feelings were on a pivot. I could cry just as easy as laugh. We had made up our minds that Bro. and Sr. Case would be here and were disappointed in not seeing them; and also because of Metuaore, and Tuana, his wife, being absent.

We are very comfortably situated in the missionary house. There is a round table in the center of the room with one of the curtains of the Evanelia for a cover. On seeing that the first day, after sitting on the porch awhile, and while under that nervous feeling of joy and sadness, it gave them (my feelings) a sudden cant on the side of sadness and started the tears, and as I put my handkerchief up to my face, when I found they were really going to bubble over, a handful of the front part of four wrappers went up simultaneously in sympathy with me. They, like me, were as near weeping as laughing. But both they and I got on more sure footing, so to speak, after we had let nature have its way and drain off some of the briny tears. They all were delighted to know that Joseph could talk to them in their own language and were not long, I assure you, in bringing in their Bibles. And how they drank in every word he would say! repeating it as he spoke (not audibly), with countenances all aglow. While some talked and listened, others prepared our dinner. We were treated to beefsteak and cold boiled tongue, baked feis and yams, with cocoanut milk to drink, and bananas for dessert. This far they have brought our food to us ready cooked. I set the table and wash the dishes. But after this we will have our boxes up from the vessel so I shall do it myself. We felt as cozy at our little breakfast this morning as if we were just commencing house-keeping for the first time. So far we are content and happy. Have been unpacking trunks to-day and getting things set in order a little, but it is not much use for next week we start off again to the island where Bro. and Sr. Case are, and nearly all the saints. It is the pearl fishing time with them. The house stands between a row of banana and cocoanut trees. So also does the church. Those trees shade the sun off, but being back of several buildings, we do not get so much of the sea breeze as where we lived before, therefore find it much warmer; also mosquitoes are worse here. Still it is more retired. The house is as comfortable as is needed. A front room, front bedroom, kitchen, and storeroom. But when the press is set up we will have no room to spare.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SPECIAL prayer is asked of the Prayer Union in behalf of Miss Estella Laughlin, who is badly affected in mind, that if it is God's will that she may be restored to health, or benefited, that lives may not be in danger. The request is made by her mother. She is not a member of any church. Her parents are Methodists. She is a nice girl and well thought of by all who know her and has been a teacher in the public schools for several years. So writes Sr. S. E. Laughlin, Olivet, Iowa.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF UNION SUNDAY SCHOOLS?

Read by Florence R. Peck at Far West Convention.

IN the first place, What is a Sunday school? what are its objective points, the benefits it offers, if any? From its very foundation its object was the uplifting morally, spiritually, and intellectually of humanity. It owes its origin not to any sect or society, but to the one worthily honored individual who took pity on the poor ignorant waifs who spent their Sabbaths as all other days in the streets of London, that great city of vice and crime, in play and games which bore no fruit for good. He pitied them in his great heart and sought to do them good by gathering them in on the Sabbath days and instructing them in the ways which lead to a higher life.

Others saw his good work and did likewise. In time it became the adopted means by which the different church societies sought to teach the word of God and instruct, especially the young, and gather them in from the wiles of sin. That it has not accomplished its work well, no one can reasonably doubt, for there are thousands to-day to tell of its good work in themselves.

Our own Sunday school association owes its standing largely to Sr. M. Walker, the friend and leader of the young. It was she who first took up the work and urged it along. Our General Association is, I believe, only five years old, and it is certainly in good condition for one so young. But the Lord is with us in the work, blessing all who earnestly labor therein.

I truly believe that the saint who strives to instruct in the Sabbath school has just as much right to, and that it is just as much his duty to strive for, God's Spirit, as the minister in the pulpit. For are they not equally teachers of the gospel and saviors of mankind?

But should saints participate in union schools? Certainly so, if any good can be accomplished. But let us examine the question in its phases and see. Union schools are organized in communities where there is not a strong enough force of any one denomination to organize by itself. Each one is supposed to have an equal voice and to be as free to teach his faith as another. But usually there is one denomination that holds the leading spirit, and anything contrary to that is liable to make trouble. A saint in such a school would very likely do more harm than good. No true saint could hear anything taught contrary to their own belief without resisting, and that would make them personal enemies and deepen prejudice against the faith.

There is in many places in the country the habit prevailing of organizing union schools through the summer months as a sort of pleasure resort. There are of course some earnest ones who strive to learn the truth. But the majority want somewhere to go to get in a crowd, and consequently go to Sunday school. When they get there they proceed to visit and take no interest whatever in the lessons. I know of one this summer that had to close down because the young people caused such disturbances. A saint might do some one some good in such a place; but one would feel little inclined to go there. But wherever we go we can find work for the Master if we will only look for it.

I know a brother who used to live in a little village in Iowa. His family comprised the only saints there. He attended the Sunday school, talked reasonably and kindly, presenting his faith both in the school and out of it, and to-day there is a thrifty little band of saints with a school of their own in that place. This good brother probably didn't do it all, but it is reasonable to believe that he accomplished some good.

Where there are several saints in one vicinity could they accomplish more good by organizing a school of their own and inviting others in or by going into a union school? A saints' school would not attract a very large crowd, while a union school always does. In the latter case many more would be brought in contact with the gospel than in the former. We must be with the world in order to benefit it any; but, in being with the world it requires a great effort not to become of the world. Saints working in a union school where their own spirit, the Holy Spirit, does not prevail must, as we before-stated, use a great deal of wisdom and discretion in trying to bring others to a knowledge of the faith; yet no one should falter for a moment to present and defend the faith. Saints should always strive to have the spirit of the work and strive to draw others into that spirit.

If in a school bearing the name of "union" our people held the leading part, folks would recognize the fact, and if they objected to being led in that direction, they would object more than if the saints worked under their own name. So I think that where there are a dozen saints or supporters of the work, they should establish schools of their own, where they can enjoy perfect liberty and expect God's Spirit to dwell in fullness. Then strive to induce others to come.

Should saints send their children to union schools? The teacher is liable to be of most any faith, and will, of course, teach what he believes, and children will believe what they are taught. Every parent should teach their children to believe the truths of the everlasting gospel, and strive to have them shape their lives accordingly. I therefore do not think they should be placed under one who will break down and destroy their faith. But if your children are not in the Sabbath school on Sundays, where are they? Are they at home where you are instructing them in that which is good, pure, and godly, teaching them to respect the Sabbath and to keep the laws of Christ—or are they spending their time in idleness, learning nothing for their good, even perhaps going into wickedness and vice? Better be in anybody's Sunday school than in such a condition as this, for there is no school but what teaches good and aims to elevate its members.

In conclusion, if you are where it is impossible to be in our own school and can receive any benefit from another school, or can benefit anyone else, go.

If it is in the least possible for saints to conduct a school of their own they had ought to do so rather than be in a union school, for our faith and our spirit will no more unite with that of the creeds in Sunday school work than in church organization, for we are a peculiar people. It is our duty to teach the restored gospel wherever we go. The Sabbath school is a place for earnest effort, and when anyone is there for any purpose other than putting forth earnest efforts, their purpose is wrong. Let us send idleness and disinterest from our ranks.

GILROY, Cal., Feb. 18.

Editors Herald:—The church work has progressed slowly for a number of years on account of scarcity of laborers and strong religious prejudice. It is very hard to get the attention of the people, especially in the cities; the people are generally good, social, kindhearted, but are both careless and afraid of the restored gospel. We have, however, quite a number of noblehearted saints in the district who, were they able, would gladly contribute largely to the financial interest of the church. But the faithful ones are rich in the spiritual blessings, and we hear the same strong, blessed testimonies out here on the Pacific coast that we heard thirty-seven years ago and all along the way since that time until now. So it is true that in every land they that love God and work righteousness are accepted with him.

We feel the loss of Bro. J. F. Burton very much, notwithstanding we have his place very ably supplied by Bro. J. B. Price, of Oakland. Bro. Price was ordained by the direction of an angel at the age of nineteen, in England. He labored a number of years, baptized about four hundred, came to Utah, rejected Brigham, came to California, accepted the Reorganization, and has since brought quite a number into the church.

Bro. D. L. Harris, appointed by conference, who is laboring in the southern part of the district, is a very able defender of the faith. Bro. A. Haws has been doing some tent work, but the winter rains cut his work short with tent. Bro. Walter Scott is also laboring in the vicinity of Fresno. Bro. Clapp, who is home from his Oregon mission on account of ill health, is at Santa Cruz, able to assist the local brethren some. The local brethren in different parts and in branches are keeping the faith before the people and feeding the flock of God.

This winter is a favorable one for farmers; a very large acreage of grain has been sown and is looking fine. The climate is very pleasant. We have some frosty nights and thin ice, but vegetables grow all winter. Grass has been good from the middle of January. Some hardy flowers have been in bloom out in the garden all winter.

I lived in Iowa forty-two years. I can say it is one of the best States in the union, and I would not advise anyone to leave good homes with a view to do better. But for those that are able to retire from business, on the coast in California is the place to find comfort. I have engaged in the fruit business; have planted out thirty-five acres mostly in prunes, some apricots and peaches; but I fear it will suffer the common lot of all other business by being overdone. With brotherly love to all the dear saints with whom I have been acquainted and enjoyed much spiritual comfort, I remain,

Yours in hope,

J. M. PUTNEY.

RAVENDEN SPRINGS, Ark.,
February 23.

Editors Herald:—I do not know that the mass of your reader are much interested in Arkansas, generally, but there are some facts connected with the latter-day work that will doubtless be of interest to all. 'Tis no strange thing in these parts to see families living in little old "ramshack" hovels without a window to admit a ray of God's sunlight, and every member, mother, daughters, and infant chewing tobacco, and not one able to read. These, with very many not so shiftless and ignorant, do but very little thinking; some other heads do it for them. Could they appreciate the restored gospel if it were possible to convince them?

Many others who are cleanly and intelligent are satisfied with hypnotic influences and assume the same to be the power of God. I love to warn and instruct the latter, but don't care to waste breath on the former. I do, however, preach to all classes and grades, lest perhaps within some seedy-looking "skif-ferine" there beats an honest heart.

Our little branch moves on smoothly, but we are so scattered that we can't meet as often as we wish. Two young intelligent Utah elders stopped with us Friday and Saturday nights. I could but sympathize with them while I was using Bro. Smith's recent article for all there is in it. There are twelve of these young earnest missionaries in Arkansas, and soon to be reinforced by half as many more. I do not know whether to be concerned or glad. I can't bid them "God speed;" their presence may portend evil. I may not see clearly, but some way or another, on the principle that "all things work together for good to them that love God," I expect to see as much good, if not more than evil, come from their laborers. This army of determined workers are destined to make some impression, even on the adamant hearts of "Arkansawyers;" and can it be possible that the question of authority does not occupy a conspicuous position in the mind of every investigator?

I told these young elders I should not be surprised to know of many applying for admission into the Reorganization who first hear of the restoration through these young missionaries. When people become interested they will be happy to learn of the branch or wing of the church that has ever honored their high calling and stood aloof from Utah nastiness and crime; who have never trailed the gospel banner in the dust, and thereby endangered their God-given authority.

I think they saw the point and partly believed the same; for they had been telling me of a branch of their church in Clay County, but when I asked its exact location they had forgotten the address. During my twenty-six years of varied experience in the church I have not before been placed where I am at present, and I feel the need of church literature discussing the differences existing, especially the discussion between Bro. Joseph Smith and L. O. Littlefield, but I cannot buy them. Bro. Joseph Ward, our lone missionary in this big field, is always busy; is an earnest effective worker. We do not often meet him.

I would like to give you some of our Arkansas experience in gospel work, but lest I be too tedious I will close.

D. R. BALDWIN.

TABOR, Iowa, March 2.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference just closed at Shenandoah was one among the best. The Sunday school convention, and the work done were indeed satisfactory to all. Great credit is due this faithful band of workers in such a noble, elevating cause.

Our conference was well attended; a fair representation from the branches was present. The good Spirit prevailed throughout the entire session. All present felt it was good to be there. Our choir with Sr. Belle Gifford on the lead did splendidly; we may safely say we have some of the choice and sweet singers of Israel, which is a great aid to all in the work, inspiring us to move forward to duty.

Quite a number of outsiders were in attendance at both preaching and prayer services. We all feel that the banner of gospel truth must not trail the dust. "Long may it wave o'er the brave and the true." "God speed the right," is our earnest prayer.

HENRY KEMP.

KALKASKA, Mich., March 1.

Editors Herald:—Being somewhat amused over the statements taken from the Christian Herald, in regard to Joseph Musser, I wish to say that he has been among us, periodically, since the first of January, when he gave the lectures, which I mentioned in a previous letter; and notwithstanding an item inserted in the Kalkaskian, that they had formed a Christian society upon the ruins of Mormonism, I am happy to say that the saints are all alive yet; not one of them is lost or asleep. I think I have come the nearest to sleeping of any of our number. However, I am thoroughly awake now, and intend to stay awake the rest of the time. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely.

As for Mr. Musser the saints here have no fear of him; two or three united and faithful saints in his meeting will cause him to leave the bars all down (comparatively speaking), so that anyone of ordinary intelligence can catch him in his attempts to deceive at every point.

At present he is preaching against every denomination. The saints that were present at one of his meetings, were somewhat amused when two prominent in the Disciple or Christian Church, after walking two and one half miles on purpose to hear him speak, came in just as he was combing some of the tangles out of Discipleism. If the editor of the Christian Herald had been present he doubtless would have wished that he had not wasted so much energy in extolling Mr. Musser to such aerial heights. Notwithstanding Mr. Musser's mightiness in the use of the Scriptures, we expect here in a few days to reply to some of his statements; and as Mr. Musser has made a challenge to meet any man, there is a probability of a debate here, in the near future, if he will come to proper terms.

No branch of saints need to fear Mr. Musser, if they will be united and faithful. Give him plenty of rope and leave the results with God. Your brother in Christ,

CHARLES L. SESSIONS.

P. S.—I would like to have Bro. Francis Smith write to me, as I do not know his address. C. L. S.

TUTNALLS, Lydney, England, Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—Having a knowledge of the work in Wales for this last twelve years, I have seen the various stages of advance. At the time of my joining the church, it was in a low spiritual condition; it was very rare that we as a district got a recognition from God.

I attended conferences in different parts of the district only to get this impression, that if God did speak to his saints, that day alas, had gone! this state of things continued till the faith of the young members waxed cold, and some fell away altogether. The reasons of this low spiritual condition, to my mind, were in the men that were supposed to lead the church; they allowed the law of God to be treated with impunity; and the reason of the persecution was, the elders courted it. I myself have stood on the streets and have heard the elders ask for what they got. I am thinking that if there were such preaching to-day the elder would be asked for his license.

I will not dwell on those dark days, but will relate the state of this Eastern district of Wales to-day. I visited Gloucester, December 5, 1896, with Bro. A. N. Bishop, president of district, also Bro. T. Jones, Jr., of Nantyglo, to try and open up the work in that town. I may say a worthy brother lives there. By his Christian conduct he has been instrumental in bringing one young man into the church who, I believe, will become a good laborer in the Lord's vineyard. We met at this brother's house (Bro. G. Mackay) on Saturday evening for a fellowship meeting, and it seemed that before some had time to bear testimony it was ten o'clock. I never before realized such a glorious time. The Spirit filled each soul, which caused some to speak in tongues and others to prophesy. On the Sabbath we held two preaching services; Brn. Jones and Bishop were the speakers. Monday morning found us at the baths to perform the solemn rite of baptism, the fruit of our labor, the first baptism in Gloucester by the Reorganization, I believe.

On December 19 I visited Cardiff, there being a special assembly of the officers of the district. Business meeting convened at eleven a. m., December 20. A more spiritual business meeting it had not been my lot to attend. It was there resolved that Bro. A. N. Bishop be recommended for ordination to the office of high priest, as we considered that our district is in need of such; also we consider that our brother is worthy of the office and the confidence of the district. I may say personally that since Bro. A. N. Bishop has been president of the district it has advanced numerically and spiritually far beyond my expectations. He has spared not himself, but has labored much and spent his own money in the work, and I am pleased to say his labor the Lord is crowning with success. At 2:30 p. m. we met for saints fellowship. Again our Father blessed us by the outpouring of his Spirit, telling us in prophecy that our morning business meeting was pleasing to God.

Since the commencement of the year we at Lydney baptized four young men, members of the Wesleyans, also three females, which is causing the enemy to rage; and I am expecting ere long more to follow. I hear from different quarters of baptisms taking place all over the district, so you may see that we in this land are working for the spread of the glorious gospel of Christ, also that a brighter day has begun to dawn. May it still continue to grow brighter till every one in this land has heard the sound of the restored gospel, is my desire.

Your brother in bonds,

COLUMBUS, Nebraska, March 4.

Editors Herald:—I am reminded that to-day a great event occurs at Washington, D. C., at which time there is a change of the head of our much-honored government, which under God was the birthplace of the church that bears aloft the "ensign" of Christian liberty, to which are invited "all the inhabitants of the world and dwellers on the earth." To me there is more real enjoyment in the thought that I am a child of the coming King—King Emanuel—than to be the head of the best government of earth at the present time; for uneasy is the head that sits enthroned with the executive power over earthly governments, but to be a child of the living God brings peace and joy of soul which is unlawful for one to express, because there is no law of language known among men making it possible to be expressed.

At the conclusion of the debate between Bro. C. Scott and Elder A. Adams, held at Blair, Nebraska, which closed January 23, I began meetings at Desota, where I continued for three evenings, having very cold weather to contend against. Here was once one of the most spiritual branches of the Reorganized Church, but her candlestick was removed out of its place, because of false spirits entering in among the saints. They may have been prayerful, but they certainly were not watchful enough, hence none remain to build up the waste places; but some who have entered the kingdom since are trying to warn their neighbors and entertain the ministers while they sound the trumpet, warning the people to flee from the wrath to come.

I attended the convention and conference of the Northern Nebraska district, which was a very pleasant time, but sufficient mention has been made of it by others. At this time I became acquainted with Bro. Swen Swensen, who endeared himself in the hearts of the saints by his trustfulness and spirituality. With him I journeyed to Fremont, Nebraska, where he preached a sermon in Danish, followed by one in English, both of which were profitable; and on the following day we journeyed to Norfolk, where we separated; I remaining for two evenings, and he pushing on to South Dakota, to answer urgent calls.

On the 6th and 7th of February I attended one of the most spiritual conferences it has been my fortune to attend, the Spirit of the Lord indicating that the scenes of trial and darkness through which the saints had passed, caused by the manifestation of false influences, were about to be swallowed up by a brighter era of spiritual prosperity; and it seemed to begin immediately, for during the series of meetings, which followed, two of those who had been severed from the church when the dark cloud hung over this vicinity, renewed their covenant by baptism; and besides this, eight other precious souls, all adults, entered into sacred covenant to serve the living God during their lives, besides several who had wandered away from their first love made confession, and sought the favor of the heavenly Father, and felt a joy of soul they had not felt for years. Many were left, almost persuaded, and they make a strong defense of the work of God, not excepting the Book of Mormon and the mission of Joseph Smith, who under God was one of the human instruments in bringing into existence the everlasting gospel.

The use of the church at Clearwater leased by the M. E. Church, was secured for us part of the time, and in it I discoursed three nights on the Book of Mormon, and the work of Joseph Smith in contrast with the work of Brigham Young and his following after his death, and at the close of the last-mentioned subject we sang, and the walls of the church resounded with the hymn, "We thank thee O God for a prophet," and the Spirit of the Master was present, bearing witness of the pleasure of God with the expression of our hearts.

How my heart was pained with the knowledge expressed in the heartfelt "God bless you," "I wish you could stay longer," "I hope you can come again soon," as accompanied with much feeling on the part of some that there were not more laborers to fill other calls, so I could have remained longer, for it seemed that there is much hungering and thirsting after righteousness there! But I was comforted in the thought that the work in that part is in the hands of such noble men as Brn. Levi Gamet and William Rumel, who will look after it.

I began services here last night, and while but few attended, yet I felt well in telling them of the work of Jesus the Christ, and with what authority I came in humility to minister to them. Saints feel hopeful of good results from the effort now being made.

I have been associated by angelic influences and assisted by the Spirit of God to a greater extent in the last six weeks than ever before during my ministerial work. Truly God's word is truth, for the promise that angels would go before the ministry has been verified.

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

ELWOOD, Neb., Feb. 23.

Editors Herald.—As we are in need of an elder in this part of the world, I thought this would be a good way of getting some one of them word. I have just got home from M. P. meeting. The minister warned the people of the winds of doctrine. They think the wolf is coming; they are finding out part of what I am, as my wife and I are alone here.

I think the schoolhouse can be had. If an elder sees this and can come, please write me ten days before, as we are nine miles from post office. I will meet him at train any time at Elwood.

Your brother,

JOHN D. PROCTOR.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 20.

Editors Herald.—Having discovered in a work on "detective and police laws" what I deem to be a valuable legal opinion and copy of the original affidavit of Lilburn W. Boggs, with regard to the alleged crime of the Prophet Joseph the first, for the apprehension of whom a requisition was made for a governor's warrant upon Governor Ford, of Illinois, I thought perhaps it might be useful in the hands of our field workers in defense of truth. While debating mentally on this thought, I read in Herald of February 10, in the note of acknowledgment of receipt of volume 1 of Church History by the Iowa University Librarian, J. W. Rich, these words: "Your resort to original documents and the statements of eyewitnesses for facts, is commendable,"—this determined me to send this to the Herald that all might have the benefit thereof. As will be seen herein, the facts in the case cited are known factors in legal history, not "done in a corner," but as Judge Cooley says to the legal world, "the case has gained notoriety," hence is cited as an example of injustice.

Notes on prima facie evidence of being a fugitive from justice:—

"The fact that a party is charged with crime in one State is found in another raises the presumption that he is a fugitive, but it is not conclusive. If this presumption were conclusive a person might be arrested in any State and surrendered to another for trial on the mere showing that in the latter State an indictment had been found or a complaint made in due form against him. By this means one might be punished for constructive presence and participation in an offense committed, if at all, at a great distance, as was actually attempted in the noted case of the Mormon Prophet Smith." . . . "Such a construction would be intolerable."—Judge Cooley, in Princeton Review, January, 1879, page 164. Title of Case ———.

"Ex parte Joseph Smith."

Reported in vol. 3, McLean, p. 121.

"Smith applied to the Circuit Court of the United States for a writ of habeas corpus, claiming he was unlawfully restrained of his liberty by an arrest under a warrant of the Governor of Illinois upon a requisition from the Governor of Missouri. Copies of all the papers were presented to the court. The affidavit charging the crime was made by Lilburn W. Boggs before a magistrate in Missouri."

The affidavit read as follows:—

"This day personally appeared before me, Samuel Weston, a Justice of the Peace within and for the County of Jackson, the subscriber Lilburn W. Boggs, who being duly sworn doth depose and say, that on the night of the 6th of May, 1842, while sitting in his dwelling in the town of Independence, County of Jackson, State of Missouri, he was shot with intent to kill, and that his life was despaired of for several months, and that he believes and has good reason to believe from evidence and information now in his possession, that Joseph Smith, commonly called the Mormon Prophet, was accessory before the fact of the intended murder, and that said Joseph Smith is a citizen or resident of the State of Illinois, and the said deponent hereby applies to the Governor of the State of Missouri to make a demand on the Governor of the State of Illinois to deliver the said Joseph Smith, commonly called the Mormon Prophet, to some person authorized to receive and convey him to the State and County aforesaid, there to be dealt with according to law."

The Governor of Missouri issued his requisition for Smith and described him as a "fugitive from justice." The Governor of Illinois issued his warrant for the arrest and delivery of Smith to the agent of the State of Missouri. The above affidavit was the basis of action of both Governors. The court, upon the hearing of the return to the writ, discharged the prisoner on the ground that the affidavit was not sufficient to justify the warrant of arrest. It was not positive, but merely expressed the belief of Boggs, and that belief relating to a conclusion of law. It did not in fact charge a crime as having been committed in Missouri. It did not show that Smith was in Missouri at the time of the alleged offense. It did not show or state that he had fled from the State.

The court said:—

"The warrant of the Governor of Illinois recites facts which do not appear in the affidavit. The court can only regard the facts set forth in the affidavit of Boggs, as having any legal existence; the misrecitals and overstatements of the requisition and the warrant are not supported by oath and cannot be received as evidence to deprive a citizen of his liberty and transport him to a foreign State for trial. For these reasons Smith must be discharged."

With the wish that the above may be used for the righting of wrong and may tend to confirm others in the belief that our prophet was indeed a martyr for truth's sake, instead of a victim of his own sins, I am,

DEFIANCE, Iowa, March 5.

Editors Herald:—You may wonder at hearing from me from this point, but I came here to act as moderator for Bro. J. F. McDowell in a discussion with Mr. Blalock, of the Christian faith; or, as it is sometimes called, Campbellites. The gentleman came here as an evangelist and finally announced he would lecture on "Mormonism," as he called it, so some of the brethren concluded it would be well to have some one here to look after our interests, so wrote for Bro. McDowell to come up and be present, which request he heeded and came. The Mayor of the town and some others got together and concluded they would get up a debate between Mr. Blalock, who had then been holding meetings here for about seven weeks, and Bro. McDowell. They asked Bro. I. McCord if Bro. McDowell would meet the gentleman, and Bro. McCord told them he would not run away. They then went to see Mr. Blalock and he told them yes, he would show Mormonism up and give them enough of it. He was very boisterous and did lots of boasting and blowing about what he would do to the Mormons. But lo, how have the mighty fallen! In the first proposition when our church was under consideration he was so full of such dirt as Braden generally resorts to that he could hardly hold himself, and so on the second night he let some of his perversions loose, and then proposed to prove Joseph Smith a false prophet. I called a point of order on him and the chairman sustained me. I took the ground that according to the wording of the proposition it was not a question to be discussed then as to whether Joseph Smith was true or false. This seemed to take the ambition all out of him, for that night, but the next night he resorted to all kinds of tricks, and finally said he could reach him indirectly; but at last brought the same question up again, and I called my point again, but the chairman reversed his decision of the night before. This gave him full sway, but in their getting the reversal they showed their trickery and conniving, so all the people could see it and his effort fell flat, and they lost ground by it in the eyes of the people.

Bro. McDowell was blessed of the Lord in a wonderful manner; the word was delivered in power and carried conviction to the hearers. He was wonderfully sustained in spirit and in body, his health being fine, and he feels no weariness, even from his efforts. And now comes the other side, and his church was on the stand, and he was in the affirmative; and now came a hard fight for

Mr. Blalock. He started out to talk in his loud and boisterous manner and of course tried to ring in Joseph Smith and our church; but I again called a halt and to the surprise of Mr. B. the chairman sustained me, and he was confined to his own question, and from this time on he was very tame, and the way Bro. McDowell took him in hand was hard for the Christians to bear in patience. Some of them concluded they did not like discussions anyway, who had been quite favorable when it was our church under fire.

Well, we feel that through the blessing of God Bro. McDowell has gained a decided victory for the cause of truth. The saints here are only strengthened in their faith and we feel assured much good has been done and many friends made to our side of the question; and Mr. Blalock's bluster, bombast, and perversions which he resorted to to sustain his position, were made very apparent and ridiculous and all the honest people could see it, it was so thin. The saints and many friends gave us a hearty support all the way through, for which we feel to thank them.

There was a deep interest manifest all the way through, the house being crowded all the time and standing room all occupied. Mr. Blalock's first gun, as he styled it, was a paper wad, so he said, which we inclose, marked No. 1. Bro. McDowell put out two, one at the close of each proposition, numbered in their order No. 2 and No. 3. You can look at them and see the contrast at a glance. "So we lift up our heads and are glad."

May the Lord bless his servants and prosper his cause, is our prayer.

Yours in the gospel,

FREDERICK A. SMITH.

VASSAR, Mich., Feb. 23.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday I baptized three more, and others are interested. Everything looks favorable for gospel work in this locality; nine have been added to Vassar branch of late. Yesterday I was calling around in the neighborhood where I am holding meetings. In one house they handed me a little volume entitled "The rise of Mormonism from 1830 to 1886." This little book was carried there by the Baptist minister. As I hurriedly read some of the pages about Joseph and his mother and the revelation that Sr. Emma, Joseph's wife, burned, and of John D. Lee, and a host of others, I thought, "Bro. Joseph, and wife, and mother, you are at rest, and I am glad!" Jesus said, "Woe be unto you when all men speak well of you, for so did their fathers to the false prophets." Near the close of the little book the author makes this statement: "Now, I have told enough infernal lies about Joe Smith; I'll see if I can tell the truth," etc.

The old ship Zion is moving right along. I notice that where a few Latter Day Saint sermons are preached Joseph and Hyrum have to catch it. Some of the saints attended some of the meetings held by the Free Methodists. At the close of the service the minister said, "All who are truly converted and saved rise up;" so our brethren rose up and told how they got converted. When the meeting closed one minister asked, "What church do you belong to?"

"The Latter Day Saints."

"O, you worship Joe Smith; you're Mormons; we don't want you to attend our meetings!"

Yours,

E. DELONG.

BENNINGTON, Mich., Feb. 21.

Editors Herald:—Noticing the article entitled "The Divine Sonship of Jesus Christ" in Herald of 17th inst., wherein the novel, "Robert Elsmere," is spoken of as giving such plausible argument in favor of Jesus being the Son of Joseph, reminds me of how that same novel helped me along in my skepticism at the time I read it.

I was raised by Christian parents of the Disciple faith, and from a child had great faith in God, and when about twelve years old united with the Disciple Church. Being taught it was the only true church, I was quite satisfied for a time, believing all I was taught; but often when reading the Bible would be confused, for I never knew what I could take to myself. When I would read about the signs following the believer I would think that was not for me, etc.

But I never could give up the belief that angels could visit the earth now as well as in Bible times, and often prayed that one would appear to me. But as years went on I began to "murmur." After my marriage my husband joined "our" church, and was not long content, although he never became as skeptical as I. I began to be tossed about by every wind of doctrine. I investigated Adventism, and said once to a dear friend who was trying to instruct me in it, "I am almost persuaded to be an Adventist." But I read the Bible night and day, and the more I read the farther I went from Adventism. I read anything that came in my way, Robert Ingersoll's works, freethinkers' books, writings on spiritualism, etc., until I read Robert Elsmere and became converted to its belief; and from believing that Jesus was not the Son of God I finally believed there was no God, only the "God of Nature." From being spiritually discontented we became discontented with our home and went to the sunny South in quest of a new one, among the long-leaf pine of the sand hills of North Carolina.

But I, once the child of faith, became homesick for my God. As I would see the darkies go by to church so regularly, and hear them singing in their little log church, tears would come to my eyes, and I would wish I could have the simple faith they had, once more. One evening at sunset, I took my little one in my arms and sauntered down one of the lovely paths toward the village, and sat down on a mossy seat, to think of the one subject in my mind most of the time. It was a perfect evening, a hush and sweet calm over nature, the darkies were singing in their little church, across the railroad track in the undergrowth, and their singing was so sweet, it seemed like angels singing to me. I looked up at the sky and my homesick heart cried out for its God and I was overwhelmed with the conviction, and I cried aloud, "There is a God!" I had found him again, not through teaching, but in my earnest search for truth. He had allowed me to lose him awhile, that I might feel the loneliness without him, and then by his Spirit revealed himself. But I could not go back to the creeds and doctrines of men; I had found my God, and I felt that he would lead me to the truth.

We were strongly impressed to go back home, and had not been home many days when a notice was given to us that Elder Levi Phelps, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, would preach in No. 7 schoolhouse on a certain evening. As we were friends of Bro. Philip Green and wife, of Ridgetown, Ontario, who were living here then, and had promised them we would attend their meetings, when they procured an elder, we went to hear him. We recognized the Master's voice at once! I was so glad to know that God was not partial, but that we might have the gifts and blessings in our day, by complying with the gospel law. After a thorough investigation, reading the Book of Mormon, Lucy Smith's history of the Seer, and many tracts, and the Bible, and being much instructed by the elder, we obeyed. Although we suffered some persecution, and lost many worldly friends, we have never regretted that we obeyed the Master; and can testify that by the manifestation of the Spirit of God we know we are in the true church. We have "learned doctrine."

Being among the isolated ones, we take great comfort reading the church publications.

SISTER ELLA S. THAYER.

FORT MADISON, Iowa, March 6.

Editors Herald:—Since Christmas I have been very busy, preaching the word. I left home January 8, and landed in Ottumwa, Iowa, that night, in company with Bro. J. R. Evans. We visited the saints there and in Keb, and attended their business meeting; the writer speaking at Keb on Sunday, and Bro. Evans in Ottumwa. On Monday we did more visiting and on Tuesday Bro. Evans took train for New Canton, Illinois, and the writer went to Keosauqua, to be the guest of Bro. and Sr. Emerson Brown that night. Bro. and Sr. Brown are genuine Latter Day Saints, continually on the alert for an opportunity to do good, and to show by their lives that they are worthy the name they bear. May God bless them in their efforts.

The next day went on to Farmington, where we found things in bad shape spiritually. Visited around among the saints until Sunday, when we attended the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. and spoke to the saints at eleven o'clock. In the afternoon walked out into the country to Dry Ridge schoolhouse and at 7:30 began a series of meetings which continued until February 1, speaking in all seven times.

On the 3d I came to Fort Madison and began at 7:30 that night, where we have been ever since. Owing to an attack of lagrippe we were obliged to give up our meetings for four nights; other than that we have held preaching meetings every night and three times on Sundays. Bro. A. H. Smith dropped in and occupied one evening, Bro. John H. Lambert, of Montrose, Iowa, one, and Bro. Daniel Tripp, of Montrose, three, and as a result we had the pleasure of leading ten souls into the Mississippi River for baptism, and a number of others believing. I never saw a people more eager to hear the truth. If the work here is properly cared for, we can see no reason why a good branch of the church could not be built up in this city. We have run across a number of old-time saints and those of the early days of the Reorganization who have drifted away from the church, some placing their names in other churches and some not. If the proper care is exercised and effort made, we will reclaim most of them. Will be here over to-morrow (Sunday), then go to Montrose for a couple of days, then to Burlington for conference.

To the saints that I have been unable to call on during the past year, I have simply this to say: Desires have been strong enough, but lack of time and means have hindered. We have tried to improve our time to the best advantage and in such places as in our judgment needed labor the most. We trust no serious mistakes were made. Saints before they make their complaints should take into consideration the fact that two missionaries in seventeen counties cannot possibly meet all the demands. We need at least two more missionaries in this district and then the local priesthood to wake up and perform their part.

I am glad to report that the work to us looks brighter and in a more thrifty condition than a year ago. In bonds,

F. M. WELD.

FLORA VISTA, N. M., Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Roush arrived here on 3d inst., with happy surprise and greeting, the event of which our souls were made to rejoice. Without delay he set about his work, which demonstrated his ambition, and his first discourse proved his experience and usefulness in wielding the gospel sledge hammer, dealing out monstrous blows with such unabated velocity and power that it aroused the indignation of the superstitious and set ablaze the curiosity of the dormant and conservative among the small audiences gathered to listen to thirteen sermons delivered during the two weeks of his stay, attendance being small, owing to the inclemency of the weather, rendering the roads nearly impassable; yet the attention and interest manifested were such that made many friends, who extended numerous and cordial invitations to call, of which as many as practicable were responded to.

In response to an urgent invitation to go to the La Plata, a distance of sixteen miles, Bro. Roush seized his grip and departed, remaining there about ten days, introducing the restored gospel to eager and attentive listeners, where seats were at a premium, no matter how frequent, making many friends, and making as many calls as time would allow.

The 22d inst. found Bro. Roush again at Flora Vista, to fill an appointment which was to be held in the Methodist church building, where previous services had been held. Finding the door closed he retired to the schoolhouse, where a fair audience was addressed, manifesting an increased interest; after which Bro. Roush gave notice of the baptism of two, (H. C. Tharp and Mary Acre,) to take place the following day, the 23d, and confirmation in the evening during services. The baptism was well attended, also the confirmation, causing wonder and astonishment. He concluded by a rousing discourse, touching upon the resurrection and eternal judgment. After benediction, a general handshake and good-bye were heartily engaged in.

On the morning of the 24th we bade him a reluctant good-bye, being aware that his departure was urgent. We part with eager hopes of his speedy return, believing his presence is greatly needed here and that his valuable services would be the means of bringing many hungry and thirsting souls into the kingdom of God.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NQ. 9.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

WE have had a very successful attack of the lagrippe "by the wayside," but we are glad we can now report "on deck" and again "ready for our rations." (T. W. W., take notice.) Commencing a series of meetings here on the 7th at the Gospel Hill church, and yesterday baptized eight and many more very near the door. The good Spirit was with us throughout, and rested upon all the people, as evinced by men who had not spoken to each other for months asking pardon and walking into the water.

Brn. J. D. Flanders and C. P. Faul added valuable assistance. Bro. William Duncan had charge of the music. Sister Lauria, his wife, organist, with their sweet music and appropriate selections added largely to our success, for which our thanks are due.

LEBECK, Mo., March 6.

Editors Herald:—Since laying down the Herald I was reading, my mind goes back into the dark past, my past life, the years that should have been "golden years;" "nothing but leaves, no gathered sheaves!" Two years ago to-morrow I accepted of this blessed gospel and O, how short those two years have been! and still I ought to have achieved greater results. How weak we are!

The other day I picked up a volume of Autumn Leaves. "A testimony by William Jordan," met my eye. The first gospel sermon I ever heard was preached by this dear old brother in Calhoun County, Iowa. Many of the Auburn saints will remember him, for he it was that sowed the good seed there. Of course I was too young to appreciate what was said, and my young head was filled with hair-raising stories of "Joe Smith." I thank the Lord that I lived to find these stories all a myth and this latter-day work all that it has been represented to be. The trouble is not with the doctrine, but with us. If we do not enjoy the Spirit, there is something wrong with us, and we should seek to get right as soon as possible.

The work here might be in a more prosperous condition. There ought to be a certain kind of work done here, something that will have a tendency to properly enthuse the saints and make them appreciate this work as they should. It is discouraging to hear saints say they have no need for prayer; also when we hear them ridiculing the gifts as they are manifested. It is not so hard to bear when it comes from the outside. Surely there are many discouragements to meet, and how sweet it will be when we know that the last danger is passed and we reach the harbor. This calls to mind Bro. and Sr. Burton. How lonely must be their far-away island home in comparison to what they enjoyed here among those they loved. What a joy it will be to them when the voyage is nearing its close and they can sing

"Land ahead, its fruits are waving O'er the hills of fadeless green."

Bro. F. C. Keck is telling the people of Fort Scott, Kansas, the gospel story in a way they will not soon forget. Bro. R. T. Walters and G. W. Beebe, Jr., at Rich Hill, Missouri, are working for the Master. May the Father above crown their labors with success.

CABIN RUN, W. Va., March 4.

Editors Herald:—I came here from Ritchie County, to where I labored from the first of the month with the Mount Zion branch and surrounding neighborhood, where much good has been done that will develop in due time. The West Virginia district is in tolerably good condition, and if they could be taught the temporal law by the proper ones, would keep the law of tithing. While preaching at the James Ross schoolhouse on the 18th of February, a shower of rotten eggs was thrown in at the door at us. One passed either side of my head and burst against the wall behind me. One struck Bro. Joseph Biggs, from Kirtland, Ohio, who was assisting me, on the leg, and some of the hearers were hit. And I tell you it created quite a stench in our nostrils during the services. I had good liberty and felt well. I supposed that would be the last of it, but I was mistaken; for the next night they were on the ground before we got there and threw an egg at me as I went in and I believe before the meeting closed there were at least five dozen eggs thrown, and hardly a person in the house but what was hit with one, except myself. The eggers fell out with one another on their way home and one struck another one and broke his shoulder blade; and so Satan rages.

Bro. Biggs is still with me and is a good soldier for the truth. Bro. J. L. Goodrich has been laboring in these parts for some time and has done a good work. There is a goodly number of noble people that uphold and defend the work in the West Virginia district that do not belong to the church and do not have the will to obey.

Would like to attend General Conference, but finances will not permit.

Yours in bonds,

G. H. GODBEY.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—Again the saints and friends of Runnells have been cheered by the labors of Bro. W. H. Kephart and Bro. Roth. Meetings convened over Sabbath, January 31; also the funeral of a friend of saints, a Mrs. Hammer, was conducted by Bro. Kephart, the presence of God's Holy Spirit enabling him to present the grand truths of the gospel.

Then on the 3d along came Bro. Roth with his cheering countenance, and services convened over the 11th with good interest and the message in power. All feel that good has been done, but ascribe all glory to the Giver of all good. May the peaceful influence of God's Spirit ever attend their labors and his servants everywhere.

Let us who are home, who confess the gospel is true, remember that we are living in a day of sacrifice, wherein is a work for all to do. While in this life we labor with ardent zeal for the wealth of this world, but when the great eternity is ushered in we had better have laid up treasures in an unending world, where we can fully enjoy the great inheritance, where it will last but not for a time, as in this life, but forever.

I trust the time is not far distant when the Lord will move upon my companion by his Spirit to obey the gospel, and should such be the case, I believe he will give heed to the law by which he shall aid in sustaining the gospel. I believe there is more required of us, dear saints, than many of us idly suppose. Let us awake and have oil in our vessels that we may all be guided aright in this as in all other ways, that we may be saved in the celestial glory, is the prayer of,

SISTER C. TEAKLE.

TACTICS OF DISCIPLES.—NO. 1.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

THROUGH the kindness of an acquaintance of mine who is an active member of the so-called Christian Church of this place, I came in possession of a number of copies of the Christian Leader, which is published in Cincinnati, Ohio, in the interest of that organization. In these copies is contained a continued article headed, "Elder J. F. McDowell, a Latter-Day Saint, Reviewed." It is written by one J. J. Taylor and purports to review Elder McDowell's tract on "Discipleism," with which many of our readers are acquainted. To reply to this is the object of this article, in which I purpose to vindicate Elder McDowell, and show the unfairness of Mr. Taylor's methods, and with what result they can be applied to his own cause. With these few apologetical remarks I launch forth into the field of investigation, allowing Mr. Taylor to speak for himself in his own language. The controversy shall, therefore, be between Elder McDowell, Mr. Taylor, and his commentator. I begin with No. 2 of his articles as I could not, to my disappointment, get No. 1.

McDowell.—"How did Mr. Campbell propose to effect the restoration of primitive Christianity as a divine organization without the intervention of divine help?"

Taylor.—"I shall only say, Mr. Campbell had no thought of a restoration without being guided by the divinely revealed word given to us by inspiration, and no man who is earnestly seeking light and knowledge would undertake such a grand and noble work as did Mr. Campbell without invoking divine aid to guide him in understanding the true and faithful word of God."

Comment.—Such is the reply of this author to the above statement of Bro. McDowell. It may do very well for those who are satisfied with a mere reply to a question regardless of whether it is true or not, but to those who are not, it is utterly valueless. He asserts in this paragraph, first, that Mr. Campbell had no thought of a restoration without being guided by the "revealed word;" and second, he says impliedly that Mr. Campbell by invocation was enabled through "divine aid" to understand the revealed word. But, Mr. Author, why would he invoke divine aid? You would answer, To enable him to understand the revealed word. The only divine aid he could get to help him understand the revealed word would be the Spirit or Holy Ghost. Now that is as much as to say that he could not understand the revealed word without this divine aid—the Spirit. And as an understanding of the revealed word would be infinitely necessary to the restoration of primitive Christianity, he could not, therefore, restore it without the Spirit. And if he received not the Spirit you are not a member of the church of God, and unsaved. But if he did receive it, how am I to know it; and, furthermore, how am I to know that he was an authorized servant of God? A merciful God will certainly not ask me to rest in uncertainty. Suppose, however, that he were to receive divine enablement to understand the revealed word, the scriptures, would that, or such an understanding empower him to restore primitive Christianity? That depends on whether there is sufficient in the scriptures to understand. If there is not, he could not make a restoration with them alone. I positively deny that the Bible contains sufficient for the restoration and guidance of the church, and shall bring forward some of the evidences further on. But if it is, how do you know it, since it makes not the least intimation to that effect?

McDowell.—“The fact is that no man by ‘human ingenuity’ alone could ever disinter the edifice of ancient Christianity.”

Taylor.—“This is a fact, and Mr. Campbell knew it; but he believed the word of God, as it was handed down to us by the inspired penmen, to be the true and faithful revelation of Jesus Christ.”

Comment.—The word of God was not handed directly to us by inspired penmen, but by uninspired penmen. Inspired penmen handed it to others, who in turn handed it to others still, and so on till it finally reached us. Then how do you know that Mr. Campbell “believed the word of God as it was handed down” by inspired penmen when the possibility of its being corrupted by those who intermediately handed it to us suggests that it might not be as it was originally written. He could not believe what is not there, inasmuch as he could not believe what he knew nothing about. I shall bring forward scriptural and historical evidence to show you that the word of God does not exist in any of the oriental manuscripts, or in any of the modernly used translations—barring out Joseph Smith’s—uncorruptedly the same as it flowed from the pens of the original authors.

It is proper here, sir, to observe that you misrepresent Mr. Campbell. Even he did not believe that the word of God is as it was at first—designating the Bible by the “word of God.” He said, “The apostate church—Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots—changed even the Bible itself,” etc. You knew this when you made the above statement, or else you have read Hayden’s History of the Disciples and the Campbell-Purcell debate to little or no purpose, if you read them at all.

Taylor.—“Mr. Campbell did not have to resort to ‘human ingenuity’ for the purpose of disinterring ‘ancient Christianity.’”

Comment.—Then he had the power to resort to something else. Pray, tell us what it was; perhaps inspiration?

Taylor.—“He had God’s divinely revealed word to guide him into all truth, and, by the instructions to be found therein, he found the ‘edifice of ancient Christianity.’”

Comment.—That is it. And what was it like when he “found” it? Did it have apostles, prophets, and inspired men? But your use of the word “found” is a little obscure. Do you mean that “by the instructions to be found therein,” he founded and afterward “found” the “edifice of ancient Christianity”? Or, do you mean that he “found” it in the divinely revealed word? I am not particular which it is, because you are, as I shall presently show, wrong in either case; but I will answer both.

If you mean the former, you should not have said “ancient” Christianity. Ancient Christianity was very unlike yours. A description of it is found in 1 Corinthians 12:27, 28. From these passages we learn that it had apostles, prophets, and many other things which are absent from the organization Mr. Campbell founded. You may say that those things all ceased. But they were in ancient Christianity; and any Christianity that is without them now is only modern. If you meant the latter, I reply that it is an utter impossibility to find the edifice of ancient Christianity, which is the Church of Christ, in the Bible. The Bible contains some of the laws of his church, but to say it is the church itself is to talk nonsense.

You say he had God’s word to “guide him into all truth.” If he did, God did not give it to him for that purpose. There never was a statement more false than that. Such a thing as the written word of God guiding people into all truth is entirely unknown to the Bible. On the other hand the Bible is opposed to it from Genesis to Revelation, both in tenor and in defining what it was that was to guide his people into all truth. It says:—

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth, etc.—John 16:13.

See also John 14:15-26; and 15:26, where more of the office work of the Spirit of truth is given.

Jesus was the Comforter to his disciples while on earth. He personally delivered counsel and revealed his mind to them. And he told them that after he ascended he would not leave them “comfortless,” but would send unto them “another Comforter,” through the agency of which he would still continue to manifest his mind to them. (See Acts 1:2). Thus it was the Spirit, the Comforter, which succeeded him, that was to guide his people into all truth. Some of the manifestations of this Comforter were afterward written down—but not all—and imperfectly handed down to us by uninspired men who held them. To be correct, Mr. Taylor, you should have said that Mr. Campbell had God’s divinely revealed word to guide him into some truth.

McDowell.—“Its primary establishment was the work of divine inspiration, and so must be its reestablishment.”

Taylor.—“I shall only say if Jesus Christ had only set up an institution, which was only temporary, and after its removal, then it would have been necessary for a reestablishment; but Jesus said ‘the gates of hades shall not prevail against it.’”

Comment.—The passage you quote is found in Matthew 16:18, and you are not the first one in this century that has improperly used it. In examining it, however, it is important to determine, first, what the “gates of hades” means; second, whether the fact of the gates of hades not prevailing against the Church of Christ proves there would be no apostasy or disestablishment of the church. You have not, of course, proven that the thing which Jesus had in view which should not be prevailed against, was the church. There is a question with some about that. Jesus said, “Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hades shall not prevail against it.” Those who entertain the question referred to, ask, “Which was it, the 'rock' or the 'church' that was not to be prevailed against? Without venturing a process of reasoning to establish which it is, I will take it for granted that it was the church he alluded to—as you believe that is what is meant.

"Gates of hades." You quote from the Revised Version I notice. "Hades," which is in the Authorized Version rendered "hell" and corresponds with the Hebraic sheol, is scripturally the place of the unsaved dead. Whether there is anything specially significant about the "gates," I am not particular and passive, and will untechnically grant you what you evidently intended to convey by the use of the phrase, as I see nothing in your general way of using the text that would interfere with our position on the apostasy of the primitive church. "Prevail against." Prevail means "to overcome, to gain the victory; to become predominant." A few years ago you had a war in your country between the North and South. Is it not a proper question to ask, which prevailed? Certainly it is; you would answer, the North. Just so; but did they prevail in every battle during the war? You know that they did not; thousands were slain from their ranks by the perseverant Southerners. Some six hundred thousand were killed on both sides, besides about four hundred thousand who were disabled or wounded. In many engagements the rebels swept away and routed "horse and cart" the Northern detachments. In these particular instances they prevailed; but finally and permanently their enemy prevailed. So it was, is, and will be with the Church of Christ. It was instituted for a certain object. Finally it will accomplish it—will be triumphant, will be the victor, and will prevail. But is that to say that Satan makes no momentary successes against it; that none fall in the perpetual war he is waging against it; that none yield to his evil enticings, and thereby fall from the ranks of the righteous and saved? Of course it is not.

I think by this time you understand me and probably see the misapplication you have made of that fond text of Roman Catholics. "Shall not prevail against" is to be understood in either of the following two senses: first, that Satan shall gain no advantage over the church whatever, momentary or final, in any place or time; second, that he will not be predominant after the battle is over for good, that he will not in the end be victorious. Now if it be applied in the latter sense, I do not deny it; if in the former, I dissent. It is utterly impossible for the former to be the proper way in which this text is to be understood, in view of the fact that the scriptures simply abound with statements, both of a historical and a prophetic character, that there was and was to be an apostasy or extinction from the earth of primitive Christianity. Indeed, Paul says, even in his early day:—

All they which are in Asia be turned away from me.—2 Timothy 1: 15.

In Revelation chapters two and three, is an account of the rebukes administered to the seven churches of Asia.

Even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time. They went out from us, because they were not of us.—1 John 2: 18, 19.

Jude says:—

For there are certain men crept in unawares.—1: 4.

For similar observations to show that the deathful clutches of apostasy were at that early date of inspiration and miracles, drawing whole churches into its cesspool of iniquity, see 1 Timothy 1: 19, 28; 2 Timothy 2: 17, 18; 3 John 9 and 10 verses; 1 John 4: 1-3.

These are, however, only literal fulfillments of prophecies previously made; and further predictions were given expression to by the authors just referred to, in relation to the development of the revelation of the "man of sin." In the Old Testament we have the following. Daniel's vision of the four beasts and the interpretation. "The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth," says Daniel. It is easily seen that it represents the Roman Empire with its divisions and subdivisions. (See chapter 7.) Speaking of one of the horns of this fourth beast which was diverse from all the others, he says:—

I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them.

Here it is positively declared that the saints would be "prevailed" against; without question the saints was the church as it existed forward from the time of Christ's personal ministry on earth. Isaiah said:—

The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.—Isa. 24: 5.

Amos speaks of a "famine for hearing the word of the Lord." (8: 11.)

Without worrying you, kind reader, with any more passages from the Old Testament, permit me to introduce one or two prophecies from the New Testament in line with the foregoing. In Matthew 11: 12 it is recorded that Jesus said:—

And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent taketh it by force.

The "kingdom of heaven" was the church, and the violent was the power which was warring against it as prophesied of by Daniel and others. Paul warned the elders of Ephesus in the following touching remarks:—

For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.—Acts 20: 29. See also 2 Thess. 2: 7-12; 2 Tim. 3: 13; Rev. 12: 13; 7, 8: 17.

I think that the evidences which I have adduced from the Bible supportive of this doctrine ought to satisfy any Bible believer of its truthfulness. Why do you, Mr. Taylor, deny that the ancient church was disestablished or that there was an apostasy when Mr. McDowell quotes copiously from your leading authors in its favor? Not only this, but you have admitted it several times yourself already, in acknowledging that Mr. Campbell effected a "restoration." This you have done in the quotations I have been making from your senseless statements. At all events there has either been an apostasy or else the church has existed uninterruptedly from the days of Jesus to the present time. If the latter be true, which is it? I ask. And why did not Mr. Campbell join it instead of starting another? Or dare you deny that he started another? You doubtless believe that the church commonly known as the Disciple Church is the true Church of Jesus Christ. If you do not, why are you defending it? If you do, would you be brazen enough to admit that it existed the same before Mr. Campbell's time?

Jones, J. Argent; Deacons W. J. Haworth, J. Holder. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: District president, Elder G. T. Ballard; assistant president, E. J. Haworth; secretary, Claude S. McLaren; assistant, Walter J. Haworth. Brn. J. W. Wight, J. W. Gillen, and Joseph Luff, were appointed representatives to General Conference. The following resolution was passed: Whereas the field of labor, and responsibility in gospel word in this mission is widening and the laborers so few, therefore be it resolved that this conference request the First Presidency to consider the advisability of sending one of the Twelve to this mission at the next General Conference, or another of the Seventy if one of the Twelve cannot be sent. Will the First Presidency please note this request. G. R. Wells was ordained to the office of Seventy by Elders Kaler and Butterworth, of the Seventy. The conference then adjourned to meet at Hamilton, December 25 and 26, 1897. This conference was indeed a blessed season and was on the whole the very best conference held in connection with the district.

FREMONT.

Convention convened at Shenandoah, Thursday, February 26, at 7:30 p. m., Assistant Superintendent Joseph Roberts presiding. After the usual devotional exercises a paper written by Ethel Skank on "Some of the mistakes of a Sunday school teacher," was read by Mamie Pace and a discussion of the same was led by Blanche Andrews. This was followed by a paper, "Some of the mistakes of a Sunday school superintendent," by Joseph Roberts, in which he outlined the model superintendent, leaving each individual superintendent to discover his mistakes by comparing with the model set before them. The work was emphasized by a blackboard outline. Friday, ten a. m. The morning hour was spent in business. Emma Hougas secretary pro tem., and authorized to prepare minutes and send to Herald. Reading of school and teachers reports. Delegates to General Convention, Bro. and Sr. T. A. Hougas, Bro. and Sr. D. Hougas, Bro. and Sr. George Kemp, Bro. and Sr. M. W. Gaylord, William Gaylord, and Nettie Green, and all others who may go, any number of whom being present authorized to cast the full vote of the district, delegates instructed by unanimous vote to support proposed amendments to Constitution and By-Laws, also uniformity of texts. Bro. and Sr. E. D. Briggs, of Nebraska City, being present, were invited to take part in convention work. On request the reading of paper of Maud McClenahan was postponed until afternoon session. Charles Fry not being able to attend, his paper on "How to prepare a lesson from the Quarterly," was sent in, but for want of time only a few points were noted and discussed. At 2:30 p. m. business was again taken up and the following officers elected: Charles Fry superintendent, Joseph Roberts assistant, the superintendent and assistant to choose the third, Ethel Skank elected secretary. By vote, the superintendent and assistants were chosen program committee. The paper of Maud McClenahan on intermediate class work was read and discussed. In the paper the successive steps of practical teaching were plainly outlined and emphasized by an appropriate blackboard outline. This was followed by a teachers' experience meeting, led by Brn. Davidson and Briggs, in which all participated, and it was very much enjoyed. The Sunday school newspaper edited by Charles Fry and Ola Redfield was read by Sr. Redfield. Owing to want of time the paper was somewhat abridged, but what was read was both instructive and practicable and was appreciated and enjoyed. The evening was devoted to the theme of temperance. An essay on "Why teach temperance to children?" was read by Emma Hougas. Mamie Pace gave a very appropriate recitation entitled, "Between two fires." H. F. Durfey gave a very interesting talk on "What can the ministry do for the cause of temperance?" in which he emphasized very strongly the power of example. The General Superintendent having just arrived gave a few remarks, which closed a very pleasant and profitable convention. Adjourned to meet at the same place, just previous to the time of next district conference.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Western Passenger Association has granted reduced rates to the coming General Conference and conventions, naming the dates as requested, from April 4-20. While the conference does not convene till the 6th, the 4th is named in order to permit attendance at the Religio and Sunday school conventions.

Reduced rates are granted under the following conditions:—

1. Going tickets must be purchased not earlier than three days before the first date named, and not later than three days after, Sunday not being counted as a day in any case. In other words, tickets may be purchased on any date from April 1 to 7, inclusive, but not later than the 7th.

2. The rate is one and one third fare for the round trip. The rule is to purchase full fare tickets on the going trip. Passengers must, in all cases, obtain certificates with every ticket purchased, which certificates, when signed by the Church Secretary and stamped by the railroad agent at Lamoni, will entitle purchasers to return trip tickets at one third the usual fare; provided that one hundred tickets are purchased; and, provided further, that ministers holding half-fare permits are not entitled to this reduction; nor are tickets purchased at fifty cents or less to be counted.

Where passengers can do so, it is better to purchase a through ticket to Lamoni and obtain one certificate. Where several tickets are purchased, separate certificates must be obtained with each.

Those who travel over two or more different roads should purchase tickets to junction points, when possible, and thus cover each line of road with one ticket and its corresponding certificate. Take particular notice, that while going full fare tickets may be purchased at any station on roads of the Western Association, some roads name special junction points at which only, as we understand, they will honor certificates for reduced fare on the return trip; hence tickets should be bought to the junction points named by said roads, which, so far as heard from, are as follows: Missouri Pacific: Omaha, Kansas City, and St. Louis. Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific: Des Moines, Ottumwa, Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, and Kansas City. Chicago and Alton: Chicago, Peoria, Louisiana, and Kansas City. Certificates from the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern Road, will be honored for return passage at reduced rate by the C. R. I. and P., M. and St. L., St. L. K. and N. W., C. B. and Q. and R. I. and P. Rys. For information as to best routes, apply to ticket agents.

Additional information: The Fremont, Elkorn, & Missouri Valley Railroads' junction point is Omaha, Nebraska. "Agents of the Sioux City & Pacific Railroad will, upon application, furnish delegates with certificate receipts for fare paid to Council Bluffs via Missouri Valley and C. & N. W. Ry." The Missouri Pacific expects to sell independence, Missouri, delegates through tickets to Lamoni. See local agent.

The Central Passenger Committee could not grant rates, because over seven days, its rule limit.

Tickets on the going passage may be limited or unlimited, according to the rules of roads selling them; but return tickets are good only for continuous passage, and not later than three days after the 20th—to the 23d inclusive.

Purchasers should hand in their certificates promptly to the Secretary, that the local railway agent may be notified of the required one hundred being purchased.

The following lines of road will sell tickets on the certificate plan:—

Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Northern; Chicago and Alton; Chicago and Northwestern; Chicago, Burlington, and Northern; Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy; Chicago Great Western; Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul; Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific; Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha; Hannibal and St. Joseph; Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Council Bluffs; St. Louis, Keokuk, and Northwestern; Illinois Central; Iowa Central; Jacksonville and St. Louis; Minneapolis and St. Louis; Missouri Pacific; Rock Island and Peoria; St. Louis and San Francisco; Sioux City and Pacific; Wabash; Wisconsin Central Lines; Burlington and Missouri; Colorado Midland; Denver and Rio Grande; Fremont, Elkhorn, and Missouri Valley; Rio Grande Western; St. Joseph and Grand Island; Union Pacific.

R. S. SALYARDS,
Secretary Reorganized Church.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 15, 1897.

FAST DAY.

Recognizing the existence of a strong desire among the saints for a day of fasting and prayer to be observed before the assembling of conference, April 6, we have consulted together and agreed to appoint Sunday, March 28, as a day of Fasting and Prayer, to be observed by the church in its several branches, and by the saints who may not be able to attend the meetings where held.

We recommend as subjects for contemplation and prayer; the general condition of the church in its attitude to the world; the ministerial force and its labors; the financial department and its needs; the organization of the church in its several quorums, their condition, vacancies, and the necessity that they may be filled; the disturbed conditions of the political world at home and abroad, as signs of the times indicating the soon coming of the Messiah and the need of preparation in holiness for that great event.

We recommend that the fast be from the evening meal of Saturday, March 27, to the evening meal of Sunday, the 28th.

We further recommend that the usual Lord's Day services of the prayer and testimony meeting be devoted to prayer for the objects desired.

Let the saints be united in appealing to the Lord for the aid and direction of the Holy Spirit, the light of truth and the Spirit of revelation and wisdom, for the present exigencies and the work of the incoming year.

Acting Counselor.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large.—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,

Herald, about.....4,000 "

Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

Business Manager.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Re-futed. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the sub-ject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death con-sidered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judg-ment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priest-hoods, and the ideal church of New Testa-ment times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church build-ing since the days of the apostles. New, re-vised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the gen-eral position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

SENT FREE!

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concern-ing the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one de-sign in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæ-ology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American abo-riginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the original church, the Reorganized Church, the Hed-rickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the suc-cessor of the original church.

THE "CALL TO CHRISTENDOM."

"THE Twentieth century's Call to Christendom" is the title of a very suggestive article in The Homiletic Review for October, which in a reprint has been widely distributed among ministers and leaders in evangelistic work. "The Call" directs attention to the fact that the twentieth century is not four years distant, but is now upon us. It is well established that Christ was born at least four years previous to the current date assigned to the Christian era. Hence "The Call" comes to the churches for immediate action, and appeals to Christendom at once to "gird itself for world conquest." The response to this appeal has already been hearty, and gives promise of an intensification of Christian effort. Referring to "The Call," The Christian Intelligencer says, "The times certainly invoke an earnest turning to the Lord and the seeking of greater and better things for the church and the world."

In an editorial on the same subject, The Episcopal Recorder (Philadelphia) says:—

"This call is for the immediate carrying of the gospel to all the peoples of the earth; but it is not only the call of the twentieth century, but of all the centuries since the great sacrifice of Calvary. Nevertheless, the approaching close of this century and the beginning of another impresses men with the stern march of time, and causes our minds to instinctively look for some great movement similar to those which have marked the ending of past centuries. No more worthy movement than this can be mentioned, and the call and privilege of the gospel in permitting us to be coworkers with God are emphasized by the rapidly approaching end of the century. The way to do this is simple enough—to set to work immediately in one's own sphere. By prayerful effort, and in the absence of censoriousness, to begin at home. The church needs convincing of sin; its own quarrels need healing, and confession of being in the wrong, and requests of forgiveness on the part of church-members and members of families now at variance, will do much to break down the barriers that keep out the tide of pure and undefiled religion, fit each Christian man and woman for individual work for the souls of others. The soul-winner cannot be other than a thorough servant of God; for none are so quick to detect the absence of gospel in the lives of those who preach it as those to whom it is preached. We sincerely trust that this call from the risen Lord, so powerfully accentuated by the coming of the twentieth century, will not pass unheeded."

A writer in The Mid-Continent (St. Louis) has the following reference to "The Call":—

"A blazing torch was lit when Dr. Gregory, editor of The Homiletic Review, sent forth his clarion call to the ministry, pleading for a mighty forward movement all along the line. From the same source in the East has come another flaming torch, 'The Twentieth Century's Call to Christendom,' pressing home the need of personal consecration and immediate practical efforts on the part of every believer for the conversion of the world. Dr. Nicolls, speaking for the West and Southwest, lights a needed fire when in The Mid-Continent he says, 'We need a gospel, not of mere words, but of power and life, a preaching of it that will convict the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment to come. And this is but to say that we need the Holy Spirit, in the powerful and gracious exercise of his ministry.' Dwight L. Moody believes that 'the proposed movement for the immediate evangelization of the world is timely. He believes that there never was a moment since the parting commission of our Lord, that such a movement would be out of season, and the sooner the church is awakened to activity the better.'

'The trumpet's voice hath roused the land,
Light up the beacon-pyre!
A hundred hills have seen the brand
And waved the sign of fire.'

"The church needs the baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire, from above, a sin-consuming, life-giving fire that will bring in a high state of spiritual prosperity from one end of the land to the other. As we scan the signs of the times, we may reverently say that the hour is at hand for an unusual and glorious season of refreshing."

The Mid-Continent also has an editorial note on the same topic, as follows:—

"The right-at-hand future is big with events. Certainly developments momentous and wide-embracing await us. Other forces are working mightily. Tendencies and influences to-day flow in sweeping volume. The solidarity of the race is illustrated. The work of the church too should be at flood-tide. We need the 'sound from heaven as of a mighty rushing wind,' which shall 'fill all the house.'" —Literary Digest.

DANGER TO CATHOLICISM FROM RELIGIOUS LIBERALISM.

THE Catholic Church in America is no more free, apparently, from the liberalistic tendencies of the day than the Protestant churches. A note of solemn warning is sounded in The American Ecclesiastical Review (February) by a writer who signs himself "Ho Tharseus." The liberalism which the writer fears most is that of the national type, which leads to the "flaunting" of the American flag in Catholic schools, and stimulating patriotism at the expense of true Catholic feeling. We quote from the article:—

“Religious liberalism of the national type is the enemy which confronts the church in America, as it has confronted and harassed the church within the last century in Jansenism, Gallicanism, Febronianism, and Josephinism. These were in reality Protestant onslaughts under the mask of Catholic orthodoxy, appealing to the state against ecclesiastical autocracy. By their side another form of liberalism was doing battle against the church. It was the rationalizing element in the hierarchy, which with men like Dr. Trautson, Archbishop of Vienna, began its destructive work by inveighing against the scholastic method in our theological seminaries, and by advocating the substitution in its place of the ‘new science.’ A third enemy which entered the field to undermine the positive teaching of the church was the liberal Catholicism represented by the gifted De Lamennais. He had, indeed, no sympathy with Protestantism or any of its doctrinal forms; he realized the danger arising from the false progress of the rationalizing school; yet he aided both in their destructive work, and his captious zeal was capable, for a time at least, to lead astray some of the noblest minds of France. . . .

“A like triple cord of religious liberalism is visibly, though gradually, winding itself about the church in America. Zealots of the most opposite aims aid each other unwittingly in humiliating the Spouse of Christ and tying her to the yoke of state worship. It is an idle task to prophesy to the children who pipe and dance, but the student of history may perchance recognize the symptoms of an old disease stealing upon us—an intermittent fever, the spells of unrest and the sure decay, albeit the hectic flush, the the large, moist eye, and the hopeful promises of strength when the warmth of the spring returns, make the body seem for the moment fair.

“Or are there no such symptoms in our Catholic public life? Is there no danger that the needless flaunting of the American flag in our schools and even sanctuaries may beget a false nationalism at the expense of respect for religion? Can we indeed become true and loyal to our Government more by honoring the images of George and Martha Washington than by inculcating respect for Christ and His holy Mother? Who has the right to put this thralldom on our sacred convictions, or persuade us that it need be? It has been said that Catholic soldiers fought with marked valor in the war for American Independence; that our priests and religious won glorious victory in aiding the wounded and dying. They were Irish, they were French, they were German, and their readiness to defend the glory of their adopted flag had not been drilled into them by demands to make sacrifice of their religious usages.

“There is, if we mistake not, an effort being made of nationalizing the church by robbing its children of the Catholic feeling and the Catholic instinct, which qualities have never been a detriment to the development of most ardent patriotism and civic loyalty.”—Literary Digest.

MARVELOUS TEACHINGS OF ASTRONOMY.

THE study of astronomy elevates the plane of human thought above the common world, and leads up to the contemplation of facts and conditions which appear mysterious, and incomprehensible to ordinary minds. Velocities, distances, magnitudes, constitute a feature of the heavenly bodies composing the universe, which has no parallel among those terrestrial things with which mortals are so familiar. Let us take an astronomical view of our own earthly ball as a member of the solar system, and consider some of its relations to that great central luminary, the sun, which holds all the planets in their place and allows none to wander from their beaten tracks. This little earth of which we are so proud goes spinning around on its axis as swiftly as the spindles of our grandmothers' wheels, at the same time moving with incredible velocity in its fixed orbit around the sun. This double motion may, in fact, be illustrated by comparison with the revolving bicycle, which, while rotating upon its axis, shoots ahead with amazing rapidity, and will readily and speedily make its circuit around a common center.

The result of the first movement is the succession of day and night, or the daily alternation of sunshine and shadow, while the latter produces those fluctuations of seasons so familiarly known as spring and autumn, summer and winter. This phenomena is experienced and felt by the child of tender years; and yet the causes lie hidden in the background of nature's mysteries, until the wisdom of the astronomer has solved some of the secrets of the physical world. If our minds are adequate to such vast conceptions as follows, let us imagine a huge massive ball of the size of our earth, loosely revolving in the unbounded seas of space that surround us, spinning on his axis at the rate of one revolution in 24 hours; in the meantime plunging forward with unparalleled speed and moving horizontally and centrifugally through the blue ethereal fields at the unheard of rate of 18 miles per second, 1,080 miles per minute, or 65,000 miles per hour, that he may accomplish his tremendous annual circuit around the solar sphere in the limited and prescribed period of 365 days and 6 hours.

If the above sentence is studied and scanned, it shows forth conspicuously the marvelous teachings of astronomy as announced in the heading of this paper. There is nothing in the experience of mankind or in the history of the world, or “in the earth or waters under the earth,” that can at all compare in matchless speed and peerless activity with this terrestrial ball in its orbital progress around the great central solar orb. Neither the rifle nor the ball, with all the dynamic forces that can be applied, can reach an 18 mile target in a single second. If an expert engineer could drive his engine one mile, or even ten miles in a minute, he would still be more than a thousand miles short in his race.

Suppose an observer, with a view of testing and comparing the two motions, were to take his stand upon the equator, where of course he would be carried forward on the daily circle, 1,000 miles in one hour, how astonished he would be to find that in the above short interval he had advanced upon the solar annual course the enormous distance of 65,000 miles. These are certainly strange things in this world, and this is one of the marvels that science teaches.

I fear that among the patrons of your journal there may be some strong common sense readers whose minds may be a little skeptical upon the startling proposition of ‘18 miles a second,’ and even call in question the fundamental principles of the Copernican system; but I can assure them that they are raising an issue—not against your feeble correspondent—but with the learned institutions of the world, who for centuries have approved and adopted the theories above promulgated.—Set.

A NARROW-MINDED CHRISTIANITY.

WHICH is the better, a narrow-minded Christianity, or an upright, fearless life?

This question in a modified form is the text of an editorial in the Reasoner, published at San Luis Obispo, California, a copy of which is sent us by Bro. D. E. Lander.

The editorial begins with a quotation from a letter received from a reader of the Reasoner.

"My soul is weary of my life among such littleness, and I ask myself which is the better—a narrow, underhanded, small-minded Christianity, such as we see about us, or an upright, fearless life, lived for the sake of right and righteousness. I am lost in a wilderness of confused thoughts and questionings in my own mind. Having let go some of the old faiths, it almost looks to me as though the Christianity of the churches does more harm than good. The idea that God needed a sacrifice to reconcile himself to mankind, is inconsistent with my larger belief in the Deity. I do not know that I ought to say larger belief, for the Creator has always been my God from a child; but from the teachings one hears all through life from the pulpit, one is apt to fall into idolatry."

There should be no question in any one's mind as to which is the better, a narrow-minded Christianity or an upright, fearless life. I imagine, however, that the question presents itself to the correspondent somewhat in this way: Whether it is better to go along in membership with the church, thereby, by outward appearance, making it appear that you accept all the preposterous doctrines and narrow conceptions of the pastor and his "orthodox" followers, or to fly in their faces with defiance and withdraw from fellowship with them. I desire to say that in such a case I do not deem that either course is necessary. Few churches in these days are so narrow that they would expel a member for heresy because he did not believe certain so-called orthodox dogmas and had the courage to say so plainly. The chances are that if you say so plainly you will soon have plenty of company. The American people, as a general rule, do not much relish being led about by the nose by a priest or anybody else. Every man has a right to follow the dictates of his reason and the promptings of his soul—that is, his religion—and he has the right to express himself—nay, more than that, it is his duty to do so because our forefathers fought and died that we might exercise that right for the advancement of civilization and the salvation of humanity. The preacher in his pulpit has a great advantage, of course, and it takes the narrow-minded ones to make use of it to the torment and disgust of liberal-minded people, whose amiability compels them to sit and listen without remonstrance. That very advantage which the preacher has is a temptation to the narrow man to put on the screws. But it is a losing policy. Let them have rope, my dear friend, and they will hang themselves.

The thought which seems to give this correspondent most pain is really the one which should bring the most joy. He is lost in a wilderness of confused thoughts and questionings, and "having let go some of the old faiths," he sees the harmfulness of much of the teachings of the churches. These confused thoughts and questionings and doubting of old faiths is the picking of your fledgling soul against the shell of superstition and dogmatism in which it has been incubating. Keep up the picking until the shell is off, little one, and then preen your wings and soar. It is one of the most cheering signs of the times that these questionings and doubtings are spreading among the people. It means progress. God is too good to punish people for desiring to know him as he is, and for seeking to draw that knowledge at first hands from the original fountain. Preachers and teachers and books are good enough in their places, but they should be considered only as helpers—not as saviors. There is only one Savior for the yearning soul, and that is the spirit of Christ.

The idea that God needed a sacrifice to reconcile himself to mankind is inconsistent with a good many Christians' beliefs. Do not imagine that you cannot be a Christian if you cannot believe that. This, of course, is the old doctrine that as the human family fell through Adam it was restored to its former relations to God through the death and crucifixion of Jesus Christ. That God, instead of crucifying the whole human race in punishment for their violation of the law, caused his own spirit to be embodied in the flesh and then had it crucified in order that he might reconcile his idea of justice with his treatment of the human family. I do not think that many people entertain such a belief as that at the present time. It is the fewest number whom I meet that pretend to such a belief, and it has been a long time since I have heard a preacher contend for it. There is a great deal of misunderstanding among people when discussing such matters. The terminology, as the scholars say, is confusing. Plain language is misconstrued, especially when it is Bible language. People who "argue" upon religious questions are prone to become excited and the more they expatiate the more confused and confusing they become. That is a natural consequence. The human intellect cannot reason out what God is. It can only reason out what God is not. The reason is a human faculty, and the human can have no conception of the divine—of God. The soul may know God, but the mind cannot compass him. And, after all, these beliefs and doctrines have nothing whatever to do with one's religion. They are but the theological tools of the reason. Religion is the relationship of the soul to God, and is a matter of faith. Our knowledge, and sense, and sureness of God comes to us through a different process than that of the reason. It is a soul sense, and whenever the mind essays to grapple with it it will fall back baffled. Leave your soul alone with God. Let your mind engage itself with the affairs and philosophies of this world. "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life," said the angel of the Lord to the apostles, who had been let out of the prison by the divine hand. By speaking the words of this life—by learning the lesson of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and trying earnestly to practice it, and trying faithfully and joyfully to follow in the steps of Jesus, the great teacher, we shall at the same time expand our souls, and through our soul-sight be able to see more and more of God in his world.

As to the littleness of it all—that is owing to our method of viewing it all. If we invert the telescope we shall see things very small and afar off. The thing to do is to be large ourselves and to look largely upon everything. Little beliefs, little actions and little people will then appear to us in the proper relationship. Small minded and small mannered people, like the poor, we shall have always with us, until mankind shall have learned to stop fighting and contention, and to live together in peace and unity as Jesus taught that they should. These small things do not make Christianity small. Jesus had traitors and fault-finders among his followers, but that does not lessen him in our eyes. Christianity is large enough and broad enough to hold us all with our very largest views. It is not necessary to leave the church because of its seeming narrowness. Let it be known that you desire broadness and liberality and progressiveness, and you will soon find that many others desire the same things. Jesus is better understood than he was a century or even a decade ago. His teachings are developing very rapidly. Even middle-aged people may live to see great changes in society and great progress made towards the coming of his kingdom.

The subject is an excellent one, and together with the editorial offers to the thoughtful, conscientious man, who is a believer in the mission and the word of the Savior, a fruitful field for meditation. What the questioner means by the term a "narrow-minded Christianity" it might be difficult to determine, had he not pointed to the professions of Christianity with which he and others,—we of society,—are surrounded.

There can be no such thing as narrow-mindedness in Christianity. If there is any development, or exhibition of narrow-mindedness in a professed Christianity it is not the result of the Christ idea, as intended to be understood by the chiefest founder and exponent of it. His idea was broad, catholic and took in the world to be saved. Professions less than this come short of the true Christianity.

The effort of the letter writer to sink himself into the conceptions of the Christianity of the churches, or take what he seems to think would loosen his hold on the idea of Deity would necessarily result in a sort of innocent idolatry on the one hand, or unbelief upon the other. It is so easy to mistake.

The terms "right and righteousness," as used by the writer, are made to mean so much when used in array against the Christian idea of the Deity and man's duty toward him in a moral sense it is not wonderful that men become befogged. Right means the opposite of wrong, in the broad sense; and a man may do right in a conventional and abstract way and come far short of being righteous. To be righteous is to be a doer of the law. The righteousness of the law was superseded in the Christian idea by the righteousness of faith. It is practicably useless to talk about a man "living an upright, fearless life, lived for the sake of right and righteousness," in a life disconnected from the life, mission, and burden of the Christ idea, the Christianity of the Christ.

To measure the Deity by a man's conception of himself has always failed to give the best results, and will to the end of time. Man may in a sense know God; but it is in a restricted sense. Nor will the veil hanging before the majesty of omnipotence be removed until man moves into the higher sphere. For this reason it should appear that man's "larger belief" should be an acceptance of God as he has been revealed by his chosen agencies, whether all of the things revealed are understood or only a part of them are comprehended.

The law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God.

This was the reasoning of Paul; hence the very thing desired by this letter writer, the power to live an upright and righteous life was wrought by the sacrifice of the Savior whether that sacrifice is comprehended in the form and philosophy of it, or not.

The editorial in reply, or review of the letter contains some good things; but there are some which, if the letter writer is a reasoner, will hardly satisfy him; and are in the tendency of the thoughts suggested by them calculated to lead the inquirer away from rather than to the Reasoner's idea of Christianity.

The Reasoner states correctly that "there is a great deal of misunderstanding among people when discussing such matters." Why is it? And who is to blame for it? If not the teachers, including the preachers, the editors, and the leading minds of society both in and out of professed churches?

The Reasoner in his endeavor to counteract the supposed faulty teachings which have given rise to the doubts of the letter writer, proceeds to base a comforting argument upon one of the most faulty of all the confusing dogmas of professing Christians.

The idea that God needed a sacrifice to reconcile himself to mankind, is inconsistent with a good many Christians' beliefs.

Instead of disabusing the mind of the letter writer of the idea that there had been an attempt on the part of God to reconcile himself to the world, either by sacrifice of heifer, bull, or goat, or his Son, or himself in the flesh, the editor leads him to think that he can be a Christian without believing in the dogma that God caused his own spirit to be embodied in flesh and had that flesh crucified that he might "reconcile his idea of justice with his treatment of the human family."

By this the impression would still be left that the promise, the reconciling of God to mankind was in some sense needful. To us this is a grave misunderstanding. No such idea or doctrine can find warrant or place in Christianity.

Christianity in its especial meaning is, "The system of doctrines and precepts taught by Christ." A Christian, in the purer meaning of the word is, "One whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ."

The doctrines of Christ nowhere inculcate the idea that God was to be "reconciled to the world." No one is required to believe such a theory, in any of the teachings of Christ. The mystery of godliness was this that "God was manifest in the flesh" in an endeavor to "reconcile the world to himself." Hence the Apostle Paul's earnest appeal, "We pray you as in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." Paul was further impressed with this view of the mission of Christ when he wrote:—

And all things are of God who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

This confusing idea of God being or seeking to be "reconciled to the world" removed, and much difficulty in accepting a proper belief in the atonement is removed with it.

Paul was impressed that man had failed by wisdom to find out God; and that when this had occurred it "pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."

The effort of the preacher is made to the mind the reasoning power of man; and the editor's effort to draw the line between the soul and the human intellect is faulty and must be confusing. What part of man does the editor of the Reasoner designate as the soul, to be contradistinguished from the mind, the intellect, the reasoning faculty? Does he take Pope's couplet as a guide to his idea?

And reason raise o'er instinct as you can,
In this 'tis God directs, in that 'tis man.

Is there any warrant for belief in the idea that man is to be made to answer for the use of this highest faculty from Divine endowment, the power to reason; and then this faculty must remain in abeyance, the subject of human caprice and will, a thing of the flesh and the flesh only?

Professor Hickox was of the opinion that men knew "because they became conscious of" what was brought within reach of their observation and powers of reasoning. To us instinct and reason are both attributes of the human as the result of divine enactment and gift. Both are subordinate to God. Reason is higher in the human than the brute, because to the human was given the command and power to rule. Being God-given, both may be God-directed. Reason being the higher is nearer to God, and God-directed may reach beyond the instinct.

And, after all, these beliefs and doctrines have nothing whatever to do with one's religion. . . . Religion is the relationship of the soul to God, and is a matter of faith.

No professed teacher of the confusing, mixed theories of the surrounding churches of which the writer of the letter complains, could have more skillfully evaded the issue, or said anything more calculated to increase the restlessness, questionings, and doubtings of inquirers after light, than this. The refuge of the preachers has been to tell the inquirers who were becoming dissatisfied with dogmas, that they must not reason; that the human reason can never reach just conclusions; that when a man assumed to reason then he began to lose faith; just have faith; don't read the word, if you do you will become lost in the fogs raised by your own reason.

Jesus seemed to have an idea something differing from this when he stated to the Jews who believed on him:—

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.

If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

Paul wrote Timothy that if he continued steadfastly in the doctrine he should not only be able to "save himself but those that heard him." The "doctrine of Christ," was composed of principles; according to Paul when he wrote to the Hebrews; and we are of the opinion that notwithstanding the editor of the Reasoner may believe that beliefs and doctrines have nothing to do with a man's religion, the fact remains that he who would be a Christian must be one because his life, inward and outward, must conform to the doctrine of Christ. For to as many as believed on him "gave he power to become the sons of God."

It requires not only the Spirit Christ, but the real Christ as well to save the yearning soul.

The better life to live is not a selfish, narrow-minded sectarian so-called Christian life, but a broad gauged, honorable, righteous life in Christ, not based on dogmas, or doctrines of men, but on the eternal truths of the doctrine of Christ. That do and man can in due time know God, whom to know is eternal life.

KNOWLEDGE AS PREPARATION.

ANTICIPATING possible objections to the insertion in the HERALD of items connected with leading general movements in the world with comments, it may be well to state that leading developments and facts of our own times are in themselves indications or records of progress, or of retrogression, of good or of evil, as the case may be; and that, in the writer's opinion, it is necessary to note and keep track of them; also to draw lessons from past events; in order intelligently to comprehend the status of humanity socially and religiously, and to meet the demands upon us in behalf of truth and fellowman, in whose behalf we are our brother's keepers. It is also believed to be as necessary for Latter Day Saints as for others to be educated in largeness of heart, in broadness of mind, away from narrowness and misconceptions, by completeness of information, — if we would ourselves comprehend the heights and depths and lengths and breadths of the faith we profess.

While to us as a people has been committed a trust to declare the truth to man that all may become fellow heirs of the divine privileges vouchsafed in the common brotherhood of man and universal Fatherhood of God, it is essential that our interpretations of the truth be both as wide and as exact as the truth itself, that in the full, the complete sense, we be "of the truth." Such attainment means privilege, labor, education, responsibility, trueness, and faithfulness—each and all of these.

All who profess the name of Christ are privileged to receive grace for grace and under responsibility of making manifest the fruits of grace in intelligent, Christlike word and demeanor. It is not strange that the Spirit has urged and continues to admonish and inspire to "come up higher." Preparation is essential to any work, especial preparation commensurate with its importance. The children of God need the preparation of godliness in character if they are to accomplish the work intrusted to them. Possession and manifestation of the "divine nature" is logically the requirement in those who would be both called and qualified, and be successful; component parts of which nature are knowledge, intelligence, experience, and sympathy.

We believe in taking cognizance of every feature of human life necessary to be comprehended in order that human wants may be seen, known, and ministered to so far as in our power. Our lives are not dissociated from the lives of our brother man; and however high we may go in spiritual knowledge and progress, we are under obligation to reach down and help uplift those who need instruction and other phases of help and encouragement. A divine hand has been reached out to us, directly, and indirectly by ministration of others chosen to minister to and bless us with the principles of God's saving word and power. The Holy One, the Redeemer, by whom has come to us the power of a perfect life, himself took cognizance of human conditions—all, bad and good, taking human nature upon him that he might feel the burden of human woes and limitations, overcome them, and lead out of and conquer evil and darkness in behalf of his "brethren." His life was complete in necessary knowledge and experience. He was made equal to the work he did because he comprehended the conditions, and rightly applied the remedies provided for man's redemption and perfection.

It is necessary that we perfectly acquaint ourselves with work intrusted to us and that we faithfully perform it if we would be perfect in our spheres. In becoming acquainted with men, nations, conditions, and other general affairs, and in the doing of our work, we receive benefit in increased understanding and broader sympathies, all of which are attributes of the Christlike nature.

We cannot reach and bless broad-mindful, cultivated men and women, nor properly educate others, unless we manifest that our education has been sufficiently divine in its spirit to warrant the claim made for our message—that it is an authoritative declaration of the law of the Spirit of life delivered by commission of the Prince of Life, and that we have been chosen to teach and to actualize it.

QUEER WORK.

WHEN Job uttered the remarkable words attributed to him in Job 31: 35, "O . . . that mine adversary had written a book," it is evident that his desire was that he might have the words of the one who was his adversary, on record, that he could be sure that he understood him and could safely answer him.

Pres. George Q. Cannon has written a book, and from it we cull the following, taking it from chapter 56 of said book. On page 413, paragraph 4 from the top, occurs the following statement concerning the alleged revelation on celestial marriage:—

There is not one word in the revelation, nor was there one word in the Prophet's teaching other than purity and self-sacrifice.

The Lord said. . . .

Mr. Cannon then begins to quote from the alleged revelation, beginning at paragraph 12 preceding it with a line of stars thus:"

He then quotes to the close of the twenty-fourth paragraph. Introducing a line of stars again, he leaves out all to paragraph 61, which ends with a semicolon, connecting the subject matter of it with paragraph 62, which follows it and ends with a period. He quotes paragraph 61, down to the closing semicolon, and without introducing stars to show that something is left out he quotes paragraph 66, the closing one of the document.

There are sixty-six paragraphs in the document. Of these Mr. Cannon, after introducing it as containing nothing "other than purity and self-sacrifice," leaves out the first eleven paragraphs, quotes from the twelfth to the twenty-fourth; skips the next thirty-six, quotes the sixty-first, drops the next four, and winds up by attaching the sixty-sixth to the sixty-first; thus quoting fifteen paragraphs out of sixty-six, and leaving the other fifty-one to be guessed at by the reader.

Pres. Cannon did this to maintain his statement that there was nothing in the alleged revelation but what was pure and self-sacrificing in its requirements, or as a belief, or dogma; but what assurance can the reader have that the more than three-fourths of the document so ingeniously left out by the writer will so maintain such statement? Why should Mr. Cannon, as a historian, in making the attempt to show the purity of the teaching of that alleged revelation, take only a part of it, less than one fourth, and leave all the rest of it out? A document for which so much has been claimed as for this alleged revelation, it will seem to the average reader who thinks, should have been printed in full after so strong a statement touching the purity of its teaching had been made. A document by which the faith and practice of a church founded and established upon and by divine revelation was to be changed from one rule to another quite contrary and opposite, should have not only the clearest verification, but should be extensively known in all its parts, that no one, including those inquiring after the faiths and practices of the church, need to misunderstand, or be ignorant of what it contained. Surely, the parts of the document referred to in the fifty-sixth chapter of Pres. George Q. Cannon's book, must have been dangerous to his assertion as to the purity of the whole, or he would have published it. As the matter now stands in the book it is a clear case of effort to blind the public, a distortion of the document, and a deceptive blunder. (See "Life of Joseph Smith, by G. Q. Cannon," Chap. 56.)

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. HENRY KEMP, Tabor, Iowa, the 18th:—

I am still holding meetings with fair attendance, notwithstanding the muddy roads. Have been troubled some with lagrippe, but only laid off one week. May the good Master continue to bless you in your labors as heretofore is the prayer of yours truly in bonds.

Bro. F. A. Smith, Omaha, Nebraska, the 18th:—

Everything moving nicely here. I am holding meetings every night now with a fair interest among some outsiders. Some of the Utah elders are here scattering tracts, as is their custom. They have got some few people to join them, but only a few. I met the Mr. Criddle who misrepresented Uncle Joseph so shamefully but he did not give us a chance to talk to him. Bro. McDowell was with me. They have very flatly refused to meet us in open discussion here, as is their usual custom.

Bro. N. N. Cooke, St. Louis, Missouri, March 7:—

Our quarterly conference just closed; a grand, spiritual feast; a time long to be remembered. The work is onward here; the Lord be praised! Bro. William Anderson occupied the rostrum this morning, Bro. Bond in the evening, cheering the saints in the warfare of life. May the rich blessing of God be upon all such laborers. Conference year just closes and another begins; "what shall the harvest be?" May God bless his people.

Bro. R. C. Evans, London, Ontario, March 15:—

Just returned from city of Toronto; left there this morning. Preaching every night for eight days; good results in baptisms and general work affecting the church. I have been greatly blessed by the Master this year.

Railroad traffic in the Northwest has been greatly interfered with by floods and snowdrifts, the snow at times drifting forty and fifty feet over tracks, compelling some lines to abandon traffic for periods of a week or more.

The unprecedented floods in the lower Mississippi continue. Eastern Arkansas is largely overflowed. The city of Memphis, Tennessee is crowded with 3,500 refugees, and relief steamers are constantly bringing in more. Some lives have been lost. Upper rivers are also still rising and inflicting much damage.

Bro. T. J. Sheldon, of the Kewanee district, who has been in discussion with a minister of the "Church of God," writes from Rock Island, Illinois, the 19th inst., that he was successful in maintaining his positions, hence made friends for the cause among his hearers. He is feeling well over the result. He has baptized some of late. Letter crowded out of present issue.

Pres. Joseph Smith went to Glidden, Iowa, on the 19th inst., expecting to return on the 23d.

Crowded with an over-supply of letters, we make notes of leading points.

Bro. C. H. Davis, Brush Creek, Indian Territory, writes favorably of the labors of Bro. W. H. Smart, who made friends among the people and baptized some at that point, a new field. Other elders requested to call.

White, and where eight have been added to the church and others about to enter it. This, from Bro. N. B. Ament, of Harrisonville. They hope to organize a branch and Sunday school, and to work diligently to extend the light abroad.

"Telegraphic reports from the Mississippi, Ohio, and Missouri Valleys tell a story of widespread disaster as a result of floods caused by heavy rains. In the lowlands about Memphis in the eastern part of Arkansas it is said that the loss of life has been frightful, but as the districts affected are remote from telegraph offices, but meager details are obtainable. No estimate can be formed of the damage to property, but it is claimed to be enormous. In Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana the streams have been converted into raging torrents and the Weather Bureau at Washington predicts destructive inundations in several States. Every effort is being made to hold the levees intact on the Lower Mississippi. A rumor comes from Burlington, Iowa, that a disastrous waterspout burst last evening (19th) about twenty-five miles west of Davenport. Mississippi, in the vicinity of Natchez was swept by a cyclone, but no lives were lost. Advices from the flooded district show that heavy rains are still falling."—Chicago Tribune, 20th.

The Dutch steamer Utrecht, bound for Java, with one hundred people on board, is reported lost.

Upwards of one thousand killed or wounded in battle in the revolution in Uruguay, March 18.

Atlantic steamers have been delayed by storms, the severest known on the Atlantic for years.

There is no Sunday train from Bethany Junction (two miles east) to Lamoni; however, delegates arriving on Sunday, the 4th, will be carried to Lamoni by the regular northbound train, provided there are twenty. Passengers on the southbound train arriving at 12:15 p. m. may await arrival of the northbound, about two p. m.

Bro. W. N. Robinson, of the General Sunday School Association, was with the Lamoni saints of late over a Sunday.

Ice gorges and rising waters caused immense damage in the Northwest in the State of Wisconsin. In the vicinity of Milwaukee alone the damage to property is estimated at $75,000, while a score or more other cities report damage ranging from $1,000 to $20,000. Advices dated Memphis, Tennessee, the 21st report falling waters, but caused by several breaks in the levee near Osceola, Arkansas. Three additional crevasses are reported, greatly intensifying the sufferings of the people in Eastern Arkansas. The town of Marion, fifteen miles inland, is entirely surrounded by water.

Sioux City, Iowa, advices also report great damage along the upper Missouri River and its tributaries, in Dakota, Iowa, and Nebraska. The Des Moines River threatens the overflow of the levee on the Missouri side, the town of Alexandria, and the lands for miles around.

The international blockade of the island of Crete by the combined fleets of the European powers, was formally begun on the morning of Sunday, the 21st. Cablegrams state that the Moslems in the towns are allowed to land what they please, except arms, despite the blockade, and that the admirals have taken it upon themselves to stop provisions coming to the Cretans in the interior; Moslems have also committed repeated outrages, escaping punishment, the Turkish acting Governor of Canea favoring them. Col. Vassos, the Greek commander, is preparing a reply to the proclamation of the autonomy of Crete by the powers. English sentiment is strongly against the action of the present government and the fall of Lord Salisbury's government is predicted by some. Delyannis, the Greek premier, is credited with the following statement: "If the powers will not be convinced of the injustice and impracticability of the measures they have decided upon, the situation will become worse and probably may become uncontrollable, nor is it impossible to see the result, but it will be unjust to throw upon Greece the responsibility of what may follow." The gravity of this statement may be judged by the fact that Delyannis is opposed to war.

Kingston, Jamaica, advices, March 20. A terrible drought prevails throughout the island and there is great distress in the interior. The cattle are perishing and the peasantry are growing riotous and raiding water tanks.

FROM THE SOCIETY ISLANDS.—NO. 6.

THE END OF THE BEGINNING.

DECEMBER 14.—I must finish up my journal to-day for the mail goes out to-morrow. Our house looks quite like living now. Have got my dish cupboard filled up with the few pieces of pretty dishes I brought, and a sister came in on Thursday and put up lace curtains to the windows—or to the window frames. There is no glass, just the green slat blinds on the outside and curtains on the inside. The saints continue to bring our food to us ready cooked, and I doubt if there is anyone on the island that is living as luxuriously as we are. Whatever is left of the meal I give back to the one who brought it. They take turns in providing our meals and seem to be vying with one another to see who shall provide the best. They get it ready cooked at the Chinaman's. There is a young sister living near who comes in and makes our bed, sweeps, and carries water for us, and I always reserve her some from our food. I don't expect so much attention as we now have to last always, but I appreciate and enjoy it while it does, and in the meantime I am getting acclimated. Joseph spoke twenty-five minutes to them yesterday in the church in their language, and I am not at a loss to make myself understood in ordinary matters, yet I can say but very few sentences rightly, only a word here and there, but they catch the meaning quickly.

Our evenings are spent in learning from them; i. e., when there are no meetings—or even when there is meeting it is short, and they nearly all halt at the missionary house for an hour or two afterwards. It is moonlight nights now, and we take our chairs out on the porch and the natives gather about us, fill the two long benches that set on the porch, and the floor too, while the children play on the green in front. It is all very pleasant both to them and us. We have not had to go to market yet, for the saints have kept us amply supplied in all the fruits that are in market now. Have had all the pineapples we could eat. No oranges yet; they are green.

One of the sisters here died on Thursday evening of consumption and was to be buried on Saturday. I told Bro. Pai I could not go to the funeral for I had no black dress. He and the sisters who were here looked very much disappointed and wanted me to make one. I told him I could not make one in one day. He said if I would get one the sisters would make it for me; so off we went to Papeete, Ahuira going with us, and got one and they made it their own way. I put the finishing touches on. So I went with them. All had canopy topped carriages. It was a beautiful drive as far as we drove, but O, such a steep, brambly hill to climb to get to the burying ground! After the coffin is lowered in the grave, first the ministry, then the whole concourse of people, even to the little children, walk around the grave and throw a handful of dirt in on the coffin, saying, "Good-bye." Some say more than good-bye. The sister's people did not belong to the church, nor did they come near her, that I know of, while she was sick, but after she died they—her brother and sister—came and wailed all one day, eating nothing. On Friday evening our people had prayer meeting in the church, then went to the house where the dead body lay on the floor; that is, the mattress was on the floor. Her head rested on a pillow, the long hair was drawn to the top of the head and braided and tied in three or four places at regular distance apart from the head with black ribbon in long loops and the braid coiled up on the pillow at one side. The white covering was not drawn straight and smooth as we have them, but there was abundance of it just from the shop, all about her in loose folds. The neat coffin sat on one side of her, and two chairs were carried over and placed on the other side for Joseph and I, and the natives sat on the floor all over the lower end of the room, and continued the prayer meeting for more than an hour. We have had invitations to call on several, but as yet have had no opportunity to do so.

Bro. Case was here to see us about a week before we arrived and left word for us to come at once to the island where he was, and since a passage up there in a trading vessel has been offered us, we intend to go about next Thursday. The influence of the good Spirit that was with us when we parted from the saints in America still abides with us, and I am confident will continue so long as we are careful to walk in harmony with it. The Lord made himself manifest to us in unmistakable ways while on the voyage, and I do not intend it as boasting when I say that in all the voyage I had not a feeling of dread or fear. Though the vessel on which we came is scarcely safe,—her sails are old, torn, and patched; her masts cracked with the sun; her booms warped, and her hull so old and worm-eaten that notwithstanding the fact that she was put in the dry dock and had a coat of copper paint just before leaving San Francisco, she leaked to the amount of making eleven inches of water in the hold an hour all the way across, and we knew too that she was very heavily loaded,—still felt as safe as a baby in a cradle. And since we have arrived here have still felt the effects of the loving care of our Father "both ours and yours," and are as happy as we could be anywhere. Mr. Burton called on the Governor—not the one who was here before, but a younger man,—who told him that he could have all the liberty he desired in his work, and the merchants welcomed him back, so with thankful hearts we enter upon our new field of labor, praying God to bless us with wisdom, patience, and all the graces that are necessary in us to accomplish his purposes here. I feel that our coming here has thus far been a blessing to me. My health is excellent; no symptoms of catarrh or asthma; no loss of breath such as I experienced the other time. I thin out my clothing as much as possible and have never taken cold, all of which I regard as choice blessings and feel very thankful. Joseph is real well too, and will speak for himself through the Herald.

The spirit and the wording of a letter received by my husband from Bro. Kelley, just prior to leaving San Francisco, was much appreciated by us both. I thought when I read it that such letters as those would inspire me with zeal and courage to go to the ends of the earth that they might serve.

I must not omit to make mention of the preparations the church or rather Sunday school is making for Christmas. The branch president gave a rehearsal the evening we arrived, especially for our benefit. First the whole class repeated about twenty verses of scripture concerning the birth of Christ, simultaneously. Then commencing at the upper end of the class the first two repeated the first verse, and the next two the second, and so on to the end, then one by one, after which was singing. Altogether it would be a royal entertainment if such could be reproduced by the same persons at home. Those exercises are, I expect, a branch from Sr. Devore's Sunday school work, for which much credit is due her for her labor and pains. I expect we will spend Christmas with Bro. and Sr. Case; hope to at least. The oil stove I brought (not the "Blue Flame" but the "Splendid"), is a real little gem in cooking, though I have not tried it for baking yet. (Your present, Sr. Blair. May our Father bless you.)

I would say to all, Our address is Papeete, Tahiti.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

MRS. CONSTANCE JUDIT DYRENG, Manti, Utah, requests the saints to pray for her. She has been unable to stand on her feet for three years. She does not belong to the church but believes the gospel. Bro. Loren P. Rasmussen, also, of the same place, desires your prayers.

Bro. Thomas Kent, of Salem, Nebraska, writes that his wife became insane on the 13th inst. He earnestly requests a special season of prayer in her behalf.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

LAMONI, Iowa.

MY DEAR MRS. ROYCE:—I went to the convention the other day with my mamma and I heard them say something I could not understand about u-n-i-form-i-ty of texts. When we went home Mamma told me it meant that some people wanted the children to study the same lessons the big people had.

Now it may be all right for those who are older to talk that way, but I don't think that anyone who has ever taught us little folks would want to do that.

Why, sometimes, don't you know, they take a whole book of the Bible in one lesson and then it is not one half so good as what we study about. I heard my teacher say that if she could only teach us one thing—one good thing—to remember every Sunday she would be happy. I expect if we have u-ni-form-i-ty of texts she'll have to teach us about one hundred things every Sunday, if we want to keep up with the big people, and then we don't remember anything.

Do you know, I just love Jesus. One time Leslie* and I made it up between us that we were going to love Satan. I told teacher about it in Sunday school and I wouldn't say my golden text for her; but when she told us the lesson and said that Satan would like to have me fight, and call people bad names, and spoil the work Jesus came here to do, and how much Jesus loved me, I just said my text as quick as I could and said I wouldn't love Satan any more. Do you think if our lesson had been in one of those long chapters, about somebody else besides Jesus, that it would have made me feel bad because I had been such a bad boy? No, indeed! O, the dear Lord Jesus is such a good friend to the children, my teacher says. She says the children up in heaven always see God's face, and Jesus says it isn't his Father's will that any of us should be lost. Isn't that good? I think I can never hear enough about him, he loves us so much. Don't you big people remember he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me?"

Well, then, you mustn't want to put anything in the way of our studying about Jesus. He is our best friend. I want to be baptized when I am eight years old, and if I have to study u-ni-form-i-ty of texts instead of studying about Jesus, I know I won't be ready to be baptized. I have to know about Jesus first, because he told us all about it. My teacher says he told us we must try to be like him because he always did the things which pleased God. I'd like to know how I am going to be like him if I don't study about him. Perhaps that is what is the matter with some of the big folks, and the reason they have so much trouble. I guess they've been studying u-ni-form-i-ty of texts instead of studying about Jesus. I expect we'd all better study about him and then try to be like him. Don't you think so, Mrs. Royce?

Yours truly,
ONE FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

* A true incident.

THE above is a sermon of no small significance, and no doubt voices the sentiment of many a child. We are so glad that a dear child had courage to use our department. Children, our department stands with open arms to receive so worthy contributions as this.

XENIA, Ill., Feb. 23.

Sunday School Department:—I was much pleased to see in late Herald of February 17 the subject of uniformity of lesson texts ably presented by Sr. Louise Palfrey. It seems quite obvious that the texts in the Primary Quarterly should be based on the same scripture as those of the Intermediate and Senior; yet I do not agree with the sister in regard to the general review, but think the primary classes should have a simplified list of questions adapted to their capabilities.

While I read the article above-mentioned with much pleasure there seemed one item of importance overlooked, and that is in regard to the promoting of scholars from the Primary to the Intermediate Quarterlies.

When we promote a child from the primary to the intermediate class, with the lesson texts differing as they now do, we set him down in the middle of an important subject with all the past an entire blank.

You promote a child to-day, the present lesson texts being the Judges of Israel, and he knows nothing about the precious promises made to Abraham and Isaac and of their wonderful fulfillment hundreds of years after. Neither does he know anything of Jacob and his twelve sons, Joseph and his brethren, the flight into Egypt, or of Moses to whom the Lord talked face to face, and wherein the garments of the children of Israel did not wax old.

I do not presume to know anything about what is in the mind of the Board of Publication, but suppose that when they have traced the lineage of Christ to the babe of Bethlehem that it will then take up the life-work of him and his apostles and in case it does, the primary classes will then have an opportunity to study what they are now learning; and though these be not the exact lines, it will surely not be very long until we are studying the New Testament Scriptures, and we are not likely to soon trace the lines we have just gone over.

When I consider that this is but a brief sketch of what the primary scholar has lost and the awkward position in which he is placed when promoted from the primary to the intermediate Quarterly, I can but feel thankful that the General Sunday School Convention took up the subject of uniformity of texts at the last convention, and shall anxiously await the decision of that body at its next convention.

In the interest of the work,
HEPPIE MORRIS.

UNIFORMITY OF TEXTS.

ONE has been heard from on the "other side," and the interpretation of "convenience" is a misunderstanding of or a misconstruction on any meaning that has been expressed or implied. Not personal convenience has been alluded to, but convenience that is advantageous to the work.

An incident occurring with me since last writing makes a fresh illustration: When there are not numbers sufficient for Sunday school organization, wherever there are isolated families, I am trying to effect systematic home teaching with the Quarterlies. One brother, wanting to take up the plan, writes me for advice, telling me he has three children and giving their ages. I find two of them would be in the intermediate grade and the other in the primary. That little group of three that would make a happy, interested class, must, because of different subjects, be divided into two lonesome classes, and taught separately. The picture needs no comment. Anyone, after a little thought, can surely see the way the two-text system works in home study, another and important branch of Sunday school work.

"Interest and sympathy: Why should they be divided at the responsive reading?" Simply on the principle that if you were seeking to learn the merits or demerits of protective tariff you would not be interested in what a speaker would tell you about the Magna Charta. One part of the school has learned that the responsive reading does not concern their lesson.

"Could a superintendent make a review alike interesting to one of five years and one of fifty-five?" is asked. We have not been so fortunate as to get so many of the "old folks" to Sunday school yet, but supposing we had, I answer, Yes; and my experience is that if the fifty-five-year-olds did not mind sharp, the five-year-olds would be doing most towards making the review interesting. This does not take into consideration speculative philosophizing, but if you mean anything in the line of plain, practical gospel truths, such as are in place in Sunday school, I repeat, Yes.

The next objection is that there are things in the Bible not fit for children to hear. Granted. There are things in the Bible that delicacy and propriety would hesitate to read to an audience. There are things in the Bible, historical descriptions of manners and customs of the times, that have no moral value; but it is not with such that the Sunday school has to do. Spiritual truths and history that brings them out, lie within the province of the Sunday school, and those portions of scripture having nothing to do with basic principles, that record the weaknesses and degeneracies of human nature merely, or human ideas. That which is not wholesome for little ones is not good for children of any age.

If the example cited from fourth lesson in Senior Quarterly of present quarter were really as meaningless and of as little spiritual significance as it is quoted to be, then it were a mistake to put it in the Senior Quarterly, even. But the view taken is a surface one, and ignores the vein of truth running through the lesson, and positively impressed, that sin overtakes the doer; that wicked ambition and intrigue bring final ruin.

Theoretically, it may look plausible that distinction should be made in subjects between the older and younger classes, but experience with children does not bear out the idea. The quick perception of the little ones is quite as capable of grasping the essentials of scriptural teaching, stated in their simple facts, as are the older ones, while an apparent difficulty may be as safely understood by childish innocence and confidence, where the skepticism of more mature minds might question.

Lastly, it is advised that we would better let "well-enough" alone. I have heard something like this before, when the revealed message was presented and it was opposed with the logic (?), "We have the dear old Bible; it was good enough for Father and Mother, it is good enough for me." But I was never taught to regard the idea as belonging to the spirit of intelligence, investigation, and progressiveness that should characterize Latter Day Saints.

Nothing that has been said in favor of uniformity of texts in the least reflects upon the quality or ability of the primary work that has been given us. None has appreciated it better, or regarded it with more pride than I have; but the committee can do equally as well on "uniform text." I was one who at the beginning favored the two-text idea, from abstract reasoning; but experience with the plan, putting it to test, has compelled me to see the difference between the theory and practice of it, and made me take the uniform text stand.

LOUISE PALFREY.

UNIFORMITY OF TEXTS.

BY MRS. A. A. HORTON.

AN argument in favor of the use of the Old Scriptures for the older pupils, or for intermediate and senior grades, and not for the primary classes, may be presented, it seems to us, from the fact that it requires a maturer mind to demonstrate for itself in actual practice the correctness or untenableness of the experience or testimony of others. In the biblical biography of the Old Testament we study more fully the lives of men and women, perhaps sometimes much more imperfect than our own, and the testimony written concerning them we are called upon to consider and judge (whether openly or not) as to accepting or not those lives as fit for our emulation. Childlike minds cannot grasp the situation. Little ones must accept the dictum of older heads to solve the problems offered from Sunday to Sunday, and even the older ones have a task hard and unpleasant sometimes to do this.

It has been written that in acquiring knowledge in any direction, "the experience and testimony of others must be the foundation for the superstructure the individual may seek to erect." Childish minds would not be able to draw the right conclusion when certain experiences were presented. They may have been taught "right from wrong" from their very earliest years, yet not until they had been longer in the arena of life could they be competent to decide as to whether such lines of conduct were to be followed or not. Then how necessary for the very little ones that a perfect character should be the object lesson, the one to whom they may look as a study and model to copy—to feed upon and incorporate into their own lives!

First impressions are the most lasting; then how all-important is it that the study of the infant classes and primaries should be directed to the New Testament whose prominent figure and teachings are from the tender babe of Bethlehem up to the stature of the spotless Son of God.

If we put into the hands of the little ones the Old Bible much of the Old Scriptures must be culled out and then they would be incomplete and prove unsatisfactory. The authority which the teacher possesses over the little children cuts no figure in enforcing it to believe what he says, for the impression, however inconsistent it may be which it has received from the reading of the Old Testament will outweigh all the instruction of the teacher.

The lives these Old Scriptures portrayed are out of line with the pure, unsophisticated life of early childhood and the story cannot be appreciated by them because they have no corroborative testimony in their own lives. As some one has said, the primaries are a family by themselves. Let them then have their own especial room, their little chairs, their own little songs, their separate lessons, and their own reviews, and their own teachers, whose methods must of necessity be so far distinct from those employed in the teaching of the older pupils of the Sunday school.

"Feed my lambs" was the command given to a disciple, and the same was no doubt intended for every one bearing the name of disciple, even down to our day. The word feed impresses us with the query, Of what kind is it, and in what manner should it be given to the very young and tender lambs of the Sunday school? Our idea as to kind is that it should be that which is best suited to the children's age and abilities.

The sincere milk of the word is spoken of in the Scriptures for the babes in Christ and this evidently does not mean study that requires thought and reflection to any great extent.

The milk of the word may be compared to the very simplest lessons in the gospel; first the lesson of Jesus, the babe, then Jesus the child, then Jesus the teacher. Bro. George Gates tells us that what is most needed is a greater endowment to the officers and teachers by the operation of the Spirit, of love toward God, and a desire for saving of souls. This last, the desire for saving of souls, would lead us when teaching the primary pupils to begin with the Savior's work from the very first, and thus we see how it is we would begin with the New Testament study.

The "way" or "manner" in which we should feed the lambs requires much thought as to their nature. How imitative they are, how susceptible to influences around them, how observant and retentive of impressions! Generally, they have no fear of the teacher and will feel free to enter into conversation with her.

Herbert Spencer says children should be led to make their own investigations and to draw their own inferences.

To be sure, little children are very inquisitive and full of inquiries, but when they advance to the intermediate grade they can be more thoroughly taught and led to devote themselves to thought. It is the lack of thinking, or as the Herald hath it, "thought in practical life," which puts both old and young to disadvantage. To teach a child to be thoughtful is laying the foundation of good habits, good manners, and good morals; and a very little child can be taught in regard to these things and be led along in them more easily from lessons in the New Testament than from those of the Old. Little ones need to see the bright side of life first, afterwards, if necessary, the dark.

As a sister has written, Let us ask our heavenly Father to aid us by his Holy Spirit to understand his word and lead us onward in the light, that we may teach the babes also how to walk in "the light of God."

The teacher's opportunity to do good is worthy our most prayerful thought and untiring effort.

UNIFORMITY OF TEXTS.

IN considering the above subject, let us bear in mind that there is but one subject, and confine our arguments to that. The question is, "Shall the lessons in all three grades of the Quarterly be upon the same text?" If not, why not? Do not forget your subject, and go to expanding upon whether or not it is proper to teach small children some of the facts recorded in the Old Testament Scriptures, for you are only wasting your time. That is not the question. Uniformity, not what or where, is the point under consideration.

Lay aside for a moment the subject matter of all lessons and tell me what is gained by having two subjects rather than one. In what way does having simply a different lesson benefit the child? Like Rosa Dartle, "I just asked because I want to know."

I repeat the thought, Where we are to take our lessons from has no bearing upon the subject of "uniformity of text." The former is a separate question and may be worthy of consideration. If so, it too should be considered. But let each stand or fall upon its own merits. Do not draw one in to down the other.

He who insists upon applying "subject matter" in the consideration of "uniformity" presumes to know that the editor of one grade of Quarterly will use a text that would be objectionable to the other editors—a thing which nobody can know till after the editors are again appointed, and their work is published, if he can know at all. He also attempts to remedy a fancied defect in "subject matter" by striking a blow at "methods of presentation" of which "uniformity of text" is a part.

Hoping all will give these questions the thought due them, and act on each in its time, I am,

In bonds,

QUEENSPERRY, Victoria, Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—Having been appointed to the Australian mission at last General Conference, I went to work as soon as the missionary in charge, Bro. C. A. Butterworth, thought it prudent to do so. About the beginning of October he found it advisable to notify me to go out and to use my own discretion as to where I went. I just kept on where I was at the time—Melbourne—although not being permitted to draw from the treasury before October. I had been persistently keeping at work in that city and suburbs. I have also opened up the work in what is called the Blackwood Reserve, which is now all selected in blocks of one hundred acres or so. Some of the saints from Hastings branch having moved in there it gave me a good excuse for moving about in the settlements. I made arrangements for meetings to be held in the same house as was used by the Baptists, and Pastor Densley (Bro. Wright knows him), of the Western Port Independent Churches (he was disgraced by the Wesleyans and has started what he calls the above-named body), a fortnight ago while I was preaching, interrupted and generally made a spectacle of himself. My turn by arrangement would have been on the 14th current, but I have received a note from some who think to stem the flow of the gospel message in that region of country. I inclose a copy of the note just as it reads to show how iniquity would like to work. The dignitaries are led by the one calling himself "Elder."

I have been expecting something to turn up just like it has. I know the Lord has some people there to be gathered in, and as usual Satan finds his tools among the so-called religious people; but the work being the Lord's I am confident that in his own due time his enemies will be scattered and that his message must prevail.

I start from here to-morrow to get around amongst the people, for although I am shut out of the private house, I can get a recently erected schoolhouse by applying to the board of advice for this school district, and they cannot refuse the use of the building, even if they would. Bro. Gillen's old friend, the Rev. Potter, is correspondent, and as he has altered his old tactics and is quite friendly, I anticipate no trouble in that quarter. By glancing over the Heralds which arrived to-day about a week late I see two letters from Bro. Wells from Geelong; but since then he has hied himself off to New South Wales and I am left alone to do the best I can in this wide territory. I think it is about time the ministry were sent two by two. If, as I understand it, it is a command, why not obey it as any other command given of the Lord? The work in this Colony does not get ahead as it should do. Unfortunately for Victoria it has not been looked to to the same extent as New South Wales of late years. Our missionary force seems to have a liking for New South Wales and a similar dislike to our poor little Victoria. It was not so in days of yore. Perhaps our poverty has something to do with it; for, for a few years back that has been our sad lot; but times are mending with us as is seen by the receipts of the Bishop's agent for this district. It is not always the case that people will not pay anything into the treasury, but because they cannot.

I purpose leaving here about the middle of next week for Melbourne, to pick up the threads again after a few weeks absence. I have to keep on the alert there, for the Brig-hamites go creeping about in the dark and will not come out to the open. They must "obey counsel."

I would like to see about one hundred missionaries turned loose in this country. I fancy a corps like that would soon make themselves felt, for there are as honest people in this land as any under the sun. But "how then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" These questions are as pertinent to-day as they were when written by Paul. We have a population of nearly half a million in Melbourne and suburbs, and as we are the same race all through this continent, I am forced to the conclusion that a persistent work must be kept on there before the church need expect an ingathering at all commensurate with the possibilities. Another place wants looking to: Freemantle in Western Australia. One of the brethren who has gone over there has found some of the old church members having joined in 1835, aged people, hungering and thirsting for the old story to be told them. Send us help; it is much needed. There are over a million and a quarter to each individual missionary here. How many are there to each in the United States of America? Praying the Lord will send more laborers in this part of his vineyard,

Your brother,
DAVID MCINTOSH.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., March 16.

Editors Herald:—Our late conference at St. Joseph brought out a large delegation. The question of holding the conferences every six months had been considered by the branches and the delegates came instructed to vote on the subject by yeas and nays, resulting in a vote of sixty-three for, one hundred and nine against; so we will still hold our quarterly conferences. While it may be more expensive to hold quarterly conferences, I notice that in looking over the Bishop's agent's book that more tithes and offerings came into the agent's hands at the conferences than at any other time. Again, those gatherings are a feast to all that attend. For one I am strongly in favor of the quarterly conferences in this district, for usually we can attend with but little expense. I admit that so far as the usual amount of business is concerned we could get along with one conference a year; and again, there are matters that we can hardly put off for three months.

When we take into consideration the good that is done to all that attend, spiritually, and the effect the same has on the saints in moving them to comply with the law of tithing, it seems to me that three months is long enough to be absent at this conference. We have moved forward and appointed several missionaries, sending out a large number of young men to new fields; the elders and priests being sent out together, observing the pattern in the law.

We have in our district quite a number of young men holding the priesthood that have done their part in branches, but never have gone out in search of places to preach, and I look forward to the day when our district will be able to supply the demand for preaching in the district and that all of the available places will be occupied by good able men of God. To my mind the move is a wise one, and may those brethren put forth every effort to magnify their calling.

I am glad to say that the saints are alive to the work. Some remarkable testimonies were borne at our conference, of the blessing of God. Surely the Lord is remembering Zion.
WILLIAM LEWIS.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 10.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing you I have been over the grounds of my mission field somewhat, besides looking after the mission work in this large city. We have many things to meet in Michigan while presenting the gospel, such as the manufactured falsehoods of one Joseph Musser strewn on the wings of the wind by the aid of sectarian priests, who seemingly would purchase the most debasing falsehoods at high prices rather than take the truth as a free gift. Musser is quoted as being an "ex-priest of the Latter Day Saints or Mormons;" and if it was not for his once being a minister of this church, his name, perhaps, would never have been carried beyond the boundary lines of his own township.

But who is responsible for his once official position in this church? Is it not the church? or at least those who baptized and ordained him? Let me ask, is it possible that God who knows the future as well as the past, ordered the ordination of Joseph Musser—a man who was noted as a drunkard before he entered the work as well as since he was cut off? Why should an allwise God place in the hands of an irresponsible creature, who had just been pulled out of the ditch of fallen humanity, the banner of King Immanuel, to so soon be trailed in the dust? It is a little hard for me to believe that every unwise move made in this work is ordained of God. Why not listen to such counsel as was given at Bay City, Juniata, and other conferences by E. C. Briggs, missionary in charge, when he told us that the very success of this work lying before us in Michigan depended on the wise administrations of those whose business it was to ordain and set in order other officers, and thus save the bringing into existence of such tools as Joseph Musser to play in the hands of sectarianism and disgrace the church.

But Musser is not the only trouble before us; already there is an element being crowded through an open door (hasty baptism) into the church that will prove its destruction as far as its influence is felt. Think of drunken men being baptized while the odor of the intoxicant is still on their breath! And mean men and women that seem willing to say or do anything to crush the work, simply because they are not made first in everything! Indeed, it is almost impossible to correct this element in some localities. Who is to be responsible for this hay, wood, and stubble (trash) that is no sooner in the building than it is on fire, smoldering and burning to the annoyance of all who would do right?

Why not our ministers when they go into a new neighborhood make all due inquiry as to who has a good character and who has not and all such as liars, drunkards, adulterers, thieves, and talebearers be kept on the outside until it is positively known that they have truly repented of all their sins? Of course this would effect a round count somewhat, but why reckon our work by count alone?

Not long since I listened to one of our leading ministers fairly beg of the people to let him baptize them. Why should we get wrought up to such a pitch, especially when in another man's branch where the work is being carried on in proper manner? Is it right to be constantly buttonholing the people, and bringing every possible available influence to bear upon individuals to get them baptized? Will baptism alone save anyone? If not, why not preach the gospel and leave the effects with the people? The keen observer of the law of God soon finds where the door to the fold is; and he who will not set himself in order and then enter the fold for truth's sake is not worthy. Michigan is ripe ready to be harvested; but remember, brethren, there are a great many thorns, thistles, and tares that must be left out in the gathering of the golden grain.

Bro. Briggs was with us and taught some effectual lessons. Brn. W. J. Smith and E. K. Evans are moving things north at Alpine, Englishville, and vicinity. The Alpine union church is again open for us by act of injunction taken out by Bro. Evans and served by Deputy Wood. Why not stand for our rights as American citizens?

Hopefully yours,

R. E. GRANT.

TEMPLE, Ohio, March 17.

Editors Herald:—As a close to my labors of the present conference year, I spent Sunday, the 7th inst., with the saints in Brooklyn, New York. The services were up to the standard and good audiences present. Saints were well and cheerful, except young Sr. Clark, who was seriously ill, and died on Sunday night following. Sr. Freeman was also quite sick. On the 8th Sr. Celia Squires, wife of Joseph Squires, Jr., united with the church, passing through the cold waters of "Old Ocean." May her brightest days have just begun.

The previous Sabbath was spent in Boston, where it would be an oddity not to meet cheerful and agreeable saints. The cause is prospering nicely there under the leadership of our urbane president, Richard Bullard. As an expression of esteem held by the saints for him and his a goodly number of them met at his house recently, the occasion being the fifteenth annual of their marriage and spent the evening pleasantly. Song, recitation, with the clatter of tongues, sandwiches, cake, oranges, etc., was the order, ending with music, together with a touching presentation speech by our Frank, who spoke eloquently of the high regard that host and hostess were held in by those who know them best; in the meantime, as a substantial token, presenting to the embarrassed husband and wife twenty-five dollars in cash, to help smooth the way for the future. Sr. Bullard bowed with grace, smiles, and thanks, as she clung to Richard's stalwart arm as of fifteen years ago, Richard responding with fitting and eloquent words. We were just delighted, and all went well.

Bro. Bullard was chosen president of the district also at its recent session, thus relieving our congenial Bro. Sheehy from being hauled over the coals at the coming conference for being so presumptuous as to preside over a district when he is a traveling Seventy. Just how Bro. Richard will succeed in wrestling with so many honors coming to him all at once may need the future to reveal. There is this to encourage, however; he possesses the staying qualities, does not pretend to know it all, is congenial and usually on time, and up and at it. The conference is said to have been one of the best, a reign of peace and good will.

While the Massachusetts conference was in session the writer was in attendance at the Philadelphia conference held at Broad River, Connecticut. This, too, was an excellent meeting—all that need be desired. A new church was organized to be known as the Broad River church. Bro. Albert Stone was ordained to the office of an elder and chosen as president of the branch. Bro. William Hobson was chosen priest, Bro. Homer Buttery was chosen as the teacher. He was also ordained, and Bro. Julius Cable was selected and ordained to the office of Deacon. Bro. Cable was selected as secretary. This branch bids fair to be successful. Already they have given evidence of their zeal and energy by erecting a creditable house of worship. May they succeed.

The district was divided at this meeting, the new one to be known as the New York district. Bro. Joseph Squires, Sen., was chosen president, Bro. Thomas Lester Bishop's agent, and Bro. John Hall Pope secretary. Bro. A. H. Parsons was continued president of the Philadelphia district. Bro. Hall as secretary and Bro. John Zimmerman recommended as Bishop's agent. So a step in advance has been taken.

Much credit is due Bro. A. H. Parsons for the work being planted at Broad River, together with Bro. Hobson. While in attendance at this meeting I was pleasantly entertained at the home of a fellow soldier, Bro. Buttery. While enjoying other things, we naturally live a part of the great war over again; and both are "agin" Spain and for Cuba.

At home at this writing. Saints well and appear interested at Sunday's services. Bro. I. M. Smith left here this morning for a month's labor in Indiana.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 18.

Editors Herald:—It seems quite difficult at times in this age of rush, excitement, and contest to compose one's self sufficiently to write a few lines for the information of the Herald readers as to where we are and our intentions. The memorable event at Carson, Nevada, on yesterday will render Saint Patrick's Day, in America, 1897, famous. "Luck" to many, to many an event of sadness. Public pulse unsteady to an extent almost equal to a national election. The State Legislature here quite suspended business to receive bulletins of the progress and termination of the contest. But what does the event exhibit in the direction of morality? To what a mighty extent was gambling indulged in over the affair! A number of the fairer sex of our land graced (?) the motley assembly with their presence! Strange clouds of moral variations deck the brow of civilization of this boasted age. This is an object. What is the lesson? Is the world "growing better, growing better every day?" What is Nevada's State Government thinking of? "A city set on a hill [or mountain] cannot be hid." What a strange light this! Is the Constitution of the United States absolutely passive on such subjects? But let us pass on.

I was unable to attend our late district conference at Des Moines, owing to illness and death of my mother-in-law, Mrs. Laura A. Bass, who died February 9, 1897. All the saints attendant at conference with whom I have conversed regarding it agree that it was splendid, spiritual, and refreshing. I believe I can say in the closing of the present conference year that the condition of the work in the district is fair. Some slothfulness on the part of some of the membership is manifest at places, but when or where has such not been the case among God's people in any age? Some friction of feeling appears at times, but like getting used to hard times, it feels easier when "we get used to it."

I believe the way, in this regard, is slowly but surely smoothing up. Hope to-day that we will feel better to-morrow, is what buoys up to press on. Let us take courage, brethren. No one need strive for self-glory or exaltation for human greatness in God's work. It will end in a manifestation of extreme, palpable human weakness and abasement. Such is the testimony of the ages in this respect. A motive or eye single to God's glory in all our efforts in his service is our only safety.

If some incline to criticise us because we have done so little labor in the branches during the year, please read again Doctrine and Covenants 122: 7, relative to the demands of the God's great harvest field, where we are counselled to "push the preaching of the word into new fields now widening before" "the missionary quorums," and ministry.

We have in human weakness felt quite keenly the loss by death of Bro. William Thompson's labors in the missionary work of the district, but we willingly bow to the divine inevitable, believing our loss to be his glorious gain. Missionary brethren have done well, but the twenty-five counties of this district need more than three missionaries, in my judgment. New openings are becoming more numerous and pressing all the while. Our numerical gains for the last year have been moderate, but I think this is extenuated somewhat by the effort at thoroughness and labor done in new fields. My efforts for the last few days at Runnells was attended by numbers not of the faith yet, who are investigating, and many are favorable to the work.

I desire to invite the attention of the saints of the district to the Church History being issued from the press at Lamoni. Saints cannot afford to do without it, for their own sake, and that of their children and their neighbors. Its recital of truths, facts, and arguments in favor of the work cannot be lost with impunity by the brethren. It is the necessary supply of a long felt want—a demand. The history of the rise of God's kingdom for the last time on earth!

Brighamite elders advertise for public services in the courthouse in this city for Friday evening, the 19th inst. May be necessary to look after Bro. Colvin again.

For the truth,

C. SCOTT.

WADENA, Iowa, March 9.

Editors Herald.—The Eastern Iowa district conference and Sunday school convention, now one week past, were occasions of interest and spiritual profit to all who gathered with the saints and friends of the Brush Creek branch to participate in the usual line of thought and work entertained in those assemblies. The business sessions of each were peaceful and satisfactory to all, so far as the writer knows.

In the midst of the business session of Saturday, all who were acquainted with him were agreeably surprised by the unexpected entrance of Bro. S. V. Bailey, of Lamoni, whose coöperation during the conference, and a week's meeting subsequently held, was fraught with good counsel, effective testimony, and words of encouragement, strengthening the saints and touching the hearts of others with a spark of gospel light, illuminating the path leading to Christ and salvation through his name.

Bro. C. E. Hand, our district president, taking leave of us on Tuesday evening for Fulton, thence to Clinton, left Bro. L. E. Hills and the writer to work as we find opportunity. We are to open to-night, in a proffered union church, nice and new, four miles north of Wadena, built by a people of whom but few are churchmembers. At the dedication eighty dollars were left, after paying for the house, one half of which was presented to the minister who officiated on the interesting occasion, but was angered because the entire surplus was not given to him.

Two Utah elders occupied this elegant church for three services about a year ago last fall, who ignored the teachings of Brigham Young and left a good impression. Two evangelists from Chicago here not long since so offended the people that the trustees resolved not to admit any more traveling ministry. Notwithstanding this, we are favored with a cheerfully granted opportunity to preach the everlasting gospel in their splendid building. May the Master help us to so present him as to win souls rather than repulse them.

Yours in the work,

O. B. THOMAS.

TACTICS OF DISCIPLES.—NO. 2.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

THE following statement of Mr. Taylor, which I quote, follows the one I lastly examined in my preceding number, which was the first of this series. The reader will call to mind that the quotation referred to related to the apostasy of the primitive church.

Taylor.—“Then, what sense is there in talking about a reestablishment of something that has never been prevailed against; something that has never been out of existence since its establishment by its great head and lawgiver?

Comment.—None whatever; but just as much as there is in talking about a “restoration” of something which has not been out of existence since its establishment. And you know you have already applied the word restoration to the work Mr. Campbell did. You also know that Mr. McDowell quotes copiously from your leading authorities, where they have used or acknowledged the proper use of that word in that sense. Why, before me now is a copy of a Disciple paper, recently issued, in which a writer affirms; “Campbell did not try to reform any church. His aim was to restore the Christianity of Jesus Christ and his apostles in all churches.” Italics mine.

But who talks of “reestablishment of something that has never been prevailed against,” or “out of existence?” Mr. McDowell don't. He talks of a reestablishment of something which I have already proven to have been prevailed against temporarily and to have been out of existence for a time—so far as the earth was concerned.

Taylor.—“It is the same institution now that it was eighteen hundred years ago, and will remain the same until the consummation of time.”

Comment.—Just so, wonderful admission. I fear, however, that by

“it” you mean to personate the church of which you are a member, which is not by any means the same. It is far from being identical with the church of eighteen hundred years ago. It is satisfied with an outfit of nothing but elders, bishops, and deacons—according to Campbell—while the church of eighteen hundred years ago had not only these but apostles, prophets, and other officers as well. All inspired, called of God, appointed by the Holy Ghost. See 1 Corinthians 12: 27, 28; Ephesians 4: 8-11; Hebrews 5: 4, and other passages.

Taylor.—“I pity the poor, miserable wretch who is so ignorant of God's divinely revealed will to man, as to think that the word of God had failed, when it is declared that it should not pass away.”

Comment.—This is the last statement of this author in his paragraph attempting to reply to Elder McDowell's statement which I last quoted in my preceding number. It is nothing but another bare assertion which I notice this author makes his stock in trade. Indeed he could hardly be excelled in that particular. Of course we do not deny that he would pity anyone who would think that God's word had failed. If there is any propriety in this statement, he means that God's word would not fail in promising that the “gates of hell shall not prevail against” something which he believes to be the church. There is nothing said by Elder McDowell, or believed by us as a people, to indicate that God's word has failed.

McDowell.—“Humanity cannot unfold divinity; the divine must do its own self-revealing.”

Taylor.—“Is this true of us?”

Comment.—Is what true of you? A little less obscurity and a little more sense, please. Your question is irrelevant to Mr. McDowell's affirmation. Had you asked, “Is this true?” you would have asked a question both intelligible and sensible. We will proceed, however, and possibly we will learn your meaning by further remarks you make on the above.

Taylor.—“We believe the Bible is its own interpreter.”

Comment.—You no doubt tell the truth in stating your belief; but it does not follow that your belief is correct. An interpreter is one that explains or expounds; an expositor, according to standard authority. His explanation or exposition is his interpretation. But is it correct to confound the interpretation with the interpreter himself? Interpretation is also the act of explaining or exposing. The Bible contains interpretations of certain doctrines, etc. Then there are other parts of it which are figurative, symbolical, and uninterpreted, or not interpretations. They are in need of interpretation. For example: in Genesis is an account of certain dreams which different parties had; they were interpreted by Joseph—some of them. They were not understood, however, by the parties who had them before their interpretation.

Let it be understood that those dreams, with their interpretations, are recorded in the Bible. Now suppose the interpretations did not accompany the dreams, how would we get them? Would it not be necessary to get them by the same method through which they were secured? Certainly. Then, sir, if there are any dreams or anything of similar or like obscurity in the Bible unaccompanied by their interpretations, we need now that inspirational power to understand them. That there are some mysteries in the Bible which humanity, unaided by inspiration or supernatural instruction, cannot unfold, is too clear to be argued.

Three things are prominently noticeable in an interpretation: First, the thing to be interpreted; second, the interpreter; third, the interpretation. An interpreter acts. The Bible does not act, hence is not "its own interpreter." We sing with you,

"God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

Make what plain? Why, his word, of course. How? Through the agency of his Holy Spirit acting upon the people. The action of the Holy Spirit now, as it did anciently, is necessary to the proper interpretation of the Scriptures. When you said the Bible is "its own interpreter," you were perpetrating the Disciple wickedness of trying to shut out new revelation.

Taylor.—"What more?"

Comment.—Do you mean to ask what more you believe; or what the Bible is besides "its own interpreter." Tell us.

Taylor.—"I mean the true and faithful revelation which was received by the chosen apostles of our Lord, eighteen hundred years ago."

Comment.—Your sentences are so ambiguous that it is rendered most tedious to follow you. If one answers what you say sometimes, he is apt to miss your meaning; if one shows the silliness of what he supposes you mean, you are apt to say, "I did not say that." As there appears to be nothing of special significance in your sentence I last quoted, I will only leave it as a sample of your argumentativeness (?) and pass to another one.

Taylor.—"Thanks be to God, we, as Christians, followers of the Son of God, do not have to believe that false, spurious, and malignant claim to a new revelation of that seer, Joe Smith, who was one of those false prophets—a 'perverter of the gospel of Christ.'"

Comment.—"Joe" Smith, eh? A sample of your gentility, Mr. Author! A fine specimen of your logical ability? It will not do to attribute this to ignorance, for I notice you do not forget to prefix "Mr." to Campbell when you use his name. It is nothing but the fruit of your selfish prejudice and the impure motive with which you write. I might with the greatest of propriety proceed no further; an author who will stoop to such downright partiality and vulgarism is hardly worthy of notice. What are you worthy of but rebuke? You need not depend on my trying to equal you in that groveling method. I have more respect for my bringing up and the cause I am so happy to represent.

You make nothing but a general assertion. I will therefore meet it with a general denial. I deny that you are "followers of the Son of God;" I deny that Joseph Smith made a false claim to a new revelation.

Taylor.—"The apostle says: 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'"

Comment.—Yes; what then?

Taylor.—"Is it not a fact, then, that Joe Smith's revelation would be another gospel?"

Comment.—"Joe" again. What you

Taylor.—"As the church of the call "Smith's revelation" is the revelation of Jesus Christ, given THROUGH Joseph Smith. No, my dear fellow, it would not be another gospel. St. John received revelations from God after Paul pronounced that anathema; were his revelations, therefore, another gospel? If it does not bar him out, why does it Joseph Smith?

Taylor.—"Most assuredly it would."

Comment.—Most assuredly it would not. If it does, why not prove it and be done with it.

Next, this author makes a quotation—if it may be called a quotation—from the second column of the second page of Elder McDowell's tract. He puts the language in quotation marks, but leaves out the references; evidently to prevent his readers from detecting the fallacy of his opposing remarks. I quote it as found in the tract. In telling how Christ entered upon the work of building his church, we have the following from Elder McDowell.

McDowell.—"The calling of twelve apostles as recorded in Luke 9; and Quorum of Seventy, as in Luke 10; prophets and teachers, as found in Acts 13; evangelists and pastors, as found in Ephesians 4; and of bishops and deacons as found in 1 Timothy 3; and elders, as found in Titus 1; and these form the organic official compact."

Taylor.—"Here is what the apostle Paul says about how it was built; it was built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."—Eph. 2: 20.

Comment.—If that is the case, your church must be foundationless, as it is without apostles and prophets. It will not do to say that the ancient apostles and prophets serve now as the foundation. A building is as much in need of a foundation fifty years after its erection as it is the first day, or during the first week. To knock out the foundation of the building after it becomes completed would suddenly result in its ruin.

Taylor.—"Quite a contrast in the statements of the two men."

Comment.—As it happens, the two men between whom the contrast is, are you and Paul. That was an unfortunate quotation for you, Mr. Taylor.

firstborn never apostatized (but the people did), there is no need for a second calling of apostles, quorum of seventy, and prophets now."

Comment.—The people—of the church, I suppose—apostatized, but the church did not, you say. Then the church still continued to exist after the apostasy of the people! I would like you to define what it took to constitute the church. As I believe I had occasion to call your attention to this fact before; you have been obscure from the beginning in your use of that term. If the church existed after the apostasy of the people, then the people were not essential to its existence. Hence, it could exist where there was or is no people. Definition, please.

Taylor.—"Unless some ignoramus desired to set up an institution of his own calling; something like the Church of the Latter Day Saints, which is not the Church of Christ, because it is not wearing his name, and its doctrines are of men, and its practices are not identical with the Church of Christ as it is revealed in the New Testament."

Comment.—This is the continuation of that part of his sentence in which he treats us with the bit of information that the people apostatized, but the church did not! He says the "Church of the Latter Day Saints" is not the Church of Christ, "because it is not wearing his name." From the preceding part of his sentence one would be led to infer that the "Church of the Latter Day Saints" is not the Church of Christ, because there are people in it.

Taylor.—"The 'reestablishment' of the institution of Jesus by Alexander Campbell, as Mr. McDowell tries so hard to make people believe, is a false assertion, hatched and reared by just such men as the one Elder McDowell."

Comment.—Here I must dissent. Mr. McDowell does not try to make people believe that Alexander Campbell reestablished the institution of Jesus. On the other hand, he shows that Mr. Campbell established an institution which never before existed—before Campbell. He does prove that the former was Mr. Campbell's claim along with his compeers by many unmistakable extracts, etc., from their writings.

FAST DAY.

Recognizing the existence of a strong desire among the saints for a day of fasting and prayer to be observed before the assembling of conference, April 6, we have consulted together and agreed to appoint Sunday, March 28, as a day of Fasting and Prayer, to be observed by the church in its several branches, and by the saints who may not be able to attend the meetings where held.

We recommend as subjects for contemplation and prayer; the general condition of the church in its attitude to the world; the ministerial force and its labors; the financial department and its needs; the organization of the church in its several quorums, their condition, vacancies, and the necessity that they may be filled; the disturbed conditions of the political world at home and abroad, as signs of the times indicating the soon coming of the Messiah and the need of preparation in holiness for that great event.

We recommend that the fast be from the evening meal of Saturday, March 27, to the evening meal of Sunday, the 28th.

We further recommend that the usual Lord's Day services of the prayer and testimony meeting be devoted to prayer for the objects desired.

Let the saints be united in appealing to the Lord for the aid and direction of the Holy Spirit, the light of truth and the Spirit of revelation and wisdom, for the present exigencies and the work of the incoming year.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The attention of all persons attending General Conference, and of our home people, is called to the following requests and advice from the Reception Committee:—

The members of the committee will wear blue badges bearing the words, "Reception Committee."

Two members of this committee will meet visitors at Bethany Junction and render all the assistance possible in changing cars, etc.

When you arrive at Lamoni you will please get off on the south side, opposite from the depot, as directed by the members of the committee.

Immediately upon leaving the train you should report at once at the Town Hall, which will be the headquarters of the committee, where you will be assigned and directed to your stopping place by the committee.

The committee desires every attendant at conference to register at headquarters, whether you have been served by them in your locating or not, so that a complete register of names and stopping place may be kept.

The home people are earnestly requested to aid the committee as much as they possibly can to carry out these plans. If you have made arrangements to keep anyone and have not reported to the committee, you will aid in perfecting the arrangements by so doing.

The railroad company will run a special train to Lamoni from Bethany Junction on Sunday, April 4, provided that they have twenty or more passengers for Lamoni. The following named brethren have been selected as Reception Committee: G. W. Blair, Chas. Bradfield, W. H. Deam, Wilson Hudson, John Hougas, A. M. Newberry, R. J. Lambert, D. A. Anderson, F. M. Smith, J. F. Gunsolley.

HERALDS WANTED.

Some person has borrowed or taken my bound volume of Heralds that included the numbers from July, 1863, to December, 1865, being all of volumes 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8. If the one who has them should see or hear of this notice, he or she will confer a great favor by returning the book to me.

But, in case I do not recover the book, I would like to obtain the Heralds for 1864 and 1865 (either bound or unbound) and will pay a good price for them. Anyone who has them, and is willing to sell, please write me. I already have the numbers for the last six months of 1863. H. A. STEBBINS.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 20, 1897. 12-2t

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large:—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, ab ut.....4,000 "
Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 "

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

In Bro. James Kemp we found an upright and devoted agent and the special thanks of the Bishopric are hereby tendered him for his carefulness and diligence while acting in said office.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

She had unbounded faith in the church and its ordinances, but our Father claimed her for another and brighter world and plucked the rose in its bloom. A short time before the end she called her mother, and placing her feeble hands around her neck she said, "Oh! Mamma, I must leave you to go and live with the angels." She then burst forth in the gift of tongues, and calmly left us. Funeral services in the house, evening of March 10, in charge of Elder Joseph Squires; sermon by Elder George Potts, and at the grave March 11, by Elder John H. Pope.

BALDWIN.—At her son's home, Sr. Luana Hart Baldwin passed from this world of care after many years of hard suffering. She died firm in the faith and was ever ready to bear her testimony to the truth of the gospel. She leaves a family of heartstricken children and grandchildren to mourn her departure; four daughters and two sons. She was born in York State, October 3, 1814; died March 6, 1897, and was buried March 10. She was one of the first to join the church in Joseph Smith the prophet's day; then joined the Reorganized Church at Manti, Iowa, being baptized by W. W. Blair.

BIRGE.—At Independence, Missouri, March 2, 1897, Sr. Mary L. Noble Birge, aged 30 years, 1 month, and 2 days. For some months she was a sufferer from consumption; but she patiently bore her distress, and committed her spirit at length to the Author of her gospel hope. Her remains were laid beside those of her mother, Sr. Noble, who preceded her about three years. She leaves a husband, brother, two sisters, and many friends as mourners. The funeral services were conducted at the home of her sister, by Elder Joseph Luff.

HAMILTON.—Sr. Hamilton, wife of W. C. Hamilton, and daughter of Z. S. and Thresa Fenn, was born January 4, 1863, in Jackson County, Florida, and died January 15, 1897, in the town of Seville, Wilcox County, Georgia. After she was taken sick she only remained a few hours with her devoted husband and loving children. Mr. and Sr. Hamilton moved to Texas in the year 1885, and while there she joined the Latter Day Saints Church, being baptized by Elder A. J. Moore, at Evergreen, Texas, in 1887. She was loved by saints and friends universally while in Texas. Husband, four children, a number of relatives, and a host of friends mourn.

GRAYBILL.—Near Weston, Iowa, February 24, 1897, Floyd Edmund, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Graybill, aged 7 months. Funeral sermon by H. N. Hansen.

VANFLEET.—At Beaver City, Utah, February 16, 1897, Bro. Charles VanFleet. Deceased was born January 25, 1821, in Cortland County, New York. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church by E. C. Brand, January 26, 1879. Was ordained a priest March 12, 1880, by G. E. Deuel. Interment in Beaver City cemetery, February 18. The funeral services were conducted by Elder William Thompson, Sen.

ODE.—At his home, near Clarksdale, Missouri, February 18, 1897, Christopher Ode. He was born February 2, 1841, in Germany. He was a faithful member of the German branch. Bro. Ode had been a sufferer for many years and death's angel was a welcome visitor to him. About two hours before his death his pain left him, and at 2:30 p. m., he calmly fell asleep with the glorious hope of a first resurrection. Funeral sermon by T. T. Hinderks in the German church.

LEWIS.—Elder Elias Lewis, February 12, at his residence, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at the age of seventy-two. He was baptized in 1869 by Elder W. W. Blair and ordained at the same time. Leaves a wife and eleven children to mourn their loss. Funeral at the house; sermon by Elder A. H. Parsons, assisted by Elder John Stone.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priesthoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

PROPOSED JEWISH STATE IN PALESTINE.

THE agitation for the return of the Israelites to the land of their fathers has in recent years been growing in intensity, and a number of plans have been devised toward the realization of this object. The "Zionite movement," having this purpose in view and enjoying considerable popularity among the Jews of Europe, especially those of strong religious proclivities, has evidently become a fixed fact in modern life. The Rothschilds and other Jewish money barons have established dozens of Jewish agricultural colonies throughout the Holy Land with at least partial success. The most extensive scheme, however, of the kind, looking to the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine, has in recent months been advocated by a well-known Jewish legal light of Austria, Dr. Theodore Herzl, and his brochure, entitled "Der Judenstaat, Versuch einer modernen Losung der Judenfrage" (The Jewish Attempt at a Modern Solution of the Jewish Question) has rapidly reached its second edition and is attracting considerable attention. The outlines of his scheme are the following:—

"The Jewish question, which, like Banquo's ghost, will not down, must be regarded as a national and not as a local problem. As a national problem it can be solved only by a return of the people of Israel to their own land and the establishment of a sovereign Jewish state. Without this latter feature, no plan is feasible, because history has shown that whenever the Jews migrate in large bodies to a particular country they there awaken an anti-Semitic movement that prevents further immigration. The organization of a new sovereign state is a possibility in our days, as can be seen from the Kongo State and the Rhodesia of the Chartered Company.

"In order to carry out this project, it will be necessary to organize two associations, with headquarters in London; namely, a 'Society of Jews,' as an instrument for the 'moral' propaganda, and a 'Jewish Company' to represent the legal phase; or, in other words, a representative corporation and a society to acquire possession. The society is to consist of the best and noblest representatives of Judaism, the object being that these men shall make it a study how to carry on this propaganda in such a manner that it will gain the moral assent of the world. As the negotiorum gestor, or business manager, it would be the duty of this association to come to an understanding with the European states and to secure from them the proper authorization of the project. Under such an authorization then it would be possible to negotiate for the purchase of sufficient territory in Palestine in which to establish the new state. In return the society would assume a portion of the indebtedness of the Government hitherto in control of this territory, and would undertake the development of the resources of the country, build roads, railroads, and in other ways guarantee the future of the new state.

"When matters have arrived at this stage, then, under the constant direction of the society, the work of the 'Jewish Company' would begin. This work would be done on a grand scale, based on the experiences and inventions of modern civilization. In the first case, the land which had been secured by international contract would now be bought in accordance with private rights; then the Jewish unskilled laborers, the Jewish proletariat, would be organized according to military principles, under the leadership of state officials, engineers, and physicians. It would then be the duty of these unskilled laborers to build cities in chosen localities, to plant forests, to build roads, and the like. A work-day of seven hours even the Russian and Rumanian Jews, long unaccustomed to heavy physical toil, would be able to stand.

"In planning these new cities the chief purpose would be the erection of suitable workingmen's houses, each of which is to have a small garden. It is to be made possible for the workman gradually to make this property his own by the labors of his hands. In the meanwhile the laborers are not to receive any wages from the company, but are to be well fed and clothed by them. In this way it is thought that the peddling system will not find an entrance among the new colonists. The method of giving the poor opportunities for self-help by labor is to be similar to the Paris Assistance par le travail or the workingman's colonies of Pastor von Bodelschwing, in Germany.

"These beginnings of work in the new state will at once call into existence a market, at least of the necessities of life for the support of the colonies; and gradually it will be necessary to satisfy also wants that go beyond these bare necessities. This will make it possible to bring into the state the representatives of the artisan and trade and business callings, and gradually, by the side of the labor managed by the company, free and independent labor will find its place.

"The company has accordingly a double purpose: to make provision that the properties belonging to the Jews in the various countries where they now live are disposed of at reasonable prices and gradually, so that it will not be necessary to give them away at panic prices; and, secondly, enable the new citizens in their new home to acquire property at reason-ble rates and to establish business and trade. In doing this the company is not to make any profits for itself; only in the case of large land speculations can this be done, this gain, however, to be used for the payment of the officials and other expenses, especially the establishment of schools of both elementary and higher grade. That such a scheme is feasible is seen from the success of this plan in the case of states in North America and in the South African goldfields.

"The migration to the new state is to take place gradually, in groups of families, circles of special friends, or even whole congregations. Everywhere in the old homes subordinate societies are to be established in the interests of the project. The immense sums of money that would be needed to realize this plan the Jewish Society, as a stock association, would secure through subscriptions among the people at large, as the Jewish banking circles would probably not lend their help. The whole scheme is to be a popular propaganda. It is expected that the name Palestine and the seven-hour day for work will win for the project many friends. The form of government in the new state is to be an aristocratic republic, in which every citizen can live in accordance with his own belief or unbelief. The Society of the Jews would constitute the government."

These are the essential thoughts of the Herzl plan. Naturally its critics are many, notwithstanding the acknowledgment that it is probably the most practicable scheme of the kind offered, the author being an authority in the economic and legal departments. A comparatively complete statement of the objections to the plan is given in the Leipsic "Saat auf Hoffnung" (Seed of Hope), the organ of the Delitzsch Jewish Mission Society.—Literary Digest.

IS GOD WITHDRAWING HIS SPIRIT FROM THE CHURCH?

REV. JAMES MCLEOD, D. D., takes strong exceptions to certain utterances made by Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D., in the course of an address at a missionary rally in Scranton, Pennsylvania. The points at issue are thus set forth by Dr. McLeod in the New York Observer:—

"There are ministers of the gospel who are quite as pronounced premillennialists as Dr. Pierson, who would never think of making a great union meeting, a foreign missionary rally, the occasion for emphasizing views touching our Lord's second advent.

"The theory that the gospel is to be preached to all nations only as a witness, and that God has expressly declared that the world will not and therefore cannot be converted to Christ during the present dispensation, but that it must wait until the Lord comes again and sets up his kingdom—this theory was strongly asserted by Dr. Pierson. Even if this theory be true, such a meeting as Dr. Pierson was invited to address was neither the time nor place in which to emphasize it.

"In support of this theory, Dr. Pierson has embodied in his creed this new article: 'I believe that God is actually withdrawing his Holy Spirit from his church, as a body.'

"The recital of this portion of his creed startled the audience, as well it might. It was uttered with great fervor but it failed to convince.

"It will require far more than such an expression of belief, however solemnly uttered, to convince the vast majority of thoughtful Christians that the world is growing worse and worse, and that the church of Christ has already entered into a period of decline, and that she is fast going to decay.

"For, does any one doubt that Jesus Christ has more true followers in the world to-day than at any time since the morning of his resurrection? Is it not true that Christianity never exerted so much influence in the world as it is doing to-day?

"When we see on every hand schools, and colleges, and seminaries of learning, and almshouses and hospitals for the sick, and homes where old age is tenderly nursed; when we see the thousand and one agencies which the church is employing for the glory of God and for the salvation of men, it is not in harmony with truth to say that the church of Christ is in a decaying and dying condition; and it seems positively wicked to assert that the Holy Spirit is withdrawing himself from her. The preaching of pessimism is not the best way to fill the Lord's treasury, nor is it the best way to promote the cause of Christian missions either at home or abroad.

"The fact that church boards are in debt is cause for regret, but it is not a fatal disease; and, moreover, it can be readily explained without scaring folks with wild assertions, and without assuming the role of a prophet, albeit without a prophet's authority to reveal the secrets of the Most High."

In an editorial note in the same issue in which Dr. McLeod's article appears, The Observer makes this comment:—

"The Rev. Dr. McLeod, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, speaks his mind in the article on the Scranton missionary rally. Earnest Christian brethren sometimes allow their zeal to run away with their judgment and good taste and Dr. McLeod's rebuke will be considered by many good people as called for and therefore timely. Faith in the premillennial advent of the Lord Jesus Christ is not an essential to missionary zeal, nor have the Christians who champion that doctrine most vigorously met with a success denied to others who could not accept their interpretation of Scripture. Many of our most devoted and successful missionaries have done their work in the belief that the world must be won for Christ in order to insure his universal enthronement, but others have labored with equal devotion and success who believe that they are simply saving one and another from a sinking ship, and that the real missionary triumph awaits Christ's personal presence. If all the time that has been spent in discussing these contrary views had been given to soul-saving, missionary records might be even more glowing than they now are. One thing we should all bear in mind, namely, that Christ bids the church go with his gospel to every creature. Whether he intends to leave the conquest of the earth to the church aided only by his spiritual presence, or sooner or later to take command of the forces himself in visible person, makes not one iota of difference as regards the church's duty in the premises. Therefore, when an enthusiastic premillennialist addresses a great missionary rally he would be wise in saying, 'Brethren, you and I may differ in certain details concerning Christ's second coming, but we read alike his last command.' That command, accompanied as it is with a promise, furnishes the church's instruction and largely her incentive and inspiration."—Literary Digest.

SOME CONTRASTS.

BRO. D. R. BALDWIN, of Arkansas, whose letter appears in this issue, sends us three newspaper clippings, all of which speak favorably of the position and work of the Reorganized Church and its ministers in contrast to the faith and teachings of the Mormon Church in Utah. The first, from the Randolph Herald Pilot, of Poca-hontas, Arkansas, of March 4; the others are duly credited to the papers from which they are extracted. We republish them as showing the superior estimation in which the people of those places hold the Reorganization, as they do throughout the United States.

It is gratifying to know that the moral sympathies of the people of the country favor the work and position of the Reorganized Church as against the erroneous work of the Utah faction. If the latter has reasonable grounds for hope to change the tide of public feeling in its favor, we are unable to discern what it is. With its own ministry silenced at every point by the alert ministry of the Reorganized Church, what reason has it for hope that success will crown its efforts and a reversal of public sentiment be realized? Certainly none. Rather is there reason for fear upon its part that many of the young men in its ministerial ranks will abandon the false positions in which the latter-day apostasy under Brigham Young, and continued under the administrations of John Taylor, and Wilford Woodruff has placed them. But here are the clippings:—

WHO ARE THEY?

For the Herald-Pilot.

Who are those good looking, well-dressed young men walking in a pair? Hush—sh—sh! They are Mormon elders. Their char-tered name under the incorporation is, the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints;" the term "Mormon" is applied because they believe the Book of Mormon. Let the reader judge who they are and what they are doing in our midst.

The Latter Day Saints Church was established in New York State, April 6, 1830, by Joseph Smith, an illiterate young man, who claimed to receive angelic visits and revelations direct from headquarters; that he was told where to find the ancient history of America, and given the power to translate from it the Book of Mormon, and that the long lost priesthood or God-given authority was conferred upon him by the hands of angels, hence, he received such high titles as Apostle, Seer, Revelator, etc. In fourteen years the church numbered 200,000 souls, including some of the brightest talent of that day.

At this juncture an awful calamity overtook them. Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum (prophet and patriarch) were killed at Carthage, Illinois, and the church was riven into fragments, numbers aspiring to the leadership.

About two years later Brigham Young, president of the twelve apostles, located about ten thousand of the Mormons in the valley of the Great Salt Lake, Utah, where he established a hierarchy and added to the simple principles of their faith numerous criminal doctrines, such as blood atonement and polygamy, the latter being instituted in 1852.

These criminal doctrines have been stamped out by the strong arm of the law. Brigham Young is dead. Utah has become a State. The Mormons no longer teach these heresies, for the dominant church is under new rules.

We also have with us another stripe of Latter Day Saints, distinguished from those of Utah by the term, "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," presided over by Joseph Smith, eldest son of their martyred prophet, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. They have societies at Martin's Creek, Bald Knob, and other points in this State. They claim to have always stood aloof from the nastiness of Brighamism, and believe that the Utah Church apostatized and lost their authority; hence, they stand on a level with the rest of Christendom. Their clerical men meet and part on friendly terms; but O man! you ought to see the fury when they lock their theological horns on the subject of authority and leadership.

SIFTER.

RAVENDEN SPRINGS, Arkansas.

From the Spring River News, Imboden, Arkansas, March 19:—

There are twelve well-dressed, intelligent young Mormon elders in Arkansas traveling in pairs, without purse or scrip. We also have representatives of the original Mormon Church in our midst who are anxious that our people should know that they have ever contended for monogamy and strongly opposed all the corruptions of Brighamism.

From Mammoth Springs Democrat, March 4, Ravenden Springs correspondent:—

It was an interesting episode which occurred last Saturday when Elders Copening and Etkinson, representatives of the Utah wing of the Latter Day Saints Church locked theological horns with a representative of the monogamic wing of the same church. Each claimed the others were apostates. They are all laboring here in Randolph County. The latter had the vantage ground and the former were not willing to defend their claims in public discussion.

INGERSOLL, THE APOSTLE OF UNBELIEF.

MR. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL has lately appeared on the lecture platform with a "new lecture," which so far as we can see is but a rehash of his old time platitudes and tricks of speech by which to create a laugh at the expense of believers in the Bible, God and the Christ. He lectured at the Columbia Theatre, Chicago, Sunday night, March 7, to a large audience, occupying some two hours, and being frequently applauded.

For us, or any other believers to essay a criticism of his lecture, would be to be mistaken as to intention and be by some construed to mean a confessed fear of what the apostle of modern unbelief might have to say; but Rev. Henson, of Chicago, called him a "blatant blasphemer," and those who paid a dollar each to hear him "a parcel of idiots." This may do for a sectarian doctor of divinity, but it will only serve to advertise the lecturer, and cause a desire in some of Dr. Henson's congregation to want to hear him.

The lecture was published in substance in the papers, among them the Times-Herald, in attractive headlines. For these emphasizing headlines the Times-Herald in its issue for Tuesday, March 9, apologized in the following editorial; which coming from one of the great secular journals of the day, may very properly be taken to represent the thought of the average citizen, touching the attitude of Mr. Ingersoll toward believers, and the methods employed by him in his crusade against Christianity. For this reason we quote it rather than to write a screed upon the lecture itself.

INGERSOLL'S GOSPEL OF DESPAIR.

The Times-Herald expresses regret for the display headlines which appeared in yesterday's paper over the report of Mr. Ingersoll's antiquated tirade on Christianity delivered at the Columbia Theater on Sunday night. For this affront to the people who cherish the consolations of the Christian religion as the indispensable requisites of a well-ordered life there is no excuse save the excuse that is often made for those who make a study of writing attractive newspaper captions to catch the public eye.

Happily the voluble agnostic who abandoned an honorable profession to attack Christianity for pecuniary profit is no longer taken seriously by the people who represent the solid, progressive and intelligent elements of our citizenship. Only those who have not yet passed the "doubting stage," that is sometimes regarded as a concomitant of true intellectual development, find any real mental entertainment in Mr. Ingersoll's puerile attempts to pull down what centuries of the most profound scholarship have failed to destroy.

There is a period in the intellectual experiences of many men where the ability to "doubt" everything is foolishly regarded as the highest evidence of great mental profundity. The young man at college has his little spell of agnosticism, when he thrashes over the dry straw of unbelief under the impression that the process is an infallible sign of excessive smartness.

But the newer generations learn as they grow older and grapple with the problems of life that the men who really believe something and are anchored immovably to a fixed faith are the ones who have accomplished most for civilization and humanity. The reason Mr. Ingersoll's gospel of despair makes so little headway is because it is destructive, negative, and pessimistic. Unbelief is a poor mental pabulum to feed human nature that is constructed in such a way that it constantly builds for the morrow—and who can build for the morrow without faith and hope?

The Christian religion is constructive and optimistic. The youth who emerges safely from the "doubting period" looks about him and discerns the manifold evidences of the fact that Christianity is constructive. He sees that it not only builds character but it builds great hospitals and noble institutions of learning. He sees that it is a barrier against those who would despoil the home—the corner-stone of our civilization. He finds that the admonitions of the Great Teacher constitute the warp and woof of our laws that are enacted for the safety of human society. He finds that all literature is redolent of Bethlehem and Judea. He learns that the most profound philosophy will not explain any of the mysteries of death, and that science offers no comfort or consolation to those who look with tear dimmed eyes through the glass of the coffin lid.

And if the youth grows into a man of reflection and discernment he will soon learn that such men as Ingersoll offer nothing to take the place of that which they would destroy, and that life to those of simple faith is much sweeter and fuller than it is to those who have the ripest fruits of scholarship with doubt and unbelief.

FIGURES OF THE INDIA FAMINE.

CALCUTTA, March 18.—The financial statement just issued shows a deficit for the last year of 19,870,000 rupees. The famine has cost 60,810,000 rupees in relief work and loss of revenue.

The estimates for the coming year expect a deficit of 42,640,000 rupees, the work of relief absorbing 36,410,000 rupees of this sum. The total famine relief expense for both years is estimated at 56,070,000, but much depends upon the future prospects of the weather and crops. This sum does not include 8,000,000 rupees advanced to the ryots or cultivators of the soil.

The railway program will be continued, and this will necessitate a loan of four crores (a crore of rupees is $5,000,000) in India and $17,500,000 in England, besides $1,000,000 for the temporary debt. The drawings of the Secretary of State on India amount to $65,000,000.

The statement concludes with expressing the hope that financial progress will be resumed when the famine and plague have gone.

WE learn incidentally, that on Friday, March 5, one Linsey Villers, a priest in the Utah Church, assaulted and nearly killed Bro. P. H. Shimel, of the Richland branch, near Chelsea, Iowa.

The circumstances are about as follows:—

Bro. Shimel had sold Villers a quarter of beef; Villers was to pay for the beef in helping in haying, but on one pretext or another failed to do so. A few weeks ago Bro. Shimel bought posts of Villers to settle the account, at six cents each. When Bro. Shimel went after the posts Villers was sick, so he helped himself to the posts. On the morning of the assault they met at Bro. James Villers, whose wife was dangerously sick, Bro. Shimel and wife having gone over to see if they could be of any use to them. Linsey Villers then accused Bro. Shimel of sorting the posts; this he denied, and said if Villers was dissatisfied he would haul the posts back. Villers refused to have this done, but demanded that Bro. Shimel pay him ten cents each for the posts; and said if he did not he would take it out of his hide, and took off his coat for this purpose. Bro. Shimel did not prepare for battle, as he did not think Villers would hit him; but Villers stooped down and got a wagon neck yoke, and at once struck at Bro. Shimel who threw up his hands and warded off the blow; but Villers immediately struck again, knocking Bro. Shimel insensible, breaking his upper jaw, mashing his cheek bone, and breaking his nose. After he fell Villers commenced striking him in the face with his fists. Bro. James Villers, a brother to Linsey, was quite a distance from them, but by this time he reached them and pushed Linsey away and ordered him to leave. James raised Bro. Shimel, from whom the blood was gushing in torrents, called for water, and soon revived him and got him into the house; sent for a doctor who found the injuries as above-mentioned. The next day Bro. Shimel was removed to his home, where at the present writing, two weeks later, he is in a serious condition. Villers was arrested and bound over to await the findings of the Grand Jury, in May. The doctor thinks that if nothing else sets in Bro. Shimel will live.

LATE issues of the Columbus, Nebraska, Journal and Telegram, sent us by Bro. H. J. Hudson, contain exceedingly favorable comments upon the preaching of Bro. J. F. Mintun, which we append, respectively. Our Nebraska saints and ministers have done well to call forth such strong indorsements of their work:—

We are informed that the religious services that have been held in the Latter Day Saints chapel in this city during the past twelve days have been very instructive. Elder J. F. Mintun is a forceful speaker, handling gospel themes with convincing clearness, awakening investigation of Bible truths, deepening religious thought in professing Christians, and spiritual enlargement of heart of the unconverted. The elder closed his meetings Sunday night. He will return in a short time with a tent, accompanied by colaborers in mission work.

The discourses being delivered by Elder J. F. Mintun every evening at the Latter Day Saints chapel, are very instructive, and give evidence of a thorough acquaintance with the Bible doctrines of Christ's teachings. We understand Mr. Mintun closes the series next Sunday night.

WE have received from the National Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, an excellent copy of their Self-Pronouncing Sunday School Teachers' Combination Bible.

This is an adaptation of the King James' or Common Version to a system of footnote explanation by way of the changes made in the text in the Revised Version, showing how the text would read as revised. Reference is made in the text where changes are made, by the use of the letters rv. and ro., the first indicating the change and the latter where an omission of the text as found in the Common Version had been made in the revision.

There is also a system of accentuation by marks employed to indicate the correct pronunciation of the proper names of Scriptures, which is very useful to the ordinary reader, and helps all.

Bro. Frank Sheehy has been acting as agent for the sale of this work, and those elders who have secured and used it are well pleased with it.

We believe it to be one of the best helps in the study of the King James' and Revised Versions of the Bible that we have seen, and is certain to be widely used.

It is with pleasure that we acknowledge the courtesy of the National Publishing Company in sending this combination Bible to the Herald Office.

The address of the company is, National Publishing Co., P. O. Box 1166, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. J. R. Jones is President, and W. R. Vansant secretary.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS.

MONTREAL, Que., March 23.—A few minutes after six o'clock this evening a terrific earthquake shock shook the center of the city and caused great consternation. Large buildings shook like reeds and there was a general rush of the inmates in many instances for the doors. At the Great Northwestern Telegraph Building the shock was so great that it was at first thought that there had been an explosion in the building, but on investigation it was found that the shock had been general.

So far no damage has been heard of. Dispatches are pouring in from all over the province and from Eastern Ontario, indicating that the shock has been very generally felt throughout the country, but no damage of consequence is reported.

Vandalia, Illinois, March 23.—A slight earthquake shock was felt here about ten o'clock last night. The vibration was from west to east and lasted ten seconds.

Portsmouth, N. H., March 23.—Sunday morning a loud, rumbling noise was heard in various parts of Rockingham County, accompanied by a trembling of the earth, rattling of windows, and shaking of houses. It was thought to be the effects of an earthquake.

Reports from York County, Maine, confirm this. The cable to the Isle of Shoals was affected, and communication with the island is out off.

AGAINST RAILROAD POOLS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 22.—The Supreme Court to-day handed down a decision which strikes a body blow at all railroad combinations and hits every traffic pool in the country between the eyes. No such far-reaching decision is on record as affecting the rights of the people as against those of the railroads. The court holds that the transportation companies are not only amenable to the restrictions under the inter-State commerce act, but are also specifically liable to prosecution for any violation of the anti-trust act of 1890, generally known as the Sherman law. The decision rendered by Justice Peckham upsets those given by lower courts in different parts of the country and apparently forbids the formation of all railroad pools for the purpose of agreeing upon rates, whether there is any actual division of profits or not.

Railroad authorities admit that the decision will affect both freight and passenger associations, and some roads have served notice of withdrawal from traffic associations. The decision is an important and far-reaching one.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. WHITE, March 21:—

I am at Spickards, Missouri, having come here on the 5th inst. Have held meetings every night since the 7th and good crowds and great interest. Some opposition but the wheels of fortune greatly turned in our favor. We trouble the water to-day and may again before leaving for General Conference. Bro. Alfred White is with me and assisting in the work. We were called here by the serious illness of our sister, Sr. McVay. Her life was hanging on a brittle thread and our anxiety for her recovery is not abated yet. We felt that we could not afford to be idle even while we watched by the bedside of a dear sister. "In God we trust."

Bro. A. D. Penrod, of Stofiel, Nevada, writing lately of the death of Sr. L. E. Stofiel at that place, adds:—

I wish we were represented by some elder, bishop, or energetic member, as trials and temptations are very great here and we seem all but lost to our brethren out in this wilderness. We trust the time of gathering in has about commenced.

Bro. R. C. Evans, writing from London, Ont., March 21:—

Editors Herald:—We are all rejoicing in London this morning over the power of God just displayed in our midst. Sr. Pugsley last November went under a dangerous operation in the hospital. After weeks of suffering she reached her own home. From the day of her operation her voice began to fail, till it was reduced to a whisper. For ten days she had not spoken above a whisper, and all hope was gone that she would ever regain her voice. Yesterday, hearing that I had arrived home, she had me administer to her, after which she received evidence that she would be healed. We had lost all hope of her ever speaking loud again, for we learned that a leading singer who was going under a similar operation was told that the chances were that she would never speak again above a whisper; so when Sr. Pugsley was found in that condition I with others concluded that she would never regain her voice. Some three hours after the administration she was reading my sermon, "Jesus from the cradle to the grave," page 34, where it says, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" "Was he forsaken? He thought he was. No, he was only tried," etc. In a moment the Spirit rested upon her and she was instantly restored and her voice at once was full, sweet, and rich as ever. This morning she came to meeting and with us was found talking, singing, and praising God. We are hoping, praying, and trying to live, so that God may direct in the conference. O that God out of his never failing fullness may supply the necessities of his church.

Bro. A. H. Parsons, Philadelphia, March 19:—

I feel that a good conference will be enjoyed by all who attend. May we live worthy of the trust imposed. The work here is moving along slowly. I think the division made in territory once known as the Philadelphia district will be productive of good.

A handbill announcing "Lectures on Mormonism," by A. Carlin, at Ozark, Missouri, is sent us by Bro. Henry Sparling; also another, announcing a reply by Bro. S. The latter writes concerning the attack and reply as follows, under date of the 19th:—

Rev. Carlin intended to give seven lectures. The first night he had about sixty out, but they were so disgusted that the next night he had but sixteen. He found that the people at Ozark had heard too much of our preaching to believe his lies. . . . After his second lecture he pulled out. I was not at home, so I did not hear of it until Sunday night following, so I sent word I would answer him if I could get the hall. I came down and was welcomed by a great many of our old friends who were glad to see me; so last night I had a good turnout and showed the people Carlin's tricky work. This place has been neglected, for the missionary was instructed to "keep away from the branches," and the result is, the work here, as elsewhere, has gone down. I am satisfied that it is a mistake to advise the missionary to steer clear of branches; at least it has proven so in this mission.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser, Catawba Island, Ohio, March 22.

Three excellent people baptized here yesterday, others almost persuaded.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

CORRECTION. In HERALD of March 24, article Tactics of Disciples No. 2, the last line of second column, page 188, should be the last line of third column, same page.

Sr. Mary Grice, St. Mary's, Ontario, writes that the few saints there are striving to build up the work. She relates an account of their efforts to visit and cheer the sick and afflicted, also of a call and social evening spent with the family of one of the elders in the field. Bro. Frederick Gregory had labored acceptably of late at that point.

Sr. Ida M. Brown, of Sarepta, Ontario, writes of blessings received in answer to prayer, also when distressed by sickness. She rejoices in the gospel as the word and power of God unto salvation. It is well that faithful women and men throughout the land are blessed of God and made witnesses for him.

The notice in last week's issue caused the return to Bro. H. A. Stebbins of the volume that he advertised for, therefore he does not desire the duplicates.

Prof. Eldridge, of Montreal, who has traveled extensively in Alaska of late, claims to have discovered a buried city, revealed by some recent disturbance of nature's forces, showing art work and civilization similar to that of Central American cities. Paper containing account sent us by Bro. I. N. W. Cooper.

The New York State Legislature has passed the bill creating the greater city of New York, which now goes before the mayors of New York, Brooklyn, and Long Island City for approval. Their action, it is said, will be favorable, also that of the Governor, when the bill will become a law. The area of the new city is 317.77 square miles and its population according to official estimates will, January 1, 1898, be 3,400,000, making it the second largest city in the world.

June 20 is the day officially fixed for the celebration of Queen Victoria's sixty years' reign.

A tornado swept down upon the town of Arlington, Georgia, March 22, and struck the public school, utterly destroying it, and burying pupils and teachers in the ruins. Nine were killed outright and a number injured.

Northern and Southern points continue to report widespread ruin and disaster results from the floods. Latest advices report the waters receding.

Cubans gained a decided victory over the Spanish guerilla force in Havana Province of late, cutting the Spanish force to pieces.

On the 25th the Cretans attacked a Turkish position at Malaxa, outside of Suda, and drove the Turkish forces back until they gained a decided and important victory, and now occupy a strong strategic position. During the engagement the Turkish squadron opened fire on the Cretans, but with little or no effect. The foreign squadron also bombarded the Cretans for about ten minutes, but without driving them to retreat.

The Cretan situation has materially changed during the past week. On Sunday, March 21, Turks at Tokat, in the Sivas district of Asia Minor, attacked and massacred one hundred Armenians while the latter were in a church, and continued the work of murder and pillage for eight hours. Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador at Constantinople and other ambassadors remonstrated with the Sultan's government and as a result two Turkish officials at Tokat were dismissed. This action was unsatisfactory and fresh representations were made to the Porte, setting forth that serious consequences would follow the failure of the Sultan to really punish those responsible for the massacre.

The Sultan has since pursued a crafty policy, evidently relying upon Russia for support and indicating to his people that he had so far been supported and would continue to be sustained by the majority powers of Europe. English sentiment is strongly aroused and the British government has shown substantial evidences of yielding to it, by the strong measures taken to bring the Sultan to more decisive action in preserving order in his domain and protecting the Christian population. England has openly threatened to withdraw from the Cretan blockade, and France and other powers show signs of following suit.

Advices dated March 25 state that the recent massacre at Tokat, the danger of further outbreaks in Anatolia, and the action of the Porte in semi-officially pointing out to the Turkish press and provincial officials that the blockade of Crete by the fleets of the powers, etc., was a triumph for the policy of the Sultan, have had their effect in showing that the Christians in Armenia are in danger of extermination. Consequently it is semi-officially stated that Great Britain has practically withdrawn from the proposed blockade of Grecian ports, and that France is very strongly inclined to follow her action. The Sultan's advisers are making the best of the situation by pointing out that England's withdrawal is immaterial as Turkey has the support of Russia, Germany, Austria, and other powers.

Leading Spanish officers in Cuba, with few exceptions it is said, concede that Cuba is lost to Spain.

Advices to the London Mail state that Emperor William's maladies increase to such a degree as to threaten his soundness of mind; that a combination of pain, excitability, and depression have caused an alarming condition. The proclamation of a regency under the Emperor's brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, with an advisory council, is hinted at.

Dispatches from Alton and Quincy, Illinois, and from Greenville and Vicksburg, Mississippi, dated March 28, report that flood conditions constantly become more alarming. The Mississippi is rising. The damage has already been very great, but will be comparatively little to what will result if the levees break at Quincy and at lower points. At Greenville every energy is now being used to prevent a crevasse, with hopes of success. While the water is above the regular levees in some places, dirt, lumber, and bags of sand have been used to elevate the embankments above the water level. If the weather continues good it is believed that the entire line of levees along the Mississippi side, a continuous line of nearly four hundred miles, will be made to hold. At Vicksburg the river is but six inches below the highest water since 1862. "The best that can be said is that the levees are being held on both sides of the river under circumstances a little short of desperate. Government bulletins to-day announcing more rains in the upper valleys are most depressing."

Arrivals not noted heretofore include Bro. W. A. McDowell, of Wisconsin, Sr. M. Walker, of Beaconsfield, Iowa, Bro. R. J. Anthony, of the Rocky Mountain mission, and Bro. C. Scott.

A cyclone destroyed valuable property at Austin, Texas, March 28.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Be still and strong.

O man, my brother, hold thy sobbing breath,
And keep thy soul's large window pure from wrong!
That so, as life's appointment issueth,
Thy vision may be clear to watch along
The sunset consummation lights of death!

SELECT READING FOR APRIL MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

"FIRST pure, then peaceable," is the divine order of precedence. If we would have peace in our lives, or in our households, we must first have purity. How shall we transmute the innocency of the child into the purity of the man or woman? "Keep thyself pure" is God's command. Purity is freedom from all that contaminates and defiles. Whether it shall be secured for their children depends largely upon the care taken of them by their parents. There seems to be a close connection between cleanliness and purity. God's way of teaching purity to his ancient people (rather, his way of making it an ingrained part of their nature), was by the washings in clean water; the robes of the priests "of fine linen, clean and white;" the perfect cleanliness of all vessels used in his sanctuary; the "without spot or blemish" required of every sacrifice offered to him. Similar means will teach the same lesson in our homes. See that the child's skin is kept clean by bathing in pure water; that its clothes, no matter how coarse and patched, are clean and whole; that the dishes from which it eats and the bed in which it sleeps are clean. Dirt and indecency seem to be twin brothers. Do not shock or destroy the child's modesty by undue exposure of its person. We have seen sensitive children sob as though their hearts would break on being undressed in the presence of strangers. On the other hand, we see children who delight in being naked, who dance and shout in ecstasy if they can escape from their bath undressed. This is no sign of lack of modesty, and should not be treated as such. We saw in babyhood how the child delights in his own body; it is a perfectly natural, innocent delight, felt undoubtedly by Adam and Eve before sin drove them to make a garment of fig leaves. Instead of crying, "Shame! shame!" to the little one when he unduly exposes his person, and thus planting in his mind the seeds of suspicion and impure thought, we can teach that some parts of our body are to be covered, not because they are less pure than others—for why are we to call that which God has made "common or unclean?"—but because custom so requires. This, translated by wise mother love into his own language, he can and will understand.

Guard your children against the contamination arising from hearing coarse jokes, vulgar allusions, or lewd stories; sometimes, we grieve to say, these are heard even around the home fireside; often the danger comes from bad associates; in the country, farmhands too often sow the seeds of impurity in your boys' minds; in town the danger comes from the education of the street, for the street is an educator just as much as the home, or the school, or the church; and since it is so, its moral atmosphere should be as pure as either. We all know that it is not, and that it never can be so long as one dram-shop opens on it, for to the dram-shop the moral pollution of the community naturally gravitates; there is no other place where virtue is so lightly esteemed, where lewd stories and coarse allusions are so rife. There are other demoralizing influences beside the dram-shop. Often a store is made the rallying-point of the village, where, night after night, men—and, we blush to say it, Christian fathers—congregate, and spend the hours that ought to be devoted to wife and children, in smoking, talking politics or gossip, and telling such stories as they would blush to have their wives and daughters hear. They may be, in the main, well-meaning men, but they cannot avoid being smirched by such associations. They endanger the purity of the home by bringing into its atmosphere, all unconsciously to themselves, something of the impurity of their nightly associations. If you would have your sons and daughters grow up pure, beware what influences you bring into the home, as well as what influence you expose them to outside of it.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

"The first word that jars upon one's inborn instinct of modesty must be avoided. The story that, while not being very wrong, is yet not such a story as one would wish to tell one's mother, or one's younger sister; the jest about matters that should be held in sacred silence; the little things, some of them so small that they can scarcely be mentioned, but which at first brings a blush to the cheek and a little sensitive feeling of wounded modesty to the heart, all these should be carefully avoided. The involuntary repulsion which comes at first is a danger signal, and one which ought not to be passed unnoticed.

"If you are thrown into casual intercourse with companions who are tempted to indulge in fallings of this kind, shun them, whatever their other attractions may be. If a book comes into your hands that you feel is in ever so subtle a sense a book that will rub off that bloom of absolute purity, no matter if it is a book that all the rest of your world is reading, lay it aside at once. You cannot be too careful on this score, and unless it is deadened by abuse your instinct will be very sensitive, and will give you ample warning.

"It is one of the fairest of old-fashioned womanly virtues, and it will never pass out of fashion among those who want to be all that is true and sweet and lovable.

"You are pure, you say: are your thoughts as white
As the snow that falls with the midnight's hush?
Could you see them blazoned in letters of light
For the world to see, and feel no blush?"

"If you stood in the court of heaven, mid swift,
Glad greetings of loved ones who know no wrong,
Could you bare your heart to them all and lift Unshrinking eyes to that spotless throng?"

"The absolutely pure heart will retain its purity by refusing to absorb or be soiled by impurity. There is a little plant that grows sometimes in the shaft of a coal mine with a blossom of waxen purity. There it hangs in the midst of the flying coal dust, where everything else becomes laden with grime, but if it was protected by glass it could not be more spotless. It is the nature of the petal, its own exquisite enamel, which shields it, even where the very atmosphere is charged with impurity. Let your hearts be like that waxen blossom, so pure that nothing that is not spotlessly pure can rest within them."

The principles set forth in the White Cross obligations are such as should be adopted by every Latter Day Saint. The obligations for men are:—

1. To treat all women with respect, and endeavor to protect them from wrong and degradation.

2. To endeavor to put down all indecent language and coarse jests.

3. To maintain the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women.

4. To endeavor to spread these principles among my companions, and try to help my younger brothers.

5. To use all possible means to fulfill the command, "Keep thyself pure."

For women they are:—

1. To uphold the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women.

2. To be modest in language, behavior, and dress.

3. To avoid all conversation, reading, art, and amusements which may put impure thoughts into my mind.

4. To guard the purity of others, especially of the young.

5. To strive after the special blessing promised to the pure in heart.

Teach your children that the law of right demands as much of men as of women, of boys as of girls. "Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely," "honest," or of "good report" are profitable alike for those of either sex.

THE TWO-TEXT SYSTEM.

FOLLOWING is an extract from a private letter from a sister—the Clinton, Missouri, district superintendent—in answer to the question by her assistant, as to what her ideas are regarding the uniformity of texts:—

"You ask my opinion of the Quarterlies. Do you know the same question is up concerning the International Lesson Leaves? Well, what principle must we all look to as a key for the solution of it? Perhaps you may obtain it for yourself if I ask you a question. In the prophecy of Enoch we find the thought shadowed forth that all things temporal are in likeness of things spiritual. Taking it for granted, then, that teaching is teaching, whatever the field, I would ask, in secular work which should the day-teacher consider to be the most important, his own convenience or the child's needs? Why not say, "What a beautiful thing it would be to have geometry taught in all the grades at the same time? If there are different teachers, the superintendent could map out the lesson for each, all at once, and it would be more convenient; if all grades are under one teacher, he could save multiplying the number of classes by forcing all the children to study the same at the same time."

"But," you exclaim, "the case is different; all children are not able to study geometry at the same age, and should not do so; while with the Bible the case is surely different."

Ah! but is the case different?

What is the object of all this Sunday school teaching? Is it not to build a spiritual structure, out of spiritual truths, with the principles analyzed, and arranged in their proper order, to serve as a standard by which the child may test the fitness and reliability of all other structures?

We all know we cannot teach a child the principles of fractions in such a manner that he may use these to measure the things of the world by, without having first taught him the four fundamental principles of arithmetic. Then how shall we teach a child the proper analysis of the acts of God in dealing with rebellious, crooked Israel, when we have not taught him how God is pleased to deal with fully obedient, righteous children? We may throw in a few explanatory assertions of our own, and say to our consciences, "We have completed the picture in the child's mind." But have we done so? How long does it take to teach a child the theory of the pure gospel? Will a few sentences do it? If so, then you and I should have been perfect long ago.

The Roman Catholic says, "Give me a child until he is eight, and I care not who has him afterward." And does he waste his time in beginning at the middle of his work? Perhaps you have already caught a glimmering of my position. But while the people are in the undeveloped condition they are to-day, I would not dare to plead for the real truths at the bottom of the matter in speaking before the masses; but may I tell them to you that you may judge righteously of the middle course?

A class is before me. They have never been in Sunday school before, or at least under teachers having the true light. Shall I begin talking about Paul and his work? The Quarterly may be treating on that subject. Is my class ready for it? Sr. Miller, one child has just as much right to demand of me as a teacher that I begin at the fundamental truths of the gospel, and slowly and patiently follow up the study of it, using such parts of the Bible or any other Scripture as is needed to build within him a proper spiritual structure, as any other child. And if my child starts to Sunday school just when the Quar- terlies are in the middle of the New Testament, will it receive this at my hands as well as it would when the lessons began with Jesus and his teachings?

Do not say the parents should have taught these things. Why not let them do it all? But why can we not be as rational in Sunday school teaching as in day school teaching after all? Establish a course of study for the assistance of those unskilled in selection, and make BOOKS, not periodicals, to be placed in the hands of the teachers as texts to be used with discretion and skill.

Anyone has sense enough to know that no one can dictate what page of a day school text-book the various children of any certain grade should be studying on February 16! All will depend on the length of time they have been at study, on the ability of the teacher and children; and many things hinder such a dictation.

Is it any more rational to dictate such a thing in Sunday school work? "But, oh! what a radical position this is, Sr. Goff! I never could advocate this even though I believed it; for this would do away with the Quarterlies, and none would accept it." Just so; neither can I to the masses. But there is a middle ground. The people must have Quarterlies to be in fashion. Can we not, however, trust the Spirit that has already prompted the committee whose business it was to look into this matter and let well enough alone? They teach the gospel to little children first. Then afterwards the little ones can see how naughty it was for ancient Israel to reject this gospel first, for they have a standard to measure their actions by, also a knowledge of what they lost by it.

Thinking this question has not been canvassed as thoroughly as it might, and feeling every teacher has had like experience in having new and untaught pupils come into their class when the lessons are in the midst of "Paul's travels" and "miracles of Jesus," without any previous knowledge of who they were or from whence they came, and longed for some one—for his own benefit and for the benefit of the rest of the class—as teacher to take the little tot to his knee and teach him the "A B C's" of the gospel (creation, fall, and redemption, etc.), as would be done for one not knowing his "letters" in a day-school when the least class, or grade is too far advanced for his small comprehension, I send the above as "food for thought." Then if the "Primary Question Books" are not suitable for this work, let us have previous lessons of Primary Quarterlies put into book form—or something better will not be objectionable. This done, a uniformity of texts may obtain with favorable results. E. M.

JONESPORT, Me., March 15.

Editors Herald.—In looking back over the past year, as the conference year is almost at an end, I can see I have made some mistakes; notwithstanding I have watched myself very closely, and as I cannot retract, I shall try to profit for the incoming year by the mistakes of the past.

This is a grand and glorious work, and there is so much to be accomplished, and so many difficulties to surmount, and our surroundings by times being anything but pleasant, that unless one studies hard and guards himself, his weak points are liable to be discovered.

I can see that it is very much harder to labor among old acquaintances and relatives than among strangers, and this is in harmony with Jesus' saying, that a prophet hath no honor in his own country and among his own kindred; no matter how good the man, how noble his qualities, how eloquent his preaching, or refined his manners. As a rule the real man is lost sight of. Something new under the sun is wanted, and my opinion is that it is better to change pulpits occasionally.

I labored the first of the winter in new places, between the Eastern and Western districts, to draw the two districts nearer together. I succeeded in getting a hearing and awakening a good interest in at least four places where the gospel had not been planted before, since which time I have labored around the old branches. There is great need of much labor in some of those old places. Think for a moment, a branch of one hundred and forty-three members with no teacher to visit the members and instruct them, and to see that all attend meetings and that they all do their duty in meeting; also no priest to assist the elder in his duties, when there is plenty of good material that could be utilized, and with eighty members in the immediate vicinity of the place of worship, and but from seven to twelve in attendance. Rather bad legislation, and the majority think all is well in Zion. The counsel of the district president is ignored, hence the work moves slowly. A kingdom divided cannot stand. I believe it better to heed the Apostle Paul's injunction, to be all of one mind. There should be some changes made here, and I trust the missionary in charge this coming year will labor to that end.

I trust that the coming year some may profit by the mistakes of the past, and let us get to work with a will.

Hastily,

S. O. FOSS.

BRUNER, Missouri, March 19.

Editors Herald.—I have not been sleeping; I have tried to do whatever I could find to do, working or preaching as required. I have preached in four different directions from home, from seven to twenty miles, and have talked many a sermon by the way. This conference year I have blessed three children, preached seventy-six times, administered thirty-five times, baptized eighteen, confirmed twenty, preached three funeral sermons. We have met with some opposition of course, but I would rather meet with a little opposition where I go. It gives one a chance to talk and explain; others that we did not know would want to make our acquaintance for the express purpose of learning of the gospel. Those that I have baptized understand the work and seem firm as can be. Would love to be with you at conference. God be with you.

Your brother,

Editors Herald:—As the toughest and hardest plants are not reared in "the sheltered garden or the hothouse, but on the rugged Alpine cliffs, where storms beat most violently;" as the trees of the forest become stronger as they are lashed by furious winds; as "peril is the very element in which power is developed;" so it is with this great work that we all so much love;—those who oppose and fight against it with their might only afford it an opportunity to manifest its strength and defensibility. Thus we have learned by experience to contemplate, in optimistic mood, the varied oppositions that are brought to bear upon the truth.

The debate at Nashville, Missouri, between Bro. W. C. Cather and W. W. Blalock, of the Disciples, we think was a grand success in our favor. The writer, acting as moderator for Bro. Cather during the entire discussion, is able to bear testimony that the cause was well defended and that the work will not suffer from any part of the debate. Mr. Blalock, understanding that Bro. Cather had never debated any, and that he had not even been long in the work, thought he had only a boy to deal with, consequently he anticipated an easy time and in fact a walkover, and the first evening he was rather blustery and could not conceal the feeling that he thought he had a bonanza; said that he would "tend to him" (Bro. Cather); but in our way of thinking he grew weaker from the first night to the last and Bro. Cather, not being experienced to begin with, waxed mightier to the last.

On the first proposition, Mr. Blalock, instead of trying to answer Bro. Cather's arguments to any extent, thought he could better "dig out Mormonism," as he was pleased to term it, by reading from the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and other books, garbling, perverting, stopping at commas, and twisting and misrepresenting in general. Bro. Cather would reread and show how his opponent garbled the passages and tried to make the people think there were things in the books that were really not there, until it became very apparent to the people, including the Disciple brethren, that Mr. Blalock was so grossly misrepresenting that it was the next thing to if not outright lying. It was obvious which way the audience thought the debate was going by the way they cheered Bro. Cather when he would show up those garbled readings and reveal the depth to which his opponent would stoop in his crazy endeavor to "dig out Mormonism." The frequent roof-raising applause coming from three fourths of an audience of four hundred people only told Mr. Blalock that he was losing ground very rapidly.

On the second proposition Mr. Blalock did not set up much for Bro. Cather to tear down; twelve dead apostles was about all he set up; so Bro. Cather set his church up for him to some extent, or rather showed what the church was like that is described in the New Testament, and then showed plainly from the Bible, and also from books and publications of the Disciple Church, that their church was not identical in faith, organization, doctrine, teaching, nor practice. In proving these various points Bro. Cather nailed them down in a way that was convincing, and on his last speech he was blessed with liberty more than usual, and came in on the "home stretch" (pardon this slang) with banner waving victoriously for the truth amid the exultant cheers of his auditors. Each speaker occupied his full time on each speech on both propositions. When time was called on Bro. Cather's last speech, there arose a man in the audience and asked permission to speak a word, when an elder of the Disciples arose and objected. The man in the audience then marched up to the table where Bro. Cather sat and emptied a sack of money, which rattled beautifully and spread all over the table, stating that the people of Nashville wished to manifest their appreciation of Mr. Cather's efforts in that way; whereupon the congregation gave a prolonged cheer. When the applause subsided, Mr. Blalock arose and said that he did not now believe any more of Mr. Cather's doctrine than when the debate commenced, but he felt no animosity toward him, and said he wanted to shake hands with Mr. Cather and part friends. Bro. Cather arose and shook hands with him. Mr. Blalock further stated that giving the money to Mr. Cather was nothing more than right; that his brethren paid him for doing his part of the debating, and if those in sympathy with Mr. Cather did not pay him for his efforts they would not be gentlemen. "But," he said, "some people like to make a show of their gifts;" whereupon a man in the audience arose and said, "He [Bro. Cather] did so well I'll raise it another one," and tossed up another dollar on the table. Then the audience roared. Another man arose and said, "Yes, and I'll raise it another." When the people got through cheering Mr. Blalock had taken his seat. The purse and all amounted to thirty-four dollars. Bro. Cather then arose and stated that he did not believe any more in the Disciples' Church than he did before, nor so much, because the debate had afforded or caused him to make a more thorough investigation of Discipleism than ever before, hence he saw its weakness more plainly. He also said that he thought Mr. Blalock had been an instrument in his hands in assisting him to more firmly plant the cause of truth in that place. Thus closed the debate.

The close of the first proposition was on Saturday evening. Mr. Blalock had announced that he would not debate on Sunday, and that he expected to preach on Sunday at eleven and 7:30. Some of our friends, thinking he ought to have divided the time with us, went and obtained the use of the school-house near the church, borrowed chairs from the Methodist church, provided lights, etc., and asked us to occupy. We therefore announced on Saturday evening that the writer would preach twice on Sunday. The house was nearly full at eleven, there being three services in a stone's throw of each other, and at 7:30, the house was literally packed. We preached both times with much liberty.

Before the debate the Disciple folks told Bro. Cather that they would not shut him out of the house, but they would "dig" him out; that was when they were negotiating for the debate. But failing to "dig" him out in their way, they voted, after the debate to shut him out, and that at a special meeting, after Bro. Cather had asked for the house in which to hold a funeral service; so he invited the people to the cemetery, where he preached the funeral sermon to a large crowd. Thus they have admitted by their own actions that they have not "dug" up which to them is a solace to call "Mormonism."

Bro. Cather has made many zealous friends for the cause in and around Nashville. Several have declared their intention of soon becoming Latter Day Saints by baptism. But there is no place now where preaching can be done at that place. It would be well to go there with a tent as soon as warm weather sets in. It should be looked after by some one in case Bro. Cather is sent elsewhere the coming year.

JONESPORT, Maine, March 12, 1897.

Editors Herald:—I inclose an extract from a letter written by G. R. Lederer, Editor of the Israelite Indeed, in June 8, 1867. It was in answer to a question which I asked him after reading what G. J. Adams wrote concerning Christ's mother being of the tribe of Levi. If you think the extract would give any light you can use it.

Yours,
M. MANSFELD.

"Brother Adams is mistaken in believing Mary to have been of the tribe of Levi; he thinks so because Elizabeth was her cousin. This, however, does not necessarily lead to the conclusion to which Brother Adams derived. A sister of Mary's mother married a priest; thus Elizabeth became Mary's cousin. Had Mary been of the tribe of Levi and not of Judah, she would not have been compelled to go to Bethlehem to be taxed. The Romans did not respect Jewish laws, and therefore the women were not counted to their husband's tribe.

"Peace be with you.

"Your brother in hope,

RAVENDEN SPRINGS, Ark., March 22.

Editors Herald:—I herewith forward you some clippings from a number of papers from which it may be seen that the distinction between us and the Utah Church is brought in a conspicuous manner to the notice of the reading public. We propose to let no opportunity slip wherein we are able to give publicity to this difference; at the same time I readily and gladly accord to these young missionaries all the privileges and respect I ask for myself. They have the same right to speak and be heard that I have, and while I most contemptuously spurn the principles they hold which make the distinction I have no will, right, or desire to question their sincerity or to withdraw respect from them as individuals.

I always feel so much better when occupying a high plane of broad, liberal views than when I am crowded into a stingy chasm of congestive narrowness, that you may always expect to find me in this great social world giving to others all, if not a little more, than I ask for myself. The weary and footsore of all classes have ever found a cordial welcome beneath my humble domicile, the Utah elders not excepted. We invite them to call, but their reticence stands challenged.

We propose to chase the Devil around the stump in a most lively manner. Their uneasiness soon becomes apparent; they chafe under the collar; they step outside their prescribed traces; and in their confusion they do actually discuss their abandoned claims; and lo, they soon feel the irksomeness of their yoke and hie out for more quiet quarters. O, how I thank my God that he requires the defense of no principle we are ashamed of! In this great world I always enjoy having people attack our views in a genteel way, granting an opportunity of defense, and would not give a superannuated fig for any principle, religious or political, that will not sustain inviolate the most rigid examination.

I never yet saw a stupid ass staggering beneath an illy-proportioned load but my sympathies were evoked, and why should I not pity my fellows when it becomes their grewsome duty to defend shameless, ignoble doctrines that, like parasites, attach to the blessed message of peace. A wail of distress summoned my presence where a boy had an ugly thorn in his foot, and when I could neither encourage by reason nor coax him, I resolutely coerced the lad by main force while I extracted the thorn. Feign would I wrench from the hands of these young men the instrument of their own torture. But nay! God will

"In nameless ways be good and kind
But never force the human mind."

Why should I seek to do more? I can force strong, cogent arguments upon their minds. I will force truth home in a relentless manner and be sure that people understand that it is principles, not people, that I deal with; then contentedly leave the sequel with God and the hearers. D. R. BALDWIN.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 23.

Editors Herald:—After a silence of more than fifteen months I will venture once more to enter your sanctum, not however with the idea of minutely writing up all interesting items that have fallen under my observation for the past two years. Let me assure the household of faith that "my harp" has not been "hung upon the willow," but I have been diligent in blowing the gospel trumpet, inviting one and all to consider the promises of God, as contained in the divine message.

During the summer season, in company with Bro. A. M. Chase, inhabited the "gospel tent," in telling the story of divine love in new places, and many hundreds of people were saluted with the "glad tidings" by the preached and printed word. In my humble opinion the future alone shall reveal the good that was accomplished. Twelve were added at one place, and many others continue to investigate.

The early winter I was at Allendale, an old gospel "stamping ground." There was a revival wave throughout that section of "black mud and big red apples;" nevertheless some interest was had and one baptism. I next occupied at the Latta schoolhouse, and two were united to the family whose names are written in heaven. Spent a month in Lucas County, preaching in Lucas, Spring Hill, and Lipe schoolhouses. At the first place the attendance was fair notwithstanding snow and mud.

At a revival meeting held at Woodburn the wife and daughter of the postmaster went insane on the same day. The wife was sent to Clarinda and in a few days was sent back in her coffin. While at the Lipe the coldest of the winter was upon us, and there was small audience but manifest interest upon the part of a few. Lately in company with Bro. W. T. Shakespeare, we visited Monroe County, preaching at the Morris schoolhouse; at Foster we occupied the Baptist church; the attendance and interest most excellent. At Hiteman we had some good meetings with the attendance of the Holy Spirit. There has lately been a marvelous healing there. May God keep them humble and pure of action.

The outlook for the cause throughout this district is quite promising, and the late two-days' meetings resulted in good with one exception. Snowing all day, but not cold.

ROUND VALLEY, Cal., March 1.

Editors Herald:—Desiring to help along the work of Christ let me give a short report as pertaining to this part of the earth. The help which was craved came along with Elder Thomas Daley and is now exerting its force in a manner perceptible to those who are not blind and who delight in that which is good. The saints tried to settle all difficulties existing among themselves before the arrival of Bro. Daley, thus showing a disposition to serve their Master. After laboring in the vicinity of the Lookout saints, Bro. Daley came to Round Valley last week. Discharging his duty here, he was not reluctant when on Saturday afternoon he found plenty of water fresh and at least cool, just from the snowy mountains surrounding, to baptize Bro. George Derr, confirming him the same afternoon.

Bro. C. Rice, of Round Valley, during the week had obtained consent of the trustees of the Congregational Church at Adin to allow us the use of their churchhouse, and also announced for Bro. Daley to speak there Sunday; so Sunday morning four carriages were on their way through deep mud and over rocky roads, carrying their precious loads towards town; but while on the way Bro. Rice was stopped by the stage driver, who handed him a letter which notified us that we could not use the churchhouse for preaching, as they considered us not orthodox. But onward is the cry of God's people, so we urged our teams forward with a will and arrived in Adin at noon, and in two hours arrangements were made for hall, and Bro. Daley's care. The hall furnished with seats, and warmed, people notified of change of place of meeting, and a card of notice of change tacked alongside of door on churchhouse; and the result of all was a large turnout, and that too by the most liberal and, of course, best, and by no means poorest or smallest part of the population of Adin.

Bro. Daley remained in Adin and preached while there, delivering six sermons ere Saturday morning, when I came to convey him to the residence of Bro. C. A. Higgins, to initiate Sr. Higgins into the kingdom, and on Monday morning, Sr. Katie Higgins, making three souls which have entered in at the gate during Bro. Daley's stay, and more nigh the kingdom are here. But Bro. Daley started Monday morning to go home to his wife who is sick in Sacramento Valley; and thus we are again without an elder here. But we pray there soon may be some one here again to do this work for the Master.

Bro. Daley is competent for this country, having allayed prejudice and informed people of some of our doctrine. We would like to see the work pushed along. There are many also outside of the church who would welcome his return, but as the laborers are few we readily submit to Him who doeth all things well, hoping this country will not be forgotten or forsaken by the laborers.

E. A. H. GUTZMAN.

GALIEN, Mich., March 22.

Editors Herald:—I have been holding meetings here two weeks, preaching every night and twice on Sundays, and shall continue as long as the interest lasts. I have one name for baptism and will have more before we close. The saints join in saying that there has not been such an awakening in Galien for years as now. Yesterday (Sunday) I preached in the morning; preached a funeral sermon at two p. m., and again in the evening. Was quite tired when through. It is said there are those who have never been known to attend our meetings that are now very much interested.

Bro. E. A. Blakeslee was home from the capital over Sunday and seemed wonderfully pleased to see such an interest. Buchanan saints are calling for me, and I am wanted at Troy, and two or three other places in this part of Michigan. I shall not find time to attend General Conference, and hardly think I would be needed there.

I shall be pleased to labor the coming year wherever I can do the most good in harmony with the missionary in charge and local authority. I wish to govern myself so that my only motive shall be to build up the work and the salvation of souls and lose sight of territorial rights which serve to protect largely those whose leading motive apparently seems to be personal glorification against the encroachments of others, which is clearly an exhibition of ministerial jealousy.

Yours in bonds,
H. C. BRONSON.

CATAWBA ISLAND, O., March 23.

Editors Herald:—Last spring Bro. Peter Peterson came over here from Canada. By a consistent life, putting out the printed word, and conversing he had James Welsh ready for baptism; others interested. Four have now been baptized and four more express themselves as ready soon.

How this work would spread if everywhere the saints would do as Bro. Peterson has done. The missionary often finds his appointment but poorly advertised and from year to year absolutely nothing done by many saints to warn their neighbor, which God has made their sacred and solemn duty.

Those baptized here and those interested are a good class of people. The usual amount of nonsense has gone the rounds since the work begun here, but the fair-minded have done much for us in moulding sentiment in our favor. A Mrs. Bergderfer has aided me much in directing the song service, a Mrs. Davis presiding at the organ. Service rendered so cheerfully is large help. Ladies working for the maintenance of a union Sunday school first opened the church to me.

This time the three trustees were all consulted and consented, being willing all should hear and judge for themselves, and that is where God placed the responsibility. A woman is reported to have said she would guard the church door with a club so I should not enter, but she did not appear; evidently her better judgment came to her rescue. May that zeal yet furnish her better fruitage. Many have vied with each other in showing me kindness and hospitality. May the Lord reward them.

In a few days my work will be done in the Pittsburg and Kirtland district for this conference year. Where my labors shall be next is to be determined by the conference. The division of the district, I believe, will be advantageous, but not all results seen at once.

At the late conference at Blake Mills that busy man, George Hulmes, was placed in charge of district. I learned to sincerely love him by a closer association. Would that he was entirely free from worldly toil and to labor entirely for God. In faith, perseverance, and patient forbearance he will do what he can.

The preaching at the late conference was of a very high order. Bro. F. J. Ebeling, under the blessing of God, delivered fresh thought on old topics refreshing to all; by humility and diligence his star will shine on and on. The ministrations of Brn. Hulmes and I. M. Smith were also as manna to the soul. Bro. Short seemed at his best in his share of the conference. Pittsburg and Wheeling have long won the laurels in point of financial aid, and while they still duplicated their past efforts, Cleveland rather outstripped all in the last report when their numbers and circumstances are considered as also their heavy local expense.

Bro. L. W. Powell was installed president of Cleveland branch a few days since. That little Welshman has invented a corn planter for one, two, or three rows, (the machine for three rows adjustable for several kinds of seeds, and five rows, more or less,) that in my opinion bids fair to take the field over others. It will be far cheaper, do more, and do it easier. Those in the line of such manufacturing have made some proposals. How I would like to see manufacturing develop among the business men of the church. Can some of them buy Bro. Powell out and he return to do his Master's bidding in the vineyard of the Lord? His address is Temple, Lake County, Ohio.

Laboring under Bro. Griffith's direction has been blessed, and God's directing him manifest. I have enjoyed the year of toil, being blessed of God and sustained by his people.

KEWANEE, Ill., March 15.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have held meetings at Etherly, Dahinda, and other places. I baptized one at Dahinda, January 31, and two in Rock Island last Sunday. Last Friday evening I closed a discussion with Rev. Charles Akers, of the "Church of God," "Evening Lights," etc., etc. I affirmed the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to be in fact the Church of God and accepted of him. My opponent affirmed the church of which he is a member, etc., King James Translation the standard of appeal, the debate governed by extracts from "Hedge's Rules of Logic."

It was held at Audalusia, Rock Island County, Illinois. My opponent's moderator was Rev. Thomas Nelson, a minister of his own church. The Rev. Mr. Wassen, of the United Brethren, acted as my moderator on the first proposition. When Bro. James McKiernan arrived my moderator requested that I select him on the last proposition.

Rev. Charles Akers is a gentleman, so far as language is concerned. The "two priesthoods" were quite a strain on his powers of argument and endurance. He proved from Hebrews what no one disputed, that Christ was a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec; that he was the head of the body. He argued that to have high priests in the church they must continue forever. Was not that funny? But it was funnier still when I read Hebrews 7:3, where it said that Melchisedec abideth a "priest continually," and that Moses, a type of Christ, Prophet, Priest, and King, appeared upon the mount with Elias. (Matt. 17:3.) Inasmuch as he ran off into the affirmative on this point, I gave him the privilege of proving that high priests did not minister unto the spirits in prison as Christ went to minister unto them. (1 Peter 3:18-20; 4:6.) Our ears were not quick enough to hear his answer upon this point. Ah, me! that doubtful passage! At last he concluded that if I could prove by the New Testament that there was another high priest in the church besides Christ, he would yield the point. I had repeatedly quoted John 20:21, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." Christ was a priest, a High Priest forever. The disciples were sent as he was sent. This would not satisfy my opponent. He wanted just one passage from the new Testament when it stated in those words that there was another high priest besides Christ in the church. I showed the reasonableness of his demand as follows: The Acts and epistles are only a few letters, written to men or churches, who were supposed to understand largely the gospel system, and many things needed not to be stated, but to be referred to convey the writer's thoughts upon the subject. They were in many ways imperfect, only a part of the many letters written, and he wanted me to sustain a perfect system with an imperfect history. Wasn't that rich? Unfortunately for him I remembered the rule that the King James' Version of the Bible was the standard of appeal. He tried to confine me to the New Testament only. The people had grasped the position. Said they, "If you prove your two priesthoods, the victory is yours; if you don't your cause is lost." I took this as a compliment; I had gotten the issue down to these two points. The people saw it. This was what I had tried for.

I referred my opponent to Zechariah 3, which shows that a Joshua, a "high priest," "should judge the house of God" "and keep his courts." Verse 9 shows that the iniquity of that land was to be removed in one day; verse 10 that every man should call his neighbor under the vine and under the fig tree. I asked him to prove that this prophecy had come to pass, if he could. He said, "We will leave that to the people." Well, I had a high priest over the house, for he was to judge it. Then the Aaronic priesthood. I cited Malachi 3 and many other texts showing the Aaronic priesthood to be forever. But of course "forever did not mean forever." He said that the feast of the passover was forever, but it was an accepted fact that all the Jewish ordinances were abolished. But he could hardly explain why the "feast of the tabernacles" is to be kept after the great battle at Jerusalem, which is yet to take place. (Zech. 14:3-16.)

Commenting upon Malachi 3; he had John the Baptist as messenger of the covenant. That prophecy referred to Christ's first coming. You can't believe how willing I was to help him interpret the third and fourth verses. "And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness; then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord as in days of old, and as in former years." Those two verses did me good, but it was when I showed my opponent that the offering in righteousness that the sons of Levi offered at Christ's first coming was the causing of the people to put the Lamb of God to death; that they stirred up the people to crucify Christ. I asked him if that offering in righteousness on the part of the sons of Levi was pleasant unto the Lord as in days of old. The absurdity of his position was apparent to none more plainly than to himself. Without doubt I had established the fact that the sons of Levi (Aaronic priests) should minister at Christ's second coming. It did not take any weight from my conclusion when I added that John the Baptist was an Aaronic priest and that Christ recognized his administration.

He did not get along very well with Zechariah 2:3, 4. He did not show who the young man was not. But I showed who he was, and I also requested him to prove that Joseph Smith was not the young man, who received the "angel's message." He admitted that it might be harder to prove that it was not Joseph Smith than to prove it was him. This he admitted, and did not deny an apostasy. So I conclude that the cause of the Lord did not suffer on the first proposition. At the close of it the Rev. Wassen said, "You made out a better case with your two priest-hoods than I thought you would." These are a few of the points advanced; you may have them for what they are worth:—

My opponent's proposition started by his affirming that he belonged to the true church—the one body—the glorious body of Christ. He did not take any position, only that he belonged to the church that Christ established. He turned to his own experience, then he showed that there was a foundation of apostles, prophets, Christ Jesus being the chief corner stone. But all his apostles and prophets were dead ones. He had their writings; that was enough. But I asked him why he wanted living elders and deacons and dead apostles and prophets. He gave as reason for this that Timothy was instructed concerning elders and deacons, therefore they were standing ministers in the church. I really felt sorry for him, but my grief allowed me to prove that besides the twelve apostles seven others were called, so his argument fell to the ground. An examination of Ephesians 4 showed that dead apostles and prophets would not do. At first he would not give me anything to answer, so after his second speech I set up an alibi. This threw him into the negative, nor did he take his affirmative until his closing speech. He took the position that Christ was the head of the church, that she had no other head; but he added, "As the husband is the head of the wife, so Christ was the head of the church." And, simple enough, I asked "if a wife did not have a head of her own also." He said that God added to the church. He ignored the principle that when men act under God's command it is called God's work. But I showed that the church was a mother—the mother of the faithful; so I commented that he had children born without a mother, and a woman without a head, and this is his "glorious body of Christ." He also said the church was the wife of Christ. I insisted that she was only the bride, the betrothed of Christ; that the church was on trial; that a marriage was to be consummated, but had not yet taken place.

My opponent said that if my reasoning was correct we were all illegitimate children. But I quoted John 3:16. It says Christ is "the only begotten Son of God." Then we were some other kind of sons, if sons at all. I showed from 1 John 3:2 that we were not yet like Christ, and from Ephesians 1 and other places that we were only adopted sons of God; but that when Christ should appear we should be like Christ, for he will marry his church.

He also admitted an apostasy; he had the church coming out of the wilderness in about the fifteenth or sixteenth century. I showed his restoration was only "reformed Romanism" and that it did not come by the ministrations of an angel. He had it long before the restoration of Palestine, therefore he was too early.

These and other things that would "make you tired," kind reader, he advanced. His moderator said that the reason I was carrying was not because we had the truth, but because I was better educated and had more wit. My opponent had seven months to prepare. My opponent wanted to close the debate on the third speech of his proposition, because the roads were muddy; but if the roads were muddy the church was almost full of people every night. I agreed for it to close if he would yield his proposition. He would not do it, so I told him to just keep on. Then he appealed to the moderators to close the debate. I said, No, sir; they have nothing to do in that; you agreed to discuss with me, not them. His moderator (a minister in his church) said, "You will have to debate the time agreed upon." I did not see that he disproved my alibi or came up to it either.

I feel pretty well tired. I have held meetings up to time of debate: I am not very well, cold, etc., but I am living yet "if anyone should ask." Well, the more I see of this work and the more I participate in it, the better I like it. I learn that success in this work comes through obedience, resignation, and humility. Trusting for an interest in your prayers, as I pray for Zion I remain,

Yours in the one hope,

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 10.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

THERE are times when the missionary's heart is made glad, cheered by the kindness of saints and friends; and if there is any on earth who can and does fully appreciate acts of kindness and approbation, it is the lonely elder who gives his life and all his energies to preaching this gospel which is everywhere spoken evil against. There are times when love, affection, appreciation, and approval seem to really absorb the man, making his happiness fully and wholly dependent on the actions of others, and a minister should study hard and continually pray for strength to overcome, and above all for that very necessary gift, "wisdom," to so conduct himself before God and man that he may have the approval of both, of God especially, and of men if by doing so he does not sacrifice or compromise principle. When one's life is barren of approval, appreciation, affection, and loyalty, he as a minister is very apt to become stupid and say bitter words so that no one will care to hear him, and he will finally become burdened with overanxiety, which is the poison of life and the parent of many sins and miseries. Why, then, allow it when we know the future is guided by a Father's hand?

On the 22 of March, our birthday, we passed another milestone in the great race of life. In later years they come and go so rapidly that they are scarcely noticed, but this time we were greatly surprised, when on being invited to spend the day with T. L. and James Flanders, to find that ample preparation had been made for a birthday dinner. We walked two miles in company with our genial and whole-souled brother, C. P. Faul, and on our arrival imagine our surprise to find seated in T. L.'s cozy rooms Bro. T. L. Flanders and family, James Flanders and family, C. Stinemetz and wife, William Flanders and wife, Enos Bray and wife, J. D. Flanders, C. P. Faul, Sisters Jacob Taylor and F. Drowns; also Mr. John Whitechurch and daughter, and Mr. J. M. Harvey and daughter; thirty-nine all told. After we had recovered somewhat from the surprise we were presented with some needed wearing apparel, together with a purse of "free silver," which was to transport us by Nahum's chariot to the General Conference, at Lamoni, Iowa; and of course we have now abandoned the "tie pass" idea and will meet our loved ones at St. Joseph, accompanying them to the conference. Bro. Enos Bray in a well-wordsed speech expressed the sentiments of the saints and friends in the presentation. We tried to answer, but something arising in our throat prevented, and we could only utter our thanks through blinding tears of joy and thankfulness, with a prayer to our Father, "O Lord, help us to live worthy of this love and confidence to the end of our days and the glory shall be thine!" We were then invited to the dining room, where the good sisters had spread a rich repast, and from the solicitations and aid of our hostess "Nancy" as waiter, our "feelings" were again disturbed and we were soon too "full for utterance." Then with song and story the day was passed, bringing joy and gladness to all participating, but to none more than ye missionary; and it will pass into the woof and warp of our history as one of the "bright spots" which will to some extent soften the hard places of adversity.

The next day we were invited to spend the day with Mr. J. M. Harvey and family, near our reunion ground, so beautiful for location, and becoming very popular from the indefatigable efforts and energies, money and means expended by Mr. Harvey, and who says the grounds are ours for reunion purposes free of cost as long as he lives. The saints are first, all others secondary. "Those that are not against us are for us," and we "should find favor and grace," it is written. Already Mr. H. is making preparations for our reunion which will convene on September 3, 1897. All other reunions please take notice and "govern yourselves accordingly."

To-day one more baptized here—Sr. Hannah Drake, a lifelong Baptist, making nine more who have entered the fold here. We are making our home with Bro. and Sr. James Flanders, who are blessed with loving children, with Master "Tom" bringing up the rear at bedtime, with his never-forgotten "bawl," and ye missionaries also "smile."

TWO GENEALOGIES.

THESE two genealogies both fail in giving the lineage of Christ, but are essential in giving the connections from David to Joseph, as we will show in the end of these writings. If the lineage of Christ was not of earthly material, on the father's side, we must turn to the mother's side, and see whether it be an exception or not, as it is only on the mother's side that it can be traced back in the original lineage. In St. Luke 1: 3:—

It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order . . . that thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed.

If following Luke's instructions we will learn there of the lineage of Christ, in the first place we must follow him through the lineage of Elizabeth 1: 5:—

And his wife was of the daughters of Aaron.

So when John was born he was of the lineage of Aaron, by his mother. How about John's father? Now Zacharias,

According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.—Luke 1: 9.

If we turn to 2 Chronicles 26: 18, we read:—

It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the Lord, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honor from the Lord God.

Likewise Exodus 30: 7, 8:—

And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense every morning: when he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn incense upon it. And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at even, he shall burn incense upon it, a perpetual incense before the Lord throughout your generations.

From the testimony brought forth, it goes to show that Zacharias was a son of Aaron. That being the case, and as John was the firstborn son, he had the right to the high priest's office, and when he became thirty years of age, God respected his lineage and sent him to preach the kingdom of heaven was at hand, and endowed him with the Holy Spirit from his birth. Now let us turn to Christ. The angel appeared to Mary and explained to her that she should have a child, and of his honor and glory, and said to her:—

And, behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age.—Luke 1: 36.

Here comes in an evidence that Mary was the cousin of Elizabeth and Elizabeth was born of the daughters of Aaron; consequently Mary was of the same lineage as was Elizabeth, of the lineage of Aaron, and as John was. And when Christ came to be thirty years of age had the full right to the priest's office, and was born of the woman—the church that was organized by Moses in the wilderness. And by the covenant to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. How is he then David's son?

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. . . . The Lord appeared unto him [Joseph] in a dream, saying, . . . that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.—Matt. 1: 18: 20.

From what Matthew says Joseph did not know that Mary was with child, when he first espoused her, until she began to show signs of it, and when he had the dream, he then was married to her. Now when the child was born, then Joseph became stepfather to Jesus Christ, and Joseph being of the tribe of Judah, and of the lineage of David, Jesus Christ became his stepson. I might produce more evidence from the Bible, but this is enough for the present.

PREACH THE WORD.

BRO. S— in a late Herald writes under the above caption. The article in the main is timely and pertinent, yet I think some features somewhat extreme. He asks, "What has the doctrine of predestination, election, total depravity, to do with the salvation of the race?" and then answers, "Verily, nothing."

The brother is in error, for the Bible teaches predestination, election, and foreordination. (See Rom. 8: 29, 30; 9: 1-20; Acts 2: 23; 1 Peter 1: 2; Jer. 1: 5; Jude 4). And as the world to-day has a wrong conception of these subjects it is the duty of God's ministry to expose the wrong, that those who are caught in its meshes may be freed.

Paul wrote on predestination to the Romans, lectured on idolatry to the Athenians, treated on national and domestic questions, and especially of the "social evil."

At Loveland I found half the community believers in Calvinistic predestination, and they were so intrenched in their fateful creed that I could not reach them with the truth until I showed its error, and presented scriptural predestination. Saints and outsiders said I did more good in this than in any other effort.

I remember that nearly a year ago I delivered a sermon in Council Bluffs on "woman's place in the world." The church was packed to the doors. I did not deal with her place in politics, but in the church and home. I was blessed with good liberty. I said nothing directly about baptism, yet I illustrated the liberty vouchsafed to all in the gospel. I have been assured that this sermon interested numbers who had never before been in our church and who have attended more or less ever since. One brother felt outraged that I should speak on such a theme and said he was going to write Bro. Joseph about it; but at the Wednesday night prayer meeting he told me he realized that he was wrong, for he had received a dream during the interval, in which he saw a woman lying prostrate and he standing with one foot on her neck!

I think it the duty of our ministry to deal with "social evils," such as "intemperance," "lust and immorality," "pride," etc. Theosophy is spreading like wildfire, and I for one would like to hear an able sermon against it. I do not know enough about it to expose it, but when I do I shall not fail to do so. I believe it to be the most seductive and Satanic sophistry in existence. We must be prepared to challenge its progress. While we should ever be ready to give a reason for the hope that is in us, still we should be acquainted with the positions of others, and thus be prepared to overthrow their argument.

While the warning of our brother is to be considered and while it may be possible that some of the elders do not preach on "baptism," "laying on of hands," etc., frequently enough, still this does not warrant our brother in stating that the "godly men" of the long ago, "knew nothing of this modern slush." Paul spoke on "predestination," "election," "foreordination," the "woman question," the "social question;" and he did not deem it "slush." And suppose "Calvinism," "higher criticism," and "theosophy" are "slush," you cannot convert a man who believes that way by telling him that it is "slush." You must acquaint yourself with its foibles and then kindly disclose them to him. True, we must teach repentance; but repentance consists in forsaking error; and if men are in error we must tell them of it.

The gospel comprises the whole duty of man to God and man, and while the basic and cardinal principles are those enumerated by the brother, and should receive the first and constant attention of God's ministry, still there are other duties of man and other things essential to complete perfection. God placed the various officers in the church to "edify" the "body of Christ" "that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine." When one goes into a new place, wisdom suggests that the fundamental principles of the gospel be kept constantly forward; but when one is located for several years in a given point, having largely the same audiences he could not possibly hold an audience by preaching on faith and baptism all the time. I find no fault with the brother's motive, but believe his position an extreme one. We should try in every sermon to weave in as much of the first principles as possible; but the world likes variety and progress, and the apostle realized this when he told the Hebrew saints that having obeyed the first principles they should go "on unto perfection." If I have an audience of saints it is not usually wise to preach to them on first principles alone, for they have obeyed them, but I can warn them against the evils and heresies of the world, as well as point out to them their duties.

The notice of lectures in Sunday paper referred to by the brother was undoubtedly by one of the city pastors, and while the subjects may be sensational, the great trouble is that they make them so, they being a series of platitudes and prettily arranged sentences. We must tell the world that "hell" is not an eternal penitentiary; that "heaven" is "not" beyond the bounds of time and space; that the Lord has commanded us to observe the "first day of the week as a day of rest." While the temptation is strong to "pander to the sinful and depraved tastes of sinful men" when one permits personal ambition to dictate, yet he who exposes "theosophy" espouses the cause of woman; and he who "Decries social evils," is not pandering to "sinful men" nor preaching "slush," but is doing his duty as a watchman on Zion's tower. The brother's motive was pure and I love his candor, yet believe an interchange of views is good. We do not criticise his exhortation to preach "repentance" but believe he excludes some of the features of repentance.

Pledging myself to defend all truth and oppose all error,

Yours in Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

DUTY TO THE POOR AND DESTITUTE.

BY SR. EMMA L. ANDERSON.

WE read and hear so much lately about the suffering among the poor and destitute that we are led to wonder what can be the cause of all this evil. Surely there must be something wrong somewhere. But where is it? and what is the remedy? I think it behooves us as Latter Day Saints to try to see that we are not in any way responsible for such a state of things. And also to find out what our duties are to help alleviate the sufferings of the poor and needy, as much as in us lies.

One writer seems to think that a remedy lies in every one's trying to live just as well as they can all over the world. But how much would such a course have tended to alleviate the sufferings of the poor who were starving or freezing in our large cities this present severe winter, if those who had means to help them had have rushed out and bought themselves some fine furniture or expensive clothing, or even appropriated a few thousand dollars to get up a grand ball for the benefit of those who were blessed with an abundance of this world's goods? Can it be that people are hoarding their means in a miserly way, which is causing so much trouble? Was there ever a time when so much means were expended for unnecessary things as now? The unnecessary ornaments and adorning of clothing, the foolish fashions, the jewels, the adorning of our houses and furniture, the adorning of our churches, and even the unnecessary adornment of the graves of the dead? Methinks if the dead could speak they would say. "Give your money for the help of the poor or the spread of the gospel, but waste it not on my grave!" It cannot help the dead, it may help the living. Jesus said, "The poor ye have always with you;" and he told the rich man to "sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and come follow me." And he went away sorrowing, as many would do nowadays, if they thought they must give up their riches in order to follow Christ.

We read of the magnificent temples of India and of the fabulous wealth of the rulers in connection with the terrible famine that has brought death to so many human beings; and it calls to mind the prophetic declarations of the writers of the Book of Mormon concerning the very times in which we live, and saints should heed the warnings therein.

In the Second Book of Nephi, chapter 12, the prophet, looking down to our day, tells the condition the people would be in:—

Yea, they have all gone out of the way; they have become corrupted. Because of pride, and because of false teachers, and false doctrine, their churches have become corrupted; and their churches are lifted up; because of pride, they are puffed up. They rob the poor, because of their fine sanctuaries; they rob the poor, because of their fine clothing; and they persecute the meek, and the poor in heart; because in their pride they are puffed up. They wear stiff necks and high heads; yea, and because of pride, and wickedness, . . . they have all gone astray, save it be a few, who are the humble followers of Christ; nevertheless, they are led, and in many instances they do err, because they are taught by the precepts of men. O the wise, and learned, and the rich, that are puffed up in the pride of their hearts.

Also in chapter 6:—

O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves. . . . But to be learned is good, if they hearken unto the counsels of God. But wo unto the rich . . . for they despise the poor, . . . and their hearts are upon their treasures.

When the word of the Lord came unto Jacob, saying, "Get thou up unto the temple, and declare the word which I shall give thee," among other things Jacob told them, "Ye are lifted up in the pride of your hearts, because of the costliness of your apparel." In the record of Zeniff when the people were in sin they set their hearts upon riches; but those who repented, and turned unto God were commanded by Alma to impart of their substance, according to that which he had. If he had an abundance, he should give more abundantly; if he had but little, he would be required to give but little. And thus they gave of their own free will to every needy, naked soul; and they were commanded of God so to do; not a word about their increasing pauperism, if they gave to the poor; not a hint that they should go and buy themselves fine clothing or luxuries of any kind in order to help the poor.

In the Book of Alma we are taught that if we do not have charity, and give to the poor, and visit the sick and afflicted, that our prayers are in vain, and we are as hypocrites who deny the faith. In nearly every case mentioned in the Book of Mormon, when destruction was allowed to come upon a nation or people, it was because they were first overcome by pride, and then by other sins. And is not this nation threatened with destruction, if the people become ripe in iniquity? In the "Book of Mormon," chapter 4, another prophet, speaking of our day says:—

But behold, Jesus Christ hath shown you unto me, and I know your doing; and I know that ye do walk in the pride of your hearts; and there are none, save a few only, who do not lift themselves up in the pride of their hearts, unto the wearing of very fine apparel. . . . For . . . ye do love money, and your substances, and your fine apparel, and the adorning of your churches, more than ye love the poor, and the needy, the sick and afflicted. . . . Why do ye adorn yourselves with that which hath no life, and yet suffer the hungry, and the needy, and the naked, and the sick, and the afflicted, to pass by you, and notice them not?

But the sin does not lie in the wealth, but in the wrong use of it; for in Jacob second chapter we read:—

And after ye have obtained a hope in Christ, ye shall obtain riches if ye seek them. And ye will seek them, for the intent to do good, to clothe the naked, to feed the hungry, and administer relief to the sick and afflicted. . . .

Righteousness does not lay in being poor, for in the Book of Covenants we read:—

Woe unto you poor men whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, and who will not labor with your own hands.

And it seems to me that the most foolish waste of means, is the millions that are wasted yearly for strong drink, by all classes, which is the indirect cause of much poverty, affliction, and crime.

Now, may the Lord inspire those whose duty it is to teach the law to explain clearly in what way we can rob the poor because of fine apparel, or fine sanctuaries, or unnecessary adornments, so that we as Latter Day Saints may not be guilty of any of these things. And whether we are poor or rich let us try to so live that we may enjoy the Holy Spirit, which shall lead and guide into all truth.

CLITHERALL, Minnesota, March, 1897.

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

BELIEVING that the Book of Mormon map committee are desirous of hearing what may be said in favor of each of the different opinions had in regard to the location of the leading features of such a map; also that it may be considered a duty, especially of those who feel an interest in the perfectness of that map when the committee shall make a further report of progress, I therefore have presumed again to offer a few thoughts in review of an article entitled, "The river Sidon—Where is it?" appearing in the Saints' Herald of October 21, 1896, which may also embody some further remarks made in an article of October 14. Having, as I believe, shown in my former article, appearing November 25, that the Magdalena River, as the ancient river Sidon, answers the record in every particular, and as the article of October 21 takes the stand in favor of the Orinoco River as the river Sidon, I shall endeavor to show that the Orinoco will not fill the record.

"The river Sidon ran north." Nearly all we touch in the record relating to the river Sidon tends to that conclusion. We will now turn to our map and trace the Orinoco in its course from its head to its mouth. I perceive that the Orinoco River carries its name from its mouth to its head. I also find that it heads in the Parimas, a mountain range which divides Venezuela from Brazil, and the head of the river is in the extreme southeast corner of Venezuela from which the river runs four hundred miles in a northwest direction, then makes a turn and runs two hundred and fifty miles north by east, its variation east being about eighty miles; it then makes a sharp turn and runs four hundred miles east by north, its variation north of east being about fifty miles. Thus you perceive that the Orinoco River runs in a peculiar shape, forming a trapezium instead of a comparatively straight course north.

The main river from its mouth connected with any of its main tributaries will not answer the record. However, we will strike the lines recommended in the "article" and see how they look. Starting at Cayenne, on the Atlantic or east sea, with the object of passing by the head of the river Magdalena, we must remember that this line must run south of the head of the river, leaving its head in the national land of Zarahemla, but running by the head (Alma 13: 11); but in a few miles it must enter across the line into the "strip of wilderness," and must then run in the "strip" for a considerable distance before its final entrance again, into the land of Zarahemla, to fill the requirements of Alma 11: 4. These requirements must be the test in striking this line of the "narrow strip of wilderness," and this line must run in a straight course from the east sea even unto the west sea. This line then which we are now striking will be the north line of this "strip," and in running it from our starting point (Cayenne) with the intention of passing by the head of the Magdalena River, we will cross the Orinoco River about two hundred and sixty miles northwest of its head, and reach the Pacific coast at Majaqual Bay, in Colombia. If we run the north line of the "strip" from Cayenne by the head of the Orinoco River, leaving the head of the river as required in Zarahemla, we will reach the Pacific coast near Guayaquil, Ecuador; and neither of these lines will be found to fill the requirements of Alma 11: 4.

One of the greatest troubles with this "article" we are considering, is that when writing of the location of the city of Zarahemla and its surroundings the writer tries to get the national land of Zarahemla built up and subdivided into its provincial lands too early. The chief clearing up of the Nephite lands for settlement was not made until the twentieth year of the reign of the judges, when Moroni drove all of the Lamanites out of the east and west wildernesses and issued his command for their settlement by the Nephites. (Alma 22: 2.) The Lamanites he had driven out were mostly of the more idle sort. Notwithstanding the Nephites held in possession all of the land north of the dividing line or "strip of wilderness," yet these Lamanites had occupied so much of their territory and dwelling in tents, so much so that the portion of their lands which the Nephites themselves occupied was nearly surrounded by these Lamanites, and for this reason there were no Nephite settlements for the Lamanites to encounter in their passage of the wilderness upon the Pacific coast at the time of the destruction of the city of Ammonihah and before. (Alma 13:11) 'Tis true there had been several subdivisions of the national land of Zarahemla settled by the Nephites, chiefly, however, upon and near the river Sidon and its tributary now known as the river Cauca; but they had not spread out to any great extent, especially eastward, until the time above referred to. It appears by the "article" that to consider the Magdalena to be the ancient river Sidon the Nephite people would have no room to dwell. It also asserts that the Nephite settlements did not extend to the sea west (Pacific Ocean). Let us see.

In giving the lines in this writing I wish to say that I use Rand, McNally and Company's New General Atlas. I make this statement because I find many variations in different maps, especially in names. Fully believing that the Magdalena River was the ancient river Sidon, I will again give my opinion where the "narrow strip of wilderness" lay, and give the point upon the Pacific more easy to find. Place your straightedge at Cape Blanco on the Pacific or sea west, then the other end at Zamora Point upon the sea east, or Carribean Sea, which sea, after rounding Point Gallinas, becomes an eastern sea to South America. This line will be the northern line of the "strip of wilderness." The width of the strip can be drawn to your own notion, no width being mentioned. All the land north of the above line, as already stated, was the land of the Nephites, including, as now known the State of Panama to the narrow neck of land which was a day and a half's journey for a Nephite from the east to the west sea, the dividing line between the lands Bountiful and Desolation (Alma 13:11.) I find, then, by measurement, that this territory of the Nephites embraces about 310,000 square miles, and throw in the State of Panama for good measurement, or four and a half times the size of the State of Missouri. Not so badly cramped for room after all! This calculation is flat surface, counting nothing for hills, valleys, or mountains.

We will now try and locate the city of Zarahemla in the heart or center of the country. In doing this we will take in what I believe to have been the land of Manti, and leave out the narrow strip lying southwest from Manti along the Pacific coast, and to partly offset this, not take into the consideration anything which may be left of the state of Panama, after allowing sufficient of it to square up the main body of our lands within the lines I now will give. Place your straightedge at the southeast side of the southern island of the group at Charambira. Point on the Pacific Ocean, the other end ten miles northwest of Espada Point at the mouth of the Gulf of Maracaibo, Caribbean Sea. This line will divide the land of Zarahemla lengthwise. Then lay the side of your square upon the line of the "strip of wilderness," then let the end of your square rest at the south corner of the small island which your dividing line was drawn to, and draw this line. Now draw your square back upon the line of the "strip of wilderness" until the end of your square rests upon the south end of the Gulf of Morosquillo on the northwest coast of South America. The connecting point of these two lines gives us the center or heart of the national land of Zarahemla, and places the city at that point, and the provincial land of Zarahemla between the Magdalena and Cauca Rivers and places the city about eighty-five miles south of the junction of those two rivers.

If the above be correct, then Helaman would have no trouble upon his mind while standing in the "heart of our country" or "the center of the land" contemplating the vast extent and beauty of his country for the want of room, "wherein to dwell," especially when we remember that in the days of Helaman emigration had already commenced in the land northward.

We will now pass to the next item. The "article" states:—

The Nephite settlements did not extend to the sea west (Pacific Ocean).

The argument used to prove this is from Mosiah 5: 9 and Alma 1: 13, and 11: 1-5. The first of these quotations is fifty years too early, the second fifteen years, and the third nine years before Moroni drove the Lamanites out of the East and West wilderness where there was in those days scarcely any Nephites settled. But seventy-five years after Limhi's men were lost in the wilderness we have a different picture. In the twenty-seventh year of the reign of the judges we read that Moroni had established armies to protect the South and West borders of the land. (Alma 24: 5.) In the thirtieth year of the reign of the judges we find a letter written by Helaman giving an account of the war in the South and West. Alma 26: 1 states that in the twenty-sixth year he (Helaman) and his two thousand sons, as they were called, joined the army of Antipus, at which time he states that the land of Manti, of Zeezrom, of Cumeni, and of Antiparah, were fallen into the hands of the Lamanites. When Helaman arrived at the headquarters of Antipus he found him fortifying the city of Judea; and here I wish the author of the article to read this account again, and he will find that instead of stopping and parleying with and trying to get a battle out of Antipus, he joined forces with him and assisted him, and eventually (see par. 3) they formed a stratagem to draw out the Lamanites from the city of Antiparah, where the strongest forces of the Lamanites were stationed in that quarter, and Helaman and his sons were detailed to go out and pass near the city of Antiparah as though they were going with provisions to the city beyond in the borders by the seashore. his city is not named.

I wish it now to be remembered that the land of Manti was south of the provincial land of Zarahemla, and therefore these cities here mentioned must have comprised the south and west that Moroni had provided for by placing there Antipus and Helaman with their armies. That these cities were west of the river Sidon is conceded by the article. The above being the facts according to the record, I wish the brother to tell us upon what seashore this unnamed city was located if it was not the Pacific Ocean? And the provincial lands connected with the cities of Judea and Antiparah, if no more, must have extended to the borders of the same seashore.

The objection made that between the Magdalena and the Pacific shore for so many fortified cities cuts no figure if the line of the "strip of wilderness" I have given be correct. Then we have a strip of territory southwest from the Magdalena River five hundred miles long and averaging one hundred and fifty miles wide along the Pacific shore. And when Moroni left the south and west to return to the assistance of Teancum in Bountiful, there were circumstances connected therewith which go to prove that the route Moroni marched was down the Pacific shore.

Miscellaneous Department.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF BRO. DAVID CHAMBERS.

Whereas, it has pleased God in his infinite wisdom, to allow the removal by death of our beloved brother, David Chambers, therefore be it resolved, that as a conference of the Little Sioux district we thus express in feeble words the loss we feel, of a wise and loving brother, an efficient district president and Bishop's agent, and that we ever wish to remember with pleasure, his example of firmness and effort, and the result of such effort; and while we sorrow in the loss, we rejoice that his death was that of a saint and soldier of the cross; and we believe his rest is glorious, and our loss his eternal gain. We pray that God may fill the vacancy in our district, comfort the widow, and bless us who remain to sustain the work our brother loved and labored for.

J. C. CRABB, Dist. Pres.

A. M. FYRANDO, Dist. Sec.

SPECIAL BUSINESS NOTICE.

To the Church at Large.—Desiring to close the conference year's business by 1st of March, 1897, in looking over the publications of the office I find a large subscription yet unpaid for the closing year:—

Zion's Hope, about.....$1,000 short,
Herald, about.....4,000 “
Autumn Leaves, about.....1,300 “

Now it will be impossible for the office to prosper under these conditions, and our hands are tied on account of the careless or thoughtless ones to meet their obligations to the office.

Besides our regular work this last year we got out the first volume of Church History at a cost of about $1,500, and now we are compelled to stop proceedings on the second volume until the church or its members pay up their subscriptions and book accounts, so as to get means to complete the work.

We now appeal to you to forward your subscriptions and accounts at once, so as to square our books by March 1.

The $25,000 back delinquents are yet keeping themselves in the background and we would be pleased to see the color of them. The work of the office is now hindered and publications under way are delayed for want of necessary means to complete them.

As ministers who hold half-fare permits cannot act as book agents, it is hoped that they will do what they can for the Herald

Office in a general way, and urge all to take church publications as a means of aiding both themselves and the work. Other ministers are asked to help as they can, and regularly appointed agents to look out for the Herald Office.

DIED.

LYLE.—On March 17, 1897, near Butler, Missouri, Sr. Jennie C. Lyle. Deceased was born June 30, 1866, at Athens, Ohio, and came to Missouri while small, where she has since resided. She became a member of the church February 21, 1895, being baptized by Elder E. T. Atwell. She lived a faithful, diligent life since her conversion to the faith, showing that there was something that she expected in the future that would reward her for all the diligence she had taken to live a better life. When any of the ministry came that way they always found a welcome at the home of Bro. and Sr. Lyle. Deceased leaves three small children, husband, father, mother, and numerous friends to mourn her departure. The funeral sermon was preached at the home of Bro. Lyle by Harry M. Atwell, after which the procession wended its way toward the last resting place of mortality. The large procession showed the respect in which deceased was held.

CALHOON.—Abner H. Calhoon was born to Andrew and Eleanor Calhoon in Monroe County, New York, February 19, 1827. He was married to Miss Betsy Renwick, daughter of Walter and Mary Renwick, September 20, 1852. To them were born eleven children, four sons and seven daughters, the three first having died in their infancy. Three sons and five daughters, with their mother and fifteen grandchildren, mourn their loss. His children, though much scattered, were with him when he died. He with his wife was baptized at Plano, Illinois, August 29, 1886, by Elder W. Vickery. He was always firm in the angel's message, the restored gospel. Died in that faith at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ida Goodrich, in DeKalb, Illinois, March 8, 1897. Funeral services at the M. E. chapel, Sermon by Elder F. M. Cooper, of Chicago, Illinois, assisted by the pastor of said church.

HAYER.—At her home in Head Grove, near Eagle Grove, Iowa, Sr. Emma J. Hougas Hayer, wife of Bro. Oliver Hayer. She was born March 7, 1858, at Mission, Illinois; baptized into the Reorganized Church July 14, 1867; married to Bro. Oliver Hayer, March 7, 1878, and died March 7, 1897, her nineteenth wedding anniversary. Husband and four children, two daughters and two sons, father, mother, six brothers, and two sisters, besides a large circle of friends, mourn. She was well known and highly respected in the community where she lived. After a short sermon at the saints' chapel the remains were taken to her father's (Bro. Thomas Hougas) in La Salle County, Illinois, by her husband, and brother, Daniel Hougas, for burial. Elder F. A. Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, preached the funeral sermon. The body arrived at Mission, Thursday morning, March 11, and was taken to the church, where funeral services were conducted by Elder F. G. Pitt. A large company of friends and neighbors attended.

WHITE.—At Galien, Michigan, March 19, 1897, Bro. Clinton DeWitt White. Bro. White was born at Veteran, New York, October 25, 1861; baptized May 3, 1880, by Elder G. T. Griffiths. Bro. White had been an intense sufferer for over eight years. Over seven years he has been confined to his bed. Rheumatism was the cause. He longed for the time to come when he might depart and be relieved from his suffering and be with Christ. Funeral services at the Latter Day Saints' church, conducted by Elder H. C. Bronson before a large concourse of people.

STOFIEL.—At Stofiel, Nevada, Sr. Lydia E., wife of Walter Stofiel, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. Emanuel Penrod. Sr. Stofiel was born Christmas Day, 1848, in Southern Illinois. When eight years old she crossed the plains with her father on his second trip. She has since resided in Nevada. She was, at the age of seventeen, married to Jesse Atwell, and to them one child was born. Subsequently she became the wife of Walter Stofiel, and by him the mother of three children. Husband and four daughters, together with others of her father's family, mourn. Her aged father, in the absence of any authorized minister in the church, conducted the funeral service, reading from I. Corinthians 15; Nephi 6: 5; Alma 8: 10; 19: 7; and Doctrine and Covenants 7: 4-27, and speaking a few touching words of the character and life of his daughter. She was strong in the faith. Interment on the hillside near the home.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul: Is it immortal? Does it survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious state? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief concerning the nature and destiny of man. Discussed from biblical, historical, and scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his pre-existence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priest-hoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. The Necessity for a Reorganization.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

This tract sets forth and refutes the false claims and erroneous doctrines of the Utah Church.

It brings to light much of the teachings of Brigham Young and other founders of the Utah faction, and proves them and the present leaders to be at variance with and their organization a departure from the faith taught by the early church and its three standard books.

It also vindicates and maintains the general position of the Reorganized Church in succession.

A tract for the times. Just the thing with which to meet the arguments of Brighamite elders.

Forty-three pages; two for five cents; per doz., 30 cents.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

BY ELDER SAMUEL F. WALKER.

The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The latter chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the western continent.

WORKINGMEN AND THE CHURCH.

SOME months ago The Methodist Recorder, of London, offered three prizes to bona-fide workingmen who gave the best and fullest answers to the question, "Why do not the working classes go to church?" More than a hundred workingmen responded. The Recorder publishes in full the three prize essays with selections from the rest. The attitude of the workingmen toward the church is thus expressed in the introduction to the first prize essay: "The workingmen are not universally opposed to Christianity; they have no fault to find with Jesus Christ, neither would they take up any directly hostile attitude toward the Christian Church. They simply go their own way, ignoring the church as completely as though she did not exist at all." We give in condensed form the reasons for this as extracted by The Methodist Recorder of Pittsburg from the letters in its London contemporary:—

"1. The caste system in the churches, which marks social and class distinctions. 2. The form of service—too much machinery, lack of spontaneity and fascination. 3. Few rents. 4. The coldness of the churches. Instead of being full of zealous Christianity, hot with the gospel, full of glad tidings, the churches are cold. 5. Changed style of preaching—sin toned down. 6. Christian inconsistency. 7. Sheer spiritual indifference. 8. The counter-attractions of places of entertainment and pleasure. 9. The necessity for rest. 10. Bad preaching. 11. The entertainment-providing propensities of the church, impressing the public mind with a decreasing belief in the power of the purely spiritual forces supposed to be resident in the church. 12. Prejudice and the spirit of the age. 13. Lack of a proper consideration of workingmen for church offices. 14. Lack of sympathy with the workingmen in their friendly societies or trade-unions. 15. The comparative indifference of the church to the impoverished condition of the masses; that is, the neglect of the church to speak out on the pressing social problems which affect the working classes of to-day."

In an editorial, commenting on the published essays, The Christian Commonwealth (London) says:—

"It is a melancholy fact that only a very small proportion of workingmen are found on Sunday in a place of worship. Why is this? Chiefly because of sheer indifference. But indifference is an effect rather than a cause, and what we have to get at is the cause of indifference. The essayists assign many reasons for the non-attendance of their fellows at church. They do not overlook the faults of workingmen, but, after indicating these, they are pretty well agreed that the onus of responsibility lies at the door of the church. Their grievance may be summed up in one sentence; the church is not doing its duty by them; is not discharging its mission; is not true to its Master. Complaint is made of the pew-rent system and social caste (great prominence is given to these); the inconsistencies of professing Christians, particularly employers of labor; the aloofness of ministers; lack of visitation; unattractive services; that the church interests itself in workingmen on only one day in the week, and concerns itself with only one side of their nature, etc. If these letters represent the true state of matters infidelity is not so rampant among workingmen as is generally supposed. Again and again the writers declare that workingmen are not hostile to real Christianity, still less to Jesus Christ—though it is probable some of them do not fully realize what submission to him involves. We have no hesitation in saying that if this symposium makes one thing clearer than another, it is that the closer ministers and Christian workers follow in the footsteps of their Master the more nearly will they be brought into touch with the working classes and all who are at present outside Christian influences."

The same subject receives editorial treatment in the columns of The Central Christian Advocate (St. Louis). The Advocate quotes from the first prize essay, written by Mr. William Hunter, a workingman of Hull. According to Mr. Hunter the church has taught to the workingmen the doctrine of "the divine fatherhood" which involved also a universal brotherhood. "For the signs of this brotherhood they very naturally looked into the church, where they had been taught to look up to God as their Father, but they looked in vain; instead, they found that caste, social, or class distinctions were just as marked in the church as in the world, that precisely the same gulfs separated the classes one from another in church as out of it, and from that time the sympathy of the working classes with the church began to wane."

Moreover, when they began to crave and struggle for higher and better conditions of life, the church, he says, ought to have placed itself at the head of the upward movement, and adds that, if this had been done, "many labor wars, with their attendant evils, might have been averted." Among the other reasons given why many of this class do not attend church is that the ministers, as a rule, are "absolutely out of touch with the larger life of the workers."

The insatiable greed for wealth on the part of some laymen of the church—a greed which shows itself by resort to devices to cut out the workingmen —and the tyrannical spirit of certain employers and foremen who make profession of Christianity are shown to be responsible in large measure for the alienation of the laboring classes from the churches, while the system of pew-renting and the individual appropriation of seats in the sanctuary are stated to be distasteful to the same classes.

The following passage is also quoted from Mr. Hunter's essay:—

"Of the immense majority who do not go to church, it may be said of one class that they have become so steeped in sin, they are such absolute slaves to the most degrading vices, they have given themselves so completely to the devil, and they so glory in their depravity that, of all places in the world, the church has the least attraction for them. . . . The fact is, the atmosphere is too pure, the standard of morality preached there is too high, their darling sins are denounced in such unmeasured terms that they simply won't go. There is another class who seem to be carried away in the mad, whirling rush after worldly pleasures. So absorbed are they in the pursuit of passing amusements that they have not a thought to spare for anything else; not only their leisure hours on the week-day, but Sunday as well, must be given to the gratification of their passion for play."

Commenting on these passages The Central Christian Advocate says:—

"There is force in all the points made in this essay. The ministry might with great advantage come into closer touch with the workingmen, and yet it must be admitted that it understands him better, is more anxious to reach him, and is giving more careful and general attention to labor problems to-day than ever before. The church might have aided him more in his struggle for a livelihood, but the no inconsiderable aid it has rendered in this respect, and the difficulties involved in such service, should not be overlooked. With regard to the brotherhood of man it may be asked: Does this mean that among those who worship the universal Father the laws of affinity, attraction, and environment are to count for naught, and that all are to be brought to the same level, social and intellectual as well as spiritual? Or does it mean an attitude of sympathy and helpfulness toward all, which at the same time does not attempt to ignore these laws, which are operative in all strata of society? There is no concealing the fact that the influence of the church suffers greatly on account of the selfishness and lack of consideration for employees by those who pretend to be followers of the Master. But it is illogical, to say the least, for one to ignore the cause of Christ because of the presence of such persons in the church, as we are all to be judged according to our own lives. Unfortunately, however, logic does not count for as much as it should when it comes to the matter of church association."—Literary Digest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARIES

MANY OF THE BOOKS ARE PERNICIOUS AND AN INSULT TO THE INTELLIGENCE OF YOUNG PEOPLE.

Edward W. Bok has been making a careful and comprehensive examination of Sunday school libraries, and in the February Ladies' Home Journal he confesses himself disgusted with the literature thus placed in the hands of our boys and girls. A less complete investigation, Mr. Bok says, would not have made it possible for him to believe that the libraries of our Sunday schools were stocked with such piles of rubbish—"wishy-washy literature," as he terms it. He quotes the titles and gives the themes of a number of books he obtained from Sunday school libraries, and these seem to completely warrant his conclusions. "Such books," he contends, "are an insult to the intelligence of the young people, and have a pernicious influence. Instead of being healthy books they are decidedly unhealthy in tone and teaching. Surely we are cultivating a dangerous taste for reading in the young when we feed them on such rubbish."

Mr. Bok unhesitatingly lays a part of the blame upon the Publication Boards and Societies, which are influenced by a denominational spirit that narrows their choice of books. Then, again, it is shown that the most mediocre sort of "talent" is employed to write these books, and at beggarly prices—less than $80 per book—are paid. A share of responsibility, Mr. Bok asserts, rests upon the men who purchase Sunday school libraries, who, as is most frequently the case, are not qualified for the task, and whose object is to secure a library as cheap as possible. Mr. Bok warmly urges that the selection of Sunday school books be left to women, who "instinctively know and feel the kind of a book which a boy or girl will read and enjoy." He insists that women should be given carte blanche to make the selections so far as the prescribed amount of money will go. "A hundred good books," Mr. Bok concludes, "are far better than five hundred books of indifferent interest," which are bought simply because they are cheap. "A Sunday school library cannot be created in a day, and no discouragement should be felt if the financial means of the church are contracted, and necessitate the purchase of only a few books at a time."

THE GIFT OF APPRECIATION.

There is perhaps no other natural gift that brings so much genuine pleasure to its possessor as does the keen sense of appreciation. It teaches us, or points out to our understanding, the beauties of Nature that are all about us, gilds the commonplace, and emphasizes the joys of life and of living. Appealing to us through all our senses, the pleasures that it brings are ceaseless and unailing. Seen through appreciative eyes the beauties of life overshadow and eclipse the homely, rough places. There is an attractive side to everything, and this an appreciative mind will see first, and longest remember.—February Ladies' Home Journal.

The editor of the Review of Reviews passes suggestive comment on the latest phases of Greco-Turkish question. He holds that the only reasonable solution of the Cretan difficulty is to place Crete definitely in the keeping of Greece. His theory is that Russia is playing a waiting game, and that the other great powers are playing into her hands. The Review reproduces a portion of the Athens Ephemeris of recent date, containing war news and comment printed in modern Greek, together with several striking cartoons showing the Hellenic point of view.

It may not be generally known that there is cruelty in the keeping of gold fish. Half of such captives die from sheer want of rest. As fish have eyes so formed that they cannot endure the light, in a glass vessel they are in an entirely wrong place, as is evident from the way in which they dash about, and go round and round, until fairly worn out.

ZION'S RELIGIO-LITERARY SOCIETY.

THE General Convention of Zion's Religio-Literary Society convened in the saints' church at Lamoni, Iowa, on Thursday, April 1, 1897, at three p. m., President J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, in the chair, J. C. Hitchcock, of St. Louis, secretary. The weather was cloudy and quite cool, and light showers and heavy rains occurred during the day. Nevertheless an audience of about fifty or sixty assembled at the opening session, ready to watch the current of business to be transacted and to aid in every necessary way the general proceedings. The usual opening exercises were had, Bro. Gunsolley offering prayer. After some general suggestions a committee on credentials was appointed: Brn. F. M. Sheehy, T. W. Chatburn, and J. A. Gillen. A question arising concerning admission of delegates under the provisions of the constitution, led to a motion to suspend the regular rule, but a substitute prevailed providing that all who satisfied the credentials committee that they had manifested an interest in the Religio work be admitted to voice and vote in the proceedings.

Short speeches were then called for, and Brn. M. H. Bond, W. H. Kelley, E. D. Briggs, and Srs. Mc-Nichols and Maggie Blair responded. The credentials committee then reported and was continued.

Bro. Russell Archibald, treasurer, reported: Total receipts $351.19; disbursements $241.95; balance $109.24. Referred to an auditing committee: J. J. Billinsky, J. B. Roush, and J. F. Mintun. Adjournment was then taken to the evening hour.

At 7:30 p. m. the convention resumed its sessions. "Redeemer of Israel" was sung, and prayer offered by Secretary Hitchcock. The minutes were read, also a report from the committee on credentials. The auditing committee reported the treasurer's report correct.

The reports of the President, Vice President, and Secretary were then read. We publish each entire. From them, especially from the President's report, the HERALD readers may get a clear idea of the present condition of the Religio and learn the problems it is seeking to solve. We present them herewith in the order named:—

To the Members of the Z. R.-L. Society:—It is usual in such reports to recast the past and to forecast the future, and in so doing to note wherein we have need to make improvement and changes.

The past two years has been a period of slow but apparently permanent growth. New societies have been organized, and with the formation of them new needs have been brought to light. With the coming to light of these new needs, new thoughts have been advanced and new propositions have been submitted for investigation. The new thought and investigation has enlisted the attention of some who have hitherto been silent with reference to the work of our society.

All this may portend good; and if we shall arise to the necessities of the occasion an advanced step will be taken which will place us farther along toward the point of ultimate and recognized success.

If there be a supply for each demand, then we need expect no demand to exist where we shall not be able to find the supply. If we need new measures and new men, or women, they should be forthcoming; and whether they shall be depends upon our willingness to have the proper thing done whether it shall agree with our notion of it or not.

Many can and do testify that the Holy Spirit was in the inception of this work, and if it was approved of God in the beginning so it must be now, if we have not served the object of our creation or drifted so far away from this as to be beyond reclaim. If either of the two conditions exist and the Spirit of God can no longer approve of further efforts along these lines, then it is to the interest of everyone to know and feel that it is so; hence for our action looking toward future work we want the guidance of the Holy Spirit, or else in this the time of great necessity we may be unable to cope with the needs which seem to exist.

It is thought by some that we have drifted away in great part from the work originally intended to be done—that instead of confining our effort more to heart work and that which has to do with the real life of the individual, we have directed our energies all toward the head, or to the development of the literary and intellectual faculties and tastes. It would seem that this thought is worthy our attention.

Again it is claimed that our work is too scattering in its field, and as a result a great lack of concentration. For instance, we have in fact four distinct departments and eight distinct programs. It does not matter what the intention was in creating the two grades of programs for each department, it is the effect that we have to deal with now. Not only have we had eight programs each month, but each succeeding program in the same department has been entirely different and apart from the rest, in many instances, instead of following out consecutively any regular line of work. This has made diversity more diversified.

As a lack of this concentration and continuity it has been in some cases next to impossible to keep up the interest to a good working temperature; and the complaint comes, We have so many who do not take part, and who seem to have but little interest.

This scattering cannot be charged to the superintendents altogether, for it has been but the legitimate fruits of our plan. I doubt if eight more faithful persons could be found than those who have labored in this work for the past two years. It requires no talent to find fault or to criticise at random their work, but to take up the pen and do even so well as they have done is quite another question.

The Program venture, while not a failure by any means, has not proven the success many hoped for it. This is due to several reasons. Our subscription list declined nearly one half, thus reducing the revenue but not lessening the expense materially. Then our subscribers, some of them did not pay. Some societies and some individuals have not paid a cent for the nearly two years they have taken The Program, be it said to their shame. Some societies found that they could not use them, and so discontinued, as they had a right to do, of course.

The argument has been urged, and not without some degree of propriety, that our work is too widely separated from the gospel work; or rather it does not partake enough of the peculiar features of the latter-day work; that instead of trying to please those outside of the church we should try to educate those inside the church: in other words, we should not try to make converts, but to train those converted; being but supplementary to the Sunday school and filling an apparent gap between the church proper and the Sunday school. As a result of this wide separation from the spirit and genius of the latter-day work many of our young members are not attracted by it, and not brought into the society work at all.

Having said this much about points wherein our present plan seems to fail to meet the demand,—there are others but of less importance,—we will notice briefly some suggestions for remedying these defects.

It is urged by some that we ought to take up the White Cross work in connection with our plan—that we need to get more directly at the Social Purity work among our members—that this is a part of the heart work needed.

Another would like to see more of the relief work done, such as helping the poor and needy, the sick and afflicted.

Still another would have the members get out among the people and distribute tracts and put reading matter into their hands and thus create an interest in the latter-day work.

Others would have our entire plan changed, so that, as they believe, to get more closely in touch with the real gospel work. These would have us consecrate our efforts more upon church work, drawing in largely our scattered forces by providing but one main line of work instead of four, or eight, as now. They would have us take up as the object of our study the church books, having the work outlined by a committee, and this outline to be published in Autumn Leaves, thus dispensing with the Program and the heavy expense of printing it, at the same time giving to the magazine a stronger support. It is urged by the supporters of this plan that it will meet nearly all the demands as they seem now to exist—that when by a close study of the gospel work, the heart is reached more directly than can be done in any other way, and that when once reached the doing of "service" will be a natural result.

Briefly sketched, this is the work of this convention. And what an important work it is! This is the crisis period of our existence as a society, for by the measures adopted by this convention is our future success or failure assured, "for by our works we stand or fall." If we shall succeed in meeting the present exigency with the help of our heavenly Father, our possibilities are without measure, while on the other hand if we fail our end is sure and not far off. If we shall have the aid of the Spirit of God in what we do, the Religio, with the Sunday school, ought to be training young men for the active work of carrying the gospel to the nations, and the young women for the equally great work of raising up a people which shall serve the Lord in righteousness—both working together for the establishing of Zion the pure in heart. There is no greater work than this—there is nothing can be compared to it.

The question is shall we be able to rise up to the needs of the hour. If it be the Lord's good pleasure to work with us, and we shall put ourselves in condition to work with him, we shall. Now the thing for each one to do is to put himself in a proper frame of mind to receive the light of the Spirit of truth. If we have come to this convention with a determination to have our way prevail, we shall be a clog in the way of progress instead of a help. We must be willing to let the best light have sway although it may run contrary to our own wise conclusions in the matter. If each one shall be willing to give up his plans for something better, if such should be presented, we are not likely to make a mistake.

There is no room for selfishness or jealousy in the work of the Lord, for just so sure as one entertains this spirit, the Spirit of God will take its flight, for it cannot keep company with selfishness and jealousy. When the time comes that some other's service or plans will serve the cause better, it is to our interest as well as for the interest of the work at large that we should give way; and we ought to be willing to do so, without the least feeling of injury or malice. In honor we ought to prefer one another.

Because some one or some plan has done good service, is no reason they should be continued when we are satisfied that a change would be better. We must have no favorites in persons, or pet theories, which we are not willing to give up if we shall see that there is something better for the cause. Anyone who is not willing to step down and out of the way when the time comes where he can no longer serve to the very best interests of the work he represents, is not worthy to be trusted, either in his own services or in any plan he may propose.

The true philosophy of our work consists in conforming to the direction of the Spirit of light—in seeking to do those things which our Master did, who is our perfect example. May the spirit of grace, mercy, and truth inspire us to humility and meekness that we may be led into the sunshine of God's favor, to emerge at last upon that condition of celestial joy and bliss, is the prayer of your collaborer,

J. A. GUNSOLLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 1, 1897.

To the President and Convention:—When the Program was enlarged, nearly two years ago, it was found necessary for some one near to, or in connection with, the Herald Office, to take charge of the mailing lists, receive subscriptions, etc. This part of the work fell to my lot. The amount received by me and paid, through the treasurer, to the Herald Office, will appear in the treasurer's report.

I may here incidentally explain that when the Program was enlarged, it became necessary to enter it for transmission through the mails at second-class rates to save expense. This forced us to place upon it a subscription price, and it was fixed at 25 cents per single copy or in packages of three or more at 20 cents each. This price was based on the probable cost of issuing and on the fact of having a subscription list numbering 1,000 or thereabouts.

This issue of 1,000 at the start has steadily decreased, until now we mail about 500 copies, possibly a little less, each issue.

While the number now issued is about half what it formerly was, the price of each issue is not, cannot be, correspondingly decreased, it costing the society about $12.00 per issue to print 500 copies, and but $14.00 for 1,000 copies.

This made a large difference between the receipts and expenditures in favor of the latter, and so it came about that the Treasurer had of late to assess the locals to pay the printing bill.

I may add that this work of care for the lists and the correspondence made necessary by it has not always been conducted to my entire satisfaction, but I do have a consciousness that I have done the best I could under the circumstances.

I have answered a number of inquiries regarding the organization of local societies and have done what I could to promote the general organization.

In the work yours,

F. E. COCHRAN.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 1, 1897.

Owing to the fact that two years has elapsed since holding a convention, and therefore two years since report was made, to go into detail would make the report so long as to become wearisome, hence we endeavor to make the same as brief as possible.

If our progress is to be measured by our increase in numbers, perhaps our report would tend to discourage rather than encourage. If we have the correct understanding of our aim, however, it is not alone to place long lists of names upon various small books and call them Religio records, but rather to improve the talents of those who have become members, and increase our membership as circumstances warrant. Our membership at last report, two years ago, about 1,410, is at present about 1,750, showing an increase of 340. While our membership has not increased proportionately as rapidly during the past two years as it did during the two years previous, this may be accounted for largely from the fact that at the end of the first two years of our existence, a large majority of the branches within the church where the membership was sufficiently large to sustain a Religio had been supplied. Our work in the way of forming new societies and increasing membership during the two years just past has been from the moderate increase where societies were already formed, and the formation of societies where such action had heretofore been looked upon as impracticable. This number, added to the number who attend the meetings and often take part who are not members of the society, will give us an idea of the ones being reached by our work.

Efforts to get some one sufficiently interested in the English mission to start this work there has not been so successful as we might wish, though considerable correspondence has been had with that end in view, and it is quite possible something can be done along this line a little later on. One additional society has been formed in Australia, making a total of two in that country. Considerable interest is manifested among our people in Canada, though not as much as we had hoped for, though believe the work will start there a little later on. Within the United States societies have sprung up where it was least thought they could be organized, and have prospered more than societies where from a casual observation we would think otherwise. With these facts before us we think it quite possible that there are many other places where societies might be formed if the proper interest could be aroused. There is one drawback in some localities, that is impossible to hold meetings during the farming season, or in times of bad weather. Our people are scattered, and it is inconvenient for them to get together in busy times, or bad weather at night during the week. We believe this could be remedied very materially if programs were so arranged as to be used on Sunday evenings, and that such societies hold their meetings on Sunday evenings prior to preaching services.
