"I think the force within can never cease,
That He from whom it came,
From earthly fetters can release
The imprisoned flame,
And, after trial, give His perfect peace—

"That like white bird, whose tireless wings descend
From far up in the sky,
Skim the dull earth, then backward bend
Their flight on high,
The soul to life, stoops from eternity."

Dear Sisters:—Since it is impossible for me to write to half as many as I wish to, I deem it the best way to use the medium of the Column, and thus reach all. We left Hiekeuru February 26, on the "Teaveroa" bound for Kaukura. I would like to describe the scene of our leaving, but it would have to be seen to be appreciated. At one end of the road that leads across the island (which is not more than one quarter of a mile,) is where the boats come ashore, although there is no real landing; but this seems to be the best place to get on and off the ledge, which extends some distance from the shore. When the tide is at its highest, boats that are not heavily loaded can float right up to the end of the road. But the morning of which I speak the ledge was dry when we first went down, which was about half-past six. There were a number of natives leaving for Kaukura and intervening islands, on the same vessel, about sixty men, women, and children, with all their moveable property, including cats, dogs, hogs, fowls, and one or two turtles. Joseph and I had twenty different parcels or pieces of baggage, and they were done up snugly to what some families of natives were. So you may imagine the appearance of a large arena near the landing. In this muddle were sewing machines, two iron bedsteads, a rocking chair, other chairs, a spring mattress, a nice table, a baby buggy that were extras, the rolls of bedding, boxes, baskets, pans, kettles, and demijohns are not to be mentioned. And nearly all the natives on the island come to see their friends off; and if they had no friends leaving, they would have come all the same. There is so little of change or excitement in their lives they have to make the most of such an occasion. The wind was blowing fresh and the sea rolling in pretty heavily on the ledge. I confess that the scene, the confusion, and the thoughts of going out over those breakers made me feel weak. The Teaveroa would stand as near in to the shore as was prudent when the boat left her, and as they pulled in she would tack ship and stand outward till she saw the boat leaving the shore, then she would stand in again, and meet the boat to get its load. This was kept up steadily for two hours before it was our turn to go, and an hour or more afterward, during which time we had a good opportunity to see how the boat was handled, and judge of our chances for getting wet. But she was taken successfully over each time. Once only on an outward bound trip she met a curling wave just at the ledge, which raised her bows so high, I thought for a moment they were all being spilled out backwards.

There was one touching instance in this parting scene, that of a woman giving away her child and leaving it behind her. In loading the boat the people never detained her by coming to the grounds for a second armful. A swarm of men, women, and children gathered up what they could carry, and those whom the things belonged to went with it. And when it came the turn for this woman to go who left her little boy, she threw her arms around him and cried as if her heart would break. The woman to whom he had been given, kept a firm hold of his arm for fear at the last moment the mother would repent and carry him off. The little fellow was about two years old, and was entirely unconscious of the cause of his mother's sorrow, while she crouched on the ground and hugged him; but when she started off without him, he mingled his cries with hers, and a half dozen of us women folks cried too. When she got in the boat the little fellow stretched both arms out towards her and screamed as if he would go into fits, for a few minutes it seemed too hard to live through. But the thoughts of all were soon diverted in another direction. There was a clattering and shuffling noise behind us, and turning to look we saw a sloop gliding along across the island, in the middle of the road, with sails furled. She sat upright on her keel, and was drawn along by man-power only. The dress and appearance of the natives that had hold of the rope at her bows, reminded me of pictures I have seen of the natives of India drawing the juggernaut car. But this one was not on wheels. There was a line pending from the mast-head on either side, and held to by men to keep her from falling over either way. Two other sail boats—not so large as this one—had been stripped of their spars and rigging and hauled across the island, and now they must be gotten down the bank across the ledge into the sea, to make room for this one, but not till all were well filled with baggage, for all were to go. Those launchings were watched with eager interest, till all were at anchor a little way from the shore until the vessel was ready. But during this time, the ship's boat did not cease to come and go with her cargo of parcels and people.

Among those who came to bid us good-bye were the three Utah missionaries. They called on us soon after our arrival in Hickueru, and had been very friendly. I felt an especial interest in the youngest of the three, a Mr. Neff, who seemed to be a very nice young man. I was not backward in telling him where I believed he rightly belonged, and in a home-like cordial way urged him to look up his position and see if he was really in it. I do not think he is very firm in his belief in the tenets of the Utah Church, for in one of his talks with Joseph these were his words: "If I did not believe that the revelation on plural marriage was given to the church by Joseph, I would not stay in the Mormon Church." But here I am wandering off on doctrine, and the boat is on the ledge, and bundles being tumbled into her. Mapui says for the missionaries to go on board; the wind is rising and the sea swelling on the ledge. "Good-bye, Bro. George Lewis, (of Australia), verses Mr. Neff; make haste and come home!" No time now to feel any nervous tremor about going in the boat. Kihouru is sailing off with Alice; the water is now knee deep on the ledge; Hubert has his baby; Joseph is wading through the water; some one picks me up, judging doubtless by the size he did not count on so much of "avoidupois," and was glad enough to drop me in the boat, where I scrambled to a seat as best I could, while the boat bobbed and tumbled about. The rest have been seated and wedged in with bundles of bedding. The boat is loaded. Here comes the big roller! It breaks with a crash a little at our bows, and in a moment the white surf is boiling and bubbling almost into the boat. Then comes the shouting of "Shove off! pull quick!" And the half dozen or more of men that held the boat lent their assistance—as they always do—by running and pushing until the water is up to their necks sometimes, and as the boat passes from the ledge into the deep blue water, they still hold to the sides and scramble in as she rears and plunges over the incoming rollers. We all hold to as many parcels as we can "hover," and instinctively duck our heads down with the expectation of a plunge bath; but she goes over all right. Poor baby screams with fright, and shoulders are put together to prevent her from seeing the water. The sea is rough and we have a long pull to reach the vessel. Being put in the boat last, I was consequently sitting in front of the rest and had to get out first. As we went alongside, Joseph leaned forward and said, "Give me your parcels, Emma, and watch your chance. When the boat rises on the sea jump into that network of rope hanging over the rail." And I must say, sisters, that I felt a little proud of the sailor-like agility with which I sprang into that rope, clearing the boat without a slip or a stumble. "That's it!" said the men on board, and helped me over the rail. But, O dear! almost every foot of deck room was occupied with natives and what few parcels they would want on the passage. We squeezed around, stepped over, and wended our way through them to the cabin, which was fuller than the deck; not of people, but of boxes and bedding. By this time Alice was so sick she laid right down on the cabin floor, the first place she came to. Hubert was attending to her with the baby on his arm, sick too, and crying. I rendered him what little assistance I could by caring for the baby while he got the bed and cleared out sufficient to get a place for Alice to go to bed. She is not sick when lying down unless it is very rough.

When all was ready for sea they had on deck, besides the water tanks and all that the ship carries, including her big boat—those two sail boats and three canoes. The sloop was towed behind, two men remaining in her to steer. The first day was pretty rough for the little boat. I used to like to watch her making her way over and around the waves. Towards evening it began to get smoother.

Next day, Saturday, about noon we stopped off a small Island that only two old people live on, and got coconuts and fish, also some bufaa from a small vessel there, which kept us till near eight o'clock in the evening, and got to "Takarua" Sunday evening, only just had daylight enough to enter the pass. Here vessels lie at a wharf. What a treat! The first I have seen. Several of our brethren and sisters who were on board were to stop here. Here also is the fine residence of "Mapui," the owner of the vessel and of a large portion of the island, and here the vessel was built and manned for the "channel" as we would say; but they call it the "pass." It is a broad, deep channel between two ledges. This one leads on up into the lagoon. I do not know how long it is, but the longest of any among these islands. As she pulled up to the wharf and the saints landed, they did not scatter here and there at once, but all remained on the wharf till a hymn was sung and a prayer of thanksgiving for our safe and favorable passage. Who among the Christians or saints of America would be thus mindful of their allegiance to their heavenly Father?

We four missionaries were taken to a nice house close by owned by one of the sisters who was on the vessel. She had left it in the care of a man, and he was away. But before going he took the precaution to lock up everything. What a time we had getting in the bedrooms. I guess she borrowed all the house keys in the neighborhood; at length we got in, then had to put up bedsteads and make beds. But when all was done we each had a good cool bedroom and a spring mattress to sleep on, while the lady of the house spread a piece matting on the floor and slept on it in another room. We staid there until Tuesday, got rested up and filled up on chickens. Bro. Case was our cook; Alice and I rustled around and set the table (?) and that was not all, we went in bathing and had a lovely time. Takarua is the prettiest island I have seen yet. Not simply the island or portion of it where we landed, but the makeup of it. Its broad deep lagoons, or rather long deep blue-watered lagoons with belt, points, and strips of land well wooded with the coconut trees, makes it look like a miniature archipelago. But it was much warmer there than here in Kaukura.

Wednesday evening we landed again at "Ahe," where again all stood on the landing and had prayer, song, and where we left several more passengers. Staid there one night. Left there again in the afternoon of Thursday and landed here in Kaukura in the forenoon of Friday.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

WHAT are some of your ways of making temperance Sunday interesting to the primary class?

The above question having been referred to me I will by the help of God, whom I know is interested in this department of church work and this principle brought in question, try to answer.

I would interest the primary class in much the same way that I would the other classes were I teaching in Iowa or Nebraska, or in any other State in which physiology and hygiene were being taught in the primary schools. I would try to simplify by use of such language suited to their comprehension, and, by simple illustrations, pictures, and charts.

I should ascertain how much knowledge the child already possessed of the effects of narcotics and stimulants by study and observation, and if they had not been impressed with the true nature of that which they were already somewhat acquainted I would seek to unfold to them its true nature by calling attention to what they had read and seen. If they had seen a drunkard it would be easy to interest them by calling their attention to some of the peculiarities of such a one. If he had been profane or cross or silly or staggered or was helpless I would try to impress upon them what a damage it was to the individual to be thus; and then how unpleasant it is for those who associate with them, and then what condition the world would be in if all were effected like them. I would also show how careless it made those who use either narcotics or stimulants in regard to dress or their facial appearance and breath.

I would use pictures and charts quite freely. I would also use such simple illustrations as these: Draw a large white mark on the blackboard; touch it ever so lightly with colored crayon and it destroys its whiteness; or use a clean white paper or cloth and the least touch of anything that discolors soils it and thus destroys its pure appearance; or take pure clear water and pour even the slightest bit of fluid, even if it be coffee or wine, into it, and it loses somewhat of its pureness; so likewise the use of that which is filthy or poisonous affects the life and body of a child.

Then take a small amount of water and put a little tobacco juice into it and ask the children how many would like to have to drink water poisoned in that way, and then if one would like a slight taste of it, it would be a very effective illustration of what goes into the stomach of a man who uses tobacco when he drinks water. The smell of an old pipe compared with the smell of a rose, or of rose perfume, would happily illustrate the contrast between the breath of one who uses tobacco and one who does not.

While I have in mind some illustrations when I go before a class, yet I hardly ever use the same illustrations twice, but am governed by that which is suggested to me while before the class.

Trusting that some one may be benefited by these suggestions, I am,

Your coworker and brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

LONDON, England.

Dear Editor:—We have a Sunday school in connection with the London branch just over one year old. On the anniversary day it was agreed that we send a few words to the Sunday school columns.

We commenced this school on Sunday, March 15, 1896, and many are the pleasant times we have had with the young. I felt quite happy myself yesterday (Sunday) when among the children and trying my best to make them feel happy to be at Sunday school; for I realize there is happiness in trying to make other people happy.

I sometimes think there is more to be gained from Sunday school work than perhaps most people think of. For instance, some twelve years ago we had a school and from that school we can now number many members of the London branch. One scholar, now a sister, brought a friend among us and she is now a sister; the same sister's mother is to be baptized next Sunday week. Another one of our sisters who was a Sunday school scholar, introduced her friend among us and she is now a member of the church. Another Sunday school scholar, who is now a member of the church, brought her cousin among the saints of God and he is now a member, and many others I could mention as direct or indirect fruit of our Sunday schools. So I think you will agree with me that we have been repaid for our work in the Sunday school.

Our school numbers at present seventy-four scholars with Elder J. Gerrard superintendent, W. Gerrard assistant, W. Gerrard secretary, Sr. H. Bates treasurer, and a staff of five teachers. Moneys collected from all sources is £6. 10s. 9½d.; expenditure £5. 3s. 3d.; balance £1. 7s. 6½d.

We have had many pleasant social meetings in connection with the Sunday school, and I think that it must have done much good. We are working in a very poor part of London and a rough neighborhood, but not so bad as a few years back, and I hope in a few years' time that many may see the true light.

It is our desire if possible to take about sixty of our regular scholars about fifteen miles in the country on the Queen's Jubilee day entirely free to the children, so have written to our Lord Mayor of London for assistance, as they have lately collected £30,000 and more for the poor of London. Hope he will meet our wishes. You see it is our wish that the people may know that we are here for their good, and we cannot do better than commence with their children.

Trusting that much good may continue to be accomplished I am,

Yours faithfully,
W. GERRARD.

STERLING, Kan., June 8.

Editors Herald:—A few lines might interest your many readers, and especially the ministers traveling through Kansas. I am located on South Broadway; my place is just outside the city limits, and we want every Latter Day Saint to call who can; we will be glad to see them, and give them as good as we have. We are poor in this world's goods; but rich in the Spirit, for we think we found a hidden treasure that is worth everything when we found this latter-day gospel; there is no sacrifice too great for me to make for the good of the work. If an elder can come and open up the work, I will do all I can to bring him here and give him a home. I have a team, and would go a hundred miles after an elder any time if they will let me know when they can come. I think a good work can be done here with a tent. I cannot say how long we could get the use of a house.

The Utah elders are preaching all through this part of the country, and I think our elders can do as well or better than they. I heard two of them preach a few miles west of here about a week ago. They are traveling through the country by school districts, going to every house giving the people tracts, and preaching in the schoolhouses. They have a branch organized at Raymond, twelve miles west of here, and a church at St. Johns. I don't like to see them getting ahead of our people that way.

I am doing all I can to let the people know of our doctrine. I do not hold any office in the church; but I can and do distribute tracts and give my testimony. The people are friendly and kind and seem to want the truth. I came from Douglas County, Missouri, near two months ago. I think there are some saints not very far north of me, and I will be very glad if they will write and tell me how I can find them, and I will go and see them, for I cannot do anything but work for the good Master.

A faithful brother,
CORNELIUS EDWARDS.

EUCLID, Ark., June 21.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving slowly but firmly in this part of the field. I have more calls than ever before. Some few have been baptized of late and others have given their names for baptism. Debates are expected along the line. One proposition signed between Bro. J. L. Reed and a Campbellite friend to begin the first Monday in July, at or near the Cove, Arkansas.

I have made some openings that have a bright lining. I was preaching in private houses a few weeks ago when by chance the M. E. circuit rider came out to hear me and he was so well pleased that he told the porters to open the doors of the chapel and let me in to set forth my claims; so I walked into a nice building. One was baptized and two more gave in their names; so this was an effectual opening.

It is funny to think how easy it was for the people to work up a singing at Pike City in order to sing me out, and it worked like a charm.

I will say to all that want my labors in Arkansas to be patient and I will respond as soon as practicable. In bonds,
J. W. JACKSON.

WEST POWLET, Vermont, June 15.

Editors Herald:—To-night will be my sixth discourse here. This is the first of Latter Day Saint doctrine in this section. I am having attentive listeners and as yet no apparent opposition. That will doubtless come later on. There is a daughter of Bro. G. W. Galley, of Nebraska, living here, the wife of Mr. John Butten, with whom I am staying and at whose request I came. It is too soon to attempt a diagnosis other than people so far are willing to hear.

I came here from Norwich, Chenango County, York State, when in connection with Bro. Blanchard a season was spent in preaching, resulting in the baptism of six. The gospel was first carried there last fall and a union church obtained to preach in. We intend to continue there during the coming autumn.

Before going to the latter place I spent a few weeks near Cohocton, where I encountered those Brighamites last winter. You will remember, as I indicated in a former letter, they denied the charge I brought against them of teaching "Adam-god," "blood-atonement," "obey-counsel," and other forms of heathenism, and challenged me for proofs other than those contained in such extracts as are published by the Herald and Ensign, which they graciously called "Josephite lies." The leaders have a very successful way of teaching them that everything not to their liking, running counter to them, is persecution, thereby arousing a species of fanaticism unfitting them for calm and serious investigation. This time I went prepared with Nos. 1 and 2 of the Journal of Discourses, published by themselves under sanction of their Presidency, who at that time were Brigham Young, H. C. Kimball, and W. Richards; also a tract containing an "Address delivered in the Twelfth Ward Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, October 12, 1884, by Elder Charles W. Penrose," on the subject of "blood-atonement as taught by leading elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," in which he concedes in the following language all that we charge them with; viz.:-

"I admit that the doctrine has been preached, that men have committed sins for which they were worthy of death—sins for which they could not get forgiveness short of shedding their blood;" but continues on by saying that the law was not enforced, and gives as a reason the following quotation from Brigham's sermon in vol. 4, Journal of Discourses:-

"The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle's being in full force, but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force."

"President Young and Jedediah M. Grant preached this doctrine to the people at that time, because there was a necessity for it in consequence of the transgressions of the people, and it worked upon them in the same way that the instructions which Jesus Christ gave to his apostles acted upon the people in his day, and have a similar effect in this day, that is, by the principle of fear. . . .

"Now Bro's Jedediah M. Grant and Brigham Young, because of the transgressions of the people, spoke as I have quoted. This was the time of the reformation, and the fears of evil doers were worked upon to induce reform, and hence the strong language used at that time. Do we need the same language now? I hope not; but if there was any need for it, it would be just as applicable now as then. . . .

"These are some of the ideas entertained by the Latter Day Saints on the subject of blood-atonement. After baptized persons have made sacred covenants with God and then commit deadly sins, the only atonement they can make is the shedding of their blood. At the same time, because of the laws of the land, and the prejudices of the nation, and the ignorance of the world, this law cannot be carried out; but when the time comes that the law of God shall be in full force upon the earth, then this penalty will be inflicted for those crimes committed by persons under covenant not to commit them."

The above is Mr. Penrose's own language. It is late as 1884. He defends Young and Grant in what they taught, and says when the law will allow it they will practice it. Judging from what was done in Utah when they had things their own way, it does not require much sagacity to see what they mean.

In Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, page 103 in the case of one "Howard Egan for the murder of James Monroe" tried "before Hon. Z. Snow, Judge of the first Judicial District Court of the United States for the Territory of Utah":—"You see by the law, the crime must be committed within the places over which the United States has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction. You will look to the evidence given you in court for the facts of the case; if you find the crime, if any has been committed, was committed within that extent of country between this and the Missouri River, over which the United States have the sole and exclusive jurisdiction, your verdict must be guilty. If you do not find the crime to have been committed there, but in the Territory of Utah, the defendant, for that reason, is entitled to a verdict of not guilty."

Strange law that would not allow a man to be committed for murder because it was done in the Territory of Utah, while outside of that territory and under United States jurisdiction it was murder.

On page 219 of the same discourse this is also found:—

"The time has been in Israel under the law of God, the celestial law, or that which pertains to the celestial law, for it is one of the laws of that kingdom where our father dwells, that if a man was found guilty of adultery he must have his blood shed, and that is near at hand. But now I say, in the name of the Lord, that if this people sin no more, but faithfully live their religion their sins will be forgiven them without taking life."

Whew! nothing small about Brigham. At the coming Jubilee they intend to have out there in commemoration of their advent into Salt Lake Valley, some choice nuggets culled from the prophet's inspired utterances ought to be carried in the procession. Their Jubilee will not be complete without them. In the preface to vol. 2, Journal of Discourses, we have this:—

"The second volume of the Journal of Discourses needs no recommendation to make it interesting to every saint who loves to drink of the streams that flow from the fountain of Eternal Truth. It is made up of the choicest fruit that can be culled from the tree of knowledge, suited to the tastes of all who can appreciate such delicious food. It contains the principles of the gospel of salvation to this generation. By the rules and precepts found in it, he that reads with the light of the Holy Spirit may measure himself and the progress he has made in the way of eternal life. Like a mirror it will reflect upon the souls of the meek and humble the beams of light which emanate from the presence of the Father."

Here are a few samples:—

"Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. . . ."

"If the Son was begotten by the Holy Ghost, it would be dangerous to baptize and confirm females and give the Holy Ghost to them, lest they should beget children, and be palmed upon the elders by the people, bringing the elders into great difficulties."

"When Adam came into Eden he 'brought one of his wives with him. . . .'"

"He is our father and our God and the only God with whom we have to do."

"I say, rather than that apostates should flourish here I will unsheath my bowie knife and conquer or die."

"I want you to hear, Bishops, what I am about to tell you. Kick these men out of your wards."—Brigham.

"They may break us up, and rout us from one place to another, but by and by we shall come to a point where we shall have all the women and they will have none."—Orson Hyde.

"The Savior found it his duty to be baptized to fulfill all righteousness, a command of far less importance than that of multiplying his race."—Orson Hyde.

"If an elder has borrowed from you, and you find he is going to apostatize, then you may tighten the screws upon him, but if he is willing to preach the gospel, without purse or scrip, it is none of your business what he does with the money he has borrowed from you."—Brigham.

"If Joseph had a right to dictate me in relation to salvation, in relation to a hereafter, he had a right to dictate me in relation to all my earthly affairs, in relation to the treasures of the earth, in relation to the earth itself. He had a right to dictate in relation to the cities of the earth, to the natives of the earth, and in relation to everything on land and on sea. . . .

"If he did not have that right, he did not have the priesthood of God."

"The priesthood is a power we should respect, reverence, and obey, no matter in whose hands it is."—J. M. Grant.

"Who gives me power, that at the pointing of my finger the hosts of Israel move, and at my request the inhabitants of this great territory are displaced; at my command they are here!"—Brigham.

"If Bro. Brigham tells me to do a thing it is the same as though the Lord told me to do it. This is the course for you and every other saint to take."—Heber C. Kimball.

"When I want any of that done I call on Bro. Heber, he is my prophet, he loves to prophesy and I love to hear him."—Brigham.

"I would say there are men and women that I would advise to go to the President immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case; and then let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."—J. M. Grant.

There are others that one could easily include, but space forbids. I might, however, include this stanza of their favorite hymns upon the subject of God having a wife:—

"In heaven are parents single,
No, the thought makes reason stare,
Truth is reason, Truth eternal,
Tells me I have a mother there."

In the face of the books—their own publications—these Mormons still deny. Denying seems to be a fad with them I learn; for instance they all say they are not to teach polygamy, and deny that they do it. Among the twenty or so of the members they have in Cohocton I have not met one but who admits a belief in it, and more than one has argued in favor of it. Strange thing, if these elders that are sent out do not teach it, that their converts are found believing it! One Elder Wilsey told that "it is the purest and holiest part of the doctrine."

I learn that there are thirty-two missionaries in New York State, six of them in Steuben County. At a place called Wallace, where they were permitted to use a Union church, I was informed by leading citizens that they were passing themselves off for "not being of the Young party, but of the Smith party." I obtained the church for one Sunday eve, the local minister yielding his appointment for me while I succeeded in removing the mask. I went to another place where they are trying to do something, but were having so little influence with the people that I did not consider it worth the effort or spend time just then to reply to them, but may later on. The prospects for the true gospel in York State are excellent. Openings are abundant. Bro. I. M. Smith has been associated with me in Steuben County. He is now in Greenwood where an interest was aroused by him on a previous visit there and they were anxious for his return.

Anxiously in the conflict for Zion's righteousness I am,

Sincerely yours,
F. M. SHEEHY.

McGraw, Pa., June 19.

Editors Herald:—When I wrote you last Bro. I. M. Smith and myself were holding meetings in Bro. George Parker's house, in Fagundus. Bro. Parker and wife were the only saints in this part of the country. We held services until May 21, baptizing Bro. Parker's mother. Others were interested, so it was thought best for the writer to stay for a few days and then join Bro. Smith, who left for Greenwood, New York, on the 21st.

I continued preaching over Sunday, but was taken sick and had to stop until the following Saturday, when, although weak, started in again and continued through the week.

On Sunday, having obtained a Union church at McGraw, a place some five miles from Fagundus, I began services amidst the thickest kind of prejudice, caused by some of the good (?) Christian people circulating false stories about me and the work. But first a few came out to hear, and when they saw that I did not have any of my "wives" with me, thought perhaps I could not kill them with one sermon, so concluded to listen. The audience increased in size until the church was packed. I close a two-weeks' series of meetings there to-morrow night. Prejudice is breaking away and many doors are open to me.

The trustees of the church here are noble men; they have stood by me, and have tried to get the people to listen to reason. Mr. Willis Sampson, one of the trustees, kindly invited me to his pleasant home, and both he and his noble wife have done all in their power to make my stay pleasant.

On Monday night I go to another place, called Excelsior, and begin a series of meetings there. Then there are two more places where the people are anxious for me to preach to them. So although Satan is up and about his business, the Lord is not asleep, and if we are not mistaken the Lord will do a work among the people in this vicinity and bring joy and peace to many souls; and if we do not reap now, we trust others may. Last night a preacher in the United Brethren Church was out and assisted me in the service.

I have preached twenty-three times in twenty-one days, and expect to keep it up at that rate for some time to come. Have answered a misstatement in the local paper here to-day, and will not be surprised if the enemy sends along someone to try and overthrow the work. However, I am here on the ground and by the help of God I intend to hold the fort. Will baptize the head of a family to-morrow if all is well.

In the fight,
GEO. W. ROBLEY.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 18.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from Pipe Creek; preached fourteen discourses and had large attentive congregations. Bro. G. W. Wallis was with me, and I think the work he did was excellent. I look for many profitable campaigns with him in the future. Pipe Creek has had much work done there in times past, and I look for some of the seed sown there years ago to bring forth among the young people. I shall endeavor to do all I can for the work there.

Bro. Franklin Hodges will be a great help to the people there. Upon leaving I could not help giving him words of encouragement, for it seemed that the Spirit indicated that there was a line of duty laid out for him among that people.

I will start with Bro. Neal to Wilson County soon. In spite of the many dark clouds that have overshadowed our work here, I cannot help but feel that the work in this district will yet improve. I am well as usual. May the Lord prosper his work everywhere.

Your brother,
H. P. CURTIS.

SANDWICH, Ill., June 20.

Editors Herald:—I stopped off here the 8th and have continued meetings until to-day. Six were baptized as a result of the meetings and the saints are rejoicing to see the work prosper. Bro. F. G. Pitt was here and did the baptizing. He arrived last evening and returned to-day noon. The meeting will close this evening and I will return home to-morrow morning for a stay of five days, then I go to Seafeld, where we will labor for a while. I understand some are waiting there for baptism. We have had the best of liberty in presenting the word and are encouraged at results of labor performed. Bro. I. L. Rogers and wife have made me a home, as well as Bro. and Sr. Hart, and others. The saints here are alive and encouraged. Two went down from here to Mission and were baptized on the 13th, making eight in all, and I think twenty-one inside of one year; so they have a right to feel encouraged. The saints are very generous in helping the elders with means to pay car fare, for which please accept thanks.

I feel indebted to Illinois saints for their kindness to me as I passed through going and coming from conference.

I have met J. H. Lake, F. M. Cooper, E. L. Kelley, Leonard Houghton, and others who are battling away in this good cause. The two former brethren we left at Mission. We haven't heard the results of their labors since the conference closed. We had one of the most happy and peaceful conferences I ever attended; the large tent was full and running over—something over six hundred in attendance, and the Mission saints did wondrously in caring for the congregation. I hope they may continue to live faithful and receive the reward of their labor.

I wish to say to Bro. Joseph Lambert that I preached in Pierre, South Dakota, and south and west of Madison, and south and west of Woonsocket, South Dakota. Had good liberty, but small congregation at the last-named place. The two first named places had a fine congregation and good liberty.

May God bless the labor and speed the plow.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

Miss., June 23.

Editors Herald:—I write to ask that if there are any saints, or of the traveling ministry near Clayville, Virginia, they will hunt up Mrs. Alice R. Gorson, and instruct her in the doctrine. I have been sending her papers and literature for more than two years, and she now writes me that she is interested.

Your sister,
MRS. IDA STEWART.

BURNSIDE, Mich., June 19.

Editors Herald:—The June conference of the Eastern Michigan district was a very pleasant and enjoyable season. The Spirit of the Master was richly felt; the business passed off without a jar, and the preaching, and social meetings were grand.

On Sunday the chapel was dedicated. Bro. Briggs preached the dedicatory sermon, and Bro. Cornish offered the prayer. The building is surely an honor to the Lord, and a credit to those who reared it. There were nine baptized; so the honest are being gathered out from among the wicked.

Bro. William Davis and the writer were appointed to conduct the tent meetings in the district, and accordingly came to the above-named place, day before yesterday, reared the tent yesterday, and in the evening Bro. Davis discoursed to quite a fair and attentive audience.

We solicit the prayers and the assistance of all the saints in the district, that we may be able to accomplish much more this year, than in any previous year. Save your Ensigns, Heralds, and Autumn Leaves, and send them to us to distribute to the people of the world. Those wishing to send papers, please write me a postal to my home address, Bay Port, Michigan, and I will inform you where to send them. As we will be moving from place to place, in this way we will avoid mistakes.

Yours ever,
J. A. GRANT.

ALVA, Ok., June 20.

Editors Herald:—I have been greatly encouraged by the good news coming through the Herald; it brings satisfaction and assurance that God is with us as a people and directing the affairs of his church. The pastoral address by Brn. E. C. Briggs, Joseph Luff, T. C. Kelley, J. W. Wight, and the one from over the sea, James Caffall, also others of our own land, have been enjoyed very much by your co-worker in Oklahoma. These writings being evidence to me that God has blessed those men with much power and inspiration; and while I see how faithful others are, how the Lord has been with them, my own self and labors remind me of the prodigal son.

My time during the past few months has been given to preparing a home for myself and wife, consequently I have not been solely engaged in the ministry. I have thought it needful to do so, in order to be better prepared in the future to give my time to the work of the Lord. At present I am working at my trade—bricklaying, but have consent to use the Congregationalist church, which I will do, providence permitting, and tell the people of Alva about the restored gospel. The people here have treated me very kindly and many have expressed a desire for me to hold meetings with them. They think it very strange that a “preacher should work,” especially at bricklaying, but I am glad I can turn my hand at work that will assist me, the Bishop, and the saints in meeting the expense of the family.

The outlook for a good hearing in this town is very favorable. Our gospel has never been preached in this part of Oklahoma. The country people are so busy with their wheat harvest that it would be useless to expect them to attend meetings now.

Yours for truth,

R. M. MALONEY.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 5.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

THE ASSUMED THIRD ANGEL'S MESSAGE.

WE WOULD note in passing that the old mistake of placing “the tarrying time” of the virgins after “the midnight cry” was made, is not yet detected and abandoned; whereas Jesus places the tarrying of the bridegroom before the midnight cry was made. (“Controversy,” p. 243.) “While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.” “The widespread movement under the proclamation of the first message, answered to the going forth of the virgins, while the passing of the time of expectation, the disappointment, and the delay were represented by the tarrying of the bridegroom.” No such arrangement of events as the above is represented by our Savior in the parable of the ten virgins. (Matt. 25:1-13), as all can see who read. The order there is: The ten virgins take their lamps, vessels, and five of them take oil, and all go forth to meet the bridegroom. While the bridegroom is to tarry, all the virgins fall asleep; “at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.” The virgins then arise and trim their lamps. The cry here is not made by the virgins, it comes to them; they are awakened from sleep by it. In this the Advents made a mistake. They, as the virgins pretended to make the “cry.” Nor is there any “tarrying time” represented by our Savior after the cry is made. This is another mistake they made; but they seem unable to see it. Nor are the virgins to be “disappointed” about the coming of the bridegroom either. The foolish virgins, however, are to be taken by surprise in that they are not prepared for the bridegroom, nor are they able to get ready ere he arrives. They are not ready to enter into the marriage supper. Here was their disappointment, not in that the bridegroom failed to come when expected. Thus it is plain that the movement is all too premature, and is a strongly woven medley of deceptions from beginning to end.

Who believing the Bible to contain the word of the Lord could be induced to accept the idea that the angels of Revelation 14 would make so many and grave mistakes as appear in these strange interpretations of them, and are not in any way misled? The third angel is to announce the judgment of God against all who “worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand.” (Rev. 14:9). It is assumed that because in verse 12 it says, “Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus,” that the commandments here mentioned are the “ten commandments,” and that because the Adventists keep the Sabbath of the decalogue, they, forsooth, are the saints there referred to, and are now fulfilling the message of the third angel. It will be observed that they play the double role of angel (declare his message), and make themselves the people referred to by the message. Surely they “do many wonderful works.” Also, it will be further observed according to the interpretation here given, that inasmuch as it is the angel that proclaims the message, the message in part is, “Here is the patience of the saints,” and the Adventists are declaring the message, and at the same time are “the saints” here referred to; that the angel, therefore, is the Seventh-day Adventists, and that John’s three angels symbolize saints, that is, Adventists.

Well, if they succeed as well with the third message as they have with the first and second, we shall hear more apologies for mistakes made, and misapplications of Scripture. If the “ten commandments” were the only commandments of God, we might bear with the assumption here made by these claims. But God made Jesus Christ his “commander” and law-giver to the people (Deut. 18:18; Isa. 42:4), and for the acceptance and rejection of that law and those commandments are we, since Christ came, held amendable (John 12:46, 47, 48; Acts 3:22, 23).

That the claim made that the commandments of God mentioned in Revelation 14:12 are the decalogue is an assumption, is made certain by the following considerations. The object of the divine law is to give everlasting life; is the means whereby life is attained. The ten commandment law never was designed to give life. This Jesus and Paul made plain:—

I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

No eternal life, then, without Christ, and “his law.” Mark this.

In the letter to the Romans, Paul enters into a lengthy argument with these Jewish converts to Christianity, who insisted that “the law” should be kept as well as the gospel. (See Acts 15:1-24.) He says concerning this identical law and question:—

Behold, thou art a Jew, and retest in the law, and makest thy boast of God, and knowest his will, and approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law.—Romans 2:17, 18.

What law? Answer,

Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?—Romans 2: 21, 22.

It cannot honestly be denied that the subject of Paul's dissertation here is the law of which the ten commandments are a part, and the constitutional basis of, and includes them. Of this law Paul argues in the second and third chapters of Romans, that it will not be the standard in the judgment day (2: 14, 15, 16), but "Jesus Christ"—that is, the gospel; that as compared with the law, even the man who keeps the law and the gospel at the same time, as a religious guide of life, become "guilty before God." "Therefore, by the deeds of the law [doing the law], there shall no flesh be justified" (verses 19, 20, chapter 3); that all, without respect to persons, who obey the gospel, whether Jew or Gentile, are to be justified by Jesus Christ. (3: 26.) Also. "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." (Verse 28.)

Moreover, God based the promises of eternal life and the future inheritance on the gospel, as it was accepted and preached by Abraham, four hundred and thirty years before the law was given or enjoined.

Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.—Gal. 3: 16-18.

Abraham is "the father," not only of the circumcision, but also of those who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised. For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. . . . Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all.—Rom. 4: 12-16.

By a careful study of these passages of scripture it will be plainly discerned that Paul teaches: firstly, that the law is not the standard of God's final judgment; secondly, that none, either Jew or Gentile, can be in the gospel or moral sense justified by it; thirdly, there is no promise of the life hereafter, no "inheritance" by or through the keeping of "the deeds of the law;" and fourthly, God has ordained that the promise of eternal inheritance should be by grace, even "the gospel of his grace," by taking "the steps of that faith of our father Abraham," to the end "it might be sure to all the seed," all who obey the gospel and live it faithfully to the end, whether they do or do not keep the law. "Not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham." So Paul teaches.

That the law is in no sense the source or means of obtaining life eternal, we learn from Paul, thus:—

Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.—Gal. 3: 21.

Paul further shows in this same chapter that "the law" was added "till the seed should come," and that Christ having come, gospel believers and receivers are no longer bound by the law,—no longer under it. And in chapter 4: 5, he shows that Christ came to redeem those who were (not are) under the law.

The ten commandments neither justify nor give life. Wherefore then serve them? What their purpose? They were a schoolmaster to Israel, to lead up to Christ. They were a "ministration of death, written and engraven in stones." (2 Cor. 3: 7), and their leading elements have a proper place in right civil governments; that is, according to the gospel (1 Tim. 1: 5-17). Christ came, therefore, and while gradually introducing the gospel, he "fulfilled," completed, brought to an end, by fulfillment, "the law and the prophets." (Matt. 5: 17). All the prophecies that had been uttered previous to his coming that pointed in any manner to his first mission, being fulfilled, had an end in him; the law also having served its purpose ceased to be binding as a religious guide, at the cross; hence, "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness; to every one that believeth" (Rom. 10: 4). The Jews could not see this truth in the apostolic age because they could not let go of the law and take hold of the gospel (2 Cor. 3: 7-14); and it seems that others who turn to that law are found in the same condition. Seeing, then, that the ten commandments do not contain the requisite "righteousness," even if observed, either to justify, give life, save or secure the inheritance, but that by the gospel all these ends are reached through the forbearance of God, surely we may safely conclude that they are not the commandments of God referred to under the third angel's message of Revelation 14: 12. This surely sets aside the claims set forth in the so-called Advent movement, and justifies the statement that that claim is an assumption. God has given us commandments unto life through Jesus Christ, in the gospel.

But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel.—2 Tim. 1: 10.

He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.—John 14: 24.

It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.—John 6: 63.

He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.—John 12: 48-50.

God's words spoken by Jesus Christ, the commandments contained in the gospel, "are life everlasting." Eternal life being brought to light through the gospel, would necessitate the removing out of the way, "taking out of the way," or the abolishing of that which stood in the way of and opposed to life, and became the essential reason why Jesus should "abolish" "the ministration" of death, that law which killed the sinner; that he might partake of life. (2 Cor. 3: 7-13.)

And by the foregoing statements of Jesus and Paul, his holy Apostle, we are doubly assured that the Decalogue is not identical with "the commandment of God" of Revelation 14: 12.

To substantiate that assumption, it would nullify the statements of scripture uttered by Jesus and Paul.

THE MARK OF THE BEAST.

It is assumed that the "mark of the beast" is this:—

The change in the fourth commandment is the change pointed out in the prophecy, and the keeping of the counterfeit Sabbath is the reception of the mark. But Christians of past generations observed the first day, supposing that they were keeping the Bible Sabbath, and there are in the churches of today many who honestly believe that Sunday is the Sabbath of divine appointment. None of these have received the mark of the beast. . . . The test upon this question does not come until Sunday observance is enforced by law, and the world is enlightened concerning the obligation of the true Sabbath.—“Controversy,” pp. 281, 2.

Is not this a strange statement, setting forth a peculiarly strange idea? “The change of the Sabbath is the sign, or mark, of the authority of the Romish Church,” says the writer. The keeping of the first day of the week is “the mark of the beast.” The Roman Church made or constituted this mark. But “not until the issue is thus plainly set before the people, and they are brought to choose between the commandments of God and the commandments of men, will those who continue in transgression receive the mark.” (Page 282.) Here, then, we have the idea fully set before us. Reduced, it is this: Those who in the past ages and who in the present or future, have observed, or do observe Sunday as the Sabbath willingly, have not received the mark, nor do they. But it will be receiving “the mark of the beast,”

When the churches of our land, uniting upon such points of faith as are held in common by them, shall influence the State to enforce their decrees and sustain their institutions, then will Protestant America have formed an image to the Roman hierarchy.—Page 278.

How does it come that the enforcement of Sunday observance by Protestant churches and the United States combined is the receiving of “the mark of the beast,” while the enforcement of the same observance by law “for more than a thousand years” (“Controversy,” p. 276), by the Papacy, was not the reception of the mark? All honest keepers of Sunday are by this writer excused, even those “of past generations.” “None of these have received the mark of the beast,” “not excepting the Roman Catholic communion.” Herein is an exception to the rule that has hitherto been held to be good both in natural and spiritual things; namely, that like causes operating will always produce like results under like circumstances. The circumstances in both cases are alike. It is the enforcement of the identical religious rite on mortal men, by civil enactment and authority. This assumed third angel’s message does develop some anomalous things. Those who are forced to observe Sunday or Sabbath, and cannot help themselves except on penalty, are to drink God’s wrath “without mercy,” while those who are not so forced to keep Sunday and yet keep it are to go scot free! This is not consistent. It does not sound like an heavenly angel’s message.

This Adventist construction of “the mark of the beast,” that it is the substitution of the first instead of the seventh-day as the Sabbath, is an assumption for which not one word of Bible proof exists. The uncontradicted proof of this assertion, is the fact that not one word of Bible proof is presented to show to the contrary. This so-called mark of the beast, the observance of the first day of the week, the Lord’s day, existed centuries prior to the existence of the beast.

A “mark” is a distinguishing “sign,” by which persons or things marked may be distinguished from other persons or things not so marked. God “set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.” (Gen. 4:15.) He also had placed, “a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for the abominations” that were practiced in Jerusalem at one time. (Ezek. 9:4.) The “mark” may be visible, as was evidently the case with Cain, or, to man, invisible, as in Ezekiel. The Sabbath was a “sign,” or seal between God and Israel before the gospel was offered to them by Christ, under the law (Ex. 31:16, 17); but it was not a visible mark on them. The mark of the beast can be placed either in the forehead or in the hand. The beast has also a “name,” and a “number,” and the number is the number of a man. (Rev. 13:17, 18).

The name of the beast as given by this writer is the “United States.” I should like to see the name of this government in any of its forms, transposed or spelled out into 666, the number of the name of the beast, by any mode of computation whatsoever. The visible mark, or seal of Israel, under the law, was “circumcision” (Rom. 4:11); and the anti-typical sign, seal, or mark of saints under the gospel is the “seal” of the Holy Ghost, which he gives to them. (Eph. 1:13). And is invisible, save in the emblematical act of “laying on of hands” for the gift of the Holy Ghost (Acts 8:14-17; 19:1-6; Heb. 6:1, 2). The mark of the beast is an enforced obligation of some kind; but the most sacred sign or mark that we can now remember, as contradistinguishing Roman Catholics, is the sign of the cross. It was under that emblematic sign that the converted Roman Emperor was to subdue the world. Constantine caused a group of waxen figures to be publicly exhibited before the windows of the imperial palace in his new city of Constantinople, representing himself beneath the protection of the cross, trampling under foot the dragon of idolatrous superstition.—Lives of the Popes, p. 23, London Religious Tract Society, and American Sunday School Union, vol. 1.

The children of Catholics make the sign of the cross over their forehead and heart whenever they see the lightning’s flash in the dark and ominous cloud. Without the sign of the cross made with water in the baby’s forehead, by the priest, there is no salvation for it; so they teach. In his “Vision of the Ages, page 270, Mr. B. W. Johnson, writing on the mark of the beast says:—

It is remarkable, however, that a mark on the forehead converts a person into a Roman Catholic, and without this mark none are regarded as heirs of salvation. If the little infant should die without this mark it has no chance of salvation; but if the priest makes upon its forehead the sign of the cross with water, it is safe forever. Jesuit priests upon the fields of battle have gone around among the wounded and dying savages, who had never heard of Christ, and made this sign, the mark of the beast, upon the foreheads of the dying pagans, and thus converted them into good Catholics and heirs of eternal bliss. In Mexico and Peru, pagan nations, doomed to execution, have had this mark made upon them by zealous priests, the language and meaning of which the unhappy victims could not understand, and whose object they could not, then, (as soon as baptized?) know, then were sent out to die as converted Christians. That mark that makes the infants, the heathen, the infidel, all subjects of Rome.

Again, the same author says on page 271.

It is next stated that traffic was forbidden to all but the servants of the beast. It has been common for Catholics to be forbidden to patronize those who were not loyal to the Pope. At least three councils are named; those of Tours, of Constance, and the Lateran, which have expressly forbidden business intercourse with heretics.

The Roman Church is officially called the Latin Church, to distinguish it from the Greek Catholic Church. The sacred books of this church are written in the Latin language. Its religious services are in every land celebrated in the Latin tongue. All its sacred councils and conferences are convened and conducted in the Latin, which is the sacred language of that church. It received its "power, seat, and great authority," (Rev. 13: 2) from the Latin government, and that government was, it is claimed, founded by Lateinos! The name of a man. And the name of the man is a number, and that number is the number of the beast! Take the Latin mode of computation; that is, by attaching a certain value to each letter, as at the head of the chapters in the commonly used Bibles, and thus computing the number of the name Lateinos and what have we?

		Lateinos 666.

And we have 666 as the number of the name of the beast. "And his number is six hundred, three score and six" (Rev. 13:18). Now it is shown that the second or two-horned beast of the chapter cited is to cause those under its control to receive either "the mark" of the first beast of the chapter or his "name," or "the number of his name" (See v. 17). The first beast is evidently a union of church and state, and such was the Latin church for a period of twelve hundred and sixty years—from 540 A. D. to 1800 A. D.; that is, from the time of the going into effect of the famous edict of Justinian, the Roman Emperor, to unite all men in one faith at the peril of death or banishment, till the separation of church and state was declared in the year 1800. But since the separation in 1800, where and what is the first of those two beasts? We can identify one element of that beast; that is, the religious,—the church, the woman,—but where now is beast on which the woman sat? (Rev. 13:1-8; 17:1-8.)

That beast, government, is now doubtless gone "into perdition," where the Revelator saw him go; so that now the wrinkles on his "ten horns" are numerous, and which cause them to appear of great age. Now if the two-horned beast was to cause "the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast" (Rev. 13:12), he surely would have to exist during the time of the existence of the "ten-horned" beast. This is evident. It could not force the people to worship that which does not exist. The Catholic Church separate and apart from the earthly government is not "the beast." In Daniel's vision the church element is not the beast (See chapter 7: 8); but a "little horn" among the ten, and that was only part religious. Only the "eyes" and the "mouth speaking great things," even of the little horn, stand to represent the religious element. If, therefore, the "first beast" of Revelation 13:12 has in reality no existence now, how can it be assumed that the "United States and Protestantism," combined, united, symbolize the two-horned beast of that chapter? The facts of past history regarding this subject condemn this claim as false, and the assumption as being unfounded in fact.

And for these plain reasons the claim that because the Adventists—seventh-day—assume that they are fulfilling Revelation 14:9-12, declaring that "Republicanism (United States) and Protestantism" united will constitute the two-horned beast; and that this supposed beast will enforce Sunday worship as a day of rest; and that the day so "enforced" constitutes "the mark of the beast;" is a bundle of assumptions, for which, in reality, not a word of scripture or a sentence of history exists as proof.

The angels and their messages as foreshown to John are matters that God's hands are to deal with, and disclose the progressive order of his latter-day work, and no uncertainty or mistakes will characterize the accomplishment of it. When the time for the angel having "the everlasting gospel" to be restored had arrived, he came. He delivered his message; men became witnesses to the fact of his coming, and of the verity of the message. It was not a new gospel; but by the new revelation men were ordained and duly authorized to preach the same old gospel, if you please, that Jesus and the apostles had declared in former days. It is the gospel not in "word only," but also "in power," or authority, "and in the Holy Ghost; and in much assurance" (1 Thess. 1: 5).

Let me here digress for a moment to point out the grave and radical mistake that has been made by all the church builders from Constantine the Great, 325, A. D., clear on down the ages to D. L. Moody, of the last half of the nineteenth century.

That grave and radical and awful mistake, is: The assumption that "the written statute" gives authority to men to act in the name of the Lord as ministers, in building up his kingdom. This assumption has been at the base of every religious movement in the world,—the Christian world, so called,—since the days when revelation direct from God ceased in the second and third centuries of the Christian era, till the present. But this assumption is not true, either in politics or religion. The written law or statute gives no man primary, official or ministerial authority. "Written statutes" constitute no man an officer of government, either religious, social, or political. A written precedent is no source of primary official authority to man to act in any capacity whatever. The written statute or legal precedent is all-powerful authority to the already authorized man, in directing his official actions, in the carrying out his previous calling. The power that gives authority to man is prior to, and behind the written statutes. The power that gives the written statutes power and life is the power that authorizes men. For man to presume to take the execution or administration of the law, or the written statutes, into his hands without being authorized previously to do so, constitutes them presumptuous. The apostle Peter said that such men "despise government; presumptuous are they, self-willed" (2 Peter 2:10). The "will" of the great Ordainer of the kingdom of heaven is just as supreme in the determination of who shall be officers of that kingdom as it is in regard to what shall be the laws that are designed to govern in that kingdom. And if men who have been so busy building churches for God, as they say, had gone to the Law-Giver for authority to act, instead of to the law only, as they claim, the name of Christ would not have been disgraced with the numerous differing, contradictory faiths and unauthorized, divided, contending churches as it is to-day. But, like the saints at Antioch, would have waited, and with fasting and prayer would have "ministered to the Lord" till the Holy Ghost had said, "Separate me" Wesley and Knox, or Luther and Calvin, or Campbell and Miller! (Acts 13:1-4). "So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost," went, etc. "O!" exclaims the great and wise of the world, with uplifted hands, "O, horrible!" All our wise and learned men so mistaken as all that! And their work all done without authority from God? "How foolish to us to do like the saints at Antioch!" Well, Paul says:—

But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness; But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks. . . . Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God. Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.—1 Cor. 1:23-25.

But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.—1 Cor. 2:14.

God says of those who deviate from the directions of his will:—

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.—Isa. 55:8.

Let me ask, in reply to the foregoing of the worldly wise, Is it a fact that God is committed to all the religious confusion now prevailing in the world? The word answers:—

For God is not the author of confusion.—1 Cor. 14:33.

There is not an example in all the Bible of any man being constituted an authority in the things of God—an authorized minister, by the written statute, nor by any precedent. It did not follow that because one man, Noah, was called of God a prophet, that therefore Moses was a prophet too, or because Peter and James were apostles that therefore Paul was an apostle also. No, Moses and Paul had to be called of God, each independently of all others, to entitle him to act authoritatively in his respective calling. (Ex. 3:11-15; Acts 26:16-18). Jesus Christ put Paul into the ministry (1 Tim. 1:12). He did not assume this authority. Timothy was ordained an evangelist because of the revealments of prophecy designating his calling (1 Tim. 1:18), and not because the church or some of its members thought he ought to be a preacher, and were ready to vote for it. Timothy was solemnly warned "before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ," against the doctrine that God's ministry could be chosen by the vote or voice of the people. (2 Tim. 4:1-4). Such procedure was not sound doctrine then; such is not sound doctrine now. Such was not the order under the shadowy Israelitish institution (Heb. 5:1-4); much less is it the order of God in the substance, the Christian economy. Titus of old was empowered to act in the work of the ministry through the Holy Ghost, which had been shed upon him abundantly through Jesus Christ, (Titus 3:5, 6). And at the close of John's revelation to the seven churches of Asia, that revelation which God gave to him; for the benefit of the world, God says that only those who "hear" "the Spirit and the bride," or church, are authorized to say "Come" (Rev. 22:17). But it does not read, "whosoever will," let him say Come!

The voice of the people, and not the written statute, is the sovereign primal authority of the man chosen for office in republics and other human governments. Their authority is therefore human. The voice of God by revelation direct from heaven, and not the written Bible statute, is primal authority to men chosen for office in the kingdom or Church of God. Their authority is therefore divine, coming as it does from the divine source. The written statutes of the States, or the United States, do not constitute men officers—sheriffs, governors, or presidents, but the voice of the people immediately by ballot expressed, thus elected to office. So the written word, or statutes of the Bible, do not constitute men deacons, teachers, or elders, evangelists, or apostles in the Church of God; but the direct revelation of God by angels, or prophets, or the revealments of the Holy Ghost, and an ordination by those in the church holding divine authority to so ordain. (See Acts 13:1-4; Mark 3:13, 14; 1 Cor. 12:28, 29). The divine authority or power of the gospel is in the "hands" of Jesus Christ. And it therefore stands to reason that every one that receives of this authority to act in the name of Jesus must somehow have access to his "hands" to receive it:—

All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.—Matt. 28:18, 19.

To whomsoever he will, he holds the right to say, "Go ye, therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." "In the name of" is by the authority of. And such as he authorizes to go can, like Peter, say, "We ought to obey God rather than men." (Acts 5:29.) "And he commanded us to preach unto the people" (Acts 10:42); or like Paul, "And hath given unto us the ministry of reconciliation." (2 Cor. 5:18.) It is not true, then, according to the foregoing that every one that reads the Bible and history, and that can speak fluently, is called of God or has authority to go and proclaim his ideas, presuming that the Bible, or the written statutes, authorizes him to preach and build a church or churches. Had our Adventist friends been apprised of this, which they have had opportunity to have been apprised of, they need not have been guilty of the awful assumption of claiming to be fulfilling the divine missions assigned of God to his three angelic messengers of Revelation 14:6-12. They need not have perverted the divine word and assumed that the three angels were but "symbols." They need not have assumed that "the mark of the beast" is Sunday enforced by Protestantism and Republicanism united, in the United States." Or assumed that "the commandments of God" there referred to are the decalogue, and of the observance of which by followers of Christ, James says, "to whom we gave no such commandment" (Acts 15:24). But, on the contrary would have been able to see the moral necessity of real angel's coming to restore the gospel, not "in word only, but also in power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," as indicated in the prophet's word, and as demanded by the fact of the apostasy of the ancient church, and the consequent cessation of revelation from God for more than twelve hundred and sixty years. This the Protestant and Catholic world does not deny, but does deny that any revelation has been received since God gave the revelation to John on Patmos.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

Conference convened at Panau Kaukura, April 6, 1897. Bro. J. F. Burton called the assembly to order and the exercises were opened by singing "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning," when prayer was offered by Bro. Pohemiti. A permanent organization was effected by choosing Bro. J. F. Burton president, Bro. Hubert Case assistant president, Bro. Petero Derrien secretary, Bro. Pohemiti assistant secretary, also Sr. Alice M. Case English secretary, Bro. John Hawkins interpreter. The following named brethren were appointed ushers, Tumatau, Tetaku, Pai, and Tahania. The letter of appointment of Bro. J. F. Burton to the Islands Mission was read before the assembly as translated into the Tahitian language. It was moved and seconded that we receive and sustain Bro. Burton as president of the mission. Motion carried unanimously. Minutes of conference of 1896 were read. Some objections were made and the president recommended that those concerned counsel over the matter during the noon intermission. A short address followed from Bro. J. F. Burton concerning the work of the mission. Adjournment was then taken until 12 o'clock, a hymn was sung, and Bro. Burton pronounced the benediction. The afternoon session opened at the time appointed. A hymn was sung and Bro. John Hawkins offered prayer. Minutes of morning session approved. Report of Elder J. F. Bro. John Hawkins reported that he had preached and taught every week, but owing to his age and weakness had baptized none. Report of Elder H. Janssen was read as follows: Had preached 35 times; confirmed 9; ordained 2; blessed 7 children; administered to the sick 153 times; assisted in 5 elder's courts. Report of Elder Tapuni: preached 57 times; baptized 5; confirmed 3; administered to the sick 12 times; blessed 4 children. A brother Tetauru by name, came before the assembly, desiring to repent and be received again into fellowship on his former baptism. On motion he was so received. The report of secretary, Petero Derrien, was read. In Tahitian division 891; loss by death 18; expelled 67; new members 36; present number 842; net loss 49. In Fakarava division, loss by death 5; expelled 1; added members 4; present number 865; net loss 2; total loss 51. Number of members at present 1,707. The following elder's reports were presented: Tetuaitevai, preached 73 sermons, baptized 3, confirmed 1, blessed 2 children, administered to sick 8 times; Araiaiti, preached 74 sermons, confirmed 4, administered to sick 13 times. Sixth quorum of elders reported, Pofatu secretary, "To the conference assembled: The sixth quorum of elders has held 4 sessions, 44 members present. Loss by death 4, received 4 new members. Reports aggregate as follows: number of sermons preached 1,484; baptized 27; confirmed 53; marriages 8; children blessed 46; administered to sick 622 times." The third quorum of deacons also reported, Hiti secretary, To the conference: The third quorum of deacons has held three sessions. Received one new member. The president of the quorum having been expelled for transgression, a successor was chosen, Bro. Turatahi, formerly the secretary of the quorum, Bro. Hiti was chosen secretary. We request the conference to ordain the president chosen." A petition was read from the Arutua branch for the ordination of Bro. Parapu to the office of deacon. It was moved and carried unanimously that he be ordained. A petition from the Kaukura branch, that the yearly collection of $1.20 per capita be given to them to assist in the expenses incurred by the feast, was left for further consideration. The following resolution was adopted: "Resolved that the saints in the South Sea Islands mission request President Joseph Smith to visit the islands and meet with the saints. And that the saints here shall raise the money to pay his expenses in coming and returning, and that the money be deposited with the bishop's agent in Papeete. The indebtedness for recoppering the ship Evanelia was considered. The amount remaining unpaid was ascertained to be $359.38. On motion the bishop's agents were authorized to pay the debt. A committee, composed of Brn. Louis Bellais, Pohemiti, and Tufaunui, was appointed by the chair to examine into the loss of the ship "Evanelia" and report causes. A report was read from the committee appointed at conference of 1896 to investigate the matter of buying the land upon which the church stands at Tamarie, Anaa. The land might have been bought, had the committee acted promptly. But owing to neglect of duty on the part of Brn. Hotu and Pohemiti, the opportunity was lost. The land is still in dispute, neither party having a clear title. A committee consisting of Brn. Maevatua, Pou and Ioane was appointed by the chair to investigate the bills and papers relative to the printing press, and report to the conference. The president also appointed Brn. Hubert Case and Metuaore to officiate in the ordinations previously approved. An elder's court was appointed composed of Elders Kehouri, Tane-terau and Pori, to investigate some cases which had been presented.

The eight o'clock session, April 7, was opened by singing, and prayer by Bro. Tevaea. Viriamu, president of Fakarava division, and Louis Bellais, president of Tahitian division, each reported that owing to press of temporal work no labor had been done by them in their respective divisions. The third quorum of teachers, Nui secretary, reported: "The third quorum of teachers has held two sessions with 21 members present. Total number of sermons preached 211." The fifth quorum of priests, Teufi secretary, reported: "The fifth quorum of priests has held four sessions with 15 members present. Received one new member. The number of sermons preached 438; baptized 1." A petition that Bro. Tefau be reordained to the office of a priest was read. The ordination was approved. The brethren appointed to officiate in the ordinations approved at previous session, reported the work finished. Report of committee on printing press was read. They recommended that we authorize the Bishop to pay the bills for the press. Also that those branches of the church here who had not collected the sum previously agreed upon should be requested again to do so. On motion the report was received and adopted. Also a motion that the branches collect the money for the fare of Bro. Burton and wife from California, and return it to Bishop Kelley, was approved. A petition from the deacon's quorum was read, asking that a new quorum be formed, as the present one already has admitted the requisite number of members. The organization was approved. A petition from the Takaroa branch was read, asking that the conference of 1898 be held at Takaroa. On motion it was so agreed. A committee appointed at the conference of 1896 to visit the son of the late King Pomare in regard to the church building at Papaoa, presented their report. The Prince was quite willing that the church should remain upon his land, or if we chose to remove it, he would not interfere in any way. The subject of the printing of a paper was then introduced. Bro. Burton made a short address through interpreter Hawkins to place the subject before the people. The subject was discussed at length, and laid over until next session, the time for adjournment having arrived.

The afternoon session opened at the time appointed, a hymn was sung and Bro. Metuaore offered prayer. The subject of the printing of a paper was resumed. On motion it was resolved to commence the work during this year, and that a tax of $2 per capita for males, $1 for females, and 50 cents for baptized children, be levied upon all members for the purpose of carrying on the work. A committee consisting of J. F. Burton, Metuaore, Pori, Pohemiti, and Hotu, was chosen to oversee the work of printing the paper. This committee chose Metuaore treasurer, and the presidents of the various branches were instructed to collect the money and forward it to him; also that they should make a correct list of all heads of families in their respective branches, that each family may receive a copy of the paper monthly. Moved, seconded, and carried, that we move the Papaoa church building to Papeete to be used as a printing office. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved that the church buy the portion of land in Papeete known as the Taronia lot, which adjoins the church property. The price of the land was ascertained to be $2,000 (French coin). It was moved that the money be raised by equal division among the various branches. And the church secretary was requested to inform each branch the amount of money to be collected by them for this purpose. Brn. Metuaore, Pori, and Petero Derrien composed a committee to purchase the land. After further consideration it was resolved to borrow, if possible, $1,000 of the purchase money this present year, and the remainder the coming year, in order to give the church more time to complete the work of collecting which is necessarily slow, owing to lack of means of communication. It was further moved that we add the names of Pohemiti and Ioane to the committee on purchase. A petition from the Kaukura branch for the ordination of Bro. Mahinui to the office of a deacon was read. The ordination was approved. Also a like request from the Niau branch to ordain Bro. Roo to the office of deacon. Also a petition from the Anaa branch for the ordination of Bro. Tepui to the office of teacher, and Bro. Taina to the office of deacon. These ordinations were approved and Bro. Hubert Case was appointed to officiate in the work of ordination. A committee composed of Brn. Tevaea Tapuni, and Tahererau was appointed to audit the books of the bishops. Adjournment was then taken until 8 a. m., benediction by Elder J. F. Burton.

During the night of April 7, the ship, "Punau," was wrecked on the Kaukura reef. Owing to the desire of the people to assist in removing the cargo from the wreck, and the law of the islands which demands the assistance of the entire population in such cases, no sessions of conference were held April 8 and none in the morning of April 9.

Resumed business at 1 p. m., April 9, after singing, and prayer by Bro. John Hawkins. A petition was read from the fifth quorum of priests, asking that Bro. Tefau be reordained to the office of first counselor, from which he had previously been expelled. The ordination was approved. The auditing committee reported as follows: The books of Hotu, bishop's agent for Fakarava division, were found correct, with a balance on hand of $776.90; the books of Metuaore, bishop's agent for the Tahitian division, were also found correct with a balance on hand of $1,120.56. It was requested that the bishop's reports be read in full; but the request was not approved. It was moved that the bishop's reports be printed hereafter in the paper. Report of the findings of the elders' court previously appointed, was read, on the first charge against Viriamu, president of the Fakarava division. It was charged that he had caused presidents of districts to be appointed in his division after such office had been annulled by the conference of 1894. The court found the charge to be true and recommended that Viriamu repent of his fault and that the conference declare the appointments thus made null and void. The report of the committee appointed to investigate the loss of the "Evanelia" was read as follows:—

"First cause, That the conference of 1896 allowed the ship to become a trader. Second, That the captain and Bro. McGrath violated the contract made, which provided that no 'bufaa' should be carried on the ship. Third, That she was overloaded, her cargo consisting of 17 tons of bufaa, 2½ tons of pearl shell, besides her 7 tons of ballast, and the ship being only 19 tons burden. We therefore condemn the action of the captain and Bro. McGrath, both in violating the contract and overloading the vessel, believing these to be the chief causes of the loss of the ship.

LOUIS BELLAIS, }
POHEMITI, } Committee."
TUPAUNUI, }

On motion the above report was received. Report of elder's court on the second charge against Viriamu was read; viz., That he had received $40 of the printing press fund from the branches of Hao and Amanu, and had expended $20 of it to pay his fare from Tauere to Fakarava. The court found the charge to be true and recommended that Viriamu refund the money. On motion the report was received, but it was afterward moved that the Bishop refund the money. Report was then read of elder's court on the third charge against Viriamu; viz., That he had rebaptized and reordained one priest and one deacon of the Amanu branch, both members already in good standing. The court found the charge true. Viriamu attempted to prove the correctness of his work, and after much discussion the matter was returned into the hands of the court to reinvestigate during the coming year and report at the next April conference. Bro. Metuaore reported the appointment of Bro. Tetua Itevai as Bishop's agent for Tubuai and adjacent isles; also of Bro. Tahua Bishop's agent for Rairoa, Tiki-hau, and Makatea. The conference sustained the appointments. The brethren appointed to officiate in the work of ordinations approved previously, reported that work completed; also that an organization of the new quorum of deacons had been effected, and officers chosen. Brn. H. Case and Louis Bellais were appointed to ordain the officers chosen.

Evening session was opened by singing, and prayer by Bro. Louis Bellais. The president then explained that the resolution of previous session, authorizing the Bishop to refund the money used by Viriamu was out of order, as Viriamu was not under conference appointment. Bro. Hotu then offered to refund the money, as a free gift from himself to Viriamu. The offer was accepted. Report of the elder's court in the case of Sr. Taurua of Anaa, was read: She claimed to be the owner of a tract of land in Anaa; a court was appointed there who investigated the case and decided against her. She appealed the case to this conference and the court here approved the action of the first court. Report was sustained, received, and approved. The secretary announced that the amount of the tax to be levied on each person for the purchase of Taronia lot would be $4 (Chili coin); he reasoning that of the 1,707 members only about 1,000 would pay the required sum. Objections were made, as the resolution had called for an equal division. Therefore it was moved that the division be made among the total number of members. Moved as a substitute that $2 per capita be paid this year, and the same next year. This subject was discussed for some time and laid over until next session.

Morning session of April 10 opened by singing, and prayer by Bro. Hotu. Resumed business by reconsidering the collection of money for the purchase of Taronia lot. The motion, made at previous session, that $2 per capita be paid this year and the same next year, prevailed. It was also provided that the presidents of branches collect this money and forward it to Bishop Metuaore. Appointments of missionaries as follows: Hubert Case, Fakarava division in charge, (and on motion Tane-terau was appointed president of the Fakarava division for the year); Maevatua Hururau to labor in Fakarava division; Tepoaitu to labor in Fakarava division; Tehopea was appointed president of the Tahitian division; and also to labor as missionary in that division. Petero Derrien to the Tahitian division in charge; John Hawkins, Tubuai and adjacent islands in charge; Tapuni to Tubuai and adjacent isles. A short address followed from the president on the marriage question, instructing the people who have hitherto been unable to marry that the time had now come when all would be able to free themselves from entanglements and difficulties, and that it was their duty to set themselves right before God and man. He also said that no more agreements to marry would be given, and the elders were instructed not to receive into the church any who were not legally married. Bro. Hubert Case then addressed the assembly, giving the reason for his late journey to Tahiti and the result. He had consulted with lawyers there and learned that divorce could be obtained in cases of separation for transgression for $100 French money. Therefore it was within the reach of all those who had previously signed the agreement to marry. The cost has hitherto been so great ($600) that it was impossible for them to obtain divorces, but that obstacle is now removed. It was moved and seconded to do away with the yearly feast on account of the great expense incurred; motion lost. Moved again to supply the tables but to do away with the custom of purchasing a great amount of food for free distribution at the close of the conference. This motion prevailed. A committee, composed of Brn. Petero Derrien, Haroatea and Pou Tuarau, was appointed to urge the claims of the Reorganized Church, and to purchase still if possible the land at Tamarie, Anaa. On motion the furniture of the Papaoa church was given to the Raroia branch to furnish the new church there. A request was read for volunteers to move the Papaoa church. None responded; and it was afterward agreed that the brethren of Tarona and Tubuai branches should do the work and if expense should be incurred the bishop Metuaore should assist them. It was moved to reconsider the resolution passed previously, that the branches should collect the money for the fare of Bro. and Sr. Burton from California to Tahiti. Owing to the amount of money for other purposes to be collected, it was resolved that the bishops here refund the money to Bishop Kelley. The request of the Kaukura branch for the money collected at this gathering (i. e., the $1.20 per capita before mentioned) was reconsidered. And on motion the money was left with the branch. The brethren appointed to officiate in the work of ordination, reported the ordinations attended to. The report was received. A petition was read from the president of the Manihi branch, asking that the money collected at that gathering in 1896 be returned to the branch, as it was placed in the hands of the bishop and no disposition made of it. A motion to return the money to the branch was lost. Resolution was passed to sustain President Joseph Smith, the quorums of the twelve, the seventy, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, also to sustain Bro. J. F. Burton as president of this mission. Also moved to sustain the missionaries, the bishops, and the secretaries in their work. A vote of thanks was tendered the Kaukura branch for their kindly reception of us and generous entertainment. Adjourned to meet April 6, 1898, at 8 a. m. in Takaroa. The minutes of the sessions were read and approved, and after singing, the benediction was pronounced by Bro. J. F. Burton.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in Idaho; Greeting:—Having been called to labor and help in the great work of God in this State, and to take the oversight of the missionary work in this particular field, I take this way of asking your coöperation in carrying the gospel to the needy. Appointment to a position alone will not feed the flock nor "rescue the perishing;" but we must have activity in each position, and be coworkers with God to bring about the purposes of God. And for these and other reasons I invite the attention of the official part of the fold, to see to it that the flock be in a healthy and thriving condition, so that our heavenly Father may add to our number daily those that will be saved. Not being acquainted with the condition and needs of the field, I hereby invite correspondence from branches and scattered members throughout the State, that we may be able to supply the needs of the work in the most efficient manner.

As you can see, our worthy brother, J. C. Clapp, is to occupy with me; but just when he will be able to reach the field, I know not; but I hope it will be soon. Bro. Condit is president of the district, and Bro. H. R. Evans is Bishop's agent; they should be supported in their positions, that the work should not suffer in any department. My mission address is Elder J. T. Davis, Malad City, Idaho. May the Lord strengthen and support our hands in our various duties, and crown our efforts with success.

I am your brother,
J. T. DAVIS.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Brethren and friends coming by rail will get off at Rogersville, and some of the brethren will meet you there with team on the 23d and 24th. The Sunday School Association will also convene at same place on 23d at ten a. m.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Brethren:—I want the names in full, time of birth, when baptized, when ordained to an elder, where ordained to an elder, and by whom ordained, together with the permanent address of every member of the Fourth Quorum of Elders. All you who know yourselves to be enrolled in the fourth quorum, please respond immediately, as many of these items are not on the record, and I want to get them all straightened up. I take this method of finding out where you all are. I have written to some, and the letters have come back to me.

Last, but not least; all who have not paid their dues of twenty-five cents this year, please send same to me at No. 2851 California Street, Denver, Colorado. I was authorized to make this request by the quorum at the last General Conference. We are badly in need of funds, as there has not been as much paid in dues in the last four years as should be paid in one year. So all who know themselves to be so indebted, please respond by P. O. order as soon as possible.

The following names were added to the quorum at the April conference of 1897: John F. Hanson, L. F. Johnson, Wm. H. Pease, Marcus H. Cook, D. R. Baldwin, William Davis, Alonzo E. Jones, W. A. Smith, Bowley Arnold, A. J. Myers.

Yours for the progress of the quorum,
J. W. GILBERT, Secretary.
2851 Calif. St., Denver, Colorado.

DIED.

DELONG.—At Juniata, Michigan, June 26, 1897, at 8:40 p. m. Elder Edward Delong, loved and esteemed by all. He was sick for some months; was administered to by Brn. Levi Phelps and A. PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD.

The apostasy, reformation, and restoration, by Elder William H. Kelley; printed in good type with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a book of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible, and of modern diverse systems of faith and worship; it discusses present issues of theology. It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. It treats largely of ministerial authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic priest-hoods, and the ideal church of New Testament times is set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the apostles. New, revised, and enlarged edition.

THE GREATEST LANGUAGE.

THE New York Tribune says that according to news from Pekin, received in London, an imperial edict has been issued making the teaching of English compulsory in all the higher schools of China. This shows an appreciation by the Chinese government of the wonderful advance English is making in the direction of becoming the universal tongue. From 1801 to 1890 the English-speaking population of the world gained more than five-fold, and the language which in 1801 was only fifth among European tongues in the number of people who spoke it, was easily first in 1890. The following table shows the number of people speaking the different European languages in 1801 and 1890:—

	People by whom spoken.	1801.	1890.
English.....	20,520,000	111,100,000
French.....	31,450,000	51,200,000
German.....	30,320,000	75,200,000
Russian.....	30,770,000	75,000,000
Spanish.....	26,190,000	42,800,000
Italian.....	15,070,000	33,400,000
Portuguese.....	7,480,000	13,000,000

English has gained rapidly on other languages on account of the rapid gain in population of English-speaking countries, and the gain will be much greater during the next ninety years than during the ninety included in the statistics published. By 1980 the United States will have at least 400,000,000 people. Our country would have nearly twice that number if it continued the percentage of growth of the last ninety years. By 1980 it is probable that the British Isles will have 70,000,000 people. Australia 60,000,000 and British North America will have 20,000,000 more. This will make 550,000,000 English-speaking people, not counting the possibilities of the spread of the language through India and South Africa.

The German race is one of the most prolific in the world, but a large part of the German increase is absorbed by the United States and becomes English-speaking. By 1980 probably 150,000,000 people will speak German. The French language, spoken more than any other at the beginning of the century, will not be spoken by 80,000,000 people eighty years from now. By 1980 the Spanish language will be next to the English the most widely spoken of any European tongue. By that time a quarter of a billion people will use it, and more people will speak Portuguese than French.—Ex.

SOME WHOLESALE INDICTMENTS OF CHRISTENDOM.

THE "central organ" of the German Socialists, the Berlin Vorwärts, which has advocated the cause of Greece during the late struggle, explains that it has not done so because the Greeks are Christians, but only because Turkey is ruled mercilessly by an autocrat. Christianity, says the paper, is no guaranty of freedom and progress, as Christian religion lulls conscience to sleep. Hence humanitarians should be extremely suspicious whenever a Christian nation poses as the protector of a weaker race. Reviewing the deeds of Christian Europe from a Socialist point of view, the paper says:—

"The friends of Greece should be especially suspicious of the word 'Christian.' The term Christian Europe it should be remembered, originated when the crusaders, led by praying and cursing monks, began to spread Cristianity by the sword. Let us see what this Christian Europe is made of to-day. There is, first and foremost, Russia. The trinity which rules there is the knout, whisky, and the priesthood. Its work has been chiefly to destroy Poland and a dozen other nations, to persecute the Catholics and the Protestants, and to drive the Jews out of the country. Next we have England, whose Christian work consists of the coercing and enslaving of Ireland and the spoliation of India, the garden of the world, where, though the most richly endowed by nature, three millions of people are left to starve. Christian France massacred thousands of workmen because they believed in the liberty and equality promised by the Republic, while the bourgeoisie steal millions. Germany has her anti-Socialist laws and her militarism; Austria the cat-and-dog life between her several nationalities. Italy rejoices in the hunting down of the Socialists and robbery, both at home and abroad. Spain slaughters her starving subjects and revives the torture.

"By their fruits shall ye know them," says the Bible.

"Let us review what Christian Europe has done with regard to the Orient: Instigation of rebellion in Turkey, resulting in the Cretan revolt and the Armenian atrocities. Christian Europe certainly provoked these things. Christian Europe demands reforms in Turkey, but will not grant reforms at home. Christian Europe set Turkey and Greece by the ears, and tries hard to poison Turkey.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

"The fun of the thing is that nobody gains anything by this Christian civilization. Everywhere glitter thousands of bayonets close to thousands of barrels of gunpowder. The most amusing part is, however, that the Turk seems to overcome the poison intended to put him to sleep forever. Heathen Turkey must certainly have as good a digestion as the countries ruled by the Christian churches, for she is evidently stronger and healthier than before, in spite of her physicians."

Curiously enough, a Japanese paper has arrived at similar conclusions. In its English columns, the Yorodzu Choho, Tokyo, says:—

“In the long history of Christendom we know of not a single case of a country saved by it. With Montezuma’s Mexico and the Inca’s Peruvian empire the course of Christendom was absorption, destruction, annihilation. It has killed India, politically at least. It has killed Burmah and Annam. It has killed Hawaii, after keeping it alive some forty years. It has killed Madagascar, and it will yet kill Abyssinia, Egypt, and Morocco. What security have we that Christendom will not kill China, Korea, and even Japan if the opportunity offers? Christendom does its destructive work not only by guns and bayonets, but by means much more formidable. It kills non-Christian countries by its rums and whiskies, by its foul diseases, by its atheism, nihilism, and other destructive isms. Christendom is bound, by its elderly civilization, to help heathendom as the elder brother is bound to help the younger. Till it can do this, Christendom does not deserve its own name.”—Literary Digest.

THE CHURCH HISTORY, SECOND VOLUME.

THE Board of Publication are gratified to be able to announce the completion at an early time of the second volume of the Church History. Already plates are made for 400 pages, and the book will be ready for delivery in July.

This history should be in the houses of all saints and friends of the work of Christ in the last days; its importance as one of the prime agencies in disseminating the truths and correct positions of the church in the nineteenth century can hardly be overestimated.

The Board of Publication was instructed by the Annual Conference of 1896 to issue this work, and it has moved forward under many difficulties to accomplish the same, and should have the hearty coöperation of every member and friend now in spreading the news and giving the people an opportunity to understand the faith of the Latter Day Saints as it is.

The church has suffered in the past on account of having been represented in a large part by its enemies and those who have been ready to malign their faith.

There is nothing more important than that we should present to the world our own faith and organization as well as the work of the church since 1830, and if we fail to do this, we are not active as becometh our high and holy calling as servants of the Lord.

The second volume of the Church History will contain about 700 pages and is delivered at the low price at which the first volume was sold; viz.; at $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, and $3.00 per volume postage prepaid, to any address in the United States or Canada. For styles of binding see advertisement in this number of HERALD.

The office is in need of means which it has necessarily expended in getting out this volume, and it is urged upon the saints that they send in their orders promptly and thus be able to assist the office, as they at the same time assist in disseminating the true work and positions of the church among the people.

Nothing is more worthy and commendable than an effort in this direction; and let us not wait until we may thus aid without feeling that it is something of a sacrifice, for great good comes to the people when they make true and devoted sacrifice in order to forward any great and true work.

Send all orders and contributions to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa; and where parties at any one point desire to get a number of the books, they may be sent by express, and the postage which will be from twenty-five to thirty cents on each book, saved to those ordering.

Please let us hear from you at once. As ever, confidently in the truth and working for its advancement.

President Board Publication.

The Catholic World Magazine never concedes too much to the demand for “seaside light reading in its summer numbers. The present July issue starts off boldly with a nine-page article by Rev. David Moyes, D. C. L., on the “Development of Dogma,” continues with “Blessed Richard Whiting, the Last Abbot of Glastonbury,” by Very Rev. F. Felix, O. S. B.—one of those finely illustrated historical studies of which the magazine makes a specialty—and finally breaks lances with Miss Guiney in a critique of her study of James Clarence Mangan. The patriotic flavor demanded by the month is given to the number by papers on “Edmund Burke, the Friend of Human Liberty,” by Rev. George McDermot, C. S. P., and “Catholics and the Revolution,” by Francis T. Furey. The latter is profusely adorned with portraits of Catholics who took prominent part in the struggle for American independence.

In a recent issue of The Young Man, Professor A. H. Sayce says: “I have come to disbelieve thoroughly in the so-called critical view of the composition of the Pentateuch. I believe that substantially it is the work of the Mosaic age, and of Moses himself.”—Lit. Dig., June 12.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

1. ARE the Quarterlies that are being sent out by the Sunday School Association accepted by the head authorities of our church as being good literature for Sunday school work?

2. Are the Winnowed Songs now used by the Sunday School Association accepted by the head authorities of the church as being all right to be used in our Sunday schools till we get one published from our selection of songs?

3. Is not choir work highly recommended for preaching meetings and Sunday school work by the authorities of our church? If so in what way should they be conducted; if not, why not?

4. Is not the work of the Sunday School Association recognized by the authorities of the church, and that it should be appreciated by all who claim to love Christ's work?

We are not much inclined to favor the answering of such queries as the foregoing; for the reason that we do not attach the importance to the issue supposed in them that some do. But, as there seems to be a need for some reply or an explanation we write.

1. The Sunday school work is being done by those who have time to devote and ability and liking for that work. The "head authorities" of the church have given assent, encouragement, and sanction to their work; and having confidence in them, have permitted them to conduct the schools and their association as they have been directed, without attempting to control, or to supervise the work of either teaching, or Quarterlies, authoritatively; being assured that unwarranted interference would retard and cripple the work, discourage and dishearten the workers, and spoil the schools. Therefore, the Quarterlies are "accepted" by the "head authorities," whoever may be meant by the term, the same way that the sermons preached by the elders are accepted in a general sense; none being objected to unless defect or departure from just grounds of belief become apparent in specific cases.

2. The Winnowed Songs was selected from a number of song books for use in the Sunday Schools, by a competent committee, of which the "head authorities" were not one, and have been accepted by the latter in the same way that any other books would be under similar conditions. It is a good musical work; and until the Sunday school officers see fit to create a new one of their own, may properly be used. We ought to have one of our own, but our song and music writers seem to be slow to get at such work. It is better to have Winnowed Songs, or some work like it, than not to have music taught in the Sunday school.

3. Yes. The best way known to practical singers. Don't know, "why not," "if not."

4. The work of the Sunday school workers is to be highly commended. It is in places doing a world of good for all; and should be appreciated, which it is by the great mass of the saints. If any object to such good work it might be suggestive to think of a line of an enthusiastic revival song: "Get out of the way Gabriel and let the gospel chariot roll along."

The "head authorities" indorse the Sunday school work, schools, teaching, and association precisely as the same authorities do the work of the eldership, priests, teachers, and deacons; trusting all to the Master's care.

It would be an impossible work to supervise every preacher's doctrine, manner of speech, way of presenting views, opinions, and arguments; and were the "head authorities" to try it, those with whom they interfered would rebuke them or lay down their weapons and quit the field. So with the Sunday school literature. So long as the work is in the hands of competent, spiritual minded men and women, the "head authorities," who are engaged to the extent of their time and powers, will be contented to let the good workers be free in God under the Master. "He will take care of his, be not afraid."

Q. Did Christ when preaching in the wilderness have choirs?

A. We do not read of them; but we reckon that the angels sang for him, and that there are choirs in heaven, we fully believe, and that there will be again.

"And they sang a new song unto God and the Lamb, saying, Thou art worthy, who hast redeemed us out of every kindred, tongue, and nation." Get your song books and harps ready, all ye singers, and join in the song of Moses and the Lamb. They had choirs in the tabernacle, and in the temple, and the Lord commanded us to sing; let us therefore sing, and let those most capable lead the songs.

Editors Herald:—Our Savior said to the Nephites—"Blessed are ye if ye have no disputations among you." And as misunderstanding is too often the chief cause of the evil mentioned, will you give a few thoughts as a help to the reconciling of the following apparent conflict. The Master made the divine statement that the Lamanites upon one occasion were baptized with fire and the Holy Ghost, "and they knew it not," while some of our elders positively assert that one and all that truly repent and are baptized by water for the remission of sins and, upon receiving the baptism of the Holy Ghost will know it at the time fully as much so as they knew that they had been baptized by water: there being no exception to this gospel order, unless the parties alluded to had not fully repented—Simon Magus like.

The writer of this "inquiry" is acquainted with Latter Day Saints who state that they never felt the power of the Holy Spirit to such an extent, and who at the same time are fully satisfied that they have passed in and through the new spiritual birth. Is there not a medium line or rule to go by?

It is recorded by John 8: 31, 32, that the Lord said:—

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

It is also stated in John 7: 17, that

If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

These, with the promises made in the revelations to the church, as recorded in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, form the basis on which the elders referred to as having made the statements said to be in apparent conflict rest for support. There is no very easy way to dispose of the clear statement, "they shall know." The difficulty lies in determining the time and manner in which the knowledge may, or does reach the individuals to be affected by it.

There is no conflict, for the reason that the case referred to is an instance and was not given as a rule or precedent to govern in all the subsequent life of the church. Saul, of Tarsus, was stricken with blindness and conviction at the same time, but it did not become a rule to be rigidly followed by all subsequent conversions. Cornelius and his household were blessed, as stated by Peter, by receiving the Holy Ghost, as did he and his brethren, at the beginning; but this was not followed after as a precedent for the conferring of the Holy Ghost. Nor does it now follow, that because "some of the elders" teach that all who truly repent and are baptized shall know of their receiving of the Holy Ghost, as certainly as they do of their water baptism, and the Book of Mormon records an instance where a number received the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost and "knew it not," therefore there is a conflict between this teaching and the record. The exception, if there is one, does not disprove the general rule.

The church cannot in any justifiable sense be held responsible for the separate and individual utterances and personal views of all and several of the eldership. Coming as these elders do from all classes of thinkers and various ranks of believers differing widely from each other in environments and consequent teaching, they are as diversified in views and opinions as they exist in numbers; and, all being engaged in a probationary work and career of education, it would be inconsistent to expect all to be fully in accord, each with every other, until the educational processes and probationary conditions should have fully wrought the unity desired. For this reason there must continue to exist these apparent conflicts, which time and a keeping of the "unity of the spirit" alone can reconcile, until the unity of the spirit shall bring about unity of the faith.

The experience of many years has demonstrated that knowledge of acceptance with God, does follow honest conviction and obedience in such perceivable plainness that the accepted believer does know of his acceptance; and it is as real to the consciousness as the fact of water baptism is to the senses. That there are some who have been received in baptism and the rites of laying on of hands who did not at the time of the impact of the hands of the eldership, receive a visible emotional consciousness of the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, but who did afterwards become satisfied (conscious of) of the passing through the door into true discipleship, may be true; we know of some. But this does not disprove the rule. It only shows that until the Spirit takes cognizance of the condition of fitness to receive on the part of the believer, the witness of the Spirit is not given.

It may be that some elders in their zeal to make converts have so dwelt upon this one topic, that they have in their presentation of the gospel, shown a forgetfulness of all its correlative parts, and thus unduly impressed this conferring of knowledge too strikingly upon their hearers, and thus have given cause for drawing improper conclusions by those who heard them. If so, it teaches the forcefulness of our advice given years ago to the elders, "Avoid the riding of hobbies." However, we cannot see any serious wrong to result from such course, so far as the onward course of the truth is concerned.

The Savior gave the criterion in his conversation with Nicodemus, in which he stated:—

The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit.—John 3: 8.

It may be better, or it might be more in unison with the spirit of moderation to give the promises as they are in the word, and being careful to avoid extremes, leave the Scriptures to their own effectiveness, to the disciple, rather than to predicate too strong human promises, as to fact, time, place, and manner. For it is certain that Paul in teaching to the Corinthians, shows plainly that there were evidences, or witnesses of the Spirit that would testify of the new birth and give consciousness that Jesus was the Christ that are not always perceptible to the believer, or visible to others. The gifts of wisdom, knowledge, faith, by the Spirit, are not always visibly, or notably discernible, and yet those who receive them are as certainly accepted of the Lord, as are others who are so visibly affected by the Spirit's visitation that they prophesy, speak in tongues, discern spirits, interpret, or work miracles by healing, or other outward manifestation. We counsel moderation and carefulness, as the golden mean; but cannot direct, or restrain by assertion the free Spirit of the Master.

COLLEGE! COLLEGE!

WE hope that the readers of the HERALD will pardon us for again obtruding the subject of the College at Lamoni upon them. But, it is really not a matter for which any apology ought to be either offered or expected.

Graceland College has now been running for two seasons, with only a moderate support; and the many good wishes that have been expressed for its success have not yet been coined into cash.

We heard this morning, (July 1,) of a little college in Missouri that last year had five hundred students; and we found ourself verging on the margin of breaking the commandment not to envy, if there is such a commandment, being almost envious of either the good luck of the college, or the good sense and good will of those who are interested in the college itself and its success.

We have not yet had an endowment or sold a life scholarship, in aid of the fund, and it begins to look as if the saints did not share in the enthusiasm of the Lamonites, or rejoice with them in the possession of an educational institution within reach of the church membership.

It will be a good time this fall to test the good feeling the saints may have for an institution of our own. The test will be the sending of students, if nothing further. There ought to be a hundred saints who will buy lots in Graceland, to help pay out on the building. There ought to be a hundred who will send students to the school the ensuing year. We need a hundred and would welcome a hundred and a half.

"Let us be up and doing," as we are so frequently exhorted in regard to other matters, in this great enterprise.

BRO. EDWARD DELONG DEAD.

WE learn with regret of the sudden death of Elder Edward DeLong, of the Second Quorum of Seventy, who departed this life at Juniata, Michigan, June 26, 1897.

Bro. DeLong is the fourth member of the Second Seventy who has passed away, and like those of his quorum who preceded him, while on duty in the field.

He leaves his wife and three sons, to whom the HERALD extends sympathy on behalf of the church.

THE editor in chief of the HERALD is a queer sort of a man, judged by the papers: On June 26 he left Lamoni, in company of Bro. A. B. Purfurst to visit the Stewartsville branch, and introduce Bro. Purfurst to some of the German brethren resident there. He spent the day among the brethren of the German branch, four miles north of town, spoke to them in the forenoon of the 27th, and attending their Sunday school in the afternoon, and speaking to the Stewartsville saints in their chapel in town in the evening, returning to St. Joseph on the 28th, and home on the 29th. The Patriot, of Lamoni, and the Ensign, of Independence, published the statement that President Smith went to Kirksville, Missouri, quite a number of miles away from where we were on that day. Surely the newspapers are peculiar retailers of news.

ITEMS OF NEWS.

ATHENS, July 6.—Two thousand Turks and Albanians besieged the town of Kalabaka last Thursday. The Greeks defended the place until they were overpowered, several of the attacking force being killed in the fighting. A majority of the Greeks fled to the mountains for safety. The remainder were massacred or imprisoned.

It is alleged that the Turks captured all the young women in a village near Karditza and . . . they were mistreated by their captors.

It is stated that in consequence of the protests of Greece the ambassadors at Constantinople have been instructed to inform the Porte that the powers are determined to terminate the insupportable situation.

Constantinople, July 6.—The Sultan now shows signs of yielding on the question of the rectification of the Turkish frontier in the direction of Greece, and the ambassadors expect negotiations for peace will be resumed to-day or Tuesday, when it is hoped everything will be settled in accordance with the views of Europe.

Calcutta, July 6.—The uneasiness caused by the recent killing of officials and the rioting of the natives at Chitpur continues, although outwardly everything is now quiet. Spies inform the police that further outbreaks are being organized. Isolated assaults, especially upon European women, continue.

The native casualties during the recent riot are said to have been very large. A low estimate places the number of killed at 600.

Paris, July 6.—The Budget committee of the Chamber of Deputies has adopted without discussion a credit of $100,000 to cover the expenses of the approaching visit of President Faure to Russia.

Madrid, July 7.—A dispatch from Havana to the Imparcial says that during April and May in four towns whose aggregate population was 30,000 there were 5,648 deaths from yellow fever and other diseases.

Columbia, S. C., July 6.—A conference of Mormons, led by eleven elders, was held yesterday in their church in Fairfield County, the only Mormon church in the State. At midnight a party of men applied the torch to the church in several places, burning it to the ground.

Her Majesty's ship Wallarree has hoisted the British flag on Russell, Bellona, and Stuart islands of the Solomon group, and, it is said, with the consent of Germany.

The bituminous coal miners throughout the country are divided in sentiment on the question of striking, and it is possible that the order to strike may be recalled. Prominent representatives of the miners and operators are negotiating to reach a basis of settlement.

The storm at Duluth and other points in Minnesota July 7 has been followed by others in the State.

Fourteen people are known to have been killed, and the property loss will reach one million of dollars.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. T. BAKER, Lebeck, Missouri, July 3:—

I wish to ask if there are any of the brethren that know where I could go with a good well drill and find work. I have a good machine and can go to a depth of three hundred feet if necessary. If some brother will write me if they know of a locality where I can get work, their kindness will be appreciated.

James M. Baggerly, Knox, Indiana, July 5:—

I am holding meetings here, though the heat is intense. Preached last evening in the saints' chapel to a large audience. The effort was highly commended by members and non-members. The saints here had had no preaching for some time. I may go from here to Coldwater, Michigan.

Bro. J. A. Grant, Valley Center, Michigan, June 29:—

William Davis and the writer closed tent meeting at Burnside Sunday last. While there were no baptisms, yet we made many friends, and a number have said they intend uniting with the church. Our last meeting was by far the best attended. Could not all get in the tent. So everything looks encouraging all along the line.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. ALEXANDER H. SMITH was at Cormorant, Minnesota, June 30, would go thence to Audubon and Detroit, for service.

The Editor preached at Norwood, Iowa, nine miles north of Lucas, in the grove of Bro. Crookes, a very pleasant and convenient place. The morn of the 4th was threatening rain, so that the forenoon meeting was but small. The afternoon meeting was quite large, and the attention and good order all that could be asked for. Bro. Crookes, though not yet a member, was devoted, kind, and hospitable, many eating at his table during the dinner hour. One was baptized, a brother Henrickson, Elder C. E. Willey performing the rite.

Bro. O. E. Cleveland, writing from Annex, Virginia, recounts the labor done for the past twenty-three years in the Old Dominion. Prospects at the present time were not very flattering in a missionary way. He desires to continue faithful, however slow may be the growth of the work in the adjacent country. He thanks brethren who have sent him the HERALD.

Bro. George Hitchcock, route agent in the mail service between Kansas City and Council Bluffs, requested baptism and was inducted into the church by that rite by one of the Lamoni brethren on Sunday, the 4th. Thus men from various callings and walks in life are pressing into the kingdom of God.

Bro. Ethan Barrows and wife, of Salt Lake City, Utah, who have been visiting relatives and friends at Lamoni, returned to their home in the West on the 7th inst. Bro. Barrows is hale and hearty at the age of eighty-three. He preached once for the Lamoni people during his stay.

Bro. F. M. Weld, of the Nauvoo district, returned home on the 8th for a brief visit and rest, after an active campaign against Utah representatives, whom he reports as now scarce in the Nauvoo district. Brn. Weld, Snively, and Evans made it a point to follow up the Utah elders, so far as possible, hence the people were made acquainted with the positions of both churches.

Bro. G. H. Godby writes of labor done in the West Virginia district by Bro. J. L. Goodrich and himself. The work was being planted in some new places, and prospects were good for additions to the church. Some had been baptized at various points. There was a demand for the labors of Bro. L. R. Devore in the Mountain State.

We shall be under the necessity of curtailing obituary notices hereafter. The number is so increasing that long as they are they very seriously encroach upon the space of HERALD. A few lines is sufficient in almost all cases, as the only object of publication is that it may be as a sort of running record, notice to all concerned.

Bro. Peter A. Flinn reports that most of the saints at Baker, Kansas, are making an effort to keep alive their interest in the branch and Sunday school. He thinks all should be careful to obtain and exercise an influence for good in behalf of the cause. Saints there would be pleased to receive a visit from the missionary in charge.

We are indebted to Bro. James Caffall for a copy of the London Chronicle of the 23d ult., containing much information concerning Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee.

Prof. J. T. Pence is authorized to canvass for students for Graceland College for the school year to begin September 14, next.

All the youths and maidens who contemplate attending college this coming year will do well to take Graceland College, Lamoni, into consideration. Catalogues will soon be ready, send for one. D. F. Lambert, Secretary, or J. T. Pence, Acting President, Lamoni, Iowa.

The Gold Creek News for Thursday, February 11, 1897, is sent us by some one. It contains a flattering notice of Bro. E. Penrod, of Gold Creek, now seventy years of age. He was the real discoverer of the famous Comstock mine. Some members of Bro. Penrod's family have been led to the truth and life in Christ by dreams, opportunely given; so states Sr. S. C. Yancey, to her uncle, Bro. Penrod, and cousin, Mrs. Stofiel.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, reports a number baptized at Lucas, Iowa, a day or two since, making nine in the Decatur district of late. One was baptized at Norwood, nine miles north of Lucas, Sunday, the 4th, and one at Lamoni, the 8th.

The attitude of the Sultan is one of opposition to the powers, who, including Russia and Germany, refuse to yield to a modification of the terms of settlement between Turkey and Greece.

The republics of Guatemala, Costa Rica, and the Greater Republic of Central America have formed a union patterned after the United States. The treaty was signed on June 15 and will be ratified by the respective congresses before September 15. The treaty states that it has for its purpose the hastening of the absolute union of the Central American republics. Peace between the States is to be guaranteed. Any outside interference will be resented by the combined forces. Church and state will be separated, and the liberty of the press will be the rule. After five years under this government, or sooner if possible, a national assembly will be convoked which shall adopt a constitution and cement the confederation into a compact union.

Severe fighting has occurred in Uruguay between revolutionists and government troops.

Bro. W. S. Pender, writing from Hollis, Kansas, July 10: "Bro. Dunnington and the writer close a series of ten days' meetings here to-morrow night. In consideration of hot weather, busy season, and short nights attendance and interest have been fair. We were invited and entertained here by Bro. W. H. Morgan, whom we hope to see again actively engaged in the Master's service. We go next with tent to Beloit, Kansas."

"Beyond the night, the eternal soul awakes
To other, brighter day,
Death is but sleep, that gently takes Life's load away,
And fits our powers renewed, new parts to play."

BRO. CASE was going on to Tahiti, and Sr. Case concluded to go with him, so we parted company. On landing here we were most kindly received; the saints had a nice house prepared for us,—that is two houses; one for each family, but I speak only of the one we occupy. It is high, roomy, and airy. If there is a breeze from any quarter of the compass, we can have the benefit of it. Porch and veranda on back and front, plenty of windows and doors. There are a sewing machine, table, and rocking chairs, a bed on the floor, and two arm-chairs. The floor and walls are only of planed boards, but it has two rooms, and we are just as happy in it as there is any need for. Just back of the house a few rods, is the broad ocean. The food is the greatest drawback to Americans. On board the vessel I was hungry most of the time. Could only eat just enough at a time to take the wire edge off, but not to satisfy; and the same here till the saints began to come in from other islands and brought some fruit and potatoes. The saints were liberal with their chickens. But one cannot live on chickens all the time, and then it would be bread that is of poor flour and always soggy and sour, and canned meats.

Conference is drawing near, and the saints are gathering in rapidly. Day before yesterday two vessels and three boats arrived. One vessel from Tubuai with fifty saints, and one from Hickuaru with one hundred and ten. The vessel Pnaau had stopped at several intervening islands gathering up the people, and from the last island only a half day's run from here the poor creatures only had standing room, before that they could sit with their feet drawn up chin on their knees fashion both day and night; and those in the small boats the same way. One other vessel is due from Tahiti, and three large boats from Rararaoa. Joseph will tell of the preparations for conference in his letter. There is so much of it, it makes me tired to think of it. I respect and esteem many of this people just as much as if they were not of a dark skin. You should have seen us yesterday when the Manihi branch was here, and some from another branch, making near fifty; of course we had not chairs for all, and after the orofa business was over, I gave the governor my chair and sat on the floor with the sisters, but not so gracefully as they. If I had had half a dozen hands, all would have been claimed by the sisters; but as it was I only had two, both of which were held in a firm clasp. The Tubuai branch of 50, had made their call in the morning with their offering of oranges, dried bananas, and cocoanut oil, but I fear I am making my letter too long.

The power of the Spirit has been with us both in the gift of healing in a marked degree, and the Father has blessed us with fair winds and good weather almost always when on the water.

I have never seen a time so propitious for boating over the ledge as were the days the vessels came. Both the "Teavaroa" and "Punau" came within a stone's throw of the ledge and anchored. And as the tide came in they did not row around to the usual opening, but came straight in across to the sandy ridge. How beautiful it all looked that day. The friendly looking vessels, the calm sea, the boats going rapidly back and forth over the white water, and the activity on shore of both men and women carrying parcels and cargo back and forth to abiding places. It is something so unusual for a vessel to come up close enough to anchor, all hailed with delight the favorable opportunity.

April 8.—Our conference session did not meet this morning, because the "Punau" went ashore on the reef last night, and the law requires that everyone, both men and women, must go to the rescue when a vessel comes ashore and the bell rings. It was unusually calm last night and this morning, but to drift on those coral reefs is like entering the jaws of a shark, everything is soon crunched to pieces. With only the pulsation of the ocean, in eight hours the "Punau" was all broken to pieces. Drifted on bows first about midnight with the wheel tied and everybody on board fast asleep. The natives will sleep in the night. They do in every vessel, and it is wonderful how so many escape since they will sleep, and never put up their side lights, that they might see a coming vessel between their naps.

The conference here is progressing finely, and we cannot help letting our thoughts wander over the deep to that other conference that is now in session, and wonder what it will bring to pass. We are still well and enjoying the favor of our bountiful Father in many ways, especially in the gift of healing. On the night of the 2d inst., Bro. Hawkins was very near death's door. He thought he would pass away, and called his family about him—those who were in this place—and bade them good-bye. But when Joseph and Bro. Case laid their hands on him, immediate relief came, and he was able to be at conference the next day and fill his place as interpreter. The old gentleman is very feeble. I have only cited one incident, but numbers are relieved and healed daily by administration.

Will our friends please remember that double letters will require double postage. Letters must only be half the weight of those that travel about America. Do not write me any less words, sisters, but select moderately thin paper, and fill up the unruled margin at the top. We have not been overburdened with letters since we came here, yet we have paid nearly two dollars of extra postage. We do not grudge it at all, but know our friends in America do not wish us to pay postage both ways. All letters are duly appreciated if not answered. I will be more at leisure by and by I hope. Please keep on writing. Yes, Sr. Nightingale, we found the book you referred to; thought it came from Sr. Bloom. Thanks for the same.

Papeete, May 11.—Since writing the above, we have come to Papeete for a permanent abode for some length of time. The printing press is being gotten into operation, and Elder Burton will now have to attend to the duties of "editor" as well as that of a missionary. It is a restful sensation to know that we can unpack our valises and settle down for awhile to quiet life. I enjoy it fully, and more so, because now the air is comparatively cool and so pleasant, and will continue to be for a month or two while the king of day is on his annual tour up north. Several have expressed themselves as being desirous of knowing the cause of the change of feelings manifested towards us on the passage out here. We too would very much like to know that same thing, but never learned. I will here give a "sequel" to that circumstance, which I intended to have given before closing up the journal of the voyage. But time would not permit. We made Point Venus on Sunday afternoon near sundown; but there was five miles to make yet before reaching the harbor. Though we were in sight of the pilot station before sundown, the captain run up the ensign and stood toward Papeete, never dreaming but what the tugboat would come out for him, especially as the tugboat was owned by one Mr. Martin, whose wife and most of his family were on board coming home from a six months' visit in San Francisco. Mr. Martin is also the ship's consignee and principal owner. But dark came before we reached the mouth of the harbor, and no tugboat or pilot. When right opposite Papeete the captain told the steward to make ready the torchlight, a signal that is seldom ever disregarded. The captain swung that till his arms got tired and his patience too. Then the doctor took it part way up the main rigging and swung it for half an hour or more, still no attention was paid to it. I could not but wonder if he and the mate did not call to mind a similar circumstance only one week previous, when another man stood waving and waving a white handkerchief, but was taken no notice of. At length the captain became discouraged and so annoyed that he could scarcely contain himself, sent the torch below and gave orders to stand off shore for the night, which meant at least fifteen more meals out of pocket for the ship, i. e., one meal for fifteen persons. All the passengers went to the cabin rather moodily, except our two selves; we had no special interest in the matter either way, were simply watching the current of events, but took our places with the rest around for a Sunday evening read. Presently the captain came down, and thinking to seek surcease from his harrowed feelings in a game of "poker," took out the cards and sat at the lower end of the table. But instead of gathering around him as usual, the card players seemed very busy reading, which seemed to convey a significance, and he said rather curtly, "Come, Doty, let's have a game!" Without lifting his eyes from his book, the consul replied in a low tone, "I never play cards on Sunday." "Good!" cried the captain's wife, and several pairs of hands—female hands mostly—clapped lively, which increased the captain's ire, and he hurled the words, "Ain't you good!" at Mr. Doty in a tone of withering scorn. "But we can do without you. (These words were taken no notice of by Mr. Doty, except that a deep flush overspread his face for a moment.) Come, Doctor and Atwaters, let's have a game to ourselves." "Not this evening, captain," said the Doctor, (though he had played the Sunday evening before,) and he too received a clapping of hands. "What!" exclaimed the captain, "have you all deserted me! Atwaters, where are you? surely you will stay by me!" "I'm in bed," came a comical sounding voice from Mr. Atwater's room. "In bed," the captain repeated, "and not eight o'clock. Well, the like of this has never happened to me before," and when he seemed to feel humiliated, Mr. Atwaters got up and came out, tried to play, but after shuffling the cards awhile tossed them aside and went back, saying he could not play that evening. But I must not forget to say that before this the captain had become as friendly to us as before and I think even more friendly.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

SALUTATORY.

AS WE take up the work of the department, we feel that its success depends upon the efforts of its patrons as well as those of the editor. The editor can arrange and write, but the reader too must contribute as well as to receive.

Send in questions which you wish answered through the department, and they will receive proper attention; also your papers you have prepared for Sunday school conventions. We may not have space for all of each of them, but we can use extracts from them to a decided advantage. Short articles, paragraphs, sentences, etc., are more often read and appreciated than long, heavy articles.

Suggestions for work in any line in the local school, in the district association, or in the General Association, are always in order. Do not think they must be new and strictly original. Few things we know but have been many times told. They may seem "old" to us but they will be "new" to many.

We repeat, The success—usefulness and attractiveness—of the department depends largely upon its contributors. Who will be first to put in his "mite"? Let the department be indicative of the progress we are making. What are you doing? How are you doing it? Report your work. Many who now are doing well would do better could they know that what they are doing was for the best. They make the most progress who move out and exchange views with others engaged in the same line of work. This is one of the ways of moving out and exchanging views.

The Herald management, feeling a deep interest in the welfare of the Sunday school work, have kindly granted us valuable space for our use. Shall we not use it to the best possible advantage? May the Spirit of him who said "Work while it is day" ever buoy us up and bear us onward in a definite line of work, to make the work of the department attractive to the careless and refreshing to the weary, a source of information and encouragement to all.

Yours for the work,

T. A. HOU GAS.

The times for the several reunions is fast approaching. The Sunday school work will be represented. Will you be there? Come, it will do you good. Bring with you Bibles, Quarterlies, and Winnowed Songs.

Activity is contagious; an active superintendent has an active school, an active teacher an active class.

The Sunday school can find abundant material for good teachers. It is not often difficult to enlist a sufficient number to meet all wants. If it were only for two or three weeks, the whole church would join in the work. But the number who will stay by their classes, and maintain their interest and zest through the entire season, are few and far between. Teachers run well for awhile, and then they grow weary. They become fitful in their attendance, or indifferent in their preparation. Success in teaching depends more on steadiness than on native gifts or learning. A teacher who is always present, and always prepared, will never fail of an attentive class. But a teacher, however gifted, who is variable in attendance or preparation, will demoralize the best class ever gathered.

MACON, Mo., June 26.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference at Higbee on the 19th and 20th was cheering and strengthening to all the active, earnest-hearted ones who desire the work to move onward in this district. The reports that came in, the general indications, and the character of the fine spirit that was present from the opening song of the first business session bespoke hopeful possibilities for the future. The membership shows more progressiveness; the interest awakened by Brn. Chatburn and Turpen last summer proves to be a permanent and growing feeling, and there is only regret now that the increasing demands of our large district, comprising nineteen counties, are not sufficiently provided for, but we hope for the future.

There are, perhaps, no more generous and tithing observing people, considering their circumstances, with but few exceptions, nor a district that does better in this respect considering the number, yet, lack of temporal means, the general depression, hinders at present.

The presence of our missionary in charge, Bro. I. N. White, and his wise counsel, his executive and systemizing direction have given great stimulus and encouragement, and we appreciate the sympathetic interest he has taken in our needs.

The tent was set up at Higbee after conference, and it was the intention to continue meetings for awhile. The points to be visited next are under consideration. There are calls that would keep the tent in use every day till cold weather, and then only a portion of the work wanted could be done. The tent will be in charge of Brn. Turpen and Summerfield.

To-day Bro. White goes to Salt River for a day or two, where, we understand, the organization of a branch is in view. Bro. White has also visited the Bevier branch, preaching two nights to full houses and receiving good attention.

How we need him, and wish we could keep him; but we understand, of course, how limited and especially burdened is his time, and that he can but visit briefly, direct the machinery, give a boost, encourage here and there, and then he must be on his way to others crying for him.

Bro. White came to us from the Far West conference at Stewartville, in good spirits and reporting a good time, and he leaves the saints in this district much strengthened and encouraged.

LOUISE PALFREY.

RAVEN DEN SPRINGS, Ark., May 7.

Editors Herald:—I recently had an interview with Rev. E. S. Curry, of Christy, Missouri. This gentleman has studied Indian tradition, and the Indian languages, till he can read their traditions engraven on stones in different parts of America. By reading the characters on a stone in one place, he gained much information relative to the ancient inhabitants of America, and is shown where one or more other stones bearing the same kind of characters may be found. He has found and read enough of their characters to gain much valuable information relative to the ancient inhabitants of this continent. He has this information now in manuscript form and expects to have it published. It is to be in five volumes, I believe. He treated me very kindly and appears to be free from prejudice.

He says that he and Le Plongeon are the only two persons who can read these characters. He desires to correspond with Le Plongeon, but does not know his address. Curry has sometimes given public lectures on Indian tradition, charging a small admittance fee. He is well respected in his own neighborhood. When he lectures people say to him "That's Mormonism. You must have been reading the Book of Mormon." He says he has not read the Book of Mormon, but would like to do so. He stated that he expected to obtain a copy, so I told him where to write for it.

He says the Indians gave an account of creation and of the flood, and that their account agrees with that given by Moses. I send you some of the things that he told me, and will give his exact words as follows:—

"I have slowly but surely been reading Indian tradition four years."

"Cain married his sister, whose name was Arizona."

"The people on this continent kept the Mosaic law."

"Anciently the people on this continent had the power of a king, but kings were elected to office."

"Garden of Eden is in the center of the Pacific Ocean."

"Christ once appeared in Peru."

"America was in darkness at the crucifixion of Christ."

"When the flood came there were people on the Western Continent who were not destroyed."

"The north pole once tipped suddenly at the time of the deluge, and the north temperate zone became the north frigid zone."

The dates he gives do not agree with those given by Archbishop Usher, as found in the Bible. Of course much of the Indian tradition is false, yet much of it agrees with the Book of Mormon, and I believe if Mr. Curry's book is published and put in the hands of the saints, it will be a valuable aid in establishing the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. I believe the Lord aids scientists in the development of corroborative evidence relative to the divinity of the Book of Mormon, and that we should use the same when at all practicable. I thought that it would be a good thing to give you a knowledge of these facts, as I wish to do what I can to let the people know that the Book of Mormon is as much inspired as the Bible. I thought proper to give you his address so you could correspond with him, if you think it best. His address is E. S. Curry, Christy, Oregon County, Missouri. My permanent address is Pomona, Missouri.

Yours in the one faith,

C. J. SPURLOCK.

LOOKINGGLASS, Oreg., June 21.

Editors Herald:—Bro. H. L. Holt and I are at this point for a few days. June 6 we closed a series of meetings here that had been well attended. Leaving them with the promise of a short stop on our way back, we started the morning of the 7th for Myrtle Point, where Bro. J. C. Clapp had in former years organized a branch; which is fifty-three miles from this point. We were fitted out with a light wagon and team—the joint property of Brn. O. H. and L. Buell. The road is very rough; those who have traveled over mountains and through rocky canyons can imagine how rough. But the team was gentle and steady, and the scenery grand. The first day we made about half way, and by invitation stopped with one who had been with the church in the early days, but who through his experiences with the work in the times of trouble at Utah, and his experience with Brigham Young, Morris, and others, now stands as an infidel. His name is James Laird; he may have lost a portion of his faith, but he was very kind to us as God's ministers.

We arrived in Myrtle Point and found a welcome with Bro. Daniel Giles, whom Bro. Clapp baptized years since. There had been no preaching here by our elders for about seventeen years. The next day we secured the use of Dixon Hall, and though the Rev.

Blair of the Presbyterian Church refused even to read a notice of our meetings, yet we were so advertised that when on the evening of the 10th we opened our meetings there, we were greeted by a well filled house. We continued preaching each night and Sunday at eleven a. m., till the evening of the 17th. Our meetings were well attended throughout, and the best of attention was given to the word. While the writer was holding the fort here, Sunday the 13th and Tuesday the 15th, Bro. Giles and Bro. Holt moved out on what is known as Kitchen Creek to a schoolhouse, where Bro. Holt spoke three times, having good audiences and liberty at each meeting. Thursday, the 17th, two were "born anew" at Myrtle Point; both are daughters of Bro. Giles, and are estimable young ladies.

While here we visited with and administered to a Bro. Story, who lives near the town, and who is suffering from cancer. I think the Lord blessed him, and ask the saints to pray that he may be entirely healed. He is an elder, and a man of worth, has only been here a short time, and I feel that he is needed in the work. We administered to him the 10th, and as we came by the 17th, stopped to see him and found him much improved. After praying with him, we again administered to him and bade him good-bye. I feel that the Lord will reward his faith.

Coming back over the road we went out on, we stopped again with Mr. Laird, who was as kind to us as a saint could well be. We were sorry to leave Myrtle Point so soon, as all seemed to be hungry for the word. The prospects are if we can return there ere long that several will obey the work there. Arriving here the 19th, we were greeted by a well filled house, and yesterday held services morning and evening, and will probably continue till Thursday evening, when we will move on toward Drain. Our health is good, and prospects are bright in the work.

A. M. CHASE.

BELMONT, Neb., July 3.

Editors Herald.—Since writing from Harrisburg I have held meetings in Gering, Scott's Bluff County, with quite fair interest. Also at Bayard, Cheyenne County, where I effected the organization of a branch and Sunday school on June 20 with Elder D. W. Shirk president of branch, and a full corps of officers to assist him; and Sr. Fairbrother superintendent of the Sunday school. The branch decided to take the name "Olive," and the Sunday school "Rising Hope." I hope they will prove for themselves that they are indeed an "Olive branch" of God's own planting. I baptized five while there.

According to appointment I met with the saints at Bro. Heywood's (Pine Cliffs), eleven or twelve miles from Gordon, on the 23d, to hold the Northwest Nebraska reunion. The attendance was not what we had hoped for, but the meetings were not a failure. Monday morning after reunion closed, I had the pleasure of leading eight souls into the Running Water or Niobrara, and there buried them in baptism, and now hope that they may all walk in "newness of life." I believe more will soon be added to their number. Believe I can soon organize a branch there with eighteen or twenty members. All who attended this reunion were made glad, by hearing Bro. J. W. Gillen. He was with us through the meeting, and together with the writer did all the preaching. There is a little band of as noble, pure hearted (if I properly judge) saints at "Pine Cliff" as ever I met. May their light radiate and have a saving effect on others.

I go to Hay Springs, and Bro. Gillen to Wescott next Wednesday. Attendance has not been large in any of my meetings this summer, but interest has been good.

In gospel bonds,

DAVID M. RUDD.

OGDEN, Utah, June 30.

Editors Herald.—Arriving in Ogden, I came direct to Bro. Chase's home and found a glad welcome, and also Bro. S. D. Condit awaiting me. He gave me much valuable instruction and insight in regard to the mission. Next day we were made glad by the arrival of Bro. J. T. Davis, to whom I am indebted for much information and wise counsel.

Having plenty of help we made arrangements for two meetings on Sunday, Bro. Davis to preach at eleven at Bro. Chase's residence. Sunday school at one o'clock, and I to preach at the pavilion in Lester Park at four. After writing notices for posting and publication, Bro. Condit took me a tour to North Ogden, and to Bro. Tombs' near Hot Springs. Bro. Tombs came in from his work quite sick. Bro. Condit and I administered to him with the assurance of speedy relief. In the morning he arose well and went to his work thankful for the Lord's help.

On Saturday, the 5th, we passed through Hot Springs and took a sup of water of nature's boiling. Tradition says it tastes like chicken broth; but like most traditions there is a large amount of lie in it, at least it is a great slander on Iowa chicken broth, as I have sampled it. "They say" this water is very "healthy." It ought to be, it's strong enough. "They say" it is good for the rheumatism. Well, maybe it is, but it is horrible for the patient. "They say" it has made the lame to walk. Well, I should say it would. I know I would have to be very lame indeed if I didn't walk right away from there after getting the first taste if there was no speedier method of going. But I presume that to people who have had their taste educated to "polygamy," "blood atonement," etc., such water might be palatable. Here is a large hotel, bath-house, and dance hall. A motor line connects with the Ogden electric cars and other roads.

From here we drove over to Plane City and made calls at Bro. Miller's, Bro. Coy's, and Sr. Taylor's (the latter not at home), then on to Far West, where we staid for dinner at Mr. Littlewood's cozy home; thence back to Ogden. On Sunday we had a pleasant and spiritual time, the meetings carried out as previously outlined.

Monday, 7th. Bro. Condit having received an invitation to attend a "reply" to one of his previous discourses in "Eden,"—said reply to be made by Mr. Walker, Bishop's counselor,—desired me to go with him to hear the reply. So via North Ogden we drove over the mountain into Ogden Valley and called at Mr. Campbell's, and had supper, and got promise of schoolhouse for meeting later on. Men now busy making hay. After supper we drove to "Eden," found the schoolhouse lighted up, but no audience. As there was no angel with flaming sword to guard the entrance, we entered. It was 9:15 when a few had gathered and the meeting was opened. From that to 11:30 we listened to a prosaic effort to prove Brighamite rights, and doctrine. About 10:15 many of the audience arose and left, but Bro. Condit and I were in for the war. So we endured it through and asked the privilege of using the house to answer his reply, and were informed emphatically that "they" had decided the matter had gone far enough, and the people had heard enough to decide, and "further discourse might lead to debate, and that they were counseled to avoid;" so we had to submit.

At the close of the meeting we failed to get an invitation to lodge with any, and as we were not prepared to camp, we had to take a moonlight excursion of fourteen miles down Ogden Canyon against a cold, strong head-wind that carried so much dust and sand that much of the time we had to keep our eyes shut, opening them at intervals, to get a glimpse of the road ahead, and trusting to Providence and the horse for the rest. About three a. m. we arrived at Bro. Chase's, chilled and weary, got him out of bed to let us in, where we were glad to lie down to rest. Next morning we had many hearty laughs over our night's adventure. It seemed far more amusing by daylight.

On the 8th, Bro. Davis and Condit started in the latter's buggy for Idaho, leaving a lonesome place in the heart of those who remain. May the Lord prosper their labors.

Field address, 528 E. Second South Street, Salt Lake City, Utah.

REED CITY, Mich., July 3.

Editors Herald.—We are so busy and so many things to attend to that I have not had sufficient time to write for the Herald. When you consider a district of over forty counties, and only one other appointee in it, and the care of the district, and the Bishop's agent's work, and also the running of the district tent put upon one man, you may think he has about all he can do. Well, such is the case with me. I like to have all I can do, but sometimes I think I have more, and some work which ought to be done is left undone because I cannot do everything.

Well, I am doing about all I can, and wish to continue, and I am of the opinion that when my life's work is ended I will not feel that I did too much for this grand work.

Our district conference was at Alpena, away on the northeastern part of our district. It was a very good one; it did our brethren good, the most of whom never had the privilege of attending a conference before. We had Bro. E. C. Briggs with us, and we think several of those not members as well as members of the church were edified and strengthened in the faith.

I also attended the eastern district conference held at Huron. I enjoyed myself very much with my brethren there, some of whom I had not met for years. It was in Sanilac and Huron counties that I first did my preaching in Michigan, nearly twenty years ago. At that time there were but few saints in Michigan, especially in that part. While looking over the congregation of saints in Huron and in their new church then to be dedicated, and hearing the many testimonies, my heart was made to rejoice. Some of those testimonies were given by men and women who at the time I first labored in that part did not obey the gospel, but afterwards did. One testified, "When Bro. Cornish first preached in our schoolhouse about eleven years ago, I went to hear him out of curiosity. The text was 'Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?' I was convinced then that it was the truth. I did not obey then, but those words rang in my ears for years, and I often wished I had obeyed it then. But when Bro. Grant came along I was baptized. I love this work, and know that it is true," etc. Many such like testimonies were borne.

One brother said the words of that text were so vivid in his mind now as if uttered but yesterday. I do not remember, but at that discourse I likely had a good portion of the Spirit, and that was what did the convincing. I thought while in that meeting, and listening to the many testimonies borne, how true the words, "Cast thy bread upon the waters, thou shalt gather it again." I baptized two there, who said they had waited for me for years.

One thing might seem strange to the readers of the Herald when I say that, as near as I could learn, every member present except Bro. E. C. Briggs, president of the mission, was either baptized by me or by those whom I had baptized, hence you see they were all my children or grandchildren in the gospel. You would not wonder then at my rejoicing among my children, would you?

The grand old "everlasting gospel" is rolling on and I am glad I am in it, and although I have made some mistakes in the past, as fast as I see them I try to repent and do them no more. May God assist me always.

We put up the tent in Traverse City next week, a new place. If there are any out of the many elders in the West and who have nothing to do, and who wish to spend the summer in Michigan where many come for their health, and fish and hunt, and boatripe over our beautiful lakes, etc., come to Traverse City. But you must preach for the people and help us out all you can, or we won't show you the good places for fishing. I wish to do by you the way I would have you do by me.

In the faith,

J. J. CORNISH.

ROGERS, Arkansas, July 3.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Simmons and myself came to this place on the 1st, to answer a call for preaching in the Ensign by Bro. F. D. Mitchell. We began meetings last night; will continue over Sunday and next week if interest demands. Will go from here to Blackburn, Washington County, and other points in that section. All parties living in Northern Arkansas and Indian Territory who wish to assist the church in tithes and offerings may address me at Maysville, Arkansas, my home address.

Yours in gospel bonds,

T. J. SHEPPARD,

Bishop's Agent.

RENO, Nev., June 30.

Editors Herald:—We are pleased to state that things are onward, the outlook as good as could be expected. We have been well received by the saints and those not of the church. The Master has blessed with good liberty in preaching the word. Our first work was at Stofiel and Gold Creek. Bro. E. Penrod and family and others did all that could be asked, in their efforts to build up the work.

At Tuscarora the M. E. church was given for our use; the people did their part in coming out to hear the gospel. Interest good, as far as we were able to judge. A minister, Riddle by name, the editor of a temperance paper at Elko, staid over one day to hear our claims; he expressed himself as well pleased. He said "That is the gospel." The question is, What will he do with it? We met several saints here. Bro. and Sr. Stauts, the wife and three children of Bro. Covert, of Ruby Valley, also the sons of Bro. Haws. They were all very kind to us; did all they could to make our labors profitable to the church.

On account of the sickness of Bro. R. W. Davis I was compelled to go to conference at Mottsville alone. We had a very good time. Saints present expressed themselves as alive in the work. Bro. T. R. Hawkins thought that on account of haying time it would be best to defer work till later on. Sr. J. Gault procured the use of a church building for me. I shall see what can be done.

The Lord is blessing us as far as good liberty in presenting the word is concerned, and we are hopeful that good will be done. We are here to do our part and leave the results in the hands of the Lord.

My address will be Stofiel, Elko County, Nevada.

Your brother for truth,

J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

TUNCURRY, N. S. W., June 4.

Editors Herald:—The anxiously looked for news of General Conference has arrived, and our hearts are made glad to realize that "the Lord is remembering Zion, and bringing her comforts once more;" and I feel indeed to rejoice in the knowledge that the saints are participants of the refreshing that is forthcoming from the presence of the Lord. It is a day of great wonder and power, as the Lord says, "I will once more cause them to know my power," and this will be by "speaking peace to his people and to his saints."

It seems strange to think of the great sacrifice that is being made by so many religious people to carry their ideas to the heathen nations, and to overlook the truth that it is better to "hearken to the voice of the Lord than to offer sacrifice," no matter how great it may be. But whether it seems strange or not, it is a well-known truth, that "many will seek to enter, and shall not be able," simply for the reason that the striving and efforts will be unlawful; for a man is not crowned unless he strive lawful. I am afraid there is too much of this going about to establish one's own righteousness without "submitting to the righteousness of God," "for many will say unto me in that day, Lord, we have done many wonderful things in thy name," etc.; but the fact is apparent that the Lord never sent them to act in his name; but like the Pharisees, they "said but did not," and the sham is seen in the sheepskin to cover up the wolf; for the Lord who sees beneath the wool, says, "depart, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you."

I am very thankful that, although we may be locked upon as false prophets, teachers, etc., that one day we will get our just dues, and a reward for all our labor of love.

Now that the main quorums are filled I imagine like this, when at war and imminent danger is on every hand, or at sea and when fearful storms are coming on every man is stationed at his post of duty by the captain to insure safety or victory; so now, as the captain of our salvation has set his officers in their place of duty, I look for war, not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, powers, and spiritual wickedness in high places of "high seas of humanity" over which we must ride to anchor safely in the harbor of rest. Now as the battle is on, may our weapons be spiritual, our strength the strength of the Lord, and our aim "mankind to bless," is my prayer. We are not discouraged at not receiving aid from home during this year, but are laboring on with "the bright reward in view." The missionaries are laboring faithfully, and the work prospering slowly. Hoping for prosperity all along the line,

I am as ever, in bonds,

C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

PENYGRAIG Branch, South Wales, June 23.

Editors Herald:—We beg to have a short space in the worthy Herald in reference to Bro. Caffall, that we as a branch here are upholding him in the work of God, and that he has done some wonderful work here in our midst. And when he gave the last farewell meeting we all felt very sorry of his departure from us, because we do know he always had a portion of God's Spirit with him.

He and Bro. J. D. Jenkins have aroused the people out of their slumber in this part of the vineyard.

Our earnest desire is that God will keep him faithful to the end of his journey, and to do a lot more work for the Master, is our earnest prayer in the Penygraig branch. We passed a vote of thanks here for his good works while here with us.

Your brother,

DAVID MORRIS.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 6.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

MRS. E. G. WHITE'S REVELATIONS.

FROM the foregoing examination of the Advent movement, so called, it is apparent that the "testimonies" or "revelations" of Mrs. Ellen G. White are very vague and uncertain in their character. In her discourses on various topics in "The Great Controversy," she frequently remarks, "It was seen that," etc., evidently referring to what she saw in vision at various times. But as we have before seen, the leadings are to assumptions and now confessed mistakes. Now if the first three angels of Revelation 14: 6-9 are but symbols, then the three angels of verses 15, 17, and 18 of the same chapter are but symbols, and not angels at all. And by the same line of interpretation the personage of verse 14 is but a symbol, not a glorious and real being.

And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of Man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

Only a symbol? "like unto," but not in reality the Savior! Well, Daniel, too, beheld "one like the Son of Man, come with the clouds of heaven" (Dan. 7: 13, 14); but was not really Christ, only a symbol of him! Yet to this symbol of Christ, which means of course, a class of angels or men,—preachers,—Adventist preachers (?) was given "dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed!" High prerogatives for a symbol. But after all this extra visionary interpretation, manufactured as the basis of the assumptions here assumed, Daniel tells us in verse 27 that this "one like the Son of Man" is "the Most High," who is not a symbol, but our Redeemer and Sovereign. If one of these persons in that series of actors is a glorious and real person, then the other six are, and we are, by the divine word justified in the conclusion that the angels of Revelation are not symbols, but angels—messengers of God; and that the claims of Adventism based thereon are false and a deception.

THE EARTH TO BE DESOLATED, ETC.

The earth to be desolated at the first resurrection and left with no inhabitant but the Devil, and he the solitary ruler of chaos! All the righteous in heaven; the wicked in nonentity.—(Great Controversy, pp. 470—475).

This is a strange idea to a Bible reader and believer; but it is another of those strange subjects that form the aggregate of Adventism. It looks like another assumption. We venture the statement that it is an assumption; that it rests on the perversion and misapplication of the Scriptures. The first text used supportive of the position is Revelation 18: 8-11:—

Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. And the kings of the earth who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, shall bewail her, and lament for her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning, standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, Alas, alas, that great city Babylon, that mighty city! for in one hour is thy judgment come. And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more.

There is not a word said in this passage about the coming of the Lord, the desolation of the earth, or the survival of the Devil at the end of the world. To make this text prove anything to the point in hand it must be assumed that Babylon here mentioned includes all the wicked who are not in Christ, and who are not therefore caught up into the clouds to meet the Lord. And then it must be assumed that all the mighty destruction predicted by the language quoted will take place suddenly, and at Christ's second advent. Not one of these assumptions, however, is stated here—not one. On the contrary the language used implies a gradual consumption and overthrow of Babylon. It is "death, and mourning, and famine." A famine of one literal days' duration would be rather brief for the accomplishment of much. What is the use of "famine," if Babylon is "utterly burned" in a literal day's time? Again, it appears from reading the text and its connections that kings and others are left to mourn, "bewail," and "lament" over their great loss of riches and merchandise after the burning of Babylon. Who are those people who are left to bewail Babylon after she is "thrown down?" And besides all this, the "one day" of the text, is called "one hour" in verse 17. We find then nothing here to show that the earth will be desolated during the one thousand years intervening the first and second resurrections.

The vision of Ezekiel is next pressed into service to prove that the earth is to lay chaotic, dark, and without inhabitant during the thousand years, as follows:—

Slay utterly old and young, both maids and little children, and women: but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men which were before the house.—Ezek. 9: 6.

Reader, can you see any reference in this passage to the subject in hand? The inspired application of the text reads:—

Ah, Lord God! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem? (See verse 8.)

The entire chapter relates to the children of Israel, while yet living under the law where the iniquities of the fathers were visited on the children. God showed to the prophet how grievously Israel had sinned at Jerusalem and in the land of Judah, and how he would surely punish the guilty, and including "little children" of the guilty in the war to follow, "I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord." (Ezek. 11: 8, 9, 10.) Also how he would spare those who "sigh and that cry" for all the abominations that were done in Jerusalem. God then shows the prophet how he will remember in mercy after the war and captivity is over, as there foretold; and that he would "gather" them "from the people; and assemble them out of the countries" where "they have been scattered," and give them

"the land of Israel." (Ezek. 11: 17.)

This very prophecy relating to Israel is at the present time beginning to be fulfilled. They are gathering back to the land given to their fathers; the land is again yielding its strength to Israel. This prophecy is now being turned into history, and when they turn to the Lord again (Mal. 4: 5, 6; Rom. 11: 25-28), and the Lord makes the new covenant with them (Jer. 31: 31, 34; Ezek. 11: 18-20; 20: 33-42; 36: 21-38.)

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited. Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.—Isa. 24: 21-23.

And when is this to be? After the Lord has gathered Israel, brought them into the covenant, poured out his Spirit upon them and all flesh. (Joel 2: 21-29.) Already has Palestine received its early and latter rains preparatory to the return of its children. (Joel 2: 23.) The restoration so often sung of by the prophets of old has been ushered in (1846-1853; Joel 2: 25), and now the Jews await "the fullness of" the "times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21: 24; Rom. 11: 25-27), to receive the gospel as restored by the angel of Revelation 14: 6, which was accomplished in A. D. 1830. And after receiving it Israel's blessings from on high will descend (Joel 2: 28, 29). And then will the Lord show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.—Joel 2: 30, 31, 32.

Mount Zion and Jerusalem are by the prophets represented at separate and distinct places. Not Mount Zion or Jerusalem, but Mount Zion and Jerusalem. This is all important and should be well understood in this connection, inasmuch as it is at these places that "deliverance" is to be found in these last days of trouble. And as Joel represents deliverance to be found in Mount Zion and Jerusalem, and in the remnant, about the time the "voice from heaven" calls to God's people to come out of Babylon, that they be not partakers of her plagues, which are "death, mourning, and famine" (Rev. 18: 4-8),—they will find safety and deliverance "in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem," and in "the remnant," whom the Lord shall call, "as the Lord hath said." Here it will be said to the saved,

Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be over-past. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain.—Isa. 26: 20, 21.

Turning, then, from Ezekiel's prophecy, from which, as we have seen, nothing is to be derived supportive of the chaotic condition of earth during the thousand years following the resurrection of the righteous, we notice next that the thirteenth and fourteenth verses of Zechariah's fourteenth chapter is pressed into service under this head. That the verses there quoted describe events closely connected with the second advent, we most assuredly believe; but that they show the earth to be and remain desolate during the thousand years, we fail to see the most distant hint of. The entire chapter relates to events to transpire on the earth, both before, at, and after the second coming of Christ, as may readily be seen by reading it with its pretext and context.

It opens up with the description of the gathering of the Gentile nations against Jerusalem, after they have gathered out of the nations with great riches, as described in the prophecy of Ezekiel, chapter 37, and for the fulfillment of which preparations are now being made among Gentile nations; and which, in its results, arouses great envy and jealousy on their part. (See Ezek. 38: 1-16.) The evil Gentile thought is, "to take a spoil, and to take a prey," of gold and silver, cattle and goods. Gog and Magog with other nations marshal themselves, a great army, "with all sorts of armor." "It shall be in the latter days." No such numerous combination of nations have ever in any past age simultaneously declared war against Israel hitherto as is predicted to occur at the time indicated. They are to succeed in capturing half of the city of Jerusalem; but "the residue of the people shall not" go into captivity. That great army, then, becomes divided; one part of it turns, enraged, against the other, caused by a tumult from the Lord. "Every man's sword shall be against his neighbor." (Ezek. 38: 19-21), for,

Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.—Zech. 14: 3.

Of the day of battle here referred to it is said:—

And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died; they were more which died with hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.—Joshua 10: 11.

Of this latter-day battle Ezekiel says:—

And I will plead against him [Gog and his bands] with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, great hailstones, fire, and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord.—Ezek. 38: 22, 23.

"Many nations" it seems, will survive this war of wondrous termination, and in due process of time. The Savior comes and all the saints with him. He proceeds to assume his dominion over the nations. (Daniel 7: 13, 14, 27.)

And the Lord shall be king over all the earth; in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one. All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem. . . . And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited.—Zech. 14: 9-11.

And after thus carrying the mind forward to the introduction of the reign of Christ over the nations, after his coming in glory, the Prophet Zechariah returns to a further description of the divine dealings in judgment against the nations who shall fight against the Jews at Jerusalem in the mighty Gentile gathering against them yet to transpire. He says:—

And this shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem. Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth. And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor. And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance. And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague.—Ezek. 14:12-15.

These verses describe the finishing touches of this final struggle between the Jews and the Gentiles, before the coming of Christ in glory to resurrect the righteous dead, change the righteous living, and reign "on the throne of his father David," as said the angel of glory to his Mother. (Luke 1:32.)

Of these nations, thus gathered against Jerusalem and the ancient covenant people of God, he says:—

For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land.—Joel 3:1, 2.

Judah has been a slave, a captive to Gentile rigor and boastful rule (Luke 21:24) now for more than eighteen hundred years. His land has been under Gentile heel; this service has been rigorous and long!

How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?—Dan. 4:13, is a question that Daniel the prophet was greatly agitated about, and one also over which our Savior wept, when considering its lengthened sweep and dire consequences. (Luke 19:41-43). But Jesus answered the question thus: "Until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." But remember, that divine justice slumbers not forever. God will call the Gentile nations to account for unjust rule over his people Israel. They went not from Egypt empty handed from a two hundred and fifteen years' rigorous service. Think you he has bowed his neck to the Gentile yoke of tyranny for eighteen hundred years for naught? Nay. Judah is now beginning to "possess the gate of his enemies," the Gentiles (Gen. 22:17.) "Gentile times" of rule over Jacob (Joel 3:2, 3) are closing. The servant is assuming the prerogatives of master; the ruled is now ruler commercially. The chattel slave rises to the rightful ownership of his former master (Joel 3:5-8), "for the Lord hath spoken it." Already is Judah beginning to "eat the riches of the Gentile," and in their "glory" to "boast themselves" (Isa. 61). His financial countenance glows already with healthful ruddiness, as he draws financial "milk" from the bosom of Gentile commonwealths (Isa. 60:16). Judah's shackles of iron and brass are now sundered that were forged by Gentile powers, and his chambers glitter with silvery ornamentation, and his tables are decked with gold! (See verse 17.) Nations that but recently held over Israel the rod of authority with haughty looks and proud demeanor, now humbly and reverently do him homage, and in humility say, "We are your plowmen and your vinedressers."

This final struggle between Jews and Gentiles will be the time of Jacob's trouble (Jer. 30:1-7); "but he shall be saved out of it," "and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him." God promised, away back in Abraham's day, to be the God of Abraham and his seed, throughout their generations (Gen. 17:6, 7), and to this day God has ever remained true to that promise. He has preserved a distinct, a separate people, among the nations; "Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations" (Num. 23:9); moreover,

God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?—Numbers 23:19.

Yes, he will yet cause Israel, unbelieving Israel it is now, to pass under the rod of his correction (Jer. 30:11), and will not make a full end of them; though it cost a complete end of all other nations; but will bring them into the gospel—the "everlasting covenant," a "covenant of peace" (Ezek. 37:26); and having been brought to see the Messiah in Jesus of Nazareth, will accept his coming in the name of the Lord. And all this will he do because having pledged his eternal word, he changes not, hence, referring to the very time that it is urged that God will desolate the earth, and leave it chaotic and void, except for the Devil; he says:—

For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.—Mal. 3:6.

God's immutability is the ground here assigned by himself, why he will not destroy Israel with the rest of the nations. Such is not his reason for saving his saints.

Having thus taken a general view of the subject matter of Zechariah, chapter fourteen, and verses twelve and thirteen, with some other scriptures that relate to same subject, we find no intimation that God will desolate the earth at the time referred to in the passages cited to sustain the assumption. On the contrary, both Ezekiel and Zechariah state that a remnant of people will not be destroyed at that time of trouble. To Gog and the many nations associated with him in this great slaughter, he says:—

And I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee, and will cause thee to come up from the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel.—Ezek. 39:2.

And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem, shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles. . . . This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.—Zech. 14:16, 19.

Why should these last statements be overlooked or excluded in this investigation? They throw great light on the following statement of the Prophet Micah, who when speaking, evidently, of the reign of Christ on earth, said:—

And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the Lord hath spoken it.—Micah 4:3, 4.

Also the following:—

The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah. Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder: he burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth. The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.—Ps. 46:6-11.

At this time, the kingdom having been restored to Israel (Isa. 9:6, 7; Ezek. 21:25-27), the vision of the Prophet David will be realized:—

I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O, Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together; whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee. Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces—Ps. 122:1-7.

And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.—Dan. 7:27.

Thrones of judgment! "He shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem."

And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye [apostles] shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.—Matt. 19:28.

When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory.—Matt. 25:31.

The foregoing scripture statements seem to plainly set forth that which precedes and that also which follows the coming of Christ in glory, as to the glory that shall characterize the earth during the millennial age. As to the remnants of the nations "who are left" at the second coming of our Savior, they are to increase during the thousand years "in the four quarters of the earth," and being the remnants of "Gog and Magog," they are still recognized by these names after that age (Rev. 20:7, 8); and during the little season, Satan—who was bound during the thousand years—had been bound, "that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled,"—is "loosed out of his prison," goes among the nations of Gog and Magog, and he deceives them; gathers them to a final contest for the supremacy of the earth. In the struggle fire comes "down from heaven and devoured them." The Devil is "cast into the lake of fire and brimstone." At the conclusion of the little season, after all the race of Adam have suffered the appointed penalty passing upon all from their federal head, Adam,—for "it is appointed unto man once to die [the physical death], but after this the judgment." In order to the judgment, John says the dead, small and great, are to "stand before God." "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order." So now all that are in the graves, in the sea, and the spirits dead in sin, come from their dark abode in hell, "for death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their works." (Rev. 20:12, 13.)

When the Redeemer takes the rule of government on the throne of his glory, he continues to reign till all the wicked are delivered from that death that they are appointed "once to die," "for he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." And death remains an enemy as long as there is one of Adam's race left in his cruel embrace; and should one soul be returned to his domain after the judgment, this last enemy would remain the conqueror, and Christ's mission would be a failure, and he would be yielding the keys that he once so gloriously took as a trophy when he vanquished him and returned from the conflict crowned an eternal victor.

Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him. The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.—Isa. 24:1-6.

Isaiah is counted among the chief prophets of all time, and this prophecy is of the most majestic and sweeping in its scope, taking within its folds the entire time intervening between the first and second coming of the Lord Jesus. The closing events here foretold seem to synchronize with those set forth in the eighteenth chapter of John's revelations, in their fulfillment. The everlasting covenant here referred to can be no other than the gospel covenant. The one ratified by the blood of the Savior. (Heb. 13:20.) The inhabitants of the earth, as such, have participated in no other. They could break no covenant that they are not participators in. That was the covenant designed of God for the acceptance of the inhabitants of the earth. (Matt. 28:19, 20.)

It was evidently broken when the church, under the representation of a pure woman, forfeited her right to the endowments of the covenant, ministerial authority, represented by the "man child;" the inspirational gifts and enlightenment of the Holy Ghost, emblemized by "the light of the sun;" and left the foundation of the seven "principles of the doctrine of Christ," on which she stood, symbolized by the moon (Heb. 6:2), and fled into the wilderness of apostasy; to be helped by "the earth," and to be "nourished from the face" (not away from) "the face of the serpent." And after breaking the everlasting covenant, or apostatizing from the gospel, became married to the kings of the earth; and her nourishment, instead of being from heaven, was found in the "golden cup," seen in her hand. (Rev. 12:1-16; 17:1-7). Some object to the idea that the nourishment of the church should be derived from the face of the serpent, because it says the woman fled to "a place prepared of God" for her. Well, he prepared a place "for the Devil and his angels" (Matt. 25:41); but it does not necessarily follow, from that fact, that God designed Lucifer to fall from heaven, or man to follow him to his "prepared" place. The woman clothed with the sun, is the Church of Christ before she broke the everlasting covenant; the woman on the scarlet colored beast is the church supported by the earthly governments, for twelve hundred and sixty years, after the covenant was broken. The man child, or the Christ by his divine authority, was not with the church in the wilderness. Neither was the light of "the sun" of righteousness with her there. Nor was the gospel of peace, with which she had been shod, and on which she had stood (Eph. 6:15; Heb. 6:1, 2), the sandals of the woman in her place in the wilderness. The time for the renewal of the covenant thus broken was signalled by the coming of the angel with "the everlasting gospel," as seen by the Revelator John (Rev. 14:6, 7), and is the means by which a people will be—are being, we should now say—called out of Babylon—the wilderness. (Rev. 18:1-4.)

And so this work began, in 1830, A. D. (See Doc. and Cov. 4:3, and 32:2.) "And even so will I gather mine elect from the four quarters of the earth."

So long as people deny the necessity of revelation from God, so long will they remain under the broken covenant. For by divine revelation was it first brought into effect, or instituted; and by continued revelation was it maintained; and when revelation from God ceased, along in the second and third centuries of the Christian era, the darkness set in, the everlasting covenant was broken.

And in so far as their relation to divine administrative authority is concerned, all,—both priest and people, buyer and seller, lender and borrower,—have occupied a common level, without the power to administer the rites and ordinances of the everlasting covenant. "Because" of this "the earth mourneth and fadeth away; the world languisheth and fadeth away; the haughty people of the earth do languish."

And because the people will not investigate the truth, nor recognize the everlasting covenant when renewed nor turn from their creeds and human confessions,—but trust in the works of their own hands; that is, churches founded by human wisdom alone, on the "creedified" theologies of poor weak man, "the earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof;" "therefore, the inhabitants of the earth are burned," at Christ's second advent, "and few men left" (2 Thes. 1:7-9). But Isaiah, like Ezekiel and Zechariah, has a remnant, even at the burning time. It is then that the moon will be confounded, and the sun ashamed, and our Savior will commence his glorious reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem (Isa. 24:21-23).

So there is nothing in this text to indicate that earth will be void during the thousand years of Revelation 20:2, 5, 7.

W. Chapman was admonished to continue faithful and diligent in his calling of priest till the voice of wisdom and revelation more fully demanded his ordination to office of elder. Seven were baptized and confirmed. J. A. Tanner continued as district president, Louise Palfrey as secretary declined, and G. Tryon was elected in her place. Conference will meet October 9, at Bevier, Missouri. District tent given in charge of M. M. Turpen and W. Summerfield. BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints in Mobile District, Greeting; Beloved Brethren in the Lord:—The Lord has made it possible for all of us to do something to "establish the righteousness of his kingdom;" we can all serve him, and we are all commanded to obey him. Let us see to it that we bring into the Lord's storehouse all our tithes and offerings. We need a larger missionary force; the demands of the work cannot be met; calls for preaching are going unheeded. We withhold our tithes and offerings, and rob God, hence people are robbed of the privilege to hear the gospel. We are a poor people, yet there is a great deal owing the Lord by the saints in this district. Pray to the Lord; he is willing and able to help you out of the bondage of this debt; for in not paying your tithing you are bound, hindered, prevented from doing the good which your means might accomplish if it was placed where it belongs. Nine tenths of your property will do you more good under God's blessings than ten tenths will under the blight of his displeasure.

If you cannot pay all you owe at once, make an effort and do something, and the field of your usefulness will widen out before you with righteous living,—the possibilities of life will be appreciated by you, and through the Holy Spirit you will "taste of the powers of the world to come."

Send money by registered letter or money order to Vancleave, Mississippi.

In gospel bonds,

W. L. BOOKER.

Bishop's agent, Mobile district.

P. S.—Some of you who have about payed what is due the Lord, have done well. A few have done more than required, such willing workers will be blessed, and continued opportunities for doing good will present themselves, and they will "enter into the joy of their Lord."

VANCLEAVE, MISS., JUNE 23.

BLUFF PARK (NAUVOO) REUNION.

At the Semicentennial Reunion appointed by the General Conference of 1896, and which was held at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, August 21-September 1, 1896, it was decided to hold another reunion to be known as the "Nauvoo reunion."

The committee appointed begs leave hereby to announce that all necessary arrangements have been made to hold said reunion at Bluff Park, from August 19 to September 1, next, and hereby extends a cordial invitation to all saints and friends to be present.

Bluff Park is a favorite resort, situated on a high bluff opposite Nauvoo, and commands a view of the river, the islands, and the surrounding country. The grounds have been refitted for the coming season and are in excellent condition. A mineral well, operated by an aeromotor, will furnish cottages and others with an abundant supply of medicinal water. The grounds are high and dry, the location conducive to quiet recreation and health. The Park is situated three fourths of a mile from Montrose, Iowa, and food supplies will be delivered on the grounds by the merchants. The reunion will be held during the fruit season. Come and eat the fruit of the goodly land.

The ferry between Montrose and Nauvoo will run on both Sundays, to accommodate visitors. A cheap steamboat excursion may be provided for, during the week.

The Western Passenger Association has granted a rate of one and one third fare round trip, on the usual certificate plan, provided one hundred tickets are sold exceeding a cost of fifty cents each. Buy your tickets to Montrose, Iowa, and don't fail to get certificate with each ticket.

Those coming by team will find hay and grain at reasonable prices on the grounds; plenty of room for teams.

Bro. Elmer Reed will be in charge of the large and commodious boarding house. Good board by the week at $3.00 per week, or 25 cents per separate meal; dinners on Sundays, 35 cents.

Lodging can be had at the lodging house. Those lodging there must bring sheet, pillow case, and towel. Room, cot, springs, pillow, mattress, and blanket will be furnished for $1.25 for the session.

Those desiring cottages, write to Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, and inclose stamp for reply. Cottages that will accommodate from four to twelve persons rented at from $4.00 to $10.00, depending on furniture they contain, etc.

Those wishing tents can be furnished on application to F. M. Weld, chairman of committee, at Montrose, Iowa, inclosing stamp for reply. Wall tents 7 x 12 and 2½ feet wall, $2.75; family tents 9 x 14, $4.25; ditto 12 x 19, $4.75.

A good attendance is hoped for that this reunion may be made one of the permanent reunions of the church, which it should be, because of the great amount of good that may be done by it.

In bonds,

28-2t

F. M. WELD, Chairman.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Central Nebraska district will hold their next conference at Meadow Grove, August 7, commencing at two o'clock p. m. It is hoped that a pleasant and profitable season may be had.

LEVI GAMET, Sec.

Conference of Eastern Colorado district will convene with Denver branch at their church, corner Twenty Second and Arapahoe Streets, at ten a. m., Saturday, August 28. A good representation from the different branches is desired. Come and bring the good Spirit with you, that we may have a time of rejoicing together. Please see that your branch reports are made out, approved, and sent to the district secretary, C. E. Everett, No. 2851 California Street, Denver, Colorado, in time to reach him at least five days before the convening of conference.

J. B. ROUSH, Vice President.

C. E. EVERETT, Secretary.

Conference of Ohio district will be held with Highland branch, in their chapel, Highland County, beginning September 4, at 9:30 a. m. It is desired that as many officials of the district as can attend will be present. Important matters will be brought before the conference. We expect Apostle Griffiths and a number of missionaries present. All come on Friday the 3d without fail. The president of branch will give notice as to trains and conveyance from same.

JAMES MOLER, Dist. Pres.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Nodaway District.—No doubt ere this you are all aware that our general missionary in charge, Bro. I. N. White, has placed me in charge of this part of the field for the present year; and now that the busiest part of the season will soon be over, enabling you to give more time and attention to church work, will you please look around in your respective neighborhoods and ascertain what are the opportunities for preaching; find out what schoolhouses or churches can be had, or suitable places for the tent. Inform me, and Bro. Gowell or I will attend to the work as soon as practicable. The scattered members especially can render us much assistance in this way, and save us time and means. We desire to preach the word in new places. In many places where preaching has been done by the elders in the past, little or no interest is manifest. The gospel much be preached to all. It is our privilege to present it to them; theirs to accept or reject.

Saints, let us put forth a united effort to reach out after those who have not as yet had the chance to hear. Let the local ministry assist the missionaries in making and filling appointments as much as possible, and let us all labor diligently and faithfully in the calling and station wherein we have been placed.

I would also state that our late conference appointed me treasurer of the tent fund. It requires some money to run a tent, besides several things are needed in order to fully equip us for that work. Will you please send to me the means that you may be able to contribute for this purpose, to Box 539, Stanberry, Missouri.

Yours in the faith,

PETER ANDERSON.

INDIAN TERRITORY CAMP MEETING.

The saints in Indian Territory will hold a camp meeting on Grand River near Echo, or Cary's Ferry, beginning August 6, and continuing till the 16th. All the saints and friends who can attend this meeting are cordially invited to come prepared to camp, and remain to the close of the meeting.

This meeting is gotten up for the purpose of gathering together scattered saints in Indian Territory, that we may get better acquainted, and assist one another in building up and establishing gospel truth among our neighbors. Many saints in Kansas, Missouri, and Arkansas have said, "we are coming to that Indian Territory Camp Meeting."

The meeting will be held in a beautiful grove on the farm of Bro. John Kelly, one mile northeast of Cary's Ferry, on Grand River. Those coming from Kansas should come by way of Fairland, then twelve miles south to camp ground. Those coming by way of Tiff City, Missouri, should cross Cow Skin River, then take road running west along the Seneca line to camp ground. Those coming by way of South West City, Missouri, should inquire for Grove, then three miles northwest to camp ground.

The place selected is eighteen miles east of Venita, Indian Territory, twelve miles south of Fairland, Indian Territory, and twenty miles northwest of South West City, Missouri.

Brn. F. C. Keck and O. P. Sutherland have promised to be with us, and all the missionary force of the district is expected to come and help to make the first camp meeting in the territory a success.

The district tent will be on the ground for the benefit of the meeting. Good pasture for teams can be had near by the grounds at reasonable rates. Come one and all; the trip will do you good; bring the Spirit of the Master with you, and your presence will bless others.

The river abounds with fish and the springs with pure water. Don't forget the date, August 6. Yours for truth,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

A GLORIOUS TIME.

One of the best conferences in the London district was held at St. Marys, June 19, 20, 21. The blessing of God was poured out upon his people from the start of the Sunday school convention until the close of conference. The gifts were manifest in nearly every session to the encouragement of all, and especially to the sick, for it was declared that the time of a great endowment was near at hand, and as a result "your sick will no longer languish." Alfred Davis, of Stratford, was called to the Melchisedec priesthood. The business sessions were profitable, and no ill feeling was cherished in the discussion of resolutions. We are glad to remark that the saints are coming up higher in this respect. The report of district secretary showed a decided increase of church membership, while the report of Bishop's agent was very encouraging. We hope the time may soon come when more missionaries will be sent to Canada. The attendance of visiting saints was said to be the largest that ever has been, and the good reports that were brought by them serve to show that God is about to perform a marvelous work. Many elders were present.

The Sunday school meeting was excellent, the best ever held. Everybody is alive to that important work. A resolution was passed that this district accept the decision of the deacon's duties as declared by President Joseph Smith some time ago.

We must not forget to mention the divine manifestations borne by some to the calling of R. C. Evans to apostleship. Thus closed one of the most profitable and we may say the most spiritual conferences ever held in London district.

PENROD. — Elvin Alexander, born August 24, 1896, at Stofiel, Nevada, to Bro. and Sr. Alexander Penrod. Blessed June 2, by Elders R. W. and J. Arthur Davis.

PENROD. — Ruth Elizabeth, born March 23, 1892, at North Fork, Nevada. Blessed May 30, 1897, by J. Arthur and R. W. Davis.

PENROD. — Chester Franklin, born February 29, 1896, at Stofiel, Nevada, to Bro. and Mrs. James Penrod. Blessed May 30, 1897, by R. W. and J. Arthur Davis.

DIED.

HALL. — At Pleasanton, Iowa, June 26, 1897, Sr. Emeline Hall, aged 78 years, 8 months, and 18 days. She was born in the State of New York, was married in Bates County, Missouri, to Bro. William Hall, July, 1843. From 1846 until 1877 they lived in Lee County, Iowa, then moved to the neighborhood of Pleasanton, in which vicinity Bro. Hall died April, 1888. Sr. Hall was a faithful member of the Latter Day Saint Church for over thirty years, and several of the missionary elders will remember with much appreciation the kind hospitality of her home in days when the membership of the Reorganization numbered much less than it does now, and the communities in which the weary and footsore elder found a welcome by a saints' heartstone were few and far between. She leaves five sons. Funeral services were conducted at the saints' church, Pleasanton, by Duncan Campbell and A. W. Moffet. Interment in Hamilton cemetery.

COPELAND. — At the home of his parents, near Pleasanton, Iowa, June 23, 1897, Joseph, son of John and Mary Copeland, aged 5 years, 8 months, and 17 days. Funeral services at saints' church, Pleasanton, by Duncan Campbell. Interment at Hamilton cemetery.

GLADWIN. — Sr. Eliza J. Gladwin was born October 22, 1819, in Clinton, Connecticut, died May 22, 1897, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, aged 77 years and 7 months. She was the widow of Horace G. Gladwin, to whom she was married October 20, 1834. She was an old-time saint, and was persistent in her attendance upon Divine service. Funeral sermon by Elder T. W. Williams.

LONG. — Tempest Long was born December 13, 1878, at Tabor, Iowa; died May 13, 1897, aged 18 years and 5 months. She was the youngest daughter of James and Sr. Mary Long; was very ambitious, and while for over a year consumption had been undermining her system, yet she continued to teach school, and even this spring signed a contract for spring term. She leaves four sisters, brother, father, and mother to mourn. It was the longing of her soul that she might recover sufficiently to be baptized, but the good Father ruled otherwise, yet evidenced consideration in blessing her in administration. Funeral in the Congregational church, Tabor, it being her expressed wish Bro. T. W. Williams conducted the services. There was a large audience, and the Holy Spirit came blessing the speaker, comforting the bereaved, and giving meat in due season to those assembled.

HARDING. — Don. C. Harding was born February 26, 1870, near Crescent, Iowa; baptized December 20, 1896, at Council Bluffs, Iowa; died March 28, 1897, at the home of his father, Benjamin Harding, near Crescent, Iowa. He was uncomplaining to the last, leaving his case solely in the hands of God. Funeral services were held at the saints' church, Crescent, Iowa, T. W. Williams officiating.

It may be read with interest and profit by skeptics and infidels. HERBERT SPENCER'S "INFINITE AND ETERNAL ENERGY."

THE appearance of the last volume in Mr. Spencer's series on "Synthetic Philosophy" has not, of course, passed unnoted by the religious journals. The passage that has for them the most interest is the following paragraph, the final one in the first division of the book on "Religion":—

"But one truth must grow ever clearer—the truth that there is an inscrutable existence everywhere manifested, to which he [the thoughtful observer] can neither find nor conceive either beginning or end. Amid the mysteries which become the more mysterious the more they are thought about, there will remain the one absolute certainty—that he is ever in presence of an infinite and eternal energy from which all things proceed."

Commenting on this passage, The Christian Intelligencer says:—

"This is an important admission by an important man. The man who has reached such a conclusion cannot stop there, he must consistently and logically go one step farther. He must acknowledge a personal, almighty God, 'by whom and for whom are all things.' If the result of the infinite and eternal energy is man with mind and heart and conscience, or, in other words, is a being having intelligence, reason, morality, and affections, then those qualities were in and proceeded from the energy. But those attributes constitute a person, distinguish a person from a thing, and the energy must be a person, an infinite and eternal person. The conclusion is inevitable."

The Christian Work takes much the same view:—

"As, just before the close of his life, light seemed to be breaking from the heavens upon Shelley, and as the idea of intelligent design behind nature seemed to be climbing into the soul of Darwin, and finding a permanent abode there, and as Romanes found the fuller light, so the idea seems to stand forth and obtain recognition, that there is something beyond the 'unknown' and the 'unknowable.' . . . These [the words already quoted] are very nearly the terms used by Charles Darwin, with whom Spencer had many conversations, and who might have influenced the great writer in assuming a teleological view of the universe of mystery and fact that surrounds us."—Sel.

"POPULAR ERRORS IN LIVING."

DR. CHARLES W. PURDY discusses "Popular Errors in Living" in the current number of the North American Review, and although he does not treat the subject exhaustively, he furnishes a very acceptable guide to the application of ordinary common sense. It is impossible to set up absolute rules of living for the use of all. If all men were born with the same physical constitutions, or if they could be prevailed on to take just the requisite amount of the best exercise, it would be a comparatively easy task to lay out their daily scheme of life. But when these essential factors necessarily vary so widely, the best that can be done is to outline general principles, and this Dr. Purdy has done in a manner that is convincing, even though it may accomplish no special reforms.

His fundamental statement is that "if a man who is born of healthy parents and is himself healthy at birth becomes seriously disabled in health before the age of from sixty-five to seventy, barring accidents or infectious disease, it is solely because he has not lived properly." Dr. Purdy practically skips the period of youth when parental control can determine absolutely the essential features of children's lives and counteract any natural tendencies to commit serious errors. He presupposes that the parental duty has been faithfully performed, although probably the truth is that the average individual reaches the age of discretion with most of the popular errors of living in full operation.

His first contention is that the tendency in America is toward a sedentary life and that the vast majority of people take practically little exercise. Without going into the ramifications of this detail nor the causes for the practice, but accepting it as generally true, it is particularly instructive to note the serious errors in living in which this class indulges. They are largely in the matter of eating, and can be summarized as follows:—

Eat too much meat.

Eat too much food containing sugar and starch.

Eat too much food generally.

The matter of excessive drinking of course can be eliminated from a discussion of the acts of some people.

Meat provides the nitrogen in the human system and comparatively little is needed. The excess of meat eaten therefore goes to waste, overtaxes the delicate organism that disposes of this waste, and results in time most frequently in forms of apoplexy, Bright's disease, and heart failure.

Sugar and starch when taken in excess into the system clog the organs and the disarrangements become manifest in dyspepsia and diabetes. The tendency to eat too much of all kinds of food is especially pronounced among the rich, where food is prepared in so many inviting varieties. The entire internal mechanism of man is of course overworked by this stuffing and wears out under the strain.

It requires the liberal exercise of common sense to overcome these errors. When the human machine resorts to proper exercise many of the evils are to a large extent counteracted. The laborer can eat more meat and requires more than the nonexercising student, and in fact he requires more food of every kind, because the waste of tissue in his case is so much greater. Between these two extremes exists a graduated series of equations, the necessary food supply increasing with the increase of exercise. It is obvious that the most difficult road to reform is through the regulation of the food supply. All the environments of our daily life, and, in fact, of the civilization of the times, tend to encourage man in overeating, and it requires a much greater exercise of caution and self-constraint to resist these tendencies than the average man can hope to put forth. But if the practice of overeating seems too deeply planted to uproot, the same cannot be said of the tendency to a sedentary life. The evils of overeating can be greatly diminished by exercise, and it seems that to exercise man must look chiefly for his deliverance from premature death.

Dr. Purdy holds that horseback riding, bicycle riding, and walking are the best forms of exercise in the order given. Doubtless many experts would change that order somewhat and place bicycle riding first, and Dr. Purdy himself admits that it is "an ideal form of exercise." It is very encouraging, therefore, for the future of the race that "an ideal form of exercise" has taken such a strong hold on the people. In the last few years women, students, professional men, and business men who never before knew what it was to take regular exercise to any adequate extent, have been drawn out into the open air and have gradually acquired the habit of riding several miles every day. Whole communities have become imbued with the wholesome desire to ride and there is every reason to believe that the custom has come to stay. Who can say, then, that the Americans have not taken a long step towards their rescue from premature decay? With the exercise problem solved or in process of solution, the admittedly greatest factor towards longevity is being acquired as a national trait. Perhaps in time the various minor factors will also be added to the American regimen.—Exchange.

THE SAINTS' HERALD
REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD will be fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

IS THERE REMEDY?

Two articles upon the labor topic, and thoughts suggested by its consideration will be found elsewhere in this issue. We give them insertion without a thought as to their political complexion; but as a tribute of respect to the motive by which the writers are evidently incited to write.

It is estimated that the movement contemplated by Mr. E. V. Debs will require $7,000,000 to put it into operation; and Mr. Debs is confident that he can raise all the funds needed. He states that he already has a large contingent of both clergymen and lawyers, enough to found a colony of each, besides thousands of applicants of all classes. In the meantime, Mr. Debs has an office in Chicago, with secretaries, type writer, and messenger boys at a salary of $1,200 per year to enjoy while he works out the colonization scheme. We are waiting to learn the details of the plan, thinking it possible that the hitherto hindering causes to successful coöperation may have yielded to political sagacity.

All the plans for coöperative associations hitherto advocated, so far as we have seen them, require the collecting of a sum sufficiently large to found a town, township, or State. This is the feather that has broken the back of the labor camel, time after time. The possible putting together of many small fortunes did not make the individual stockholders any the richer, though the aggregate of the small sums looked large, of itself.

President Brigham Young had a successful way of providing men with a chance to work; but it was not by a coöperative system of which the people were the originators, benefactors, managers, and beneficiaries; the whole was dominated by the direction of the church officers, Pres. Young first, the bishops next. It furnished all something to eat, but made all labor, and permitted Pres. Young and some others, all leaders, to get wealthy. Whatever the advantages the system as applied were to the poor, the willingly able to labor, and the necessarily indigent, it permitted an opportunity to those in whose hands the direction of affairs and decision of disputes were vested to take good care of themselves.

This may have been the fault of the administrators rather than the system, the basic principle of which was, "there shall be no poor among you."

There was none, we suppose, in the sense that none perished with cold, or hunger, or absolute need of wherewithal to sustain physical life; but, measured by the condition of the leading men there were many poor, in comparison.

Mr. Debs visited Utah in his search for a locality in which to try his colonization scheme; and, upon his return he was willing to say that the system was the most perfect he had seen, if carried out as originally instituted. It does not seem, however, that he proposes to model after the original system in his colonies.

One brother expresses the thought that "surely there are men of means enough in the church to purchase the land;" meaning, of course, land for farming and gardening purposes, for the sustaining of life. There may be. It would depend upon how much land would be required, how much would be deemed necessary.

This brother also expresses the thought that there would be found plenty of those willing to labor, if the labor was provided for them. This may be, also, and we hope it is abundantly true, in regard to saints. But would labor on the land, however well life might be sustained, be satisfactory to all? The subject is worthy of thought.

The church in the past has been the participant in several coöperative attempts, all of which, so far as tried, failed to answer the expectations of both those who promoted them and those sought to be benefited.

The only one that clearly appears to be pointed out in the church books, has not yet been given a fair trial, in a universal sense of application. So far as it has been, it works well, though some find objection to its administration; possibly with more or less cause. Can it be remedied?

The church now has some lands in different localities, which the Bishop would like to see occupied; but, because he is not in condition to furnish all the improvements and appliances for an already successful occupation, tenants of the sort willing to "labor and to wait," are difficult to find. By far too many are like a carpenter we know, who is quite willing to work when he "feels well," provided he can get carpenter work to do, and get old time good wages, but will not work for less, or do other work than carpenter work, though repeatedly offered him; he says he prefers not to work than to work for less than he used to get, and don't care to do common labor. Of course this is a single case, but it illustrates a class. Does a land system comprehend work for this kind of men, and a great host of others, of similar inclinations of numerous trades?

The plan, or plans proposed by the Lord, so far as found in the law, all seem to contemplate a good deal of self-sacrifice, and do not point out a dead level of equality, any more than the equality of the beautiful city means that it is to be fifteen hundred miles high; though the description states that "the length and the breadth and the height of it are equal."

A good number of the socialistic, or communal societies that have been tried, were for a time successful on a small scale, and during the vigorous lifetime of their originators. But in not one of them that we have ever seen the account of, was there an absolute equality; and if anyone thinks there has been, or is now one in existence, we shall be glad of an account of it, with a copy of its by-laws, rules, and regulations; including, of course, its working details.

We want it understood that we are not opposed to social and domestic coöperative associations; but quite to the contrary we are well disposed toward them. And in the absence of any divinely directed scheme the working details of which have been arranged by divine wisdom, we are trying for light and knowledge regarding such institutions devised by human wisdom—and are willing to learn. With us the question is like Atlas' problem of lifting the world; give him a fulcrum, and a place to rest it, and he could easily have done it. Give several of our brethren the means sufficient to a full fledged colony and they could "touch the button" and do the rest.

That "there is something wrong," may be sadly too true; but we fancy that the centre of the disease social has not been accurately located, nor the adequate remedy discovered, aside from full obedience to the "Law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus," by which men are made free from the law of sin and death.

This is not written with regard to any view of politics, or with reference to any party in the political strife, and we hope no reader will make the mistake of thinking so.

A LABOR PROBLEM.

THE industrial world is facing the labor problem again in the strike phase.

The following will show to some extent what the money cost will likely be. Question may arise, can an already "impoverished" band of workers afford the cost?

It is now estimated that 125,000 coal miners are engaged in a strike. Assuming that their wages averaged $1 per day the weekly loss to these miners would be $750,000, and if the strike shall last ten weeks the loss to labor alone would be $7,500,000. If the strike shall last ten weeks and the miners then gain the increase of 18 per cent demanded, it would require them to work for fifty-five weeks at the increased rates to restore the loss they sustain by ten weeks of idleness. This is not theory; it is stubborn facts and figures which should be most carefully and dispassionately considered by those who engage in a strike when there is universal business and industrial paralysis throughout the country.—Philadelphia Times.

In connection with the foregoing it is estimated by some writer that the Queen's jubilee expenses, direct and indirect, will foot up to a hundred millions, or more, and that the Christian Endeavorers will expend over four millions in the visit to San Francisco to have a good time. Are any of them of the laboring classes, is a wonder with some.

THE HERALD AT $1.50.

OUR readers are requested to take special notice of the advertisement which appears on the second page of the HERALD cover, announcing a reduction of twenty-five per cent in the price of the church paper. A further statement, of causes leading to said reduction, etc.,—also of the expectations of the Herald Office in increased subscriptions, will appear next week.

It is to be hoped that the response to the action of the Board of Publication will be both hearty and prompt, as it is made in the interests of the saints, as servants of whom those placed in charge of the publishing department are acting.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. A. PARKIN, San Francisco, July 5:—

To me this great latter-day work grows brighter and brighter. I put in rather a lively week for a "local;" on Wednesday evening joined in marriage Sr. Henrietta Knight and Thomas E. Hoffman; on Saturday two p. m. preached funeral sermon over Mr. William Young of West Berkeley; on Sunday eleven a. m., preached at Irvington thirty-five miles from home, also conducted sacrament meeting; at 7:45 p. m. preached at home with the most marked liberty. I was in a flood of light, so to speak. O, how I thank God for his Spirit! I wish the saints could appreciate our privileges.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Sr., Galena, Indiana, July 10:—

The "Scott's reunion," which was held at Mount Eden, June 6, was a grand success. Some estimate the crowd at one thousand. I was permitted to see a letter from Charles T. Russel, of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, author of the "Millennial Dawn," which was written to parties in Louisville, in which he attacked the faith of the church; and among other things he said, we believe in the "doctrine of transmigration of souls." Elder Russel is not ignorant of the doctrine of the church, and we are sorry to think he would willfully misrepresent. His letter will be replied to in the future. There was a Union Sunday school celebration of the 4th of July on the 3d, at Wolf's Grove. Ministers of other denominations were there. I was called on to make the opening speech. I speak of this only by way of encouragement and to show that ignorance and prejudice are giving way before light and knowledge.

Bro. and Sr. A. M. Crofford, address given below, write as follows:—

To the elders that are laboring in Oklahoma Territory: You are cordially invited to visit A. M. Crofford and wife, where you will find a welcome home—two and one half miles northwest of Pond Creek post-office; railroad station Round Pond. Pond Creek is the county seat of Grant County, Oklahoma Territory.

C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, July 12:—

We had one of the most peaceful meetings I have ever witnessed in this branch on Sunday last, at the sacramental service. We had a joyous time indeed. No outward gifts, but an indwelling of peace and joy.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Denver Diskuverur, for June 30 last, contains two friendly notices of our work and the branch of saints in the Colorado metropolis. From it we learn that "the Latter Day Saints (Reorganized Church) have a mission in Swansea Addition, and the Latter Day Saints (Apostate Church of Utah) are starting a mission in this city;" also that "Pastor E. F. Shupe, of the Reorganized Church and his wife celebrated their twentieth anniversary of late," receiving substantial tokens of regard from the church; and that "there was a full house and a jolly good time." Paper sent us by some friend.

By letter from Bro. W. G. Allen, of Paige, Texas, we learn that he is yet contending for the faith. He writes that he preaches somewhere nearly every Sunday and has recently opened two new places in Lee County. He has met some elders from Utah recently. Of them he says: "They claim to know nothing but the first principles of the gospel, and when I sprung the 'Adam-God,' and 'blood atonement' on them, they knew nothing about it." Bro. Allen also informs us that Bro. John C. Wilson, for many years a staunch defender of the faith, and who rendered the saints much assistance as an instructor in vocal music, is dead. Bro. Allen has been faithful through much adversity and sacrifice. May God bless his labors, and in them may he have joy.

In this issue of the HERALD will be found announcement of the retirement of Sr. J. H. Royce, former editor of the "Sunday School Department," and who now relinquishes the editorship to Bro. T. A. Hougas, the Superintendent. Sr. Royce has labored zealously and faithfully to make the department a success. We bid her godspeed in her future efforts in the Sunday school cause, which we are gratified to know will be continued. Bro. Hougas, the new editor of the department, is well known to our readers as the Superintendent of the General Sunday School Association. We welcome and bespeak for him the same assistance and courtesy extended to his predecessor.

Violent shock of earthquake at Laibach, Austria, a city of 30,000 population, July 14. The inhabitants were thrown into a state of panic; scarcely a house in the town remains intact. Eighty chimneys, including several factory stacks, fell. Museum collections were thrown together, pell-mell. Great cracks were made in two church steeples.

If we have failed to note any essential items forwarded of late by correspondents, it has been because of a rush of work incident to closing up the second volume of the Church History, which has kept the entire Herald Office force unusually busy for some time past.

A great labor struggle is now going on in Great Britain, where the "Amalgamated Society of Engineers," 100,000 in number, are on a strike. Both sides refuse to arbitrate the questions at issue and the contest is likely to be prolonged and disastrous to business interests. The leading point at issue is the question of eight hours for a day's labor.

Great Britain's increased naval force: A bill passed the House of Commons, second reading, on the 14th, providing for the "establishment of naval works at Dover to cost £3,500,000; for an inclosed space of 610 acres, with berthing accommodation for twenty battleships, besides smaller vessels. The Gibraltar harbor would be rendered absolutely secure and enlarged by ninety acres," etc.

Rain is again falling on parched India. A good supply has fallen in Burmah, on the west coast, and in southern Bombay and Mysore; also in the central provinces, parts of Bengal, and the northwest provinces; but Bombay (northern), De Cena, and Madras are yet without it. If the monsoon again advances the damage will not be very great, but the situation is serious where large areas have been sown.

Constantinople advices, July 16.—On the 14th the ambassadors of the powers requested Tewfik Pasha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, to state definitely whether Turkey would resume peace negotiations on the basis of proposals made by the powers regarding the establishment of a new frontier; adding that if negotiations were not resumed on this basis they would be compelled to inform their governments that there was no alternative but coercion. Today Tewfik Pasha joined the meeting of the ambassadors and declared that the Porte accepted the principle of a strategic frontier; reiterates its intention to send reinforcements to Crete, and is making preparations therefor. Widespread disease among Turkish troops in Thessaly.

Rio Janeiro dispatches of the 9th state that the fanatical insurgents have been successful in conflict with the government troops.

Turkey has presented an ultimatum to Persia, demanding withdrawal of Persian troops from Turkish territory.

It is stated that Russia will back Persia in refusal to comply.

International rumors are afloat that Spain and Japan have formed a league offensive and defensive against the United States, growing out of the attitude of the latter toward Cuba and Hawaii. The report is discredited in many quarters.

Redfield, South Dakota, July 16 advices reported the sun obscured for a half day by swarms of grasshoppers passing southward. Sections of the hill country for miles have been devastated by the pests.

Bro. A. B. Hanson, of Detroit, Michigan, and formerly a resident of Lamoni, returned to the city of the saints on the 17th to accept a place on the Herald Office force.

A goodly number of the Lamoni saints assembled at the home of Bro. and Sr. J. H. Hansen on Friday evening, the 16th inst., to tender a reception to Bro. and Sr. J. C. Clapp and family, who lately arrived from California to locate in the city of the saints. Bishop Kelley welcomed the new comers on behalf of those assembled, presenting some useful household articles as expressions of the good will of saints and friends among whom they are to make their future home. The affair was a surprise and a very pleasant one throughout.

The overtures of Spain, of autonomy for the Cubans and the failure of the United States to recognize them as belligerents, are causing many Cuban leaders and soldiers to abandon the war for independence. While General Gomez is determined to continue the war and is meeting with successes, an early settlement with Spain on a basis of home rule is looked for.

The great strike of the bituminous coal miners continues to spread. Efforts for settlement by arbitration have failed, and prospects indicate a coal famine with consequent high prices and damage to business interests.

Bro. I. N. White wrote from Springfield, Missouri, the 18th inst., where he was holding a discussion with a Baptist minister. He says: "So far this is one of the most signal victories I have ever gained. It is a public debate, sure enough, wide reaching and the excitement immense. Springfield is a large place, forty thousand inhabitants."

ADDRESS TO THE SAINTS.

AT the close of the late April session of conference, a session of council was held between the Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric, at which an agreement was had as follows:—

Resolved, that a committee of three composed of one of the First Presidency, one of the Twelve, and one of the Bishopric, be appointed to write an address to the saints.

The committee chosen by the council were Joseph Smith, of the Presidency; W. H. Kelley of the Twelve, and E. L. Kelley of the Bishopric.

The following is the result of the effort and contains a consensus of agreement, so far as it was found practicable to procure in the scattered condition of the members of the council:—

To the ministry and membership of the church:—We your brethren and fellow workmen send greeting. The day of fasting and prayer appointed for the Lord's day, March 28, seems to have been observed by the saints universally. Such observance was recognized of God, and the result has been assuring and satisfactory.

The change of conditions wrought by the direction to fill up the leading quorums of the church has removed doubt and provided an answer for the eldership to the criticism based on the hitherto fragmentary condition of those quorums named. This change of conditions indicates that the time for the pursuit of a more aggressive policy in propagating the truths of the gospel and the general work of the church has come. Such time has been predicted, and none should regret the fulfillment of the prediction, or hesitate to take respective part in the forward movement. For, while added responsibility is incurred, reason as well as hope declares that added wisdom and power will be given to meet the added burdens.

The unity of purpose and spirit that characterized the late session of conference was remarkable and is fraught with great promise of good to all, during the coming year. And if it is but fostered by the leading ministry, it must continue and permeate all classes in the church, and affect to a greater or lesser degree those without with whom the work of the church may bring its members into contact. This unity was greatly enjoyed by all attending the session, and must have been felt to the remotest branch of the church.

The Quorum of Twelve, now filled, will be in condition to more actively push the general work in the field; and there should be a cordial and effective support given to this quorum in its ministry. It is due to the progress of the general body that the leading ministers should receive the full moral support of all.

The Seventy is increasing in numbers and in moral and spiritual excellence; and its members are well prepared to hold to their part in the onward work now before the church; and also to act in their places as the third quorum in the three holding equal right of decision in protecting the people from false doctrine and aspiring spirits, should such ever present the occasion for action. The second quorum is being rapidly filled by the wise choosing of the seven presidents, from the young and rising men among the elders, and will soon be, if indeed it be not already the equal of the first in the efficiency and availability of its membership.

The quorums of elders to the number of five, have made a good report of labor during the year, and are worthy of praise for zealous activity.

The quorums of the lesser priesthood have also shown a like commendable zeal; and though their number is comparatively small, they are working for a better understanding of duty and an increased usefulness.

The calling and choosing of a Patriarch marks an epoch in the church that will stand in the history of the Reorganization for all years to come; and while it may not now be needful to attempt an enumeration of all the privileges and duties pertaining to that office, it will suffice to state that he is to be an elder having the qualifications of an evangelical minister. The right to confer spiritual blessings upon the members of the church by the laying on of hands belongs to the Melchisedec branch of the priesthood; and has been held by the traditional teaching and practice of the church from 1830 to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith to be a peculiar province of a patriarch, who is by name and calling a father of the people; who is by spirit and qualification capable of sympathizing with the members of the family in their trials and sorrows, and to advise with them in their difficulties, as a father might do; and to confer blessings upon the children of the church.

It will also be within the line of his duties to hold meetings in the branches in which the spiritual strength of the saints may be revived.

In addition to the office and work of Patriarch, Bro. Alexander H. Smith will, as a member of the Presidency, be a helper in the general field and fill such appointments as will be found practicable.

The missionaries in charge of the various fields will make special effort to get into their fields, taking charge and organizing their forces for the year's campaign.

To meet the aroused demand for a more active, and for that reason a more successful gospel campaign this season, it will be needful that the treasury be sustained, in order that there will be no necessity for any one of the few sent out to return from the field to look after home interests. The church ought to look after the families of those spending their whole time in its service. To enable the representatives of the church in this department—the Bishopric—to carry out the wishes and will of the body in this work, the membership as individuals must not only be strongly desirous that the gospel shall be preached, but they must measure their desire by some commensurate need of performance; indeed, they must let their "actions speak louder than their words." If this is not done, neither the general officers of the spiritual line nor the Bishopric can do the work, or be responsible for its failure.

We therefore exhort the church to remember to devote of their labor and substance to the purpose of carrying on the work of the last days.

The elders and priests who are sent out with the traveling force, will all go with the authority of the church to present in the name of the Master the gospel of peace; and so long as they shall present the truth in sobriety and the spirit of "good will and peace" to men, the church is under obligation to extend the same kind, courteous, and loving welcome and moral and spiritual support to them that are accorded to others in the field.

We entreat the saints to receive those appointed to the several fields and missions, in charge, and assist them by a careful consideration and cordial support, to raise the standard of their respective districts higher in moral excellence and spiritual development.

Rivalry to see which district or person may report the greater number of baptisms should not be indulged. Let your striving be to secure peace and harmony of effort. The effort of the districts should be, not for numbers, but for moral standing and spiritual growth.

The report of the ministry taken with the report of the Recorder show that of the entire number of baptisms about one half were the work of the local authorities, which is a creditable showing, and indicates activity and faithful perseverance on the part of the local brethren, including presiding and laboring officers of every calling. We commend these officers and express the hope that the coming year will show an equally creditable work done by local men. We are "workers together with God;" let us not be unfaithful or discouraged.

Few, few are won,

WASTE MATERIAL ABOUT THE HOUSE.

DEAR SISTERS:—With the thermometer 90° in the shade I have, for my comfort and solace, a glass of cold water, not ice water, and a lovely red rose to lend its beauty and fragrance for this occasion. I will try to give you a few homely yet practical hints on everyday life and how to keep well this hot weather.

Our first care, after arising in the morning, should be to thoroughly ventilate our sleeping rooms, separate the bedding and expose to the fresh air. After we bathe and dress, all soiled clothing and waste water should at once be removed from the sleeping rooms. We should next visit the kitchen and inspect the cupboards, and if we find any tainted food, just as soon as a fire has been lighted, burn it. If this cannot be done, bury it. Don't allow anything to remain about the house that will decompose and cause disagreeable odors.

Slop buckets should be closely inspected and kept clean. All such buckets should be thoroughly painted, inside and out, thus rendering them less liable to retain fetid odors. Empty often and keep them covered to prevent swarms of flies gathering near the house.

Soiled clothing must not be put away in closets and allowed to remain until they smell badly. I remember visiting a family as a friend. The children had the diphtheria. One child had died and another was sick. In passing through the house I discovered a closet in which was stowed away clothing and, seemingly, a little of everything. When I inhaled the odor issuing from it I was surprised and wondered that all the family had not taken the dread disease.

Don't allow dirty dish rags to accumulate; no! not even one. Rags are cheap. Burn or thoroughly wash all dirty rags.

The back yard is, generally, the repository of all the slops from the kitchen, and in many of these same yards you will find the people habitually, empty all their waste water and slops near the well! How dangerous this habit, but few stop to consider! From fifty to one hundred feet should be the limit, or even farther would be better.

Waste vegetables, bread, etc., we often find scattered about the neglected back yard. All such refuse should be burned or buried as, after decay sets in, disease-breeding odors are spread abroad, signaling the death of both old and young all over our broad land.

Keep a quantity of lime, in some dry place, and use freely in the water closets, hen houses, etc. Wood ashes are also a good disinfectant. Use both to keep down disagreeable odors. This precaution may save you a doctor's bill. If you value your health and that of your little ones, burn or bury all waste material, drink plenty of pure water, eat a light diet, take the allotted time for sleep and rest, and you will do much towards securing good health and happiness.

"AMUSEMENTS IN THE HOME.

"Amusements in the home should have these characteristics: they should unite the family, deepen children's love of home, and guard them against temptation. To accomplish the first object we need recreations in which parents and children can join. Here at the very outset we are met with a difficulty, the irrepressible conflict between children's noise and grown folks' nerves. Love of noise seems innate in every child, certainly it is in every boy, and not only is the love of noise innate, but the noise itself seems to be in him and must come out. Noise seems to radiate from him as heat does from a fire and does not seem to be at all dependent upon outside conditions. Let him be shod in velvet and treading upon thickest carpets, his heels will make a noise every time his foot comes down, and though he be trained to speak never so softly, he can scarcely open his mouth without emitting sounds like a watchman's rattle. If this be done in the green tree what shall be done in the dry? If it is all our nerves can stand to live in the house with him when he is under repression, what will become of us when he is let loose in the abandon of play? It is a hard question, but we believe we can better afford to bear his noise at home than to let him go away to make it. And if we are in the midst of the making, the noise does not trouble us half as much as if we stand outside and listen. Then a good hour's romp with the children every day will strengthen the nerves and sound a truce in the irrepressible conflict with noise.

"How many of you now look back with delight to the game of blindman's buff played in your mother's kitchen with father, mother, and perhaps grandpa too, joining in it? If such a picture hangs on your memory's wall I am sure you would not exchange it for any specimen of high art you can purchase at Goupil's. This same kitchen brings up memories of nut-crackings, candy-making, corn-poppings, apple and chestnut roastings and all the fun that accompanied them, father's stories, mother's songs and happy talk and bubbling laughter. Such musses as we used to make! and the fact that we knew we must clear them up, leaving the kitchen in good order, did not detract from our pleasure, for we managed to extract a deal of fun out of the clearing-up process. These kitchen romps usually came early in the evening, right after the chores were done; later, came the quiet hour in the sitting-room, with music, work, and reading aloud. I well remember such evenings in my own home. Lewis' and Clark's 'Explorations,' and D'Aubigne's 'Reformation' seem sacred books to me because my father read them aloud to us during the evenings of the last winter he spent on earth. Reading aloud in the family circle cannot be too highly commended; the reading should be in turn by all who can read.

"Music is invaluable as a means of recreation. There are few families in which there is not one member who can sing well, and others passably. Sing together, even if you do sometimes make discords. The more you sing together the more harmonious will you grow in more senses than one. An instrument of some kind aids greatly in the family music, and they are becoming so common that few families are without them. We believe that in no country on earth, not excepting music-loving Germany, are there found so many pianos and organs in homes as in America. If you have neither of these, a violin, a flute, or an accordion will aid greatly.

"We know a family in which 'taking journeys' was a favorite pastime for the winter evenings. Some place was chosen as a destination that father, mother, or some member of the household had visited, and an imaginary journey thither taken. You will better understand how pleasant this may be made by the recital of such a journey as actually taken in a family of my acquaintance. During the preceding summer the father and mother had visited Iron Mountain, Missouri, and this was chosen for their first trip. Imagine the family gathered around the table, on which stands a bright lamp, around it clustered specimens of minerals brought from Iron Mountain. Each child had his school atlas, brought home for the purpose. The mother sat by with her knitting, which, however, was not so engrossing as to prevent her taking part in the conversation and helping little Billy find places on the map when he could not find them for himself. 'Now let us play it is summer, it is so much pleasanter traveling when the trees are green, the flowers in bloom, and the birds singing everywhere. Where shall we go first?' 'To Peoria, and down the river to St. Louis,' said one. 'To Burlington,' said another: 'To Quincy,' said a third. 'Yes, either way will do, but I think we will go to Peoria, and then we can ride on two rivers; what two?' 'Illinois and Mississippi.' 'Yes, now find Peoria.' Soon on every map Peoria was hidden by a chubby finger. 'Now we will go down the river,' and each finger moved slowly down toward its mouth. 'Where are we now?' 'On the Mississippi.' 'And what city are we passing?' 'Alton, where the State Prison used to be,' they answered. 'And here is the Big Muddy, flowing right into the Mississippi,' exclaimed Harry, entering into the play enthusiastically. 'But the waters of the Missouri are a beautiful color, if they are muddy,' says mother. 'Just the color of a cup of delicious coffee with the rich cream in it, or of your auntie's watered silk dress. It pours its great volume into the Mississippi, but for miles the brown stream and the blue stream flow along without mingling. Here we are at'—'St. Louis,' the children inserted in her pause. 'See the crowds of boats, some loaded with corn from Illinois; some with wheat from Minnesota; and some with cotton from New Orleans. Now we are at the pier; the beautiful blue and brown tints are all gone, the water looks black and dangerous. So it is—the captain says—twenty feet deep here, with under currents that would suck you down to death if you should fall overboard. But there are little children, some no bigger than our Nannie, clambering over the slippery docks, springing out upon the rafts, holding on with one tiny hand, while with the other they reach far out to catch the floating driftwood which is all the fuel they have. It makes me shudder to look at them, for one slip would be their death.'—Childhood: Its care and culture.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To My Colaborers in the Sunday School Work:—Our work has assumed such proportions that concert of action is needed, and that unity may prevail your superintendent should speak to you often. The best medium for such communication is through our department. It has, therefore, seemed wisdom that the superintendent direct said department. We take pleasure in introducing to you one now known to you all as thoroughly initiated into the mysteries of the work—our worthy brother, T. A. Hougas. We bespeak for you an efficient editor and beseech you to give him your hearty support.

In retiring we thank you all for your aid and kindly treatment while trying to serve you. May God bless you all and his work everywhere, is the prayer of your sister, MRS. J. H. ROYCE.

AS the season of picnics and outings is now on, we present in this issue a few excellent thoughts upon the subject of Sunday school picnics, from the pens of persons experienced in this line of work. Do you have Sunday school picnics? Your children like all others must and will have amusement. A child is worthless that will not. If you do not furnish them amusement, the world will. Which do you prefer them to have, the allurements of the world or the influence of the home, the church, and the Sabbath school?

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNICS

ARE of more value than Christmas entertainments, especially where the deception of "Santa Claus" is practiced. . . . This is the time of the year for picnics. . . .

TWO SPECIAL FEATURES

should always be considered at these picnics. The first is singing, the second is social talk between the teachers and scholars about what they see, and lessons drawn from that seen.

DISTRICT ASSOCIATIONS

should arrange for picnics at as appropriate places as can be found to accommodate the greatest number of schools. . . .

MAKE AS LITTLE DISPLAY

as possible in preparing for picnics so that no members of the school will feel they cannot go, or cannot enjoy themselves if they do go. . . . Make the of the picnic the encouragement of all in the Sunday school, but especially those who have a disposition to think you are not interested in them and are easily discouraged.

Urge all the school to be sufficiently interested in the welfare of the school as to make such gathering of special enjoyment to those easily discouraged, and those who have not pleasant homes or loving associates at home. Teach the children that they leave their pleasant homes, such as have them, to associate in these gatherings for the purpose of giving added enjoyment to others. . . . Picnics are not nor should not be considered for selfish purposes. . . .

When food is to be eaten a

should be asked upon it. This ought not to be neglected. If each class prepares food separately, the teacher should return thanks, but if the food is all together the superintendent should offer prayer.

Yours in Christ,

J. F. MINTUN.

 - 5² Promotes the interest and growth of the school.

WE notice on our outline the first topic is "Nature of" and the first essential under that is order.

is necessary to the success of everything we undertake, and since the picnic is under the auspices of the Sunday school, it should bear the stamp of dignity and reverence due the organization. To obtain this everything must be systematized, even the going to the picnic grounds. This system must be fraught with life that the children may be made to rejoice not only in the gladness of the day but to praise the Beautifier of all nature.

We know of no way to fill the souls of both old and young with joy and love equal to that of listening to good and we would suggest that if at all possible a band be obtained; or in places where there is an orchestra in the school, that might take the place; but in case neither the band nor orchestra can be had, the singing of the school's most familiar songs will suffice. The school should assemble at the regular place of meeting and be formed in a line to proceed to the grounds; if within walking distance, marching to music; if too far to walk, arranged in vehicles, so that all unmanly and boisterous conduct may be restrained. In either case each class should be under the

of its teacher, and all teachers under the direction of the officers.

SOCIALITY

and jollity should reign, but undue hilarity should be avoided. The question of whether a be prepared or not is unsettled, as some advocate the idea, while others discourage it. We would suggest, however, the rendition of a short program consisting of song and recitation by the pupils and a talk to the children by the superintendent or some one whom he may select. This talk should contain the idea of the conduct the children should try to maintain throughout the day, and impress the thought that we can have a nice time and please God at the same time. . . . Then comes the most important feature of the picnic, and we would suggest from a personal standpoint that here again comes the teacher's duty to take charge of her class. When dinner is spread the teacher should ask the blessing herself, unless she has some pupil in the class who will do so. The picnic dinner with the class will afford the teacher an opportunity of getting nearer her class that cannot elsewhere be found. The teacher can gain a better knowledge of the child than she could in several visits to the home. . . .

AFTER DINNER,

or when the time comes for the rambling in the woods, seeking pleasure in the hidden nooks, the teacher should still keep the

of her class, or at least be the director of their play, and their advisor as what is best to do. She may play games, row, or whatever comes up she must be their protector or guide as the case may be. We do not mean the classes be kept apart from each other, but that the teachers have oversight, as mothers do over their own children. Of the

we are at a loss as to what to say. In a sense it advertises the school. Parents will take their children to a Sunday school picnic who cannot be persuaded to take them to Sunday school. The children become interested in what they see others enjoying. . . . "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and if you would keep the children contented and happy they must have something to relieve the monotony, and the picnic can be made the most innocent of entertainment. It gives the children an outing they very much enjoy and will look back to in after days as an oasis in the desert of life. By the spirit of joy and pleasure and sociability to permeate the very atmosphere in the balmy breeze of the shady wood, the teachers become better acquainted with their classes, the officers with their teachers, and with each other. That which serves to bring unity and harmony into the school promotes its growth and interest and is good. THE benefit of all is the demonstration that we can serve God even while out for pleasure, and this should be impressed on the minds of the young.

Letter Department.

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.

Editors Herald:—I arrived home from General Conference and my field April 17. Spent the time very busily at home till June 17; reached St. Louis in time for commencement exercises of the high school on the 18th, which was indeed a pleasant affair. I think I never saw so fine a stage display. Eighty-six young ladies dressed beautifully in white, and bedecked with flowers, and twenty gentlemen in black, marching to music, getting into position; it was beautiful. My chief interest, however, was in Sr. Florence Burgess, whom among other little folks, I baptized when laboring there. She has outstripped one hundred and six who succeeded and seven who did not graduate, winning laurels with unusual energy. All her friends felt proud of Florence and her work. May she succeed as well in using her attainments to benefit herself and others along life's pathway.

Learning should not, but often does, lead to vain pride, haughtiness, arrogance, while it should, as expressed in President Joseph Smith's address at opening of Graceland College, lead in the opposite direction—humility and the realization that at most man can know but little. Paul said, "Not many wise, not many noble, not many mighty" were called; it evidently was not because such were not useful or desirable, but signifies that but few, very few of such would be meek and humble enough to do God's bidding. He had to use those possessing these qualities, hence chose the fisherman of Galilee.

Education has spoiled many; wealth more; and the two combined yet others.

"Man, know thyself," is an all-important proverb. Meekness, humility, and all other gospel graces are necessary virtues, without which eternal life cannot be obtained, and therefore apply to all and not to ministers alone. To develop the mind and worthily use it in any avocation in life is honoring our Creator. This is done in a large sense by many who are ignorant of the restored gospel. Those who do so, fulfilling the gospel's requirements, enlarge the glory to God and eternal life to themselves.

I was defeated by lack of time in visiting Bro. and Sr. Riggs, of Cincinnati; am willing to be forgiven. Spent a pleasant day with saints of Middletown, Ohio, who with a brother in St. Louis helped me onward liberally. May the Lord reward them.

I reached Kirtland to confer with brethren W. H. Kelley and G. T. Griffiths in reference to my changed appointment on the 23d, and the pleasant city of Detroit on the 27th. After being installed several days, finding there was to be quite an exodus of saints to Kirtland for conference, because of a twenty-five cent steamer rate to Cleveland, rather than be lonesome and practically out of business, I joined the party. All seemed to enjoy conference. Detroit people returned delighted with the trip, especially the warmth and hospitality of the Kirtland saints. They vow the weather clerk turned on too much warmth, however. Our voyage was quiet and uneventful, unless it was that in returning with two thousand seven hundred aboard, quite a sprinkle of lads and their best girls tarried on Put-in-bay Island too long, despite an abundance of warning by whistle and bell, and got left. Other warnings fail as well as gospel warnings. Later in the day a slight squall and rainstorm induced the captain to call us all off decks, when the good "City of Cleveland" afforded too much warmth, but still riding steadily. Strangely enough to me it was about as hot crossing the lake as ashore—really suffocating anywhere out of a stiff breeze.

With Bro. E. C. Briggs I was over to Windsor, Canada; my first time off the land of "stars and stripes." Things earthly seemed about the same; something in the air as here makes a fellow hungry, but a stop at Bro. Couser's restaurant fixed that when we got back.

Detroit saints have received me well, and I am here with opportunities for work. Those in Ohio and Pennsylvania who expected my services will please write Bro. Griffiths.

My address for some time is No. 365 Grand River Avenue, Detroit, Michigan.

R. ETZENHOUSER.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 7.

Editors Herald:—We are still alive over here. Bro. S. W. L. Scott favored us with a few of his lovely sermons last week; and they were appreciated by all. I attended a picnic and grove meeting at Coleman, Michigan, on the 3d and 4th ult. A very pleasant time was had by all. Bro. J. A. Carpenter baptized a Methodist preacher (Erwin by name) on Sunday afternoon. It seems Bro. Erwin ran his gospel schooner out of the Methodist fog as he made Beaverton port, and a flash from the old beacon light convinced him that his chart was wrong; so he like many others has concluded to steer by the sun. He seems like a very candid young man, and it is hoped may reach others of that faith who are looking for some place to go.

On the 5th I was called to Ludington in behalf of church business. On my arrival I met Brn. Cornish, Caplinger, and Scheuer. A large celebration was on, and most everybody seemed happy, as they thought of their once sweet freedom. The town being thronged with people from every quarter, with now and then one whose legs would tangle, it was hard to tell which way he was going.

A nice little dining hall was run by the saints, which netted them about $40 for their trouble.

R. E. GRANT.

BELL GROVE, W. Va., July 8.

Editors Herald:—After writing from Balos, West Virginia, I baptized two more there, one man eighty-one years old. He was a member of the M. E. Church South sixty years, a local preacher fifteen years; was deputy sheriff of Logan County for six years and a justice of the peace in Calhoun for seventeen years, and is as vigorous in mind as a man of forty.

I mention these facts because I consider it a great advantage to the church to get such men and their influence for the church. The other one was a granddaughter of the old man; and her husband told me he was coming in, but was not ready right then. There are several others near the kingdom at that place that I fully expect to trouble the waters with in the near future.

Your brother,
G. H. GODBY.

THE OTHER SIDE.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 3.

Editors Herald:—Having read the last Herald and seeing the many good things with which it is freighted, it occurred to me that perhaps it might be well to give the "other side," to help the reader to maintain an equilibrium by keeping to the "golden mean."

To travel the hard sidewalk day after day through the heat, (and I know one elder, whose diffidence prohibits the use of his name, who did so to the extent that when night came it was necessary to put his aching feet into cold water that he might obtain repose,) hunting for those who once had a name and standing in the church and with the hope of rekindling the old fire, to find that some have gone back to the "old" church, some to Christian Science, some to infidelity, and some into the unenviable position of a grumbler, so that when the time for preaching comes he sees from fifteen to thirty out, is not very likely to inspire a very great amount of enthusiasm.

The writer found one man who had joined the Reorganization some years ago in Missouri, but moving here had changed the theological raiment and now manifests such a filial affection for the "mother"—Utah Church that the "Reorganized" is compared with the church of his present choice as the sucker growing out from the tall corn! Query: Is it right for materfamilias to so hate her offspring?

This same individual has learned since his affiliation that Joseph F. and "our Joseph" had a theological bout in the tabernacle publicly, to the utter discomfiture of the latter and the consequent victory of the former! How is it, Bro. Joseph, veracity or "whole cloth"? I propose to fathom it and if so deep I can't wade, will try to swim.

A native of Scandinavia and by-gone publisher engaged in a controversial way with the writer recently and after some two hours of it said we did not dare meet any of their representative men in discussing "living issues"! This was certainly the biggest shock our theological sensitiveness had yet received. When sufficiently recovered we meekly requested the naming of a "living issue" and were politely told that we did not dare to meet B. H. Roberts on succession. Having inherited a good sized bump of combativeness, and with the courage born of investigation and conviction, we didn't exactly tell him to "trot out his man," for whenever anything of a slangy nature comes into the mind Bro. T. W. W. looms up—not quite as big as a mountain, but sufficiently large as to bring into existence a mental restraint, and we forbear. But we did tell him to bring the best man they had and we—the church—would be only too glad to meet them. And to show that we meant it we requested the individual to introduce us to the said B. H. R. and remain long enough to see which was the coward. This was agreed to, and the next afternoon set as the time and Mr. R.'s office as the place of such proving, with the express understanding that we meet at Bro. Larson's shoe shop that he might take David up to the presence of Goliath! A wait from 1:30 to four and he came not. An Elder Pierce came, however, and after learning how matters stood, proffered to do the introducing, but suggested by way of condoning the want of courtesy shown by the other that he had likely been "counseled" not to come. Would they really "counsel" a man to break his word—lie? This Elder P. claimed to have held a debate years ago with Bro. W. W. Blair and immediately afterward organized two branches in the vicinity—Western Iowa. Strange they are so afraid to debate with us now! Well, we went, only to find Elder R. gone, and so little David is still at liberty to roam the streets unmolested, with his sling—the gospel.

The Utah people may be summed up about as follows: The leaders who seem to care, more for the pelf than aught else; those who care less for what these leaders have said or done than for the gospel, which they cling to with a tenacity born of conviction, and with the awful doom of the "apostate" menacing them they actually fear to investigate; those who care more for pleasure than religion, and the many, many disgusted ones who have turned into the way of infidelity! Boys and men, very often the drunkard, swearer, and all-around tough are sent out on a mission! And yet my heart bleeds for latter-day wayward Israel, really "scattered and peeled," and I still feel that the better way to reach those who are really susceptible of being reached is by kindness. And while I perused Bro. Derry's letter, especially that portion referring to a recalcitrant brother, I could not help responding a hearty amen, while the tears came welling up as the same Spirit, which surely must have possessed the writer, bore witness to my soul. Which is better, to air our "spleen," as one of my quorum expressed it in a recent communication, or to show to the erring ones that we have "been with Christ?"

But with a desire to season "the other side" a little we will turn to a more pleasing picture before closing.

Since writing most of the above I have attended choir practice, dined with Dr. and Sr. Higgins, rode with them in their carriage over a goodly portion of the city and up to the cemetery, enjoying both the hospitality, drive, and sights. And while the writer has been thus led to depict the darker side, leaving out of course his trials incident to baching, he nevertheless feels that here and in other parts of Utah are some as noble self-sacrificing saints as can be found. Good reports are coming in from my co-laborers and will be duly forwarded.

In bonds,
J. W. WIGHT.

["Our Joseph" (the son of the Martyr), the present President of the Reorganized Church, never had a discussion or "theological bout" with Joseph F. Smith, one of the presidents of the Utah Mormon Church, in the tabernacle, Salt Lake City, publicly, or privately; nor in any other place in Utah, or out of it. Neither did "our Joseph," ever have a public discussion with any elder of the Utah Church, in Utah or elsewhere; although ready and willing at all times and places, to state and defend his views and positions.—Editor Herald.]

LONDON, England, June 21.

Editors Herald:—Please say that conference will convene July 31 at six p. m.; closing on Monday, August 2, in the north Manchester branch room, Collyhurst Road, Manchester, England. Time will be granted for Sabbath school exercises on Saturday night and Monday morning.

"Jubilee" is heard everywhere. Anticipation of the grandest display to-morrow ever known, runs high. The preparation in the erection of stands, for seats at every available spot on the streets along which Her Majesty will travel from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's church, where a religious ceremony is to be held, decorations, illuminations, bonfires, fireworks, etc., are on a gigantic and costly scale indeed. Yesterday (Sunday) was observed as a day for special national thanksgiving in all the churches and chapels; and though we were not invited to participate, we nevertheless met in our little chapel. The writer preached twice with excellent liberty, attended the Sabbath school at three p. m., and as per invitation gave a short address and participated in a social meeting at the close of the evening preaching service. From the inception to the close of the day's services a gospel peace obtained and the stimulating effects of good fellowship were enjoyed, and much appreciated. Few if any of the members were led to absent themselves from the Sunday services to participate with the masses, in that which some of the papers designate as a "strange Sunday;" "unwonted scenes along the route." Saying, "London, so far as the route of the procession and its vicinity were concerned, partook largely yesterday of the character of a huge fair.

The cyclists commenced the day. They arose early in their many hundreds and cycled up and down the route before breakfast, obtaining both an appetite and much to talk about at the day's first meal. The good folks from the East End were next on the scene, arriving in their milk carts, their donkey barrows and the like, and in the big break, which again drove over the course of the whole of yesterday. By noon every kind of vehicle imaginable was to be seen, including the carriages from the West End, behind their pairs of handsome horses, usually containing his lordship and her ladyship inside, and outside a couple of tattered, barefooted boys cheering the Queen from the rail at the back!

The streets were phenomenally crowded and the staid West End streets looked strange indeed with barrows of oranges and stalls for the sale of ginger beer and hokey pokey (ice cream) at their select and fashionable corners. The general jumble of omnibuses, brakes, smart carriages, and fish carts, with members of the best sets of turbaned Indians, Rajahs wondering Dyaks, and hilarious sight-seers, all along of one another, formed one of the strangest spectacles a London Sunday has ever produced, and amid all the pleasure-making, the tap-tap of the jubilee carpenter, and the groans of his rip saw, everywhere to be heard. To what huge offers the employers had had to go, one can only estimate from a knowledge of the state of the wage market at the end of last week, when men were earning their seven or eight pounds weekly, etc.

The above will furnish the reader with a partial conception of the scenes of London on the Sunday preceding the jubilee day (Tuesday).

Should my friends think the finding myself in the world's metropolis at this particular juncture to witness (as some claim) an unparalleled event in the world's history a fortunate happening in my life's history, I would suggest that I witnessed a procession of soldiers on Saturday which I suppose was not a circumstance to the scenes to be witnessed on jubilee day; but nevertheless the jostling, the pushing, the being hurried along by the crowds, the stoppages from the same cause, the unpleasantness arising from inhaling the breath of smokers—wine, beer, or whisky drinkers, etc., proved a very cogent reason for deciding to keep very far from the big throng that will assemble to witness the royal procession on jubilee day.

I witness the same pleasure and satisfaction in duty's path at any other point of the compass as in the world's metropolis; am in no particular hurry to get out of this world, but knowing I will have to go sometime, I want to get a good ready, and the proper utilization of time which God grants me is one essential work to that end. O yes; London is a place for sights, but sightseeing necessitates the consumption of both time and money; and I never thought the church sent me to see sights, but to work in its interest. Saints do well to live their religion at any point of the compass, but especially in London. But Vanity Fair has no attraction for Latter Day Saints, if they cherish no love for Vanity Fair. For where the treasure is there will the heart be.

I am authorized to state, that the brethren and sisters of the London branch, England, duly appreciate the kindness and suggestions of the Bishop, the consideration of Bro. Woods and the Lamoni branch; and I on my own individuality and responsibility state that as a branch they fully purpose and design to refund the means so kindly loaned, enabling them to rear a house of worship under the auspices of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the world's metropolis; and would have made a remittance ere this; but for the cruel, unjust, and altogether unlooked for exigencies, that have confronted them. They are sons of toil only, and of necessity have to move slowly in financial matters. Should they ever have a similar project, they would be able to guard against some trouble that has confronted them. They stand ready to carry out any instruction of the Bishopric to secure the property to the church.

About a dozen have been added since the opening of the chapel, in December '95. A very respectable and intelligent gentleman, availed himself of speaking in our social meeting Sunday evening, June 13, stating that he was pleased to know we had no affinity with the Salt Lake Church. A very fine appearing young lady has been attending the meetings and applied to Bro. Gerrard, for work in the Sabbath school. He gave her a class. The same person offered a very fervent prayer on the above Sunday evening, praying for light, etc.

The branch at present is at peace and united, evincing activity, with a few exceptions.

Editors Herald:—Since reaching this part of the Lord's harvest Bro. Parker and I have labored at San Bernardino, Santa Monica, Garden Grove, Warm Creek schoolhouse, Riverside, and here. Bro. P. was not with me at Santa Monica and Riverside, and I was not with him at Garden Grove. We have resolved that both of us will occupy at the same time if the places are not far enough apart to separate us too widely. I left him at San Bernardino the 3d. It was his intention to preach at Colton before the reunion.

We have not had very large audiences anywhere and very poor ones at some points; but we hope some good has been done. At Riverside we preached in a schoolhouse on the west side, almost three miles from the city. We were refused the courthouse, and there is no hall available for which we could afford to pay the rent required. We must not omit to mention that Bro. Lester Brackenbury was active, to the extent that his business would permit, in the effort to secure a place of meeting.

We have found in this region a splendid country, an excellent climate, and some exemplary Saints.

We had the pleasure of hearing Hon. W. J. Bryan's speech delivered here the 5th inst. For brilliancy and soundness of thought, consecutive arrangement and excellent delivery, it was the best I ever heard.

Editors Herald:—The debate between Bro. J. D. Erwin and Rev. W. J. Haynes, at Berrydale, came to a close last evening. It was a masterly effort on each side, and from the smiles and pleasant looks upon the faces of the saints it was plain to see they felt their cause victorious.

In justice to Mr. Haynes, I must say that he is a profound scholar, an honest, Christian-hearted man, and a gentleman.

Each disputant affirmed his church to be identical in origin, faith, name, and practice with the church Christ established eighteen hundred years ago; Elder Haynes affirming first. Bro. Erwin, in a masterly way, showed the error of Elder Haynes' positions, which I sum up as follows: That the church never existed until Pentecost; that it never ceased, but continued in the gospel seed, the word of God, till now; that the organization, gifts, and blessings were limited to that day, and were not to continue; that the pronoun them, in Mark 16:17, 18, referred to the Apostles; that God did not call or approve Matthias.

He renounced Alexander Campbell as the founder of his church, and would not accept or defend any of their standard books published at St. Louis. He acknowledged that he knew we did not approve or practice polygamy; and while he made some attack upon the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Inspired Translation, he was too honest and gentlemanly to stoop to the level of Clark Braden.

Bro. Erwin showed in his affirmation that the gospel was preached before Pentecost; that a great apostasy was prophesied of and did take place; that the church was to come out of the wilderness, by angel visitation and revelation. He then presented the restoration in a clear, masterly manner.

In his closing speech on each proposition Bro. Erwin presented a summary, which was masterly and convincing. He has, in this debate, met one of the strongest men of the age, and proved his ability to defend the faith under any circumstances. The debate was so quiet and orderly that friendship has increased between the two churches, and the spirit of forbearance and brotherly love prevailed throughout. The saints are strengthened, friends are made to the cause, and all goes fairly well. With fervent hopes and prayers for the early triumph of the truth, I am as ever,

Editors Herald:—I have been in the tent since April 15, having Brn. R. Ferris and Newton Julian with me. We have done what we could and what we thought for the best. We have reached and preached or talked to about fourteen hundred people who are not of our faith, besides the saints, giving them tracts also. It is becoming harder and harder to reach the people, especially in California, wherever the Utah elders have been, because in many places they claim to be Josephites, and that the churches are all the same, with only a few minor differences, and that they hope we will all be one church soon; and when they are pinned down as to their being Josephites, they say they believe in Joseph Smith as a prophet as much as we do, and that he taught and practiced polygamy; and in this way they are injuring the truth by shutting up the minds of the people, leaving us without an opportunity to either reach them or the people, because they will not meet us before the public; and if we draw the lines between us and them they cry out "persecution," and say that is not preaching the gospel. But they do not have any scruples to misrepresent when it is for their benefit.

I am still in the faith and have been blessed with great liberty in preaching, but the Lord only knows the results, as I have not seen much of them.

ST. HELENA, Cal., July 1.

Editors Herald:—One and a half years ago the people of Pine Mountain school district, Sonoma County, California, knew little of the Latter Day Saints. A Union Sunday school was organized; Professor Morton (Advent) was chosen to preside; ex-lecturer Cary (also Advent) chosen assistant; two of the teachers were Adventists—Union Sunday school with a vim. I took a back seat in Bible class No. 1; was appointed by the teacher as assistant. We had a good deal to say, from time to time, that did not suit the Adventists. They claimed to teach the Bible as it read, and said that the Bible meant just what it said. We had to remind them occasionally to teach the Bible as it was, not as they wanted it to be. That did not set very well; we were practically ignored by them; so we kept studying and praying, knowing our time would come if we were faithful.

In a short time the question came up, Shall we send delegates to the Sunday school convention at Healdsburg? Not knowing anything about the convention, we voted for it. We have been credibly informed since that we were reported as an Advent Sunday school. The next move was for the ex-lecturer to bring down his chart of heads and horns and commence lecturing. The Methodists stopped the lectures. All this time we were preparing the way by distributing literature and whatever other means we had at our disposal. We thought the time had come that we should act, so we drove over to Santa Rosa and got Elder William Newton. He preached nine sermons, baptized two; six others handed in their names for baptism but backed out. The Advent lecturer pitched into Bro. Newton, but he wished he had not before he got through with him. Things moved along for awhile, and we got Elder Thomas Daly here; he preached five or six times, baptized two more.

Then the adversary and his agents came out in full force; some of the neighbors went from house to house demanding the Mormons should be stopped. Persecution commenced; we moved along; paid no attention; kept praying and working, until it was time for our annual election or reorganization of the school. The Presbyterians and Adventists formed a combination to down the Mormons. Their plan was to have Professor Morton decline renomination; nominate the writer, H. E. Brown, for a blind; elect Cary and turn it into a Presbyterian school. They had the promise of material help from the Presbyterians of Santa Rosa. They thought they could accomplish that move easily, because Cary had six votes in his family. Election day came, and the only time that all six of the Cary's had ever been there. They did not count the cost. Their scheme worked to a charm, until the ballots were counted, when H. E. Brown was elected. C. A. Cary declined to come any more; but on the next Sunday he was there, made his apology, and has since withdrew himself and family; none of them come now but the daughter. Three out of the four Presbyterians have left the Sunday school entirely. After election the ex-secretary wrote to the Santa Rosa weekly Democrat that the election of Pine Mountain was over; all the old officers were sustained in office. Another communication appeared in the Santa Rosa Republican:—the people of Pine Mountain had organized and observed Lincoln Day; officers were Williams, Cary, Brown; all of which there is not a word of truth in. The prediction was made that the school would soon go down. We have an average attendance of about 36, net gain of 14, according to my memory.

Saints, I know this work is of God. If we will work faithfully,—bear the cross, we will get the crown. Put your hand in your pocket, open your mouth, go and do according to your ability in the position God has seen fit to put you in. Be content in that station, your labor will be rewarded. My endeavor will be to work for Jesus whenever and wherever opportunity is afforded. I live away off in the mountains, fourteen miles from any branch. We have now eight Latter Day Saints in Pine Mountain. May God bless us all from Brother Joseph to the last one that has been baptized into the kingdom.

Editors Herald:—William Davis and the writer pitched the gospel tent at the above-named place on Saturday the 10th, and up to date have held three meetings with increasing audiences. Last evening the seats were all filled with attentive listeners. We are blessed with good liberty in presenting the word, so prospects look bright at present.

May God add to his church daily such as shall be saved.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 16.

Editors Herald:—Our two-days' meetings are a success; increased attendance at Carson; baptized two. Tent meetings progressing nicely here. Brn. F. A. and W. A. Smith rendering valuable assistance. Expect to baptize some shortly. Delivered the fourth of July oration at Panama on the 3d, and at Little Sioux on the 5th, and could have been the principal speaker here on the 4th, but declined, it being the Lord's day.

The Editor of the Little Sioux Independent, has this to say of my effort there—paper issued July 10:—

"The speaker was a remarkable man and seemed to belong to a class not very numerous in this country. He occupied the hour, or a little more; was watched narrowly by the most astute politicians of this section. And when at the close friend asked friend what was thought of the speech, and attempted to locate the speaker politically, it was found the Populists claimed him a Populist, the Democrats a Democrat, and Republicans a Republican; thus showing not that the speech lacked point or force, but that people of all parties alike, are and mean to be patriotic. The speech was all right."

Sincerely yours,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

Original Articles.

CO-OPERATION IN BEHALF OF OUR POOR.

PERHAPS if we could get one hundred dollars for every one that calls me a crank before they get through reading this article there would be sufficient means accumulated to establish the plan.

The condition of the poor man is indeed getting to be a serious one, and more especially so, where he has a family, in our large cities. We do not attempt to solve the problem for the world, but for our own people. We do not wish to take opposite sides with those who believe legislation properly administered would relieve the condition. It is possible that such action might help some, but that it will assist to any great extent there is little hope. The Master said, "The poor ye will always have with you;" and should such calamities come upon the world as are talked of, and there is every reason to believe they will, it is only fair to presume the outlook for the poor man in securing employment will not grow bright very fast. (Believing that church and state should be kept absolutely separate, and that a Latter Day Saint should take but little part, if any, in political affairs, if any have thought that what has been said points that way, it is not our intention.)

There is no use to try and ward off facts as they exit; it is better to meet them and do what we can. It might have been correctly said at one time, that the man who could not or was not working, was too lazy to work if he had a chance; it cannot be now. Many of our people are now out of employment; and while with some it is possibly caused by lack of ambition, we cannot attribute all to this cause. Ambition, from a worldly standpoint, is by no means a necessary qualification to make a good saint, nor is every man who lacks ambition in this light, lazy. A great many men work hard all their life, and yet are poor; not because they have not worked hard enough, but because they have been lacking in definite purpose or management.

Particular mention is made of the poor in the city, because living expenses are so much higher, and the opportunities for securing employment less. The question is, What shall we do? My answer would be, secure a large farm. Here is where you are attaching the epithet mentioned above to me. You say provision has been made for taking care of our poor through the Bishop; to this we readily agree, and our plan would be to have the Bishop look after this also, or have it under his jurisdiction. Again, the Bishop cannot help if he hasn't something to help with. It is not our intention to be presumptuous, or intruding upon the prerogatives of others; we give this for what it is worth, working on the hypothesis that "necessity is the mother of invention." In our judgment, a step in this direction without divine guidance would be decidedly unwise; but we have often been told the Lord would not reveal things until his people were in a condition to receive. Would it not be well then for us to agitate this subject a little, and prepare our minds?

It is quite a large undertaking; but others have been successful at this coöperative plan, why not we? If the rich prosper by combining their efforts, why not the poor as well? Regardless of how far we may be from carrying this out in the future, it works very well on paper now. Take for example: a man has a family in a large city, with three or four children, himself, and wife, and no work. Can you appreciate what a terrible condition this is? The child asking for something to eat and nothing to give; you say, no Latter Day Saint is in this condition; don't be too sure about that until you have investigated a little.

There is another side of the question right here. What can he hope for the future? He has no profession; and can only work as a laborer, perhaps make one dollar or one dollar and twenty-five cents per day, and perhaps then not work more than three days in the week, even if he could get a place at all. It would require the strictest kind of economy to get along. His place of living would necessarily not be what a saint would like to have, and above all, his surroundings not at all conducive to either living properly himself or ever raising his children in anything like a proper manner. Would not this man be better off on a farm, working by the day; and would not his children be ten times better off? From a moral standpoint I know they would.

A thousand acre farm could be run in such a manner as to give employment to a great many men, and yet not be a financial failure. It would not be the intention to make it any great financial success. If it would but keep even, and a little more, it would or should be considered quite a success. It might do more than this. How are we to obtain the thousand acres? As stated above, our idea would be not to secure it until we had received instructions from a divine source, and then it could be done.

Half the money that it takes to keep these people in the city would keep them on a farm. Instead of being a continual drain upon the funds of the saints, it would soon help. They should be able to produce more than sufficient to live on during the year. Why could not the surplus production be given to the elders' families.

In our judgment an attempt just now to establish what many of us are looking forward to, the "Order of Enoch," would not be successful. The reasons for this are apparent, and call for no explanation. While it is true the plan outlined above would be something on the same order, if I have a correct understanding of the "Order of Enoch," the mode of operation would be somewhat different.

Our idea of operating the farm would not be to have all things in common, but to have it under the supervision of the Bishop, and run largely as an individual concern. Pay those who labored by the day or hour. Have places arranged for them to live, they to pay a stipulated amount for rent, also pay for what they used for their families at a given price. This plan would not place anyone in a condition where they were forced to remain there if they did not wish to, longer than until they had paid the expense of their removal. At the same time it would give the ones who went there an opportunity to get in a condition so they could go to some other locality and start independently in life again if they so desire. It would require the practice of economy, it is true, but no more so than to merely keep even in the city. By paying a man by the hour or day, would show who was worthy of assistance, and who was willing to work if the opportunity presented itself. If a man only wanted to work two or three hours per day, pay him for that time and no more. Two or three acres of ground could be set aside with each place of living for a garden, supplies, such as could not be raised on the farm, to be supplied from a general supply at as low a price as possible. This would enable even a man with a family to live quite cheaply. It is quite an undertaking, it is true, and one that will no doubt work more smoothly theoretically than in practice; but this does not argue that it is not a possibility. The very fact that the plan of coöperation has proven a success with others, proves the possibility of such a move. Some of the most conservative men in the country are to-day shaking their head with an approving nod concerning the plan which Eugene V. Debs is seeking to establish, to better the condition of the poor man.

From a moral standpoint, it needs no argument to convince those who know the conditions, of the value of this plan. The opportunities for educating the children would be equally as good, if not better, in a general sense; and from a spiritual standpoint, a hundred fold better. The want of funds force him to live in the city, surrounded by a community that he would otherwise not do; his children associate with the children on the street that never hear a moral sentiment at home, and the child of the saint is soon found doing as the child they associate with. It not infrequently occurs that, viewing the pride of the nineteenth century, Latter Day Saints in this condition imagine their children are not properly clad to attend Sunday school or church. Under these conditions do you think the child is going to request baptism at eight? No, nor at twice eight, and perhaps never. It is easily said that they should receive home training to protect them under these circumstances, but sad examples of the past tell the story only too plainly.

There are objections to this plan, some that from a casual observation appear insurmountable, but after considering them for a time grow smaller, and the plan becomes more feasible. Before rendering judgment, kindly think the situation over, if you have a better plan, or which you doubtless can, patch up the defects in this, let us hear from you. It is a stubborn fact that something should be done. If we get our minds in a proper condition, and the Lord would give us a little instruction along this line, the funds would, in our opinion, be forthcoming. If we could not purchase a thousand acres, possibly we could secure five hundred, until the plan could be tested, if not that much it could be tried with less. It is not expected that this will be inaugurated at once, but an effort looking toward this end cannot do any harm, and the thought may comfort some who will be most affected by it.

Trusting that we may advance steadily, and be blessed of the Almighty, until Zion shall be redeemed, I remain,

Yours hopefully,

J. C. HITCHCOCK.

CO-OPERATION.

IN these "perilous times" our minds are constantly turning to the one absorbing question—the labor question. How are the poor of our land going to obtain those things necessary to sustain life, is the vital question at present. It seems to me that it does not require much of an effort, on the part of any of us, to see that there is something wrong with our industrial system, when strong men cannot find employment sufficient to support their dear ones. It will not do to use the oft-repeated accusation that men are idle from choice, as it is too apparent that men cannot obtain employment. There is nothing in the future to inspire us with hope—viewing the matter from a worldly standpoint. The question then forces itself upon us, what is to be done?

Already a few minds are trying to solve this question; but it is a lamentable fact that the great majority have joined the vampires,—the crowds that go to make up the two old political parties, who are fattening on the products of the labor of our toiling millions.

The conditions that are upon us have been pointed out to us, we have been warned that they were sure to come, and what has been the result? Has anything been done to evade them? Certainly not. It is true that the ruling classes have been expending millions of dollars of the people's money in perfecting arrangements for killing off the poorer classes when their wrongs have made them desperate. I at one time was very enthusiastic in advocating the principles as set forth in the Omaha platform of the Populist party, and I still believe that document second only to the one of 1776; but like that one, it does not mean what it says.

Since having accepted of the gospel of Jesus Christ, I have been able to see the futility of trying to bring peace and prosperity to the sons and daughters of earth by any other method than that taught by our Savior.

Now for the thoughts that I wish to present to the saints in the way of bettering the condition of the poor and laboring classes of our number. We see all around us efforts are being made by men of brains to organize labor; colonies of socialistic tendencies are being brought into existence. The Ruskin colony in Tennessee, organized four or five years ago, is a success thus far. Eugene V. Debs is at this time at work trying to organize something similar. Why cannot something of the kind be tried among the Saints? Surely there are men of means in the church that would purchase the land, and there are hundreds of good brethren who would gladly furnish the muscle. The trouble is not that men will not labor, but that they cannot find opportunity to apply their labor. Let a colony be organized where we could produce everything we needed, and there would be no such thing as want known among us. This could not be anything but successful, for I certainly believe the Lord would prosper it; and if the members were faithful, God would reveal his will to that extent in temporal matters that peace and plenty would certainly follow.

I sincerely hope that the saints will think over this matter, and that action will be taken along this line. There is certainly a great need of something of the kind, as there are those in the church that are destitute, when if they had a chance to labor would support themselves and leave a profit in the treasury. I have not much in this world's goods, but stand ready to put in what I have together with a good supply of muscle, whenever there is an opening of this kind offered. Ever hoping and praying for the success of Zion, I am your brother,

F. T. BAKER.

EARLY BRIGHAMITE TEACHINGS ON SUCCESSION.

BY ELDER J. F. BURTON.

IN December, 1873, I united with the Reorganization, and shortly after began traveling in the missionary work, and have thus gone from Humboldt County on the north to the Mexican line on the south; and in the valleys and mountains of California have met many of those who were members of the church in the days of Joseph the Martyr. From them, I very many times heard the statement that Joseph the Seer, before his death, had blessed young Joseph and ordained him to be his successor in the presidency of the church. And being desirous of learning how the elders of the church who were here from 1844 to 1860 taught concerning the succession, I made some inquiry, and received the following statements:—

I was baptized in Tahiti by Elder Grouard in 1844, and remained a member of the church until the year 1856. During this time Bro. Hawkins traveled in the Paumotus as a missionary, and baptized about 1,500 persons, and married about 500; for before those days the natives did not marry, and none of those who were living as husband and wife were to be taken into the church unless they were married.

In that year a vessel arrived in Papeete with a number of persons from Australia bound for Utah. Then for the first time I came in contact with the practice and doctrine of polygamy. The elders among these passengers taught it, and also gave me a volume of Zion's Watchman, a paper printed by them in Sydney, Australia, containing extracts from Brigham Young's sermons, teaching that "Adam is our God," and that Jesus was not begotten of the Holy Ghost—all these things made me stumble, for I had been taught very differently by Elders Grouard, Pratt, and Noah Rogers—these men always taught us out here that young Joseph was the true successor of his father; and I have heard Elder Rogers tell repeatedly that Joseph the Martyr blessed and set apart his son Joseph to be his successor in office and President of the church.—John Hawkins.

KAUKURA, April 8, 1897.

Elder Hanks (a brother of the Elder Hanks who died on the ship, on the passage to these islands, in the spring of 1844), a member of the Utah Church, and a missionary from Salt Lake City, and who left here in 1858 for California, repeatedly taught that young Joseph was to be the successor of his father, and also that Joseph the martyr blessed and ordained his son as his successor in office in the church; and on the following Sunday he told the church that his work was finished, and that he was going to rest—and pointing to his son, said, "Here is your president."—John Hawkins.

KAUKURA, April 9, 1897.

It was, and still is, a custom in these islands for the American elders to write in books for the native elders, items of doctrine, church government, and history, as the natives had no printed matter excepting the Bible and a small protestant hymn book. I found the following in an old book as the writings of Elder Hanks, the missionary before referred to:—

THE ANOINTING OF JOSEPH BY HIS FATHER, AS HIS SUCCESSOR.

God commanded Joseph the martyr to set in order and straighten out the church—the kingdom of God—which he did by setting in order the quorums according to a vision shown to him as follows: The quorums of Deacons, the quorums of Teachers, the quorums of Priests, the quorums of Elders, the quorums of Seventies, the quorums of the Bishopric, the quorums of High Priests, the quorum of Twelve and the High Council, and the High Council of Zion, and the First Presidency of the church, and the Quorum of Council of the Kingdom of God of fifty in number, this is from the law of Zion—and no law is to be given to this church unless sanctioned by this quorum of fifty.

Joseph the martyr said, in this gathering, that he was commanded to anoint and ordain his son, his firstborn, a prophet and revelator to the church in his stead. He then anointed him and ordained him to the office spoken of above. Joseph and Hyrum and Whitney ordained him; Whitney held the oil and poured it on the head of young Joseph—after this was done Joseph the martyr said, "My work is finished—I am going now to rest; my brethren in the holy priesthood, I place the kingdom of God on you to bear it in the name of the Lord." On the next Sabbath, after the preaching was finished, Joseph the martyr said to his son Joseph, "Come here by me;" and said to the people, "My office work as a prophet is finished—this is your prophet—my son Joseph, who now stands in my office, —God has revealed it."—Translated by Elder John Hawkins.

KAUKURA, April 8, 1897.

On the return of Elder Addison Pratt from Salt Lake City, in about 1849, he brought with him a missionary of that church—one of their Seventies, James Brown, who taught us that young Joseph was to succeed his father in the Presidency of the church, and that Brigham Young was only holding that office until Young Joseph should come of age, and this was commonly taught to the saints of these islands.—Elder Mahana.

I certify that this statement is true, for I also have often heard it made by Elder Brown.

—John Hawkins, Interpreter.

PAPEETE, April 25, 1897.

In 1849 Elder Addison Pratt came from Tubuai to this island, and in this same year I was baptized by him here. The Elders Pratt, Grouard, Hawkins, and others, always, when in this vicinity, made their homes with me at my house, and Elders Pratt and Grouard always taught us that young Joseph was to succeed his father in the Presidency of the church, as soon as he came of age.—Elder Mahana. John Hawkins, Interpreter.

PAPEETE, April 25, 1897.

By these testimonies it will be seen that in this island mission, as well as in California, it was a matter of common report among the leading missionaries and church members generally—from 1844 on until 1860 at least, that young Joseph had been divinely appointed through his father to the presidency of the church and to succeed him in his office—and that some of the leading elders were present at a time when young Joseph was thus anointed and blessed by his father.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, May 5, 1897.

Miscellaneous Department.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

The saints and friends in the Northern Illinois district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will please take notice that Bro. F. G. Pitt has resigned the office of Bishop's agent in and for that district, in consequence of his appointment and removal as a missionary to the British Isles, and that Elder F. M. Cooper, of No. 583 Fulton Street, Chicago, Illinois, has upon the recommendation of the district conference of Northern Illinois been duly appointed and authorized Bishop's agent of the district.

We commend Bro. F. M. Cooper to the saints and friends of the Northern Illinois district, and trust that they will honor and aid him in this work, and fulfill the law of the gospel, and conform thereto as the Lord shall bless each one.

The work of Bro. Pitt as agent has been highly commendable, and for the brother's efforts and interest in this department, while engaged in other duties, we are greatly obliged, and extend to him sincere and grateful thanks. We are confident that he will be blessed, and able to do good work in his new field; and we also feel assured, that with the cooperation of the membership and friends of the Northern Illinois district, the new agent will be able to do a good work.

PITTSBURG, PENN., DISTRICT.

The saints and friends of the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, district of the Reorganized Church are hereby notified that, in consequence of the provision made by the proper authority of the division of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district, and at the recommendation of the district conference of the new Pittsburg district, Elder L. D. Ullom, of No. 4728 Jacob Street, Wheeling, West Virginia, has been appointed Bishop's agent of the district of Pittsburg, and all remittances and funds for the use of the church, in said district, should be forwarded or handed to Bro. Ullom as hereinbefore directed.

We trust that the new agent may be sustained, and the new district move forward and accomplish great good for the Master's cause, and trust that the Lord may bless to this end.

KIRTLAND, OHIO, DISTRICT.

The saints and friends of the Kirtland, Ohio, district of the Reorganized Church will please bear in mind that Bro. L. W. Powell, former agent of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district, in the division of the district into two, remains Bishop's agent of the Kirtland district, his address being Temple, Lake County, Ohio. Saints and friends of the cause in said district will please forward contributions, tithes, and offerings to Bro. L. W. Powell, at Temple, Lake County, Ohio, and we trust that the new Kirtland district may make renewed efforts to move forward in the work of the church financially as in spiritual matters, and accomplish much during the year towards the spreading of the truth in the said district. To this end may each and every one work and pray.

EASTERN MAINE DISTRICT.

To the saints and friends of the Eastern Maine district of the Reorganized Church. You are hereby notified that the former agent, Bro. Joshua S. Walker, has resigned his position as Bishop's agent of said district, and that Bro. Uriah M. Kelley, of Indian River, Maine, has been appointed Bishop's agent as per recommendation of the district conference held on 12th day of June, 1897.

Bro. Walker has been agent for a great many years, and has done good and faithful service in the office of Bishop's agent, both in soliciting and caring for the funds of the church. His age seems to prevent him from being active as he would otherwise do in the office, and for this reason he has laid down the same, for others who may be better able to travel among the saints. We take pleasure in commending his work of the past, and extend to him the thanks of this office for his faithfulness to duty in the same.

We are also able to commend Bro. Uriah M. Kelley to the consideration of the saints, and ask that he be sustained by the hearty coöperation of all in the district. Let all move together in the sacrifices that are necessary to be made for the work, as well as in the participation of its joys and benefits, and there will be no lagging of the work in the district. We hope and trust the Lord may bless to such a consummation.

WESTERN MAINE DISTRICT.

We have to call the attention of the saints of the Western Maine district of the Reorganized Church, to the fact that Bro. William G. Pert, former agent of the Bishopric, has resigned, and that W. W. Blanchard, of Canton Point, Maine, has been duly recommended and appointed Bishop's agent of the Western Maine district.

To the former agent, Bro. William G. Pert, the Bishopric take pleasure in extending thanks and acknowledgments for his faithful services in the office of agent in the past, and trust that his work may be successful in other duties, comforting to him and to the good of the work of Christ. We trust also that the saints will remember the new agent, and the work that needs to be carried on in the Western Maine district as well as so many other places in the world, and make all possible efforts in the strengthening and the building up of the same. To this end and purpose may the Lord greatly bless and prosper each one.

In behalf of the Bishopric, I am very respectfully your co-worker in the cause of the Master.

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.
LAMONI, Iowa, July 16, 1897.

PASTORAL.

To the Idaho Saints; Greeting:—You will observe in Herald of July 7, pastoral of Bro. John T. Davis. Those who are in official capacity will note his appeal to them and recognize the necessity of compliance thereto, as the missionary must have the coöperation of the body if he is successful. He will have many disadvantages to labor under; among which will be the absence of a district president to assist him by laboring with the fold to bring it to that healthy condition. As it is, the oversight of the fold will necessarily devolve upon him also, and the saints will need to sustain him in our stead in that capacity until other changes are made. We feel truly grateful for the support given us while laboring with you in Idaho, and hope it will be in our power to do as much and more for Bro. Davis, that the work may make corresponding advancement. We congratulate you on having received so efficient a missionary, and trust your appreciation of the appointment will be manifest in your hearty coöperation with him in the great work engaged in.

We hope your prayers may be with us in our labors in Utah.

In bonds,

S. D. CONDIT.

OGDEN, Utah, July 10.

THE GENERAL REUNION.

In accordance with notice in Herald of May 5, and editorial of May 12, the general reunion of the church will convene at Woodbine, Iowa, September 3, and continue to the 13th.

Woodbine being located on the main line of the Chicago and North Western Railroad, between Chicago and Omaha, makes the place of easy access. The Woodbine reunion grounds, with respect to the city and railway depot, are most conveniently located, and are covered with towering timber, which affords abundant shade. They are retired, attractive, and inviting; and while they have every feature necessary to make a meeting of this kind agreeable and pleasant, there are no outside attractions to draw the minds of the people away from the real object of the meeting.

It is admitted by those attending last year that the accommodations at Woodbine are much better than any that have ever been offered to the general reunion, and the citizens of Woodbine are anxious to extend the accommodations, and will spare neither funds nor time in making every feature all that could be desired. Woodbine is a city free from saloons, and consequently largely free from that element that so frequently occasions disturbance at camp meetings. We are assured of the same good order that we experienced last year.

We earnestly solicit your attendance, and we promise to do our best in making the meeting pleasant and profitable. A detailed statement relating to car fare, board and lodging, tents, fuel, water, hay, and grain, will appear in Herald later.

BLUFF PARK (NAUVOO) REUNION.

At the Semicentennial Reunion appointed by the General Conference of 1896, and which was held at Bluff Park, Montrose, Iowa, August 21-September 1, 1896, it was decided to hold another reunion to be known as the "Nauvoo reunion."

The committee appointed begs leave hereby to announce that all necessary arrangements have been made to hold said reunion at Bluff Park, from August 19 to September 1, next, and hereby extends a cordial invitation to all saints and friends to be present.

Bluff Park is a favorite resort, situated on a high bluff opposite Nauvoo, and commands a view of the river, the islands, and the surrounding country. The grounds have been refitted for the coming season and are in excellent condition. A mineral well, operated by an aëromotor, will furnish cottages and others with an abundant supply of medicinal water. The grounds are high and dry, the location conducive to quiet recreation and health. The Park is situated three fourths of a mile from Montrose, Iowa, and food supplies will be delivered on the grounds by the merchants. The reunion will be held during the fruit season. Come and eat the fruit of the goodly land, and also partake the bread of life.

The following-named brethren will be present, no hindering providences preventing: Joseph Smith, A. H. Smith, E. L. Kelley, J. R. Lambert, J. H. Lake; also others.

The ferry between Montrose and Nauvoo will run on both Sundays, to accommodate visitors. A cheap steamboat excursion may be provided for, during the week.

The Western Passenger Association has granted a rate of one and one third fare round trip, on the usual certificate plan, provided one hundred tickets are sold exceeding a cost of fifty cents each. Buy your tickets to Montrose, Iowa, and don't fail to get certificate with each ticket.

Those coming by team will find hay and grain at reasonable prices on the grounds; plenty of room for teams.

Bro. Elmer Reed will be in charge of the large and commodious boarding house. Good board by the week at $3.00 per week, or 25 cents per separate meal; dinners on Sundays, 35 cents.

Lodging can be had at the lodging house. Those wishing lodging there must bring sheet, pillow case, and towel. Room, cot, springs, pillow, mattress, and blanket will be furnished for $1.25 for the session. Parties desiring lodging at the lodging house had better drop Bro. Elmer Reed, Montrose, Iowa, a card to that effect, stating length of time you expect to be there and the day of your arrival.

Those desiring cottages, write to Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, and inclose stamp for reply. Cottages that will accommodate from four to twelve persons rented at from $4.00 to $10.00, depending on furniture they contain, etc. Apply early.

Those wishing tents can be furnished on application to F. M. Weld, chairman of committee, at Montrose, Iowa, inclosing stamp for reply. Wall tents 7 x 12 and 2½ feet wall, $2.75; family tents 9 x 14, $4.25; ditto 12 x 19, $4.75; with partitions. All applications must be made by August 10 in order that the tents can be ordered and on the ground in time.

Montrose (Bluff Park) is just opposite Nauvoo, in Iowa, and on the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern road of the Burlington Route system. Trains due there as follows each day: Passengers going north from St. Louis and Quincy 3:03 a. m., 9:02 a. m., and 6:35 p. m. Going south from Burlington 8:29 a. m., 4:15 p. m., and 10:52 p. m. All trains stop at Montrose.

Mr. James Cassidy will meet every train with a good hack and convey all parties to the camp for fifteen cents each, and twenty-five cents for trunks. Will the saints give him their patronage, as he has agreed to meet all trains night or day, rain or shine, and deserves our custom. He will also take companies of ten or twelve across the river and drive all over the old city of Nauvoo and bring you back on the grounds for thirty-five cents each.

Let the saints of the Decatur, Des Moines, Eastern Iowa, Kewanee, and Northern Illinois districts bear in mind that they are, or should be, as much interested in this reunion as is the Nauvoo district, as it was first ordered by the wish of all those districts and continued by common consent of all in attendance. All who have attended will bear you testimony of the splendid location and the good time had. Saints, in the above-named districts especially, let us make this reunion a grand success. It will do you good to enjoy an outpouring of God's Holy Spirit, which we can have if we come for that purpose. It won't cost you much, either by rail or team, and I will assure you you will never regret it. One not acquainted with the facts before and now could not estimate the good already done by these meetings.

A good attendance is hoped for that this reunion may be made one of the permanent reunions of the church, which it should be, because of the great amount of good that may be done by it.

In bonds,
F. M. WELD, Chairman.

THE CHANGES OF SIXTY YEARS.

VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, ascended the throne on June 20, 1837, at the death of her uncle, King William IV., and was crowned at Westminster Abbey on June 28, 1838. The political and geographical changes which have occurred during the sixty years intervening since her assumption of power are so remarkable as to deserve some consideration. The Statesman's Year Book for 1897, by a valuable series of comparative maps, has indicated these changes so that they are easy to trace.

In Europe, Great Britain, Holland, Belgium, France, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Italy, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and Russia occupy practically the same territory in 1897 as in 1837. During these sixty years Denmark has lost Schleswig-Holstein to Germany, Austria has taken in Bosnia, Herzegovina, Servia, Montenegro, Roumania, Thessaly, and a strip of Epirus, while its old Province of Bulgaria is now only tributary. In Germany the German Confederation of States, after the Franco-Prussian war, was united with Prussia in the new German Empire. Russia has gained a little in Turkish territory, as has Greece, though the latter may now lose all it gained as the outcome of its ill-fated war with Turkey.

In Asia there have been many changes. Turkey in Asia remains about the same, having lost to Russia only a small part of Armenia. Persia, Afghanistan, and Baluchistan are unchanged. On the west Russia has taken in the whole of what was Tartary in 1837, and now comes down to the Persian and Afghan frontiers and has recently obtained a concession for the extension of its trans-Caucasian railroad south through Teheran, capital of Persia, to the Arabian Sea, which will make it a still more formidable competitor of Great Britain. On the east it has stretched down through a considerable portion of Manchuria, has secured a terminus for its trans-Siberia road in the latter part of that province, and has control of Port Arthur, while its influence is dominant in Corea. Little Japan, as the outcome of its war with China, secured the rich island of Formosa. In 1837 France had no foothold in Asia; now it holds the whole of Anam, including the important province of Tonquin. In 1837 the Dutch had only a portion of the East Indies; now they hold all of Sumatra, Java, and Celebes, and all but a small strip of Borneo. In 1837 Great Britain had but a little strip of India; now it has added to its area nine tenths of that great province and swept in Burmah. Its area in India is nearly 1,500,000 square miles and its population nearly 300,000,000. Besides the provinces under direct British administration it indirectly controls native states covering an extent of 595,167 square miles, with over 66,000,000 population. It is now a great empire and dignified by the addition to Victoria's titles of that of Empress of India.

In sixty years the Continent of Africa has been revolutionized. In 1837 Turkey held Egypt down to the line of Abyssinia, Barka, Tripoli, and Tunis. France held a little strip of Algiers and a small island off the coast of Madagascar; Spain a portion of Morocco; Portugal a little strip of Lower Guinea on the west coast, and Great Britain a foothold in Sierra Leone and a portion of Cape Colony.

All the rest of this great continent of 11,000,000 square miles, four times the size of Europe, was occupied by ignorant, superstitious native tribes and substantially unknown to the world. In 1897 all of Africa, except a small part of the Desert of Sahara, Khartum, and a patch of a few square miles south of the Kongo Free State, is divided up among the nations and has been brought under the influences of civilization. Great Britain holds Basutoland (northeast of Cape Colony), Bechuanaland, Cape Colony, British Central Africa (a large strip north of the Zambesi River), the Central Africa protectorate to the south and west of Lake Nyanza, the East Africa protectorate, the Uganda protectorate, the Zanzibar protectorate, Mauritius, Natal, the Niger Coast protectorate and Niger territories, Rhodesia in South Africa, Zululand, and the Gold Coast, Lagos, Gambia, and Sierra Leone in West Africa. Germany has secured a large section in East Africa north of the British sphere, Damaraland and Namaqualand, the Cameroons, and a small strip abutting on the Slave Coast. France holds Algeria, over half of Sahara, Senegal, Senegambia, Guinea, Mandingo, the Ivory Coast, a large section of the Kongo region, and the great Island of Madagascar. Portugal has added Angola on the west coast and a large strip on the east coast from Delagoa Bay north to Cape Delgado. Italy has secured Somaliland and a long strip north on the Red Sea. Spain has Morocco. Turkey nominally holds Egypt and Tripoli, and the huge Kongo State is under the protectorate of Belgium. Liberia, Abyssinia, the Orange Free State, and the Transvaal are the only free states in Africa. In 1837 the great Nyanza Lakes were unknown, the Kongo River was known only to the falls, little or nothing was known of the Niger or Zambesi, and the Nile only to the third or fourth cataract.

Turning to North America, the British possessions remain about the same, except that under the Polk slave-holding administration while we were grabbing from Mexico we let go fifty or sixty thousand square miles of Oregon and gave that area to the British, and also kindly allowed them to take ten or twelve thousand more square miles of Eastern Maine. The United States has gained during the sixty years Texas, New Mexico, the Gadsden purchase, California, Utah, the west half of Colorado, part of Wyoming, all of Nevada, being nearly half of Mexico, and Alaska, purchased from Russia. In 1837 Central America was known as the United States of Central America. Since then two or three of its little States have united for self-defense. In South America there have been no great changes of territory, except that Spain has been driven out here and there. The Portuguese Emperor of Brazil has been sent home and that country is now a republic, and the Cubans are trying to free themselves from Spanish domination. Australia in 1887 was only a penal colony with a few sheep ranches. Now it is the most important British colony, with four millions of people. It is richer than Canada and exports gold, wool, beef, mutton, and wheat. New Zealand also is rapidly filling up and has a rich soil.

These, in brief, are the changes which have occurred during the sixty years since Victoria ascended the throne. Sixty years from now who shall calculate the changes which will be made or the wonderful influence of the processes of civilization?

The editorial review in yesterday's Tribune of the territorial changes that have taken place in the world during the reign of Queen Victoria omitted some of the important features of the formation of the present Italian Kingdom. Italy has been a little more than a geographical expression up to the beginning of the century, consisting of a number of fragmentary states. Their fortunes began to reach a crisis in 1846, when, after fifteen years of "discontented tranquility," the various Italian sovereigns began to feel the disturbing influence of the spirit of independence of foreign control, which was largely inspired by Mazzini.

After that changes came thick and fast. Victor Emmanuel II., King of Sardinia, got in 1859, with the aid of France, most of Lombardy, part of the Papal States, and the Duchies of Parma and Modena. In 1860 the kingdom of the two Sicilies and the Duchy of Tuscany came under Emmanuel's sway, resulting in his being declared King of Italy March 17, 1861, by the first Italian Parliament. The rest of Lombardy and Venetia were gained in 1866, and finally in 1870 Rome was added to his dominions, and in that year he entered the Eternal City and made it his capital. In 1860, also, the House of Savoy made its great sacrifice to the cause of united Italy when it consented to give up Savoy and Nice to the French in consideration of French acquiescence in the annexation of Central Italy to Sardinia.

The surrender of Alsace-Lorraine to Germany by France was also one of the notable events that occurred during Victoria's reign. This was made in 1871, in the treaty between France and Germany, but France will never be contented until this territory is restored to French control.—Chicago Tribune.

SUN NEVER SETS ON UNCLE SAM'S DOMAINS.

"The Britons proudly boast that the sun never sets on the Queen's dominions, as if they were special subjects of solar favoritism," writes William George Jordan on "The Greatest Nation on Earth," in the July Ladies' Home Journal. "But it is equally true that there is always sunshine on some part of Uncle Sam's great possessions. When it is 6 p. m. on Attoo's Island, Alaska, it is 9:36 a. m. of the day following at Eastport, Maine. If we locate the center of the United States, calculating it is midway between longitude sixty-seven of Eastport and longitude one hundred and ninety-three of Attoo's Island, it will be found on the one hundred and twenty-sixth degree of longitude, about two hundred and eighty miles west of San Francisco, in the Pacific Ocean."

GIN FOR BARBARIAN AFRICA.

The latest figures for gin and rum imports into barbarian Africa have a dizzy look. In 1894 Gambia received 22,368 gallons; Sierra Leone, 242,686; the Gold Coast, 1,302,899; Lagos, 1,863,631; the Niger coast protectorate, 2,609,158. The countries that supply the stuff are, of course, the same countries that send the missionaries, Great Britain, the United States, Germany, France, and Holland.

THE SAINTS' HERALD
REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD will be fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

AFTERMATH.

It appears that the deposing of Moses Thatcher, from the apostleship by the Utah Church, has been followed by the dropping from official positions in the church, Elders John Seaman, and C. A. Smurthwaite, for similar reasons as those that prevailed in the case of Mr. Thatcher.

In interviews with these men published in the Salt Lake Tribune, May 18, the positions assumed by these men are given. From these we extract. Mr. Seaman states:—

The doctrines of the Mormon Church I subscribe to fully and believe in, but when the church goes beyond its power, beyond its just province, and attempts to control my actions in other than spiritual and ecclesiastical matters, it goes too far; it goes beyond its sphere and its proper jurisdiction, and I do not recognize the power thus attempted to be assumed. I could not indorse the manifesto when it was issued, and I cannot and do not indorse it now, because by it the church attempts to govern where it has no right to govern or right to interfere.

There is no authority in the church to cause my removal from office on the facts constituting the charge against me. I asked President Shurtliff for a written statement of the causes and of the fact of my removal, but was not furnished the statement. I asked him where he got his authority, and he said he had been instructed in general how to proceed. But there is absolutely no authority for the action as taken, and no one who has studied the matter can point out where the alleged authority can be found. The manifesto itself does not confer any authority of that kind, nor does it exist anywhere. As the manifesto is not a part of the doctrine of the Mormon church as a recognized tenet, no man as a member of that church is bound to indorse it, nor is he legally subject to any punishment for not indorsing it, as might be the case were the thing rebelled against one of the cardinal doctrines of the church. I am as honest and earnest a believer in the doctrines of the church as I ever was, and when I refuse to subordinate my rights as an American citizen to the demands of church leaders, I in no manner place myself in opposition to the religious doctrines of the church which I revere, to which I subscribe and which I try to live up to to the fullest extent of my ability. I have simply challenged the right of the church to dictate to me in political affairs, and I further refuse to recognize the authority of the officials of the church to depose me from office on that ground. That is all there is to it, and on that ground I stand.

Mr. Smurthwaite states:—

This position, however, did not seem to be satisfactory, and I was formally, by resolution introduced by President C. F. Middleton, asked to resign on the ground that I was out of harmony with the central board, the presidency of the stake, and the authorities of the church. I disavowed inharmony. The members of the board had, prior to the adoption of the resolution, testified that I had labored without any friction whatever during my entire membership with the board.

"Why didn't you comply with the request to resign?"

"Because that would have been an acknowledgment of inharmony in the three instances charged. I desired to show that the action taken was wrong, ill-advised and an injustice to me, so I asked for a copy of the minutes, which, if properly recorded, would have proved the falsity of the resolution. I was anxious to go on record exactly as I look at things, and therefore wanted to direct a communication to the First Presidency of the church who, I am confident, would have set aside the judgment on the showing of the record itself. This privilege has been denied me, and so I am willing to let the matter drop at that."

"You were dropped, then, as a matter of fact, not because of unwillingness to abide by the provisions of the manifesto, but because you saw fit to discuss its utility or wisdom?"

"That's about it, I suppose. I am an ardent advocate of free discussion, because when discussion is free, error may be refuted and truth will be triumphant and needs no physical force to assist it. Besides confutation of error is also decisive—it reduces it to nothing; whereas forcible prohibition of discussion, such as dropping men out of their position, leaves things precisely as they were, and gives to error the advantage of the presumption that it cannot be answered by argument."

The drawing of personal authority reins over free men is always fraught with danger. If drawn too tight they prove to be galling, the rule irritates and vexes, and those sought to be restrained by them finally break from their control and refuse allegiance. It has long been a source of wonder how men have submitted to it as exercised in the church in the west; and we are not surprised at the revolt of Messrs. Thatcher, Seaman, and Smurthwaite, as given in the press accounts.

REUNIONS.

THE committee in whose charge the fall reunion, sometimes called the general reunion, usually held in Western Iowa, and which is this year to be held at Woodbine, Harrison County, Iowa, gave notice in the HERALD for May 5, on page 287, of the time and place, when and where the reunion would be held; place, Woodbine; time, September 3; notice signed by S. C. Diggle, secretary of committee.

In the editorial items in HERALD for May 12, page 291, notice of the reunion at Woodbine was again given, and a request made that all those having charge and making arrangements for reunions would bear the Woodbine reunion in mind, "provided" those so having charge had a "desire to accommodate others wishing to attend those" to be held elsewhere "and this one too."

The committee of the Park Bluff reunion to be held at Nauvoo, or opposite on the Iowa side of the river, have set their time for August 19 to September 1 inclusive; so that persons desiring to attend it and the Woodbine, or Maysville, Missouri, reunion, can, if they choose, attend both. The committee for the Maysville, Missouri, reunion have set theirs for September 3 to 13, the same time that is set for the Woodbine meeting.

The editor was most pressingly invited to attend the Maysville meeting; but was not willing to promise because he was already pledged to attend the Woodbine meeting, and was not certain as to the time, though thinking it was September 3. He is also invited to be present at the Park Bluff meeting; and to assist to dedicate a church at Onslow, Jones County, Iowa, September 4, which he has consented to do, no providence preventing.

show that the Woodbine committee gave very early notice of their meeting. And this reunion having been inaugurated to take the place of the semiannual, or fall conference, has priority of claim, if any has, so far as the personal attendance of the editor of HERALD is concerned, and this will account to all who may wish to know why he is not at other places on the dates mentioned; second, we have been sometimes advertised as expected to be at meetings at certain places, without having consented to be in attendance, and some in and out of the church have been disappointed, or so they have represented; we wish therefore to state where it is likely we shall be at the times referred to, as it is seemingly impracticable that we can be at two or more places at the same period of time. Those who have desired us to attend these meetings, either, or all of them, will know why we are not there if absent.

We attended the reunion at Maysville, some three years or so ago, and was much pleased; but, having agreed to be at the Woodbine meeting, we will, the Lord willing, answer to roll call there.

A WARNING CRY.

REV. F. F. PASSMORE, from whose energetic denunciation of ecclesiastical things in Denver a few months ago, we quoted, upbraiding his fellow ministers of the M. E. Church, lately delivered a rasping sermon in the pulpit of the M. E. Church at Littleton, New Hampshire, April 1.

His text was Isaiah 56: 10, 11. From this he proceeded to score the church from which he has derived his title of "Reverend." Among the things he said are the spicy, pungent, sweeping denunciations:—

... I have made a deep study of the ills and wrongs and sins and revolutions, and slow progress of the human race, and after making all allowance for the sins of the people, the ambition of politicians, and the general drift of human tendencies, I am fully convinced and thoroughly persuaded that a selfish, ease-loving, and hypocritical ministry has been, and is now, the prime cause of the slow progress of the human race. . . .

I once thought that the brakes on the wheels of the chariot of human progress was what we call the "common people," but on this subject I have had a revelation. I see now that the chariot wheels of human progress are held back by the ministers, learned and great men of the world. I once thought that the common people would not hear the truth, but I find now that our bishops and elders and great preachers will not have it. The bitterest, most determined and persistent opponents of the real teachings and spirit and purpose of Jesus Christ on earth to-day are to be found in the pulpits and universities of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

... Joseph Parker, the great London preacher says; "The great soul I cry for is a man who will preach to preachers; who will convert the pulpit."

I have seen for some time that the need of the age is to get Methodist preachers converted. The world cannot move out on a grand uplift for humanity unless one of two things takes place, and that is this: We must get the Methodist bishops and preachers converted and sanctified, or else set them aside—wholly ignore them and prevent them from exerting their wicked and damning influences.

A wicked Methodist ministry is damning the church and the nation. A true Methodist ministry could save the world.

Joseph Parker is right. We need a man who will "preach to the preachers," and get the pulpit converted. The greatest need to-day is to preach to the preachers, reform the reformers, christianize christianity, and save the Methodist Church members.

The foregoing is rough and scathing, but the following has a touch of spleen in it that would suggest the existence of some personal grievance between Rev. Passmore and Bishop Warren, the nature of which would need to be given and explained to make it effective as against the Bishop:—

The Bishop is a blind watchman. He rides over this country and sees the rich oppressing the poor. He sees women and helpless, innocent children hungry and naked and starving. He sees two hundred and fifty thousand saloons. He sees a yearly procession of a hundred thousand men on their way to drunkards' graves. He sees a procession every year of fifty thousand pure girls marching to the altar of licentiousness. He sees the land filled with hungry, homeless tramps. He sees suicides increasing. He sees the Sabbath desecrated. He sees the Methodist Episcopal Church supporting saloons, gambling, prostitution and all the sins of the age. He sees that his own church did not take into her fold last year as many members as there were pure girls prostituted. Bishop Warren sees all this, and a great deal more, but he has not been the man one time to raise his voice and give the warning.

The bishop is a "greedy dog." "He looks to his own way." He lives in a thirty-five thousand dollar mansion. He clothes himself in broadcloth and fares sumptuously every day. He makes the church pay him four thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars a year and traveling expenses. He rides in Pullman palace cars while his eyes stand out with fatness. He has a lordly mein, and he lords it over the Methodist preachers and crushes the last spark of a manly nature out of their souls.

This account is taken from the American Standard, published at Frankfort, Indiana, an alarmist political sheet, the business of whose publishers seems to be to hunt for the terrible and publish it.

There is enough in the world to stir the indignation of men like Rev. Passmore, and cause him to cry out against their continuance. But, as he confines himself to denouncing the ministry of his own church, he must either have discovered what many as honest as he has failed to see, or he is the victim of ecclesiastical spleen, for causes he does not state. Were we to indulge in such a tirade it would be charged to the spirit of evil and malice, the result of our departure from the truth and loss of the Spirit of Christianity.

FROM PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH writes from Defiance, Iowa, July 19, as follows:—

I met quite a pleasant reception at Denison, on the 14th, and in the evening had a good and appreciative audience in the College Chapel, to hear my lecture; subject: "An Intelligent Personal Liberty the Safety of the State."

The Principal, Professor VanNess, Secretary H. H. Holmes, also one of the Educational Staff, and Teachers Lambert and Shaffer, the latter the teacher of vocal music, met, were present and gave me cordial welcome. Saints from Galland's Grove, Dow City, Deloit, and the regions round about helped to swell the audience and filled the chapel.

On the morning of the 15th I attended the chapel exercises, and by request of Professor VanNess addressed the students; which was pleasantly received.

Brn. C. E. Butterworth and J. F. McDowell, had pitched their tabernacle in Denison on Tuesday, and on Thursday evening it was duly dedicated by proper service. I delivered the sermon, Bro. McDowell the prayer. Song service was rendered by the band of singers gathered from Dow City, Deloit, and Denison. Sr. Baker, wife of Bro. J. M. Baker, presiding at Dow City, at the organ.

The tent is a new one, and the opening was auspicious, a large audience greeting the speaker. Brn. Butterworth and McDowell will conduct the services as long as found advisable.

There are some twenty-seven members within a radius of three miles of Denison, and Brn. R. L. Montgomery and George Myers are doing what they can, with the assistance of their families, to keep the work going. The Saints are feeling well, and the prospects seem good.

Friday, the 16th, I came to Bro. Gideon Hawley's and found an appointment at Defiance, for Sunday, the 18th at eleven a. m., and three and 8:30 p. m. It was not practicable for me to fill the three, but I did occupy at eleven and three, leaving the evening one for Bro. Baker, of Dow City.

Bro. Ichabod McCord, the son of Bro. Alexander McCord, who accompanied Bro. E. C. Briggs to Utah, in 1863, is looking after the work at Defiance; and although lately ordained, he is doing his part creditably, was in charge Sunday, and presided well.

The song service was good. Mrs. Dr. Christy, of Defiance, kindly gave her service at the organ, and our singers from the Grove, Harlan, and Defiance, sang the glad songs of the church. Some have lately joined the church here, who will add strength to the work. Prejudice has been hard here, but the discussion in which Bro. J. F. McDowell met Rev. Blalock, greatly aided the good prestige of the church. We were not surprised to learn that Bro. McDowell conducted his side of the debate with due dignity and in a Christianlike manner, winning good praise for the cause he represented. Bro. John Kingsbury and wife, baptized, were some of the fruits of labor done at Defiance by Brn. C. J. Hunt, McDowell, Smith, and Wight, and the good influence of local saints. The audience we met was a good one and very attentive indeed.

Quite unexpectedly to me, I was called upon to celebrate marriage at Bro. Ichabod McCord's in the evening of the 18th, when his son Arch. E. and Sr. Hattie Roberts, of Lamoni, pledged each other in wedlock. It was an impromptu affair, but none the less a pleasant and impressive one. The young people wanted the services of "Bro. Joseph," and deemed his presence an opportune one, and so delayed not.

THE WORK OF THE MINISTRY.

ON behalf of the people, both in and out of the church, we desire to impress upon the ministry, general and local, that in the matter of preaching the word there should not be any trifling with the expectations of the people, or the work in hand to be done. Delays are dangerous, and idle and evasive ways are bad examples, and are contagious; hence should not be indulged in; especially by those who are in position and have the right to say, Come!

The traveling ministry should, as soon as practicable get into their respective fields; at once, upon appointment, if possible. The harvest is ready, the laborers few; the opportunities in most fields are many and very favorable; they should be improved. A feeling to be very lenient to those who may have spent much time at home and out of their fields, has prevailed for a time; but the people have been growing impatient at unnecessary delays, and are demanding that a better diligence shall be manifested and that their representatives shall be found at their posts and answering calls for the preaching of the word. The hastening time is upon us, and those called to the duty of bearing abroad the tidings of life must respond, or they will fall under censure, and sooner or later be dropped from the roll of workers. Men can no more serve the Lord and their own private interests, business affairs, the world, the flesh, or the Devil now, than they could at the period when the Master said, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon."

It is said that there will be a large force of the Utah ministry in the field this season, and it will be well for the ministry traveling and local to be prepared for such movement.

Plural marriage, Utah polygamy, has been formally abandoned by the Utah Church, through the advice of President Wilford Woodruff, by virtue of what has been construed by himself, his counselors, and associates to have been a revelation permitting him to advise to the effect of such abandonment of the practice; but it is believed and taught by their elders in places privately; now and then publicly, as by Elder B. H. Roberts at St. Louis this last winter. The missionaries sent out from the valley claim to know that the practice only has been abandoned because of pressure brought to bear on them by the United States; and when pressed in debate or wayside conversation by our brethren, belief in the dogma and practice is avowed and defended. The ministry, therefore should be admonished and feel at liberty, when meeting with these missionaries from the Utah Church, to bring the fact of the existence of this belief into light, that the true faith may be presented in comparison.

It should also be remembered that the missionaries from the Utah Church are under positive instruction not to discuss with the "Josephite elders." But, while the right of the leading authorities of that church to so instruct their representatives not to discuss with us is conceded, we believe the policy to be a bad one, resulting from a consciousness of the weakness of their cause, and, by reason of the position taken by the Reorganized Church on the domestic relation, as taught in the word, we are not under any sort of obligation to be silent on the issues existing between the two churches; hence, the ministry should feel at liberty to present the differences, as they know them to be, and contrast the teaching and practices of the two churches, on the subject, at such times as wisdom may direct, or conditions make necessary.

"We want no coward in our band,
Who will our colors fly."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. AND SR. F. G. PITT sailed for Liverpool on Saturday, the 17th. Card from Bro. Pitt on that date as follows:—

We are off; weather is fine; all feel well and hopeful. We will board the Campania in a few minutes. Love to all. All aboard; good-bye.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, Temple, Ohio, July 19:—

Nice rain yesterday, which broke a long dry spell. Brn. Bronson and Smith preached at the Temple. Things going favorably; hot wave cooled.

Bro. Levi Phelps, Juniata, Michigan, July 16:—

There is a mistake in your notice in Herald of Elder Delong's death. He died at his home near Vassar, not at Juniata. I wrote you at my home in Juniata, but think I stated that I preached his funeral sermon at his home, but perhaps left Vassar out.

Bro. J. C. Chrestensen, Jasper City, Missouri, July 17:—

Our town is just now being stirred up by the preaching of Elders F. C. Keck and W. C. Cather, assisted by your humble servant. The weather is fine, the preaching and interest good, and the tent quite well filled.

Bro. J. M. Baggerly, Knox, Indiana, July 20:—

I have just returned from Burr Oak, where I have been very busy preaching and visiting the people at their homes, reading to them and explaining the doctrine and organization of the church. People are interested down there.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have received two copies, the May and June numbers of Te Orometua, published at Papeete, Tahiti, in the interests of the Society Islands mission, Bro. J. F. Burton, editor. It is a neat little paper of eight pages, well gotten up typographically; and, though unable to read its contents, we doubt not that it is what is wanted in a literary way, as Bro. Burton is well qualified for the work he has undertaken. We are glad to welcome Te Orometua among our list of publications, and trust it will long live to spread the truth in the islands of the Pacific. We are doing well to have a publication in Hawaii and one in Tahiti.

Brn. E. L. Kelley and J. C. Clapp went to Albany, Missouri, on the 21st inst., to attend a meeting held by various ministers, at which a representative of the "Christian Church" is to lecture on the higher criticism; after which a minister from each society represented is to preach a sermon. Thus a liberal policy is slowly moving in favor of the rights of all to a hearing.

Bro. E. A. Stedman, of the Minnesota field, arrived home on Tuesday, the 20th.

Bro. and Sr. E. H. Fisher, of Boston, who have been visiting relatives and friends at Lamoni, went to Independence, Missouri, from which point they will return East.

Bro. Myron C. Fisher, who has been among Lamoni friends since General Conference recently returned to Boston to resume business duties.

Saints from Flint, Durand, Diamonddale, and Lansing, Michigan, met at Bro. Eugene Frisbie's, near the town of Ovid, during the present month, forty-nine in all, and had an excellent spiritual and social season of gladness. The Lord comforted and instructed them through the gifts of the gospel; two young men were baptized. They express thanks to Bro. and Sr. Frisbie for entertainment; letter from Sr. Hattie E. Burns.

We have a "special request" from a brother, S. Taylor, location not given, that prayer be offered in behalf of himself and family for deliverance from difficulties and help to do what they are striving to accomplish for the cause. Will those remember them who can.

Bro. Albert T. Davis has a column and a half article in the Pittsburg, Kansas, Headlight of July 10, in which he replies to a writer on religious topics and sets forth the faith and organization of the primitive church quite clearly and in a way to draw men to the truth.

Bro. A. S. Guinand writes of the prevailing famine for the word of God, in the churches, caused by the inability of the evangelical churches to come to an understanding of the truth as it is in Christ. He suggests as a remedy a return to the platform mentioned in 1 Corinthians 1: 10.

Bro. F. M. Weld returned to the Nauvoo district from Lamoni on the 22d inst., to continue tent work and complete preparations for the coming reunion at Bluff Park, at which he hopes for a good attendance.

Sr. Otie Maye Scott, of Galena, Indiana, writes of her appreciation of the good she sees and enjoys in the work of the Lord, which she urges all, young and old, to live by, that life may be made complete in him.

The Salt Lake Tribune of July 15 contains an account of the first day's proceedings of the "Trans-Mississippi Congress," in which we notice the name of Bro. J. W. Wight in the list of members of the committee on credentials, as a delegate from the State of Iowa. Bro. Wight, we understand, was commissioned through Mayor Scott, of Lamoni, to represent his home city or State, with others so appointed by mayors of cities, according to the rules of the congress. The organization did well to place Bro. Wight on the credentials committee; its members are mostly public men and are shrewd and know a competent man when they see him. The "other side" located in the State of Utah would also do well to accept the services of Elder Wight. He is there to do them good, and may be relied upon to serve them well in every way.

The Oneill, Nebraska, Sun, published at Oneill, has a communication from Bro. J. F. Mintun in its issue for July 15. It appears that one Rev. N. S. Lowrie delivered a public lecture in which he misrepresented the church and its faith, and to which Bro. Mintun replies in good spirit, offering to discuss five propositions involving the general positions of the church, and the Presbyterian Church, represented by Mr. Lowrie. We are not yet informed concerning the result.

From a clipping from the Bevier, Missouri, Appeal of the 16th inst. we learn that Sr. Martha Griffiths, mother of Bro. G. T. Griffiths, had been quite ill and that Bro. Gomer and others of her family had been summoned to her bedside. At last accounts she was slowly improving.

There will be a reunion at Maysville, DeKalb County, Missouri, September 3 to 13, the same dates of the Woodbine, Iowa, meeting. The poster sent us indicates the intention to have a rousing meeting. The committee stated: "This will be made the best meeting yet held." The place, Harvey's Grove, is a very pleasant place for the occasion.

Russia by secret negotiations and purchase has secured the Corean port of Lazereff, one of the most important on the Pacific coast of Corea. It is said that Russia and Japan have a secret understanding looking to the absorption of Corea entire.

General Gomez, the Cuban commander, is pushing his forces to the front and is meeting with successes in battle. Leading Spanish statesmen openly advocate letting Cuba go free, others favor granting home rule to the island.

Semi-official announcements from Washington state that an international conference of representatives of Great Britain and the United States will be held at Washington to agree upon the terms of another arbitration treaty.

Carrier pigeons have arrived at Norwegian ports with purported messages from Andree, the arctic balloonist, one of which reports that he passed the north pole on the 15th. The messages lack verification.

The proposition to confer upon the Archbishop of Canterbury an official status as head of all branches of the Episcopal Church throughout the world, one of the leading questions before the late Lambeth conference, was strongly opposed by the American bishops present, 144 in number, who voted solidly against it, as did also some colonial bishops. "The independent church in America would never consent to surrender a particle of its independence," said a distinguished American ecclesiastic.

The Carlists in Spain are said to be making ready to take advantage of any added strain on the present government to make an uprising.

"Dr." Henry Slater, a Chicago spirit medium, was convicted of being a confidence man and recommended by the jury for imprisonment in the penitentiary, July 20.

The Sultan of Turkey has abandoned his territorial claims in Greece and accepted the strategic frontier defined by the military attaches of the powers. Acceptance was secured only after an identical note from the powers had declared their intentions of using force to bring him to terms.

Bro. J. E. Wilsey, whose address is Wathena, Doniphan County, Kansas, care of Frank Rice, writes of his efforts to teach the word, and in which he would be aided if saints could send him copies of church papers and tracts. He requests prayer for recovery or relief from bodily afflictions.

Bro. M. T. Short incloses us a clipping from a Milwaukee paper, in which the labors of Brighamite elders are written up in such a manner as to move him to reply in explanation as to who, what, and where the "Latter Day Saints" are. His article draws the lines plainly. Bro. Short believes both in the power of the press for good and in using it as such in his work, which is right.

Bro. E. L. Page, of Lamoni, an old-time Latter Day Saint and elder at Nauvoo, has brought to the Herald Office an interesting relic of early days—a sword used by artillery within the State militia summoned to assemble at Carthage and other points adjacent to Nauvoo during the exciting times incident to the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. It is a heavy flat blade a little over two feet in length, with brass handle stamped with two eagles, and bearing the stamp, "United States, Springfield, 1835;" and on the reverse the name of "Ames, Springfield," probably the manufacturer. The scabbard is heavy leather brass tipped, with belt to suspend it from the waist. Altogether it is a murderous looking weapon, a sort of sword and bludgeon combined, somewhat similar to a sailor's cutlass or a Cuban machete. It vividly calls to mind what the early saints had to face in the armed mob-militia of early days. It is possible that Bro. Page may present the relic to some department of the church for preservation.

Bro. F. J. Ebeling was at Sharon, Pennsylvania, the 21st inst., having been laboring in the Kirtland district since April. The saints of Sharon were alive to the interests of the work; the sisters and brethren had raised one hundred dollars of late, despite the hard times, to pay on their chapel. At Conneautville, Pennsylvania, he found good saints, who also have a chapel of their own, where he baptized a man and wife, notwithstanding a minister expressed the opinion that "a young man should not be allowed to come and take away good members from one who had been preaching for fifty years." Passing on to Grove City he laid the foundation for future work. Would join Bro. H. E. Moler in tent work in the Pittsburg district.

There are three aged colored women in Unity Home for the Aged, Chicago, whose ages are respectively 125, 120, and 106 years. The three centenarians attended church in that city on Sunday, the 25th inst. Great ages are still attainable, it seems.

LITTLE WEIGHTS.

DID you ever see a half dozen athletic young fellows prepare for a foot race? Heavy clothing is taken off, shoes are laid aside, and every ounce of weight that can be done without is unsparingly cut off. There is even a record of one near-sighted enthusiast who dispensed with his eye-glasses, that he might be free from that all but imperceptible hindrance of their weight. Nothing is allowed to impede the full and free action of the muscles, as with elbows thrown well back and head held erect, the runner speeds to the goal.

The athlete sets an example that we may follow with profit in the race which as Christians we have set before us. If we wish to run with ease and reach the goal in triumph we must use the same care in putting off what stands in the way of success. And because the little weights are the ones which interfere without our suspecting their mischief, this word of caution is given.

Sometimes daily work is a hindrance. It ought not to be, but unconsciously we make it so by giving it more of our thought than it merits. If on six days we allow it to absorb all our time and strength, not even the peace of the Sabbath will refresh us as it ought. But when we put first in the busy day a few moments' heart-to-heart talk with our best Friend, and commit to memory a message from his word, how all is changed! Until you have tried it, reader, you cannot know what a mental uplift this will give, and how it will keep the soul calm amid outside clamor and confusion.

Again, there may be something in the work itself which is incompatible with Christian living, and though we try to persuade ourselves that business and religion may be kept apart, we know that in spite of our best efforts we are losing ground. In this case there is only one way out for us. It is to leave that work, no matter how profitable it may be, no matter how light the labor. The One to whom we have committed our ways will provide us with other employment, for he directs the little affairs of life as surely as he guides the movements of the planets. He may give us harder work, but it will be sure to be wholesome.

Or we may be kept back from the full measure of what we might accomplish by false humility. The spirits which prompt you to say, "I am so weak, so timid; I can't do that," is too often unwillingness instead of genuine self-distrust.

Again, self-indulgence is a hindrance hard to lay aside, but the sacrifice must be made if we would run lightly. The pleasures which have no better recommendation than that they "do no harm" are weights to be cast aside. Life is too short to waste in doing negative things. Positive good is what we need, in pleasure as in all else. When wholesome amusements are so many and so varied, we are not wise if we choose those which at best are doubtful.

A strong, earnest, helpful loving Christian life is the happiest one possible for everybody. It is well worth the effort it costs to cast aside the little weights which hinder us from enjoying it to the utmost; for as the race is easier to the runner whose muscles have freedom to work naturally, so that life is sweeter, better, happier, which is divested of every trifle that would hinder its most perfect development.—Young People's Weekly.

DRAW NEARER.

DRAW nearer, O my soul, in the hour of temptation and trial. Yes, we want to draw nearer to him who was tempted in all points as we are, but never yielded. Paul tells us to count it all joy, when we fall into divers temptations. He had much bitter experience, but he remained steadfast to his faith,—lived by his faith, and thereby his soul was not crushed, but polished, even as stone and metal are polished. They are very rude in the natural state, but are brought into perfection by hard rubs. So are the worthy souls of earth brought out into perfection by being passive in the love of the Master workman while being encompassed by the hard rubs of this life.

When we are placed in vexing circumstances and darts of anger are hurled at us, the best thing to do is to seek for protection in his love, as the young fowls seek for protection beneath their mother's wing. When our acquaintances, or our relatives misunderstand and misrepresent us, and ill treat us, either by deed of omission or of commission, then is a good time, an available time, to draw nearer to him who was slighted, betrayed; and even put to death by his friends (or those who ought to have been his friends). O, if we could only say as he did in his last moments, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." If we draw nearer to him he will help us to do the same, for he has had the experience that enables him to comfort and shield others who need his help. If we are spiritually needy we can go to him and have our wants supplied. He will not turn us away empty if we let drop our anxieties, our misgivings, our bitter feelings, etc., and lay our passive soul before him.

When our friends leave us and step over on the beautiful shore, 'tis good for us to draw nearer to him who wept at the grave of a friend—he who was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. He understands our every pang of sorrow, and he has an infallible balm for every wounded soul. He holds our loved ones in his care, for all are alive unto him, and he can fill our bosoms with sweet emotions of love, probably just the same as he is bestowing on them, but not so fully. The fountain of his love can never fail; 'tis as inexhaustible as God himself, and though all heaven, all paradise be filled, there is still enough for every inhabitant of earth. His feeding the multitude is an illustration of the fact. He can feed millions just as well as thousands, not only with temporal food but with spiritual. All that are weary may come and find rest, all that are troubled may come and find peace, all that are sorrowing may come and find joy, all that are gloomy may come and find gladness. He is no respecter of persons. All who fear him and work rightly shall be accepted of him. Many withhold themselves from drawing nearer by thinking or saying, "I have not feared God as I ought, neither have I been obedient to his commands, nor have I always tried to do right." We ask, "Who ever did always come up to the standard," or up to the Pattern? If one did he would be as a God. Christ said, "There are none good, all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The servant cannot be above his master, or equal with him in advantages, neither can we be above our Master nor equal with him, but we can yield our will a sacrifice to him and accept the blessings that he in infallible wisdom bestows upon his followers.

We must come just as we are, and now, because now is all the time we have. 'Tis folly to spend time in counting our supposed perfections, or in sorrowing over our known imperfections. Nothing of the kind can save us. We must drop the burden and accept his free redeeming grace. 'Tis free for you, dear reader; 'tis free for me. Glory to his name!

We can say like thousands, that while passing through tribulation, when we willingly submitted to the requirements, we found that supporting solace which is found only in his love. There have been many times when we have, in a spiritual sense, been like one in the ocean, surged on by the winds and waves, with no light of the sun, and no compass to guide; but when we looked away from the awfulness of our condition to the Pilot who finished life's rough voyage more than eighteen hundred years ago, we were rescued. O, that our song might ever be, "Nearer, my God, nearer to thee."

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

OUR general secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, has concluded that "it is not good for man to be alone," and has taken to himself an helpmeet. The happy pair are traveling through the West for a time. The secretary will call upon some of our schools in Utah and California if circumstances permit.

WE do not usually announce a very great amount of work for the reunions. More suitable work can be provided after the workers meet and their wants and needs "sized up" by those constantly in this line of work. It would not be wise for a corps of elders to prearrange a lot of sermons to be preached; nor would it be wise for Sunday school workers to "fix" a program except in a general way.

THE general superintendent is expected to attend the reunions at Thurman, Iowa, Blue Rapids, Kansas, Montrose, and Woodbine, Iowa. The general secretary will attend Nauvoo or Montrose reunion and such other reunions as may be found possible later on.

TAKE your Bibles, Quarterlies, Winnowed Songs, and Hymnals with you to the reunions. You will find much use for them.

SUGGESTIONS TO DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS.

SOME time ago we wrote that the district conventions were just now even more important than a State Institute, etc. But why not have a Sunday school normal in each district once a year? If in your district you have not those who are capable of organizing and instructing and are not posted as to the purpose, plan, and benefit of a normal, can you not from the district treasury pay the expenses of some one from a little distance who is capable and willing to devote their time to the Master in that way? Find out from that one what course is contemplated. Enroll all in the district who desire to attend and work. Meet them after the Sunday school hour, give them an outline of the work to be done, and let all know what is expected of them if they attend. The plans for work and rules for governing should be as carefully made and adhered to as in a school normal, if we expect to derive any benefit therefrom. Encourage this kind of work. Suggest the taking of notes, free discussion, etc., at the normal. If you do your best to have this a real work time, good will be sure to result in better manners and methods. Superintendents, please let us hear from you as to the practicability of these suggestions.

THE above, by Sr. L. L. Resseguie, was prepared for the Sunday School Workers in Autumn Leaves. The thought is good. The normal is just what we need. Our officers and our teachers need training, and we know of no better way than a normal or institute. Fully realizing this need, last year an institute was arranged for, which was held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, during the holidays. The program was so arranged as to embrace instruction and discussion upon almost every subject pertaining to the work, from the duties of district superintendent down to lay-member in local school. The work was in turn in charge of some one or two of a corps of experienced Sunday school workers. More than a hundred were in regular attendance, about sixty-five of which were from a distance, representing five States and eleven districts. They came there for work. They entered freely into "free discussion" and "took notes." Aside from note books brought, four dozen more were ordered at one time, which did not then supply the demand. The work done was of a very practical nature. All conclusions reached were based upon actual experience. Many expressed themselves as having gained a great amount of knowledge and experience, which they could use in their work at home.

These normals should be of frequent occurrence. Each district could arrange for one during each year. Let each district superintendent take this into consideration. Not only to think but to act thereupon. Let us hear from you.

THERE will be held in New Jersey this summer a school of Primary Methods.—Its program is a perfect inspiration to better work. Between eleven o'clock on Monday, July 5, and noon on Saturday, July 10, there are listed seventy-two items of work. There will be four model lessons taught, including one by a professional teacher. Ten lectures on "child-nature" will be given; ten lessons on blackboard study and private lessons if desired; five conferences on practical class work, etc.; sand map work; special conferences of the workers to give them an opportunity for an exchange of ideas; new songs taught every afternoon, and one evening devoted to a musical social.

Primary workers, does not this program thrill you with a desire to be there and learn that you may be enabled to do your work in a more systematic way? Cannot some go who live near Trenton, take notes, and let this department have the benefit of them?

Will we not at sometime be able to offer such a feast of fat things to our own workers? There must be a beginning, no matter how small. If we are not capable of teaching all of these things, there must be some one thing in primary work for which we are peculiarly fitted. Let us try and find out what that is and then put forth every effort to develop as far as lies in our power. When we have done all that we can, we may look with faith, for help from our heavenly Father. When we have reached this point we will be enabled to help others. Shall we not begin now to work with this thought in view, that we will perfect ourselves in some one thing in primary methods, so that when the time has come that we have such a school of our own, you, I, may be fitted for even the loveliest place at the Master's feet.

DR. TRUMBULL'S new book on teacher's meetings should be interesting to every Sunday school superintendent.

THE Iowa Sunday School Helper in its July number publishes a list of the graduates of the "Iowa State Sunday School Teacher's Normal Course." They number one hundred twelve, seven of which were of our association workers. Among them were the names of Srs. Blanche Andrews, Emma Harrington, Sarah J. Gifford, Emma Hougas, Viola Redfield, Viola Gaylord, and Bro. T. A. Hougas; all from the Fremont, Iowa, district. We have in this more than a pro rata number. So may it continue to be. Let our workers gain a standing in the world. It will help to spread the truth.

RIVERTON, Iowa, July 13.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing we have baptized two more precious souls into the church at Shenandoah. The work there is in fair condition, and nearly all seem to be rejoicing in the truth. We came here last Saturday, held one meeting at night, and three on Sunday; the good spirit was with us in power. The hearts of all present were truly made glad, as testified to by nearly all. Brn. W. W. Gaylord and James Roberts were present with us, and spoke and testified to the truth of the work, to the cheer and encouragement of those present. These good brethren carry the spirit and life of the gospel with them. Some here are quite interested in the truth, as they express themselves.

We leave here tomorrow for Hamburg, to do what we can for a week or so, and on to Keystone before our reunion, which commences on August 6, on the grounds of Bro. William Leeka near Thurman. We hope the saints of this and the adjoining districts will not forget the time and place, and come up to the help of the Lord, and feast upon his mercy and goodness, and drink of that living water that springeth up unto eternal life.

Every effort possible will be made by our worthy committee and members of that branch for the comfort and convenience of all who may attend.

We shall have some of the leading and most prominent ministers of the church to dispense the word of life to the people. We expect one of the best reunions ever held in the district; to this end let us all pray and labor.

The friends who are not members of the church are anxiously inquiring when and where it is to be held, and say they shall be with us; let not our membership by any means be slothful in their duties. May the way open for all that want to be with us to come, is our earnest prayer.

Your servant for Christ's sake,

HENRY KEMP.

DELTA, Colo., June 28.

Editors Herald:—We are keeping house about nine miles south of Delta, on what is known as the California mesa, an elevation about 5,500 feet above the sea. This mesa with the river bottom lands comprises an area of about 1,200 square miles and is dependent almost exclusively on a small river named Uncompahgre, heading in the region of the highest peak of mountains in Colorado by the same name, for water for irrigating purposes. The lower part of the valley, however, receives its water from the Gunnison River, quite a large, rapid stream. The water supply is so limited that only about one fourth of the entire amount is available for agricultural purposes.

This valley is surrounded on the east by the snow capped range of the Rockies and on the northwest and south mountains and hills covered with pine, spruce, and cedar timber, which supplies the inhabitants of the valley with lumber. It is said there is considerable game in the timbered region; bear, elk, deer, mountain sheep, etc.

With irrigation this valley produces the finest crops of wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, and vegetables; also fruits quite successfully, such as apples, peaches, pears, plums, strawberries, etc.; yet notwithstanding the elevated, healthful, and productive condition of atmosphere and soil, it is not paradise, neither the new heaven and new earth we are longing for; for here the mosquitoes and knats are as vigilant, earnest, and attentive in their work as the author of the distracted and perverted use of their organs can make them, even paying bills never contracted, and seem especially delighted in mounting the tenderfoot, and from dawn until sunset, and so on during the shades (if the cold does not chill them) do they prosecute their claims with much dignity and zeal most shocking to good taste and principle.

Located here is a little band of saints, considerably scattered, and most of them young in the faith. They seem to be struggling hard to maintain the dignity of their calling; also to obtain a sufficiency of this world's goods to be comfortable; but, like many others of our faith, they do not comprehend the benefits derived from the faithful observance of the temporal part of the law, thinking that it does not reach them, when in fact they are the ones to be most benefited by it; because the promise of God shelters them from the inconvenience of distressing poverty by his guarantee of protection; and some in saying that they are too poor to observe the law, unintentionally reflect upon the wisdom of him who gave it, for the law says "none are exempt."

The chief shepherd of this little flock has moved away, and they have had no meetings since last March. Bro. Thomas A. Park, priest, is doing what he can to nourish and feed them; but what the church needs in this valley is a missionary with presiding qualifications established here. They are holding regular meetings here, with a manifest interest. Last night the schoolhouse could not seat the congregation.

It is a very busy time among ranchmen, as they are just gathering their alfalfa.

I am not gaining in health as anticipated, two discourses per week is just about all I can stand; yet I am still hopeful. Love to all the brethren.

HENRY C. SMITH.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 4.

Editors Herald:—In the Brighamite Doctrine and Covenants, section 131, we read, commencing with the heading, followed by paragraphs 1 and 2: "Remarks of Joseph, the prophet, at Ramus, Illinois, May 16 and 17, 1843. In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; and in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this Order of the Priesthood; (meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage.)"

On the opposite page, section 132, we also read: "Revelation on the Eternity of the Marriage Covenant, including Plurality of Wives. Given through Joseph the Seer, in Nauvoo, Hancock County, Illinois, July 12, 1843."

Now for the consideration of a few facts. First, inasmuch as the "everlasting covenant" of sections 131 and 132 are one and the same, how are we to harmonize the statements therein contained. In section 131 we find Joseph in May 16 and 17, making statements to some one about something that had not as yet been revealed to him, and was not until fifty-five days afterwards. Now if Joseph Smith knew of the marriage covenant in May, and informed his friends of the fact, why was it necessary that God reveal it to him in July following. We have seen by the heading of section 132, already quoted, that God for the first time gave man this everlasting covenant July 12. The fact that Joseph knew of this marriage covenant (from their standpoint) before God revealed it to him, is sufficient proof that it is a fraud, and never came from God.

The facts are these, Joseph, the prophet of God, never stooped so low as to do the Devil's dirty work, by giving to the world such an abomination, and then to try and palm it off on the people as from God. Why intelligent people can be so completely hoodwinked, so completely led astray, when they have the naked word of God before them, is a mystery hard to solve. What a blunder the leaders in the west made when they let it pass into their history, that Zina D. Huntington was sealed to the prophet, October 27, 1841. —Historical Record, page 233, (Bro. Weld's letter in Herald, June 30, page 416.)

the people with a view to the proof of the authenticity or divinity of this abomination, when these very dates are its death. They being the only evidence necessary to prove that it is the greatest fraud ever imposed upon man. The climax of Satan's work upon earth. This woman (according to quotation above) was sealed to Joseph more than a year and nine months before God had revealed it to man. And then in the face of this fact, tell us that it is the only doctrine whereby man can enter the presence of the Father.

The writer is informed by Bro. George Hawley that while visiting in Utah, he was shown several printed affidavits purporting to be the sworn statements of women to the effect that they had been sealed to Joseph Smith; but what of these statements, if true. Only another proof that this purported revelation is a fraud, as they were sealed (according to their affidavits) to the prophet before he had received authority from God to teach or practice anything in it contained. Then to have the audacity to ask us to believe that this piece of the Devil's own handiwork came from God. If a people is to be pitied, this is that people. Blind and cannot see. Hoodwinked by the Devil and his emissaries. If not so, why will they stand by a religion so damning in its influence, a religion that will not stand the test of an open investigation. Think of it. They tell us that certain laws were given at a certain time or date to govern ever after the walks in life of its votaries, when at the same time their records show that this same law had obtained and was in practice months before God had given it to the world, or even to Joseph Smith. He may have been the author of part of section 131, but not all. That part of the section quoted inclosed in parenthesis never came from his lip or pen. This is the work if not the whole section of those bent on doing the Devil's dirty work. Their elders, in these parts, say, "O, we have forsaken or given up the practice of the things commanded to be observed in this everlasting covenant." Have they. If so, why? Were they wrong? If wrong, ever right. No, thus proving that by accepting this damnable doctrine this people departed from the faith they had once received.

H. N. DAVIS.

COLD WATER, Florida, July 12.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well, busily engaged in the work of my life. Just closed my debate with W. J. Haynes, at Berrydale, Florida. We had a peaceful time; much good was done and the saints cheered.

W. J. Haynes is a nice man, president of a high school and the best talent the Campbellites have in the South; but failed for the lack of truth. He made high claims for his scholarship all the way through but on the last day he said the word "elder" in Acts 14:23, Titus 1:5 was from two different Greek terms. I happened to be prepared for such mistakes and the poor fellow's scholarship went down never to rise during the debate.

We had preachers with us from Tennessee and other parts, people from Montgomery, Alabama, and other parts; hence reached several with the gospel. Debates conducted in a right manner are always conducive of good. I had it thrown at me during the debate that orders had been given not to meet Clark Braden in discussion any more. I could only reply that it was one man's opinion and not the church's. I hope never to see such a mistake in our papers again.

If any man preaches a doctrine to the people true or false he should defend it when called upon to do so, or go home and remain there. If he cannot debate we have plenty of men that can.

Bro. S. D. Allen acted as moderator for me and did splendidly. He is now over this district, the right man in the right place.

BEVIER, Mo., July 20.

Editors Herald:—On the 10th inst. I received a dispatch announcing the severe illness of my aged mother. I started west that evening and arrived here at noon on the 12th, and found Mother some better, but very weak. We now entertain strong hopes of her recovery. However, her advanced age and the present hot weather are somewhat against her speedy recovery. I shall return east just as soon as she is up and out of danger, which I trust will be very soon.

All matters of a local nature requiring adjustment should be reported to the presidents of the respective districts in the mission; namely, L. W. Powell, Temple, Lake County, Ohio, Kirtland district; C. Ed Miller, No. 280 Rebecca Street, Allegheny, Pennsylvania, Pittsburg district; James Moler, Limerick, Ohio, Ohio district; G. H. Godbey, Bellgrove, West Virginia, West Virginia district.

If the saints who are isolated from branches and who desire preaching in their localities will inform me of that fact, I will do my best to furnish a minister, providing that those who desire such labor will make an effort to meet the elders' expenses. The Bishop's agents have all they can do to care for the families of the missionaries. The following agents are anxiously waiting for the saints to send in their tithes and freewill offerings, as the funds are in a depleted condition: L. D. Ullom, 4728 Jacob Street, Wheeling, West Virginia; L. W. Powell, Temple, Lake County, Ohio; S. J. Jeffers, Arbaugh, Vinton County, Ohio; B. Beall, Goosecreek, West Virginia; Isaac Coffman, New Hope, Augusta County, Virginia.

The special conferences held at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and Kirtland, Ohio, were successes. Bro. E. L. Kelley's presence at the latter was greatly appreciated by the saints. His counsel was timely and his good instructions will surely result in much good to the cause. Come again, Bro. Kelley, you are always welcomed in the Central States Mission.

□ After much suffering and a great display of Christian patience our beloved sister, Jane A. Hamilton, passed peacefully away on the 2d inst., with the bright and cheering hope of coming forth in the glorious resurrection of the just, and of dwelling on earth with Christ and his people throughout the thousand years' reign. She will be greatly missed by those who knew her; she had many friends both in, and out of the church. Those of the traveling ministry will ever remember her kind hospitality. Truly another faithful saint and a noble woman of earth has been called from this world of sorrow, suffering and woe to rest in the paradise of Christ and bask in the sunlight of God. Her testimony to the truthfulness of the latter-day work was as strong in death as when in the full enjoyment of health. She also told the writer that she was ready to depart, and that all was well with her.

Bro. H. E. Moler and Francis Ebeling will operate the tent in the Pittsburg district. We hope the saints in Kirtland district will please send their contributions to Bro. L. W. Powell, Temple, Ohio, toward purchasing a tent to be used in the Kirtland district. Do not wait a week or two before you send, but send it right away, so that the tent can be used during the months of August, September, and October.

Yours in gospel bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 11.

Editors Herald:—This Lord's day afternoon, having just returned home from preaching service held by the nine Utah elders that are working in this city, I felt like penning a few lines. These men are doing a house-to-house canvass, holding but one preaching service a week. Elder Charles A. Streeper made quite a grave charge against our congenial colaborer, F. M. Sheehy. He says he lied about them shamefully, and after challenging them for a private discussion if they would furnish a representative man at Scranton, Pennsylvania, that they brought the man, but lo, F. M. absconded. How is that, Bro. F. M.? You better come down to the city of brotherly love and redeem your once good name and gentleness of disposition.

I feel sorry to hear such charges made against my brethren. However, we know there are two sides to most questions of that character. He also states that one of his brethren sent an order for some books and tracts to the Herald Office some time in February, and has received no reply or return of money. How is that, Bro. Frank? I told him to furnish me the name of books and tracts and amount of money order, and where purchased, and I would look the matter up. I await his reply.

Bro. Pitt gave us an excellent sermon in our hall June 27, also in the tent at Camden in the evening. His genial countenance did us all good. May success attend him in his work in Europe. He sails on the 17th from New York, for which place he left with his wife on the 30th of June. Bro. A. M. Baker discoursed for us this morn; subject, "Prophets as a necessity in the salvation of the human family." Bro. Bacon and Baker held forth in Germantown at three p. m. Bro. Kent spent the day watching the tent till the evening hour for preaching. Sisters Hull and Christy have been rendering them valuable assistance in the musical line. Last evening I spoke for them to about twenty children and possibly that many older ones. I made the effort to interest the children, which seemed to be appreciated by some at least. Bro. Baker baptized Bro. Angus' daughter, making two baptized during their effort at Camden. They located last Wednesday at Rosedale, about two and one half miles from their former location.

In the faith,
A. H. PARSONS.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 15.

Editors Herald:—In regard to the statement that money has been sent to this office and kept without sending goods ordered; will say that the charge is so indefinite that we cannot investigate it.

We received about eight hundred business communications in the month of February, and if we had the name of the party who claims to have sent the money, we could easily investigate the matter and be able to state whether such money had been received, and whether or not the goods had been sent. Without the name of the party sending or the name of the post office from which it was sent we will not attempt to say anything about the truth or falsity of the accusation. But let us assure you that we are just as anxious to supply these Utah elders with our literature as are the elders in the field to meet them in an open field and a fair fight; in fact, would furnish them such literature as we have showing the differences between the two churches, free, where we have any assurance that it would be read. Then why should we fail to send it when paid for?

A. S. COCHRAN, Secretary.
FRANK CRILEY, Business Manager.

DENISON, Iowa, July 20.

Editors Herald:—I wish to thank the saints of the several branches of the Galland's Grove district for their promptness in complying with the request of our last conference in raising and sending in the necessary means with which a new gospel tent has been purchased. Bro. J. F. McDowell and the writer came to this place on the 12th inst., and pitched the new tabernacle and put everything in shape to commence services the evening of the 15th. President Joseph Smith came here on the 14th by invitation of the college committee, to deliver a lecture in the college, and we prevailed on him to remain over the 15th and preach the opening and dedicatory discourse in the tabernacle. His lecture in the college and sermon in the tabernacle were well attended and favorably received by the people.

Our services at this place have been well attended thus far and we trust they may be as long as we remain in this city. Brethren and sisters from Deloit and Dow City have helped us much in the song service. The members here are alive to the interest of the work and are doing all they can to make our meetings a success.

Brn. W. W. Whiting and C. J. Carlson have closed tent meetings at Newell and are next to pitch their tabernacle and commence work at Rolfe, Iowa.

Reports coming to me show that the two-days' meeting held at Auburn by Brn. J. M. Baker, J. T. Turner, and William McKim of late was a success; also the one recently held at Harlan in charge of Brn. C. J. Hunt and W. D. Bullard was satisfactory to all concerned.

On Sunday the 11th four souls were added to the Lord by baptism near Marathon, who will become members of the Union branch. Bro. C. J. Carlson officiated.

The work moves forward slowly, though surely. The more faithful and energetic the local officers are, the better is the condition of the work.

In bonds,
CHARLES E. BUTTERWORTH.

MADISON, Wis., July 20.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed please find an excerpt from the Milwaukee Sentinel of June 3, to which I replied; but the Cream City paper thought my article was not available. I had better favor and success with the daily, which will also run it off in the weekly, and The Old Dane, another weekly, will have it too as well. Our meetings are well patronized here, and the people are becoming favorable, attentive, kind, and liberal.

Bro. and Sr. Wildermuth abide in the tent, both day and night, as also they look well to the culinary department. Elder Joshua Hackett sleeps in the large tent, and sure he is a rising figure and an able exponent of the faith and doctrine of this Church of Christ. He is zealous, bold, up and a coming, and all alive and aglow when standing to maintain and defend truth and right and assail error and fraud.

While our movable curtains were five miles south of here, in Mr. Bitnie's grove, the services were quite well attended. The family, and in fact the neighborhood, were kind and generous beyond our most sanguine expectations: for, behold, the faith and the advocates thereof were alike strangers to the people, save the Bro. and Sr. George Hook that lived in a mile of where the location was obtained. The old pair's married son lived near, and now the sad news startles us of his other son, a bright, single young man of education and promise being in the jaws and very throes of death. Some drunken vagabonds intended to treat the unsuspecting, wayward, intemperate, yet clever young man when zounds! they gave him a dose of the deadly bedbug poison they had. I fear he is cold in death as I trace these lines with a sympathetic sad heart.

A Bro. and Sr. Richards of his neighborhood came up here to be baptized, as also his sister and her husband of this place, the Roger's, went forth into the silvery sheen of Monona Lake. An old-time sister's daughter and her family live within a few rods of the tent. She heard Elder Savage a time or so about thirty years ago, but never heard more preaching till we arrived here and unfurled the canvas. Her husband, Mr. Hubbard D. Stevens, is a carpenter at the capital, employed by the State. Their daughters play their own organ for us, and they have read the Herald much, and sure, I do honestly think they are near the kingdom.

This is a city of about eighteen or twenty thousand inhabitants, the half of which are Catholics. The Chatauquan Assembly are in session for the next ten days here on the grounds fitted for that special annual occasion. Some celebrated characters and much and varied entertainments will call the people from near and far, for, indeed, the great Talmage is to be here on Sunday, the 25th. It is rather dry, but the sky is overcast now, and rain is at hand to come.

The heated term I stood all right, and am in the harness and at the plow. This thing of running home on every turn, and staying too long on church funds, is not calculated to build up confidence or fill up the coffers of the church, I judge, but, now, I bear in mind I must not "joggle the boat." It will all be right in the morning. So a kind adieu.

M. T. SHORT.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 19.

Editors Herald:—Our tent meetings are a success thus far, the audiences are increasing, and last night I addressed the largest crowd I ever reached in Council Bluffs. The tent is large and closely seated. It was packed and people stood up all around besides. I never had better attention. Our two days' meeting at Loveland was only fairly well attended. Bro. Butler was with me there. He goes to Boomer this week. That you may know I am not idle will say I have held fourteen meetings in nine days. Health fairly good. Hope to be ever busy.

Sincerely yours,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

WOODBINE, Iowa, July 21.

Editors Herald:—Since General Conference my labors have been confined to the Little Sioux district, preaching a few times in Woodbine. Elders Crabb, Smith, and Wight have preached there some. This branch numbers two hundred and eighteen members, but they are scattered about in Bigler's Grove, Twelve Mile Grove, and Six Mile Grove, besides the members in town; so that it is difficult for those outside of town to attend; hence our meetings are comparatively small because of the great distance from town, and this fact renders it difficult for branch officers to visit the saints. The officers generally being dependent upon their daily labor can ill afford to give their time to visiting the saints who are so widely scattered, in consequence of which there does not appear to the visitor that degree of spiritual life that should be visible in a branch of such numbers, yet I am glad to say there is a general desire and determination to live the religion of Jesus Christ, and I know of but little difficulty in the branch. Elder S. B. Kibler is president and is a good earnest worker and a faithful watchman.

The saints living in Bigler's Grove hold their weekly prayer meetings every Wednesday evening. Elders J. A. Donaldson and Dan Palmer preach there alternately on the Sabbaths; but the prayer meeting is in the charge of Teacher Allen Harper, a faithful man. I attended their first prayer meeting under his direction and I was pleased to see the able but humble manner in which it was conducted, as well as the zeal and love manifested among the saints.

On the 19th of June I attended a two-days' meeting in Bigler's Grove under the direction of Elder Donaldson, who occupies his Sabbaths in preaching the word in different localities very acceptably, and I was more than pleased to see the prompt attendance of the saints living there—parents and children, neatly attired and full of the spirit of true devotion; nor were the Sabbath school interests neglected. I preached twice to them on the Saturday, and Elders Fyrando and Donaldson occupied the Sabbath while I filled appointments elsewhere. I understood they had rousing meetings and great interest manifested, and on the coming Sabbath (July 25) several are to be baptized there.

I have preached several times at Missouri Valley Junction; audiences small and interest ditto, yet the saints there seem to love the work; but they labor under great difficulties. Elder D. R. Chambers is president of the branch and lives ten miles away (at Magnolia) and his time is divided with other locations, so the branch does not have the spiritual food it needs. Bro. David is an earnest worker. I had the pleasure of laboring with him and Priest James Emmerson at Sandy Point on the Missouri bottoms. They insisted upon my occupying the desk at every meeting, which I did five times, to very attentive audiences. I believe Brn. Crabb, Fyrando, and Chambers had labored there some. The few saints there seemed very much in earnest. One young lady was baptized by Bro. D. R. Chambers. Her baptism had been arranged for before I went there. She was the fruit of other men's labors than mine. Meetings were held in the United Brethren church, which Bro. C. has secured for future use, I believe.

On the 10th and 11th I attended a two-days' meeting at Persia, Elder Joseph Seddon in charge, Elders Donaldson and F. A. Smith of Omaha were in attendance and did excellent work in breaking the bread of life. There was good attendance and attention; I also occupied the evening of the 12th with a good audience and hope that good was done in all the meetings.

After visiting with the saints at Salem branch, Galland's Grove district, I attended a two-days' meeting at Six Mile Grove, under the direction of Elder S. B. Kibler; audiences small on Saturday, but on the Sabbath Bro. Houghten's beautiful grove was well filled with people. Elders Donaldson, Fyrando, and myself occupied the preaching hours, and a profitable season was spent. Elder James Crabb and myself held services in Six Mile Grove from the 18th of May to the 25th and had excellent attendance and attention. I believe I can say for the brethren that assisted on all these occasions, we were blessed with divine aid, and while the conversions may be few, if any, the gospel was declared in power and much assurance. The brethren and sisters in those places did their best in providing for the visiting friends and the ministry, and their kindness is appreciated.

Your brother in the one faith,
CHARLES DERRY.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 6.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED.

IMMEDIATELY following the false and deceptive idea that the earth will lay desolate, void, dark, and waste during the thousand years succeeding the first resurrection, is the doctrine that at the conclusion of the "little season" spoken of by John the Revelator (Rev. 20:3, 7-9), after the hosts of Gog and Magog are deceived by Satan, led against the camp of the saints and the beloved city, and fire comes down from heaven and devours them,—this is their ultimate destruction; that from thence onward they remain in an eternally unconscious condition; just as though they never had been.

But this doctrine is contradicted at once by the immediate context, as all who will read can see. John goes right on to state that "the dead, small and great, stand before God," to be judged, after the burning referred to; which implies the resurrection of "Gog and Magog," with all the wicked dead from Cain, the firstborn of men to that time.

There is no Bible evidence that those nations of Gog and Magog had ever yet died the first, the "appointed" death (Heb. 9:27), up to this fiery destruction. The wicked dead are not resurrected from the dead by the eternal power of their eternal Creator and endowed with intelligence qualifying to answer at the bar of infinite justice, to be deceived again by the Devil! Such an idea is absurd. If this absurd dogma be true, when do they stand "before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad" (2 Cor. 5:10)? "For we must all appear" there!

The doctrine of the putting the wicked out of conscious existence after the judgment is only the opposite extreme to the doctrine of relegating them to an imaginary lake of eternal fire and brimstone, supposed by some to exist somewhere, there to remain in misery eternally. Both these extreme views or dogmas are inconsistent with enlightened reason and the infinite justice of God. He is a God of infinite truth, justice, mercy, and love. He is no respecter of persons. He changes not. He loves sinners. (John 3:16; Rom. 5:6-11.) He loves them so strongly that he gave his Son to die that they may live.

The unchangeable God will never cease to love them. He cannot, without changing; and should he change in the least in one of his attributes, his perfection as God, is impaired. The least change in any person or thing that is perfect, renders it or him, less perfect. If sinners turn to God and serve him faithfully, he blesses and will save them in glory and immortality. If neither his love, goodness, nor mercy lead them to repentance of sin and to his service, he has declared that his justice will render to them "the fruit of their" doings, "and be filled with their own devices." God will "reform" them by his severe chastisement (Lev. 26:23). He will chasten them "as a man chasteneth his son, so the Lord thy God chasteneth thee." (Deut. 8:5). Please consider in your heart how you chasten your child, O man! God chasteneth even the heathen, that he may "correct" them (Ps. 94:10).

It may be that some of the wicked, —after their judgment, and during their punishment,—may, like some of the Jews anciently, be relentless and refuse the correction of the loving Father:—

O Lord, are not thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a rock: they have refused to return.—Jer. 5:3.

But notwithstanding the incorrigible relentlessness of some, and their refusal to "return," the object had in view in their being punished remains, and is plainly manifest in the text quoted. But, says the "Great Controversy," page 475:—

During the thousand years between the first and second resurrections, the judgment of the wicked takes place. The righteous reign as kings and priests unto God; and in union with Christ they judge the wicked, comparing their acts with the statute book, the Bible, and deciding every case according to the deeds done in the body. Then the portion which the wicked must suffer is meted out, according to their works; and it is written against their names in the book of death. Satan also and evil angels are judged by Christ and his people.

As the saints are all in heaven, and the earth desolate at the time of the judgment, according to this writer, and the wicked sleeping in unconsciousness; it follows that the saints who are kings and priests reigning, either reign over each other, the angels, or nothing. We are not informed where the wicked angels are, but the Devil is the lone star wanderer in the dark, desolate, chaotic earth! And the Savior and innumerable hosts of saints, during the thousand years, are all engaged in assigning "the portion which the wicked must suffer;" and after all the requirements of the court are complied with, the "portion" of each one is the same. They are resurrected, the sentence proclaimed; it is, "fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them." Burned up, "root and branch."

Some are destroyed as in a moment while others suffer many days. All are punished according to their deeds. The sins of the righteous have been transferred to Satan, the originator of evil, who must bear their penalty. Thus he is made to suffer not only for his own rebellion, but for all the sins which he has caused God's people to commit.—"Great Controversy," p. 488.

Thus all the wicked destroyed, all receive the same penalty, to be unconscious throughout endless ages to come! The saints instead of having their sins blotted out have them "transferred" to the Devil! According to this idea Isaiah was mistaken when he said of Christ:—

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. (Verse 6), and with his stripes we are healed. (Verse 5), For the transgression of my people was he stricken. . . . Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand. . . . for he shall bear their iniquities. . . . and he bare the sins of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.—Isa. 53:5-12.

Doubtless Satan will have much to answer for at the day of accounts. We hardly think it either fair or just to accredit him with giving the finishing touches to the great atonement work! Christ,—by the atonement on our behalf, by the "offering" or gift of himself,—secures the pardon of all who obey the gospel with an honest heart.

So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.—Heb. 9:28.

When, then, sinners turn to the Lord and come into covenant relation, he says:—

For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.—Heb. 8:12.

Sins of the righteous "transferred to Satan!" What divine authority is there for this idea? It is not another of those assumptions, for which the theory under examination is so famous? We are satisfied it is assumption—and without any foundation in fact or truth. But, we must have an antitype for the scapegoat! The goat for the sin offering typifies Christ; the scapegoat, the Devil. That's the theory? Where's the evidence?

Paul says, "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many." The Bible says of the scapegoat, he "shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited!" (Lev. 16:22). "And the Lord hath laid on him [Christ] the iniquities of us all," "and he [Christ] bare the sins of many" (Isa. 53:6, 12). Jesus could just as appropriately antitypically represent the slain goat and the scapegoat both, as he could the officiating priest, and the offering or victim offered by the priest. And no Bible believer will say such is not the case; the two animals of the type being of the same species, but represent the twofold office of Christ. But this deceptive theory robs our Lord of this "fold" of his great office, of "bearing the sins" of the truly repentant, and makes the Devil to share with our Lord in man's redemption; and then, lest he get the glory due his service, destroys him out of existence! A theory that so exalts (?) Satan we dislike.

Reader, go back to that judgment scene set forth in the "Great Controversy" and read it again; then go to the judgment scene as set forth so divinely graphic by our Lord, Matthew chapter 25; where, when he is coronated "King of kings and Lord of lords," and the nations stand before him:—

When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.—Matt. 25:31-33.

And as their works have been, so rewards are given, and sentence pronounced:—

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. . . . Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels. . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.—Matt. 25:31, 34, 41, 46.

In studying this lesson carefully we will not fail to notice the distinction our Savior here represents between the "my brethren" of Christ, and the "sheep" and the goats; and who belong to neither of the classes of nations here represented by sheep and goats. And further: Jesus is now gone "to prepare a place" for them (John 14:2, 3). This he said when here, "in the meridian of time" (Heb. 9:26, I. T.). But of the sheep, he says, they are to "inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Moreover, when the nations represented as sheep are assigned to that kingdom, the "brethren" of Christ have already been assigned their inheritance, and are participating with their Lord in the judgment work here represented:—

And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I also received of my Father.—Rev. 2:26, 27.

To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne.—Rev. 3:21.

The world to come does not consist of the saints being subjected to the angels. Paul says:—

For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak.—Heb. 2:5. Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? . . . Know ye not that we shall judge angels?—1 Cor. 6:2, 3.

And further, the ground upon which the nations represented as sheep (please do not get the idea that these nations are sheep or saints—followers of Christ) inherit their kingdom is not gospel obedience, or gospel service; for when entertaining Christ's brethren they seemed not to be cognizant of their saintly identity, any more than the nations represented by the goats were. But the Savior bases their right to the inheritance on the basis of the honorable, upright, humane, practical life,—and the merit inhering in good works done; while the salvation realized by saints involves, in addition to all these good works, a life-service to God, a living the life of Christ, consecrated and holy. Still further: the nations that stand before the judgment here represented are not to be resurrected at the second advent, as the saints are; but they evidently compose the subjects of the second resurrection, as presented to John in the vision (in Revelation 20:11-15), where after the great white throne appears, after the thousand years and the little season have expired, “the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened, and another book was opened, which is the book of life.” The book of life necessary at the final day! Yes, books, and the book of life, and the yet unsaved are judged. And after the judgment what?

And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.

The scene, as presented by our Savior and John, close alike in both cases.

But let us notice the principle upon which the judgment is conducted by the infinitely loving Father, and the Son who died that all might live. Do not forget that we have already discovered that God's punishment is de-signed of him to vindicate the righteousness of his sovereign authority and infinite justice, and to reform and correct the disobedient. Nor do we forget on our part, that at the end of the world,—this world, the second coming of Christ,—the incorrigibly wicked and impenitent, will be burned, as to the natural body. This corporeally dying will be the manner of their meeting the death once appointed.

So we read:—

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the hosts of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in prison, and after many days shall they be visited. Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously.—Isa. 24:21-23.

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts.—Mal. 4:1, 2, 3.

And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony was believed among you) in that day.—2 Thess. 1:7-10.

Notwithstanding the wicked be thus punished with everlasting destruction; notwithstanding they be burned “root and branch,” when Jesus comes “to be glorified in his saints;” yet shall they all be brought to life—be resurrected.

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.—1 Cor. 15:22, 23.

But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished.—Rev. 20:5.

Therefore, as by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life.—Rom. 5:18.

Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained: whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.—Acts 17:31.

These testimonies of holy writ bring us directly to the judgment day. All who shared not in the first resurrection stand before God, and the books are opened; also the book of life, and the resurrected hosts are to enter into examination on the life's work; their deeds, their works are to be weighed in the scales of infinite justice, wisdom, mercy, and love.

What of their varied opportunities for light and knowledge during their natural lives? Were they blessed with gospel opportunities prior to this great day? or, were they residents of heathen lands and partakers of their clouds and gloom? Had they the light of a Lot or a Solomon? Have they been told by some nineteenth century divine or theologian, that because they were heathens their fathers and forefathers were eternally lost, because the gospel was never sent to them, and that now they would be lost, too, unless they accepted the creed sent them? or, will “as many as have sinned without law” also “perish without law”?

Will those who have lived in ages and climes where and when the gospel was never heard by them, be saved or damned on the plea of ignorance? Is there any other way into the everlasting kingdom of God except to be born into it through or by the gospel—the principles of regeneration? (See John 3:5.) Will they be eternally lost because they had no opportunity to hear and be saved?

Will their circumstances, surroundings, and opportunities have no consideration by the great Judge of all at the last day? If not, where is infinite justice, mercy, and truth? Ah! the Judge of all the earth will do right. (Gen. 18:25.)

Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his veins.—Isa. 11:5.

Great in counsel, and mighty in work: for thine eyes are upon all the ways of the sons of men, to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings.—Jer. 32:19.

His “eyes are upon all the ways of the sons of men;” and to all shall be given according to the fruit of his doings.

This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.—John 3:19.

Without the light of the truth, then, there is no condemnation. Where there is “no law” there is no sin, or transgression. (Rom. 3:13; 7:7-9; 1 John 3:4.) And it is equally true, that unless mankind have the opportunity to avail themselves of gospel benefits, there is no celestial glory for them; for by it they may be regenerated, which is being born again into the kingdom of glory. Life and immortality is brought to light through the gospel. All the race will be brought from physical death to life again, by the atonement of Christ; but not necessarily to celestial glory. And having been redeemed from physical, natural death, there is no evidence that they will ever die physically any more.

It is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment.—Heb. 9:27.

Man does not pay the penalty in that case twice.

Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.—John 1:29.

If the cause of physical death be removed, why, therefore, will not the effect cease? If through him all men are justified to live—from physical death (Rom. 5:18), would it not be unjust for them to physically die again?

For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.—1 Cor. 15:25, 26.

Death was not destroyed in Christ's personal case till its grasp was loosed from him, and held him no more. He was not a victor over death till he broke its bands, thus "triumphing," over it (Col. 2:15). Only by delivering death's captives from its grasp can he gain the victory over it (Eph. 4:8), by taking its captives captive. "The earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain;" "when the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." (Isa. 26:21.) Man will not be corporeally slain again, after being resurrected, according to this statement.

But will they not share in the second death?

All whose names are not found "written in the book of life" will (Rev. 20:15). Death and hell, too, are cast into the lake of fire and brimstone. But according to the theory before us, the "lake" is physical death; and since "death" is to be cast into the lake, death is cast into itself, and of itself consumed! Death and hell cannot be cast into a lake of literal fire. How can death and hell be cast into a literal lake of literal fire?

There is a "sorer punishment" for some than physical death can be. Some of the wicked are not going to be let off so easy as that, in the day of judgment.

He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of Grace?—Heb. 10:28, 29.

Such is Paul's statement when speaking of the punishment of those who deny the truth after having come to the knowledge of it. But such a thing as one punishment being "sorer" than another, implies degrees of punishment. But this cannot be true if the theory of annihilation be correct; for in that case all are apportioned equally—all share alike; whereas, we are told that certain classes are to have "their part" in the lake (Rev. 21:8). Now notice what our Savior says on this subject:—

And that servant, which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required, and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.—Luke 12:47, 48.

This text teaches plainly, that the judgment of God will involve the principle of men's opportunities to receive or reject light; their treatment of those opportunities. And it involves the doctrine of degrees in punishment. Let us not forget, in this connection, that Christ is "God manifest"—revealed "in the flesh;" and he said, "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9); and that through the Son, therefore, is the Father's will and way of doing brought within man's comprehension. Hence it is we can see that in the judgment of the world, man's opportunities for light and his free disposition to accept or reject is one of the chief considerations in determining what the rewards and degrees of punishment shall be. In harmony with this divine principle in the eternal judgment we read that Jesus said of those who reject the full blaze of gospel light, as compared with those who may for good reasons be denied that privilege, but would have improved it,

And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city.—Matt. 10:14, 15.

Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not: Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment, than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.—Matt. 11:20-24.

Take this passage of scripture to the day of judgment, where and when the Savior applies it, and endeavor to harmonize it with the doctrine of the ultimate annihilation of the wicked, and the falsity and unreasonableness of meting out to all eternal physical death will be apparent.

The following is clear on the subject.

The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here.—Matt. 12:41, 42.

After having condemned the Jews, to whom Jesus and the gospel were sent, will God then condemn the Ninevites and the queen of the south, to the same fate as the Jews who rejected the glorious gospel of God? No earthly judge would be so wicked as that! Why represent the infinitely just God as more wicked and unjust than his creature man, just for the sake of a false and deceptive theory? Such presentation of the character of our loving Father only increases scepticism among reasonable men. It so outrages the ordinary sense of justice, to say nothing of infinite justice.

We quote from the words of the loving Master again. When speaking to his ministry, to whom he commits the gospel, the message of light, love, and glory:—

He that receiveth you receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in nowise lose his reward.—Matt. 10:40-42.

We do not understand these scriptures to teach that those who do not receive the gospel, yet are honorable men of the earth, will not be unpunished therefore; but they show how, and on what principle, all will be 'judged; every man according to his works.'

DECATUR DISTRICT FINANCES.

The following statement and explanation was authorized by the Decatur district at the June conference held at Allendale, Missouri, by resolution as follows:—

“Moved that a committee of three be appointed by chair to whom this matter be referred, with power to prepare and publish a statement as contemplated in the paper presented by Bro. Cochran, said statement to be approved by Bishop and his agent.”

The saints in general, and those of Decatur district in particular, are asked to notice carefully the following facts:—

The question has been asked, Why is it that the Decatur district, being one of the largest in the church, numerically, contributes much less financially than some of the smaller ones? This appears to be the case as shown by the Bishop's published report under heading of “Decatur District” found in Herald of May 26, 1897; but which does not contain all, as may readily be seen by this explanation.

The published report, page 328, shows that of the total amount $1,861.64, received by the agent of Decatur district, $987.30 came from the Bishop, deducting which, leaves as paid by members $874.34; which would be a small showing indeed for so large a district. But on pages 324 and 325 of said report, in receipts of Bishop, members of Decatur district, who paid the Bishop direct instead of his agent, contributed the following amounts: Cash $2,506.78; real estate $1,100.00; bills receivable $3,606.78. The district receives no credit in the published report for this total. Adding to this amount, the other item, $874.34, reported as paid by members of district, makes $4,481.12, as the amount actually paid in by the Decatur district, for which due credit should be given. This is a very fair showing, and more as it should be, being nearly two thousand dollars more than any other district, as shown by the published report. Of course the same condition may exist to some extent in other districts, but the great difference in this instance arises from the Bishop and his agent both living in the Decatur district and in the largest branch of the same.

From a consideration of the foregoing facts it would seem better that moneys paid in by members of the Decatur district should, so far as practicable, be paid to the agent, as it is quite impossible to give the district direct credit unless this is done.

It is not that in our giving we should or would be seen of men; but that all and each may receive due credit, and no undue reflection be cast upon any.

Our district should do much more than it has done in the past, and many more names—all the names—should appear upon the report for next year. The field is white for the harvest, which truly is great, and the laborers are few. Those few make a great sacrifice, not only in leaving home and loved ones, but in many cases sacrificing all prospects of obtaining a home and a competency for themselves. Let us remember that the law of God exempts them from leaving their families unless the church sustains their families. The Master has said (Revelation of 1887), “Let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.”

Let the agent, Bro. David Dancer, hear from every member the present year. You can send to him direct or pay to his solicitor, Bro. Asa S. Cochran, at Herald Office.

Respectfully submitted,

Com. { J. A. GUNSOLLEY.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference will convene with Blue Rapids branch, August 14. As full a representation as possible is hoped for. Come prepared for a good time. I would advise holding branch business meetings one week earlier than common, so as to get reports in time. Send reports by mail to Elder Henry Hart, Broughton, Kansas, by the 8th. We want a written report from those holding the priesthood, whether active or not. To scattered members I wish to say, if you still remain in the faith, manifest it by coming out, so we may know where you are, and what chances there are for preaching in your vicinity. This should be a day of activity by everyone that is “on the Lord's side.” Those who are striving to block the gospel train better get in line while your ticket is good. Now let everyone learn their duty and put their shoulder to the wheel and help move God's chariot along. Yours for righteousness' sake.

HENRY HART, Dist. Pres.

REUNION NOTICES.

The reunion of Northern and Central districts of California will be held at Bushrod Park, Oakland, September 3, to last ten days. Take the Consolidated and Grove Street line street cars to the grounds. Tell the conductors where you wish to go and they will direct you. Any desiring special information, please address J. M. Cockerton, No. 153 Nineteenth Street, Oakland, California. Special railroad rates will be secured, and all should use the certificates, so as to return for one third fare. Fifty railroad certificates must be used or no rebate will be allowed. The certificates will be sent to all who wish them by addressing C. A. Parkin, No. 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California. Present your certificate to be signed (after signing it yourself where it says "Attendant") where and when you buy your ticket. C. A. PARKIN.

The reunion of the Southeastern district will be held in a beautiful grove at Arrington Station, Wayne County, on the Air Line railroad, beginning Friday, October 1, continuing until the 10th, with the conference and Sunday school convention included; time for each will be specified in the near future. Pasturage and good water in abundance. Let each begin making arrangements for tents and prepare to be there.

P. S.—The date set for the reunion by the conference at Brush Creek, of said district, was changed by the reunion committees, owing to a letter from Elder I. N. White, missionary in charge, stating he could not attend on date fixed. Saints and friends being desirous of his presence thought best to change date within his reach.

Hope it will be satisfactory to all.

SECRETARY.

Having been appointed a committee on tents, board, and lodging for and in behalf of Southwest Missouri reunion at Nevada, Missouri, from August 27 to September 5, I shall request all concerned to write me as soon as possible, making their wants known. Those wanting tents or rooms will please give size. Those wanting board, or board and lodging, should report in proper time, so as to prevent disappointment to myself and others. Prices on tents, cots, rooms, board, and lodging will be given later on. Send stamp for an answer.

JASPER CITY, MISSOURI.

A reunion of the saints of Oklahoma will be held September 3 to 13, in Canadian County, in Mr. Boyd's grove, ten miles east and two south of Okarche; one west and two north of Mathewson P. O.; also about thirty-five miles northwest of Oklahoma City, and twenty miles west of Edmond. Inasmuch as the saints are scattered, and have been deprived of the privilege of association in church work, we hope they will avail themselves of this opportunity of becoming acquainted, and uniting to spread the work in this new field. Let us assemble with the Spirit, and earnestly invoke the divine favor, that when we separate and go to our respective homes in the various parts of the mission, we may be stimulated to labor more diligently for the establishment of Zion.

The Sunday school work will receive special attention, and we invite all to come prepared to take hold and work.

For further information write W. S. Macrae, Nicely, Oklahoma.

THE WHITSITT TROUBLE AGAIN.

THE controversy which raged all last year in the Southern Baptist Church concerning certain statements made in an encyclopedic article by Rev. Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, president of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky, as to the historical basis of the rite of baptism by immersion (see Literary Digest, May 23 and July 25, 1896), was finally settled, so it was generally supposed, at the Southern Baptist convention at Wilmington last May, when Dr. Whitsitt retracted some things which he had written, and an amicable understanding was apparently arrived at all around. But the matter has not been allowed to rest. At a meeting held in June the Kentucky General Association, a Baptist body, determined by vote of 106 to 67 not to let the agitation against Dr. Whitsitt drop. The resolutions adopted urge the trustees of the Louisville Seminary to insist upon "the retirement of Dr. W. H. Whitsitt from the institution and from the chair of Church History."

Giving a resume of the action of the association relative to Dr. Whitsitt, The Independent says: "If, under the economy of grace, stupidity counted as a sin, the Kentucky Association would be as scarlet." The Examiner

(Baptist, New York) detailing the same action, says:—

"This is cool enough to make an iceberg shiver. Well, we presume the trustees will consider the recommendation in the light of the action of the more representative body which met at Wilmington not long ago and quietly ignore it. We admire pluck and endurance in a fight for principle, even to the transmission of it from 'bleeding sire to son'; but the warfare upon Dr. Whitsitt on account of a difference of opinion with regard to a mere matter of historical interest looks to us more like a 'Kentucky feud,' of the vendetta type than a manful struggle for a principle. What Baptist cause would suffer, indeed, were Dr. Whitsitt's contention shown to be absolutely true? What Baptist principle would gain if he were proved mistaken? It would still be our duty to follow Christ in baptism—that is, to be Baptists—if from the death of John the apostle to this present hour not one believer had been immersed on confession of his faith. Our churches do not rest on tradition or superstition, but on the teachings of our Lord and the inspired apostles, as revealed to us in the Holy Scriptures. No matter what the Fathers did, we must obey Christ—and that covers the whole case."

The Journal and Messenger (Baptist, Cincinnati) thus refers to the present situation:—

"It is evident enough that there is another side to be heard before Dr. Whitsitt is retired from the seminary, and that it may turn out that a good many brethren in Kentucky will find themselves in the minority yet, and that, after all Dr. Whitsitt is in about as thorough 'touch with the denomination' as they themselves are. We are not convinced that landmarkism and 'church-successionism' are essential to a Baptist, and must be held by one who would be 'in touch with the denomination.' There are strong men in Kentucky on the side of Dr. Whitsitt, and it is by no means certain that the opposition to him can carry its points in the Southern Baptist convention. The Biblical Recorder, of North Carolina, detailing the process by which the vote was carried, sums up as follows: 'It appears to us that this was a piece of political work; and if it was, it is a disgrace. Dr. Whitsitt has done all that a man can do; he has sought to effect an honorable peace. In the name of God, we should have it.' The Alabama Baptist can see no good reason for reviving a controversy which was supposed to be settled at Wilmington, and regards it as peculiarly fortunate that the management of the seminary is in the hands of a board of trustees, rather than in those of a popular body like the Southern Baptist convention or the Kentucky convention."

The Watchman (Baptist, Boston) says:—

"The real contest in Kentucky, and wherever the Whitsitt controversy is now carried, will not be between those who agree with Dr. Whitsitt or differ from him as to certain historical facts; it will be between the ritualistic party in the Southern churches, and those who stand for the liberty and spirituality of the Gospel. It is the relation of his views to a certain theory of 'churchly extension' which sets his opponents going. In suffering the contest to be transferred to this ground Dr. Whitsitt's opponents have taken up a position which is radically indefensible and contrary to the spirit and genius of the Baptist churches. We regret that our Southern brethren are obliged to go through this conflict, but there is no manner of doubt that Dr. Whitsitt's opponents are seeking to incorporate into our Southern churches a test of fellowship and of orthodoxy to which the Scriptures give no warrant. There are occasions when we cannot, for the sake of peace, suffer our brethren to bind upon our necks a yoke which the gospel repudiates."—Literary Digest.

RUSSIAN HOPES OF THE CONQUEST OF INDIA.

It is pretty generally admitted by persons acquainted with India that Great Britain will hold this richest of the earth's countries as long as she pleases if the task of driving her out is to be left to the natives. A very different view is taken when the possibility of interference on the part of Russia is suggested. We find in The Buddhist, Colombo, an article by Mr. O'Dwyer, Director of Land Records and Agriculture in the Punjaub, in which he expresses the opinion that, sooner or later, Great Britain must defend India against the hosts of the Great White Czar. Mr. O'Dwyer has visited the Russians in Central Asia, and is fully acquainted with their views. We take the following from his account:—

“Three questions may be put with regard to this matter: 1. Do educated Russians, civil and military, regard the conquest of India feasible? 2. Do they regard it as expedient and desirable? 3. Are they anxious to bring it about at an early date? Practically all three questions must be answered in the affirmative. The Russians see that China, Persia, and the Asiatic provinces of Turkey are at their mercy, that the way is open to them into Afghanistan, that the Afghans are greedy for the spoil of India and will make common cause with them, and that the way is open to Russia when she becomes perfectly mistress of Afghanistan. The conquest of India is regarded by the Russians as their mission or destiny, and as anything but a formidable task. They believe that the native populations are sick of British rule, which, for selfish ends, is keeping them in dark ignorance and has, by squeezing out of them all it can, reduced them to the lowest depths of poverty. The Russians further cherish the illusion that the loyalty of the native army to the British Government is not to be relied upon, and that, in any case, it contains no good fighting material and could never stand up to an European foe. Finally, the nervous apprehension with which, with some show of reason, they credit the English in India, leads the Russians to believe that Englishmen themselves feel their position to be extremely insecure, so that any shock from outside would shake it to the very center. The British soldier they regard as pampered, insubordinate, impatient of discipline, and altogether unable to hold out against the hardy Cossacks in a long and weary campaign. The Russian peasant may be an easy-going, peace-loving individual, but educated Russians are extraordinarily patriotic and ambitious, and the successes which have attended their arms and diplomacy during the past twenty years have inspired them with the belief that it is the destiny of the Slav to expand in every possible direction. They believe that they see decrepitude stealing over the British Empire, while their own is expanding with all the vigorous buoyancy of youth, and they proudly say ‘the twentieth century is for us.’”—Literary Digest.

Mr. Charles A. Conant, of the New York Journal of Commerce, contributes to the American Monthly Review of Reviews for August an admirable exposition of the new tariff law. His article is intended to tell the business man what he may expect from the operation of the new schedules. So much of the newspaper discussion of the Dingley bill has been warped by partisanship that the ordinary citizen is at a loss to know the real animus of the measure or its probable bearings on individual and general interests. Mr. Conant writes with moderation and candor; his article is calculated to enlighten the public on a topic that requires first of all impartiality in treatment.

THE CHURCH UNION FOR AUGUST.

The Church Union has arranged for a series of articles running through the coming months on present day themes and by thoughtful and earnest men, as follows:

Religion in the Public Schools, Rev. J. H. Ecob, D. D., in September.

Religion and citizenship, Rev. Newman Smyth, D. D., in October.

The Intermediate State, Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D. D., in November.

Religion in Business, Rev. Washington Gladden, D. D., in December.

The New Theology, Rev. Benjamin W. Bacon, D. D., of Yale Theological Seminary, in January.

THE SAINTS' HERALD REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD will be fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

MORMON MISSIONS.

UNDER this head the editor of the State Republican, published at Lansing, the capital city of Michigan, discourses in his issue for Tuesday, June 15, 1897, as follows:—

There will be very general surprise at the information contained in a special letter to the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune from Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, regarding the work of Mormon missionaries in that part of Pennsylvania, and incidentally of their work in other parts of the United States and in foreign countries. The congressional prohibition of polygamy has not, in the least, abated the zeal of the Church of Latter Day Saints, though now their evangelists are not publicly teaching polygamy, but keeping close to the other peculiar tenets of the faith of Joseph Smith.

No evangelical church has a more systematic espionage of its missionaries, and many have a less extensive mission system. There are now 1,300 Mormon missionaries laboring in many countries, and each one reporting to the head of the denomination in Salt Lake City. In many localities they have been spurned and driven out, but generally they succeed in making converts, and it is asserted that the church is having a phenomenal growth. So long as they keep within the bounds of decency and the laws of the United States there cannot, perhaps, be any constitutional objection to their evangelical endeavors. It is not likely, in this enlightened age, that their conversions will be so numerous as to make the increasing power of the church threatening or dangerous. But at the same time the past reputation of the church for public immorality should be notice to the authorities in communities where its missionaries appear, that their meetings and their daily private walks should be the objects of official concern, to the end that decency and order may prevail.

It is evident that the foregoing was written of the Utah Church, and not the Reorganization. We give it insertion in HERALD because of the apparent tinge of proscriptive caution found in the closing sentence.

Whether deserved or not, the course pursued by our Utah contemporary religionists has given rise and consequence to public distrust of their protestations of good faith and fair dealing, and as a result wherever the ministry of that body of people go suspicion attends upon their footsteps.

We regret this for the reason that the impression is made, and we believe sometimes made purposely by these missionaries, that the elders of the church in the West and the elders of the Reorganization are but integral parts of one faith, and our elders suffer a portion of this distrust as a consequence. We, therefore wish it was practicable for the representatives from the Utah Church to convince the public, as a rule, that they have really discarded the dogma of plural marriage, and are honestly trying to live as God has commanded, "he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land."

WOODBINE ANNUAL REUNION.

WE have visited the grounds on which the Reunion at Woodbine, Harrison County, Iowa, from September 3 to 13 will be held; and find them in excellent condition; much drier than last year. The water of this year's floods has at no time been over the places where the big tent and its outlying tented city will stand; the approaches are clear from mud, and altogether the prospect is fairer than last year at this time.

The committees have the matter well in hand and no pains will be spared to make the meeting a success. No apprehension regarding the availability of the grounds, or the excellency of the water supply need be indulged in. The saints committee, Brn. S. B. Kibler, S. C. Diggle, P. C. Kemmish, H. D. Swain, F. C. Oviatt, and A. M. Fyrando, are awake to the situation, and the citizens' committee are equally ready to push the preparations along; so that all who may be thinking of attending this annual meeting may rest assured that so far as the facilities, grounds, and accessories are concerned there will be no lack, or break to prevent a realization of the enjoyment hoped for on the occasion.

This reunion is to the church, especially of the west, what the Semianual Conference was, and is looked forward to with confidence as a time when the association of those holding the one faith may be held with spiritual profit and pleasure, and a rest and relaxation from the yearly labor may be indulged in without unnecessary anxiety about the surroundings.

It is a little to be regretted that the committee of the Maysville, Missouri, reunion chose the same dates as did the Woodbine committee, but that is not the fault of the latter, as notice of the time set by them was given in the HERALD for May 5. Undoubtedly harmony will prevail at both, and much good result. It is confidently expected that there will be a much larger attendance than last year.

HISTORY OF MONROE COUNTY, IOWA.

MR. FRANK HICKENLOOPER, the author, has sent us a copy of the above work, directing the book to "The Reorganized Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints."

From chapter four of the work we quote:—

At this time [1848, Ed.] many of the Mormons of Illinois, in making their hegira from Nauvoo, had located temporarily in different localities in southern Iowa, to rest and recuperate before proceeding onward across the plains to the Salt Lake valley, whither Joseph Smith, their saint and leader, had prophesied they should be gathered under the immediate supervision of the Lord.

Monroe County lies immediately north of Appanoose, the second county east of Decatur, where Lamoni is located, hence the following is interesting to all the saints:—

All the territory lying directly west of Monroe County, as far west as the Missouri River, was attached to Monroe for election and judicial purposes.

This included the since organized counties of Lucas, Clark, Union, Adams, Montgomery, and Mills. Lucas was settled first by the Mormons.

Mr. Hickenlooper says of some of these that they remained and became "conspicuous and highly esteemed families;" and adds:—

In this digression it is but just to add that these apostates had joined the Mormon Church before the doctrine of polygamy had been ingrafted into their creed; consequently none of them either sanctioned or practiced polygamy, as they withdrew from the church as soon as Brigham Young began to inculcate polygamy in the doctrines of the sect.—History of Monroe County, Iowa, p. 34.

The Whigs and the Democrats of the district of territory then known as Monroe County had a very pretty political quarrel, and each tried to secure the Mormon vote. The Board of County Commissioners, all Democrats, made the following order:—

Ordered by said Board, that that portion of country called Pottawattamie County, which lies directly west from Monroe County, be organized into a township, and that Cainsville be an election precinct in said township, and that the election be held at the Council House in said village; and that Charles Bird, Henry Miller, and William Huntington be appointed judges of said election; and that the boundaries of said township extend east as far as the east Nishnabotna.

Mr. Hickenlooper expressed the opinion that this movement was a rather shrewd one on the part of the Democrats, it being believed by them that the Mormons were Democrats and would vote with that side of the party politics; the candidates for congress being Daniel F. Miller of Keokuk for the Whigs; and William Thompson of Mt. Pleasant for the Democrats. Doubts were expressed by some whether the Pottawattamie precinct as created in this order was within the limit of territory "lying immediately west of Monroe County," the northern line of Monroe County being twenty miles south of the south line of Pottawattamie (Mills County lying between). To settle this doubt Judge Mason and Judge Weber were sent out to look the matter up. It is to be presumed that these judges were favorable to the Democracy for they not only reported that the territory was within the limits, but, "under the rose," that the inhabitants were solidly Democratic. Mr. Hickenlooper continues:—

This was encouraging news to the party, but when the matter leaked out, and the design of the scheme became fully apparent to the Whigs, the latter were thrown into great consternation. Emissaries were dispatched by both parties to the Mormon stronghold, to negotiate for the Mormon vote. Their woes and persecutions were duly commiserated by the agents of each party. They were petted and fondled and pitied and cajoled like the laboring classes are to-day, by political demagogues. But the unexpected was destined to occur at that day as well as at the present. The Mormons, at the election on the 7th day of August, 1848, voted solidly for the Whig candidate.—History of Monroe County, Iowa, page 35.

Of this result Mr. Hickenlooper writes:—

It is charged that the Democrats offered but one thousand dollars for their votes, while the Whigs raised the amount to twelve hundred, and thereby secured the vote. While this assertion may be true, it is equally probable that the Mormons had lost faith in the Democratic party, and wanted to experiment on a change of administration. Under the existing administration they had been driven from place to place and had failed to secure the rights of religious liberty, as they claimed was guaranteed them under the Constitution, and in their exasperation they probably voted the Whig ticket through mere caprice, or through a desire to experiment with the Whig doctrine.—History of Monroe County, pages 35, 36.

If Mr. Hickenlooper had been aware that Daniel F. Miller was the man trusted as the agent on the part of the Mormons, to treat with Kilbourn, of Fort Madison, on the part of the people of eastern Iowa, providing for the expulsion of the Mormons, he would most likely have found a personal motive for the vote of the Mormons. But, whatever the motive, the vote was not permitted success; for the Democratic element intervened, the Cainsville poll book was stolen from the returns, and Mr. Thompson returned. This was contested by Miller; and was sent back by Congress to be decided in the courts. At the trial Judge Mason appeared for Thompson, and pulling from his pocket what he supposed was written authority from his client, displayed before the court and the attorneys the missing poll book. The court gave the decision to Miller, and he took the seat he was entitled to. Congress ordered a new election to take place in September, 1850, and Miller was chosen and served during the last session of the 31st Congress.

This brief resume of the affairs of that period will interest many of the elders and members, for the reason that it puts the light of impartial history upon events long past and but partially understood even at the time of their occurring; and it justifies the verdict of the Mormons in seeking to try a change in political management, if any justification is needed in the case.

Mr. Daniel F. Miller lived to be a very old man, and always retained a warm friendship and steady esteem for the Mormons, who stood by him in that eventful time.

We appreciate Mr. Hickenlooper's courtesy, and thank him for the book; it has given us a pleasing and profitable hour.

SCIOTO VALLEY MOUND EXPLORATIONS.

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, July 11.—The Ohio Archæological and Historical Society has been conducting explorations among the ancient mounds and village sites of the Scioto Valley. Mr. Loveberry, the field assistant, telegraphed his chief, Professor Morehead, at Columbus that an important find had been made on Paint Creek, opposite Bourneville, Ross County, and Professor Morehead reached the scene of the discovery immediately.

A village site occupied by the mound builders had been uncovered, and continued digging showed that some thirty acres had been occupied. This represents a population of 2,000 or more people. About four feet below the present surface many deer, bear, buffalo, turkey, fish, and bird bones are found, as well as large quantities of ashes. Fragments of pottery, mussel shells made into hoes, and flint implements were uncovered in profusion.

Mounds containing skeletons had often been explored, but there was little light shed on the daily and domestic life of these people. This great village site shows how they lived, what they ate, and how they prepared their food. Its exploration is therefore of great importance to science and will settle many questions as to how the mound builders lived and what they did from day to day.

EXPLANATION OF PSALMS 16: 8.

THE passage in Psalms 16: 8, "For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption," is repeated in Acts 2: 27, with a comma only at the word hell, whereas, in Psalms it is a semicolon.

From a to us mistaken rendering of the passage, in verse 31, of Acts, seems to carry the idea that both the pronouns "his" and "thine," refer to David, which is manifestly incorrect.

The Psalmist is writing of his own unfortunate condition; and notwithstanding his own conscious want of merit, and his sense of shame for his unworthiness, he consoles himself with the thought that there would be a chance for him (David) in the resurrection, because that notwithstanding his spirit might, after death, be confined in the prison, or hell, God would not leave it there; nor suffer the Holy One, Jesus, to see corruption; but by the power of the resurrection both would be brought out from the bondage of the body to death.

When the Psalmist wrote, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell," he referred to himself; and when he wrote, "Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption," he referred to the Savior. It was therefore David's soul that was not left in hell, and Jesus, the Holy One, who did not see corruption, a perfectly natural conclusion from a consideration of the two passages.

THE Denison, Iowa, Review of July 21 contains the following concerning Pres. Joseph Smith's late lecture before the college students of that city:—

JOSEPH SMITH'S LECTURE.

The college chapel was well filled on last Wednesday evening to hear the lecture by Rev. Joseph Smith, Jr. It was a pleasant evening, and many besides the school came to hear him. From the surrounding vicinity many came in to avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this noted man.

He took for his subject, "An intelligent personal liberty the safeguard of the State." His treatment of the theme was practical and businesslike from the start. No great effort at oratory, but an earnestness of manner inspired his audience with a confidence in the man, and aroused the expectation of all in the house.

This expectation was not disappointed; for a more thorough exposition of "personal liberty" and its relation to the intelligence of the individual could not be desired. Rev. Smith is conservative, yet sufficiently progressive to take in all the great reforms so long as they are conducted along the lines approved by the experience of the past.

Two traits of the man were apparent in every stage of the lecture. First was his firm and settled conviction on the temperance question. He grapples with this problem from the standpoint of a philosopher who gives due regard to all the claims of the so-called "personal liberty," which is the sole argument of the opponents of this movement. Second was his warm and persistent advocacy of the great cause of a broader and higher education. In a republic, decrees of the "social compact" can be enforced by two means only; force and concession. Force is only justifiable in cases of emergency, when anarchy threaten the safety of the state. Concession must be depended upon. Concession to the interest of all only comes from an intelligent understanding of that interest, and its reflex effect upon the individual. Intelligence, education, and culture is the basis of good citizenship; good citizenship is the hope of the state. Such were the thoughts the venerable father sought to impress upon the young of our day.

PROGRESS OF PUBLISHING DEPARTMENT.

It is the desire of those in direct charge of the business department of the Herald Office that its patrons be informed concerning the progress made during the past two years of its operation, that they may better understand its condition and future prospects and what is being done through it to advance the interests of the work in the churches and abroad. On behalf of the business management therefore, and for the information of the saints, the following review is presented in summary.

THE THREE STANDARD BOOKS.

Recognizing the importance of the three standard books being placed within the reach of all—saints and others—the Inspired Translation of the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants have been issued in cheap but durable bindings at popular prices at a reduction of one third in price of regular editions. This step has resulted in placing these valuable works in the hands of thousands who otherwise probably would not have purchased them, for thousands of the cheaper edition have been sold.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

Six thousand copies of the Saints' Hymnal have been published and mailed and are now doing duty in the various branches and among the scattered saints. This work was also issued at a very reasonable price, besides which a special low priced word edition was published. The results have been satisfactory in the added development of the song service, and thus added to the interest of church work.

THE CHURCH HISTORY.

The church from its early days has been calling for an authentic church history. After many years of patient waiting this valuable addition to our literature has been provided and volumes 1 and 2 are now at the disposal of the church worker and investigator. Volume 1 has for some time been on sale. Volume 2 is in press and will be in the binders' hands and made ready for mailing in a short time. A good order list is desired; patrons will be pleased with the work. The first volume began with the birth of Joseph Smith in 1805 and ended with the church in Ohio and Missouri at the close of the year 1835. Volume 2 resumes with the opening of the year 1836 and concludes with the martyrdom at Carthage in 1844. These two volumes have been placed on the market at the lowest possible price, and at an outlay of about $3,000. This work should be in every family of the saints, that they may have an understanding of the general conditions of the church since its organization and be prepared to appreciate, to advocate, and to defend it.

NEW EDITION DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

In connection with the Church History, a new edition of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants has been issued. This edition is printed from new type. It has been carefully compared with the 1835—the original Kirtland edition, also with the Nauvoo edition, and some typographical errors corrected and omissions supplied. The numbers in chapter and page headings have been given in Arabic numerals, instead of Roman letters as heretofore, thus facilitating prompt reference to sections. A revised, corrected, and enlarged concordance has been added. The Lectures on Faith have been omitted. This edition has been published at a cost of $500. Orders solicited; prices the same as former editions; styles of binding to suit purchasers. See advertisements.

THE HERALD REDUCED IN PRICE.

To cap the climax in the good work the church paper has been reduced in price—for one year—in order to give its patrons the opportunity of making the reduction a permanent one. This lessens the price from $2.00 to $1.50. The conditions of this reduction have already been published—see advertisement. They require payment in advance.

It must be apparent that a lessening of one fourth of the income from the SAINTS' HERALD will require a hearty and prompt response from its readers. It is the wish of the Business Manager that each subscriber endeavor to obtain one or more new subscribers. Will not the readers interest themselves in behalf of the church organ in response to this effort to meet their wishes and advance their interests? It is necessary that increased sales of church works be made and on a cash basis, so far as possible. This method enables the Herald Office to purchase at reduced prices and to discount its bills. To subscribers who fail to pay in advance the price of HERALD will be $2.00 as heretofore.

TO FOREIGN SUBSCRIBERS.

The reduction is also offered to our foreign subscribers, notwithstanding the higher rates of postage. The Hope is sent to foreign countries at 50 cents per year, though the mailing alone costs 52 cents per annum to single subscribers.

IMPROVED SYSTEM OF BINDING.

The system of bookbinding has undergone an entire change, and as a result not a single complaint has been received against a book bound in the past fifteen months. The work is substantial, neat, and attractive.

It is unnecessary to state further concerning the usefulness of the publishing department to the work, nor to urge that its interests be considered and extended. In its behalf we thank the saints for their patronage and solicit their hearty, effective coöperation in the interests of the general work.

ADDRESSES WANTED.

OUR brethren in the business department receive numerous letters like the following, without full name, address, or anything to indicate who, what, or where they are from:—

Dear Sir:—Send late revelation size for insertion Book of Covenants, and oblige, BOULN.

“Bouln” is to them a mysterious, unknown quantity. Both names and address should be given in full; or name and post office address of party to whom goods are to be sent, if ordered for another. The postmaster's stamp sometimes fails to print legibly, and is not to be depended upon to furnish an address.

A little care and attention will avoid a frequent cause of complaint concerning orders delayed by the causes named.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. H. HILLIARD, of the Bishopric, is in California, laboring in the interests of the work. He wrote from Santa Ana, July 23:—

Am well as usual and trying to impress the saints with the necessity of doing their duty. I am to occupy two or three nights in the G. A. R. Hall in Santa Ana, the first of next week, then on to San Bernardino. I begin to-night at Garden Grove, five miles out of town.

Bro. M. M. Turpen, Moberly, Missouri, July 29:—

We are having very attentive congregations, and some express themselves as being convinced of the truth of the angel's message, and will obey it at no distant day, we believe. Kind regards to all.

Bro. Henry Sparling, Bruner, Missouri, July 25:—

The district conference held at Bruner proved to be a grand success. The Spirit of the Master was with us from first to last: quite a number were present, some coming a hundred miles. Bro. I. N. White was with us, and I need not say that his sermons and counsel were highly appreciated. The sermons were preached by Brn. White, C. M. Bootman, and the writer. Bro. Don Schofield was ordained to the office of priest. The Spirit was present and words of encouragement given the brother. If he remains humble he will do good to his fellow man and become a bright and shining light in this great latter-day work. At the close of conference they baptized one, a noble man highly respected by all. We pray God he may continue humble and God will bless him. Bro. I. N. White and self take train to Springfield to continue meeting to-night.

Elder Columbus Scott, Des Moines, Iowa, July 28:—

I came from Boone yesterday to aid for two or three evenings in services being held in the U. B. church here on the west side. Brn. Gunsolley and Hiatt get the use of the church free of charge for a number of services. Brethren do janitor work and find oil for lights. Bro. Roth is at Oskaloosa with the tent; Bro. E. B. Morgan goes to Runnels for this evening, and on Friday we go to Boone for a time, to aid Bro. W. C. Nirk in the work there. Six baptized recently at Perry, among them the mother and husband of Sr. Cappa Doss, also one of her daughters, a daughter of Sr. Mary Doss, and one of the children of Bro. J. W. Morgan. How happy are those families! Bro. Gideon Hawley's daughters, Nella, Adell, and Chloe, were at Perry while the tent was there. Sr. Nellie Martin lives there, and all being good singers, greatly aided in tent work. We feel that we are trying to do something for the great work, and ask the prayers of saints that we abide.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. U. W. GREENE'S letter in this number refers to a religious movement, somewhat remarkable in its claims, now holding sessions at Old Orchard, Maine, described somewhat sensationally in the Bangor Commercial of July 9. This movement, like similar ones, may not be known or heard from in a few years to come; or, on the other hand, it may flourish for years. However, time will fully reveal its real character and make manifest that it is but the production of man, hence not permanent in its character. It has taken time to test the character of many movements, but the shaking time has come for all, and naught but the true is to remain. In this instance truth has again been partially counterfeited, but only partially; for the features that distinguish false movements from the truth are always found to be plain and pronounced, on examination.

A late law in the State of New York which prohibits State convicts from being employed in skilled industries has, it is stated, brought a number of the convicts to insanity through enforced idleness.

Brazilian troops have defeated the fanatical insurgents and driven them from the city of Cannos into the forests, pursuing them.

Minutes of the Downey, California, reunion, held July 9-19, indicate an all-around season of spiritual enjoyment and general good to the cause in the Southern California district. Brn. G. H. Hilliard, A. C. Barmore, R. J. Parker, D. L. Harris, A. Carmichael, N. Van Fleet and others of the ministry were present. We have been obliged to cease publishing reunion minutes, because so numerous.

Bro. F. B. Shumate writes of the work at Galland's Grove branch and in the district. Saints and ministry were striving to maintain the cause. Opposition was generally united, hence saints should be in union in the interests of the cause. President Smith's labors, also those of Brn. Butterworth, McDowell, Baker, Hunt, and Wight receive favorable mention. Tent work generally well received.

A card from Bro. R. M. Elvin, also a copy of the Nebraska City News of July 26, announces the death of Bro. Robert C. Elvin, father of Bro. R. M., at Nebraska City, Nebraska, on the 24th ult. Bro. Elvin was a member of the High Priests' Quorum and was at one time president of the Southern Nebraska district. He was also well known in Eastern Nebraska as a physician and a pioneer. He was "one of the founders of Omaha, being one of the men who paid the Indian chief, White Cloud, ten dollars for the privilege of locating there." Bro. Elvin was in his seventy-fifth year. For particulars, see obituary notice.

President Joseph Smith reached home on Friday, July 30, feeling well after a short but busy ministerial trip into Western Iowa.

Some forty-two have been baptized at Toronto, Ontario, since last January; so states Bro. R. C. Evans, in a late letter to Pres. J. Smith.

Bishop E. L. Kelly has been quite ill with some form of fever for the past ten days, and at this writing (Monday, the 2d inst.) is still confined to his bed. Bro. Kelley has been considerably taxed with care and labor for the past few years and his present illness results no doubt, from that cause, combined with the prevailing hot weather. His correspondents will please take notice and patiently await such time as he shall be able to give usual attention to business matters. See his "address to the saints," in this issue of HERALD.

Bro. Heman C. Smith, in charge of the European mission, expects to start from home to-day or to-morrow (Monday the 2d or Tuesday the 3d) for New York, whence he will sail on Saturday, the 7th, for Liverpool, England, to take charge of the European mission, per late conference appointment. The best wishes of his brethren attend him, for his welfare and success.

Pres. A. H. Smith arrived home from Minnesota and Illinois points on Friday, the 30th ult., and apparently improved in health.

A cyclone cut a path of destruction and death over a winding course of three miles near San Jose, Illinois, July 30. Six persons were instantly killed, as many injured, and property destroyed.

Appalling floods are reported from Prussian Silesia; large loss of life and property. Hundreds of persons drowned; immense tracts of country are submerged by overflowing streams; property loss valued at millions of marks, the waters still rising; no flood of such magnitude in that region within the century. Floods also in Southern Russia; 150 people perished.

British rule in India is threatened. The famine, followed by earthquake, cholera, and the plague and efforts to suppress it, have caused much discontent among the natives, resulting in revolts at a number of points in the country, and which are assuming the proportions of an insurrection. Some reports credit Russian agents with fomenting discord among the native population.

Destructive floods in Australia also; great destruction of crops in Spain.

ADDRESS TO THE SAINTS.

OUR usual certain close monetary season has reached us. This year is the worst that we have had, and we have been hoping and battling against the inconveniences of a moneyless treasury. What makes it worse just at the present time, I have not been able to attend to business duties for one week, and it is likely to be another before I can be found in my office. This would not have been so bad had I not been called away from the office for four weeks preceding. In the meantime the church business must be transacted and it can only be done by every man and woman doing his or her duty.

I had been called away from the office into Ohio, under the expectation and promise of a week's stay; but it took much longer, and business accumulated in my absence and special duties incurring upon my return which had to be looked after before these, my business piled up. I thought I saw the time that I could meet the whole thing, and I could have so done if my health had stood the strain; but it did not, and placed me beneath the harrow. But I am not complaining; however, the trouble is that I am not able to move around after finances myself; I must ask the saints everywhere who can help to do so and help us keep moving so there shall not be any jar or lack if we can help it.

In times of emergency every man should do his duty without question. I take it that the saints will. We hope to hear from you and that you will help the Bishop's agents in the several districts, for it is partly from their lack of funds that our treasury is depleted. It may require a sacrifice on the part of every one, but this, it is said, brings the blessings of heaven; then no saints should hesitate at this step.

Brethren will have to be patient in waiting for an answer to all letters requiring any consideration. This I cannot give to them now, but as soon as I am able to do so they shall hear from me. I trust, brethren, to hear from you at an early time, and bespeak for you the blessing of the Lord, and ask an interest in your prayers in my behalf.

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LIFE.

"The shortest life is longest, if 'tis best;
'Tis ours to work—to God belongs the rest.
Our lives are measured by the deeds we do,
The thoughts we think, the objects we pursue.
A fair young life poured out upon the sod,
In the high cause of freedom and of God,
Though all too short his course, and quickly run,
Is full and glorious as the orbéd sun;
While he who lives to hoary-headed age
Oft dies an infant—dies and leaves no sign,
For he has writ no deed on history's page,
And unfulfilled is being's great design."

ADDRESS BY SR. BURTON.

(Read to the Sisters at their Thursday meeting of April 1, 1897.)

DEAR SISTERS:—I do not doubt but all of you saints who were here two years ago when we visited this island in the "Evanelia," remember the vision that Joseph had in the meeting that day: of how the spirits of this people in these Islands who had embraced the gospel, were "pleading to be raised higher, that they might have more light, were struggling within the body, and crying out for help." The progress we have discerned in many ways since our return is evidence to us that the vision was given by that unerring Spirit that knoweth the hearts of all men; and we now perceive that the spirits of this people are ready and desirous of mounting a higher plain of action. But it (the spirit) is tabernacled in body, and must needs abide somewhat the condition of its environment. Could the spirit alone, that is, regardless of any preparations of the body, attain to the desired elevation, it would not need to have cried out for help to any but God. But in the vision the people were looking to their teachers, the missionaries, and pleading with them "to impart greater light, to help them to 'come up higher,' that they might be more like unto their brothers and sisters in America."

We rejoice now to see the evidence that the Lord is knocking at the door of your hearts, saying "Make ready, and I will bestow greater light!" Do you ask, wherein we discover these signs of progression? I answer, in building better houses; in making partitions in your houses, separating the sleeping rooms; in putting dainty railings about your porches and delicate curtains to the windows. I have also seen nice bedsteads and spring mattresses such as they have in America; also nice chairs, and a greater desire to sit in them, than when here before: The men especially seem to dislike to get down on the floor. And in Papeete, the sisters twisted their hair up in a neat shining coil on the back of the head, which gave a neat, tidy appearance; besides, it saved the back of the dress from being soiled with oily hair. All these things indicate progression.

Perhaps you are saying within yourselves, "These are all temporal things; we wish to learn of the spiritual growth." Remember, sisters, I have no way of judging the inner life or development only by the outward appearance, never having heard a prayer or a testimony from any, neither two years ago nor at the present time; nor could I have understood had I heard. But these temporal things indicate a growing desire for refinement—for the good and the beautiful. God is the author of all good and of the beautiful, and as God sends light in the hearts of the children of men, that light always brings with it the desire to make better our condition, our surroundings, and ourselves; and we not only rejoice in what we have seen, but look forward to a more complete transformation, when the people of God in these islands will be a free people, owing no man anything, and will, in the place of Niau huts—except in times of shell diving—have nice, cool, comfortable houses where the family may live together and enjoy life; where the wife and mother will be queen of her home realm; when it will be the mothers and daughters who will keep the house in order, and in a great measure prepare the food; so that when the tired husband comes home from his work he may find his meal prepared instead of having to do it himself while the wife sits idly by.

And now, dear sisters, I hope I shall not hurt the feelings of any when I say this progression is as a rule (though not in all cases) more plainly discerned in the brethren than in the sisters. And let me tell you why this is. It is because they—the men—are more active both mentally and physically. You know if a child never used its limbs the muscles would never develop and the limbs would remain weak. Exercise makes them strong; so also it is with the mental powers. And this is one of the subjects upon which I desire to instruct you if you wish to enter in and take your part in this progression. Do you desire to become more like your sisters in America, and like the women of old spoken of in the Bible? If so, the household duties must be yours. We learn from the Bible that when the three angels came to Abraham's tent, and your father Abraham invited them to stop to rest and eat, he hastened into the tent and told Sarah his wife to knead quickly three measures of meal into dough, and bake it upon the hearth. We perceive by this that Sarah did the cooking, though the young men they had to help them (for they were old) dressed and cooked the kid. Just so here, if a pig, or a turtle was to be roasted, that would be the men's work. In the first epistle of Paul to Timothy, 5:14, we learn that women should guide the house. Nevertheless the man is the head of the house and should be consulted in all principal matters. But the small matters, such as keeping the house in order, the dishes washed up clean, children clean, lamps cleaned and trimmed, and prepare the food and make ready to eat, is the duty of all good housewives. One cannot do work of any kind without doing some thinking and planning, and thinking and planning are what develop the mental powers. We want you to think, and to consider—to exercise your reason and judgment.

When I go to the shops to make a purchase I don't buy the article that I might take the greatest fancy to, if it is of a high price. But if I did not let my judgment govern me, I would always get the nicest, and the prettiest. But I say "No, that will cost too much money! A plainer and cheaper article will do me just as well." I never have to ask my husband how much money I may spend. Neither does he ask me how much I have used, for he knows that I will be just as careful of it as he would be, and use it wisely. But if I used all I could get hold of, or did not use wisdom in spending money, then he would have to take care of it and only let me have a little at a time. And if we do not have the money to pay for an article that we would like to purchase we do without it till we get the money; we never go in debt.

There are few indeed of the saints in America who make as much money in a year as the most of the saints here do; but the people in America by their prudence, economy, and forethought make their money do them a great deal more good. They take care of their clothes and make them wear a long time, by keeping the best for going to church only. They do not wear the Sunday dress during the week, until it is not nice enough to wear to church; and also make their working dresses last as long as they can, by mending them as soon as they break. They would not put two or three dollars' worth of lace on a dress that they were soon to wear for common. They would say, "I would rather take that money and get something nice for my house. And if for a wedding or a party, they put lace on the bottom of their dress, they would take good care that it did not trail in the dirt.

Now, sisters, I am not finding fault with you, or telling you what you must do, or must not do. I came here to do you good, to help you to "come up higher;" and am, and will continue to, teach you good principles, which, if you of your own choice, act upon, you will be benefited by them.

Just consider with your own mind how long would it take you to save up money enough to get a cupboard to put your dishes in if you laid by one third of the money you now spend each year for lace and embroidery, or, to buy a nice chair to sit in so that when you had a new stiff dress on, or a clean white one, you would not have to crush it all up by sitting on the floor. I think I have said enough for this time. And if I perceive that you are pleased to be thus taught, I will say more at another time.

May God bless us all with wisdom and light. Amen.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 17.

Editors Herald.—A few thoughts are suggested by the question asked in last Herald, and the statement made in reference to the reception of the Holy Spirit, after baptism.

The fact is, there is so much difference in the testimony of those who have been confirmed, that there can, it seems to me, be no certain criterion established by which we may judge. Some manifest great joy, and at once testify that they have received the blessing; others seem to go forth silently in the discharge of duty, with full assurance that God will in due time make good his promise.

This difference is accounted for in a measure by the law of temperament, which manifests itself in almost everything in which men engage. I know that in my case I could not at first testify that any change had taken place, save a consciousness of a duty performed and a peaceful condition of the mind, which I attributed to obedience; but I confess that I expected more at the time, because some in the church had been always testifying to the great things God had done for them. But I have observed that those who have boasted of these things have not been any more careful or diligent than many who have not been able to give such bright evidence; but I have never doubted my acceptance with God.

I verily believe that this boasting on the part of many, of the many miracles witnessed, has been the cause of grave doubts on the part of many honest people. For months after I came into the branch I looked anxiously for the manifestation of the gifts promised, but when I saw that they came not as I had expected I began to look for the cause and to pray God to give me confidence in him; for I had expected too much from men.

Some of the most faithful men and women in the branch are some who can tell of no special time when God made manifest his promise of the Holy Ghost. I believe the safest plan is to do no boasting, for it causes the honest in heart to be disappointed, and when they come into this work and do not receive what others boast of, they are apt to doubt.

In speaking to a lady about this work I told of the promise made by Christ that these signs shall follow. She said: "Mr. Strain, I have been a visitor at your church for years and have not seen any of these gifts manifested."

One of the strongest evidences of a sound conversion to this work is a Godly walk, a chaste conversation, and compliance with the law of the kingdom.

ADDISON, Maine, July 19.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed find clipping from the Bangor Commercial of July 9, containing an account of Rev. Dr. Simpson's work at Old Orchard, Maine. It is interesting to note the different movements in this section. Rev. Sanford, of Durham, Maine, claims to be casting out devils, healing the sick, and richly enjoying the signs promised to believers. He has a white chariot drawn by pure white horses, traveling from town to town, from which they preach. The question of authority is the great dividing line.

We are finding enough to do; good audiences, fair interest. Commencing Thursday, we pitch our tent in Milbridge. Bro. Blanchard will assist me after that date.

Never felt better or more like pressing the fight.

Yours,
U. W. GREENE.

CLEARWATER, Neb., July 20.

Editors Herald:—When last I wrote I was laboring at Springfield, Nebraska, in the Christian Advent church, where I continued until May 26 when I came to Omaha and by request of saints presided over a very spiritual business meeting of the branch there.

On the 28th I presided over two sessions of district Sunday school convention, and on the 29th and 30th attended the conference of the Northern Nebraska district. A profitable and somewhat spiritual session was held. One sister was baptized by Bro. Samuel Wood.

From thence I came on the 31st to Inman, Nebraska, to assist as one of the committee in getting things in readiness for the Inman reunion June 4-6, which meeting was a decided success in several ways. The sessions were begun by prayer followed by short talks by the brethren of the ministry who had kindly consented to come and assist to make this reunion a success; viz., George H. Hilliard, F. A. Smith, H. O. Smith, and the writer; after which a business session was held selecting Brn. J. F. Mintun and F. A. Smith presidents, and Sr. Emma X. Gamet secretary, with other officers necessary, each doing their part well, and working together for the success of the services. Sessions held: one business session, one Sunday school entertainment, four prayer meetings, and eleven preaching services, all well attended, and much interest shown by saints and friends; one babe was blessed on the 6th; and three baptized on the 7th by H. O. Smith. A new tent had been purchased at quite an effort by the saints, which was enjoyed as a place of protection from the sun's rays, and the shower, while the word was declared and services engaged in. This was dedicated by Bishop's Counselor Hilliard on Sunday the 6th, the dedicatory prayer being rendered by F. A. Smith. It was decided to hold the next reunion of the district at Shelton, Nebraska, in June, 1898, and a committee of arrangements appointed: the writer, Joseph W. Smith, and Morris Sterley.

I continued meetings in the tent at Inman till June 25, being assisted till the 12th by H. O. Smith. However from the 21st to 23d I held evening meetings at Page, where good attendance each night greeted me. At Inman the prejudice was marked, and only a few showed bravery enough to break over the bounds of prejudice, and attend very regularly.

On the 26th and 27th I held four services at Star where was shown some interest. In all these efforts made at Inman and vicinity the saints did their part nobly, and for such there is a reward. A few were left nearer the kingdom, and the saints were strengthened, while the opposition was stirred to saying and doing or attempting to do some unpleasant things, one of which was to publish an erroneous article; however, he it said to the credit of the editor, he permitted a reply to be published that will do some good. The Presbyterian minister, N. S. Lowrie, by name, has since my efforts there changed pulpits with his son at O'Neill and delivered a very erroneous, and, it is said, abusive, lecture there against the saints and their belief, to which I have called him to account in the O'Neill papers, both of which have kindly consented to publish it.

On the 30th the tabernacle was erected in the town of Clearwater, where was shown such an interest last winter when I was there; but this time such an interest was not shown, only a few besides the saints attending regularly. I continued there each evening except the 2d and 3d inst., and three times on Sunday, till last Sunday evening, having the assistance of Brn. Levi Gamet and William Rumel, and the presence of several of the saints from the country, all of whom made an effort to be present at each service, many of whom came from four to six miles, after a hard day's work. While none obeyed, yet I feel satisfied that I did all I could. Here the M. E. minister went from house to house and in the stores talking, misrepresenting the faith of the saints, and although living about a block away from where the tent was located, never came to hear what the faith of the saints is, and threatens to deliver some lectures against us. How plainly the same spirit is manifest now that was in the days of Jesus, for he said of a certain class of ministers then, "Ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."

One old lady at O'Neill by the name of Merriman claimed that she knew Joseph Smith (She called him "Old Joe") and his family well, and that he was all that had been said of him, only he was not a polygamist, but that it was not his fault, etc. All this she pretended to know till inquired of closely by a sister and friend, when she admitted that she knew nothing about it, but "they said" so, and that she was but three years old when Joseph Smith was killed. So ends this testimony like many another, and only shows to what ends the adversary is pushed, and how many love a lie, whether they have made it or not. One woman here said that she liked to hear the preaching, but did not like to hear me refer to Joseph Smith, as she had read a book about him once, and that was enough for her; yet she would just smack her lips to get something more like it, but to hear anything that would prove what she had read false, she did not want it.

I expect to begin with the tent in the country between here and Neligh Thursday night to continue about eleven or twelve days.

The missionaries in this mission are all doing well and are active. Brn. F. A. Smith and W. A. Smith are at Omaha with a tent, and Samuel Wood at Irvington, and all feeling well in the work.

My faith in the work grows stronger, and the opposition is more plainly manifest.

Your brother,
J. F. MINTUN.

RODDY, Texas, July 22.

Editors Herald:—On the 23d of June I began a protracted meeting at Manchester and continued for over one week, which resulted in the addition of two members to the church by baptism. Elder E. A. Erwin is in charge of the branch and is a faithful man, doing all he can for the spread of the gospel at different points in the surrounding country. While conducting our meeting at Manchester there was a debate going on at Detroit, fifteen miles south, between the M. E. Church and the Christian Church. It seemed that the debate did not satisfy the people of the town, and strange to tell they sent for me to come and set before the people the doctrines of our church; so on the 9th of the present month I opened up the work in this town and continued till the 12th. A good impression was made and an invitation received to return, and a promise that the place where the debate and my meetings were held was open for me at any time. My congregations increased from the beginning.

At Blossom Prairie I also held a few meetings. This place is nine miles south of Detroit. There are some few throughout that part of the country that are favorably disposed toward us, and many against; still it seems that better conditions are forming in this country for the spreading of the gospel.

While at Detroit I received a pressing invitation to return to the Hagens schoolhouse some fifty miles east of Detroit where I had preached one discourse. It seemed that all the leading men of the place were well pleased and wanted to hear more. These men included the postmaster, the doctor, the gin man, the miller, the merchant, this being a little hamlet; but when the people in the surrounding country heard of their sending for me to come and hold a series of meetings, they notified these men that if they allowed me there again they would patronize none of them; so the people prevailed and I was notified not to come. So on the 14th of present month I started for this place in company with Bro. Erwin and family and

Bro. Goodman and wife, by wagon, arriving on the 18th. This is one hundred and fifty miles south of Manchester. We camped out at nights by the way; had quite a pleasant time. The same day we got here we got out an appointment at the Elm Grove Chapel. Have been preaching every night since; not large crowds, but good attention. The people seem dazed with the wonderful gospel we preach and some have already taken sides with us and two have demanded baptism. We leave here on Monday for other parts. "The harvest is great, but the laborers few." And so the work moves slowly but we hope surely.

In bonds,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 24.

Editors Herald:—I have not been able to do any field work, as a preacher of the word, since the holding of the General Conference; but in other respects have tried to do all I could for the advancement of the work in my mission.

I note with pleasure the good effects which always result from obedience to "the perfect law of liberty;" nevertheless, after a close acquaintance with this people, and contact with the inner workings of the church since 1873, I conclude that if the Almighty can consummate his glorious work with this people as his coworkers, he will be entitled to great credit.

It is so easy to drift away from the right; to move along wrong lines: to indulge in dangerous extremes; to go too fast or too slow; to base our action upon partial statements of the word and imagine we are in harmony with the revelations of God; to accept the counterfeit for the genuine. Oh may God give us light, and a willingness to walk therein!

There seems to be quite a disposition upon the part of our opponents to meet us in public debate, especially if they can secure advantages by an unfair arrangement and agreement on propositions. My attention to and decision on some five or six prospective debates have been demanded since the adjournment of conference. Among the rest our former brother and minister, D. H. Bays, (now of Persia, Iowa,) comes to the front, and is willing to tear down, if he can, that which for many years he sought to build up. I have received no propositions from him, though he was under the impression that propositions prepared by himself had been sent to me by Bro. Joseph Seddon of Persia. He claims that he is not the challenging party, but has been selected by others to meet the challenges made by Latter Day Saints.

Query No. 1: Should Elder Bays engage in forensic contest with the Latter Day Saints, is he likely to secure a more signal victory than he ever secured before when defending their faith and doctrine? I mean, of course, that his own testimony, as well as the testimony of others, concerning the character of his best efforts of the past, when affirming our faith and denying somebody else's, was correct and true.

Query No. 2: According to the testimony of the witnesses just alluded to, did Elder Bays ever lose a battle that was fought on fairly-worded propositions; that is, when he was defending the faith of the Latter Day Saints?

I call the special and favorable attention of the saints to the "Address to the Saints," as published in Herald for July 21. Had it been found practicable for each member of the council to have read it, without reasonable doubt it would have received the signatures of all. Read carefully and prayerfully. It will do you good and intensify your interest in the great latter-day work.

Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

On the Campania, July 22.

Editors Herald:—We are now, it is said, about three hundred miles from Queenstown, where I hope to post this letter. We have had a very pleasant passage; only one unpleasant day, and it was not very bad; but the boat rolled considerably, causing a number to become seasick. I have escaped thus far, and expect to be all right the rest of the voyage.

We left New York at eight a. m., Saturday, and expect to land, if all goes well, at Liverpool to-morrow evening between six and seven. Wife has stood the journey well; she was only sick one evening. Two days it was so cold we had to wear winter clothing. Quite a change from the terrible, hot weather we experienced in Brooklyn. The last two days it has been cool enough to be pleasant. Bro. Dalton, from Piper City has enjoyed himself and is well.

We have had excellent accommodations on board. Going to England in such a ship is only a little pleasure trip. We are anxious to see a newspaper to learn what has been going on in the world since we left it. Will write you more at length when we get located. Kind regards to all.

AMAZONIA, Mo., July 20.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have labored mostly in Holt County, making Bro. R. K. Ross' home my base of operations. Commenced the summer campaign with three sermons at the Pleasant Hill school-house, near Mound City. Was not very much impressed with the neighborhood, but it might be another Nazareth, out of which good will yet come. It seems to have been my lot so far to cast considerable bread upon the waters, having blown the gospel trumpet in numerous places, one, two, or three times, perhaps never to return to know or see the results of such efforts; but in making them I have often had satisfaction in telling the story, and he who has sent forth the word and his Spirit "will not suffer it to return unto him void."

In company with Bro. R. K. Ross, whose assistance has been invaluable (and it has been backed up by Sr. Ross, his wife), I next made a sortie on the Richland school district, south of Maitland. The way had been prepared to some extent by Bro. William King, who had in some way, after having been identified with the old church, then the Reorganized Church, drifted into the Campbellite or Christian fold; but not to endure it long, rather to revive his first love and cause him to advocate the true principles. Though he has left the Christian fold, he has not yet returned to ours, but acted the part of a brother in every sense, securing a house to preach in, advertising meetings, doing janitor work, and assisting us financially. We hope he will be ready to renew his covenant soon.

Though right in the busiest of the season we held seven meetings, had a good interest, and made friends for the gospel. It looks as though a good work might be done later on.

Our district conference coming on, we left for Bedison. A harmonious session was enjoyed; two baptized, also two shortly before conference by Bro. E. S. Fannon.

Returning to Holt County, I held five meetings in the Christian church at Maitland. Weather was very hot, and attendance light, except on Sunday. Two of the sisters were considerably stirred up by the preaching and private conversation; otherwise, not much apparent results. Hope investigation may lead them to obedience. The following Sunday I had an opportunity to preach once at a union church eight miles south of Maitland. It will be open for us, when it is wisdom to occupy again.

The next week was spent in arranging to publish and writing articles for the Maitland Herald and Mound City Times, explanatory of our faith and the difference between the Reorganized and Utah churches.

Had about five columns in the Mound City paper, continued through three issues. That the press is willing to grant us such privileges is evidence that things are working our way, and that we are finding favor with the people. If I can judge the work by my own experience and feelings since conference, it is moving forward. Am having good liberty in preaching, and health sufficient to bear the burden imposed.

As suggested by Bro. Peter Anderson in charge, I commenced a series of meetings on Nodaway Island, July 6. Brn. Dobson and D. J. Krahl of St. Joseph had made a favorable beginning by holding a Sunday afternoon service six times in succession. Their efforts were well liked. I continued in the face of boiling hot weather and very busy farmers. Thermometer 108° in the shade one day. The spring was late and things have been crowded together too much a few weeks ago, so much rain that little plowing could be done, now corn is suffering from drought. Ours is a climate of extremes. After holding nine meetings on the island, which is two miles west of Amazonia, in the Missouri River, I changed base to the town of Amazonia. Could get neither hall nor church, so procured the district tent. Our island friends outside of the church helped to raise it, and hired seats from the hall. Held three services on Sunday without anyone to assist in praying, preaching, or singing. Had about one hundred and twenty-five out in the evening and good liberty in talking to them; last evening not so many out, but a very good audience. My impressions concerning the town were not that great things could be done, but we stand a better show than in the country just at present.

Our tent is not equipped properly. Have no cot or cooking outfit and are at a disadvantage about stopping place, being too far from the tent to take care of it. We need some of our own hymn books, a dozen at least. It goes terribly against the grain to have to lead the singing of such hymns as "Jesus paid it all," and "There is a fountain filled with blood, and other such trash, when withal soprano singing or choir leading is not our forte. But I am truly thankful of having the way open to place the truth before the people in numerous places, and of receiving help from on high in so doing.

This northwestern part of Missouri can hardly be excelled for soil or productiveness. The farmers are well to do as a rule, and perhaps not as hungry for the gospel as if poorer in this world's goods, but we hope sooner or later to see a harvest of souls, and many honest-hearted ones gathered in. Desiring the prayers of the saints,

Your brother,
M. F. GOWELL.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., July 23.

Editors Herald:—The battle is over and we certainly had a splendid victory for the truth. Using the language of an independent gentleman who is quite competent to judge: "It is simply this: Old man Evans was not in it at all." And that is the feeling of the majority. He simply was snowed under from the first, and never as much as got his head out again.

He was quite good at sarcasm, but our man was too much for him at every turn, and turned all his jests on the poor man, to his discomfort. He frequently asked White to raise a dead man, and Bro. White told him he had raised one up two or three times already, pointing his finger at Evans, which caused a good laugh; and I am sure if he did not raise the dead he raised the "Devil" in Rev. Evans two or three times, enough to call White some very hard names. The pressure was too much.

He used a statement of Sam Jones' twice, to prove that the Baptists were sure of salvation. Sam said that "half the Baptists would be saved for their honesty, the other half for their ignorance;" and Evans said that he could not say that of any other church. White said he thanked God he could not say it of any other church. Just a little before this the other moderator and I had a little difference about the expenses. He said he would not pay what I claimed; so when Evans told about what Sam Jones said of their honesty, I wrote it down and I underscored the word "honesty" and showed it to him, and told him he would have to keep up his reputation. So he said, "don't say any more about it, and I will pay it"; and he did. Train time; off for conference at Bruner.

Editors Herald:—To-day as memory fleets back over the events of the past three years, it brings before us many instances wherein the marvelous power of God through the gospel has been displayed in our midst. On the 6th of June we witnessed one of the most miraculous cases of healing. Several times during the last week in May Sr. Lizzie Irving (our branch president's wife) had raised considerable blood, apparently from her lungs, and on the morning of May 31, while going about her work the blood suddenly began to flow freely from her mouth and nose. She started for the field to her husband, but her strength failing, she sent a hired man. When Bro. Irving arrived he found her lying in the yard in a pool of blood. One of the best physicians in the city of Chatham was immediately sent for, who when he arrived pronounced it a burst blood vessel on the left lung. He left medicine to put her to sleep, and said she was not to move hand or foot for eleven days, and then go to the hospital. The latter she refused to do. She took the medicine, and from the first dose grew worse; and on Wednesday morning positively refused to take another drop, and asked for Elder Shields. Bro. Shields could not be got at the time so Elder Leverton was sent for; but before he arrived she had another bad hemorrhage, with such a weakening effect that several times she was thought by some to be dying. "When Mrs. Irving leaves that room, she will leave it in her coffin," was the repeated remark of several outsiders present; and indeed it did seem folly to the human mind to intimate her recovery. But God will not and cannot forsake his trusting children, and from the first she bore her testimony that God would heal her. Even while the crimson fluid, the very source of life, spurted from lips and nostrils she remained firm to the promise given her, that she would be healed by the power of the gospel.

Bro. Leverton came and administered to her, and in less than ten minutes the sleep which the medicine failed to bring came and she slept peacefully till morning, when she arose and dressed for breakfast. But she overexerted herself, and by Friday night was as bad as ever.

As Bro. Shields was expected on Sunday, she sent for Elder Green; but he being called to another bedside could not come and asked the branch to fast and pray in her behalf. On Sunday morning she was so weak it took her attendants an hour and a half to change her clothing, and at 2:30 the house was packed with outsiders, principally her relatives. Standing by her bedside, looking at the blanched cheek, the eyes of a strange dull gleam, the frail form apparently wrapped in death, it seemed like waiting for the dead to be raised.

As if to buoy up shattered faith, she beckoned, and bending low I caught the whispered word, "I shall be healed!" so weak, yet so strong. A chapter was read and Bro. Shields led in prayer, after which Elder Dent anointed and Elder Shields offered prayer of administration. As the prayer of faith fell from the lips of him whom God had chosen the Spirit came with healing power, and baffled death had to depart. As the hands of God's servants were raised from her head, the words, "I am healed," rang through the house. She arose and dressed without any assistance and walked with a firm step to another room, where she took part in the meeting which followed, in which she bore her testimony to this work; which greatly affected her hearers, some of whom have since went to her doctor, and he consoles them by saying, "There is nothing strange in it; she may live a year yet, but not longer." But should death claim her tomorrow, it would not alter the fact that she was healed by the power of the gospel, and to-day she weighs two pounds more than her average weight has been for some years.

That Zion may continue to learn the great necessity of having faith in her King, is the prayer of,

Your sister,

JESSIE A. HACKETT.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., July 23.

Editors Herald:—It is with pleasure that I pen you a few lines, to let you know how thankful we are to God for his goodness to us. My wife and I came here very near a year ago and at that time no one knew anything of this latter-day work here, and we were laughed at by some, and some called us Mormons, and some seemed to think we were all right; but we prayed for them, and prayed for an elder to be sent here; we also scattered papers and tracts, and the outcome was, we got some interested; and on the 6th of May Brn. I. M. Smith and G. W. Robley came, and we could not get the M. E. church, nor could we get a schoolhouse for them to preach in. So we went at it and put seats in our largest room for sixty people, and they preached two weeks; and then Bro. Smith went to York State to fill an appointment, but Bro. Robley staid and preached awhile longer, and then went to McGraw and preached two weeks there, and had more calls than he could fill; for it seems that after the people got to hear a few sermons they did not harden their hearts and carried the news far and wide, and some came for miles to hear and invite Bro. Robley to go to their town and preach for them.

Well, we can see our prayers are being answered right along, for Bro. Robley has baptized seven here, all heads of families except one, and that a young lady; and there are others near to the waters of baptism; for which we are ever praying. So the good work goes on.

We have a nice little Sunday school here, and some of the outsiders are taking quite an interest in it. We also have started a prayer meeting, and all the young saints take hold in earnest.

Bro. Robley started for home on the 20th. We were sorry to see him leave, for we shall miss him very much; yet we are glad to see him get the much needed rest, and that others may hear this glorious gospel. We ask an interest in the prayers of all the saints; we will pray for them.

Your brother,

GEORGE H. PARKER.

LEBANON, Oreg., July 23.

Editors Herald:—The battle at Drain commenced the evening of June 25. The brethren there had secured the use of the Adventist church for one week. It was occupied or rented by the Free Methodists, but was not being used, and so was rented of them for our purposes. The interest and attendance there were very good. Some opposition was shown and there is talk of a debate in the future.

After holding the fort there till Sunday, July 4, we moved out and commenced meetings in the surrounding country; preaching once at Hudson, twice at Bear Creek, three times at Tin Pot, and ten times at Richey schoolhouse. The result of these meetings are, besides the encouraging of the saints and removing much prejudice as well as sowing the seed, three members added to the branch at Drain by baptism. The saints there are alive and did all that could be expected of them (if not more), both by putting forth their best efforts to make the meetings a success, and also by contributing the necessary means to help us on our journey.

Our work there for the present was closed the morning of the 16th by an early meeting (8 a. m.) of the saints at Bro. L. Tracy's at Hudson for prayer and testimony, and we took the 9: 15 local for Cottage Grove. We had received a letter from Sr. Oliver, who lives there with her daughter, a Mrs. Thompson. Sr. Oliver is an old-time saint. Her daughter is not a member, but sent us a cordial invitation to stop with them when we passed through. We arrived in Cottage Grove about ten a. m. After dinner we proceeded to try for a place wherein to present the gospel to the people. The M. E. church seemed the most promising; in fact the only one that there seemed to be any chance of getting, and after seeing one of the trustees, who sent us on a journey to find another trustee, we finally located the "other trustee," who in turn hunted up still "another" and proceeded to catechise us. They wanted us to preach "a good spiritual sermon without any doctrine." Of course Bro. Holt proceeded to show them that to preach a "spiritual sermon" that would represent "Christ and him crucified" one must needs preach the "doctrine of Christ." For awhile things looked rather doubtful, but victory came at last, and at four p. m. we had permission to occupy for that evening. "Not much time to advertise," I fancy I hear you say. Certainly not, but we proceeded to do the best we could, by writing and putting up notices and by walking up and down the street so that the population could comment upon those "Mormon" preachers, and by inviting each group of loungers that we passed by to "come to meeting." I will confess that I had to do the inviting, as Bro. Holt seemed to think it needed my "cheek" to do that.

Well, the result was a fairly well filled house when the time arrived for meeting. Bro. H— spoke with excellent liberty and the people listened attentively. Leaving Cottage Grove on the morning train, we arrived here in time to begin our meetings the same evening (the 17th). The next morning being Sunday and our meetings not seeming to be very well advertised, we decided to each attend one of the popular churches of the place during the morning service, and have our meetings for the week announced. In this we were assisted by Bro. A. P. Morris and his son Alma. Together we managed to "take in" four of the churches and get our notices read out. Also your writer happening to attend the Baptist Sunday school at ten o'clock was invited—as the "minister" was absent—to preach for them there at the morning service. Of course I did as requested and was blessed in so doing. The saints here have secured the use of a hall and we have been holding our services therein. Prejudice is rife. Some came but did not want to hear "so much doctrine;" wanted us to "preach to the sinners." It is the old story of "Now ye say ye see, and your sin remaineth." There are, however, a few who are interested. Some good will surely follow. From here we expect to go to Foster, where we will probably hold our meetings during the next week, then expect to put up the tent at Waterloo.

We have now been in our field of labor fifty-six days; have preached seventy-two sermons, held three saints' meetings, and baptized nine.

When I reached San Francisco I looked up the matter of a portable organ for our use and found that I could get a good instrument for thirty-five dollars. Feeling that it was a necessity I began to try to raise the money for that purpose. Bro. H— heartily entered into the project with me and we succeeded so well that I now rejoice in the possession of a "Bilhouse Telescope Organ." We are making good use of it. Should any of the brethren contemplate purchasing an instrument for field use, they will find it an instrument that fills the "want" exactly. Our instrument when folded only measures about 11 x 15 x 24 inches and weighs thirty pounds, and yet it is first class in its tone and range of volume. Bro. H— thinks the "organ and I" make a noisy pair, but says it is "just the thing."

There are more calls than we can fill but we will do our best.

Hopefully your brother,
A. M. CHASE.

HEAVEN'S INSURANCE POLICY.

HEAVEN'S insurance policy is a subject I have given much thought upon, having been brought directly in contact with the many methods of man-made systems of securing their fellow creatures by life and death insurance policies. In the east it has become such a business that if you are not insured you are looked upon by many as cranky, if not a crank. Many hard-earned dollars go into the treasury of these various companies, not only from people of the world, but those who are known as Latter Day Saints. The question is, Is it necessary and the right thing for them (saints) to do? A people who claim to have the perfect gospel system and holding the right to minister in the ordinances thereof involves this question: If their gospel is a perfect system, why should they invest in these worldly institutions? Is it not an indication of a doubt in their minds of its perfection? As we use the term "perfect," nothing can be added, for it is complete, hence nothing could be taken from it and it still be perfect. And further: if this gospel fails to meet every demand of the human race it certainly is not a perfect system, hence what advantage have Latter Day Saints?

In this age of skepticism, would it not be wise to call a halt and investigate this question?

But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.—James 1: 25.

As we are informed, we "cannot serve God and mammon." If the gospel is God's perfect system, revealing service required and benefits accruing, who are we rendering service to if holding life or death policies? In the gospel we are assured of eternal life in the beyond if faithful, diligent workers to the end of our days. Do we believe it? Can we place greater confidence in that that is to accrue to us in the future than in those things promised for the present benefit of gospel believers? For instance,

They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.—Mark 16: 18.

Here is promised a physical blessing to the believers in this perfect system; yet we send for the physician if sickness overtakes us instead of the elders, as prescribed by James.

Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up.—James 5: 14, 15.

While the law of the land compels having a physician, it does not prohibit following out the advice of James. By our acts we are to be judged. Would not our acts in this regard designate where our faith was—in God or man?

"Yes," says one, "we accept of all this, but what has this to do in answering the question?" The fact is, we want to know if this perfect system called the gospel makes provision for the sick, and we have discovered that it does, as well as the hope of eternal life, which has a tendency to strengthen our faith.

"Yes," says one, "that's all right; but does that indicate that there is no necessity to look after oneself in carrying a life policy?"

"You see," says another, "if I should die I am so poor I have nothing to leave to assist my wife to meet the expense that would accrue; but if I keep up my dues, I shall have sufficient."

Yes, dear reader, did it ever occur to you that these companies become wealthy through this business? If they should fail, as some have, through the extravagance of those in charge, where would you come in? If money can be made that way, by saving, why not trust yourself; act your own insurance company, and deposit your pennies in the savings bank? I know people who have carried a policy for twenty-five and thirty years. Say you have a policy twenty years, and you pay the small sum of ten cents per week, which is the common fee, you would be astonished to know what you would have in hand. You would have one hundred and four dollars, to say nothing about the interest that would accumulate. This is viewing the question from a business point. Is there not a better method than either for Latter Day Saints? If not the gospel fails to meet these necessities that are liable to come to any of its adherents.

Jesus said,

Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations.—Luke 16: 9.

Your insurance policy will not induce the company to care for you, but you obligate yourself to care for them. If you fail to keep up your dues, you drop out instead of into their habitation. Death is the only means by which a paid up member can induce the company to care for him. Is there much consolation in this? I cannot see it, as a Latter Day Saint. If I was of the world, and had no confidence in my own ability to save money when earned, I might be induced to invest. It seems to me a better lesson could not be given than the parable of Jesus, quoted above, in regard to the best insurance policy ever issued. One of which a paid up member need have no fears if he fails. Would God or his church turn such away? Hence the Lord says,

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house.—Mal. 3: 10.

Remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support.—D. C. 42: 8.

Learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires.—D. C. 85: 38.

From these citations we learn that this perfect system, the gospel, provides for the poor by the tithes of those who give credence thereunto.

Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings.—Mal. 3: 8.

Are we not robbing God when we as saints, support these man-made institutions? What think you, reader? If we comply with the God-given method—make friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, our pennies, as well as the dollars, will go into God's treasury. "Where your heart is there will your treasures be also;" "By their fruits ye shall know them." Who? Latter Day Saints? If faith is to be designated by works, and we continue our support of these insurance institutions, how much better is our gospel, so far as practice goes, than the many around us whom we believe are only man-made?

There is another institution, under various names, into which none can enter unless they can give the password, known as beneficiary societies, and into its treasury many dollars go as a tribute of regard for the object of its organization if sickness overtakes one. You receive weekly aid as per the order. While these societies are of the world and have done much good, while some have failed, yet the question of Latter Day Saints investing as a necessity, would it not indicate their heaven-claimed institution was somewhat a failure, to say the least? Besides money invested, there is a good opportunity and the discipline would incline paid up members to the real sick, when the facts were otherwise; but the sick benefits would only come by feigning sickness, if not sick. I have known people being up and around to hustle to bed when it was known that the committee of their society was to call. How is that for honesty? It is true such might be played on the Bishop or his agents, yet our relation together would make it a more difficult task, and our discipline has not that tendency.

"Come out of her, O my people," was the voice of the eternal Father. "Out of what?" says one. Out of these systems and methods that are not of God. Babylon—confusion! And be converted to the observing of the perfect system. It might be said, "Well, we know these beneficiary societies are not organized of God, yet they have done and are doing a great deal of good." Yes, this is true in many instances; but are there any benefits accruing to the adherents thereof that are not more graciously found by those in need in the gospel the perfect law? Hence, an investment in this direction not only indicates the lack of confidence in this perfect law, either for the want of an understanding of their duty and privilege, or a willful disregard of their covenant to serve God with all their heart—that would include the purse; but has its influence on those with whom they associate more or less to disregard the thought of God in his infinite wisdom meeting all the just demands of his covenant children; also to lessen their confidence in them as to their Christian integrity.

I have known Latter Day Saints who supported these man-made institutions, never failing to meet their dues, that would go to church and thank God for the perfect plan of salvation and never pay one cent of tithes in his storehouse. Could such be called paid up members in God's church? To me this is a serious matter, and should be discussed, that a better understanding might obtain in some localities.

The question, "Is it necessary for saints to carry insurance policies?" while not exhaustively argued, is yet sufficiently stated to enable every soul that will give it thought to say emphatically, No! If not necessary, to be sure it would not be the right thing for those who desire for the perfect gospel to prevail to indulge therein. And while we might be designated as a peculiar people because of our refusal to mix man-made concerns in with our God-ordained system, would it not be better to stand aloof from such unnecessary obligations?

In hope of a better understanding and a more perfect compliance with this perfect gospel,

Your hopeful colaborer,

A. H. PARSONS.

DECEPTION'S REIGN.—NO. 8.

BY ELDER COLUMBUS SCOTT.

THE SECOND DEATH—WHAT IS IT?

A STRANGE idea it is, that our Savior's mission into the world was to destroy him that had the power of death, and so bring his power with its effects to an end; that after the race of mankind—all—has been delivered from his grasp by the two resurrections, a large proportion of them—a majority—are returned to his dominion again, that he and it be the eternal conquerors of them! But that is just what is done, provided the second death be literal, and to be eternally unconscious their final condition.

Christ's mission is a failure to the extent that physical death eternally holds man in its embrace. According to this theory, death, the last enemy, never will be destroyed, but is left to reign to all eternity, over just the number who enter the second death. The American negro slave was not emancipated from the condition of slavery by being remanded to its galling chains again, after a brief release.

The "king of terrors"—death, reigns supreme, co-eternal with God, over more than half the human race; nor will he down though the King of kings, Christ Jesus wars against him, if the second death be literal! "And the upright shall" not "have dominion over them in the morning" of their resurrection. Nor will the prophetic statement ever be realized:—

I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes.—Hos. 13: 14.

But on the contrary, it should be said: "O men, death shall be thine eternal plagues; I will be thine eternal destruction;" and "death shall feed on" thee throughout endless ages! It won't plague death a great deal, will it, to give him an eternal dominion over a great proportion of the race of man? Death exists just as long as one soul is left in its embrace.

But this theory is false; it is a deception. It is of physical death that Paul speaks,—and of all mankind; and without particular reference to time, save in respect to the dead in Christ; when he says:—

For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. . . . But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be [in the resurrection, for thou sowest], but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, [or man that is buried—sown,] or of some other grain [that is, beasts, birds, or fishes, that is sown, or buried at death]: but God giveth it a body [in the resurrection] as it hath pleased him, and to every seed [of man, beast, bird, and fish] his own body. All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, [in the resurrection], and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption [begotten, lived, and was buried subject to corruption], it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in [or for] glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body.—1 Cor. 15: 22, 23, 35-44.

It is evident that Paul here refers to all "the dead," and the resurrection of all. It will not be denied, that all,—good, bad, and indifferent,—die in Adam; so all are to be made alive in Christ; but in different classes or "orders." It is also evident from what Paul here says, that the bodies of all the resurrected will differ in character and nature, in the resurrection, from what they were in death: "For thou sowest not the body that shall be." The difference is, it is sown a corruptible body, but is raised an incorruptible body—not subject, therefore, to physical decay or death any more.

"The second death," therefore, is not physical death. It must necessarily be, therefore, the condition into which those to be punished enter, after the eternal judgment. It is a separation from God and the rewards of the redeemed—a keen realization of the justice of the decision of God in their cases respectively; a vivid remembrance of having rejected the infinite love of the Father, in the gift of the precious Son, his only begotten Son; their having derided all the offers of proffered mercy divine; their consequent loss of a part in the first resurrection and the glories of the millennial reign, their loss of celestial glory, and a place with those redeemed from sin by the blood of the Savior, through the mercy of the Father. Their experiences up to and including the time and work of the eternal judgment will have greatly enlarged their understanding of the things that pertain to the reign of God, and consequent increase will be realized by them in their great loss; and their sense of regret will be correspondingly increased. This increased knowledge so intensifies the situation, that it is like being cast into a "lake that burns with fire and brimstone." The intensified remorse, this keen regret, the impassable "gulf" of God's justice, gnaws away as a worm that "dieth not." It burns as a fire unquenchable! To be thus imprisoned till "the very last mite" is paid,—sin be expiated, surely is a great condemnation. (Luke 12: 58.)

But to make a profession of Christianity, and not live it; but to all the guilt of the common sinner add the great sin of hypocrisy, surely renders one culpable to a greater degree.

Then in the audience of all the people he said unto his disciples, Beware of the scribes, which desire to walk in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the highest seats in the synagogues, and the chief rooms at feasts; which devour widows' houses, and for a shew make long prayers: the same shall receive greater damnation.—Luke 20: 45-47.

That word "greater," is a comparative term, which, in the relation in which it is used by the Savior, amounts to nothing, if the penalty for sin be physical death, which is the same to all the finally impenitent.

But, to embrace the gospel in its fullness, and go on to receive of its great blessings, be a partaker of its gifts, receive of its glorious visions, enjoy all that heaven could bestow upon man in the flesh, and then willfully turn and depart from God, most assuredly subjects such to the greatest condemnation. Such are the angels of the Devil, and sons of perdition. Such sin against the Holy Ghost, after having received it. They commit the unpardonable sin. Surely for such, even the glory typified by the stars is withheld, after the sufferings of God's wrath in eternity. For such, there remains no more sacrifice for sins, and consequently they are beyond the pale of repentance. Infinite love and mercy have done for them all that was possible. They have "trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith" they were "sanctified an unholy thing, and" have "done despite to the Spirit of Grace."

For if we sin willfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin.—Heb. 10: 26-29.

For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again to repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.—Heb. 6: 4-6.

Impossible to renew them again to repentance? Heaven having done all that was possible to be done for them, and having willfully rejected all, has no more inducement for them. Having willfully turned from heaven's joys, light, glory, truth, grace, mercy, and infinite love, after having drank of its eternal truths and attained to a demonstrated knowledge of it, by the revelations of the Holy Ghost (1 Cor. 2: 9-13), they are left to reap the fruit of their doings. Like "the angels that sinned," they are cast down to hell, and delivered into chains of darkness, and reserved unto judgment. (2 Peter 2: 5.)

How wondrous the subject of the judgment eternal, as set forth in the revelations of God. How consistent with the character of a loving Father,—infinite in wisdom, love, truth, justice, and mercy; and with whom those attributes never decrease or change, and who will judge and mete to all the race of his created children according to their works. How the heart goes out in reverence to the great Judge of all. How ennobling this conception of "our Father" is to all who have the understanding enlightened by it. How unreasonable, insignificant, and shortsighted the imaginations of weak man on this subject seem, as they are set forth in their sermons, articles of religion, confessions of faith, when compared with the statements of Deity! The innate justice of man ought to teach him better regarding this subject than to adopt the outrageous and extreme views of either the annihilationists, or of those who believe the never-ending literal lake of fire and brimstone, and the burning of the wicked eternally.

Either extreme view misrepresents God, and really benefits no one.

"Everlasting fire," and "everlasting" or "eternal punishment," are phrases expressive of the punishment inflicted by the Everlasting—the Eternal One, as distinguished from man's temporal inflictions; without the most distant reference to the time of its duration. The qualifying phrases "eternal," and "everlasting" qualify the fire or the punishment, as to its character and source, without any reference to the duration of it. Such punishment is that of the Eternal or Everlasting One. It also carries with it the idea of the last punishment, or the final one, whether it be long or short. God does inflict temporal judgments on men, as in the case of the antediluvians, and the Sodomites suffered "the vengeance of eternal fire;" yet both those peoples will appear at the final "eternal judgment." (Matt. 11: 24; 1 Pet. 3: 18-20; with chapter 4: 5, 6; Heb. 6: 2).

The eternal fire with which the cities of the plains were destroyed has long since died out. It did not burn eternally. And by the last Scripture above-cited we learn that there is to be "the eternal judgment." But will God be eternally judging the race? If so, when will the time of punishment arrive? It is regarding the idea that men will be eternally punished, or eternally destroyed, that the revelations of God are silent.

It is nowhere written that the wicked shall either be destroyed or punished eternally. And here we may safely rest, so far as the punishment of the impenitent and the second death are concerned.

How vast the difference between the ideas, eternal punishment, and being punished eternally—how vast!

THE SUN DARKENED, MAY 19, 1780.
We surely will be pardoned for reference to one more point, made to do so great duty, and so greatly deceptive, by the theory we have weighed, so far, and found wanting at all contradistinguishing points. In many of the leading books and tracts put before the public by the advocates of these theories, it is sought to be impressed on the minds of all, that the very remarkable and as yet scientifically unexplained "dark day" of May 19, 1780, is a definite sign that the last generation preceding the second coming of Christ in glory had arrived, by applying it to the statements of Jesus, when foretelling the signs that indicate that coming at hand:—

Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. . . . Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.—Matt. 24: 29, 30, 34. (See Luke 21: 25-32.)

Because the Savior says that the generation in which the signs here referred to by him would be shown forth, shall not pass till all be fulfilled, and as the darkening of the sun is here by him included, it is assumed that the darkening of the sun in 1780 is, must be, the fulfillment of this prediction.

A careful examination of the language of our Master indicates that the generation mentioned is to begin before the signs there referred to begin to be accomplished; how long before, we cannot determine; and all those signs, including the second advent, are all fulfilled before it ends. We are not informed that that generation is to be longer than ordinary, but it surely will have to be unusually long, extraordinarily so, should it have begun prior to May, 1780, and to extend beyond this writing, July, 1896.

The angels have not gone forth yet to gather the elect. The sign there predicted by the Savior to appear in heaven has not been seen yet. Nor have the tribes of the earth mourned yet, as here foretold. The truth or falsity of the application depends on what our Lord meant by the word “generation.” The word “generation” may be used in one of three ways, four at the outside. It may be used as designating the race of mankind in general, or some special subdivision of the race, as in Genesis 5:1. It may be used as indicating the average life of man, as relating to their succession of each other; as in our day the average life of man is said to be thirty-one or thirty-two years. As used in the genealogies of our Savior, (Matt. 1; Luke 3), or, it may constructively mean a definite period of time, as in Genesis 15:13-16, as in Exodus 12:40, 41; in which case four generations include four hundred and thirty years just. One generation here is nearly one hundred and eight years. It seems evident that Christ did not attach either of the first two meanings here given to the word “generation” as he here used it. It would have the race cease at about the time of the second coming, or some division of it; and that would be so indefinite as to render the subject impractical. But if he used it as God did to Abraham, the prophecy, according to this theory, has overrun a generation some eight years and over, and the Savior has not come yet.

I would much rather accept the conclusion that the application here made by this theory is wrong, than to be brought to conclude that Jesus' prophecy will be or has been a failure. But should the theory, in its misapplication, fail us here, we will not be disappointed. It is a notable theory for failures. Jumping from one presumption to another, to prop up and save a falling cause, is like springing from one piece of timber to another of a storm-tossed ship to save from being found in the inevitable wreck.

When the generation referred to by the Lord, in the subject under consideration, has come, the signs predicted will be manifest, and no failure will be experienced. No uncertainty will attend the manifestations, so far as those who are watching for them are concerned. Jesus, no doubt, uses the word “generation” here in the same sense in which he uses it when he says:—

The men of Nineveh shall rise in the judgment with this generation.—Matt. 12:41, 42.
All these things shall come upon this generation.—Matt. 23:36.

Christ brought to the generation among whom he lived and labored, the sum total of the light of all the prophets, from Abel all the way down the ages to the Prophet Zacharias; and hence the responsibility of that generation was a full aggregation of their responsibility for the blood of all the prophets to that time. Now some of those who heard the voice of the Savior, and witnessed his labors, lived to see the destruction of Jerusalem, and the desolation of their governmental house, and the remnant led away captive among the nations. And it was to these things that Jesus referred, no doubt, when he said:—

Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children; for, behold, the days are coming in the which, etc.—Luke 23:28, 29.

In the days of that people and their children. This will enable us to understand what Jesus meant by the word “generation.” The signs given to indicate the second advent near, are by Jesus placed in close proximity to each other; and to the second coming itself,—all to be within one generation. That is, many of those who are living when the sun shall be darkened, as foretold by our Lord, will with their children live to see the Lord come! The day nor the hour will be known; so heed the admonition, “Be ye also ready.”

Let it not be forgotten that Joel the prophet places the darkening of the sun and moon after the former and latter rains are restored to Palestine. This was done in 1846-1853. This the land with its productiveness now returning now testifies to. It is no longer prophecy or faith; it is now history. He places the darkening of the sun after the children of Israel are restored back to their anciently promised land—Palestine (Joel 2:21-27). He locates it about the time the children of Israel accept the gospel, and the Lord pours out his Spirit on them, and their sons and daughters prophesy. But these things, some of which are now coming to pass, are history, but are stoutly denied by the advocates of this theory right in the face of the fact that they are now being accomplished. The Prophet Joel says, after thus foretelling the restoration of the fertility of the land of Palestine, which is now fulfilled, and after the children of Israel—literal—are restored to that land, which is now being fulfilled, and is a matter of history:—

And it shall come to pass afterward. . . . And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. Joel 2:28-31.

From the foregoing considerations we may safely conclude that the darkening of the sun, May 19, 1780, was at least one hundred years too early to be the fulfillment of the prophecy of our Lord, as recorded by Matthew and Luke.

All theories looking to or for the second advent of Christ before the Jews are restored to Palestine, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem, will prove to be deceptive, disappointing, and false. Who shall estimate the infinite and stupendous consequences of deceptive and false theories and doctrines in effect to those misled by them, in their relation to the great future? Is it not much better to prayerfully investigate and find the truth now?

Seek first the kingdom of heaven, and its righteousness.

Prove all things, hold fast that which is good.

Truth saves and sanctifies;—not error!

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Northern Illinois District:— All having tithing or free will offerings to contribute to the support of the work of the Lord, can send it to F. M. Cooper, No. 240 West Lake Street, Chicago, Illinois, care of James Keir. All money sent will be promptly accepted.

It is hoped that all, acting under the direction of the word of God, will feel moved by love for the work to contribute of their means to its support as the Lord may have prospered them.

We also invite the saints in the district to inform us of the needs of the work in their several localities, and we will do our best to supply the demands, so far as the limited ministerial force will permit.

Dist. Pres. and Bishop's agent.

July 26, 1897.

To the Saints in the Northern District of California; Greeting:—I am sorry I am compelled to appeal to you again for assistance to fill my calling honorably. I have no funds to supply the elders' wives with and the poor and needy ones in my charge. The Bishop has no funds. I have none of my own to advance. What am I to do? Are you willing to let the worthy and needy ones suffer? Please let those respond who can.

I feel sad when I know the saints need their scanty allowance and I have it not to send them. Let us awaken to a sense of our duty. Let us not be among those who will hear: "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not unto me."

In gospel bonds, with great desire for the welfare of God's covenant children,

C. A. PARKIN, Bishop's Agent.

To certain ones (whose names are now forgotten) I loaned my copies of Lucy Smith's History of the Smith Family, also Tullidge's "Life of Joseph the Prophet." I would be glad to receive them again, and will thank those who have them upon their being returned. The call for the bound Heralds last winter was successful in causing the return of the lost book, and I hope this will result as well.

Now we have set it late so that it would come after the peach crop was over, so we desire all to come and let us have a good time. We shall try and have good singing and music, and it would be well for those young people living at Mt. Grove to practice some good hymns. Come in wagon, and bring tents, those that have any. A SCHOOL FOR PARENTS.

THE retiring President of the Detroit Board of education in his annual report makes the valuable and novel suggestion that courses be established for parents as well as children in the public schools. His idea is to give some of the advantages of schooling to grown people who have come to America from foreign countries where they have not had the advantages of free tuition. The suggestion is an admirable one, but the Tribune would favor its extension. It is not alone foreign parents who need to go to school, but American parents also, and the better educated and more wealthy these parents are the more they need the schooling. It may not be practical to get them into school, but the need remains just the same. Parental training has been growing more and more lax for two or three generations past. Parental discipline has been similarly loosened during the same period. In another generation, unless parents take a decided stand for their rights, they will be ruled by the children.

This matter is a serious one, because the prevalent lawlessness in the schools and out of the schools is due almost entirely to the lack of home training. The Springfield (Massachusetts) Republican recently opened its columns to a discussion of this subject, and a school teacher wrote as follows:—

ing their children entirely over to the school for training and purposely neglecting to do their own duty. From much of the talk that you hear you would be forced to believe that the school is the only agency in civilization. Yet there are three great factors for good that should be working together for the saving of the young—the home, the church, and the school. There is work enough to be done for all these three factors—the load is heavy enough for all. The home is the natural nursery, the other two being more or less artificial. Nothing can take the place of the home—the father and the mother—and when we try to do this we are simply substituting an artificial for a natural process. The home must be first and foremost in its influence, and the other agencies must be assistants.”

Another writer said:—

“In a great many American homes of to-day there is no clear, sharp, well defined authority. There is, of course, in these homes a great deal of compliance with the wishes and desires of the parents. But it is not obedience on the part of the children, nor the exercise of authority on the part of the parents. The parents and children are simply getting along with each other. The parents endure the children and the children bear with the parents. Each ‘passage at arms’ results in a compromise or a drawn battle. When there is no clashing of interests there is mutual affection and sunshine.”

The above suggestions are as true as gospel. The lack of parental training at home is responsible for the lack of salutary discipline in the schools and the lawlessness which prevails among children out of the schools. The old-fashioned idea of juvenile government is rapidly disappearing, and in its place the children are governing the parents. This has increased to such an extent that children are mainly sent to school to get rid of them, and when not in school are sent out on the streets for the same reason, where they remain until midnight or thereabouts. The damage which they are thus prevented from doing at home they do not hesitate to inflict upon other people, and with absolute impunity, because the person of a small boy is regarded as sacred however much of a nuisance and evil he may become. There is not one case in a hundred where children are trained to yield implicit obedience to their parents or to have that respect for their elders which was the rule fifty or sixty years ago.

Without some serious, honest exercise of home influence and discipline the crop of boys coming up will to a considerable extent result in hobos, tramps, loafers, blacklegs, and idle and worthless characters, while the girls will be seeking or forced into divorces to be got rid of. The politicians, as the result of such impotent rearing, will nearly all turn out to be boodlers, embezzlers, and untrustworthy men, destitute of all moral character. The business men will be unreliable. Few of them will believe that honesty is the best policy or a good policy in business. Their idea of business will be to cheat, jockey, overreach, and deceive all they can. That is the present idea of smartness. Still others will grow up into professional criminals.

The lack of home training is the principal cause of all this lawlessness, and the school has set the example by liberating children from wholesome correction. So long as a boy is not punished at home and cannot be punished at school it is no wonder that he feels at liberty to do what he pleases. He knows that he will not be held to any responsibility, and hence he gives free rein to his vicious propensities. He knows that he is safe from discipline at home and that he is not liable to police interference. This is the reason why there is not a neighborhood in Chicago which is not at the mercy of the boys led by hoodlums who insult householders, destroy their property, and conduct themselves as they please, and resent with obscenity, profanity, or even violence any remonstrance against their viciousness.

There is scarcely an alley or vacant lot in the city of Chicago where they will not find ample encouragement from hobos, tramps, and loafers who spend their days and nights in them swilling beer, they being just as exempt as boys from the danger of police interference.

The Detroit superintendent hit the nail squarely on the head when he recommended school facilities for parents. They need educating in the fundamentals of juvenile training. They need to be told how to exercise discipline. They need to be impressed with the necessity of making children obey. They need to be told how to free themselves from the tyranny of children and to be encouraged in doing it. If something is not done to secure respect for the rights of grown up people and at the same time to curb the insolent, disrespectful, ungovernable, and criminal tendencies of children, it will not be long before the whirlwind is reaped from the wind which careless, indifferent, and timid parents are now sowing. It will not be long before the usefulness of the home as well as of the schools will be destroyed.—Chicago Tribune.

DANGERS TO SIGHT IN SCHOOLS.

DR. RICHARD H. DERBY has performed a public service in calling attention to the fact "that any child who is an inmate of our public institutions is far more likely to lose his sight from the inroads of contagious ophthalmia than to lose his life from scarlet fever or any of the diseases which are subject to quarantine regulation by boards of health." Ill-lighted classrooms, badly-made desks, carelessness in the placing of children with weak eyes in regard to the light are among the causes given by Dr. Derby for the wide prevalence of eye diseases in schools. The parents of the children frequently resort to foolish treatment, such as the injection of mother's milk into the eye, or the application of a piece of beefsteak or a raw oyster, all of which are looked upon by the ignorant as infallible cures for every disease of the eye. Under such empirical treatment, a case of contagious ophthalmia is not only a source of great danger to the patient himself, but to all of his fellow-pupils, for the malady may easily be transferred through the medium of a towel, by the use of the same water in washing, and sometimes even through the atmosphere. When Dr. Derby visited a number of institutions with a view to preparing a report on the condition of the inmates' eyes, he found that among 7440 children not less than 1428, or nearly one fifth, were suffering from contagious eye diseases. Not infrequently the child himself is ignorant of his defective vision, and the tutors jump to the conclusion that he is stupid or lazy, when the apparent dullness or indolence is due only to the condition of his eyes. Dr. Derby says that many children who now pass for dullards would do very well if their eyes were put into a healthy state. He is also of the opinion that many cases of short-sightedness and other complaints of the eye may be prevented by lighting the school rooms properly; by seating the pupils in such a way that they will not find it necessary to strain their eyes; by so placing the desks that the light will fall over the left shoulder, and not in such a way as to cast a shadow; by having properly constructed desks, so that the children will not be obliged to stoop over their work, and by observing the rules of hygiene.

VALUABLE PAPYRI.

In a card to the Boston Transcript Vice President William C. Winslow says: "The allusion to the finding of papyri by Mr. Grenfell, of our Egypt exploration fund, in Monday's Transcript, leads me to state that these 200 or 300 rolls range from the Roman conquest to early Arab times, and that among them are early Christian documents of rarest interest. One of these, already examined, is a collection of the sayings of Christ, some of them not in the gospels. The place, Behneseh on the map, is the site of Oxysuchus, where the fish by that name was worshiped."

The United Brethren General Conference, at its recent session, had a discussion of the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony of their discipline. A large number of women had interested themselves in the matter and worked for its elimination, but the conference refused, and the word remains.

THE SAINTS' HERALD
REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD will be fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

LAMONI, IOWA, AUG. 11, 1897.

TWO PRIESTHOODS.

ANY subject connected with the gospel, or attaching to the administration of gospel ordinances, ought to be considered in its entirety, and no special theory ought to be raised or maintained upon an isolated passage of scripture to the exclusion of others.

Among nearly all classes of so-called Latter Day Saints, in the divisions that arose after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, there grew up what appears to have been an exaggerated conception of priesthood, that gave to certain officers something in the line of priesthood of a more or less mysterious nature, different to that held by other officers in the church.

This conception was an error, as we view it, and the holding of it has wrought mischief, helped to create and keep alive divergences that have been hurtful to the general cause, and an especial detriment to the particular class holding to them.

In section 104 of the Lamoni edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, which was section 3, in the Kirtland, or edition of 1835, the statement is made that "there are, in the church, two priesthoods; namely, the Melchisedec, and the Aaronic."

All officers in the church belong to one or the other of these two, no matter what their grade of authority, name, quorum, or duties of office. Any conception of priesthood, as to kind, quality, or name, in the church, differing from this is a mistake, and contrary to the law and the testimony.

Section 83, of Lamoni edition, section 4, in the edition of 1835, section 84 in the Utah edition, upon which many have based conclusions and theories of a higher or separate priesthood, and which was given to the church in 1832, treats of two priesthoods only, the "high priesthood" and "the lesser priesthood." Paragraph 5 makes the offices of elder and bishop to be appendages, necessary adjuncts in and belonging to the "high priesthood;" the offices of teachers and deacons to be appendages, necessary parts belonging to the lesser priesthood.

The sacred inspiration that gave this revelation traces the higher priesthood, which is called the holy priesthood, from Moses to Adam; and states that this "priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years." There is nothing that can be connected with the priesthood, or imagined in relation to it that is stronger or grander than this simple statement makes the fact to be. This is found in paragraph 2. Paragraph 3 in a similar way states that the Lord "confirmed a priesthood" upon Aaron and his seed, which "continueth and abideth forever, with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God."

No one not purposely blind can fail to understand that the priesthood here called "the holiest order" is the Melchisedec, or high priesthood, and is the one referred to in connection with the Aaronic in paragraph 6 in the expression, "For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken, and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies."

One of the things that attaches to the faithful holding of the priesthood line of authority, comprehended in the unity of the two, the higher and the lesser, the Melchisedec and the Aaronic, is that all that the "Father hath shall be given unto him." This is in accord and fulfillment of the "oath and covenant," established by God when the priesthood was instituted, just as stated by Paul in the letter to the Hebrews, where, reasoning upon this same priesthood he wrote that after the similitude of Melchisedec another priest was to arise, "For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec."

Referring to the priests who ministered at the altar under the law he wrote:—

(For those priests were made without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.) For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for ever more.—Heb. 7:17, 21, 28.

There is nothing in this, or the whole of the eighty-third section that warrants the conclusion that there is any priesthood other than one of the two referred to by name specifically, in which there is a ceremonial oath to be administered by man, in an ordinance of any sort. That none was contemplated is clear from what follows in paragraph 10,

Therefore, go ye into all the world, and whatsoever place ye cannot go into, ye shall send, that the testimony may go from you into all the world, unto every creature. And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you, for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests.

There is no mistaking this language. There was conferred upon those men called in the opening of this dispensation of restoration, the same kind of priesthood and authority that the apostles called and ordained at Jerusalem held; neither more, nor less. We nowhere read in either the Old or New Testament of a ceremonial ordinance connected with the administration of the gospel, in which the formal giving and taking an oath was required. Nor is there in the revelations by direction of which the church was established, its work begun and carried on, anything requiring such oath and covenant making, by command, or the giving of details, or terms of statement. The history of the church from its founding by revelation in 1827 to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, nowhere shows any information of there having been any such oath or covenant used, or any direction requiring it. The commission given in Matthew 28 and Mark 16, is broad and full; the one given in section 83, paragraphs 10 and 11, is like it, and in neither is there a provision for a formal oath, or covenant, or oath and covenant, not found in the acceptance of the word, obedience thereto in the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands, all of which if done in good faith is followed by the conferring of the Holy Ghost, which is the seal of the covenant.

There is no evidence in the history of the church that those early elders received, or expected to receive anything better, or different than the two priesthoods constituting one authority of many grades of office and duty; and that they did receive the priesthood specifically named in section 83 is positively stated in paragraph 6:—

And all those who come not unto this priesthood, which ye have received, which I now confirm upon you who are present, this day, by mine own voice out of the heavens, and even I have given the heavenly hosts and mine angels charge concerning you.

This shows conclusively that all the right and authority and power and priesthood and privilege necessary to the establishing and building up the church, the kingdom, in these last days were included and conferred in the two lines named in section 104 first referred to in this article and named in section 83, in the following:—

They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron, and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom and the elect of God; and also all they who receive this priesthood receiveth me, saith the Lord, for he that receiveth my servants receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth my Father, and he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom. Therefore, all that my Father hath shall be given him; and this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood.

The principle by which this peculiar sonship is made effective to the transforming men into the sons of Moses and sons of Aaron, is given by the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Galatian church:—

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.—Gal. 3: 26-29.

This agrees with what the Savior taught, as related by John:—

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God; only to them who believe on his name.—John 1: 12.

To put a construction on any part of section 83, that permits the calling, choosing, or ordaining men unto a priesthood separate and distinct from that conferred and exercised by the apostles as shown in the New Testament; and that conferred upon and exercised by those to whom the revelation was given, by reason of which a new line of authority, or society of men is created by oath and covenant couched in terms and expressed in forms administered by men, is to do violence to the whole tenor of section 104, section 83 itself, and the teaching of the New Testament, both the law and the testimony.

From the love of mystery, the tendency to secrecy of action, the mistaken sense of security, the desire for complete rule and domination, the idea that unity is to be perfected and perpetuated by bonds imposed by oaths and covenants secretly administered, grew a variety of bonds, oaths, covenants, and associations in the church, or different portions of believers originating from it, all through from the Masonic fraternity, the Danites, the Baneemytes, the Priestess' Lodge, the Illuminate, the Reincarnates, the Endowments, and all other orders association in which was secured by pledge and promise of secrecy, or an oath with a covenant, from all of which mischief, resulting in loss, has constantly occurred.

In a close watch upon the results which have followed the divergences, in the various branches into which the church was split, including the church in Utah, with its plural marriage and attendant ceremonies, Father Cutler's extra priesthood, Charles B. Thompson's reincarnation ideas, Prophet Joseph Morris' heavenly orders, and Pres. J. J. Strang's kingdom; and a careful study of the books, and history of the church, we have reached the conclusion that no work requiring secrecy, bonds, oaths, or covenants including penalties, is provided for in the gospel dispensation. That the oath and covenant named and contemplated in section 83, are the oath and covenant made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of which the coming and work of Jesus the Christ was a part, and which was remembered and reinstated in the last days by the sending of the angel with the restored gospel. This is clearly the meaning of the revelation found in section 20, Lamoni edition; 47 in the edition of 1835, 1846; and 22 in Utah edition.

Behold, I say unto you, that all old covenants have I caused to be done away in this thing and this is a new and an everlasting covenant, even that which was from the beginning.

This was said relative to the ordinance and force of baptism; and in strict harmony with the command in Matthew 28 and Mark 16.

That men who are obedient to the divine command to repent and be baptized, and who receive the Holy Spirit through the authoritative administration by laying on of hands, are called and ordained to the Aaronic and Melchisedec priesthoods, forming one harmonious working whole known as "The Priesthood," may and do become the spiritual sons of Moses and Aaron, respectively, we are quite willing to believe possible. But we are not willing, nor ready to accept the idea, nor the claim no matter by whom made, that there is either in the church, or necessary to its existence or its work, an order of priesthood called of God, ordained because of provisions in the law, owing its existence, virtue, and power to ordinances of selection and ordination in which oaths and covenants are administered, or required.

To us the oath of the Lord by which the priesthood was created to continue forever, the covenant established between man and God in obedience and baptism on man's part, the accepting of the obedient and faithful ones manifested by the conferring of the Holy Ghost and Eternal Life, on the part of God, are the oath and covenant of section 83 and other passages where such are referred to in the law. Secrecy, mystery, the grasping of what is not provided for, outside of the plain provisions of the gospel of Jesus Christ, have no attractions for us; and we believe should have none for all true believers.

Whosoever is born of water and the Spirit, is born of the gospel a child of God, and by virtue of the call of the Master unto the priesthood in either line, is a son of Moses, or of Aaron, respectively; and thus in due time the sons of Moses and of Aaron will offer sacrifices in righteousness unto God in the fullness of time under the gospel dispensation in the New Jerusalem.

It is time that Latter Day Saints should cease following after loose vagaries, however resplendent skillful men may make them to appear. Mysteries disappear as we approach them and need to know what may have been hidden by them, the darkness of them being dissipated by the light of truth divine. Let us live in that light and cease striving after the mysterious in unwarranted ways.

NEW MOUNDS DISCOVERED.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 18.—The Dispatch publishes a detailed account of an exploring expedition sent out by it in charge of Louis De Lesley to locate, survey, and define the prehistoric mounds of the Missouri Valley, in South Dakota. The expedition was so successful that another immense area of work has been opened in the field of archæology. The largest group was located opposite the mouth of Grand River, and contains 600,000 square feet of territory, with eighty-four counted and surveyed mounds on the field, at an elevation of 175 feet above the Missouri River. Immense quantities of prehistoric specimens were secured and brought back to this city. It seems as though an entire prehistoric settlement had been properly located.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. A. PARKIN wrote card, San Francisco, July 22:—

We are expecting a large attendance at our reunion at Oakland. Brn. Parker and Barmore have done some preaching on the street to good-sized crowds.

Bro. A. B. Purfurst, lately baptized at Lamoni, writes from Los Angeles, his present residence, July 25:—

I myself am well, thanks to God, joyous, and very grateful to the Lord for the gift of his Holy Spirit and for the communion with the saints, for all those countless blessings that he does bestow upon me from day to day. I feel so glad, and thankful too, that I have had the honor of meeting you and the other brethren in authority in Christ's own church, and shall never forget the blessed time I have had in your company and whilst among God's people in and about Lamoni, St. Joseph, Stewartville, and vicinity. May the Lord abundantly bless every one of his people in all parts of the world.

Bro. A. H. Parsons, referring to statements made by a Brighamite elder or elders, which appeared in a late Herald, writes from Philadelphia the 30th ult., as follows, to brethren of the business department:—

Your letter at hand, also notice in Herald. I waited to obtain the information necessary for you to look up that case, if it was true. I learned to-day through Bro. Kent, who saw the man himself last Sunday and talked with him, but could not give his name, that he said he sent twenty-five cents in a letter for some tracts. That is all there is in it. While this Charles A. Streeper made a great ado, charging the Reorganization with being dishonest, in a curtly and mean way, I was well satisfied then that he was not telling the truth either in that matter or against Bro. Sheehy. It seems these fellows must have it that we are persecuting them.

Bro. L. R. Devore, Graysville, Ohio, August 2:—

I arrived home from Fayette City, Pennsylvania, last Thursday; baptized eight while there. The branch is in excellent condition; Bro. D. L. Shinn baptized four. I return there as soon as I can get my affairs in shape. I think the Church History is grand.

M. T. Short, Madison, Wisconsin, August 3:—

Fourteen discourses were delivered in the tent ere it left on 25th ult. for Ablemans, this State. I gave forth eight of them and nine more since in a chapel in Greenbush, which is the suburban part of this capital city. I begin a series this evening, near by in a schoolhouse; and thus we work along all the while. Am quite well and comparatively happy.

Bro. A. B. Pierce, Plainville, Massachusetts, August 4:—

Elder F. O. Coombs gave a very instructive and edifying sermon to the saints here on last Sunday morning; his subject was upon the "Jews." The writer was present at Attleboro last Friday evening; also present Elder C. A. Coombs in charge, assisted by Elder F. O. Coombs; meeting held at Sr. Cicily Siddall's; refreshing season from the Lord.

Bro. John M. Terry, of the Far West, Missouri, district, wrote July 26:—

So far as I know the work is onward. In and about St. Joseph there are strong efforts made by the local brethren to get the gospel into new fields, to "break up fallow ground," which is encouraging.

Bro. J. B. Smith, of No. 672 East Fourth Street, Salt Lake City, Utah, expresses the following on the finance question:—

It looks to me that it would be a good plan to establish storehouses in Lamoni and elsewhere, if needed, so the members can bring their produce as tithing, which I believe they would do, where otherwise they would not be able to give money, as their amount of money is so limited that all of it is consumed in taxes, interest, clothes, etc. Of course the church needs money, but I believe the produce would help keep more of the money they receive.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE saints of Kewanee are to build a new church of brick. The old one was in the way of public improvement standing at the head of a street which the city desired to open and had to be abandoned. So the brethren took counsel together, sold the old building, secured a new site, and will build. Good success attend them, is the wish of all.

Bro. James Knox, agent for the Brazil, Indiana, Times, wrote July 26 that there was opportunity there, and in the neighborhood, for some missionary effort. He offers a home for an elder to occupy while trying to warn the people. Can any of the Indiana force go to his help?

Bro. Clement Maleor, at Spring Valley, Illinois, would like some elder to come in there who could properly dispute with an infidel element, of which he says there are many there. Can the Northern Illinois elders accommodate him?

Bro. Thomas Bell, of the Decatur district missionary force, has been engaged in discussion with one Rev. George P. Brown, of the Holiness persuasion. The result has been good for the cause and prospects for additions to the church. The expressions of the people are friendly; they ask that preaching be continued.

Abraham Lincoln once received a letter asking for a "sentiment" and his autograph. He replied: "Dear Madam: when you ask a stranger for that which is of interest only to yourself, 'always inclose a stamp.'"—A. Lincoln.—Ex.

The Syracuse, New York, Post-Ex- press of July 22, sent us by some good brother, has an article on the origin of "Mormonism," called out of the fertile brain of some writer by the recent pioneer jubilee celebration at Salt Lake City, Utah. It is not practicable to reply to every misleading article that appears, but well to reply when possible. The progress of the work will correct the public mind, we trust, in due time.

Bro. W. B. Toney, of the Indian Territory field, writes that success is resulting from his efforts, though in the face of opposition from some of the Disciple faith.

Elder Frederick M., eldest son of President Joseph Smith, and Sr. Ruth L., daughter of Sr. A. E. Cobb, of Lamoni, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's mother on the evening of Tuesday, August 3; President Smith officiating. The HERALD extends hearty congratulations and expresses sincere good wishes for the future of the happy couple.

Bro. E. A. Stedman returned to his field in Minnesota on the 3d inst., after a brief visit home in attendance at the wedding of his daughter, notice of which appears in this issue.

Mr. H. E. Lesan, City Editor of the Ottumwa, Iowa, Courier visited Lamoni of late interviewing President Smith and others with a view to preparing an illustrated article on Lamoni and the faith and general position of the church, for the Midland Monthly for the coming October. Our people may be interested in reading what Mr. Lesan has to say of us.

Canovas del Castillo, Prime Minister of Spain, was assassinated by an Italian anarchist at Santa Agueda August 8. Consternation in Spanish cities has resulted. Leaders of all parties have been summoned to Madrid to lend patriotic support to the monarchy. Important results affecting Cuba, including Weyler's recall, also Carlist uprisings in Spain, are predicted.

There is hope for better observance and execution of the law in Ohio. The Attorney General of the State has begun proceedings to remove the sheriff of Champaign County, for his conduct in the riot in connection with a lynching at Urbana in June last. The proceedings are based on the failure of the sheriff to protect a prisoner from a mob and to arrest the leaders of the mob after the lynching. Similar action will be taken against the mayor of Urbana, who is also charged with dereliction of duty.

Terms of peace proposed by General Weyler, the Spanish commander, have been rejected by General Gomez, on the ground, it is said, that they gave Spain all the advantages, left Cuba to carry the immense burden of debt, and provided for home rule in name only.

Sharp earthquake shock at Trieste, Austria, August 4.

The United States Government has sent a fleet of war vessels to Hawaii in view of possible complications growing out of the proposed annexation of the islands.

Enormous forest fires have been raging for a week past in the Telagh district of the province of Oran, Algeria. A body of 1,500 soldiers of the foreign legion have fought the fires night and day since the outbreak, but without effect; advices dated August 3.

The great volcano of Mayon, Island of Luzon, of the Philippine group, became active on June 26 and continued so. Advices via Hongkong up to July 8 state that five hundred people are known to be killed, and not improbable that the loss of life would reach thousands, depending on the length of the eruption. Eighteen towns in the vicinity, including adjoining plantations, are reported to have been destroyed.

Madrid advices dated August 3 state that "there have been further troubles here growing out of the people's disinclination to submit to the octroi tax, the duty levied on provisions which are brought into the city. To-day most of the shopkeepers in the outlying district of the city closed their places of business as a protest against the tax. Those shops which were not closed were attacked by mobs, who smashed the windows and fittings. The outlook is ugly, and strong precautionary measures have been taken by the authorities."

Constantinople advices, August 2. From present indications the powers will be compelled to send another ultimatum to Turkey. "The action of Tewfik Pasha in submitting a series of amendments to the draft of the treaty of peace completed at Saturday's sitting of the Ambassadors, is regarded as meaning a delay of two or three weeks in the signing of the preliminaries of peace, and it is further thought it will possibly necessitate another threat in the nature of an ultimatum. A Paris dispatch says that the ambassadors are determined to maintain the wording of their draft of the treaty of peace without any change."

Constantinople news dated August 3 state that three Turkish ironclads left the Dardanelles on the 2d and were joined there by the second division of the Turkish fleet, consisting of seven war vessels, all of which sailed for the island of Crete. Fears are entertained that the departure of the fleet will lead to a collision with the international fleet in Cretan waters, in view of the announcement of the foreign admirals that they have decided to oppose by force the landing of Turkish reinforcements in Crete. Paris advices, same date, are to the effect that the Turkish civil government of Crete had been notified of such intention and had replied that he could not accept such decision, apparently taking the ground that the Porte would persist in its intention to reinforce the Turkish garrison in Crete. Later news is, in effect, that the Turkish admiral affirms that the fleet was proceeding to Mitylene, in the Mediterranean, for ordinary naval maneuvers.

August 4. Foreign ambassadors are struggling with the question of Turkish evacuation of Thessaly. The Porte demands partial retention of the territory until the payment of indemnity by Greece, but the powers firmly refuse to accede to the demands beyond the concession of certain strategic points.

August 5. Turkish officials now manifest a desire to expedite peace negotiations with the powers, because of unhealthy condition of troops in Thessaly, lack of funds, and the supposedly threatening attitude of Bulgaria, Servia, and Montenegro.

The belief of the Cretans that the Sultan had charged an officer with instructions to wreck the autonomy scheme, has resulted in an official declaration of Cretan provincial deputies in favor on autonomy and asking the withdrawal of Turkish troops from Crete.

The town of Pohlbach, Wittlich district, Germany, partly destroyed by fire; three lives lost.

Two hundred persons drowned at Kremenchug, Russia, caused by high water carrying away a bath house.

A south pole expedition will sail from Antwerp, August 15.

Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Iowa miners have joined the strikers in the bituminous coal fields and prospects are favorable for a more general struggle between miners and operators. Coal is scarce and industries and private consumers are suffering for fuel supplies.

Those going to the Nauvoo or Bluff Park reunion from Southern Iowa and adjacent points will be interested in the advertisement of the popular Keokuk and Western road, in our present issue. See rate and time table announced. The K. & W. is a pleasant route, making good connections at Keokuk for Bluff Park or Montrose.

Bishop E. L. Kelley is still quite sick and confined to his bed, weak from a two weeks' run of fever, of some kind. He is now slowly improving, but will not be in condition to take up active duties for some time.

From Simla, British India, August 6: "The British political officer at Malakand reports that practically all the tribes joined in the late attacks on the British forces in the Chitral district. He adds that 2,700 men of the enemy were killed and that in addition many of the tribesmen were wounded. The latter are greatly disheartened and much further resistance is not likely.

Letter from Bro. F. G. Pitt dated at Manchester, England, July 27, states that he arrived at Liverpool, the evening of July 23, having left New York on the Campania, on Saturday, the 17th. The passage was pleasant and Sr. Pitt stood the sea voyage well. Bro. Pitt says: "From what little I see of England, I think I shall like it. Of course, everything is so different here from America that I feel exceedingly green. But I am beginning to 'catch on.' I shall appreciate the experience this new field will give me; and hope to use it to good account."

"Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgment here has spurned—
The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet—
Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue,
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true."

AMUSEMENTS—CONTINUED.

"INVESTIGATION into the origin of other games will lead by pleasant paths into quaint old realms of history and mythology, and while affording recreation, will make a pleasant introduction to studies which come later. To those who wish to explore this field we recommend the book, 'Games and Songs of American Children,' by William Wells Newell.

"A magic lantern in the family affords an almost endless fund of amusement and entertainment. It can be obtained for a few dollars, and the average boy or girl of twelve can easily learn to use it. I spent last winter in a family where was an irrepressible boy who, being the only one and having no playmates near, was a veritable 'enfant terrible' from restlessness; it took the whole household to amuse or repress him into endurable order. His father bethought him of a magic lantern as a Christmas present to Tom. After its arrival, peace reigned in that household. Tom soon developed into a first-class showman, and found plenty of occupation to keep him out of mischief during the day in studying up concerning the scenes that he was to exhibit in the evening. Nor was he the only one interested; we all grew to look forward to show night with pleasant anticipation. A magic lantern forms a valuable auxiliary in the journeys we have recommended. Pictures of the place visited give a vividness to the journey that nothing else can. . . .

"A simple experiment shows the action of alcohol upon brain tissue. Put the white of an egg in a glass and pour alcohol on it. The effect seems to be the same as when we drop the white of an egg into hot water—first a misty film, deepening in consistency and whiteness till it is so firm that you can pick it up in your fingers and hold it before the children's astonished eyes. They are sure it must be hot; I have had children shrink from touching the glass lest they burn their fingers. When they do touch it, and find that it is not hot, their wonder fixes in their minds the truth you wish to fasten there—the injury alcohol does the brain. The chief constituents of the brain are similar to those of the white of an egg—albumen and water. Alcohol is such a great water drinker it takes the water away from the albumen, leaving it hard and white. If we drink intoxicating drinks, the alcohol does for the brain what it did for the white of the egg in the glass: it hardens it and unfits it to convey the mind's messages to the muscles; this explains the staggering gait and the aimless movements of the drunken man. . . .

"We have spoken thus at length of indoor family amusements because through them the evenings can be utilized for securing the threefold end we have in view—uniting the family, making children love home, and shielding them from temptation. We believe that nine tenths of the boys and girls who go to ruin go there through misuse of their evenings. We never knew one whose evenings were habitually well spent to turn out badly. Danger lurks in the darkness, and while the education of the street remains what it is there is no safe place, morally, for a child at night, outside of home and its influences. It may seem to you, busy fathers and mothers, too great a sacrifice of time to devote your evenings to amusing your children, but it pays. Not that we would ask you to spend all your evenings in playing with the children; that would not be best either for you or for them; what we plead for is that you should feel your responsibility concerning how the evenings are spent, that you should join the children in their amusements often enough to make them feel your interest and sympathy therein, and realize the fact that you are one with them in their joys as well as in their sorrows. This oneness of feeling is the great thing; few things endanger the unity of the family more seriously than the habit of children seeking their amusements apart from their parents. . . .

"Let us but feel that recreation is necessary and we can have it. The great difficulty is that people do not appreciate this necessity, or, appreciating it, seek for recreation where it cannot be found, in dissipation. Could the time and money spent in gambling, ostensibly for play, in theater going, in hot, close skating rinks, where body, mind, and morals suffer, and in other questionable forms of so-called amusements, be expended in the genuine article, no man, woman, or child in all this land need be deprived of recreation, worthy the name. . . .

"Farmers' wives often wear out before their time and break down nervously, because of the hard monotony of their lives. Farmers' children often grow to dislike the farm and leave it for the same reason. Infuse into this life more brightness by change and recreation, and these evils will be diminished. A little planning will make a week's holiday after harvest possible to almost every farmer and his family. Find some one to care for the stock and the milk, pack up a generous supply of lunch and a meager one of clothes, take your family and start. Once started the hardest part is over. Go with your own team to some pleasant place, and there are pleasant places within a day or two's travel of every farm, camp out and spend the week in resting and fun. Never fear that you will not find enough of the latter in 'this return to barbarism.' Every hour's experience with its haps and mishaps will store up happy memories for the future. Not the least among the benefits of a week spent thus with Nature is the fact that it gives you time and opportunity to become acquainted with your children. You will learn more of their real character, and they of yours, in this week's freedom and abandon than you might gain in a year of routine work.

"We have dwelt thus long upon recreations where the whole family join because we feel this to be one great need of home life to-day. There is too great a separation between parents and children; parents doing all the work, perhaps, and children doing all the play; or both may seek recreation and seek it in different ways, instead of unitedly. . . .

"Teach children early to distinguish between fun and mischief which always has in it an element of evil. Join in their fun as heartily as you can, but beware how you applaud their mischief, however cute it may be. Don't let them hear you laughing over the good jokes they have played off on each other if these jokes have in them, as nearly all practical jokes do, a spice of malice, or if anybody is made uncomfortable by them. Have the children remember that the Golden Rule holds good in play as well as in work, and that here as there the test is, doing as we would be done by. This will lead them to respect their playmates' feelings and rights, so that they will not wound the first or infringe upon the last. A few general principles fixed in the child's mind will aid him in keeping play what it should be, pure fun without malice. . . .

"Nearly every one—it may be safe to say every one—has some gift which cultivated would provide him with work embodying the essential conditions of play; work which he loved well enough to do simply from the love of doing it. Thus it might develop into his successful life-work, or what is more in our thought now, it might provide for leisure hours occupation which brings recreation and safety from temptation. I remember a boy, the son of a widow, living in close quarters where he had not room according to his strength, who had a passion for mechanics which made him a perfect nuisance in the neighborhood. He was always trying experiments with steam over his mother's teakettle; in carpentry by driving nails in most absurd places and destructive fashion, till the little house could not hold him and his inventions with any comfort to anybody else. Turned loose on the street he was into all sorts of mischief; the constructiveness within him turned wrong side out, became destructiveness to the annoyance of the neighbors, who vowed that Jack was on the high road to ruin. But a motherly old lady among them who had raised three boys of her own and understood boy nature, thought differently. She had a large woodhouse with a workbench and tools at one end of it. Into this room she took Jack and turned him loose, with some few restrictions, which, by the way, he never violated; and here for months he spent most of his waking hours when out of school. The neighbors had no more complaints to make of Jack, nor did he go to destruction as they had prophesied. He lives to-day an honored man, a successful engineer, and gratefully refers to that dear old lady's insight and her workbench as having saved him from the predicted ruin.

"A case of opposite character stands out darkly before me as I write, the case of one of my own pupils. 'He was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow;' an aristocratic woman, proud of her birth and her lineage, proud of her husband who had been a noted lawyer, and in whose footsteps she was determined that her son should follow. But to her great disgust he developed what she considered plebian tastes—as great a passion for mechanics as our friend Jack. She determined to crush them out, and to accomplish this forbade him going near a workshop, and even took from him a boy's chest of tools which was his heart's delight, because, as she said, 'It encouraged him in his plebian tastes.' I can now almost hear the scorn in her voice, as I have often heard it, as she exclaimed in disgust, 'My boy a mechanic!' As he grew older he besought her to let him study mechanics, to allow him to become an engineer; but no, a lawyer he must be and nothing else. Shut out from the work he loved, and shut up to studies he hated, the result is easily foreseen. When last I heard from him whom I had known as a bright, happy, lovable boy, he was a wrecked and ruined man. And I could not help asking myself, if wise mother-love predominating over pride could not have averted the disaster.

"With daughters the temptation is not toward such dissipation as endangers their brothers, but it is towards sinking into listless or frivolous lives which effectually dissipate their life forces and render them less noble than they ought to be. Guard them from this by the cultivation of their special gift; it may be for music, painting, or embroidery; for gardening, bee raising, or management of horses—something in which they delight, and, delighting in it, are sure to excel. Thus they will find recreation for weary or listless hours."—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

HOW TO HELP THE DISTRICT CONVENTION.

CHARLES FRY.

ONE of the first questions that comes to the mind of the district superintendent when he begins to make out a program for the next convention is, "What can I put in the program that will be beneficial?" We present a plan for which we believe will prove of much value to those using it. To make the plan a success, one or two should be appointed at the previous convention, or as soon after as possible, so that they may have plenty of time in which to prepare. In the selection of editors, those should be selected, at first, who have most of the

however, it may be necessary to give various ones a trial, to see what their qualifications are, as well as to develop talent in this line.

An editor should be alive, keeping watch for everything of interest or importance. He should also be a good critic, to pass judgment upon all kinds of work done at the convention, or in the schools; to suggest new lines of work, and encourage others to carry out this work. He should be a good reader. We mean this in two ways. He should be one who reads the church literature, and enough of the world's current literature to keep up with the times at least; and he should be a good oral reader, so that when he reads his paper all present may hear and understand.

ADVANTAGES.

There are numerous topics of minor importance connected with the Sunday school work, yet they are not so non-important that they should be overlooked. These topics can be handled to good advantage in the Sunday school newspaper. Comments upon current events connected with the church tend to give a broader conception of the work.

Good spicy quotations may be used and commented upon, as well as more lengthy selections.

It is just the place for a few good original articles; something that is needed and that will stir the workers to greater activity.

It is not necessary that the editors do all the work; they may have to write articles, even though short, and send in. In this way many of the teachers and scholars too, who "never tried" before, may be encouraged, and by a little practice increase their usefulness.

I expect many districts will find it difficult or perhaps impossible to fully carry out this work; however, I have briefly given the plan, and each may use such part as he can. In the Fremont district it has been in operation in a modified form for over a year, and we can pronounce it a grand success, not only for what it has done, but also for what we expect it to do.

Give it a trial, and you will find that many new thoughts will be brought out, and we believe you will find it useful in many ways. Tabor, Iowa.

[We have heard several of the above-mentioned papers, and have no hesitancy in pronouncing them a complete success. In his district they expect the Sunday school newspaper as surely as they would the routine business of the convention. Write him, if you would know more about it.—ED.]

ONE LITTLE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

IT was one Sabbath afternoon in the middle of August, 1896. The scorching rays of the sun beat down with little mercy for any lying thing. Horses and cattle alike sought the shade or the quiet pools and gentle stream. The little birds had flown to their leafy retreats, and with suspended song sat quietly hidden from the burning rays of the cruel sun.

The little village of C— lay languidly resting on the banks of the murmuring stream. A few pedestrians were making their way along the shady side of the streets.

Some men on horseback, and a few people in vehicles, could be seen; and all wended their way toward a beautiful chapel, whose slender spire reached high in the heavens. Out on the still, sultry air, rang the clear tones of the iron-tongued bell, as it swayed to and fro in its pretty belfry, inviting all to come and worship in this lovely edifice, with its painted walls, its carpeted aisles, and cushioned pews.

And some, in spite of the heat, were heeding its ringing tones and obeying its summons. Just as the last tones died away on the still air, a two-seated spring wagon with four occupants crossed the iron bridge that spanned the stream. With umbrellas raised to protect them, they drove slowly along the streets as the others had, down toward the pretty chapel. But instead of turning toward it as they came opposite, they drove on down the street, across a small wooden bridge, and then on to the very outskirts of the village.

You wonder where they are going and why they did not stop as others had done. We will watch them and see. They cross the railroad track, pass several dwellings, and then turning down a narrow street, stop in front of a small unpainted frame house that stands unprotected from the sun by tree, vine, or portico. They enter; but the sound of their voices within gives you no clue of the object of their visit nor their ride of several miles this warm afternoon.

Presently there comes down the street a man leading a chubby little boy of perhaps five years. They pass through the gate and go in. Soon there come down the same street a man and woman yet in the prime of life, and with them are their two little girls, aged respectively three and five. Their cheeks are glowing red with the heat and exercise. They also turn and enter the little cottage. Then there come tripping along two other little girls, gay as larks, and seemingly anxious to reach their destination. They soon disappear through the door, and you look to see who else is coming; you look in vain—there is no one else in sight.

But while you are watching, there comes from within the cottage the sound of singing, and the words of the sweet song: "Take time to be holy," are borne to your ears.

We will step in for an hour, for all are welcome in this little school. In one corner of the small room is a bed, on which reclines an invalid—a woman of perhaps thirty years. She is pale and weak, but no less interested in what is going on than are the others. The singing is ended; prayer is offered by the superintendent, and then comes the responsive reading, followed by another song, in which sweet childish voices are mingled with older ones; for in this little school all are taught to take part in the singing as well as class work. After the song is ended the classes take their places. The senior is arranged near the bed, so the sick one can take part in the lesson. On the opposite side of the room the intermediate class takes its place, sitting on a rude plank that had been placed on two chairs. The class consists of three or four girls. The teacher, a young lady of about twenty years, with an earnest look in her kind eyes, takes her place before her class.

At a signal from the superintendent the primary class rises and passes into a small bedroom, each end of which is filled by a bed. The class takes a seat on one bed and the teacher facing it on the other. Soon all are busy at work, the young as well as the old.

But why do they meet here? why not go to some church or schoolhouse?

The doors of the churches and schoolhouses have all been closed against them; they have also been denied the use of the halls in town although they have offered to pay for the use of them.

It has been almost three years since this school was organized, and they have never yet had the privilege of meeting in a public house. They have either met in a private house or in a grove. But Jesus went among the poor and lowly, speaking and teaching wherever he could. He was turned out of the synagogues. Are we better than he was? Can we follow in his footsteps, believing and teaching as he did, and not meet with the same persecution? "The groves were God's first temples." What place of worship in all this wide world has a more lovely canopy, a higher dome, purer or fresher air, cooler shades, or softer carpets?

"Trying to walk in the steps of the Savior,
Upward, still upward we'll follow our Guide,
When we shall see him, 'the King in his beauty,' Happy, how happy our place at his side."

THE new Constitution and By-Laws is now ready to mail. They contain the amendments adopted in April, 1897, and will be sent free except postage and mailing, about one cent each. These must be ordered from Bro. Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa.

DEER LODGE, Mont., July 18.

Editors Herald:—On my arrival in Montana I began work and have preached at Reese Creek, where we held a conference on June 6 and 7, which was a real good one. I went from there with Bro. Gomer Reese to Bridger, where we preached the word to the people. From there I went to Bro. James Sacry's place, where I also talked to the good people. While there I baptized Bro. William Sacry and his wife. I then returned here and intended to preach, but the weather has been so unfavorable that I only preached once. I went from here to Anaconda; preached at Lost Creek and at Bro. Evans' schoolhouse, near Stewart. My main object in going to Anaconda was to try to get to talk to the Brighamites there. They have a branch of sixty-eight members.

While at Bro. Andrew Christofferson's two elders of the Utah Church called. They said they were traveling without purse or scrip. Immediately on entering the house they told me they knew me and heard me talk at Parker Ward, on Snake River, in a settlement called Egin. We immediately entered into a controversy on the right of presidency, and polygamy also came in for a portion of the talk. The young men were quite positive they knew their business, but before they left they told me they were not quite well enough posted for me, but said the next time they met me they would be prepared for me. We invited them to preach in our church here. I proposed to let them come here and preach to our people and I would go to Anaconda and preach to their people. They said that was fair, and said I could have their hall; but on my going there I soon learned that it would be a question whether the president of the branch would be willing or not.

I saw Phineas Tempest who once belonged to the Reorganized Church. He is now vice or assistant president of the Montana Stake. Thomas Rich, who was once accused of sending David Skeens "across lots," is president. I proposed to Bro. Tempest the same as I did to the boys, but he told me I would have to see the president of the branch about getting their hall. I told him I would promise him our church at Deer Lodge. Bro. Tempest was very guarded in his conversation; I only had a few minutes to talk with him, as he was going home with a sick elder. I was anxious to have a talk with him on some of the differences, but had no opportunity. Their elders are very busy going from house to house, and talking to the people, distributing tracts, etc.

I called on a Mr. Jacob Staffers, who lives near Anaconda, and while there Elders Jackson and Miller announced themselves as Latter Day Saint elders—the same two I had met at Bro. Christofferson's. Before they had fairly got seated I asked them a direct question or two that led to a warm argument. They told me they were prepared for me and I was anxious to see how well they were prepared. They had B. H. Roberts on succession and Penrose on blood atonement. Elder Jackson got hot because I told him the presidents of his church were cowards when they advised them not to discuss and the Lord commanded the elders to discuss in public and private. He told me we were deceivers. I told him they might take that to themselves, that they went from house to house talking the first principles of the gospel, as they termed it, and pretended that polygamy was abandoned, when they knew better. They avowed they knew it was not practiced. I pinned them down so closely on that until they admitted that some might be practicing it; but if they did so they were wrong.

I told them they believed that Adam was God, and that blood atonement was believed by them, and secret oaths and covenants as an endowment, all of which really demanded blood atonement. They tried to justify both. Penrose tried in his three lectures to prove Brigham was correct when he preached that doctrine, but I showed the young men that Elder Pinrose couldn't make the killing Brigham referred to in his discourse on that subject apply to the the execution of criminals by civil authority. They were driven to terrible straits; they had their lesson fairly well, but they made a poor defense. I really felt sorry for them, to think two bright young men should be so positive they were right and have no scripture to justify them. They have made some converts in Anaconda. Elder Tempest told me he had baptized three of our members, one young woman from Colorado and a man and wife from Ontario, Canada. I believe his name is Peter Fowler. I had never heard of them. The young woman's mother is a widow and a member with us yet; so he told me.

It is now the busy season here and but little preaching can be done until haying and harvest is over. Bro. A. B. Moore is here now and will look after things in this region for a time. I am going over to the Bitter Root for a time and see what is there. We will see that the line is clearly drawn between us and the Brighamites in this mission, if we do have to make it a little bit tempestuous round about. They are ready to tell their story, and if there is no one to refute it and show to the contrary, it may seem plausible to those who are not posted in their history.

They told me you never claimed that your father blessed you to occupy the position you are in, and tried to tell me how women claimed to be your father's wives. I told them I knew what you had told the people in Utah and Idaho. Whatever some may think about our procedure in exposing their work, we deem it very necessary to meet them where and when we can, and show their teaching up to the world. They literally misrepresent us and the church.

I have determined to make it my business to have a picnic or enjoy a love feast with them when possible.

I have baptized five. Weather is cold and stormy.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 2.

Editors Herald:—Last evening Bro. Ebeling and I with the assistance of the saints of the branch began meetings in the new gospel tent. We are located near Brushton, one of the city suburbs, at the end of two traction lines, and are well equipped for work; having a tent, size 30x45 feet, oblong, with a small tent 10x12 feet; cost one hundred dollars, besides inside equipments.

Last night every chair was occupied, and many standing on the outside; altogether an audience of about two hundred; good attention and good order. Brn. Ralph Smith, Edward Omohundro, Thomas Hadfield, and Weaver Rodgers have kindly agreed to furnish instrumental music; Bro. Omohundro the cornet, and the other brethren the organ alternately. Saints are nobly assisting us.

We hope and pray for much good.

FAIRPORT, Ohio, July 24.

Editors Herald:—I have not been altogether idle. I have moved away from old Virginia, and am now living at Kirtland, Ohio; so anyone wishing to write to me may write to Box 49, Temple, Lake County, Ohio, which is my permanent address.

I am pleased to write that I am again stirring up the people, and this little town is certainly in an uproar. Some say, it is "the truth, more than we have heard for years;" and some say, "I will never give another cent to our church, for we do not learn anything;" a good many want the church, but the deacons won't give it up, so they are very indignant over the matter. What the outcome will be I cannot tell, but I hope for good results.

I am preaching in Fairport and Richmond also; so I have two openings now, and a good many are very much interested. The pastor is out on vacation, taking a rest, as he is always tired preaching just twice on Sunday; so I have the town to myself; and I think it is a good thing such preachers take a "vacation." It seems something like home to be where an interest is taken in the great plan of salvation once more.

I hope this letter will answer for those who are looking for something from Bro. Smith. I will be pleased to hear from anyone that wants work in their part in the district.

Yours in hope,

FRANCIS C. SMITH.

MORRIS CHAPEL, Tenn., July 30.

Editors Herald:—I have just finished a series of chart services here; congregations large and attentive and the interest all we could ask. I have accepted an invitation to speak in the M. E. church on next Wednesday evening; subject, "The Blue and the Gray." Our object will be to establish a fraternal feeling on the lines of the "Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

We visit the old Shilo battleground tomorrow, where we have an appointment for Sunday morning and evening. I am traveling overland with Bro. C. L. Snow, with horse and buggy, going slow and planting the gospel seed in the new soil. I find in Bro. Snow a good speaker and a genial companion. May God speed the plow, is the prayer of KIRK, Colo., July 27.

Editors Herald:—Some of your readers may be interested by a brief recital of the events of the past month in this part of the field. Amid the work of the last of corn plowing and the hurry of harvest we have not tried to hold meetings every night. The services of Sunday and two or three nights of the week have been well attended, and the interest intense. Tuesday and Friday evenings of last week a commodious schoolhouse was well filled with attentive listeners, some of whom came as many as nine miles. Two arose on Tuesday night for baptism, and four on Friday night. As appointments were already out at Idalia, some twelve or fifteen miles from the place of these meetings for the coming Sunday, Saturday was fixed as the day for baptism, which took place on a beautiful long reservoir, having abundance of water held by a dam catching the spring water tributary to the South Fork of the Republican River, on the ranch of a Mr. Davis, whose hospitality not only permits the use of those abundant waters for any religious people to baptize, but kindly throws open the doors of his commodious western house for change of apparel.

On this occasion, notwithstanding it was on a week day and in the midst of harvest, as many as one hundred persons gathered there at eleven a. m. to witness the scene, some others as well as the candidates going ten to fourteen miles. Many took lunch baskets along and were invited to spread their refreshments upon the two large tables of our host, to which the hostess, Mrs. Davis, largely contributed. All on the ground were invited to partake of the feast, till ninety-six had eaten, only two refusing. It reminded one of the multitudes the Savior fed. By special request and invitation, a sermon wherein the Holy Spirit held that audience in rapt attention followed the beautiful repast, and the confirmation of six obedient souls closed the exercises, and the saints (ten now) went home rejoicing. The Sunday meetings at Idalia were well attended. We expect to begin a short series there next Sunday night. Two other openings already waiting.

O. B. THOMAS.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Aug. 1.

Editors Herald:—Our tent has passed the incipient stage, having been dedicated the 11th ult., at Murray, Utah. Bro. McKiernan preached the sermon, the writer offered the prayer, and Bro. S. D. Condit offered the invocation and pronounced the benediction. The saints showed their interest by being present from the city, Pleasant Grove, and Bingham Junction. After nearly three weeks siege and at times whole broadsides thrown into the Brighamite camp as a result of their own folly, we have results: One baptized, some staunch friends who showed their faith by their works, the sale of a Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Inspired Translation.

The more I see of the deception and trickery incident to the innovations introduced by B. Young and fellows, the more disgusted do I become. When one will go so far as to say that somebody other than their own people must have put "Adam-God" and "Blood atonement" into their Journal of Discourses, it can be seen to what end they will go.

James Gorden and family, he a son of the man who gave Brn. A. H. and D. H. Smith a home when here, provided me a home and I think they will yet be with us. The tent is now in Ogden.

In bonds,

J. W. WIGHT.

P. S.—A word about the finances: Bro. Kelley has appointed me his agent for all of Utah. My report must be sent in by the first of the year, instead of March as hitherto. See what you have done with your mites in the purchase of the tent. If you owe the Lord but ten cents, it is his by right. Send it and I will receipt for it. It requires the tithes and offerings to keep the church out of the ruts of poverty and distress and steer clear of financial breakers. Bro. Kelley is besieged by the cries of need. Tithing is the financial law of the church; "the transgression of law is sin." Let Utah come to the front.

J. W. W.

HEPPNER, Oregon, July 31.

Editors Herald:—Please tell your readers that I left home on the 18th of May, after preaching twelve times since last report to General Conference, and baptizing my ten-year-old son, Alma. Calling at Salt Lake City, Pleasant Grove, Provo, and Ogden, in Utah, I visited old-time friends and was entertained splendidly. I dare not essay the mention of names, for they are too numerous, and to mention some and not others might have the appearance of unfair reporting. At each of the two first-named places I preached once, and while in Salt Lake City, baptized Vera, the daughter of Sr. Pauline Higgins.

My next stop was at Soda Springs, in Idaho, where Father Bowman and Sister Eliasson reside, and with the latter I made my home. For nearly a week I enjoyed the liberty of drinking soda water, as it bubbled forth from numerous natural fountains, and in visiting acquaintances of former days. Father Bowman has passed the eightieth milestone on his life journey; but gets about and enjoys things generally as well as when I first met him thirteen years ago. He has but one theme to entertain his visitors with and that is the love of God and the wisdom of walking in his ways. Sr. Eliasson holds with an admirable tenacity to the faith, though for many years she has been almost alone. It does one good to witness such heroic fidelity as she has exhibited.

At Huntington, Oregon, we next alighted from the train, where we were cared for at the home of Mr. J. H. Dodds, whose wife is a zealous and untiring worker within the church ranks. With true saintly spirit the home hospitalities were extended to the traveler, and the stay was very enjoyable. Here we found Mr. and Mrs. James Shaw, aged 73 and 72 respectively, waiting and praying for the coming of an elder to open to them the doors of the kingdom. How gladly did the writer hasten with them to their residence, about three miles away, and immerse them in the waters of turbulent Snake River, which courses its way along in front of their little ranch. On the same day Miss Delaria E. Chaffe, a sister of Sr. Dodds, was also baptized. Bro. and Sr. Shaw had lived in Missouri years ago and had been among the number of those who consented to the driving out of the saints. Like Paul, they believed that to silence the new religion was a service that God would approve. They were not participators in any movement against the saints; but the movements had their quiet indorsement. Years passed and they at last reached Oregon, and about a year ago a church member in Dakota, with whom they were acquainted, sent them a little Ensign tract, containing a sermon by myself, setting forth the Bible evidences in support of water baptism as an essential ordinance. By reading this their eyes were opened, and they longed to learn more. In due time more came, and later they heard of and became acquainted with Sr. Dodds, and their anxiety for admission into the church followed as a natural result, for they were honest in heart.

The Congregational church at Huntington was refused me, as had been the Presbyterian church at Soda Springs; but the Opera House was secured and I preached three times. The only printing office in town was visited, and finding the proprietor behind with his work and unable for that reason to print me some dodgers, I obtained permission and set up the type and run them off on the press myself, after which I distributed them among the stores and houses, and by that means drew out quite a number of people. I would have remained longer; but could not consent to the two members upon whom the burden of expense for hall rent fell, doing any more. It seemed unjust, or at least uncalled for.

From thence I started for Walla Walla, Washington, where a cousin, whom I had not seen for sixteen years, resided. Two days were spent very pleasantly, reviving memories of days when we were children together in far-off Canada; but finding no saints there and no chance, without outlay of money, to get before the people with the gospel, I once more mounted the chariot that Nahum saw (?) and was whirled away to Spokane, where I was seized by Bro. T. A. Hicks before the train had arrived at the depot. He took possession of my hand baggage and ordered me to follow, which I did. It was Sunday morning, and after being washed and rested somewhat at his home to which he led me, I was escorted to the little hall where the few saints meet. There I met Bro. J. M. Hooker, who had charge of the Sunday school, also his wife and half a dozen other saints who were struggling to keep things together, against such odds as are characteristic of such places as Spokane. I did the best I could to encourage and strengthen the work there; but the odds were against me. From the time of my leaving home I had been suffering considerable physically but had kept going, determined to wear it out if possible. Now a new complication arose and rheumatism fastened itself upon my muscles and threatened to tie me down. It succeeded in compelling me to remain in bed for a couple of days and in making me feel what they call out there "rocky," for a longer period. However, after speaking seven times and dividing the remainder of my eleven days' stay between visiting and grunting, I was enabled by the blessing of God and the kind doctoring and care of Srs. Hooker, Hicks, and others, to recover sufficiently to admit of my taking another chariot ride. All had been kind to me, and my heart cherishes a feeling of gratitude and affection for them that will remain while memory serves me. May God bless and reward them.

With my hand baggage stored in front of the seat for a kind of bed extension, I doubled up my creaking carcass and laid down for what rest I might extort during the three hundred mile ride before me. I was ticketed for Heppner, Oregon, but at Arlington was dumped out at seven o'clock next morning and told that I could not get a train to my destination till three o'clock on the following morning. Starting towards the little town close by the depot, I bought a dime's worth of soda crackers, upon which I made three meals that day, and spent nearly all the time seated upon a rock, watching a ferry boat plying back and forth over the Columbia River. The heat of the sun streamed down pretty positively; but while my head rather resented the familiarity, my joints generally welcomed the relief that came from the exposure. At night I hired a bed early and rested till train time, but feeling pretty badly demoralized.

At seven o'clock on the morning of June 25, I alighted from the train at Heppner, and was met at the depot by Elder W. A. Goodwin who took me to his home close by. Later in the day I met Srs. Rush and Minor, and their husbands by whom I have been treated most cordially ever since when in the city.

Next day in Mr. Rush's buggy I was driven twenty-four miles by Bro. Goodwin, to Hail Ridge, where I preached at five o'clock the same afternoon. It was severe on me, but the parties making the appointment had no idea of my physical condition. It was Saturday, and on Sunday I preached twice and once each evening after till Wednesday. My home here was with Bro. and Sr. E. A. Wallace and family.

From thence I was taken by Bro. Wallace a distance of seventeen miles, to Condon. This was to respond to the request of Sr. Clark at that place, who was supposed to be at the point of death from consumption, but who desired to partake of the sacrament before dying, and had sent for me. While there I gathered together the half dozen saints who reside within a radius of two miles of the town and administered the sacrament to them in the room where the sick sister was lying. I had administered to her the evening before for her recovery. Securing the Armory Hall I spoke once to about fifty people, and on the following day left for Hail Ridge, spending three days with Bro. and Sr. William Smith, who live at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Downer (close friends to the cause) at Rock Creek.

Since then (moving back and forth to meet demands as they arose) I have preached twice in the Christian church at Heppner, once at eight mile schoolhouse (sixteen miles from Heppner), twice in Methodist church at Hardman (twenty miles away in another direction from Heppner), and three times at Hail Ridge. Was called to Rock Creek again, where I baptized Mrs. Belle Livingston and Miss Cora Clark, both daughters of Bro. and Sr. John R. Clark, of Condon. While on this trip I learned that Sr. Clark was improving, and was able to walk around outside the house. During my last stay at Hail Ridge, on my return this way, I baptized Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morris. Hail Ridge is the place where Elder J. C. Clapp held the debate with Elder R. H. Sherrill, of the "Church of God," one year ago last June. At that time about thirty members were in standing and fellowship with Elder Sherrill. I am now told that not one can be found who will indorse him, and not more than two or three who cling to the peculiar doctrines of his church. Bro. Clapp dynamited the institution and the shattering was complete. Elder Sherrill retired to the mountains until a few days ago, when he left for other parts—to us unknown. Mr. Morris was ordained an elder by Elder Sherrill and was about the last to abandon him and his church. The preaching of Brn. Clapp and John Davis forced him from Sherrillism, and, as he informed me, by my efforts in public and private he has been led to accept the better way we teach. He is a man of good reputation and influence in the neighborhood, and his entrance into the church will have a bearing upon several who are hesitating as he once was. If faithful he will be blessed much and become a blessing.

As I sit and write to-day there is not a direction in which I can point from this center, but reveals a fine opening for our ministry. Calls from many places are already in hand and schoolhouses can be had almost everywhere. I know of no more promising region anywhere. Just now the grain harvest is crowding on and that will keep men busy day and night for a couple of months; but with the beginning of fall opportunity will be offered for the prosecution of an excellent gospel work. Here is a center for Brn. Holt and Chase, and for half a dozen more like them if we had them to use.

To the efforts of Bro. W. A. Goodwin, is largely due the credit for conditions being as they are in some places about here. He has his head crammed full of doctrine, and his tongue reels it forth everywhere, and with effect, so far as may be judged. In the shop, on the street, in the mill or on the rostrum, wherever you hear of him, his track is strewn with fragments of exploded creeds and you can find men and women groaning over some rent he has made in their religious wardrobe. The advent of a theological idea anywhere, at any time, is the signal for an onslaught from him, and in quite a number of places the people have learned that "discretion is the better part of valor," and they give him an undisputed "right of way"—he gets the whole road. May his zeal never flag and may wisdom and meekness go hand in hand therewith and his local missionary service be sanctified to the winning of men's hearts unto holiness, as well as upsetting their theological calculations.

By the kindness of Brn. Wallace and Goodwin, and Srs. Rush and Minor, supplemented by the special generosity of Sr. Minor's husband (who with Mr. Rush is a true friend to the cause), I was presented with a much needed suit of clothes, for which I said and felt "thank you." The Lord reward them.

Since coming to this part my health has gradually improved, until I can walk without pain and write without mental confusion. I expect to leave in a day or two for Lebanon and other points as the way opens. May reach California by the middle of September; am not certain.

Have just read the item in Ensign which tells of Bro. and Sr. Pitt's departure for England. My prayers follow them.

Asking pardon for this lengthy infliction, I remain as ever,

Yours in the harness,

JOSEPH LUFF.

TALMAGEAN CRITICISM.—NO. 1.

BY ELDER T. W. WILLIAMS.

THE Encyclopædic-Dictionary under the head of "History," says:—

Accounts of the same event are distorted according to the prejudices or interest of the person by whom they are related. Historians in such cases must attempt, with cold impartiality, to ascertain and record the actual truth.

Ever and anon men have essayed to tell the world what they knew of "Mormonism," so-called; and from their conflicting testimonies we are forced to conclude that the majority have written more, some less, than they knew. Rumors are not facts; prevalent opinions are not realities; preconceived ideas, though apparently reliable, are not always historically correct. Nothing is a fact in history unless the proof is forthcoming, and is confirmed by undisputable testimony. It is a fact of history that Lincoln was assassinated; the true origin and source of his death, and the exact reasons therefor, are problematic, though many rumors have been circulated as facts. True history is an uncolored relation of facts, with questionable events omitted; or if mentioned at all, classed as unproven theories.

Prominent among modern writers who have turned their pens in this direction, is General John Eaton, of Washington, D. C., and once Commissioner of Education in Utah, who has contributed a series of articles to The Christian Herald and Signs of our Times, T. De Witt Talmage editor. Knowing there were a number of egregious and unwarranted errors in these articles, I wrote General Eaton, asking that he make correction; but my communication was not considered worthy a reply. I wrote Dr. Talmage several times with the same results. Thus, as Christ said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," we are able to judge of the Christianity of these men, who seemingly deem it proper to assail and misrepresent another's faith, and as far as possible close every avenue for correction. Truth needs no underhanded manipulation, but rather courts investigation. It is anti-Christian to stab a man in the back, and deny him the right of defense; but as with the enemies of truth in every age, they court not investigation or contact in an open arena, with equal privileges; but by stealth and intrigue, vilify, misrepresent, and slander. We hold no enmity towards either Gen. Eaton or Dr. Talmage; but regret that professors of Christianity should resort to such unfair methods. Until Dr. Talmage permits a reply to appear in the Christian Herald we shall hold him equally culpable with the General.

LIFTS THE MASK.

In the prospectus of this paper for 1897, the editor has this to say of General Eaton's articles:—

Gen. John Eaton of Washington, D. C., contributes a series of articles on "Mormonism of the present day" that will be a revelation to our readers. . . . (General Eaton) has exceptional facilities for obtaining accurate information, and he lifts the mask from this sanctimonious iniquity, which is neither dead nor dying, and shows that its poison is permeating the social and political life of many States; that its propaganda is rich and powerful, and that its aim is treason and national debasement.

If this comment had been made solely relative to the Utah deflection we would be silent, permitting them to answer for themselves; but these parties have gone out of their way to confound the Reorganization with Brighamism. The pious Doctor well knew that the "social and political life of many States" was not particularly affected by Utah Mormon influence; but it was written purposely to arouse alarm and intensify the prejudice of the masses against everything called "Mormon" by the world. The word "Mormon," as applied to the church, is the enemy's christening, and is not the official name of the church organized by God through Joseph Smith in 1830. Many class all the factions of the church alike, and when the term "Mormon" is used, it is intended by them to mean "polygamy," "impostor," "fraud," etc. So far as it refers to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints we resent the implication, repudiate the name, and object to the adroit effort to confound us with others, as made by the Christian Herald.

UNAMERICAN.

General Eaton in his first article says,

We are accustomed to boast of our government as the best under the sun, and it is not pleasant to know that under its protecting care the most absurd notions are set up as religions, and make their appeal under our Constitution for the same rights and courtesies as are accorded to Christianity—false religions, which, if in control of our affairs, would soon undermine and destroy our free institutions.

Let me inform General Eaton that under the Constitution no religion is "absurd notions" unless it violates the spirit of the Constitution. Why should not every religion, whether "absurd" or not, have the same "rights and courtesies"? Each and every one should have the same protection, and General Eaton is not patriotic when he regrets because all religions have the same "rights and privileges." The Constitution does not presume to interfere with man's belief, but affords every man the right of conscience. Would you have us turn back the dial plate of time and reverse the wheels of civilization, and institute a religion stipulated by law? If not, why regret that all religions should have equal privileges? In a liberty-loving land the soul's franchise should be equally respected. Why should one religion be fostered and another proscribed, even though one may be filled with "absurd notions," providing there is no infraction of statutory law? The first man's religion may be equally ridiculous to the other man. The Jew is as entitled to American courtesies as the most rigid Christian. Thank God for American freedom, where the serfs of European dynasties can come and think; and thinking, worship God according to conscience' dictation, with no fear of molestation. It is in America alone where mind may soar, and the intellect delve, and return with disclosing light from realms above or speaking stones from earth below, and none can say it nay. True Latter Day Saints are patriotic, and perfectly satisfied with the letter and spirit of our Constitution; and we regret that it is not pleasant to General Eaton that all religions are treated alike. The sentiment quoted above reveals the cloven foot of sectarian tyranny, and though Catholicism has been strongly denounced, yet how far behind Protestantism would be, opportunity alone would reveal. It is evident that if General Eaton and Dr. Talmage had their way, religions which were objectionable to them would not receive the same "rights and courtesies" as some other one. We are thankful that, as yet, the majority of the American commonwealth are not of the same mind.

PRIESTLY OPPRESSION.

He continues:—

Mormonism requires every one of its adherents to render most implicit obedience to its priesthood. In nothing are the people more constantly drilled than in this obedience.

Six years ago Minnesota reported 224, Maryland 457, and far-off Maine 442 followers responsive to Mormon orders.

The figures very nearly correspond with the "Reorganized" membership in these respective States six years ago, and we hasten to inform General Eaton and the reading public, that he wantonly perverts facts when he classes these as the subjects of tyranny or coercion. No people in America have a greater latitude or freedom of conscience. It has ever been the same in the church. As proof of this we quote:—

All things shall be done by common consent in the church, by much prayer and faith.—D. C. 25: 1.

In section 27: 4, we find this:—

My servant Joseph shall be appointed to preside over the conference by the voice of it.

Notwithstanding Joseph Smith was then president of the church, and having been called by revelation, it was necessary that the people should express their choice. It was even so when Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were first ordained. In the history of this occurrence written by Joseph Smith himself, he says:—

The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist, in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James, and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedec, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us.—Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 866.

This was in May, 1829, and the priesthood referred to above was the Aaronic priesthood. The promise, made by the angel, was shortly realized, for Joseph says:—

The word of the Lord came unto us in the chamber [Father Whitmer's house], commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ, and that he also should ordain me to the same office, and then to ordain others as it should be made known unto us, from time to time. We were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such times as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers or not.—Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 915.

The church was organized April 6, 1830, concerning which Joseph writes:—

Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father, we proceeded, according to former commandment, to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by an unanimous voice.—Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 944.

Again:—

Neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith.—Doctrine and Covenants 27: 4.

In section 101: 2, the Lord says:—

Yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves.

When provisions were made for the First Presidency of the church, the common consent policy was clearly outlined; for:—

Of the Melchisedec priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith and prayer of the church, form a quorum of the presidency of the church.—D. C. 104: 11.

As clearly indicating that the membership hold the power of choice we quote:—

And a commandment I give unto you that you should fill all these offices and approve of those names which I have mentioned or else disapprove of them at my general conference.—Ibid. 107: 46.

We append a few statements farther on this point:—

No man has a right to usurp authority or power over any church, nor has any man power to preside over any church, unless he is solicited and received by the voice of that church to preside.—Times and Seasons, vol. 1, p. 14.

In an official letter written the church in 1838, Joseph Smith says:—

Now concerning the places for the location of the saints, we would say that we cannot counsel you in this thing as well as if we were with you; and as to things written to you before, we do not consider them binding. We would advise, that while we remain in prison and in bondage, the affairs of the church be conducted by a general conference of the most faithful and respectable of the authorities of the church, and that the proceedings of the same be forwarded to your humble servants, and if there be any corrections by the word of the Lord they shall be freely transmitted, and we will cheerfully approve of all things which are acceptable to God. If anything should have been suggested by us or any names mentioned except by commandment or "thus saith the Lord," we do not consider it binding; therefore we shall not feel grieved if you should deem it wisdom to make different arrangements.—Ibid. vol. 1, p. 102.

In another letter he writes:—

There are many called but few chosen, and why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set upon the things of the world, and are aspiring to the honors of men, they do not learn the lesson that the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven; and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled or handled, only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, to gratify our pride, vain ambition, or to exercise dominion or compulsion over the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness; behold the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved, then amen to the priesthood, or to the authority of that man. . . . We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, to begin to exercise unrighteous dominion; hence many are called but few are chosen. No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by longsuffering, by gentleness, by meekness, and by love unfeigned; without hypocrisy, and without guile.—Ibid. vol. 1, pp. 131, 132.

Read the following, as evidence of coercion (?):—

President Joseph Smith then asked the conference if they were satisfied with the First Presidency, so far as he was concerned, as an individual to preside over the whole church; or would they have another? If, said he, I have done anything that ought to injure my character, reputation, or standing; or have dishonored our religion by any means, in the sight of men, or angels, or in the sight of men and women, I am sorry for it, and if you will forgive me, I will endeavor to do so no more. I do not know that I have done anything of the kind; but if I have, come forward and tell me of it. If anyone has any objection to me, I want you to come boldly and frankly, and tell me of it; and if not, ever after hold your peace.—Ibid. vol. 4, p. 181.

Even the revelations to the church are not to be accepted without question; nor resolutions to be adopted without examination and discussion. In 1835, the compiled revelations were presented to the church, examined, and adopted by vote. (See Kirtland edition of Doctrine and Covenants; Messenger and Advocate, pp. 161, 162; also Millennial Star, vol. 15, p. 299.)

As to the manner of adoption of resolutions and testing revelations, Joseph said that they must needs pass through each quorum separately, beginning at the presidency, and consequently it must first be thrown into the hands of the president of the deacons and his council, as equal rights and privileges is my motto; and one man is as good as another, if he behaves as well; and that all men should be esteemed alike, without regard to distinctions of an official nature. The resolutions passed through the president of the deacons and his council by their unanimous voice. It was then thrown before the presidents of the several quorums and their council, in the following order, and in the same manner as before; namely, the Teachers, Priests, Bishop of Kirtland, bishop of Zion, Elders, High priests, Seventy, High Council of Zion, High Council of Kirtland, the Twelve, and lastly into the hands of the presidency of the church, and all the quorums, and received their unanimous sanction.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 647.

Again:—

There is a way by which all revelations purporting to be from God through any man can be tested. Bro. Joseph gave us the plan; says he, When all the quorums are assembled and organized in order, let the revelation be presented to the quorums; if it pass one let it go to another, and if it pass that, to another, and so on until it has passed all the quorums; and if it pass the whole without running against a snag, you may know it is of God.—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 649.

Is this the expression of a tyrant?

Tyranny, usurpation, and to take men's rights, ever has [been] and ever shall be banished from my heart.—Mill. Star, vol. 15, p. 543.

This was the spirit that pervaded the church from 1830 to 1844, when this guardian of the people's rights was cruelly murdered, and as a result aspiring sycophants secured influence over the people, and developed into oppressors and tyrants. Had the people remembered the strict injunction of the Martyr, they would never have been subjected to bondage. When in 1860 the prophet's son accepted the leadership of the church—reorganized—he voiced the sentiment of his father, and this policy has ever obtained in the councils and general deliberations of the church.

NOT MORMONS.

The General continues:—

Their course is deceptive. They do not now call themselves Mormons. They claim to be the only saints on earth. They call themselves the Latter Day Saints of the Church of Jesus Christ; all others are Gentiles.

The above but confirms one statement of the General's:—

The lack of information with regard to Mormonism is amazing:—

It truly is; and the store of information will not be materially increased by the assertions made above. The church never officially recognized the name "Mormon;" and while the name has frequently appeared in church literature, it has always been as a nickname. From its organization up to 1844, when Joseph Smith was killed and the church disorganized, the incorporate name of the church was, "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." In 1844 Joseph Smith was killed, and Brigham Young took advantage thereof, rearranging church polity according to fancy and passion.

John F. Phillips, Judge in the Circuit Court of the United States in Missouri, says on this point:—

The identity, unity, and sameness from 1830 to 1844 of the Mormon Church are too clear for debate. Now and then, by this and that person, it was called "The Church of Christ," "Church of Latter Day Saints," and "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The terms were employed interchangeably. . . . The temple built at Kirtland, Ohio, the central rendezvous between 1830 and 1835, was inscribed on the portal with the words, "The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." This was the public authoritative recognition of the name by which they chose to be known.—Opinion, p. 20.

Joseph Smith, the present President of the church, says relative to the name:—

An objection to the name [Mormon] as an appellation of distinction applying to the members of the church has nothing to do with the nature of the book [of Mormon] whether good or bad. Members of the church are followers of Christ, not followers of Mormon, either prophet or book, though believing in both, and hence are not Mormons. The name as an appellation was not treated with any more respect formerly than now; but has always been objected to on the part of the members of the church as an appropriate and correct appellation designating the church and its membership in a characteristic form. . . . The word "Mormon" means "more good," as defined by Joseph Smith. . . . An acceptance of the Book of Mormon and a belief in its teachings does not involve an acceptance of the name of Mormon as a proper denominational designation for the church and its members. . . . It is not necessary for any to go to the other extreme and denounce the name as being the synonym of all that is evil and wrong, and therefore that every time it is used it must be resented and the user of it rebuked with harshness or abuse. When applied by those without to members and of the members and the church, either in derision or in respect, a seeming acquiescence is not out of character, and is better than a wrangle—Editorial, Saints' Herald, vol. 40, No. 47.

Previous to May 3, 1834, no official name for the church had been decided upon; but on this date a conference assembled, and,

After prayer the conference proceeded to discuss the subject of names and appellations when a motion was made by Sidney Rigdon, and seconded by Newel K. Whitney, that this church be known hereafter by the name of "The Church of the Latter Day Saints.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 454.

This was intended as supplementary to, "the Church of Christ," which is mentioned previously.

When in 1852 the work of reorganization of the scattered forces of the church began, no change was made in the name, and when the organization was made permanent, the word "Reorganized" prefaced the other, as indicating the character of the work.

We do not say "all others are Gentiles." We recognize that Christ divided the world under two heads—the seed of Abraham or Israel, and the Gentiles. All who were not of Israel were Gentiles. Paul proceeds to show that we cannot be the seed of Abraham unless natural descendants or by adoption according to God's plan; that is, the gospel. Agreeing with Christ and Paul, we contend that those who ignore any part of the law of adoption cannot become heirs of salvation.

WORLD REDEEMED.

General Eaton states that we claim that,

At last the world is to be redeemed through these Latter Day Saints.

We insist that if the world is ever redeemed it will be by saints, and as men can become such only through obedience to all of God's commands, we include among the number all who thus obey; and we would be renegade to the faith if we compromised or included more. Paul says:—

The saints shall judge the world.—1 Cor. 6:2.

If judges, is it not in their power to save the world, along gospel lines?

HETERODOX.

Again:—

Joseph Smith their first leader, proclaimed thirteen articles of faith, intended to be so near to Christian beliefs as not to create alarm at first, but to appeal to the discontented elements among the Christians.

These thirteen articles are before me, and I fail to find a thought or sentiment which is not confirmed by sacred writ. We contend that there was no effort made to conform to the Christianity of the sects, for in nothing did they agree. Joseph Smith's first announcement was that he had seen an angel, which told him the churches were "all wrong," and "all their creeds were an abomination in his [God's] sight." Was this intended not to "create alarm"? If so it was a dismal failure. So alarmed did the people become over the claim made to superior spiritual power, that "all churches" united in a crusade against the boy and his work, and they have not ceased yet; but are invariably pursuing the same underhanded and unfair methods employed by General Eaton and Dr. Talmage. The trouble was these articles were too near the Christian faith, for they were the embodiment of truth, and as such appealed to thousands of earnest, God-fearing men, who were famishing while seeking to assimilate the conflicting sectarian theories, and who were "discontented" and unwilling to remain when once they understood the truth.

MIRACLES CEASED?

The General remarks further:—

These Latter Day Saints affirm their belief in our Bible, but they proceed at once to reject its teachings. We believe that miraculous revelation for man's guidance closed with the apostles of the Lord. They claim that their leaders receive revelations and have visions and dreams!

No, General, we do not affirm our belief in your Bible. We had never before heard that you had one; but we do believe in the word of God called the Bible, and this belongs to no special people. From the way in which you discard the plain teachings of this sacred book we are forced to conclude that you believe this Bible to be yours or you would not repudiate, change, and add at pleasure. What a strange medley is here presented! He gives as evidence that he in connection with the editor of the Christian Herald believes the Bible because they "believe that miraculous revelation for man's guidance closed with the Apostles;" and as evidence that the Latter Day Saints reject the Bible, because "they claim their leaders receive revelations and have visions and dreams." Is not the Bible a network of visions with a woof of dreams? Does not Amos say:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets?—Amos 3:7.

If God is doing anything to-day there must be prophets through whom he can speak and work. There never was a time in the four thousand years of Old Testament history when men were in favor with God but that their spiritual leaders received "visions and dreams." It was so in the Christian age. The births of John and Christ were announced by angels. The life of Christ was spared through dreams. The gospel was carried to the Gentiles as the result of a vision. Paul went to Macedonia directed by a vision; in fact Paul was saved by the means of two visions; one to himself, one to Ananias. John was a very visionary man; and Solomon says:—

Where there is no vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he.—Prov. 29:18.

Happy, because he does not perish, in that he receives spiritual vision which saves him. God says:—

If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream.—Num. 12:6.

What about the dreams of Jacob, and Joseph, the butler, and baker, Pharaoh, Gideon, Solomon, Paul, Peter, and all of God's worthies?

In the light of the following, which think you is the most tenable position according to God's Bible?

And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams; and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy.—Acts 2:17, 18. (See Joel 2:28, 29.)

Christ did not come to destroy the prophets (Matt. 5:17), for there were prophets in his church (See Acts 13:1, 2; 15:12; 21:9-11; 1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11-15); and there are to be such in the last days. (See Mal. 4:5, 6; Rev. 11:1-12; Zech. 2:1-5; Isaiah 29; Psalms 85, etc.) As God is "unchangeable" (Mal. 3:6), and "no respecter of persons" (Acts 10:38) and, "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us" (Acts 17:26, 27); and as the "testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev. 19:10); and, "this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3); and, "no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost" (1 Cor. 12:3), are we not warranted in contending that not only the "leaders receive revelations and have visions and dreams," but that all men are entitled to the spirit of revelation, and no man can be saved without it? No man has ever known, and never will know anything of God, save God reveals it to him. The only history which General Eaton has of God's dealings with man is the Bible, and that covers four thousand years, and it is a record from commencement to finish of revelations, visions, and dreams; thus clearly outlining God's method of dealing with man.

BIBLE DESTROYED!

The General adds:—

They destroy the teachings of the Bible by accepting the Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Pearl of Great Price, and Sayings of Joseph the Seer, as their guides in faith and doctrine.

The "Pearl of Great Price" and "Sayings of Joseph the Seer" have never officially or any other way been recognized as "guides in faith and doctrine;" but the first two are. Wherein do we destroy the teachings of the Bible by accepting these? To destroy we must violate. Wherein does the Bible forbid a belief in these books? They do not conflict in one point, but confirm, yea fulfill the Scriptures. (See Isa. 29:19; Ps. 85:10, 11; Hab. 2:2, 3; Ezek. 37:15-22; Hosea 8:11, 12; Acts 17:26, 27; Rev. 14:6-8; Dan. 2:44, 45; Isa. 11:10-12; Mal. 4:5, 6.) The Scriptures enjoin men to "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good" (1 Thess. 5:21); to accept "all truth." These books violate no truths of scripture, but are allies to the Bible in disclosing divine light. As proof that these are necessary, let me ask, Where in the Bible is church government fully outlined? The Bible does not say what the Bishop's duty is, nor those of the evangelist, or pastors, or the deacons fully. It does not say who shall administer the sacrament or perform marriages. As these are divine institutions, there is a divine plan of carrying them out. The Latter Day Saints believe in asking God for the plan, while those in the Talmagean school proceed to formulate a plan of their own, in the institution of creeds and disciplines. Our plan is scriptural; yours is not. (See Acts 1:24, 25; Acts 13:1-3; Heb. 5:4, 6; Rom. 10:14, 15; John 14:16, 17, 26; 16:7-13.)

NO GODHEAD.

Again:—

Indeed, for them there is little left of the Godhead, and little foundation on which to build the manhood of man or the womanhood of woman.

The Bible teaches that God is a spiritual being, having body, parts, and passions (see Gen. 1:26; Ex. 3:4-6; Ex. 19:20, 21; Num. 12:4, 5; Gen. 32:29, 30; Gen. 17:1-6; Ex. 24:9-12; Num. 23:4; Heb. 1:3; John 5:37; Phil. 2:5, 6; Ex. 33:21, 23; Ex. 33:11; 2 Chron. 16:9; Prov. 22:12; Ex. 31:18; Isa. 62:8; Ex. 24:9, 10), which we indorse, while modern Christianity says he has neither "body nor parts," and many deny that he has "passions." "Indeed there is very little left of the Godhead," if he has none of these characteristics. Talmagean philosophy says, "God is everywhere;" the Bible says he is not (see 1 Kings 19:11-13); but that he is in heaven (see Job 22:12, 14; Isa. 66:1; Acts 7:49; Rev. 3:12; 21:10; Ps. 14:2; 33:13; John 6:38; 1 Kings 22:19; Ps. 11:4; Eccl. 5:2; Dan. 2:28; Matt. 5:16; 6:9; Luke 11:2; 23:9); but that he can move from place to place. (See Ex. 19:20; Num. 12:5; Deut. 33:2; Gen. 11:5, 6.) Messrs. Eaton and Talmage say God does not bless men like he used to, while the Bible says, "God is no respecter of persons." (See Acts 10:34; Rom. 2:11; 1 Peter 1:17.) They teach that God has changed his plan and does not work as he used to, while the Bible teaches that God is unchangeable. (See Num. 23:19; Job 23:2, 3; Mal. 3:6; James 1:17; Eccl. 3:14, 15; Isa. 51:4-8.)

We have more of the Godhead left than you have, General; and as to the building up of the "manhood of man or the womanhood of woman," we teach that ideal purity is found in Christ, and that we must approximate thereunto before we are saved, salvation being dependent upon an obedience to all, not a part of God's commands. We teach all the cardinal principles of the gospel as factors of development: Faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. (See Matt. 3:15, 16; John 3:5; Matt. 28:19, 20; Mark 16:15-18; Heb. 6:1, 2); some of which Mr. Talmage denies as essential.

PRIESTCRAFT.

Again:—

A careful and impartial study of the teachings of Mormonism leads to the conclusion that it is organized to bring all of its affairs into the control of the priesthood, and the history of its movements confirm this view. Give this priesthood the power of receiving current revelations from the Almighty, which they claim, and the unquestioning obedience from their followers, which they demand, and what is there to hinder the execution of their decrees, however depraved?

From the organization of the church in 1830 until the present, the church government has been as strictly democratic as possible in a divine institution, the law of common consent obtaining in all legislative matters. As to the judicial and executive, they are but adjudicative and administrative, hence no possibility of infraction so long as they follow the law; and if they do not, the elective power is possessed by the people, and they can remove the one offending. The right of franchise is not more sacredly guarded in any church in the world than with us. And as to the latter part of the above quotation, suppose the Latter Day Saints are granted the "power to receive current revelations from the Almighty," and no other source, do you think any great error will be promulgated? I have more faith in God than that! The right to receive revelations from the Almighty is inherent in every man, and, praise to God's name, General Eaton cannot abrogate it. We do claim the right to receive revelations from the Almighty; but force no one to accept them; but when they voluntarily do, we insist that they shall show their acceptance by obedience. No, General, there will be no "execution" of "depraved decrees" in this church as long as they pursue the course which has ever obtained thus far in the organization, which has been loyal to the "current revelations from the Almighty" which "this priesthood has the power of receiving."

POLITICAL INFLUENCE.

In quoting the number of church communicants in the various States, the General gives statistics of the Reorganization, there being but few of the Utah people in the States, and then adds:—

It will be seen that in several of the States, in close political contests, they would hold the balance of power, and so control the action of state legislatures, and by determining the selection of United States Senators make sure of those in the United States Congress who would prevent any legislation Mormon leaders might not desire.

This assertion is ridiculous, and would not need any notice were it not our purpose to apply in another direction. Take for instance the 1,600 communicants in Michigan, and allow one voter for every five persons, and we have about 320 voters. In Iowa 6,000 members, or 1,200 voters. Think you they could control the vote on any great issue? What particular weight did 1,200 voters have either way in Iowa in our last election? The only two points where this objection would have any force at all is Independence, Missouri, and Lamoni, Iowa, where the communicants number about one thousand in each place. But what is the result? There is not a better municipal government anywhere. Their influence has been for good in both places. But suppose the objection raised was true, can we not apply it with manifold force against other churches? The Catholics number 7,501,439 communicants in America, or about 1,500,287 voters, enough to have controlled any national election when properly distributed. The Methodists 5,121,636, or 1,024,327 voters. The Baptists 3,785,740, or 757,148 voters. The Presbyterians 1,466,204, or 283,240 voters. This country knows no religion, and he who urges an objection such as this, would be only too willing to use the elective power to accomplish the establishment of one, and the suppression of all other religions; a principle which if carried into effect would destroy the Union. General Eaton judges others by his own sense of justice. I contend that the Methodist Church could have easily controlled the last election, and it was not the fault of some of the leaders that they did not, for Bishop Newman counselled the ministry of the church in the early fall to temporarily leave their ministry and devote their time to the campaign; and I have it direct from a minister of that church that the ministry almost to a man voted in one way, and used their influence to have their parishioners so to do. This was their inalienable right as individuals, and none could interfere. If the church had used coercion, then they were violating statutory law, and should be punished. This will apply to the Latter Day Saints, and if the General has proof that such is the case, and does not prosecute the church offending, he also is culpable before the public. Shall we commence a warfare against the Methodists and Catholics because they have voters sufficient to control an election? No! According to our laws the majority must rule, whether they are Catholics, Methodists, Latter Day Saints, or any one else.

UNAMERICAN.

Again:—

Mormonism is a menace to our free institutions.

If "Mormonism" is a menace to our free institutions, then what is Catholicism with its seven millions who are taught to forswear our public schools, and who are bound to their religion with stronger ties than to the country? Will General Eaton advocate a general crusade against the Catholics? No; but the Christian Herald, which is the General's sponsor, pats Catholicism on the back and says, "Let's be friends—we are all Christians." Why? Because it is policy, you know.

The instruction of the Almighty through Joseph Smith in 1831 was:—

Is such instruction a menace to our government? Again:—

I, the Lord justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to the law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed; and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil.—D. C. 95: 2.

Such instruction evidences loyalty and national integrity equal to any.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG.

Conference convened in the saints' hall, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, June 19; G. T. Griffiths presiding, G. H. Hulmes assistant. After prayer Bro. Griffiths made a few remarks in reference to the Pittsburg and Kirtland district, after which a permanent organization was effected by the nomination and unanimous election of the following named persons: C. E. Miller president, E. S. Fairley secretary, L. D. Ullom treasurer. L. D. Ullom was recommended as Bishop's agent. On motion all branches in district to be assessed per capita tax to defray expense of district president when visiting in an official capacity. On motion conferences to be held semiannually, in March and September. A committee of six was appointed to solicit funds for purchase of tent to be used in district missionary work. The committee composed of G. H. Hulmes, C. E. Miller, L. D. Ullom, J. Moxon, J. Wayt, and — Hull. Following rules of representation were unanimously adopted: Resolved that from and after the passage of this resolution the basis of representation and the rules governing the same shall be as follows: First, that each branch of this district shall be entitled to two classes of delegates; viz., delegates at large for the organization, and delegates of representation based upon the number of members in good standing. Second, that the number of delegates shall be, one delegate at large for each branch organization, also that each branch shall be entitled to one delegate of representation for each six members in good standing. Third, the delegates of representation shall be elected at the branch business meeting at which the branch report to conference is adopted; and further, that both delegates at large and delegates of representation shall be provided with credentials, attested by the branch clerk; and also that said credentials shall only be transferable to properly elected substitutes or alternates who may be elected at the same meeting as the delegates. Fourth, the members of branches in good standing or the traveling ministry only shall be eligible as delegates of representation, provided that no such delegate shall be accredited as the representative of more than one branch. Fifth, that the president of each branch shall be ex officio the delegate at large for that branch. Sixth, the traveling ministry shall be accepted—when present—as delegates at large without specific representation, unless having credentials from some branch. Seventh, each elder of the district in good standing shall be a member ex officio of the conference without specific representation, unless having credentials from some branch as delegate of representation. Secretary was authorized to purchase necessary minute and record book. Adjourned to Wheeling, West Virginia, first Saturday and Sunday in September next.

NOTE.—Up to the present time $85 has been paid in towards purchasing a tent, and only a few heard from. We would be pleased to hear from each branch in the district in a substantial manner as soon as possible, in order that the tent may be purchased and work commenced in it at as early a date as possible.

Sunday School Associations.

Yours for the work,
T. A. HOUGAS, of the Com.

Miscellaneous Department.

REUNION NOTICES.

PLEASANT GROVE, UTAH.

The above reunion will commence September 18, and hold over two Sundays. We hope and expect to have a good spiritual time if the saints will come for that purpose, and we believe they will. The tent you have assisted in purchasing will be there. Wood and hay will be accessible and water in abundance. Bring your sleeping tents, covered wagons, etc., and come with intent to stay and worship God. Bring your Sunday school quarterlies, Religio supplies, etc., so that all the departments can receive due attention, and you who have not hitherto seen the workings of these auxiliaries can go to your homes prepared to enter into such work.

Imported preachers will be there. Come and see what they look like and hear how they talk. Determine on coming as soon as you see this notice, and swerve not from that determination. We hope to see campers from Montana and Idaho as well as Utah. The Lord will bless the sacrifice incident to the coming if we make it in righteousness.

THEOLOGY IN GERMANY.

RECENT statistics show that the total number of theological students in Germany has diminished very rapidly of late years. In 1890 the number in the various universities was 4,527, while in 1896 it was 2,956. At Berlin, where the most famous professors are usually to be found, the decline is nearly fifty per cent. This has been attributed by some to the very meagre salaries paid by the state. The Living Church cites the foregoing facts and gives what it considers a better reason for the declining number of students. It says:—

“At the majority of the great universities, the theology taught by the faculty is hardly any longer worthy of the name of Christian. At Greifswald and Earlangen, however, the old orthodoxy is still maintained, and it is precisely at these two universities that the number of theological students has increased instead of diminishing. This can hardly be without significance. The learned professors who distinguish themselves by undermining the religion they represent at first attract students and gather followers through the very novelty of their position; but as time goes on the natural result follows, namely, that as not enough is left of Christianity to distinguish it from the world, such teachings lose their interest. Men do not see any reason why they should make it the business of their lives to be telling people that they need not believe what they have hitherto supposed they ought to believe, and that they are going on very well as they are, and have no need to trouble themselves. Of course, if there are good livings to be had, there will be candidates for them. In this case there are neither good livings, nor is there any reason why men should starve in poor ones, so long as other walks of life are open to them. Men will be willing to starve or sacrifice themselves for a great and noble cause; but it would be insane to do so for no cause at all.”—Literary Digest.

DR. BARROWS'S CONVERSATIONS WITH EDUCATED HINDUS.

REV. DR. JOHN HENRY BARROWS, D. D., of Chicago, the president of the World's Parliament of Religions, whose sessions were held in connection with the World's Fair, has been engaged in a prolonged tour in India, speaking in most cases upon the invitation of the Hindus themselves. He has had rare opportunities of getting at the thought of the educated Hindus on the subject of religion, and in The Outlook he gives the results of some of his inquiries. He did not, he tells us, find Hinduism a definite system whose principles could be easily determined. His question, “What are the fundamental theological principles of Hinduism as distinct from its philosophical principles and its social system?” elicited replies that were in all cases but one “vague, evasive, or unsatisfactory,” and the one definite reply was at wide variance with the teaching of the prevailing schools of Hindu philosophy. Though the results were in this direction chiefly negative, the story of one of his interviews is full of interest and represents the Hindu mind in rather a new light to American readers. It was an interview in southern India, where, at the time, the religious excitement was almost unprecedented. Dr. Barrows, writing from Saigon, tells the story as follows:—

“On the 20th of February the Triplicane Hindu Club of Madras gave me, at eight o'clock in the morning, what I supposed was to be a reception. Word had come to me that I was expected to speak on the Columbian Fair and its congresses. As, in company with the Rev. F. W. Kellett, I alighted from the carriage, an officer of the club said that they had a few questions which they desired to put to me. The room was packed with perhaps a hundred and fifty Hindus, many of them lawyers or vakils, barefooted, very lightly dressed on account of the intense heat, and many of them nearly naked to the waist. I had already given in Madras several lectures. It soon became apparent that this meeting was held to furnish an opportunity of exploiting Hinduism. The table behind which I sat was covered with papers and books, among which I recognized my ‘History of the Parliament of Religions.’ Next to me was a well-known pundit S. P. Aiyangar, a member of my reception committee, his forehead, like those of many in the club, painted with the marks of his god. Without any introduction the inquisition opened. With book and pencil in hand the pundit began his prepared questions, and soon the shrewd lawyers jumped to their feet to put in additional inquiries or contest the replies which had been made. The first question related to some noble sentiments in the Bhagavad-gita, and to the claim that such sentiments were as truly inspired as similar ones found in the New Testament. It appeared to me strange that being familiar with my lectures, they doubted my holding to the world-wide area of revelation. The next inquiry, to which the spokesman did not wait for an answer, was this: ‘Since Christ on the cross prayed for his enemies, and since his prayer must have been heard, was not Judas saved?’ I was told of one missionary who had replied affirmatively, and then the questioner hastened to read a selection from Macaulay's Essay on Milton, wherein the famous essayist wrote that even when images in the cathedrals have been destroyed, the images in the mind sometimes remain. This led to a prolonged discussion of idolatry, which had as its remarkable result a bold championship of India's idol-worship. This is not the usual position of educated Hindus, and some of my Christian friends assure me that the defenses were not altogether sincere. I quoted some other things that Macaulay had written, especially his condemnation of the hideous theology of India, and his over-sanguine prophecy that English education would abolish idolatry in Bengal in thirty years. One vakil rose and said: 'When Jesus was walking with his disciples, they saw a dead and decaying dog, from which the disciples turned away in horror. But Jesus said, "How beautiful are his teeth!"' He added that Christians were taught by this to find the good and beautiful rather than the foul and ugly in other religions. I replied: 'The story is not found in the Gospels, but the legend illustrates a truth which I believe in practicing. And I will not seize the opportunity which you have furnished of calling Hinduism a dead and decaying dog, in which only the grinning teeth are beautiful!' I spoke of my distress in witnessing the debasing forms of idolatry prevalent in Benares and elsewhere. One young lawyer rose and quoted a recent apology for idolatry furnished in one of the addresses of Vivekananda. The idol was a symbol of a god, and brought the divine nearer. 'But,' I said, 'you do not think it elevating for human beings to crawl through the filth of a temple and to kiss the tail of a cow, as I have seen them do?' The quick-witted lawyer was on his feet instantly, and said: 'I think it is a great deal better to kiss the tail of a cow than to kill the cow and eat her!' There was a burst of laughter at this sally, in which Mr. Kellett and I joined. I did not say in reply that the killing and eating of cows to give nourishment to the human body did not appear to me any worse than the Hindu's killing of goats before the black and hideous stone image of Kali; I simply replied: 'The eating of cow's flesh is not confined to Christians. After the first session of the Parliament of Religions I went with Vivekananda to the restaurant in the basement of the Art Institute, and I said to him, "What shall I get you to eat?" His reply was, "Give me beef!"' This little story had the effect of a thunderbolt, and the consternation and silence were profound. My friends did not sail any further up that creek!

'I made the claim that there was no necessity of keeping the common people of India any longer, nor was there ever any necessity of holding them, in the debasing kindergarten of polytheistic idolatry. I claimed that God, who is spirit, can be worshiped by all in spirit and in truth. The pundit leader claimed that the idols of the mind were abiding, and that God could only be worshiped under the form of images, real or mental. This I denied, and affirmed that when I most truly worshiped God I had no image of a magnified man before me, but, rather, recognized God as an indwelling, personal love. Finally, I was able to rise above the storm of questions and take my innings in earnest. By this time I was considerably awake, though the hour was early. And for thirty minutes I spoke to them of America, of the Christian principles which entered into our life, of our intelligent common people, of the national patriotism and public spirit, and of municipal pride, all of which went into the making of the Columbian Exposition. I spoke of the material glories of that fair and then of the congresses which were its spiritual side, and of the Parliament of Religions, and of the generosity, tolerance, and fraternity which characterized it. I told of the warm feeling which America has to all who are struggling for liberty and for truth, and of her desire to communicate the very best which she has to the whole world. And, as I rose to depart, the better and more gracious side of human nature came out in the three cheers which were heartily given for the 'president of the Parliament of Religions'! But the pundit was determined to fire one more shot. 'Before you go, I want you to assure us that you think that all men will finally be saved. We Hindus all believe this.' I replied: 'My Master does not encourage me to cherish such a hope. I do entertain a hope, however, for some who have not heard of the historic Christ. There are minds, like that of Socrates naturally Christian. If I do not meet Socrates in heaven, I think it may be because I have not kept in the right road myself.' And thus ended the two hours' conversazione, an outline of which I have endeavored to sketch."—Literary Digest.

THE SAINTS' HERALD REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD will be fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

ABOUT DISCUSSIONS.

THERE has been no action of the church in its conferences, nor any instructions of the general officers of the church, cutting off the privileges or abridging the duty of the elders in the field and in charge in branches and districts, and the great army of the elders and other officers of the church, to prevent them from preaching the word whenever and wherever opportunity offers, or can be made; or defending the faith by word, or pen, and in discussion whenever necessity demands.

Bro. J. D. Erwin seems to have been under the impression that some such restriction had been imposed, because one of the general missionaries in charge ventured to caution the workers in his field to make an exception against Clark Braden, when essaying to arrange for discussion with the Christian or Disciple Church.

If the instruction given by Apostle Joseph R. Lambert in his pastoral is the matter referred to by Bro. Erwin, we have this to say of it: Bro. Lambert was in the legitimate pursuit of his duty in so instructing the men in his field. He knew the field, its requirements, the men of his force, and the man Elder Clark Braden; and desired that in case these brethren of the Disciple Church grew aggressive, and began their usual course of bluster and challenge, in his field, there should be a stop put to their pitting this man so often met and honorably defeated by our elders, from Brn. R. M. Elvin and E. L. Kelley, at Wilber, Nebraska, to Brn. J. F. McDowell and T. W. Williams, at Logan, and Fontanelle, against new men in new places, without the proper knowledge of and understanding of the missionary in charge. In this Bro. Lambert was both right and just, so far as his field is concerned; and was also correct on the general principle that the church nor any of its elders are under just obligations to again meet Elder Clark Braden. The church in its proper representatives has shown that fear of the man, either as an individual debater or as a representative of the Christian or Disciple Church, has not a thing to do with the suggestion that he be excepted against when arranging for debate; for he has been repeatedly met, and successfully. Nor has any thought of possible consequences in case of defeat in discussion with him had a particle of weight in thus advising elders to except him in arranging for discussion.

The editor stated long before the pastoral of Bro. Lambert was written, that having shown the Disciple Church all due credit and courtesy hitherto in accepting discussion with Clark Braden as their representative defender, we did not fear a forensic dispute with them on their claims and our own; and having submitted to Mr. Braden's manners and methods of conducting discussions, we were no longer under any obligations to that church to meet Mr. Braden at their choosing.

Mr. Braden refused to continue debate with Bro. E. L. Kelley, at Lamoni, on an issue expressly provided for by agreement, and circulated a challenge at the close of the service, the closing portion of which challenge stated that it was "open during the lifetime of Clark Braden." The church has all that time, whether it be long or short, to accept such challenge, and cannot be justly charged with fear to meet it, until after Mr. Braden is gone over to the great majority on the thither side of time.

We indorse Bro. Lambert's suggestion, and further state that it is our conviction that neither the Christian or Disciple Church, nor any other body of professed believers, should be permitted to pose this man Clark Braden against the church and its work.

While this is our conviction, it must be understood that no "padlock is put on" any elder's mouth, or any elder's proper privileges as an elder in the field interfered with.

"We want no cowards in our bands
Who will our colors fly."

Experience has proved it to be wisdom that propositions for discussion should be fairly stated; and it will be wiser and safer, as we understand the matter, that in case of proposed debate, the missionary in charge if accessible, or president of district, should be consulted and advised with. At the same time those sent out by the church as missionaries are to be trusted to act upon their own discretion in case of extreme urgency. Mistake is made if anyone, either in or out of the ranks, thinks that Bro. Lambert, the editor, or any other leading officer, is afraid to defend the church, or its issues, because we make this exception to Rev. Clark Braden.

THE "SEARCHLIGHT" ON THE DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

THE following is the leader in the Searchlight, published by the Church of Christ (Hedrickite brethren), for July 10, 1897:—

REGARDING THE BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

There appears to be some misunderstanding among some of our readers regarding our position on the book of Doctrine and Covenants. It may not be amiss to here state our exact position. As all Mormons are doubtless aware there are numerous editions of the book of Doctrine and Covenants. In the first place the book of Doctrine and Covenants is simply a collection of the various revelations given through Joseph Smith. During the early history of the church many revelations were necessary, that the church might be guided in its formation and progress. Up to 1834 about ninety-eight revelations had been given through Joseph Smith. Each revelation was gone over by a committee, appointed for that purpose, and adopted by them in 1834. The Church of Christ is willing and has in the past accepted those revelations adopted by the committee in 1834. Those revelations were compiled by the committee above-mentioned and published. This edition is known as the "1835 edition."

Revelations received after that date, we claim, lack divine inspiration and have no claim on the Church of Christ, because they were proclaimed by an individual then a member of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

It is not surprising that many have misunderstood the "exact" position of the "Church of Christ" in regard to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. In 1864, Mr. Granville Hedrick, in his appeal to old time believers, and attack made upon and protest against plural marriage, used the 1846 edition and edition published by the Reorganized Church, in quoting from the book; and in doing so seemed to indorse them. See Truth Teller, and Mr. Hedrick's little book against polygamy.

Before the decision in the Temple Lot Suit, and while Mr. C. A. Hall was acting as president of Church of Christ, we requested him to state to us specifically in writing the positions to which they held; and in those in which he held that there were differences between the Church of Christ and the Reorganized Church, requested him to state what such differences consisted in, promising to give such statements careful consideration. Mr. Hall failed to make such statement. There has been no statement regarding the Book of Covenants, that we have known of the Church of Christ making, until this one is presented, that has been sufficiently clear for an ordinary, inquiring man to obtain a knowledge of what position the Hedrickite brethren really assumed on the subject. And we are quite pleased to see so clear and apparently decided statement as our quotation from the Searchlight seems to be. We cannot help feeling a doubt that when we present the inevitable conclusions to be drawn from the statement, the Searchlight will either reject the statement itself, or seek by explanation to make the situation as misty as it was before.

The statement in regard to dates is unfortunate, and will surely mislead where it was intended to satisfy.

The minutes of the General Assembly, which passed upon the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, as they were published in the 1835 edition, which the Searchlight so clearly indorses, show two very important facts as to dates.

1. The book as compiled and prepared by committee, was presented to the Assembly August 17, 1835; about eighteen months after February, 1834, in which month it has been stated by some of these same Church of Christ men that the line of divine communication became vitiated and revelations received ceased to be of divine dictation.

2. The committee on compilation was not appointed until September 24, 1834, about seven months after that fatal month of February, 1834, and could not have done its labor of arranging and compiling until after September 24, the date of their appointment; and it is more than probable that much of that work was done during the year 1835.

The minutes show another thing that is curious when applied to the issue regarding validity of work done.

The Assembly was held August 17, 1835, and was called a "General Assembly of the Church of Latter Day Saints."

The resolution by virtue of which the committee was appointed to compile and arrange, is placed on the record as a part of the minutes, and recites that the purpose of the Assembly was to appoint a committee to "arrange the items of doctrine of Jesus Christ, for the government of his church of the Latter Day Saints, which church was organized and commenced its rise on the 6th of April, 1830."

This conclusively disposes of the charge hitherto made that they turned away from Jesus Christ, or Christ, the Lord, at that date. The minutes further show that the members of the committee by whom the compilation was made were all members of the same body by which the book was indorsed, approved, and ordered printed in September, 1834, at the time of their appointment, and all the while they were doing their work.

The committee was composed of Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon, and Frederick G. Williams.

The title page of the book shows that it was the "Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, carefully selected from the revelations of God;" and that it was compiled by the committee above-named, their names being given as presiding elders of said church.

The publisher's preface is dated Kirtland, Ohio, February 17, 1835.

We have believed for a good while that those men who have been haggling about the name of the church, and claiming that the name of Christ was abandoned, the name of the church changed and Christ renounced in 1834, when the church was called the Church of Latter Day Saints, were making a mountain out of a molehill, and based a position and an objection to the church after 1834, that was untenable. This statement of an indorsement and acceptance of the edition of Doctrine and Covenants of 1835, the manifest work of men members of the church when called the Church of the Latter Day Saints, formally appointed by the church while so called, is to us a positive and effective refutation of the position assumed that revelations coming after that date, 1834, are devoid of divine inspiration and have no claim on the Church of Christ because that Joseph Smith was a member of another church, the Church of Latter Day Saints.

The compiled book was not presented by the committee until August 17, 1835, and the Assembly that met that day was called to "take into consideration the labors of a committee," appointed September 24, 1834. At that Assembly the labors of that committee were considered, approved, and solemnly adopted; and the Searchlight, now formally indorses that work, though done while the church bore the name "Latter Day Saints."

There was no doubt in the minds of the members of that Assembly as to what church they belonged and represented. It was the Church of Christ organized April 6, 1830, and they were there to do business in his name, and for that church, the very same church, notwithstanding the Assembly was called a General Assembly of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

Section 99 of the book is dated November, 1834, and it is fair to presume that sections 100, 101, 102, are equally as legal enactments of the church as any other of the sections. We are pleased to learn the exact position of the Searchlight on the subject named, though we fancy it is not consistent with much of the teaching of our Hedrickite brethren in the past.

IS THIS CHRISTIANLIKE?

T. C. MAHAN, reporting Baptist, reporting for the Baptist Flag, published at St. Louis, Missouri, has in that paper for July 29 a partial report of a discussion between Rev. Roney, Baptist, and Rev. Haynes, of the "Church of God," in which he refers to the faith represented by Rev. Haynes in the following terms:—

Bro. Haynes represented the "Church of God," so-called by himself and cobelievers.

This system of faith is a mixture of Mormonism, Campbellism, divine healing, modern sanctification, feet-washing, holy bands, kissing, etc., etc., the grand composition being preserved in the condensed essence of crankification.

It seems to us hardly consistent profession of Christianity for a Baptist to so revile a fellow believer's faith. It may be Baptist courtesy, for it reads a little like something we have heard from the same source.

FOR SETTLERS.

BRO. J. L. RICHEY, a trapper, who has been all over the Ozark Hills of South Missouri and the Boston Mountains of Arkansas, and is quite well informed about the lands there, gives us the following for the HERALD. Please read and profit by his advice to go see for yourselves before buying lands either there, or in the region to the east and south of there.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 30, 1897.

I thought to give the people, for their benefit, an outline or a brief description of the Ozark Hills, of South Missouri, and the Boston Mountains, of Arkansas; comprising the eastern part of Berry County, Stone County, Christian County, Taney County, and Ozark County, Missouri. There are no fertile farming lands except the bottom lands on the streams; the largest pieces are on White River, and range from about ten, eighteen, twenty-five to thirty-nine acres in a bend of the river for which the price asked is from thirty dollars to forty dollars per acre. The uplands are very rocky; some scattering timber, and some grass in places from about one to two rods apart; good water where there is a spring.

Do not trade, or invest without looking at the locations offered you. Those photographic snap shots on paper, are taken from places outside of the districts I have given; for real estate and railroad advertisements.

Carrroll, Boone, Madison, and Newton counties comprise the main Boston Mountains in which there are no large bottoms or spots of arable lands; from one and three to four acres on a quarter section, to cultivate. A good variety of most kinds of timber, good springs of water, and some kinds of minerals are found in localities. Some claims are offered for from forty, eighty, to four hundred dollars per quarter section. See before buying, or trading.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

W. W. BLANCHARD, Canton, Point, Maine, the 6th inst.:—

Bro. U. W. Greene and I are in tent here. Audiences good. Prejudice very strong.

Brn. C. E. Butterworth, W. W. Whiting, and C. J. Carlson, who are holding tent meetings at Rolfe, Iowa, received a very flattering notice in the Reveille, published at Rolfe, for August 5. It closes thus:—

They claim to preach apostolic Christianity in its fullness and power, which is the religion authorized by the Bible to be taught to all men everywhere. A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to attend their meetings, and everybody will be made welcome. Go out and hear, and then judge for yourselves.

Bro. A. C. Barmore, San Francisco, California, August 5:—

Bro. Parker and I have been in this part two weeks. We cannot report any great progress. We are now trying to secure a place in the city for the district tent. We shall use it here until about September 1. I shall speak in a mission run, by a class of "come-outers" to-morrow night. The president reserves the right to review my discourse if it is objectionable. This opportunity to present the word is due to Bro. J. A. Anthony.

Bro. Joseph Squire, Brooklyn, New York, August 8:—

Elder Isaac M. Smith has done some good preaching in Brooklyn of late. He commenced July 25 and continued every night until August 4. He both strengthened the saints in the faith and made friends to the cause of truth. We hope to continue the work during the fall and winter if nothing prevents. The saints in Broad River are alive to the work and are bringing forth fruit.

Bro. S. W. L. Scott, Lansing, Michigan, August 8:—

We closed the second two-days' meeting in the district series at this place last evening. Success is crowning the efforts as to fellowship, spirituality, and sowing the seed. The saints at Nicholsville enjoyed the services, and are indeed commendable. The gathering here utilized a tent pitched in Bro. H. Rathbun's beautiful apple grove. Saints from Webberville, Williamston, Flint, Durand, Dimondale, and Charlotte made the air ring with praise and thanksgiving. O, what a joyous time. Elders H. H. Robinson and J. M. Baggerly are with me.

Bro. R. M. Maloney, McLoud, O. T., Aug. 11:—

I am here in company with Bro. Macrae holding meeting in an arbor. The attendance and interest is fairly good. The people are more friendly to us than they were a year ago when I was here; and we are hopeful of some joining the fold. The true gospel is winning its way in Oklahoma; many who have heretofore not heard it are now learning that God's promises are to us as well as to those who lived in the first century.

Bro. J. M. Baggerly, Lansing, Michigan, August 11:—

We have just closed a two days' meeting here. A good attendance of saints from Lansing and vicinity. The meeting was conducted by Elders S. W. L. Scott, H. H. Robinson, and your humble servant. The weather was lovely. Good liberty was given in the preaching service and all felt edified and benefited. The few saints here are energetic and faithful. Accessions are made slowly. From here we go to Grand Rapids.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

It is not proper for any of the elders, local or missionary, to challenge those differing from us to discuss in the columns of the HERALD, or Ensign, without first having an express understanding with those journals consenting to such arrangement. The HERALD will not hold itself bound to any agreement for written discussion in its columns, no matter by whom made, without the matter of such discussion first being submitted to the HERALD editor for consideration and decision. There is too much of a demand already for space in HERALD, and to pledge for an unknown quantity would be impracticable.

By private letter from the neighborhood of Denison, Crawford County, Iowa, we learn that Bro. John A. McIntosh, "Uncle Johnny Mack," died at four o'clock on the evening of the 8th instant. Everybody who knew him will feel sad that he is gone, much as it was looked for at his age—ninety years.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote from Rockland, Maine, the 7th inst. that he would proceed to Cleveland, Ohio, which point would be his mission headquarters.

According to the Minneapolis, Minnesota, Tribune of August 9, Bro. E. A. Stedman enlightened a congregation in flouting half of the Twin Cities, on Sunday, August 8, upon the subject of the true system of marriage, from a Bible view. Good for Bro. Stedman.

Striking coal miners and prominent labor union leaders have been enjoined by an Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, court from interfering in any way with miners by persuading them to strike or quit work—from "assembling, marching, or camping in proximity to said mines and the houses of the miners," employed by a certain company. Leaders of labor movements state that they will fight said injunction to the bitter end, even should a general strike of all labor organizations be necessary. The date for the final hearing on the injunction has been set for August 16.

From the August 7 issue of the Salt Lake Tribune we learn that Moses Thatcher, formerly a prominent member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the Utah Church and who was deposed from his apostleship because of his refusal to submit to the dictation of his superiors, in political matters, is now on trial for his membership in the Utah Church, before the High Council of Salt Lake stake. The charges are said to be based upon his refusal to sign the manifesto and his neglect to express regret for or disavow the cartooning of George Q. Cannon, one of the Utah Presidency, during the late senatorial campaign. We hope to have and to give our readers a fuller statement of this celebrated case, later on.

Swiss and American citizens of the United States are holding a convention in Chicago in the interest of the initiative and referendum, which they hope to see adopted by the United States, and which to some degree has been adopted in Nebraska and other States.

General Gomez and forces are said to be active in the province of Havana and menacing the Cuban capital. The American Consul at Mantanzas reports that 8,000 insurgents invaded that province and that the Spaniards are fleeing before them.

Discontent in Turkey is being shown by the posting of placards demanding reforms in the system of government and in the army, with threats of uprisings similar to those inaugurated against the Armenians. Government officials have been instructed to be watchful to suppress revolts.

"Rome, August 12.—The Vatican is disappointed that the encyclical of the Pan-Anglician or Lambeth conference, does not favor a rapprochement between the English and Roman churches. It is said that the Pope is astonished to find that the encyclical advocates resistance to the usurpations of the Holy See."

"The rebellion in the Philippines continues as briskly as ever. A report has been circulated in well informed circles in Manila that the Governor General has sent a momentous telegram to the Madrid government amounting to an ultimatum. He gives the government three alternatives—expulsion from the Philippines of the religious orders, failing in this the immediate dispatch of 4,000 troops from Spain to effectually quell the rebellion. In the event of the refusal of either of the above, to accept his resignation."

Bro. H. A. Stebbins left home on the 12th, going to Kansas to attend the joint reunion of the Northern and Western Kansas districts.

An incipient volcano having a crater about twenty-five feet square, with small apertures emitting smoke, is reported from Thomasville, Georgia.

The Chicago Tribune of August 11, publishes a long list of attempts at assassination and assassinations of rulers, beginning with Artaxerxes III. of Persia, about 338 B. C.; this in connection with the late assassination of Senor Canovas, in Spain; and from which it appears that crowned heads and those immediately supporting them and their policies have been in especial danger from assassins.

America—Joseph's land—only parts of which are heard from, still leads in gold production, according to the following figures, said to be correct: United States $53,088,000, Australia $46,250,000, Africa $44,000,000, Russia $22,000,000, Mexico $7,000,000, British India $5,825,000—for 1896.

Bro. Isaac N. Roberts, of the Minnesota mission, was obliged to return home, because of sickness, arriving on Tuesday the 10th inst. He will not be able to resume missionary labor until he improves in health. He should be remembered.

A dispatch to the London Mail, from Copenhagen, states that Captain Mortensen, of the bark Ansgar, which arrived at Onega, Russia, near Archangel, has sent a brief dispatch to the effect that on July 13, two days after Andree started from Dane's Island in a balloon for the north pole, he passed at a distance of 100 yards a black balloon, which had collapsed from loss of gas. Capt. M. adds that for some time before the balloon was sighted the wind had been blowing strongly from the north.

Paris advices, August 12: "The Matin publishes a statement which purports to come from a Carlist source to the effect that 60,000 volunteers have been organized and are being rapidly armed in various provinces of Spain, ready to rise at the signal of Don Carlos. The pretender, however, according to this story, 'is restrained by patriotism, and will await the issue of the Cuban difficulty before making a bid for the throne.'

Pres. A. H. Smith departed again, on the 10th, for Nauvoo, Illinois, to attend a reunion of old settlers, to open some time during the present week—of the 8th.

Pres. Joseph Smith left home on the 12th for Maysville, Missouri, and other points. He is to address the Chautauqua Association at Maysville on the subject of "temperance," also another large gathering in that region of country.

The Armada, Michigan, Graphic, for July 2, 1897, sent us by Bro. Daniel Lewis, has a two-column article, "An important warning," written in a spirit that would prejudice and mislead the public mind, and signed by Francis W. Ware. We suppose some of our live brethren will give it attention.

The Herald of Traverse City, Michigan, for July 22, has notice of tent meetings being held in that city by elders of the Reorganized Church. The notice includes several statements which set forth the position of the Reorganization in contrast to factions of the original church. We suppose Bro. Cornish and his coworkers are talking to the people of Traverse City.

The Cuban forces have captured and destroyed the electric light plant which illuminated General Weyler's trocha. Important Cuban victories continue. The patriots are encouraged since the death of the Spanish Premier and freely predict that Cuba will gain independence before the end of the year.

London cablegrams state that 10,000 active Carlists are located in that city, that they are ready to join their fellows in Spain. A prominent Carlist says nothing but foreign interference can prevent Don Carlos from reaching the Spanish throne. The establishment of a republic is also freely predicted.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"But forever and forever
Let it be the soul's endeavor
Love from hatred to dis sever,
And in whatsoe'er we do,
Won by truth's eternal beauty,
To our highest sense of duty
Evermore be firm and true."

TO-DAY.

Be swift to love your own, dears,
Your own who need you so.
Say to the speeding hour, dears,
"I will not let thee go Except thou give a blessing."
Force it to abide and stay—
Love has no sure to-morrow;
It only has to-day.

O, hasten to be kind, dears,
Before the time shall come
When you are left behind, dears,
In an all-lonely home;
Before in late contrition
Vainly you weep and pray,
Love has no sure to-morrow:
It only has to-day.

Swifter than sun and shade, dears,
Move the fleet wings of Pain;
The chance we have to-day, dears,
May never come again.
Joy is a fickle rover;
He brooketh not delay.
Love has no sure to-morrow;
It only has to-day.

Too late to plead or grieve, dears,
Too late to kiss or sigh
When Death has laid his seal, dears,
On the cold lip and eye.
Too late our gifts to lavish
Upon the burial clay;
Love has no sure to-morrow;
It only has to-day.

CLEANLINESS.

THE Psalmist says: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart."

Webster defines cleanliness: "1. Freedom from dirt, filth, or extraneous matter; 2. Neatness of person or dress; purity."

A quotation from Swift: "Neatness from head to heel."

In other places in the Bible and also in the latter-day revelations, we are commanded of the Lord to be neat and clean in our persons, intimating cleanliness is conducive to godliness. Our especial mission this morning is to the mothers and elder sisters, and as such it is our duty to make home the most attractive place on earth. This cannot be done except we adopt a systematic method of cleaning and being orderly. The turning of a house or room "upside down" or "inside out" once or twice a year is not sufficient to keep our rooms pure, sweet, and clean. Daily or weekly, according to the use made of the rooms, should our houses be cleansed. How cleansed? By removing dirt and filth of every kind from floors, furniture, pictures, etc., by means of broom, duster, soap and water, not forgetting, by any means, "God's purifiers"—pure air and sunshine.

How much easier to serve the Lord in a clean, orderly home, than where King Disorder and Uncleanliness reign. The children should be taught habits of order and cleanliness, by such means as having proper places for their individual belongings and requiring them to keep their clothing, books, playthings in place assigned. This greatly lessens the work of older members of the family.

By bathing them often while too young to attend to proper bathing by themselves, we can teach them from babyhood the vast importance of keeping the body clean. By keeping the pores of the skin open much effete matter of the body is expunged. Teach them the parts most exposed to dust and dirt need more frequent washing, for instance hands, face, neck, ears, etc.; that the clothing can be kept clean by often washing of hands and drying of them on the proper towel, not using dress, apron, sleeve, or pants for that purpose. By teaching them to devote certain parts of the day to certain kinds of play; for instance, in the morning they may play at making "mud pies," etc., for it is right they should romp, run, play in the grass and dirt, to develop bone, muscle, and strength; but before dinner they should cleanse and array themselves to appear at the table. In the afternoon some other sort of amusement should be provided. Teach the children that through these means much disease and suffering is avoided.

Now with clean homes and persons of course we will try to be especially careful what we prepare to nourish these bodies, and how we prepare our food. The Lord has indicated to us through his kindness and love some things that are especially good and some hurtful. We will do well to heed all such instructions. Let the vessels used for preparing the food, the oven, kettle, or vessel used for cooking the same, the receptacle for the article when cooked, all be scrupulously clean; if washed with soap and water be thoroughly rinsed that the soap may not spoil the otherwise dainty edibles. Finally avoid being an extremist in anything, thereby causing a spirit of unrest and lack of freedom in our home circle. Always try to find the happy golden mean.

Having traveled somewhat among the families of the saints, I find that those who are most systematic, as a rule, have the most time to devote to doing good unto others, lending helping hands in times of sickness and need. Although often having large families, they are always ready and have time to help some burdened sister. Thereby following Paul's injunction, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

BRO. J. F. MINTUN, writing of the program for Sunday school work at Woodbine reunion, says: "... The work of the committee is progressing. I am assured the work done will be of unusual interest."

Bro. Joseph Roberts: "I hope to be able to attend the reunion [Thurman, Iowa], and in any work I can do previous to convening to make the work a grand success, I am at your service."

Sr. Vina H. Goff: "Many children will, doubtless, accompany their parents to the reunion [Nevada, Missouri], and I feel as though it would be wasting a good opportunity to let them go without some instruction."

Six reunions will be held in the great Mississippi valley within the next five weeks, and we are happy to learn that the Sunday school work will be represented at each of them. Local workers seem to be uniting their efforts in this line, and more and better work is the result.

A sister asks, "Should an assistant superintendent be called upon for work when the superintendent is present?" We answer, Yes, decidedly. Too often is an assistant considered no more than a cipher—a character to stand in vacant places. And as a result the assistant has no knowledge of what has been done, or what is necessary to be done. So when left to fill a vacancy, he finds he is a stranger to the work, and cannot hope to succeed more than fairly well. On the other hand, if the assistant is frequently counseled and placed in the work, he is ever ready to take it up where the superintendent lays it down.

An assistant is or ought to be an associate. This is true in the local school, in the district association, or in the general association. And any superintendent who has within him the true spirit of the work will prize very highly this privilege of having an associate. No officer can fail to be benefited oftentimes, and the work benefited, too, by the wise and timely counsel of an associate.

We have seen schools, and even districts, where the assistant superintendents were almost unknown. They had never done any work because they were never given an opportunity. This is all wrong. Better results will ensue when superintendent and assistant work together. Then you have the wisdom of two in the works of either one. Unity gives strength and insures safety.

The assistant should be afforded opportunities, and he should work, not occasionally, but regularly. This done, and the condition of many schools and districts will be improved.

MANY questions, some of which are in the nature of complaints, concerning the three texts now used in the Quarterlies, are coming to us from various parts of the country. There seems to be no objection to the subject matter, but to there being three different texts. One superintendent says: "I can't get three lessons and do my other work." One mother said: "Three lessons a week are too many for me to learn and then teach to my children." Another superintendent: "I am clear discouraged. I did get along in a way with two lessons, but three different ones beats me. It has spoiled my general review." A missionary says: "It has crippled my work and lessened my usefulness to the schools I visit." Another: "I can't afford to buy so many Quarterlies." "Just as I looked for uniform lessons we were further from it than ever. How long will this last?" "Is this not contrary to the order of the General Convention?" "I am elated with the new Intermediate Quarterly."

Such are a part of them. They are somewhat suggestive, notwithstanding they come from persons almost wholly unacquainted with the circumstances. Without offering any explanation, we say that the best was done that could be done under the existing conditions. We did get "further off than ever" from uniformity, but it was with no inclination to ignore the "order of the general convention." Uniformity will probably be reached next quarter. Till then, let us keep our work moving, just as we have done before, notwithstanding some slight inconvenience. No valiant worker will allow small matters to impede his progress.

ANOTHER IMAGE SMASHED.

ROBERT RAIKES is no longer "in it." Rev. W. F. Scott, D. D., in the June, 1897, Ladies' Home Journal, writes of, "When John Wesley Preached in Georgia." His article is illustrated with two half-tone pictures, entitled, "The First Methodist Sermon Preached in America, Delivered by John Wesley in Savannah, Georgia." and "John Wesley Teaching His Sunday School, the First in the World." Here is what the writer says under the subheading of, "The First Sunday School in the World":—

"Wesley began now to devote himself to the thorough organization of his parish, in which work he was somewhat assisted by his brother Charles. He projected his parochial labors upon a large scale, proposing to preach on the Sabbath no less than five times. Once, prayer, with expositions, in French; another time, with expositions, in German; another, with expositions, in Italian; two services for the English population, and in addition to all this the administration of the Holy Communion, and the Ordinance of Baptism, where it was desired. During the week he devoted no little time to pastoral visitation, and to the management of a school, where he taught only advanced pupils. As to his habits of living he might almost have shamed a Franciscan friar, subsisting, as he did, on bread and water a great deal of the time.

"Meanwhile Wesley began to provide for the Sunday school instruction of the children of the parish. His devotion to children at times almost amounted to infatuation. Children were likewise equally attached to him, as shown in their intercourse with him. Both on weekdays and Sabbaths he gave no little attention to educational work. As a preliminary labor on the Sabbath, before the evening service, he required them to convene in the church, at which time he catechised them thoroughly and furnished them with additional teaching from the Bible itself. In the present Wesleyan Memorial Church, in Savannah, Georgia, there is a Sunday school room into which hundreds of children crowd for Sunday instruction. The original school was less in number, but it was unquestionably the first Sunday school in the world. When taught by Wesley it numbered between sixty and seventy-five scholars, but from all accounts there were few, if any, Indian boys in his earlier classes. A very high authority, Sir Charles Reed, M. P., LL. D., of England, is clearly of the opinion that this Sunday school was the first founded in the world, and that it antedates by a half century the secular instruction of Robert Raikes at Gloucester, England, as well as the first school in America upon Raikes' plan, which was established in the city of New York. In support of these views Mr. Reed quotes from the history of Georgia by the late venerable Bishop Stephens, of Pennsylvania, who, some fifty years ago, had charge of the parish of Christ Church in this same city of Savannah."—Ladies' Home Journal, June, 1897, page 6.

Well, the historian is somewhat like the antiquarian, when he has all the facts before him, he may reach correct conclusions; when he has not, he cannot.

PACIFIC GROVE, Cal., July 30.

Editors Herald:—My mottoes are to try, try again; and that a wise man will change, but the foolish man hath a way of his own and changeth not, especially when he is old. So I am going to profit by our correspondence, and thank you for the plain talk and good reasons you gave for not printing my last letters in the Herald. And as I am not the least bit selfish on this line at least, nor ashamed to be corrected when I am wrong, especially by an old play-fellow and brother indeed, you will do me a great favor to print this letter, that some others of the Herald's correspondents who occupy from one to three columns may have the benefit of your plain talk to me; because you might not speak as plain to others as to me, for fear of offending them.

You say: "Some of yours [letters] have been long, poorly written, on yellow paper, with pencil, and contained reflections not conducive to good results, as we viewed it. You also say that the Herald has usually been full; and, that if my letters had been in some one else's would have been out. I have quoted and underscored this part of your letter to me, that others like myself who write long letters with pencil and without punctuation, as I have, puts the Herald editors to lots of trouble and sometimes shuts out others whose letters are just as important to the writer and many of the readers of the Herald as yours or mine who write such long and, to some at least, uninteresting strings. So we old-timers should have a care and make one more change before we pass over, and realize that if our long letters are put into the paper several short ones must be left out.

But I dare not write any more, only to say that we, Brn. R. Ferris, N. B. Julian, and myself are here with the district tent. These two brethren are self-sustaining and have been a great help; and although we have not been able to get up a big interest, such as we read of in the East, we have done what we at the time thought for the best. We have found friends and have been favored in every place, and we have reached more people and at less expense than in any other way we could have labored.

We have been blessed in visiting the people at their houses, and in preaching; and as to the results, we are not prepared to say what they will be, but this we can say: We have tried to sow the seed carefully, knowing that the best of sowers sow out of season and unwisely at times.

Your brother,

A. HAWS.

THACKERAY, Ill., July 30.

Editors Herald:—I wish to state to the saints of Southern Illinois district that they have three general missionaries among them this year, sent by General Conference: Brn. V. D. Baggerly, J. D. Stead, and the writer. I take this method of informing you that you should not fail in sending in your tithes and offerings to Bro. W. A. Kelley, Tunnel Hill, Illinois, agent for this district, in order that the families of those who are thus appointed and work faithfully in the work of our Lord may not be neglected, but receive their support as mentioned in the law given to the church. Let us not be neglectful in performing our duty, whatever it may be. We can all help in the building up of this great work. We are told: "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all."—D. C. 119: 8.

We all have a grand opportunity to thus improve our time and talents, and secure unto ourselves not only the blessings of God in this life, but that great reward in the world to come. The Lord has told us our duty in the three books of the church: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3: 10. "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people, for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble."—D. C. 64: 5. Also, Book of Nephi 11: 3. This principle of tithing being a part of the gospel law, all should be willing to comply therewith, and thus help to fulfill the statement of the Savior: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."—Matt. 24: 14.

We see from what is taking place among the nations of the earth, such as wars, earthquakes, famines, pestilences, and great commotions in foreign lands, as well as in our own land; men's hearts failing them for fear for looking after those things, which are getting worse and worse every year; such as the waves of the sea roaring and heaving themselves beyond their bounds; together with the fierce and vivid lightning, tornadoes, cyclones, cloudbursts, strikes, suicides, unrest among all classes both politically and religiously; signs in the heavens and earth all indicate that we are living in the dispensation of the fullness of times, which will bring about the glorious advent of the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven to the joy and satisfaction of his long dispersed people, who have been passing under the rod for to these many generations; but are now gradually returning back to their beloved home, building and repairing the old waste cities, the desolations of many generations, and there to remain forever, as was promised in days of yore.

Let everyone strive to live by every word of God, and thus keep pace with the work of the Master, laboring together in love and union for the advancement of the work intrusted to all, that others may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. It becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor; therefore they are left without excuse, and their sins are upon their own heads. Let us follow the example of the good Samaritan in all our work, such as compassion and mercy to all those who have not received the light in warning our neighbor. All should strive to learn his duty.

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand."—D. C. 104: 44.

Inasmuch as the distress and perplexity all around us indicate that we are nearing the end, let us labor diligently to push forward the great work in which we are engaged. Remember that there is no standstill, if we are going our duty. The needs of the work demand our hearty support; our time, our talents, and our means.

The saints will please take notice in Herald of July 28, page 484, in regard to the time and place of the holding of our reunion this fall. As many of those who can should come expecting to have a good time in serving the Master. Bro. I. N. White is expected to be with us. Bro. J. D. Stead and I are laboring together at present, with fair audiences to hear the word. Bro. Baggerly is at home on account of sickness in his family. All who desire labor done in their respective localities will please write me at Orchardville, Illinois, my home address. Your requests for labor will be looked after as soon as practicable. Trusting that I may have the hearty co-operation of all the saints and officers in the district, both the traveling and local workers, I close by subscribing myself as your fellow worker in behalf of the gospel of Christ.

F. M. SLOVER.

PERRY, Iowa, July 31.

Editors Herald:—A series of meetings have been conducted here in Perry by Elders C. Scott, E. B. Morgan, and J. S. Roth, under cover of the district tent. Bro. Roth concluded the effort, preaching a greater number of sermons; Scott and Morgan being called elsewhere. The entire effort consisted of twenty-five spiritual, gospel sermons. Coming as they did by the power of inspiration, they swept away like the mighty avalanche the heretofore erected and prevailing words of prejudice, inculcating by the elucidation of truth a deeper and better understanding in the minds of all, both saint and sinner; erecting a monument in the very soul in memory of the event that time can never efface, of which the effect and results are immeasurable. The ear of many a prejudiced soul trained to love pleasure more than God and fables more than the truth, heard the word that creates faith, and said, "These sermons feed my very soul." So the effect as thus seen characterizes our brethren as the called of God. Never in the history of the city has there been such an interest manifested, notwithstanding the wolf-cry raised by the shepherds so-called of Perry. The fame of our brethren went abroad, inducing men and women to come out to hear, learn, and know for themselves who the wolf is. One pastor called a special meeting to warn his flock to stay away, and others gave the same charge. Some gave heed, but not all; and our tent was nearly always full, with many outside. It soon became a common thing to see persons in the audience with Bible in hand, others with paper and pencil, and a persistent repetition of the scene evinced an intense determination to test the matter by the law and the testimony; and the outgrowth as now seen justifies the prediction that Babylon with its self-called and exalted pastors will soon perish.

The poor and many others of comprehensive minds, and reasonableness of character, are compelled to desist from their adherence to the coercive spirit of rule by the clergy; such as, "Don't go to hear the Mormons, they are the same as live in Salt Lake City, and believe in plurality of wives;" but of the deplorable condition of their situation, they were largely in ignorance until pictured out before them by the servants of God imbued by the Spirit of the Master, through whom the once bound and prejudiced soul has proven such statements a falsehood in the mouth of them they once respected as disciples and servants of God. O what a transformation!

So in time we believe many will heed the angelic cry, "Come out of her my people," "for saith the Spirit," through a resident servant of the Angus branch located here in Perry and vicinity, on the first Lord's day after the erection of the tabernacle, "the Lord will show forth his power in the salvation of souls in this place, if ye be faithful, O, my saints."

The following Sabbath two adults and four young people were buried with Christ by baptism and arose to walk in newness of life. And others since the close of the meetings have expressed themselves as being dissatisfied with their church and former faith. Church officials are calling business meetings to discuss the question, "What shall we do with our pastor?" Poor fellow, he cannot give satisfaction any more. Saints rejoice to know that when the elders with the tent, the organ, and beautiful singing left, the power of their word—God's word—remained, bringing heretofore inimical persons on investigating and friendly terms with the saints. So to God be all the glory, as Bro. Scott would say.

J. W. MORGAN.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3.

Editors Herald:—I commenced my labors on May 1, in Southern Indiana district, and continued until June 1. I came to this city to do missionary labor, where the work was opened by Elder M. R. Scott, Jr. I made my arrangements for preaching at the house of Mr. James Reggle. The place where Bro. Scott preached was the "Free gospel mission hall," and it wasn't so free at last; for as soon as they found we belonged to the Latter Day Saints and that we believed in the Book of Mormon and the revelations of Joseph Smith, they didn't want any more of such preaching, and closed the free gospel mission against us.

I find it isn't the sign of people coming in this latter-day work or any evidence that they believe the gospel, for them to sanction some things by saying "Amen" while preaching to them. I had them to say "Amen" and "Praise the Lord," and afterwards go back on the preaching because we believe in continued revelations. I think it far the best to float under our own colors—"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." I feel better in the end, and no one can say we tried to deceive.

Well, I find that the work in this city is not very flattering; in fact, they want anything but the gospel restored by Joseph Smith; that seems to paralyze the people. I find only two who are willing to investigate, and who are believing the gospel message. I find it quite difficult to get an opening in the eastern part of this State. Hot weather, and hard times, and hilly country, make it very unpleasant at this season of year. I have been traveling about a week and have not made any progress yet in the country. I have been sick for three weeks; I gave out walking and carrying my luggage. It cost me fifty cents to get a man to take me four miles, paid or walk.

I think it would be best if the church would observe the pattern; that is send "two by two;" especially in new fields where the work needs to be opened up. They say they have their pastors and they don't care about any traveling missionary. "We are" "Baptists" or "Christians," probably "Methodist," "and it don't make any difference any way;" and so it goes. Christ told the truth—it would be like it was in the days of Noah—the people in a careless or heedless condition. Later on when the hot weather is over we want to make a strong effort here; but like all other cities it will take some means, which we haven't at present. I am doing fireside preaching.

JAMES M. SCOTT.

BEATRICE, Neb., Aug. 2.

Editors Herald:—I have been busily engaged in the work of the Lord for some time. I came here July 22 and began service last Sunday (yesterday). We led four more precious souls into the beautiful waters of the Blue River and baptized them. The other professed religionists of this vicinity are trying their best to overthrow our effort, but the Lord is with us; his work is onward in this place. May God speed the right.

In Christ,

H. W. BELLVILLE.

KHEDIVE, Pa., July 30.

Editors Herald:—I am opening the work here in a new field, in company with Bro. Joseph Moxon. Bro. W. E. Rush and wife are the only saints that live here, and we are sojourning with them, and in their house preaching the gospel. They were baptized by Bro. Moxon in October, 1896, and now appear to be saints in whose mouth there is no guile. Their souls were hungry for the gospel, and now they enjoy the feast. Bro. Rush is destined to be a good laborer in the vineyard. He is bright, humble, zealous, and quite spiritual. He stands first-class in this community notwithstanding his "Joe Smith" doctrine. They say "nothing can be said against Bro. Rush." He is the only representative of the latter-day work in Greene County that we know of; and he in his devout life and excellent character is an honor and an ornament to the cause to begin with, and equally as much can be said of his companion.

We pray that they may form a nucleus for the church here, and standing firmly, as they have so far, against a powerful opposition may lift the standard of Christ on high and invite the honest in heart to "look and live," to the eternal peace of many, and the glory and praise of our God and the Captain of our salvation.

We parted from Bro. Devore at Fayette City where between us eleven were baptized, and many more almost ready. I baptized one at Banning, Bro. George Rankin. I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. George Hileman's child in the Baptist church at Jacob's Creek, on Sunday last, to a very large congregation, with good effect; and we there, by the favor of God, left a good testimony to the latter-day work. The saints there stand firmly as a rule. There are a few charming saints at Bannings, and a few members of the Bicker-tonites—noble souls—who attend our meetings, and doubtless coming this way. The Fayette City saints are happy over the results of our labors among them. We hope soon to return to this field. The saints are "living their religion," and the work is prosperous.

D. L. SHINN.

DELOIT, Iowa, Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—The two-days' meetings held in Galland's Grove, Iowa, district, at Harlan, Galland's Grove, and Salem branches were well attended, and the brethren appointed to assist me did their part nobly. At Salem we were favored with the presence and labors of Elders Charles Derry and John Hawley.

As Bishop's agent for this district I have endeavored to present the law of tithing to the saints, urging the necessity of a compliance thereto. This district has a membership of nearly one thousand, and we ought to do more for the sustaining of the work this year than ever before. Let every one carefully reread "Address to the Saints" in Heralds of July 21 and August 4, then see to it that you do upon your part.

Elder John Pett, Dow City, Iowa, your former Bishop's agent, has kindly consented to act as subagent for Galland's Grove branch, and wherever he may be able to travel in the district, saints, give him your tithes and offerings and he will receipt you for them.

I intend to visit Dow City, Coalville, Benan, and Pilot Rock branches before the convening of district conference in October, or November. In the meantime do not wait for the agent to call upon you before paying the amount on hand, but send it at once by bank draft, money order, or registered letter to me at Deloit, Crawford County, Iowa, and I will send you a receipt. May the blessings of God attend his saints everywhere. For the past ten days I have been assisting Bro. J. F. McDowell in tabernacle meetings in Denison. We closed last evening.

CHARLES J. HUNT.

WEIR CITY, Kan., Aug. 3.

Editors Herald:—The Lord has blessed me in my efforts to dispense the gospel of Christ. Much opposition comes against this latter-day work; but when its batteries are opened on the enemy, and properly handled, the en-sign is "set up," and it stays up, blind superstition, traditionary teachings of men, doctrines of devils, and mad prejudice must give way enough for the honest in heart to look, behold, wonder, consider, and be gathered out of Babylon, and be translated out of darkness into the marvelous light of the restored gospel.

I have been associated with Bro. Keck in tent work a part of this season. Bro. Keck planted the tent in Jasper, Missouri, July 6, preaching every night and stopping with Bro. Chrestensen, who lived five miles from town, making it hard on the elder, riding five miles home after preaching, getting to bed from eleven to twelve o'clock. Jasper is a new field to our work, and lots of prejudice all around. My wife's sickness delayed me one week or so. I arrived the 15th and Bro. Keck left the 18th for his home and other points, while I wound up the battle with the assistance of Bro. J. C. Chrestensen and Bro. S. D. Young, a priest, who paid the expense bill of tent, lumber rent, and oil, amounting to about $4, and very hospitably kept the preachers. Let praise be to our heavenly Father, and let our efforts be put forth with an eye single to his glory, and all will receive their just reward.

At first the people of Jasper were very "wild," timid, and distant, seemingly afraid to even hear us advance our claims; but they gradually came closer and nearer, until quite a number were anxious to hear. The people would come and stand off at barely hearing distance, and only a few inside; but gradually they came nearer. After Bro. Keck left (his work had been well done, but of such a nature that) I had to preach on "Joseph Smith a true prophet," also on the Book of Mormon." I watered the seed by handling these subjects, and from that on the interest from the people grew better, the crowds more steady, and my liberty better. At our last meeting a large crowd was present; many "good-byes," "sorry to see you leave," "you must be sure and come back," "Well, we have learned a great deal and you people are not what we had heard you were," and many other expressions nice and friendly, greeted our ears, as we left the town of Jasper. Surely God has and will bring a people out of Jasper. We left them to look more clearly upon much of the "truth." The tent has gone to Echo, Indian Territory, for a camp meeting from August 6 to 16.

I went from Jasper to Webb City, where I preached over Sunday to a fair sized congregation of saints. Monday I went to Joplin and Tuesday to this place. No providential hindrance I will go to Echo in a few days. Now I must go a few miles to see and comfort my darlings (wife and baby), and be of some cheer to them amidst their loneliness while I am off, and all of us cheerfully doing the Master's service we hope. Let us be faithful, for the wiles of Satan are becoming more and more subtle, but his plans and schemes must get out of the way of the "little stone" as it rolls along. So, let us not be caught in his trap, remembering, this is not the selfish work of men, but the true work of the Lord God.

In gospel bonds,

W. C. CATHER.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., July 9.

Editors Herald:—By late papers I learn that the mission steamer of the Wesleyan church, the "Meda," lately struck a reef off the coast of New Guinea and is a total wreck. Fortunately she was insured. However, it shows that misfortune comes to other mission boats besides our own. The Presbyterians suffered the loss of the "Day Spring" about the same time the Evanelia went down.

Let the elders look out for the lectures of the Rev. Dr. Clifford, the leading Baptist minister of London. He is on a tour around the world for his health and is well worth hearing.

"Is the World Growing Better?" is the title of his latest lecture and can't fail to interest the ministry of our church. As the Doctor takes an optimistic view of the world's condition, he unhesitatingly answers the above question in the affirmative, and yet wishes not to ignore the arguments and facts on the other side, which he looks "square in the face." Those who take the opposite view he calls "pessimists." He affirms that the view that the world is growing worse, when held by religionists, is due to: First, a misinterpretation of Bible prophecies; and second to a want of a comprehensive view of life. Such persons only see it in fragments. Without instancing any one of them he told his audience very confidently that ninety-nine per cent of the prophecies relied on by the other side were fulfilled in the early centuries of the Christian era, and the other one per cent indicated a gradual leavening process until the world would attain to peace and prosperity. The kingdom of God is not to come suddenly, but gradually. Illiteracy is passing away, the line between master and slave is gone, the distinction between rich and poor is going, and the various social and economic problems are nearing a solution. There are more people in the country and less per centage of criminals in the jails than there were sixty years ago in England. Woman, once the slave of man, is raised to her proper sphere, and maternity, child-nature, and hereditary influences are understood as never before; in fact, "anyone who can see through a ladder can discern that the world is growing better."

The false alarms of the alarmist Advent preachers in 1844, 1866, etc., gave him opportunity to ridicule or denounce a pessimism which makes it harder to believe in God. Finally, he saw in the churches a sign of betterment. When a boy he seldom heard a sermon on the kingdom of God. Now it was often a pulpit theme. There has been a freshening of life in the churches; a return—not to creed, church, or Catechism, but to Christ—"back to him!" The Christians were learning that "our citizenship is in heaven," but heaven is down here. And the Rev. Crookston (Presbyterian) in moving a vote of thanks at the close indorsed this last statement, adding, "that we Christian ministers are now preaching, not a Christ away off yonder in glory, but the Christ here among us."

I was very much gratified to hear this, and fairly "itched" to inquire what is bringing about this change on the part of the churches.

Well, are we pessimists, too, for we take the position the world is not growing better? Are we alarmists? Do we take a narrow view of life? It behooves us to take the safe position and leave no room for the world justly to misunderstand us. Are we ready to be classed as "Christian pessimists" whose doctrines are discouraging, productive of skepticism, and therefore to be resisted?

By late Melbourne Age I see that the two Utah missionaries in that city are brought out of their shell in a protest against the statement of the New Zealand correspondent; viz., that Utah Mormons had taught the native Maoris to practice polygamy. They deny that such are members of the Mormon Church, or that the missionaries there have propagated the doctrine. "The principles we teach were not originated by Brigham Young, but by God himself. Brigham Young was not the founder of the Mormon Church, for it was organized in Fayette, Seneca County, New York, U. S. A., on the 6th April, 1830, by Joseph Smith, Jun., and five others," say they. I would that these "representatives" of that church in Melbourne knew the rest of the history as well as they do the first few sentences of it.

Elders Kaler and Butterworth are up the north coast on a tour by wagon road; a fine young man baptized on the way. There is no missionary in Sydney at present, but the local talent with Elder Richard Ellis as leader, are, to all accounts, holding the fort and interest is good. This is gratifying. One more was baptized here last Sunday, the firstfruits of an opening effected by Elder Broadway in one of the suburbs of this coal city.

TALMAGEAN CRITICISM.—NO. 2.

BY ELDER T. W. WILLIAMS.

THE SUCCESSOR.

GENERAL EATON continues:—

The two leaders under whom the Mormons rose to the height of their self-assertion were Joseph Smith, their founder, and Brigham Young, his successor.

Joseph Smith was not the founder of the Latter Day Saints' Church, but merely the human instrument in God's hands for its accomplishment. Brigham Young was not his successor, but an impudent usurper.

J. F. Phillips, Judge of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri, in a decision rendered in 1894, relative to the rightful owners of the church property known as the Temple Lot, has this to say of the succession:—

There can be no question of the fact that Brigham Young's assumed presidency was a bold and bald usurpation.

The selection of Brigham Young as president of the church was in contravention of every known law in the church, as has been clearly shown in the columns of the church papers time and again.

REPUTATION.

He [Smith] had the reputation of being an idle youth; given to chicken thieving.

Is a man always to be judged by his reputation? You undoubtedly know that reputation is what people say a man is, character is what he is. What was the reputation of Jesus? A traitor, "winebibber," "glutton," friend of "publicans and sinners." What was his character? Pure infancy, stainless childhood, unswerving manhood, a friend of mortality, the Son of God. What was the reputation of the apostles, yea of the worthies of all the ages? In the mouths of enemies always vile. Can you, dare you, General Eaton, judge the work of any man living or dead by what his enemies said, and still claim you have dealt him justice? To whom are you indebted for the information that Joseph Smith was "an ignorant, idle youth; given to chicken thieving"? To fair-minded, honorable men and women? No! A thousand times, No!

PEEK STONE.

Both father and son were very superstitious, and believed in witchcraft and divining. In digging a well for a neighbor Chase, a stone of peculiar form and appearance was found. This the son called his "peek stone" and with it sought to find hidden treasures. He found people could be fooled; considerable digging was done under his direction, but he never discovered any treasures.

This is made up of whole cloth, not a particle of truth in it. That the General culled it from some sensational "Mormon exposé," we concede; but he who peddles a falsehood is alike responsible with the one who originates it.

MOBOCRACY CONDONED.

Referring to the time when Joseph Smith went from Kirtland to Jackson County, Missouri, in 1832 and 1834, he says:—

Then there had been no marked indications of polygamy, which, together with the union of church and state in Utah, so attracted public attention as to leave other obnoxious features of Mormonism comparatively unnoticed. But without the manifestations of these two doctrines, so offensive to American ideas, the other beliefs and characteristics of Mormons were so obnoxious to surrounding communities in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, that the self-styled saints were not permitted to carry out their purposes without conflict.

Had there been any indications of polygamy at all at this time, General? If not, why did you use the word "marked" except to mislead the reader? If you had been fair, and examined the whole of Mormonism, you would have discovered that polygamy was denounced by the leading officers of the church from its organization until the martyrdom of its President. Judge Phillips in his decision says:—

The Book of Mormon itself inveighed against the sin of polygamy. . . . Conformably to the Book of Mormon, the Book of Doctrine and Covenants expressly declared, "that we believe that one man should have but one wife, and one woman but one husband."

And when on the witness stand, and under oath, President Wilford Woodruff, of Utah, confessed that the only law of marriage in existence in the church from its organization to Joseph Smith's death, was that of monogamy. But, General, what were the other obnoxious doctrines which caused the expulsion of the saints from Ohio and Missouri? Was it not their advocacy of primitive Christianity that caused them to be obnoxious? Please note the following from the pen of Professor Turner of the Illinois College, who though a bitter enemy of the Latter Day Saints, realized the injustice to which they were subjected:—

Who began the quarrel? Was it the Mormons? Is it not notorious, on the contrary, that they were hunted like wild beasts, from county to county, before they made any desperate resistance? Did they ever, as a body, refuse obedience to the laws when called upon to do so, until driven to desperation by repeated threats and assaults from the mob? Did the State ever make one decent effort to defend them as fellow citizens in their rights, or to redress their wrongs? Let the conduct of its governors, attorneys, and the fate of their final petitions answer. Have any who plundered and openly massacred the Mormons ever been brought to the penitentiary due to their crimes? Let the boasting murderers of begging and helpless infancy answer. Has the State ever remunerated even those known to be innocent for the loss of either their property or their arms? Did either the pulpit or the press throughout the State raise a note of remonstrance or alarm? Let the clergymen who abetted, and the editors who encouraged the mob answer.

Will the editor of the Christian Herald, and General Eaton, its hired contributor to assault the "Mormons," tell us what the great offense was by which they justify the inhuman persecution of famishing women and helpless children? Though their crime were treason and their offenses many, no lover of equal rights can justify the acts of their oppressors. As now, so it was then, the preachers and church papers proclaimed and published nefarious falsehoods and urged the people to action to prevent the growth of the church. But sound your clarion note and do all you can, Messrs. Talmage and Eaton, thanks to the growth of American civilization, the day of physical persecution for one's religion is largely past, and the hireling clergy must resort to other means to save their craft.

SPIRITUAL GIFTS.

In the Christian Herald for December 23, the General states:—

Dr. D. J. McMillan, Corresponding Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, has published a pamphlet entitled, "Mormon Articles of Faith explained." All his statements are verified by quotations from approved Mormon authorities. It would be well if a copy were in the hands of every American citizen. Here is clearly shown their belief in the gift of tongues, prophecy, revelations, healing, and so forth.

Certainly we believe in these things, and why not? According to the General, a belief in such things now is enough to disgust the American people. But did not Christ believe in and practice such things? Did they not continue in the church as long as we have any record of it? Christ sent his apostles into all the world to "preach the gospel to every creature," with the promise that

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.—Mark 16: 16-18.

Also Paul says that these gifts remained and were to continue in the church perpetually. But, things have changed since Paul's day, and now the mere fact that people believe these things is evidence of their heterodoxy (?) in the General's eyes.

Dr. McMillan aptly calls attention to the fact that in spite of their gift of tongues they had to learn like other people the languages they attempted to use, whether French, German, or Indian.

Suppose they did? This argues nothing, inasmuch as the gift of tongues is no more perpetually exercised than that of prophecy or healing. It is not a giving of the language to the recipient; but is a special power which at times, according to the pleasure of God and not the individual, enables one to speak in an (to them) unknown language. If the tongue entire were given them, then it could not be denominated the "gift of unknown tongues;" but rather it would be the gift of known tongues. It was so in Bible times. Those blessed with this gift on Pentecost did not retain all the dialects in which they spake, but when the Spirit left them, they could only talk in their own tongue. Your objection is ill taken, General.

PROFANE PROPHETS.

There is abundant evidence of the irreverence, profanity, and deceit of their earlier prophets. Once set up such a class of men over their fellows and let it become a fixed belief among their followers that they are the vicegerents of the Almighty on the earth, and speak and act the Divine will, and what may not be expected in the way of doctrine and action? What do they care for the Godhead or manhood that is not subservient to their purposes? Why should they inquire what is right, or what ought to be, or what is for the welfare of others? Their unholy selfishness may be expected to direct.

We leave a defense of the leaders in Utah to themselves; but so far as the original church and Reorganization is concerned, we demand the evidence of "irreverence, profanity, and deceit" on the part of any of the leading authorized representatives of the church. This church has had but two presidents or presiding Prophets, and we are willing that the world shall know the "all" in their private and public dealings with their fellow men. The General takes occasion to include Joseph Smith in his assault; but in producing proof he brings nothing against Joseph Smith, contenting himself with quoting the unique sayings of Brigham Young, Hyde, and Kimball, all delivered after they had apostatized.

VICEGERENT.

What other claim would you have them make? If a man is a minister for God at all, is he not his vicegerent? Is it a sin to claim to be empowered by the Almighty? Why should we expect greater deception in the way of doctrine and action now than in Bible times? God seemingly was willing to trust men then, even though some of them did turn out polygamists and blasphemers. We have a safeguard now that they did not possess then; that is, the Scriptures. God is consistent and men cannot lead us far astray if we insist that they adhere to the truths which God has already given.

Our prophets have cared so much for the Godhead that they have taken him at his word, ever insisting that in all matters relating to his work on earth he has the unqualified right to direct and that it is man's bounden duty to obey, if we expect his favor; that he is unchangeable, hence the formula introduced in one age for the spiritual reclamation of man is equally applicable in every age! that no law of God can be annulled, but must ever remain until it shall have accomplished the end had in view in its institution.

While this serial was running in the Christian Herald I sent the following communication to General Eaton:—

GENERAL JOHN EATON,
Washington, D. C.,

Dear Sir:—I have given the first installment of your "serial," "The Mormons of To-day," in issue of December 2 of Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times, a careful perusal. Permit me to state that I credit you with honesty and candor, and think that much you may say concerning the Mormons in Utah may be true; but are you not aware that there are two factions of people who are dubbed Mormons to-day, and that the smaller body known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, have no connection with those in Utah? that its members are a law-abiding people? that the membership are not any more amenable to the priesthood than the members of any Protestant church are to their pastors? that they eschew polygamy and its kindred evils which have been grafted on the original tenets which obtained in the church from 1830 to 1844 like an obnoxious wen? Do you know that the Reorganized Church, through its representatives, challenge any being, living or dead, angel or demon, to show wherein they "destroy the teachings of the Bible" by accepting the Book of Mormon? They maintain that the testimony and the doctrines of the two volumes are identical concerning God and his dealings with the children of men. You say that the Latter Day Saints affirm their belief in "our" Bible, and they proceed at once to reject its teachings; and then enumerate as an evidence of rejection that they claim that their leaders receive revelations, and have visions and dreams. Will you please cite me to chapter and verse where a belief in the above is branded as heretical? Taking the visions, dreams, and revelations out of the Bible, what have you of spiritual worth left? Was not the Mosaic economy grounded in revelations, visions, and dreams? Is it not the impregnable support underlying Christ's divinity? Are we not indebted to revelation for all the truths contained in Scripture? If God is unchangeable, and no respecter of persons, wherein consists the heresy of one who believes that God does bless men now as formerly? Utah Mormonism is not the result of a belief in divine revelation, dreams, or visions, but a blind fanatical surrendering of the individual to the usurper and tyrant.

That God is consistent is a self-evident truth; and had the people of Utah refused to receive anything as divine which was in conflict with previous revelations of the Divine Mind, they would not have gone far astray. They permitted Brigham Young to impose upon them, and to introduce tenets and dogmas in direct conflict with the word of God. The "Pearl of Great Price" and "Sayings of Joseph Smith" are not taken as guides in faith and doctrine by the Reorganized Church. Joseph Smith was but a man, and when he spoke in accord with God's truth, his sayings are accepted in the same sense as any other minister of Christ. That "Mormonism" in Utah is organized to bring all of its affairs into the control of the priesthood, we cheerfully admit; but it was not so prior to Joseph Smith's death. The franchise of the soul was as untrammelled as when given as the gift of God. "Common consent" being the watchword in all matters dealing with the concerns of the church, matters of state were dismissed as beyond the jurisdiction of ecclesiasts.

As to the motive of Young and his immediate confederates, I have naught to say; but if in your enumeration of the doctrines which Joseph Smith introduced, claiming divine origin, you can show one which is in conflict with true Christianity, then I pledge you the support of thirty-five thousand so-called "Mormons," who will cheerfully discard it.

You say:—

"Give this priesthood the power of receiving current revelations from the Almighty, which they claim, and the unquestionable obedience from their followers which they demand, and what is there to hinder the execution of their decrees however depraved.

Do you really believe that the "right to receive current revelations from the Almighty" will seriously injure anyone? Can man give this right? Dare you deny man this right? Is it not the probability that men may receive revelations from their own darkened soul, or from that beguiling and subtle Edenic serpent,—the thing which we should fear? Give men the right to receive revelations from God, and all men the privilege of testing that revelation by previously communicated truth, with an opportunity of receiving divine confirmation, and wherein could men be materially injured? This was original "Mormonism." The interpretation that you place upon it was an afterthought in the machinations of Brigham Young and his confederates. All Bible believers can readily see that Brigham Young was a usurper and false prophet, because he was in conflict with God's truth as well as himself. . . .

To whom are you indebted for the information that Joseph Smith was an "ignorant, idle youth; given to chicken-thieving?" To fair-minded honorable men and women? No! A thousand times no. I have been acquainted with some of the people you call "Mormons" for several years; have lived in Kirtland, Ohio; have visited in Missouri and Illinois where they resided, and have taken pains to seek out men who knew Joseph Smith and the Smith family and yet did not fall in with his spiritual claims, and I am confirmed that the farther away you get from where the Smith family lived the worse you will hear concerning them. Those who knew him best, and numbers who believed that his claim to divine recognition was a myth, stoutly deny as defamatory the slanderous attacks on the personality of the man.

I thank you cheerfully for your fairness in stating that it was not because of polygamy that Smith and his people were driven from Ohio and Missouri; but you add:—

"But with the manifestation of these two doctrines (polygamy and union of church and State) so offensive to American ideas, the other beliefs and characteristics of Mormons were so obnoxious to surrounding communities in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, that the self-styled saints were not permitted to carry out their purposes without conflict."

Will you please tell me what were the other "beliefs and characteristics" that were so obnoxious? And will you please state which were in harmony with the Bible, the self-styled saints, or the surrounding communities? And were these obnoxious teachings of such a character that you could justify professed Christian preachers and members of other flocks raising as a howling mob, and like devouring demons taking Joseph Smith, who in a helpless position was watching by the bedside of his sick children, in the still hours of the night, and subjecting him to a coat of tar and feathers? Which, think you, is the most revolting to true Americans—"Joe Smith and his doctrines," or his would-be Christian enemies, who during the winter blasts tore Smith from his family and friends, incarcerated him in a dungeon, and boasted of having fed him on the flesh of his more unfortunate brethren—who also ravished women, and subjected inoffensive maternity and suckling childhood to the ravages of a winter storm on a bleak and barren prairie? Whatever there may have been of error in the faith of this man, can you as a noted man, as a man of fairness and candor, pass in silence this crimson blot on the banner of American freedom without denouncing it; or, do you think the aggravation warranted the attempted remedy?

Joseph Smith voluntarily surrendered and was killed, not when escaping, but when incarcerated in Carthage jail, supposed under the surveillance of a militia placed there by the great (?) Governor Ford of Illinois, who had pledged his honor and the integrity of the State of Illinois that if Smith would surrender that he would be protected. This Smith did, but this great (?) Governor broke his troth, withdrew the militia, and left Smith to the mercy of bloodthirsty fiends,

He had been arrested near forty times at the instigation of religious persecutors; but each time the court records note an acquittal; and Governor Ford well knew, so also the Christianized (?) mob knew, that if justice was meted out, Joseph Smith would be a free man; so they took the law into their own hands, and in defiance of that clause of the Constitution which vouchsafes protection and justice to every man within its jurisdiction, whether lawabiding or not, committed one of the most atrocious infractions on human liberty in modern times. Joseph Smith's name has been defamed, and his memory made ignoble, and the fair (?) penmen who have from time to time revived Mormon annals, have lost not an opportunity in blackening the name and memory of the dead, yet have no word of censure for the ignoble cowards who in defiance of law and order robbed him of his American birthright. Is this just? Is it right?

Permit me to ask you,—and by the way I would not have written you did I not have confidence in your honor and honesty,—permit me to kindly ask that in the continued serial you will unfurl the full page of Mormon history, and permit the present generation to know the "all." If as one has said, "Mormonism is an ulcer on the fair breast of the nation," cannot those who feel it a duty to remedy it afford to be just? "As ye would that men should do unto you, do you even so unto them." Will you please answer this at an early date? Will you in your future articles clearly outline the difference between the Utah people and the Reorganized Church? If you do this, I pledge you in honor I will assist you in every possible way.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

This letter was passed by in silence; but the General received it, for it called forth the following, in his communication to the Christian Herald:—

The writer may say for himself that he has had exceptional opportunity to understand Mormonism, its origin, progress, and present condition; and from most mature consideration, believes it without foundation or a revelation, false in doctrine as a religion, and injurious in practice to our patriotism and piety. Yet his purpose and effort in these articles were in accord with the well-known character of the Christian Herald, only to bring out the truths and rely on its effect; not a word was put down in unkindness to anyone. He believes in the honesty of the great body of Mormons, and would accord to every reader the same freedom of religious belief as he enjoys himself, the same as is guaranteed to every citizen by the American Constitution. Mormonism must stand or fall on its merits. Those who believe in it seek by greater and greater assertion to confirm themselves; those who do not believe in it find every increasing reason for rejecting it. This latter the writer believes will be the result in every case where the question is approached intelligently and candidly.

Again:—

The statements of the doctrines of Mormonism in the previous articles, sustained as they were by accurate quotations from its authoritative expounders, which the writer deemed the most serious of the charges made by the articles, are confirmed by the most credible witnesses. Among the illustrations of the fact that some found in the later articles what they charged the writer with omitting, is the truth that the "Josephites" do not practice polygamy, which come out clearly in its place. The articles do not take up the divisions already arising among the followers of Joseph Smith. They make much of the divisions among professed Christians; they use these facts to prove that the time has come for the Latter Day Saints to possess the earth. I did not bring out the bitterness that has been manifested between the "Josephites" and the "Brighamites," so-called; nor did I mention the failure of all recent efforts to bring them together, nor did I dwell upon the other divisions; and I may now add, that the recent efforts to harmonize the "Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints" and the "Hedrickites" have also failed. I have before me the doctrines of the Brighamites, as declared by Joseph Smith in the thirteen articles, recently reaffirmed by Wilford Woodruff, and as printed on the back of the personal card used by the Brighamite missionaries; and I have also a copy of the articles of faith of Josephites, as approved by their Secretary, Elder H. A. Stebbins, of the headquarters, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa. The Josephites declare specifically that they believe "in marriage as ordained of God," but that the doctrine of plural marriage is heresy; and they affirm that freedom of worship "does not require a violation of the constitutional law of the land." As to the doctrine of polygamy, fidelity to history makes it necessary to say that Brigham Young declared that the doctrine was revealed to Joseph Smith years before it was made public; and farther, it should be stated that the belief prevailed among those outside of Mormon circles that celestial marriage, so-called, was practiced in the days of Joseph Smith; indeed, the general public was profoundly convinced of the practice of immorality among the Mormon leaders before they left Nauvoo.

We thank the General for his reference to our anti-polygamous views. As to the extent of the General's investigation of Mormonism we cannot say; but as to the character of investigation we wish to be informed. To whom did you go, General, to get your information as to its origin? Did you act as an impartial judge and examine both sides? Did you impale on the witness stand only those known to be his enemies? Have you given notice of your examination to those who desired to appear in defense and permitted them to present their plea? If not, your statement must be unreliable and biased, and must be repudiated by a candid public.

As to the present conditions of Mormonism, you have acted unfairly in that you in your earlier articles sought to fasten the crimes of Utah on Joseph Smith, and then adroitly classed all Latter Day Saints as one; and it was not till the importuning became so strong and constant that you were forced to make an explanation that you even mentioned the "Reorganization." As an intelligent man you know that Joseph Smith has been exonerated from any complicity in polygamy in the courts of our land, and it became you as an unprejudiced man to have so stated to the public. I challenge you to find a word, a sentence, or a line in the official utterance of the church and the accepted works of the church which "is injurious in practice to our patriotism and piety."

If "the well-known character of the Christian Herald" is "only to bring out the truths and rely on its effects," why did the editor, Dr. Talmage, treat my communications with silent contempt, not even returning the postage stamps I sent him for reply? Why when I plead for recognition in the columns of his paper did he refuse? Why when I told him that in case he refused to publish my articles that I would furnish documentary proof to support our claims and rely on the candor and Christian gentlemanliness of either General Eaton or himself to correctly represent us, did he still preserve a stoical silence? No; the Christian Herald is biased and prejudiced, as its editor has shown himself in more cases than one. This is not the first time that Dr. Talmage has taken occasion to assail "Mormonism" and permit no opportunity for redress. We do not sit in judgment on his acts, yet even though the court of public sentiment may decide against us, we now give notice of an appeal to the supreme court of the Universe, pledging ourselves now to willingly abide by the decision rendered.

The General is inconsistent. In one article he is not pleased to know that under its (the Government's) protecting care, the most absurd notions are set up as religions, and make their appeal under our Constitution for the same rights and courtesies as are accorded to Christianity.

Then to be pleased, he would have it the opposite, and now he says:—

He believes in the honesty of the great body of Mormons, and would accord to every reader the same freedom of religious belief as he enjoys himself,—the same as is guaranteed to every citizen by the American Constitution.

It will be remembered that his first statement was written before we wrote him, the other afterwards,—and as the latter contains almost the identical sentiment found in our communication, we feel that some good has been accomplished; but how can the General harmonize his statements? If he has changed his mind, he should openly acknowledge it.

The General is again inconsistent when he states that he believes “in the honesty of the great body of Mormons,” and then believes that all who approach the question “intelligently and candidly” will reject it. In that he commits himself, in recognizing the intellectual activity of the Latter Day Saints, he thus presents the spectacle of believing in the honesty of the Mormons, but concludes that every honest man will reject it. Consistency? If the statements in your articles are “confirmed by the most credible witnesses,” why did you not confirm your assertions by introducing your witnesses? Most men are not satisfied in asserting when they have the proof at hand. No; you did not mention the “divisions” of what is called “Mormonism,” but adroitly confounded them, and this is why we objected. There have been no recent efforts to bring the “Brighamites” and “Josephites” together save along gospel lines. We have ever contended that the followers of Brigham Young are apostates, and that under no circumstance can we recognize their organization; but that when we have to do with them it will be as individuals, and they will have to come in through the door, the same as all others. There was no official effort made to harmonize the “Hedrickites” and the “Josephites.” The meeting you refer to was at the request of the Hedrickites to learn our true position. Had you been as frank in your first articles, you would have exempted the Josephites when you stated that Mormonism was a menace to our free institutions, as you knew that they affirmed that “freedom of worship does not require a violation of the constitutional law of the land.”

You first charged that polygamy was a part of Mormonism proper, and now you assert that fidelity to history makes it necessary to say that Brigham Young declared that the doctrine was revealed to Joseph Smith years before it was made public.

And is it upon the statement of this usurper, and guilt-stained character, who to free himself sought to criminate one then dead, that you depend for proof? Scores of honorable people have testified to the opposite. It is peculiar, General, but why is it that in your crusade against Latter Day Saints you either take the testimony of enemies, or appeal to men guilty of crime, to substantiate your claims, and refuse even to consider the testimony of men and women whose characters are unquestionable? Yes, General, “the belief obtained” that Christ was a “glutton and a wine-bibber;” but did that invalidate his claims? You are driven to desperate conditions when, in order to make any case at all against Joseph Smith, you must state things that somebody believed were taking place. Shame!

WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

In the February 3 issue, the General remarks:—

Anyone following the facts and considerations in these letters has asked, “What is the remedy?” Is this fatal spiritual poison to have free, unrestricted, and supreme sway in Utah, and thence to go forth to poison all parts of our land, corrupting patriotism and destroying Christian life? What has been done to set the people free must be strengthened in every part; the press must use its constitutional freedom and be outspoken; the personal rights of the people must be freely and universally discussed, that they may understand clearly when any deception or tyranny is attempted. . . . Our entire country must wake up, and wherever Mormonism is preached, Mormon fanaticism encouraged, the truth must be presented and Mormon errors exposed, and people saved from its delusions.

General Eaton; in contemplation of this conflict, we shout a loud Amen. Let the American people “awake to Mormonism.” Let truth’s unerring searchlight be turned on and penetrate its inward parts. Let the press be outspoken in presenting truth, and not peddle lies and human conjurings with Satanic promptings. Yes, General, we welcome such a conflict as you outline; but it will never be. At least not while such men as Dr. Talmage and General Eaton manipulate affairs. Justice demands that the meanest wretch on earth shall be heard ere sentence is passed; but the Christian Herald announces that “Mormonism” is to be tried for three months and appoints General Eaton as judge of the court. Repeated charges are made against the defendant, and as the glaring misrepresentations grow worse and worse, and as there is no attorney, nor a single friend to plead its cause, “Mormonism” lifts its chained hand as high as it can, and says, “Please, Mr. Judge,” and Dr. Talmage, the sponsor of the court, turns his heavenly eyes, and with countenance divine, says, “You keep still, this is a Christian court; we don’t need to hear from you; we don’t try people that way.”

Well, Dr. Talmage and General Eaton, you pretend to believe in that good Book which says, “For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again;” and inasmuch as you have only permitted witnesses against us to appear, we have given notice that we shall expect to be heard in the court of appeals; and herewith file our motion for a new trial, with an impartial judge.

And now note this wail:—

People of wealth must see that just so far as Mormonism is established and propagated, it imperils all that they hold dear, and threatens attack on every dollar of their property. They must be willing to give of their means for the support and efficiency of all measures to resist its doctrines.

How Christlike! how religious! Where, oh where shall I look for a religious parallel? Ah, I have it! At one time, after Jesus had performed a wonderful miracle, the chief priests (those who made their money by misleading the people) and the Pharisees (they who professed one thing and practiced another) met in council and said, “What do we? for this man doeth many miracles. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him.” What did they do? They commenced a crusade and demanded that the people support them. Then think of the crusade against Paul, as recorded in Acts 13 and 14, where the rulers, realizing that their craft was in danger, stirred up the people to oppose Paul and Barnabas.

I have shown a parallel; let me now produce a counterpart:—

For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for

Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen; whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth. Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands; so that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at naught; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.—Acts 19: 24-27.

Here comes General Eaton with the same kind of a plea, and tells the worshippers of gold and silver, You must give us of your substance to fight these Mormons, for if they get a foothold they will take away your wealth and our craft will be gone!

No philanthropist, no great leader, no true man of God has ever been forced to petition the rich men to come to his rescue, and in the petition appealing to their selfishness in order to vanquish the enemy; no, not one, save General John Eaton!

In issue of January 20, the General says:—

It should be remembered that the so-called "Josephites" have never accepted polygamy.

Thanks for this late acknowledgment.

A MORMON COLLEGE.

In issue of January 6, he states:—

A recent telegram states that Mormons in Iowa are planning to erect a college.

The Reorganized Church have erected a college, and it does credit as an educational institution. Even now though but recently erected, there are a number of patrons who do not believe the Latter Day Saint religion, yet recognize the moral influence of the people. The college is non-sectarian in every respect, and while located in Lamoni, whose population is largely Latter Day Saints religiously, yet it has a moral atmosphere not excelled in any college town in the United States.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATIONS.

The General makes much ado because "a Mormon elder is stated to have applied for membership in the ministers' meeting in his city."

Why yes, General, and some of us have been admitted, long, long ago. People out here, where the Latter Day Saints are numerous, are not so afraid of them, and they are treated like other people. Come West, visit our headquarters, get acquainted with our leading men, and I assure you if you will throw away your prejudice, you will regret having recorded so many mistakes; but as repentance implies restitution, we will never concede your conversion until you shall have made a retraction as general as your perversion of facts have been. Having no malice aforethought, and desiring not in any way to injure your usefulness for good, but with regret that you are so intrenched in your citadel of prejudice that you cannot or will not see the facts, I write, praying that God may judge between you and me; and, though justice may not be granted both in time, that we each may be permitted to appear before that "great white throne," and present our claims with no Dr. Talmage to patronize one or to hedge in the other.

May God judge between us.

Sincerely yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Conference Minutes.

MANCHESTER.

Manchester, England, district conference held at Leeds, July 3, 4. Elder J. Dewsnap, Sr., district president presiding; J. Baty secretary. Deacon Elijah Abbott appointed deacon of the conference. The district leader of singing, Bro. John Foden, being absent, Elder W. Roberts was requested to conduct same during conference. Committee on burial service reported, and asked further time, which was granted. License of Elder W. Spargo of Wigan was presented for indorsement, with an explanation why it was not presented to April Conference. License ordered indorsed. Elder W. J. Rushton having returned from America, but not having received his letter of removal, was by vote accorded the privileges of conference. The committee (Elders court) re-Leeds branch reported not having finished their labors, but wished to inform conference that so far as their investigation had gone they had found no adequate reason why the suspension of the licenses of Elders W. H. Seekins, Tom Roberts, Priest W. Rudd, and teacher Henry Warren should be any further continued. The committee presented this as an ad-interim report. Report received. Resolved that we consider the question of indorsement of licenses of brethren named, and that they be considered separately. Bro. Seekins' case was taken first, and after hearing from the brother it was resolved that his license be indorsed. The cases of Brn. Tom Roberts, William Rudd, and H. Warren were considered, and licenses indorsed. The president expressed his pleasure that the conference had seen its way to restore to those brethren their licenses, and exhorted the brethren to faithfulness in the discharge of their duties; he then handed them their licenses duly indorsed. Resolutions were then passed sustaining the authorities of the church, general, mission, district, and branch. The place for holding the October conference was left to be arranged by district president. Sacrament meeting at 10:30 a. m. in charge of Elder Joseph Dewsnap, Sen. Testimony meeting at 2:30 p. m. in charge of Elder J. Dewsnap, Jr. After opening services in the evening the time was occupied by brief addresses from Elders Thomas Taylor, Thomas Mills, George Baty, J. Baty. The remarks of the brethren were pithy and profitable, and much appreciated by all present. The Spirit of peace seemed to pervade the whole conference sessions, dispelling for the time being (and we hope forever) the clouds of misunderstanding and estrangement which have been disturbing the harmony of the work of the Lord in Leeds branch for some time past. Visiting brethren and sisters carry with them a very "God-bless-you" kind of feeling, when they remember the homelike way in which they were treated by their brethren and sisters while at conference.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Convention met at Wilber, June 18 and 19. Meeting called to order by M. J. Schafer, superintendent; E. D. Briggs secretary. The subject of teachers' meetings occupied the evening hour. Saturday, three sessions were held. District officers and delegates to Annual Convention reported. Four schools reported an average attendance of 121, divided into 18 classes. There is a better interest taken in the Sunday school work in the district, yet the workers are few for so large a district. A good, profitable time was had. Convention adjourned to meet with Prairie Flower school, Palmyra.

Miscellaneous Department.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of Western Maine; Greeting:— We wish to call attention to the financial condition of the district. We want to establish the district upon a self-supporting basis, and conduct financial matters upon business principles. Our monthly expenses are forty-five dollars. We have six branches. If each branch will raise seven dollars and fifty cents per month, we can meet our bills as they come due. We have over two hundred and fifty saints in the district. Let each one pay eighteen cents monthly and we will have enough and to spare. Branch presidents will receive the tithing from their branches, placing the name and amount on blanks provided him for the purpose. He will return these to me the last of the month, so I can meet the orders the first of the month following. Five cents each week from each member is all we want. As we meet each Sabbath and tell of our love for "this great latter-day work," let us prove that we do love it, at least five cents worth, by paying a nickel as tithing. It is the "Lord's work" and he will carry it on, but he must have coloborers; and this feature of the work he has given to his saints. He tells us if we are faithful in this, bringing all our tithes into the "storehouse," he will pour us out a blessing, both temporal and spiritual in its nature.

Those whose increase, each year, is more than twenty-one dollars and sixty cents, must not think that the "twenty cents a month" method clears them. The effectual teaching of Bro. Pert, in the past, renders it unnecessary for me to enter upon the teaching of the law of tithing in this. We simply urge the saints to do the Master's will, being confident that they know what it is. (Luke 12:47). We are told, "It is a day of warning and not of many words." We must look the situation squarely in the face and arise to the emergency. Our district, for the past few years, has been a financial burden upon the church. We say, "Times have been hard." Should that affect the children of God? He says, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, . . . and prove me now herewith. . . . I will open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing." Has God changed? Does this financial depression reach heaven? Oh no! The trouble is we are not proving God now. The amount necessary to bring the blessing is not specified. Be it much or little, if it is all, God recognizes it, bestows his blessing upon it; and, as with the loaves and fishes, the multitude is fed.

On every hand through the State comes the call for preaching. Four men could not fill all demands. What will happen unless something is done? Simply this: Our missionary force will be decreased to the number we will support. Are we ready for a decrease? God helping us, No. Our confidence in Maine resources is unlimited. All we need is to know that there is an emergency, and we are equal to it. Saints, the emergency is here. Let us meet it. When we sing, "Send the sound the earth around," let us remember that it takes "postage" to send anything. God works by law and he has ordained means whereby the gospel will be sent upon its mission to the world. If we fail to do our part faithfully, he will raise up those who will. Our district is in debt to the amount of two hundred and seventy odd dollars. Now is a good time for those of means in the district to pay up their long standing account with the Lord. Saints, it is needed. God will provide; but now he is patiently waiting for us to redeem the opportunity of proving our fitness for celestial glory. May God help us to be diligent that "no man take our crown." Post office address, Canton Point, Maine.

Yours in Christ,

W. W. BLANCHARD, B. A.

To the Saints of the Little Sioux District.—We would urge you to send in your tithes and offerings. Do not wait or delay. Send small amounts, if you cannot send large ones. The district and the church need your aid. God asks it. Will you comply? We were appointed to the office of Bishop's agent. At that time (February 19) the district was over $500 dollars behind. We are still largely in arrears,—it ought not to be. Our district numbers over 1,200 members. We have only eighty-three enrolled on our Bishop's agent's book. Are you among them? We used to think the proportion of the five wise and five foolish virgins gave too many saints over to the drowsy, shut out ones; but eighty-three out of 1,200—or about one to fifteen—is a proportion out of all proportion for the children of the kingdom. Times are hard, but do your best. Let God share with others, as you pay your debts. How about a new buggy, wheel, or some such thing, while the Lord waits, the work languishes, the poor and missionary families look hungry?

We shall endeavor to reach you all as fast as possible in presenting the law, but in the meantime the following will act as subagents, simply to accommodate you while you wait, and to save expense on small amounts. They will report to me and give you receipts sent by us; or you can, if you choose, send direct to us: D. R. Chambers, Missouri Valley; S. B. Kibler, Woodbine; Lillie A. Williams, Logan; Joseph Seddon, Persia; William Stuart, Mondamin; George M. Scott, Little Sioux; Sarah J. Hoffman, Moorhead; F. E. Cohrt, Smithland. We hope these will not only take notice but let your branches know. Let us make this a year of benefit to ourselves and the church, an honor to God and the cause we love. In bonds,

A. M. FYRANDO,

Bishop's Agent.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA.

THE GENERAL REUNION.

Prepare for the General Reunion of the church which convenes at Woodbine, Iowa, September 3-13.

The committee has procured the services of Elders Joseph Smith, Alexander Smith, and E. L. Kelley, of Lamoni; Fred A. Smith, of Omaha, and T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, for the occasion, and many other speakers of similar talent will be in attendance.

Music under the charge of S. B. Kibler and James Pearsall will be furnished by the Woodbine choir, assisted by choirs of neighboring branches, and such orchestra as can be used to advantage.

Board and lodging will be furnished in private families at $2.50 to $3.00 per week, and board at boarding hall on grounds, at $3.00, with fifty cents per week additional for lodging. Those desiring board or board and lodging at the boarding hall will confer a favor by applying in advance to L. D. Butler, Woodbine, Iowa. Mr. Butler is the same party who had charge of the boarding hall last year, and you will be assured of the same good treatment that you received then. Those desiring board in private families apply to F. C. Oviatt, Woodbine, Iowa, chairman of the reception committee.

Hay, grain, and fuel will be furnished at minimum prices.

One and one third fare has been secured for all those coming by rail. The city council having generously conducted the water from the city water works, by means of underground pipes to the reunion grounds, has rendered the supply of fresh, cold water inexhaustible, and for both man and beast its convenience is most satisfactory.

Woodbine being located on the main line of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, between Chicago and Omaha, makes the place of easy access.

Wall tents can be rented 10 x 12, $2; 12 x 14, $2.50; 14 x 16, $3, with twenty-five cents added for setting tent up. Those wanting tents apply in advance to S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, Iowa.

To those in attendance at the general reunion last year, we offer no words of praise relating to the accommodations necessary to make a meeting of this kind pleasant and profitable. That all our accommodations were all that we advertised a year ago was vouched for in the practically unanimous expression that fixed the reunion at Woodbine again. The grounds, situated less than one fourth of a mile from the depot and business part of the city, are attractive and inviting. They are ample to accommodate all, and are covered with towering timber which furnishes an abundance of shade. For easy access, convenience in its various features and attractive surroundings, the Woodbine reunion grounds remain unsurpassed.

Special notice! In order to get the benefit of reduced railroad rates, we must have one hundred tickets purchased by the third day of the meeting, Sunday not included. Any ticket purchased between Tuesday, August 31, and Monday, September 6 inclusive, will be honored in making up the one hundred certificates, and no others. If you intend coming to the reunion by rail, purchase your ticket between the above dates.

NORTH MISSOURI REUNION.

Permit me, dear Herald, to make a few statements regarding our coming reunion. The committee has worked hard to complete every arrangement within their power to make the meeting a great success. They have been treated courteously by those in and out of the church.

Our meeting begins September 3, 1897. On the 4th the quarterly conference will convene. The 10:55 a. m. train, eastbound, and the 5:54 train, westbound, will stop at the grounds. Tents, $1.75 and $2.00 for the meeting. Wood and straw free. Horse feed at market price. Pasture for horses (good), 3½ cents per day per head. Plenty good water for family use, "much water" for baptismal purposes near by.

Ample police protection, good music, vocal and instrumental. The organ, the clarinet, and the violins will be made to praise the Lord. An abundance of "good elders" will be in attendance, and plenty of the rich products of "poor old Missouri's" productive soil. Seven meals for one dollar. A fare and a third rate has been obtained from points within a reasonable radius of the grounds.

Come in a prayerful spirit that great good may come to Zion's cause. Any inquiries will be gladly answered by the writer or by C. P. Paul, secretary, at Clarksdale, Missouri.

J. M. TERRY, Chairman Com.
St. JOSEPH, Missouri, August 12, 1897.

OKLAHOMA REUNION.

We expect a profitable time at our reunion near Mathewson, to be held from September 3-13. All the saints in Oklahoma are kindly urged to come, and bring with them the spirit of the work, that we may all be strengthened and the work more fully established. Come prepared to remain from beginning to end. Come with provisions for camping; bring everything needful for your comfort and to forward the interest of the work in Oklahoma. Straw for beds and for stock will be furnished free. Pasture and grass for stock will be furnished at low rates,—rates to correspond with the times.

Saints, let the toils of life rest awhile; come to the reunion and help roll forward the restored gospel. Come with the spirit of unity, love, forgiveness, charity, and all other feelings that will bless the saints of God.

R. M. MALONEY.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in Arkansas; Greeting:—I very much regret that I have been forced to remain absent from you up to this late date, but circumstances over which I had no control have been the hindering cause. I hope to be able to take up my mission work by the first of September, and I desire the hearty coöperation of you all. Let us each do our whole duty, not forgetting to pay our tithing, so that we may have a share in the promised blessing (see Mal. 3: 10-12), that the poor in the church may have their daily bread and that the missionaries may not have to leave their mission fields to labor for the bread that perishes, while so many calls are coming from benighted parts of the world for help to spread the glad tidings of the restoration and the near approach of the Son of Man.

I will begin my mission work by holding a meeting with the Martin Creek branch, beginning on Saturday night, August 28, and will hold over Sunday. I desire to hear from all who desire me to visit them, and in writing please mention the prospects for mission work in your community, so that no time may be lost in going to places where it is impossible to get a hearing.

May peace and prosperity attend you, and the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit guide all Israel, is the prayer of your brother in the faith,

JOSEPH WARD.

POMONA, Missouri, August 9, 1897.

NOTICES.

Owing to an oversight by our late president, A. N. Bishop, the minutes of the special assembly of the Eastern district, South Wales, held at Cardiff, December 20, 1896, were not read at the conference held at Porth, April 24 and 25, 1897. Therefore the above-named minutes will be brought before the conference to be held at Lydney, October 29 and 30 and November 1, 1897.

The Pittsburg district conference will be held at Wheeling on Saturday and Sunday, September 18 and 19. Send both district and Sunday school reports to E. B. Hull, district and Sunday school secretary, 2716 Darien Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

All those coming to the Sunday school convention and conference of Eastern Iowa district to be held September 3 and 4 will be met at Onslow, Friday morning. Both the GROWTH OF RELIGIOUS TOLERANCE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Two changes have taken place in the life of the church in this country during the present century, which have brought about a remarkable increase of religious tolerance: (1) the public interest has been transferred from theological to ethical problems, and (2) we have all grown more catholic, more large-minded, and distinguish between truths and the truth. Such is the view held by Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, who writes in The Forum (August). He begins his article with the following reference to conditions of the last century and the early part of this century:—

"In the last century a stone-mason belonging to the Presbyterian Church of Scotland was tried and, I believe, excommunicated for helping to build an Episcopal church. The charge against him was based upon precepts in the Old Testament prohibiting the erection of altars to pagan deities in the high places of Israel. It is not more than a hundred years since, in this country, Alexander Campbell, the founder of the denomination popularly called, from his name, 'Campbellites,' having been caught in a furious storm in Pennsylvania, was refused shelter by a devout Presbyterian woman because he was a Baptist. Her conscience compelled her to resist the hospitable inclinations of her womanly heart; for did not St. John say, 'If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God-speed?' A prominent Methodist clergyman of this country told me recently an analogous experience occurring only thirty-nine years ago. He was asked by the deacon of a Congregational church to deliver an address in the church on a Sunday afternoon—not at the hour of regular service—on the subject of temperance. The minister objected because the young man was an Arminian. 'I agree with him on the subject of temperance,' said he, 'and if the meeting is held in the hall I shall go to hear him; but if we can invite an Arminian to speak in our pulpit on temperance on Sunday afternoon, what is to prevent our inviting him to preach in our pulpit on Sunday morning? And if he should preach his Arminianism, what would become of the doctrines of our holy religion?' The lecture was delivered in the town-hall instead of in the church; and the Calvinistic minister went to the town-hall to hear what he would not allow uttered in his pulpit. It is certain that no one of these incidents could occur in this year of grace 1897; it is difficult for us to understand how they could have occurred fifty or a hundred years ago."

The transfer of public interest to ethical instead of theological problems, Dr. Abbott thinks, was due in large part to the Unitarian revolt against the measurement of life and character by theological standards. While he does not think the Unitarian system of theology will as a system survive, its influence has become manifest in all our churches. Though denominationalism has in one aspect increased since the beginning of the century, organizing its separate missionary and publication societies and multiplying denominational machinery, yet the tendency has been very marked to make the work done by these organizations less secular.

Another reason for the transfer of public interest is to be found in political and social developments, the temperance movement, the anti-slavery agitation, and, since the Civil War, the questions concerning the relation between religious and secular education in the public schools, municipal reform, labor reform, etc. The theory of evolution has also contributed, even in the theological arena, to obliterate the old denominational lines in current discussion and to divide men along new lines. Another element which has contributed largely—perhaps more largely than all other causes combined—to increase religious tolerance is the public-school system. The association of children of all denominations has resulted in their learning that differences in creed do not necessarily involve defects of character.

Dr. Abbott says in conclusion:—

"Thus, while we are growing more indifferent about speculative theories and more interested in ethico-spiritual principles, we are also growing not so much more tolerant, as more catholic. Each one of us is learning that he does not 'know it all.' We are beginning to perceive that truth is infinite and the individual mind finite; and we are less satisfied with our own partialism and less dissatisfied with the partial view of our neighbor. We are beginning to distrust the negations in our own creeds and to wonder if there is not some truth in our neighbor's affirmations. The Arminian believes more than he used to do in divine sovereignty, and the Calvinist more in human freedom; the Baptist more in the family as the unit of all social organization, and the Pedit-Baptist more in the right of the individual to choose his own form of faith for himself; the Catholic believes more in the authority of the individual conscience as the final court of appeal, and the Independent more in the church of Christ as the corrector of the idiosyncrasies of the individual. If, in this process toward a more catholic faith, we sometimes fail to discriminate between the spiritual life and its dogmatic expression, and in our growing indifference to the second sometimes grow careless concerning the first, this must be attributed to that infirmity of the human mind which habitually makes its growth unsymmetrical. And while we may well depreciate the tendency of theological unconcern to develop into spiritual indifferentism, while we may well be on our guard against it ourselves, and try to put others on guard against it, we may certainly see that the close of the nineteenth century is far in advance of the beginning, in the juster comparative estimate which it puts on speculative thought and practical life, in the more cautious estimate which each one puts upon his own opinions, and in the greater readiness of each to give respectful considerations to the opinions of his neighbor."—Literary Digest.

IS FAMILY PRAYER DECLINING?

THE Quiver, an English magazine, publishes a number of answers from prominent English clergymen to the question above. Among those who make reply are the Archbishop of Armagh, the Bishops of Gloucester and of Ripon, Dean Farrar, Dr. Parker, "Ian Maclaren," Dr. Macmillan, Hugh Price Hughes, Mark Guy Pearse, Dr. Barrett, and Dr. William Wright. Of nineteen such answers received, eleven respond in the affirmative, six are neutral, and two only, Dr. Barrett and Dr. Wright, state that the practice is not, in their opinion, dying out.

Dr. Joseph Parker says: "There can be but one answer to the question whether family worship is declining. In my opinion it is almost extinct."

Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren) writes: "Within the sphere personally known to me, the custom is on the decline."

Dr. A. K. H. Boyd says: "My impression is that in lay dwellings family prayer is not maintained as it used to be in Scotland in my boyhood."

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, the superintendent of the West London Wesleyan Mission, gives the opinion that "family worship is declining, in consequence of the terrible hurry and competition of modern life, especially in the great cities. I realize the difficulty most painfully in my own household. . . . Men are in far too great a hurry to make money. The all-pervading mammonism is injuring everything, and few things more than the quiet and reverent family prayer, which was so great a blessing in the past."

Dr. Robertson Nicoll states: "So far as my experience goes, the practice is very decidedly declining."

Mark Guy Pearse believes that at any rate there is no declension in the morning observance of family prayer.

In an editorial comment on these replies The Evangelical Messenger (Cleveland, Ohio) says:—

"The sum of it all is, that modern business, that Juggernaut of nineteenth-century life, is destroying in many homes that most sacred institution, the family altar. The sacrifice of thanksgiving and prayer at the family altar is neglected, that we may sacrifice at the altar of Mammon the more assiduously. This is not only true in the cities. It is true in the country, among the farmers, especially during the busy harvest season, when hired help is employed. Then it is that no time is taken for family prayer.

"But what manner of men and women will they be who in childhood and youth do not hear the voice of their parents daily in prayer and in Bible-reading? Need we wonder if infidelity spreads, and secularism gnaws the very heart out of society? Need we wonder if Sabbath desecration and divorces increase, when family altars crumble? Need we wonder if the church becomes cold and formal, when family prayers are hushed, and the fires of devotion on the home altar are buried under the white ashes of neglect?"

The Christian Guardian (Toronto, Canada) quotes some of the replies given in The Quiver, and then says:—

"We have not the absolute proof at hand, but from the general spiritual condition of our work, from the testimony of our pastors, and from personal experience in the pastorate, we judge that family prayer is holding its own in the usages of the home. The place of greatest difficulty in our cities for maintaining any household worship is the boarding-house, and we are of the opinion that it is not attempted. The students at our colleges, who come into the city from country or village homes, and take up their lodging at the regular boarding-house, find themselves at once in a household without worship. In our judgment this is the point where evil is initiated, and drifting and neglect find their beginning. If after family prayer is neglected, closet prayer is also dropped, then the course of religious indifference is fairly started."

The Presbyterian Journal (Philadelphia) has the following observation on the general subject:—

"The question of how far family prayer is observed in Christian households is being given consideration in religious papers. Another, closely connected with it, that it might be well to inquire concerning, is this: How far does the reading of religious literature occupy the Sabbath hours in Christian households? There was a time when secular papers, magazines, and books were carefully collected on Saturday evening and laid away. But we fear that in many households it is not so now, but that even children are permitted to read the monthly magazines and the literature and fiction of the day."—Literary Digest.

UNTRAINED MINDS AND UNWORTHY BOOKS.

A healthy body undoubtedly conduces to a healthy condition of the mind, but it does not produce intellectual activity. The only way to accomplish intellectual results is to work the mind. Hard work of any kind is never easy—it may be satisfying and exhilarating, but not easy. When you really work your brain you know it: even to concentrate your attention to begin a task is a serious effort. Many wise workers say that when you have learned the power of concentration you have solved the problem of effective intellectual work. That is the first stumbling-block that the person who does not habitually read books, even for recreation, encounters. It is so difficult to pin your attention to the printed page, for you think of things nearer at hand with which you are familiar. But a sensational novel captures the uneasy attention sooner than more thoughtful books; therefore, people of untrained minds are the greatest devourers of unworthy books.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HEBREWS IN JERUSALEM.

During the last few years nearly 150,000 Hebrews have entered Jerusalem, and the arrival of another host is said to be imminent. Already the railways are opening the country between the coast and Jerusalem and Damascus, and a Hebrew migration on a large scale may cause Syria to become once more of vast importance in the East.

The different kinds of Presbyterians in South Africa have united in one General Assembly, in which the Free Church, the United Presbyterian, and the separate presbyteries of Natal, Cape Town, and the Transvaal are represented.

MOSES THATCHER ON TRIAL.

It appears that the contest between Mr. Moses Thatcher and the Utah Mormon Church of which he has been a lifelong member is not yet ended. He was deposed from his official position last fall for holding and exercising his right to political opinion independent of domination or question by the leaders of the church. His right of membership and fellowship in the church was not then put into question. It now appears that he is called to account for these before the High Council at Salt Lake City; the charges being based upon what was urged against him last fall; he being then held to be "out of harmony with his brethren of the quorum."

We sincerely hope that the rumor published, and which we give below from the Salt Lake Tribune for August 7 is not correct, or if it be true, that Mr. Thatcher may be able to maintain his right to fellowship and to hold the right of judgment in political affairs. It may be, however, that he has become a person not grateful to his church party in power. If so he "must go."

Moses Thatcher is on trial for his fellowship in the Mormon Church. The hearing began yesterday morning at ten o'clock, and is before the High Council of the Salt Lake stake. At yesterday's session of the ecclesiastical court the prosecution did not quite complete its case. It is expected to do so sometime today, after which the defense will be put in. This, it is believed, will occupy several days.

Owing to the secrecy with which the entire affair is shrouded, equally by the church authorities and Mr. Thatcher and his friends, it has been a difficult matter to obtain precise information as to the nature of the charges and the incidents of the courtroom.

TWO GENERAL CHARGES.

There are two general charges made against the unfrocked apostle. Of these the first is his declination to sign the celebrated manifesto of April, 1896, and the second, his failure to publicly protest against the Argus cartoons, in which George Q. Cannon was held up to ridicule.

It is said that the latter charge is being urged with more vigor than the former, and that in connection with it an effort is being made to demonstrate how Mr. Thatcher was expected to benefit by the cartoons, even if he did not inspire them. He is not regarded as culpable for the appearance of the cartoons, but it is insisted, since they concerned him so nearly, he should have availed himself of the first opportunity to disavow any connection with the journal publishing them and to have expressed regret at their publication. Whether any date subsequent to the publication was shown when Mr. Thatcher had an opportunity, in a Mormon place of worship, to disavow either the cartoons or anything else, is not known.

WORKING UP EVIDENCE.

Although it is customary, in a hearing like that now in progress, for the stake presidency and High Council to act alone, efficient aid is being afforded in this instance by such notable ecclesiastics as Apostle Heber J. Grant and Apostle Francis M. Lyman, who have labored diligently in the collection of evidence.

In this case Mr. Thatcher will be given a hearing. When he was deprived of his various church offices no hearing was accorded him. As President Lorenzo Snow of the Quorum of Apostles put it in his correspondence with Mr. Thatcher at that time: "It will be time enough for a hearing when Mr. Thatcher's fellowship is questioned." It was simply a question if Apostle Thatcher was in harmony with his quorum, a question which it was held by the quorum did not require a hearing for settlement. The other members of the quorum met and decided that Apostle Moses Thatcher wasn't in harmony with them, and then proceeded to unfrock him.

Just who is acting as the prosecutor in the pending trial could not be learned. It is understood that Mr. Thatcher will conduct his own defense.

Mr. Thatcher has not been officially transferred from Cache to Salt Lake stake. As his home is now here, however, the local authorities have assumed jurisdiction in the case.

THATCHER PEOPLE RETICENT.

Mr. Thatcher's friends are not supposed to be hopeful of the outcome, particularly when they remember that such a distinguished ecclesiastic as President Joseph F. Smith has long since pronounced Moses Thatcher an apostate. But none of them could be induced to discuss the probability of the trial's termination. Reserve that was impenetrable possessed them all.

The men who are hearing the trial are Stake President Angus M. Cannon, his counselors, Joseph E. Taylor and Charles W.

Penrose, and the High Council, consisting of William Eddington, George J. Taylor, Henry Dinwoodey, Anders W. Winberg, John T. Caine, James P. Freeze, Milando Pratt, Henry P. Richards, Elias A. Smith, Joseph D. C. Young, and John Nicholson.

Since writing the above we have seen the statement of the ecclesiastical court which tried Mr. Thatcher and read the findings of that court and their decision. This decision Mr. Thatcher agrees to without hesitation, or mental reservation; and in a letter published with the proceedings makes as fair a statement of his condition of mind and convictions as a man could well do.

It is manly in Mr. Thatcher to agree to the decision of the council of his brethren, where longer to dispute with them could not fail to widen the breach of misunderstanding to no good result either to himself, or the church whose fellowship he values. It is well for a man to be resolute when principle is at stake, but it is not well for a man to be obstinate when differences between himself and others are the result of mistake and misunderstanding.

The charges against Mr. Thatcher were apostasy and unchristianlike conduct, both of which were sustained by the council, constructively, a thing which Mr. Thatcher was wise enough not to cavil at, as it would have been useless and unprofitable.

A DAY WITH THE CHAUTAUQUA AT MAYSVILLE.

THERE was a Chautauquan Assembly held at Maysville, Missouri, some thirty miles east of St. Joseph on the Rock Island railway, beginning August 7 and closing August 16.

By invitation from the board of management, E. A. Benton, president, Taylor Fawcett, secretary, B. F. Meek, corresponding secretary, and others, members, the Editor was invited to attend and deliver a lecture before the Assembly on the temperance topic; which invitation was duly honored and the lecture delivered on Friday, August 13, a day called in the general program, "Another Great Sam Jones Day." We therefore had the opportunity of hearing this now noted man. We are pleased that we had this opportunity; because, having heard and read much of the man, we had formed an opinion prejudiced to his disadvantage. He is neither so great, nor so bad as he has gained the reputation of being, as we saw, heard, and judged him.

To us he appeared to be full of good humor, and to an extent very earnest in his crusade against general immorality, chiefly the saloon and what results.

The saloon and its keeper, is the red rag that fires his attack. His power to attract attention is that which draws men to the circus, the minstrel show, or any other place where something coarse, cutting, and witty is expected to be said. He abuses everybody and everything that occurs to him as a target, scoring the churches, Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Christian, or Catholic, as the whim takes him, and depicting the preachers as being weak, vascillating, hypocritical, fostering the great iniquity and selling out to the Devil whenever an opportunity is offered, afraid to do right, and aiding and abetting wrong as a consequence. On the rostrum he is caustic, witty, and uses the most astonishing vocabulary of slang, and coarse stories. We heard him twice on the same day, and while we do not care to hear him again, we advise those who have any curiosity in regard to him to go and hear him. He is neither so good nor so bad as is reported of him; the advertisements of him overpraise him, as we see him.

There is some prejudice among our people against the Chautauqua Assemblies. We were on the grounds at Maysville, and neither saw, nor heard anything immoral, or blasphemous. The Women's Christian Temperance Union, for the Northern District of Missouri, under the direction of Mrs. Lura Hyden-Boleyn, had the lead in the morning hours, and had able representatives present whom they sent to the front. We were pleased with their work.

We heard Col. H. W. J. Ham, of Georgia, in a lecture on the "Snollygoster in Politics," which was well worth the price of a day's admission. It was a fine presentation of the ordinary political tactics, and the character and work of the "snollygoster," which he defined as being an appellation applied by one candidate for office to another in a northern county of the State of Georgia, and means by free translation a man who persistently seeks office, but is neither fitted nor qualified for the office he seeks, and could not satisfactorily discharge the duties of it when obtained, a man in relation to statesmen what the shyster is to the legal profession, a grumbler and growler dissatisfied with all existent things and unduly impressed with his own wisdom and importance.

The close of Col. Ham's lecture was a glowing display of patriotism and unshaken confidence in the final triumph of American institutions.

One statement made by Col. Ham deserves repetition. It was to the effect that while he was at the time of the struggle between the North and the South in sympathy, fortune, and action with the South, he freely and without hesitation gave it as his feeling and sentiment now that it was for the better to all concerned both South and North that the struggle ended as it did. This was made more effective by the Colonel by his stating that he had freely mingled with the people of the North and South and found that the "bloody chasm" no longer existed—was a thing of the past.

Altogether we were pleased with many of the features of the Chautauqua at Maysville. There was no sort of outside games, diversions of any sort allowed on the grounds during the exercises; the best of order was maintained on the grounds, and the sincerest attention in the tent; no drunkenness and no swearing or boisterous conduct were seen by us. This feature is deserving mention.

FROM THE FIELD.

THE reports from the fields of Brn. J. R. Lambert, I. N. White, of the Twelve, and George Montague and T. C. Kelley, indicate that prospects for gospel work are fair; ninety-eight baptisms in Bro. Lambert's field, not counting those done by local forces. Bro. Lambert says:—

Upon the whole, or all things considered, the condition of the work is all that we could expect.

Bro. I. N. White's report shows forty-nine baptized in his field to July 15, date of report. All field officers busy, with an exception or two. Bro. White's field is one in which many debates are held. He thinks these have been ably carried on, and a fair result for the cause.

In Bro. Montague's field sixteen baptisms; field large, laborers few.

Eleven baptisms in Bro. T. C. Kelley's field; all doing seemingly what they can, not all reporting. Prospects fairly good in most places.

Bro. Montague states that one thing that stands in the way of the best success in his field is the lack of good presiding men to look after the saints. This appears to be a general complaint in the fields so far heard from. Why cannot the local brethren take this into consideration and perfect themselves in the work of presiding? "Now, therefore, let every one learn his duty," was long ago commanded of God to his people. There may not be many natural presiding officers, but there may be many who can by careful thought and study improve upon what nature has done for them, and by study and prayer receive of the Spirit to aid them not only to a better conception of what may be needed, but courage and ability to carry into effect in practice what they learn. Try it, brethren, and the result will be more effective work in the fields hereafter. "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," will apply with force now as ever before.

MAYSVILLE, Missouri, has a Chautauqua Association whose summer camp meetings are visited by large gatherings of people bent on recreation, improvement of mind, and other phases of good essential to advancement. At the late meeting in August President Joseph Smith delivered a temperance lecture before the assembly of which the Dekalb County Herald, published at Maysville, thus comments, in its issue of the 19th:—

The morning hour Friday was allotted to Elder Joseph Smith. His temperance lecture was a plain, sensible appeal for the cause he so ably and honestly represents. His plain, kindly face and manner gave his words a force and directness that went direct to the hearts of his audience and riveted and held the closest attention. His wonderful power as a speaker is derived from the honesty of purpose that is so clearly depicted in every lineament of his countenance. The only criticism that can justly be made of the lecture is that the time allotted to Elder Smith was all too brief to permit him to do justice to his subject.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. A. MCDOWELL, Barneveld, Wisconsin, August 16:—

Bro. M. T. Short and the writer have been preaching at or near Madison. Bro. Short baptized three on the 8th. We held forth at Adamsville last week. We came to Barneveld last evening; Bro. S. preached to about one hundred attentive listeners. All goes well. I expect to go to Flora, Grant County, to assist in a two-days' meeting to be held next Saturday and Sunday.

BRO. C. E. BUTTERWORTH, Rolfe, Iowa, August 14:—

Bro. James Christenson, wife, and daughter were baptized and confirmed here yesterday, by W. W. Whiting and the writer. Their conversion was largely due to the efforts of others. Interest here is but limited and we will close our effort Sunday evening.

BRO. J. A. GRANT, Armada, Michigan, August 14:—

Everything is moving nicely all along the lines of gospel tent work. Bro. Durand is assisting the writer at present. Two were baptized last Sunday and three more on Wednesday; so the good work moves on. We are having fair audiences, good attention, and good liberty.

BRO. A. B. PIERCE, of Rhode Island, sends us this worthy of note:—

Young men should bear in mind that their country will be what they make it. It is, then, of the first importance for them to properly value all requirements of a good citizen. Fortunately, as a general rule, a thoroughly good man will be a good citizen; or, more briefly, the better the man the better the citizen. GEN. O. O. HOWARD.

BRO. C. W. PRETTYMAN, Wescott, Nebraska, August 10:—

Bro. Gillen has started for points in the west. He labored here effectively for the past month, strengthening the work very much. There was one baptized while he was with us.

BRO. J. M. TERRY, St. Joseph, Missouri, August 20:—

Two of the oldest members of the St. Joseph branch are now lying corpses: Bro. R. A. Marchant and Sr. Margaret Graham, wife of Elder F. C. Graham. The latter will be buried to-day, the former on Sunday; obituaries later. Death is fast thinning the ranks of the charter members of the work here, but they go "in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

BRO. A. B. PIERCE, Providence, Rhode Island, August 10:—

Elder William Bradbury, of Providence, occupied the pulpit of the new saints' chapel on Bellevue Avenue, this city, last Sunday evening, it being the first day that the building was opened to the public. On next Sunday evening one or more prominent speakers will be present and a series of sermons will be held in the chapel on the evenings of the following week. The building is a standing monument to the wisdom of the committee, the architect, and especially the builder, Bro. Thos. Whipple, of Providence. If you intend to build write him.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

NOW BEING MAILED.—The second volume of the Church History is now being mailed. Send in your orders.

Bishop E. L. Kelley is at this date (August 18) up and about, giving attention to correspondence and other business at home. He expects to resume regular duties at his office during the present week, until the 21st inst., when he goes to Bluff Park to attend the Nauvoo reunion, thence to the reunion at Woodbine, in the interests of the general work and for needed rest and change of scene. The saints will be gratified to learn of his recovery.

Bro. J. R. Lambert left Lamoni for Montrose on the 19th, to attend the Nauvoo reunion. A number of others of the Lamoni saints expect to leave for the same point later in the week, among them some excellent musical and Sunday school talent, and ready to aid in the general work in any way in which they may be useful.

President Joseph Smith returned from Maysville, Missouri, on the 16th and departed again on the 18th to address another public gathering in that vicinity. He expected to return home about the 20th, and to leave again on the 23d or 24th for the Montrose reunion; thence to Onslow, Iowa, to dedicate a chapel; thence to the Woodbine reunion.

Bro. R. K. Ross, Bishop's agent of the Nodaway district, made us a call at the Herald Office on the 19th inst. Bro. Ross, accompanied by Bro. Ole Madison, is looking up locations with a view to settling in the region round about Lamoni.

With the growth of the work and consequent increase of reports we are obliged to summarize a number of letters, giving preference to reports from the ministry, which summarizes the work being done.

Bro. William Johnson, of Angus, Iowa, makes statement of the preaching and general labors of Brn. Morgan, Scott, and Roth at Perry, Iowa, where the district tent was well filled with attentive listeners; resulting in the baptism of six by Bro. Johnson, and others studying the evidences upon which the faith is based. Saints are alive, seeking to supplement the work of the elders. Bro. Young urges obedience to the temporal law that the elders' families may be supplied, and expresses opinion that the time may come when such obedience may prove a test of faith to a large extent, inasmuch as no one can be justified who does not observe the whole law.

Bro. E. A. Stedman secured insertion of a one third column article on "Mormon differences defined," in the Minneapolis Times of August 16. The subject matter was called out by late efforts of Utah missionaries in the twin cities. Bro. Stedman has done good work of late through the Minneapolis press, papers of wide circulation.

Sr. Estelle Hart reports a good all-around reunion of the Northeast and Northwest Kansas districts at Blue Rapids, Brn. White, Stebbins, E. A. Davis, Pender, Hart, Landers, and others present; also Bro. T. A. Hougas of the Sunday School Association; good preaching, good prayer meetings, and good school sessions, with plenty of good saints in camp.

Bro. D. E. Daniels and others of the local ministry residing at and near to Lucas, Iowa, are meeting with very friendly receptions in efforts to proclaim the word in the neighboring schoolhouses and villages. Many open doors are reported.

Bro. William Leeka, writing from Thurman, Iowa, the 17th inst., reports a large audience of both saints and outsiders, a profitable meeting, and sixteen baptisms, at the late Thurman reunion; Brn. Kemp, Elvin, Williams, and the local ministry present.

Letters from Brn. Sheehy and Robley, in attendance at the Massachusetts reunion, at Dennisport, indicate a successful session, though some disappointment resulted because of the absence of Brn. W. H. Kelley, I. M. Smith, U. W. Greene, W. W. Blanchard, H. J. Davison, and others of the ministry. Brn. George Smith, Orrin Coombs, Bullard, John Smith, John Gilbert, and others laboring locally were present and rendering excellent aid. The program provides for services in the morning, sea bathing and other recreations in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening hour. Large audiences hear the word with interest; prospects good for additions by baptism; many are becoming acquainted with and interested in the gospel message.

The Herald Office has received a box of very large fine peaches from the "Star Fruit Farm" of Pomona, Missouri, Bro. Joseph Ward proprietor. The quality and flavor of the fruit are excellent, and speak well for that region as a fruit growing country.

Sr. F. D. Hastings, of Lapeer, Lapeer County, Michigan, desires some of the elders to visit that point and preach the word, also to baptize two of her sons. Can any of the Michigan brethren answer the call?

In the miscellany of this issue will be found a confession which is commended to the readers of the HERALD, for the reason that there are so few who either will, or do confess to similar wrong conduct. Bro. J. D. Erwin is to be commended making so frank a confession.

The Lake City, Iowa, Graphic for August 19, has an extended and friendly notice of the work of Bro. C. J. Hunt at that point, "who has pitched a tent, comfortably seated, on the corner east of the Presbyterian church, and will conduct evening gospel meetings for the next two or three weeks. It is hoped and confidently expected that an organization may be made at this point and a church built in Lake City." The epitome of the faith follows.

The written discussion continues between Elder P. B. Seaton and Bro. C. Scott, in the Marion, Iowa, Sentinel. So far it looks well for the right.

Brn. H. E. Moler, H. C. Bronson, and local brethren are making a vigorous effort in tent work among the East End suburbanites of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Handbills and tracts are freely used, as a result of which many are hearing the work, and it is thought, not indifferently. The campaign is to be continued nearer the center of the Iron City.

Sr. L. M. Hinkley, of Cedar Grove, Tennessee, writes thanking saints who have sent her church reading matter. She is a widow having seven children to support, and alone in her faith at that point. She asks interest in prayer and trusts the missionary force of the State may call and preach at times.

Bro. Joseph Roberts also writes of the late Thurman reunion, confirming Bro. Leeka's report of a successful session. The new district tabernacle was dedicated and is in the field.

Austria has severed diplomatic relations with Bulgaria and threatens to apply stronger measures if her demands are not complied with. The trouble has grown out of utterances of the Bulgarian Premier who has reflected upon Austrian officials and refuses to apologize therefor.

The dispute between the engineers and the employers in Great Britain is extending steadily to new districts. More than 70,000 men are now involved. The Society of Iron Founders is considering the question of joining the strikers. The tranquility of each side, which is trying to wear the other out, is unprecedented. Some employers have conceded to demands and a combination among them seems more difficult than with the employed.

Anarchists are said to be active in Italy and France. Italian police claim discovery of an international plot to kill heads of governments.

Simla advices dated the 17th state that the British force has dislodged the insurgent tribesmen on the Indian frontier.

Two inches of snow attended by a severe storm at Wilmot, South Dakota, August 17; the earliest snowfall ever known in that region.

Many Illinois and Pennsylvania coal miners have returned to work and it is supposed that the great strike is nearing an end.

A very brief summary of one day's cablegrams (August 14) indicates, to a degree, the general condition of unrest on the eastern continent, though it is by no means confined to distant lands: Continental Europe is in great fear of anarchy and is taking steps to institute severe repressive measures against it. Great Britain is also somewhat disturbed but is opposed to a course that would restrict freedom of speech in public gatherings, attributing to it her comparative freedom from open displays of anarchy. The Ameer of Afghanistan, hitherto counted a friend to Great Britain, is said to be aiding the frontier uprisings against British rule in India and to be acting in connection with high Mohammedan officials, among whom the Sultan of Turkey is mentioned. A strong British force is being sent forward to danger points on the Afghan frontier. Peace negotiations growing out of the Greco-Turkish war are concluding slowly, owing to tactics of the Sultan and his ministers. The assassin of the late Spanish premier has been sentenced to death. A strong Mahdist force is massed in the Upper Nile region, preparing to resist the advance of the Anglo-Egyptian Nile expedition. The recent visit of the German emperor to the Czar of Russia is said to have brought about much closer relations between the two nations. Rumors are in effect that German pride is wounded and humiliated by the Kaiser's attitude toward the Czar and that British statesmen are jealous of the alleged alliance. President Faure, of France, will visit the Czar on or about August 20, the result of which can only be conjectured as yet. Rumor also says that Turkey will not give up Thessaly and Crete and that Russia will finally support her; that England is to have Suda Bay, in Crete, for tacit acquiescence in Turkish claims. These items are noted to the HERALD readers from time to time, not as indorsing them, but as showing the general trend of passing rumors and events.

Bomb throwers have caused serious explosions in the offices of the Grand Vizier at Constantinople. The streets are patrolled by troops to prevent an Armenian uprising.

Severe storms in Silesia followed by plague caused by flood refuse contaminating drinking water supplies.

Fanatics continue to defeat government troops in Bahia, Brazil. The revolt is charged to those favoring an overthrow of the republic and establishment of monarchy.

News of great importance concerning the holy war in India, which menaces British interests, comes from Simla, India, August 19: It is reported that the Afridis, a powerful tribe, and hitherto among the most loyal to England, have arisen and with the Orakzais, another powerful tribe, are marching through the Kyber pass threatening important towns and strategic points on the Afghan-Indian frontier. British reinforcements are being hurried forward. They now number 35,000 men. The danger is that the religious fanaticism may spread to the ranks of native troops, many of whom are Afridis. The Turkish government has issued a denial of the alleged understanding said to exist between the Porte and the Ameer of Afghanistan, to foment insurrection by preaching a holy war or jihad against British rule in India.

August 19.—The concert of the great powers is in danger. A deadlock in the peace negotiations has prevailed for the last few days. Great Britain refuses assent to agreement that Turkey shall occupy the towns of Trikhala, Larissa, and Volo in Thessaly pending the payment of indemnity by Greece. Lord Salisbury contends that Greece is unable to pay, hence the occupancy would become permanent, in violation of the agreement of 1881, as well as of the principles upon which the negotiations are based. Gloomy views as to the outcome are held. Ottoman hostility to Britain is intensified, and suggestions of Mohammedan influence on the Indian frontier are connected therewith.

Bro. F. G. Pitt has already arrived in his field in England, and Bro. Heman C. Smith is following him with all speed, (is likely there at date of writing, August 22,) and prospects are good for active campaigning. Bro. Luff is hammering away in Oregon, and doing well.

The slow recovery from depressed financial conditions has affected our work, but we hope for better times, when the new crops are all harvested. Nebraska and Kansas are specially favored this year. Wheat is going to the $ mark.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"I saw the mountains stand
Silent, wonderful, and grand,
Looking out across the land
When the golden light was falling
On distant dome and spire,
And I heard a low voice calling,
'Come up higher, come up higher,
From the lowland and the mire,
From the mist of earth desire,
From the vain pursuit of self,
From the attitude of self;

Dear Sister Frances:—I had the pleasure of entertaining one of the elders who can talk to the little ones. One morning some time after the visit my little boy, six years old, said to me: "Mamma, when will that man come back that told me about heaven? I believe him, too. I wish he would come again."

Then the older one, thirteen years, who is rather skeptical, said: "I don't know about it. How does he know so much? He has never been to heaven. I have a lot of questions to ask him next time."

Does Bro. Price remember while the busy mother was preparing breakfast, of talking to two little boys? I do hope there are more such as he. The lambs have too little feed. I think if only they could understand the many, or a few of the many, pleasant things connected with our religion, it would help them.

I presume I have greater faith, or ought to have, than many, as an old aunt taught me from my earliest childhood to pray to God for all I needed. She was naturally a Latter Day Saint. When she was sick at one time she sent for the pastor and class leader (being a Wesleyan Methodist) to come and anoint her with oil and administer to her. They told her they could not, but would pray with her, which they did, and she was healed immediately. I try to tell my children the best I can, but have so little time. I sometimes think, Do I improve what I do have? I try to watch myself, but find so much that is wrong I often get discouraged.

AUNT WETHERBEE.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Miss.

Dear Sisters:—I write in response to Sr. Mary Strang's request that one or more express their opinions on the subject of sending our children to sectarian Sunday schools.

Conditions differ so much that the question cannot be answered by a brief "yes" or "no." Isolated saints should not fail to have a saints' Sunday school in their own homes. To this they may invite all who will come. Provide the children with the Quarterly and Primary Question Book, and do not fail to have the Hope. Do not allow them to have the latter until Sunday, and then read it to them, or if they are old enough, have them take turns reading aloud. And if they have advanced to the dignity of being "young people," fail not to provide Autumn Leaves also. Study this on Sunday too. Plan for a pleasant and profitable day at home. Have a time for your Sunday school to begin. When the time comes be ready for it just as you would if you were going to a larger school in a public place. Follow the "Order of Exercises" given in the Quarterly or arrange a program of your own. Plan, study, be interested, and your children will be interested too.

Then after having instructed them at home, if you can find opportunity to talk gospel in some sectarian school, go; take your children. If they will hear you, call attention to the gospel, but if they compel you to listen in silence to false doctrine, stay at home.

Only on condition that I could interest others would I attend sectarian schools or allow my children to do so.

I would not contribute to the treasury of other schools. Pride, I confess, would prompt me to do so, but I believe it would not be right.

Let's "figure" a little; five cents a Sunday would be two dollars and sixty cents a year. Would it not be better to spend that amount in literature of our own for our children, and if it were not all needed, to invest the balance in tracts and papers for general or special distribution?

Let's see: Primary Question Book 15 cents; Primary Quarterly, one year, 25 cents; Zion's Hope, one year, 50 cents. Why, that's only 90 cents, and I would still have $1.70 left for other juvenile publications of our own for my children, or for tracts and papers which might be the means of bringing some one to a knowledge of the truth.

Many older hearts echo the complaint, "Sunday's lonesome for a little feller," but if planned for, and proper occupation be provided for all, Sunday may be so pleasant and enjoyable at home that the time will not seem to drag.

I am isolated too, living two hundred and fifty miles from the nearest branch and being the only saint here. I rejoice in the gospel and am doing all I can to get others to investigate. I fully expect that in due time others will obey. If they do not I am determined that it shall not be because I have not tried to induce them to investigate. Please pray that prejudice may be removed and an opportunity be given for the preaching of the gospel here also.

Your sister in Christ,

IDA STEWART.

WEBB CITY, Missouri.

Dear Home Column:—Your letters have often been a source of comfort to me, and as we all have an interest in this work, I hope I may be led to say some word of cheer or comfort to some one, for we all have our trials and dark hours; but there are many ways and opportunities for us to escape, or rather, to turn our trials into good. If we are persecuted we can rejoice that we are worthy of persecution. If our friends turn a cold shoulder on account of our faith, do not notice it, but pray for them and treat them kindly. In so doing we may gain their love. If not, they cannot think less of us. If we are weak and not able to do the day's work before us, go in humble prayer and ask the Lord for help and strength. In this way I have often been greatly strengthened. When at other times I have just prayed in my mind, I have found it did not do the good that going to God in humble prayer does. I know it is hard to at all times go to our heavenly Father in a humble manner, but if we set a time or an hour to have prayer and do not neglect it, we will soon gain strength.

Mothers, do you call your children around you and bow in prayer with them? If not, try it; you will not regret it. In years to come, when your children are scattered and away from home, they will look back on those days with a sweet memory. I do not mean at the regular evening prayer, but at times when they need your counsel and advice, and no one but mother and the children are near. Although I did not practice this as often as I should, it seems to me had I neglected this duty altogether there would have been a great blank left in life, and the children could not look back on the times that we often gathered in our room for prayer. Before starting on a visit or journey, how much better we feel if we bow and ask the blessings of heaven to attend us. Then if danger surrounds us we know we have asked the Lord to protect us. And, dear sisters, why need we hesitate to bow in prayer before our children or husband? Perchance he is not a member, although he may seem indifferent, yet in his heart he will admire the act, and sooner or later he will be led to see the reality in serving God. Then let us let our light so shine that we may be instrumental in God's hands of doing some good.

Our Prayer Union has been quite a strength to us. Although there are some who do not attend, the majority do, and we have been greatly blessed, and at times have felt the blessed Spirit in our midst, until our hearts have been made to rejoice, and we do know and can testify that God does approve of the Mothers' Prayer Union. Asking an interest in your prayers, that if it is God's will I may enjoy better health, I am,

Your sister in Christ,
R. M. BRADLEY.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

THE Thurman, Iowa, reunion has just closed—a success in every particular. Quite a full program of Sunday school work was carried out in charge of the general superintendent and district officers, Brn. Charley Fry and Joseph Roberts. Three sessions normal work, two teacher's meetings, and three sessions actual Sunday school were held: also a temperance program rendered.

Some of the noticeable and desirable features of the work were a constantly from 122 at the first session to 150 at the last. Almost without exception, every child in the camp was present, and a large proportion of the adults. The departments numbered, primary 47, intermediate 25, and senior 78; a total of 150, divided into 14 classes.

THE DISCIPLINE

seemed thorough. All intermediates, primaries, and part of the seniors removed to private tents for class work. Beginning with the youngest the classes marched out of the large tent and returned to the music of the organ. It was a sight at once inspiring to see little children, youth, middle aged, and elderly people filing out in order to their various places of recitation, while the mellow yet powerful tones from the organ marked each step and caused all hearts to throb as one.

THE TEACHING

was earnest and efficient—done by a corps of fourteen teachers, not one of which was either tardy or absent at any session. Such earnestness on the part of any worker is truly commendable. Quarterlies were used by every class from the least up to the oldest.

THE GENERAL REVIEWS

were complete and comprehensive, and embraced the lessons in all three grades, consuming about twenty minutes for all.

A VISITING COMMITTEE

made a thorough canvass of the entire camp, soliciting the attendance of everyone. These visitations account largely, we believe, for the very large proportionate attendance of the campers.

HOW CAN THE OPENING AND CLOSING EXERCISES OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL BE CONDUCTED MOST EFFECTIVELY?

AT the annual county convention of the Sunday school union held in our town a few months ago, several teachers asked this question of Mrs. Knight, a prominent State worker who was present. The lady spoke from her experience with a primary class of over a hundred children, and I refer to this instance because there are points in the answer given that I think are suggestive in a general way.

Mrs. Knight said that she had little time to spare for opening and closing exercises. She was bound to no set rules or order of proceedings, letting circumstances and the evident feelings of the children govern. She considered it necessary that the children be made to realize the importance of asking God's help at the start, and she frequently called their attention to this in different ways. She said that perhaps she did not pursue the same course twice in succession. Sometimes she prayed herself, sometimes having the children repeat after her. The closing exercises varied as the peculiarities of the sessions. If the lesson had been especially enjoyable she would say, "Let us stand, children, and put all our good feelings into" such and such a song; then, "We will all thank God for this pleasant time," and she would have them repeat a few words after her. At another time she might feel it best, right after the lesson, to offer a brief prayer herself impressing the teaching of the lesson, and she would make a few remarks at opening and closing when she thought the opportunity good.

Beyond their suggestive value, it were idle, probably, to mention the practice in any school, as any criterion for all to go by, because of differing circumstances and conditions—what would be adapted in one case might not suit in another.

So it would seem that our more profitable course is to investigate and find, if we can, the principles that may guide in all schools.

There are certain underlying thoughts in the methods referred to that struck me as being true. The variety of means employed was not the formal result of studied effort, but rather the fresh, spontaneous overflow of the feelings and promptings of the occasion.

To illustrate immediate opportunities and how they are often treated: It is a beautiful, bright spring Sabbath morning. The windows are up a little admitting the balmy air, and the sunshine streams in. The children hear the birds sing outside; they see the soft green-feathered branches swaying gently in the breeze, and all hearts, from the primary class to the senior, feel the joyous, thrilling influence of spring.

Time comes for school to open, and the superintendent, because it was always done, goes through the old routine. He announces a song that has no sympathy with the morning, and he prays as he would have prayed in the dead of winter. When he is through he has succeeded in making the exercises effective; no doubt of that, for every bit of elation and cheer of spirit has been dampened, and it might have been better for the youthful hearts assembled that morning if he had saved himself the trouble, and had let the birds, and the sunshine, and the bursting buds speak their gratitude and joyousness for the goodness of a loving Creator, as he was not responsive to it.

This is not an overdrawn example. In fact I have seen it the rule as often as the exception. Usually it is not new ideas that are needed, but being quick to see and feel and apply the ideas that are presented.

Here was opportunity for beautiful and feeling exercises that would have led the young minds to remember the source of the blessings they recognized. It was the custom to open school with a song first. Never mind; the superintendent felt like it and he saw the children were in sympathy, a few sincere remarks expressive of the gladness and beauty of the morning; appropriate songs in which he asks the school to join and pour out the happiness they feel; a prayer of fervent thanks for the blessings of the morning, the privilege of living to enjoy it, and every heart would have been reached.

I have often thought, as I listened to them, that the opening and closing exercises in too many instances were not more than mere formality, gone through in thoughtless, mechanical fashion. Sameness all the time, too, is bound to become monotonous and uninteresting. While I believe that the exercises should be spontaneous, expressive of the thought and feeling of the hour, yet a little of something now and then, especially gotten up, would not be amiss.

I recently heard, at one of our Sunday school conventions, a little boy sing the solo part of "Throw out the life line," the school joining with him in the chorus. It was good, and I wondered why some such thing, once in awhile, would not be good to relieve the Sunday morning exercises in the school.

I have not been there yet to see and judge for myself, but I am told that at one of our leading Sunday schools at home they are giving pupils the lesson to prepare blackboard illustration or outline of, and after class, the pupil explains the sketch before the school and shows its application to the lesson, intending to bring out the chief thoughts, as he sees them, the superintendent putting in whenever he sees fit, and weaving his review around the pupil's illustration. It perhaps makes the pupils feel a livelier interest if they may take individual parts sometimes.

However, I do not think the right effectiveness of opening and closing exercises depends upon the novelty of them. This has no reference to freshness and originality, but that uniqueness and oddity are not necessary. It might be a failure so far as having the right effect be concerned. We may attract and entertain, but that is not all we want to gain.

To my mind the solution is this: There must be spirituality. The senses should be alert to opportunities, and susceptible to the leading and inspiration of the hour, that there may be that seasonableness and fitness between the exercises and the conditions of the morning, the theme of the lesson and anything unusual or peculiar as to seem as if there could be application to no other session, and in manner conducted with such spirit and earnestness as if each time were the first time the exercises had ever been gone through.

GALESBURG, Ill., August 6.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have labored in my field with a little success, I am glad to say. A few weeks ago I was at Savanna, Illinois; while there I was sick the greater part of the time, but the Lord being with me, healed me so that I could preach a few times there. I had much difficulty in getting the schoolhouse to preach in. After five sermons they shut me out; but the majority of the people seem to be in sympathy, and although contrary influences were at work, I was enabled to baptize three there, and more are becoming interested. So I believe the effort was not lost. I have held a few meetings at Utah, Warren County, where the attendance was good, considering the busy time. The people seem to respect us, and some are interested; I anticipate an ingathering there very soon. At present I am at Henderson. The Christian Church have just closed an eleven weeks' meeting here, and the speaker has run out their regular pastor and got the position from him, which has given rise to a strong sentiment. Your writer not knowing of this arrived there last evening, and I noticed the people more anxious to shake hands with me than ever he had seen them before. On a previous visit when I boarded the train to leave, they shouted, "There goes the old Mormon;" but they treat me with respect now, showing that out of the evil taking place God is overruling the elements and will turn them to extend his kingdom.

The Rev. Charles Akers of the "Church of God," "Holiness Reformation," etc., with whom I debated last March at Andalusia, has endeavored to write up the debate in the Gospel Trumpet. He calls Joseph Smith a false prophet, charges him with falsehood, denounces the Book of Mormon, and tears things up generally. My attention was called to it; I replied, sending him through his paper an open challenge to debate the questions.

I am on the war path, not that I heed what he says, but many in his church are surely honest, and this will be a good way to bring the truth before them. If he will not defend his position, I will review his article. Favor to us resulted after the debate at Andalusia, and I have no fear of the issue through the papers. I am feeling well at this writing, and will soon gain the strength lost while sick. I am encouraged in this work, and while the temples and rulers of spiritual wickedness in the high places are tottering, trembling, and falling, Zion is being strengthened, and has assurance given that she will surely prevail.

Yours in the one hope,

T. J. SHELDON.

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—Bro. C. L. Snow and the writer have been traveling through Kentucky and Tennessee over land, starting from Sedalia, Kentucky, on July 9, reaching the southern line of Tennessee on August 1, preaching by the wayside wherever opportunity offered, opening up new places, sowing gospel seed which we hope will bring forth in due time. We enjoyed a visit to the old "Shiloh battlefield," preaching in the old Shiloh M. E. church. Each of us preached a sermon to two very interesting congregations. We shall look after Shiloh in the future, for we are impressed there is a branch there in embryo. We found Brn. Irwin and Harrison here, both energetic and wide awake men.

I was invited to speak to the "Blue and the Gray" at Morris chapel. The M. E. church was secured, a large congregation being present; most all were satisfied. However, I heard of one man who said "there was too much Yankee in it" for him.

I suggest this a fine country for T. W. W., a man so smooth, and his composition, "Republican Democrat Populist," Blue and Gray, would be a howling success.

Bro. R. D. Snow, an old confederate soldier and a man of much integrity and influence, assisted us at Morris chapel, opening the meeting with a fervent, appropriate, and feeling prayer. We find in the soldiers of both sides a fine lot of men, and with them the war is over forever. Over a score of years ago the night of the confederacy cast its shadows and the closing scenes of the war had passed, and the hatred and enmity have gone with the changes of time. Where then the soldier dug his intrenchment the peaceful plowman tills the soil, and instead of the screaming bullet is heard the hum of the factory wheel. Still the gray-haired veteran loves to picture those thrilling scenes of yore, and his eyes will kindle and sparkle as in imagination he reviews once more "Shiloh's Hornet's Nest" (a spot where the battle raged the fiercest and now marked "Hornet's Nest"), or Sherman's wonderful march to the sea. 'Tis well they should not be forgotten, else the fires of patriotism wane.

We are pleased to note in Bro. C. L. Snow a warm companion, a forcible speaker, and a man well adapted and fully qualified for this country.

In bonds,

T. W. CHATBURN.

MCDAVID, Florida, Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving slowly in our part of the field. I and Bro. C. I. Carpenter have been spending our time for the past month in new fields; mostly in places where the gospel has not been preached by our people. In Escambia County, Florida, we have been traveling, preaching publicly and privately, as the way would open for us. To be sure we cannot preach as many sermons and baptize as many in a new field as we can where the work is already thoroughly established; no more than one can plow as much ground on new land in the same length of time, as he can on old land. For the reason there are too many stumps, roots, and hangs. And some places we can hardly get a plow in at all. But as we are not running a race with anyone to see who can preach the largest number of discourses, or baptize the largest number of people during the year, we are willing to work as we can, when we can see evidence here and there that our work is accepted of the Lord. We are laboring to get the work permanently established among people who have not heard the true gospel.

At Brent, near Pensacola, where we preached in a widow lady's house in which she and her two stepdaughters dwell, she and one of the daughters gave their hands for baptism. This seemed to vex some of the good Methodist people, and they said they would take all their work away from them, and in this way compel them to move out of the community, as they had been doing washing and such other work as they could get to do for a living. They also got up a petition to prevent us from preaching in the community, although the two that gave their names for baptism were members of the Baptist and not the M. E. Church. They have not been baptized yet, but will sometime in the future. Don't know whether they will succeed in removing us or not. Can tell later on.

We also visited a family who have lately been baptized by the elders of the Utah Church who were formerly Methodists and a nice family of people. They are now investigating the claims of the Reorganization.

So if all goes well we hope to be able to report some baptisms in this county ere long. There is not a branch in the county and only a few members scattered here and there. We often go without food from morn till night trying to publish the gospel of peace among the people.

We did not attend the debate between Bro. Erwin and Elder Haynes, as we were some thirty or forty miles away doing work in a new field. From all reports we think some good was accomplished. But I was sorry to see Bro. Erwin's statement in his letter in Herald touching the advice given by the President of the church to the elders in regard to debating with Clark Braden. I disagree with the brother. I don't think that advice a mistake at all. I think it wise and good. If the church he stands identified with will not sustain him we cannot afford to waste time with him; for we do not debate against the man, but against the church. So Elder Haynes' denying the books of his church does not cut any figure. For those books are recommended and sustained by the church.

A few words to the saints and friends in our part of the mission. There is a move on foot to raise funds for the purpose of purchasing a tent. This fund has been started by Bro. A. J. Vickery at Gordon, Alabama. A few words in the way of explanation may not be amiss. It is almost impossible to get openings in towns and cities in this country. There is the whole State of Georgia with many towns, and cities, and villages. And not a sermon has been preached in them. And some very important towns in Florida where a tent could be used. With a tent, two horses, and a wagon, two men can do as much work as four can in the old way of tramping, especially in new fields. We have one horse and buggy to start with, and we might exchange the buggy for a wagon, if thought best. So we would only need one horse, harness, and tent.

"But" says one, "there will be two horses to feed, and then you would have to buy food for yourselves sometimes." True, but remember we would travel in the wagon and carry the tent which would save railroad fare, which is no little item in Florida, as the fare runs from four to six cents per mile and only one third off when we can get permits, and a number of the roads will give no permits unless we have congregations on their lines. Then we would also save freight on tent from place to place. Then we could sleep in the wagon or tent, and be at home anywhere. One hundred dollars will fit us up pretty well. One hundred members giving one dollar apiece will raise it, or fifty giving two dollars apiece. Let's have a tent, and let's have it by next April, ready for operation. Send your money to Bro. S. D. Allen, Milton, Florida, president of district. Then at the district conference in October appoint a committee to solicit funds and purchase the tent. Let us not be too far behind in anything; but along in the front ranks. Remember this is not to interfere with the tithe and offering fund; but is a separate fund altogether for our part of the mission. Let us do something and show that we are alive.

In gospel bonds,

D. E. TUCKER.

COOK'S POINT, Texas, Aug. 2.

Editors Herald:—I have not been still in the Lord's vineyard; I am doing what I can to forward the good cause. We have just closed a good meeting near Hearne, Robertson County; two additions by baptism, others near the kingdom. Have preached at many places one and two days, to small congregations but good interest.

I have an appointment to meet two Utah elders in Lee County next Saturday. We will have a debate if they will debate, and if not I intend to show them up in their true colors. They don't commit themselves upon their abominable doctrines, but just preach the first principles, as a rule. I have one of their epitomes of faith, and there is nothing said in it upon the marriage subject at all, nor any other of their abominable doctrines. I have never met any of them up to this time, but I intend to give them a good chance. I intend to uncover them before the people. We have had to suffer lots of persecution on their account, so we will make it hot for them in Texas, you may be sure.

I will say in conclusion, I aim to be in Falls County about the middle of this month to hold a series of meetings at the Taylor schoolhouse, near Marlin; then to Corryell County, near Pidcock, to preach for a week or two.

Yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

Island of Raroia, Tuamotu Group,
Oceanica, June 18.

Editors Herald:—Perhaps a few lines from the far Paumotus may be appreciated by your readers, even from so poor a narrator as I.

We left Hikueru which had been our field of labor for nearly six months, in February, and after short calls at two or three islands reached Papeete. (I speak of myself and wife, as Bro. and Sr. Burton remained in Kaukura.) I was sent to Papeete to interview a lawyer on the vexed question of marriage and divorce which so troubles the Paumotuan people. After a three weeks' stay in Papeete we returned to Kaukura to attend the conference. As full minutes of conference have already been sent to the Herald, I will say nothing more about it, except that the work of secretary combined with a heavy cold was too much for my wife and placed her on the sick list for a week or so. For that reason we were not able to get to our field at once.

We spent a pleasant two weeks with the Arutua branch while giving her a chance to regain a little strength before the long trip to the upper division, our station again for this year. We went over to Apataki to wait for a vessel, remaining there a week. While there I performed the ceremony at a triple wedding, and afterward baptized one of the grooms, a promising young man, formerly of the Catholic persuasion. He was the only non-member of the six "interested" parties. We left Apataki May 12 in a small schooner, bound for the upper islands. Called at Niau a few hours, thence to Fakarava, tossed by angry waves, soaked in a rain squall, and attended by that "Job's comforter,"—sea-sickness; that is, Mrs. Case and Cicely were. The schooner was about half full of "bufaa," cabin and all, and my wife could not go below at all, the smell was so offensive. So she remained on deck, alternately baking in a tropical sun, splashed by high waves, or dampened by a rain-squall. Those to whom the picture is attractive are quite welcome to a free trial trip.

We called at Fakarava and found the mail was not in, so waited a week for it. Our branch there is very small, but they seem faithful, and I had the privilege of adding two to their number by baptism.

From Fakarava to Hikueru was the hardest part of our trip. We were out seven days,—days of hardship indeed they were. The wind was strong and the sea very high all the time, great waves often breaking and dashing bucketfuls of water over the deck. It was with thankful hearts we saw the land of Hikueru, and on Friday night we were once more domiciled in the little niau house we occupied so long. But our rest was not to last long. Two ships were "laying off and on" at Hikueru, and one of them, we were informed, was going to the island we desired to visit. After an interview with the captain, I transferred our luggage direct from the "Hitinui" to the "Tuamotu," and Sunday afternoon we were off again, for Taenga we supposed, but found out later, for Raroia, where we landed bag and baggage next day. We had intended to visit this island later on, but "all's well that ends well," and we are here and warmly welcomed by the branch.

Since coming here I have preached five times a week and spent many hours in conversation that is almost as wearing on the voice as preaching, for the whole congregation follows me home from the church and continues the subject of the sermon until bedtime arrives. I have enjoyed unusual liberty in presenting the word to these people in their own tongue. The interest is excellent, many outsiders attending.

Some Protestants and Catholics have also joined with our people in the Sabbath school work which Mrs. Case has set in order. She is teaching them preparatory to the work of our next convention and entertainment in Takaraoa.

We need more laborers, and anxiously await the conference news, hoping that some will "come over and help us."

Ever praying for Zion's welfare,

Your brother and collaborer,

HUBERT CASE.

PERSIA, Iowa, Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—In your issue for August 4, appears a communication from Elder J. R. Lambert, in which he says:—

"My attention to and decision on some five or six prospective debates have been demanded since the adjournment of conference. Among the rest our former brother and minister, D. H. Bays, (now of Persia, Iowa,) comes to the front, and is willing to tear down, if he can, that which for many years he sought to build up."

In the first place, I wish to be neither misrepresented nor misunderstood by my former brethren and friends. Since my withdrawal from the church five years ago, I can very truthfully say I have evinced little desire or disposition "to tear down" whatever of good either myself or others have sought to build up. Had I been seeking to "tear down" the work of others, let me assure you that opportunities to make the effort have by no means been wanting. But instead of this I have uniformly endeavored to quietly attend to my own business without interfering with that of others.

No man has ever heard me assail my former brethren of the ministry. For most of these former colaborers I entertain sentiments of high esteem, as some of those who, at my request, have called on me, will, I think, willingly testify.

When asked to do so, the reasons for my course have been given, but always in a manner deferential to the feelings and views of others, and this I shall continue to do. While I have decided opinions on most questions to which I have given mature reflection, yet I have no quarrel with those who may choose to differ with me.

Continuing, Elder Lambert says: "I have received no propositions from him, though he was under the impression that propositions prepared by himself had been sent to me by Bro. Joseph Seddon, of Persia."

When talking with Elder M. T. Brown, of this place, (the gentleman who had been challenged,) former pastor of the M. E. Church here, Joseph Seddon, the president of the branch, informed Elder Brown that nothing could be done about the debate until propositions should be submitted to Elder Lambert. Accordingly Elder Brown informed me of the fact and I wrote three propositions which were placed in Bro. Seddon's hands for transmission to Elder Lambert. Elder Seddon repeatedly informed me that he had sent the propositions, but had heard nothing from them.

After waiting some two months or more, I wrote Elder Lambert to inquire about the matter, who promptly informed me that he had received no propositions nor nothing concerning them. Here I let the matter rest. Several weeks later I received a letter from Elder H. O. Smith, of Woodbine, Iowa, asking me to forward such propositions as I wished to discuss, which I accordingly did, changing the second one to suit the changed conditions. In his reply H. O. Smith gravely informed me that he had in his possession "two sets of propositions."

Query: How came the propositions submitted to Joseph Seddon, and supposed to have been lost, to fall at this particular juncture, into the hands of Hyrum O. Smith? Who will answer?

After charging me with undue eagerness to get myself before the public as a debater "with us as a people," he very gracefully (?) declined to have anything further to do with the matter, unless I should "urge" the discussion; and this, under the circumstances, I am under no obligation to do.

Query No. 2: How many of the "five or six prospective debates" have been declined, as has been the one now under consideration?

Relative to proposed discussion of which Elder Lambert speaks, I here repeat what I have before affirmed that it is not one of my seeking, nor is it one from which I shall shrink. I am of the same opinion now that I was while defending the doctrines taught by Latter Day Saints; namely: that the truth can lose nothing from careful investigation.

And now a word concerning Elder Lambert's queries:—

"Query No. 1. Should Elder Bays engage in forensic contest with the Latter Day Saints, is he likely to secure a more signal victory than he ever secured before when defending their faith and doctrine? I mean, of course, that his own testimony, as well as the testimony of others concerning the character of his efforts of the past, when affirming our faith and denying somebody else's, was correct and true?"

Answer: In my former efforts in defense of the faith of the saints, I fearlessly defended what I believed to be true, and if success crowned my feeble efforts, it was largely due to the fact that I tried to inform myself upon the issues to be discussed. In my future efforts in the forensic arena I shall as vigorously assail what I believe to be error, regardless of what my opinions in the past may have been. The truth and the truth only is that for which I wish to contend.

As to whether "a more signal victory" shall be achieved in such efforts, must necessarily depend upon the tenability—the logical and scriptural soundness of the positions assumed. I shall disdain in the future, as I have ever done in the past, to descend to unfair or doubtful methods in order to maintain my ground. I can no more oppose what I believe than I can defend what my conscience does not approve.

"Query No. 2. According to the testimony of the witnesses just alluded to, did Elder Bays ever lose a battle that was fought on fairly-worded propositions; that is, when he was defending the faith of the Latter Day Saints?"

Answer: In the estimation of Latter Day Saints, and some others, No. In the estimation of many others, and possibly a few Latter Day Saints, Yes.

I believe the above answers are about as nearly correct as it is possible for me to make them.

In conclusion permit me to say that in my later investigations of the doctrines and dogmas of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, I have discovered what to me, at least, seem fundamental errors—errors which render the remarkable and unique claims of Latter Day Saints absolutely untenable. Should I ever engage in a discussion of the claims of the church with any of my former brethren, I wish to pledge myself in advance to make a fair square fight on the merit of the questions discussed, and never to resort to the questionable methods with which we are all more or less familiar. If I cannot do this,—if I cannot by fair argument of "fairly-worded propositions" sustain my positions,—I shall hope to be manly enough publicly to step "down and out."

With sentiments of high esteem, and a desire for the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, I have the pleasure to be,
Very sincerely yours,

D. H. BAYS.

CLIFFORD, N. Dak., Aug. 11.

Editors Herald:—We are still battling for the truth. Bro. Swensen has delivered a few timely discourses here, and passed on to Walsh County, accompanied by the writer. After three weeks pleasant labor together, we had the satisfaction of baptizing three. After which the lone missionary of two States started West to the Turtle mountain country, and the "farmer" with a sad heart to his wheat fields.

We need a tent badly for this field. Let us try, brethren of North and South Dakota, to raise the money this fall. I will guarantee to raise one fourth of the amount at this place. Bro. Thomas Leitch, Bishop's agent at this place, will receipt for all amounts sent to him.

Yours for success,

WM. SPARLING.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—Last Wednesday evening I had the pleasure of listening to a fine sermon by Bro. A. C. Barmore at a hall on Market Street, this city—known as the "Holms Mission." His subject was the "kingdom of God," which he handled in a logical and clear manner. The opportunity is one that has been sought for some time, and was finally obtained through the effort of Bro. J. A. Anthony, who, when he thinks he is right, "never lets go." I think the effort will result in good to the cause.

They seem to be a people who desire to learn the truth,—they so state. I noticed two of them at our forenoon service when I spoke, and tried to show the necessity of obeying Christ to secure salvation in the celestial glory. I noticed the two women nodding their heads at a number of things said. We are going to try a tent here for a short time. I have always thought we ought to do more in this large city.

In hope,

CHAS. A. PARKIN.

TEMPLE, Ohio, August 16.

Editors Herald:—Bro. G. T. Griffiths delivered a very interesting discourse here yesterday morning. I followed in the evening with a short talk while it stormed without. Heavy rains the last few days. Bro. Griffiths left this morning for an extended tour in his mission. Bro. F. C. Smith is holding forth at Ashmont and Bro. Bronson has joined the tent forces at Pittsburg.

Success is attending our reunion in Massachusetts, as you will see by the inclosed. Bro. I. M. Smith is here attending his sick daughter, Gertie. She appears better to-day, but is having a tussle with typhoid fever. Bro. J. H. Lake left some day last week also for his mission field. Bro. J. Gillespie, wearing a smiling face, has just called in.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

BAY MINETTE, Ala., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—Since my debate at Berrydale I have been laboring in Florida and Alabama; Coldwater, Berrydale, and Baypoint, Calhoun, and near Flomaton, Alabama, in a new place. At Baypoint Bro. Edward Powell assisted me. He lives here. Bro. Powell is a faithful old soldier and has done much good in Santa Rosa County for the work. He still preaches at Milton trying to build up the church. We had a fine meeting at Baypoint; baptized one young lady that attended the debate.

The saints in Florida are all feeling well over the debate. O, how sad it was to leave them! I wish I could spend my days with such noble people. But the world must have the gospel, and I must help to do this work. I am here with Bro. T. C. Kelley, but will depart on to-day's train for Mississippi; plenty of work to do in these parts. My meetings have been good in every place recently.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

WEST FARMINGTON, Trumbull Co.,
Ohio, Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—If there is an elder that can come I trust he will do so, as I think there is a good opening for a branch here. Of course it is a new field to work in. I am only a member in the church, but I am trying my best to do right. I have two or three that say they are ready for baptism and I and my wife will make five in all, and there never has been any preaching here yet. I think I can get a schoolhouse. If not, my doors are open for preaching.

Your brother,

WESLEY O. FISHEL.

AN EVENING'S CONVERSATION.— NO. I.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

GEORGE.—Good evening, James. I hear you have joined the Reorganization. Is it true?

James.—Yes, George, it is true.

George.—I could hardly believe it when I heard it; but as you assure me of its truth, I can doubt it no longer. But I would very much like to hear from your own lips the reasons for making the change. I have known you all your life, and I never knew you to do anything rashly, nor without good and sufficient reasons. In this change, however, I am at a loss to understand where you can possibly get evidence sufficient to change your faith. I must confess, however, that the reasons and evidence must be strong to induce you to invite the hatred and calumny attached to the name of "Josephite," in this country.

James.—Well, George, I am very glad of this opportunity to tell you my reasons for making the change in faith which I have. It will, however, take some time to explain all the whys and wherefores. But I know of nothing that would give me greater pleasure than to spend the evening in conversation upon this subject. You know we are instructed by St. Peter "to be ready always to give a reason for the hope that is within us." I have made these reasons a careful study and am ready to give them if you will listen to me patiently.

George.—I am ready to listen to anything you have to say.

James.—Well, in the first place I will give you the causes which first started me on my investigation. You and I, George, have been more or less interested in missionary work ever since the beginning of this latter-day work. We followed its fortunes until the death of our beloved Prophet in 1844, and after his death followed Brigham Young to the valleys of the mountains. One of the things that has puzzled me in the past, and which was the direct cause of my investigation of the relative claims of the two churches, was that we have always been warned by our leaders here in the mountains to let the Josephites alone. You and I have talked of that many times when we have been together on our missions, and have wondered why these people had been especially singled out as objects of hatred, and why they were to be avoided in argument. We used to read and sing that good old hymn together:—

Imposture shrinks from light,
And dreads the curious eye;
But sacred truths the test invite,
They bid us search and try.

With understanding blessed,
Created to be free,
Our faith in man we dare not rest,
Subject to none but thee.

Lord, give the light we need;
With soundest knowledge fill;
From noxious error guard our creed,
From prejudice our will.

The truth thou shalt impart,
May we with firmness own;
Abhorring each evasive art,
And fearing thee alone.

I believed the statement made in the poem,

Imposture shrinks from light,
And dreads the curious eye;
While on the other hand,

But sacred truths the test invite;
They bid us search and try.

I could not see how I could pray the prayer breathed in the hymn,

From noxious error guard our creed,
From prejudice our will,

if I held any prejudice against anyone, and you know, George, that such instruction as we have received tends very much to prejudice us against those whom we term "Josephites;" and I could not see why it was, if these men were teaching such erroneous doctrine, that we should be constantly warned against them, and forbidden to meet them in discussion, either publicly or privately. I see you have the Book of Doctrine and Covenants in your hand. I think by the appearance it is one of the late editions. Will you please turn to section 71, verses 5 to 10. I am going to ask you to read the passages I quote, from your own book. You know how we have accused these Josephites of misquoting the books, and reading from them something that was not there, so I will ask you to read the passages indicated.

George reads:—

Now, behold this is wisdom; whoso readeth, let him understand and receive also; for unto him that receiveth it shall be given more abundantly, even power; wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful, their shame shall be made manifest, wherefore, let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord. Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you, there is no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; and if any man lift up his voice against you he shall be confounded in mine own due time.

James.—Now if you will take this Bible and turn to Isaiah first chapter, eighteenth verse, and read what you find there.

George reads again:—

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

James.—Now read Isaiah 41: 21, and 54: 17.

George reads:—

Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.

No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.

James.—You can readily see from these quotations that the poet was right. The Scripture does bid us search and try. Christ thought this last quotation was worthy to be given to the Nephites, and in his teachings on this continent quotes it. Of course you and I know that it has been the rule from the time they came to these mountains to avoid the Josephites as a church; but no public announcement of the kind was ever made until the late declaration made over the signatures of Presidents Woodruff, Cannon, and Smith, as found in Deseret Daily News of June 1, 1894. Of course they profess to think that these Josephites were beneath their notice, and only desired notoriety; but I could not help but contrast the declaration with the passages before quoted, and then when I read the bold challenges made by these Josephites, calling upon those who opposed them, and demanding that they meet them both in public and in private, I could not avoid the conclusion that they at least believed that they were right, and that their position was defensible. So began my investigations, which have resulted in the changing of my faith in some respects at least.

George.—I, too, have been somewhat troubled by this; but I had such confidence in those in authority, that I was sure that they had good reasons for thus dealing with these people, and did not take the pains to study the matter deeply; but I knew it was not as it used to be in the days of the martyred prophet. Then we were taught to fear none, and these men who now counseled to shun debate were bold in defending the cause then, as witness the debates that frequently took place in those early days.

James.—One of the greatest mistakes we made, George, was the utmost confidence we put in our leaders; not that I would counsel a mistrust in those who are over us in authority in the church, but we must not make the mistake that because a man is high in authority that he is infallible. He must be governed by the law and word of God as much as the lay member. Isaiah says:—

To the law and the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.—Isaiah 8:20.

The Inspired Translation of the Bible speaks very plainly on this point. I suppose you know what this Inspired Translation is? If not, please turn to your Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 42:56-58, where it speaks of it.

George reads:—

Thou shalt ask, and my Scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety; and it is expedient that thou shouldst hold thy peace concerning them, and not teach them until ye have received them in full. And I give unto you a commandment that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people.

James.—You will find in the footnote at the bottom of the page that the compiler of your book says that this is the Inspired Translation that is referred to here. I want you now to notice the prophetic statement made. "They shall be preserved in safety," and "They shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people." In the providence of God, those whom we have been taught to deridingly call "Josephites," have been fulfilling this important prediction. To me, since I have been investigating these matters, it has become one of the most precious of books, and has given me much light upon important questions. In that book, as I said before, I find much enlightenment upon the matter of our relation to those over us in authority. One of the evils of the Jewish nation was their readiness to accept the saying of the Rabbis in preference to the written law or word. Forgetting that the Rabbis were as much bound to teach according to the law as the private member of the nation was to accept their teachings. Much instruction upon certain parts of the Savior's teaching in Mark, ninth chapter, is given in this Inspired Translation. Where the Savior says, as given in King James' Translation:—

And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell.

The Inspired Translation renders it:—

Therefore if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; or if thy brother offend thee and confess not and forsake not, he shall be cut off. It is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands, to go into hell. For it is better for thee to enter into life without thy brother, than for thee and thy brother to be cast into hell.

The verse rendered in King James thus:—

And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off, etc.

The Inspired renders it:—

And again, if thy foot offend thee, cut it off; for he that is thy standard, by whom thou walkest, if he become a transgressor, he shall be cut off. . . . Therefore, let every man stand or fall, by himself, and not for another, or not trusting another.

King James also gives another passage:—

And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, etc.

But the Inspired gives it thus:—

And if thine eye which seeth for thee, him that is appointed to watch over thee to show thee light, become a transgressor and offend thee, pluck him out.

One of the gravest evils, or at least that which has been fraught with the gravest results, has been our acceptance of the teachings of our leaders without question. I am confident had you and I, and for that matter all Latter Day Saints, been diligent in acquiring a thorough knowledge of God's word, it would have enabled us to escape much that has caused trouble and heart-aches in the past. And I have only this to regret, that I did not begin long ago to investigate these matters.

George.—Well, I must confess that I have received much light so far; but this only makes me eager to learn more, and you must pardon me if I ask you some questions on the positions you occupy. We have, as you know, been taught that the person entitled to the presidency of the church is the president of the Twelve Apostles; but if we accept the theory of the Josephites, we must look for a president from the seed of the prophet Joseph Smith, which looks to me as savoring too much of a monarchy.

James.—If you establish any theory of regular succession you might say that it savors of a monarchy in the same way. If the right of presidency belongs only to the president of the Twelve, then he has the absolute right and cannot be deposed. The theory of succession established here in Utah can only result in bringing old men into the presidency—men who have largely lost their vigor, and who have entered into their second childhood in mind and body; whereas the church needs men young and vigorous in body and mind to perform the work of the presidency. This God's plan furnishes in providing that the son shall succeed the father. The fact that God has provided this means of filling the place of the presidency does not argue that he has thereby established a monarchy. An absolute monarchy can exist only where one man's will becomes law, and that cannot become the rule in God's kingdom. We do not look to the man's words and enactments, but to the law that is behind it. If the rule had been made that the son was to succeed the father in office, and that his will should be supreme regardless of the written law of the church, then your objection would be valid; but the same law that makes it his right to preside provides that he shall exercise his power in righteousness and according to law, and if he violates the conditions, he loses his right. You will always find men who find fault with God's way of doing things; but I have yet to find a single instance where men have followed God's laws and yet it has worked disastrously to them. I am therefore safe in saying, that if this is God's law, that it is best for you and me to follow it and the men who put it in practice.

George.—But where do you find in God's law that the son shall follow in regular succession in the presidency?

James.—In answering that question I shall confine myself to the case we have under consideration; viz., the right of Joseph Smith's son to occupy the place of his father. I shall ask you to read the passages from your own book. Please read section 86:8-10 Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

George reads:—

Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God; therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained and must needs remain through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.

James.—You will notice here the Lord lays down the law of lineal priesthood for all time to come, or at least until the fulfillment of all things spoken by the prophets since the world began, and the only thing necessary for us is to determine to whom he was speaking. Because of the clause in the beginning of the section, "Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you my servants," some have concluded that the Lord was speaking to more than one, and as history does not inform us as to who is referred to here by the words, "My servants," therefore we cannot claim that he referred to any particular one. If you look at the revelation the second time, however, you will notice a qualifying clause following the words, "Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you."

The clause qualifying or explaining to whom the Lord was talking is, "with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers." In Lehi's blessing on his son Joseph, as found in Second Book of Nephi, Book of Mormon, you will find the lineage of Joseph Smith given; and that he has descended from Joseph of Egypt, and in consequence of the promises made to Joseph of Egypt, that Joseph Smith had the right to the priesthood. This is the only instance in the church literature, so far as I have discovered, where the right to the priesthood by lineage has been revealed to any individual in the church. The clause, then, qualifying the word "you," in the revelation, points directly to Joseph Smith as the one through whom the priesthood was to continue, until God's work should be accomplished that had been prophesied by all the Holy Prophets since the world began. But if you do not accept my reasoning upon this passage, I have another, and still stronger one if possible. Please read section 124:57, 58.

For this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him, and as I said unto Abraham concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, in thee and thy seed shall the kindred of the earth be blessed.

James.—It seems to me that nothing could be stronger than the words used there to show that the blessing of the prophet's priesthood was to continue with his posterity. It will not do to say either that it was just simply a commonplace position in the church that they were to occupy, for all will admit that the peculiar blessing belonging to Joseph Smith was his prophetic power; and the statement is that his blessing shall be put upon the head of his posterity after him. This is positive and conclusive; but I still have two more passages to introduce, so far as the prophetic declaration concerning Joseph Smith's seed is concerned. You will find the next one in section 110:12, Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

George reads:—

After this, Elias appeared, and committed the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham, saying in us, and our seed, all generations after us should be blessed.

James.—Now take this 5th volume of the Times and Seasons, and turn to page 395, and read what Joseph Smith says to John C. Calhoun of himself and posterity.

George reads again:—

While I have powers of body and mind; while water runs and grass grows; while virtue is lovely, and vice hateful; and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was, I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins.

James.—When I read all these statements concerning the seed of the prophet Joseph Smith, I said to myself, if we deny the claims of the Josephites, then these promises and prophecies are all failures; and yet I read in the Lord's preface to the Doctrine and Covenant these words:—

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

I was here brought directly face to face with the problem as to which to accept—men's word or God's word; and like Paul of old, I could only say, "Let God be true, though every man be found a liar."

George.—But are not all of God's promises given conditionally? Is it necessary to conclude because these promises were given, that therefore the son or sons of Joseph should inherit the priesthood of their father, but will it not be dependent entirely on the righteousness of their actions?

James.—Certainly. I have already stated that a person may lose a right even when that right be divinely given, if they transgress the conditions upon which the right is given. I was about to mention this when you spoke. I wish now you would take your Book of Doctrine and Covenants again, and turn to section 43, and read from the first to seventh verses inclusive.

George reads:—

O hearken ye elders of my church, and give an ear to the words which I shall speak unto you; for behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand. And this ye shall know assuredly that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken if he abide in me. But verily, verily, I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him, he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments; and this I give unto you that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

James.—You will notice that there are several points in the quotation.

1. That none shall be appointed except through Joseph Smith.

2. That the one appointed shall be appointed to teach the revelations that have already been given, and those that shall be given through Joseph Smith. This, says the Lord, shall be a law unto the church. Both of these conditions the oldest son of the prophet fulfills completely in every respect. I will quote his own testimony in regard to his appointment by his father to be his successor. The letter from which I quote was written to one J. B. Price, then of Goshen, Utah, now of Oakland, California; and is dated Plano, Illinois, May 18, 1869. It was written in answer to one written by Mr. Price, asking as to his knowledge and remembrance of this appointment. He says:—

To proceed at once to the subject matter of your letter, I can only answer. My father who was and is acknowledged as the proper one through whom the priesthood in its ramifications was conferred twice before his death in what might be called private assembly, pronounced the blessing of his priesthood on me,—once in Liberty Jail, Missouri, once in the Council Chamber at Nauvoo. Twice in public did he bear testimony to the people of the church that he had appointed me, by the spirit of his calling, to the work whereunto he was called,—once upon the stand at Nauvoo, once just before he departed for the jail at Carthage, the goal of his martyrdom on earth.—Saints' Advocate, vol. 6, p. 365.

This is his own testimony of his appointment and blessing, and it is corroborated by the testimony of James Whitehead, who claims he was present at the meeting in the Council Chamber at Nauvoo, referred to above. It is also further corroborated by the testimony of Lyman Wight, who always bore his testimony to the fact that he had his hands on the head of "Young Joseph," with his father, when the blessing was pronounced upon him. James Whitehead also bears testimony under oath in the recent Temple Lot suit, of the testimony borne by the martyr, of the appointment of his son, on the stand at Nauvoo. (Plain-tiff Abstract, p. 33.)

John H. Carter, of Provo, Utah, also bears the same testimony in the same suit on page 180, 181. He says:—

Joseph Smith came on the stand leading his son, young Joseph, and they sat him down on a bench at the prophet's right hand, and Joseph got up and began to preach and talk to the people, and the question he said was asked by somebody, "If Joseph Smith should be killed or die, who would be his successor?" and he turned around and said, pointing to his son, "There is the successor."

This I deemed sufficient to establish the claim made by the son of the prophet to divine appointment through his father, and when taken in connection with the revelation that you have just read, where God made it a law unto the church that none could be a true successor to Joseph Smith only as he himself should appoint, and the further specification was made that even though the prophetic power and right should be taken from him on account of transgression, yet he would in that event retain this power and right to appoint his own successor, it forms a chain of evidence and proof that is irresistible to the candid searcher for truth.

George.—But what of young Joseph's call to himself, and also his ordination to the high priesthood? You know we have always considered that there was something irregular about that.

James.—As to young Joseph's call to himself, I will give you his own language, as I find it in the letter to J. B. Price that I have before quoted from:—

The character of the call which I have received is that of the many which have been received by my compeers,—the revelation of Jesus Christ, by vision, and by dream, together with the voice of the Spirit. One of the chief, perhaps the chiefest, reason why I have made so little stir in regard to these things is, that I preferred, as I now do, that to those desirous of knowing in answer to their just and holy aspirations, God might bear the proper testimony, through his Spirit, to the calling of myself, in like manner as such testimony was borne to the calling of my father. All who have attempted to steady the ark of our hopes, since my father's departure, have done so by attaching the extremest importance to their call, regarding the godly walk, the upright walk, as requirements easily dispensed with, if so be they were called. I am fully persuaded that no call of God can sanctify a man who departs from God's law while he maintains that departure.

I quote at length this extract from the letter, because it contains several important statements that should be considered in judging as to the validity of anyone's call by God, and his approval after the call. The first statement is that his call was the same as others before him, that is by vision, by dream, and by voice of the Spirit. Surely Latter Day Saints ought not to object to that. The matter stands just in this way: As his father had been confronted by confusion among those who professed to believe in the message of Christ to men, and it became necessary to go to God for light, so the son was confronted with lo heres and lo theres, by those who professed to believe in his father's mission. He too, must go to God for light. He had been left a member of the church by his father, being baptized by him in Nauvoo just prior to his death; and as he grew to manhood he received manifestations from time to time, pointing to the work he had to do; and as delegation after delegation from the different factions came with solicitations for him to join with them, he was left no other alternative than to go to God for wisdom. In answer to the question "Shall I go to Utah?" came the answer no! And when the reason was asked, the answer came, as he was enveloped in a heavenly light brighter than the noon-day sun, "Because the light where you stand is greater than theirs."

Then again the question, "Where and with whom will my life labor lie? And just as distinctly came the answer, as in the former questions, "The Saints reorganizing at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, and other places, is the only organized portion of the church accepted by me. I have given them my Spirit, and will continue to do so while they remain humble and faithful." Unlike the answer given to the father only in the fact that the father had been told that none of the churches were right but the answer had the same effect upon those it condemned, as the answer to the father did. They were enraged at the son, as the churches in 1819 were enraged at the father. But as the father, he had seen a vision and heard a voice, and all the opposition possible could not make him believe otherwise; but his name was cast out as evil, and false reports were circulated about him. His motives were impugned, and every obstacle was placed in his way that was possible, and that, too, by those who should have been his best friends, professing as they did to being friends of Mormonism.

APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENTS.

To the Saints of Oklahoma Territory:—Please take notice that upon the recommendation of Bro. Geo. Montague, missionary in charge, and Bro. R. M. Maloney and W. S. Macrae and others of the Territory and missionary force, that Bro. S. J. Hinkle, of Stillwater, Oklahoma Territory, has been appointed Bishop's agent for the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for the said Territory, and is authorized to receive contributions and tithes and offerings of the saints for the use and benefit of the Reorganized Church and to aid the missionary force and poor in said Territory according to the law and usages of the gospel.

We hope and trust that the saints will remember the new agent and strengthen his hands with means so that the missionary work may be carried on in the Territory and the gospel of Christ sustained. Fully trusting that the Lord may bless and strengthen those who make an effort to do his will and keep his commandments, I am,

Very confidently in the truth yours,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

LAMONI, Iowa, August 18, 1897.

THE GENERAL REUNION.

Prepare for the General Reunion of the church which convenes at Woodbine, Iowa, September 3-13.

The committee has procured the services of Elders Joseph Smith, Alexander Smith, and E. L. Kelley, of Lamoni; Fred A. Smith, of Omaha, and T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, for the occasion, and many other speakers of similar talent will be in attendance.

Music under the charge of S. B. Kibler and James Pearsall will be furnished by the Woodbine choir, assisted by choirs of neighboring branches, and such orchestra as can be used to advantage.

Board and lodging will be furnished in private families at $2.50 to $3.00 per week, and board at boarding hall on grounds, at $3.00, with fifty cents per week additional for lodging. Those desiring board or board and lodging at the boarding hall will confer a favor by applying in advance to L. D. Butler, Woodbine, Iowa. Mr. Butler is the same party who had charge of the boarding hall last year, and you will be assured of the same good treatment that you received then. Those desiring board in private families apply to F. C. Oviatt, Woodbine, Iowa, chairman of the reception committee.

Hay, grain, and fuel will be furnished at minimum prices.

One and one third fare has been secured for all those coming by rail. The city council having generously conducted the water from the city water works, by means of underground pipes to the reunion grounds, has rendered the supply of fresh, cold water inexhaustible, and for both man and beast its convenience is most satisfactory.

Woodbine being located on the main line of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, between Chicago and Omaha, makes the place of easy access.

Wall tents can be rented 10 x 12, $2; 12 x 14, $2.50; 14 x 16, $3, with twenty-five cents added for setting tent up. Those wanting tents apply in advance to S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, Iowa.

To those in attendance at the general reunion last year, we offer no words of praise relating to the accommodations necessary to make a meeting of this kind pleasant and profitable. That all our accommodations were all that we advertised a year ago was vouched for in the practically unanimous expression that fixed the reunion at Woodbine again. The grounds, situated less than one fourth of a mile from the depot and business part of the city, are attractive and inviting. They are ample to accommodate all, and are covered with towering timber which furnishes an abundance of shade. For easy access, convenience in its various features and attractive surroundings, the Woodbine reunion grounds remain unsurpassed.

Special notice! In order to get the benefit of reduced railroad rates, we must have one hundred tickets purchased by the third day of the meeting, Sunday not included. Any ticket purchased between Tuesday, August 31, and Monday, September 6 inclusive, will be honored in making up the one hundred certificates, and no others. If you intend coming to the reunion by rail, purchase your ticket between the above dates.

33-2t Sec. Reunion Com.

A CONFESSION.

To All Whom It May Concern.—I hereby confess that I have rehearsed in different places in Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida, damaging stories, that had been told to me, against the character of Bro. W. J. Booker and also against Sister Josephine Shell, but I have found that there is not proof to corroborate these stories. I therefore ask them to forgive me this wrong and promise to refrain from doing so again in future, and wish to repair, as far as possible, any damage I may have done them. I ask also the forgiveness of any and all others who may have been offended. I did not originate these stories, but repeated them as told me by others, but I find there is not proof to sustain them.

J. D. ERWIN.

To All Whom It May Concern.—I hereby confess that I have unnecessarily repeated, in different places in Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida, damaging stories against Bro. G. T. Chute. I did not originate these stories, but repeated them as told me by others; but the evidence adducible is not sufficient to prove him guilty, according to the law. I therefore ask his pardon and that of any others whom I may have offended in this matter and promise to refrain from doing so again in future.

J. D. ERWIN.

Address, Mrs. M. E. Boline, Garland, Alabama. For references, address Elder J. G. Vickery, at the same place.

WOODBINE REUNION.

All those coming by rail will see when they get off train one or more of our reception committee, known by red badge.

For special Sunday school day we have chosen Nos. 38 and 115 from Winnowed Songs, so all schools or scholars can practice them and are wanted to help sing. Let us have many voices in the Sunday school song service. Also we have arranged for a number of orchestra pieces that are good.

The orders for tents and word from all points are, We are coming. We say, Come, and come praying God may be with us to the satisfaction of saints and the conversion of sinners. The grove is in fine condition.

DIED.

BUTLER.—Etta and Nettie Butler, twins, born February 2, 1897, died July 19, near Crescent, Iowa. T. W. Williams officiating at funeral.

BISHOP.—At Independence, Missouri, July 22, 1897, of Bright's disease, Elder Charles Albrecht Bishop, in the 70th year of his age. He was born in Thun, Canton of Berne, Switzerland, April 28, 1828, and married Miss Anna Wieland, who, with four boys and three girls, of the six boys and six girls born to them, remains to cherish his memory, and emulate his good qualities.

About the year 1855, Elder Seigrist, who was baptized by Hyrum Smith, the Martyr, was sent by direction of the Holy Spirit, to seek Bro. Bishop. Everything was made plain to him before he started, in a vision which he afterwards found true in all details—even to the house in an unfinished condition, and its location; but it required an argument lasting through one whole night and until two o'clock of another, before Bro. Bishop was convinced. Himself and wife were baptized, being the first to unite with the church in that country. Bro. Bishop was ordained an elder and immediately commenced preaching, and before the next year had baptized one hundred or more. In February, 1856, himself and family left for America, enroute to Utah. Circumstances led him to a town in New York, one hundred and eighty miles from New York City, where he was employed in a tannery, and amid much opposition preached the gospel until between two hundred and three hundred were baptized. Arriving in Utah subsequently, they passed through the endowments of that church, but realizing they had been deceived, they were baptized into the Reorganized Church; Sr. Bishop first, as a precautionary measure, and later, at Provo City, Utah, April 15, 1867, he was baptized by Elder J. W. Morgan, and confirmed by Elder Joseph S. Lee, and by him, on the same date was ordained an elder. They left their house and furniture in Salt Lake City and secretly made their escape, knowing well their fate should the Brighamites learn of their movements. They immediately went to Malad, Idaho, from which place Bro. Bishop led a party of saints to Stewartville, Missouri, and assisted in forming the first branch of the church in that section. Removing to St. Joseph, Missouri, he organized the first branch there, and became its first president. Later he returned West to Colorado and Oregon, and from there to Independence, some twelve years ago.

The experiences through which he passed in his gospel work would fill a large volume to relate. He loved the gospel, and would give his last coat if needed to further its interests. He was very firm and when once convinced of his duty in any direction, permitted nothing to stop him from its performance. He suffered much in his last illness, but fell peacefully asleep at the last in the hope of a triumphant resurrection at the coming of the Lord.

DAVIS.—On July 10, 1897, aged 2 years and 10 days, Cleo, son of John and Sr. Della Davis; born June 12, 1895, blessed December 29, 1895. Funeral sermon by Elder C. Scott, assisted by Elder E. B. Morgan, at Runnells, Iowa, July 11, 1897. A large audience present. A little bud of promise gone to mingle with the sweet little innocents who have gone on before. Sweetly he rests.

ELVIN.—Dr. Robert C. Elvin was born May 11, 1823, at Paisley, Scotland; he united with the church in 1841; was married March 15, 1845; and with his family came to America in 1849, first locating at St. Louis, Missouri, from there moved to Council Bluffs, Iowa, located in Cass County, Nebraska, March 27, 1856. In 1860 he took up his residence at Nebraska City, where he has since lived, except for a short time that he resided at Omaha. He has been identified with the Reorganized Church since February, 1866; was the first to preside over the church at Nebraska City, as a branch; was ordained an high priest at Plano, Illinois, April, 1873; died July 24, 1897, aged 74 years, 2 months, and 13 days. On the 27th his remain were escorted by the Order of Knights of Pythias, from his late residence on Eleventh Street, to the Latter Day Saints' church. When the procession reached Sixth Street the Masonic Order joined and led the procession to the church, where Elder J. W. Waldsmith preached the sermon to a full house of very attentive listeners, after which the Masonic order took charge of, and escorted the remains to Wyuka Cemetery, where they were deposited according to the formula of the fraternity. At the close the one officiating called on Elder Waldsmith to pronounce the benediction. Another of the pioneers has gone. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn their loss; two sons, Robert M., of Lamoni, and John; Elizabeth, and Mattie Bostrom, of Lincoln, Nebraska.

JOSLYN.—At her home in Greenbush, Alcona County, Michigan, July 1, 1897, Sr. Ida Myrtle Joslyn, aged 22 years, 7 months, 11 days. She was born at Tawas, Michigan, November 20, 1874; baptized May 29, 1892, by David Smith. She was a noble young woman and a good saint. She leaves a father, two brothers, three sisters, and a host of friends to mourn her departure. Funeral sermon by Elder David Smith, from Psalms 37: 34.

MONROE.—At Fairbury, Nebraska, July 14, 1897, Sr. Jeanette Monroe, aged 49 years. She was highly respected and loved by all who knew her. She united with the church when a girl and lived a consistent life, and died in the faith. She leaves a husband, mother, two grown sons, brothers and sisters, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. In the absence of Elder A. J. Myers the funeral service was conducted by Rev. Randall, pastor of the M. E. church, at Fairbury. Her funeral sermon will be preached at the saints' church at Fairbury, August 1, 1897, by Elder A. J. Myers.

WILLIAMS.—At Keb, Iowa, July 11, 1897, Gland Rodger, son of Bro. Richard and Sr. Mary Ann Williams. He was born January 30, 1896; was blessed May 17, 1896, under the hands of Elders F. M. Weld and J. R. Evans. His age was 1 year, 5 months, 11 days. Funeral sermon by John Brennan to an attentive audience.

SMITH.—At Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, July 21, 1897, Bro. Hyrum Smith. He was born February 27, 1844; he became a member of the Reorganized Church about 1875, and remained strong in the faith till his death. Funeral services conducted by Elder Daniel Hougas at the residence of deceased. He had no family.

MCCARTY.—Carl Frederick, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Louis Mc Carty, of Holden, Missouri, July 23, 1897, aged 1 year, 7 months, and 14 days. Sermon by Elder H. Resch.

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

NEW REVISED EDITION.

The manuscript of this edition was carefully compared with the original authorized edition of 1835, which was adopted by a General Assembly of the church at Kirtland, and known as the Kirtland edition. Some typographical errors that crept into and passed through later editions have been corrected, and some omissions supplied.

The revelation on the late Civil War, the "Minutes of the General Assembly" of 1835, the minutes of the "Joint Council" of 1894, and the revelations given to the Reorganized Church to date, are all included in the volume. The "Lectures on Faith" are omitted, but may be published later in pamphlet form, or for those who may want them.

The concordance has been revised and enlarged, greatly aiding study and general use of the book. The concordance, and lists of names of persons and places mentioned in the revelations, are included in the volume.

Ready reference to the book is greatly facilitated by the substitution of figures for the old style Roman letters in section and page headings. The figures can be read at a glance.

This edition is issued from new brevier type.

$1.50. THE SAINTS' HERALD REDUCED IN PRICE. $1.50.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD was fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

IS THE OLD-TESTAMENT CANON AUTHORITATIVE?

WAS the Old Testament, as we now have it, a complete and authoritative collection of sacred writings in the days of Christ? On this question hang a number of arguments that have been made in reply to the higher critics. In the Presbyterian Quarterly (April), in the leading article, Rev. William W. Elwang, of Orlando, Florida, answers the question negatively, and, while defending the present canon on other grounds, he denies emphatically that there is any historic evidence such as the defenders of the Old Testament canon have generally claimed. He begins his article with a quotation from "Wise old Richard Hooker" on the danger of "attributing unto the Scripture more than it can have," which, Mr. Elwang thinks, has been "the deep and continuous error of Christian apologetics." He also apologizes in advance for the necessarily negative character of his article, which character, however, he claims, is "in strictest harmony with present known historical truth." Then he continues:—

"The function of Scripture as the vehicle of revelation demands a canon of Scripture. That is to say, it seems logical to expect that if God has a message for mankind in what we term the Bible, it is of vital importance that there should be no dubiety as to the several documents that ought to be included in the Bible. But, once more demonstrating the fond fallacy of a priori reasoning about 'the ways of God to men,' we find that among the many 'interesting questions concerning the Scriptures that are not yet answered,' none is more interesting or more important than this very question of what, since the days of Irenæus, has been called the canon of Scripture. The whole subject of the canon—its origin, its development, its integrity and authority—is still enveloped in a haze of doubt, even in the minds of scholars. Is it, perhaps, too much to say that not one minister in ten, even the Presbyterian Church, could give an approximately intelligent account of what is really known about it? Why were precisely the books with which we are now acquainted included in the sacred list, while other respectable candidates for this signal distinction were rejected? Was each individual book now included in the list divinely authenticated as inspired, with a view to its adoption by the church? If so, what was the form of such authentication? And upon the completion of the list, did that list itself receive inspired sanction? If so, when and how? It is somewhat trite to suggest that if these and similar questions 'could be answered in a satisfactory way it it would greatly simplify Christian apologetics and supersede much hostile criticism.' Just so. But can they, in the light of modern historical research, be answered in a satisfactory way? The answer, even though it seem a dangerous surrender, must be an emphatic No. The hard fact is that the whole history of the origin and formation of what we now call the canon is distinctly disappointing. This is true of the Old and New Testaments alike. Both the Jewish and Christian churches for centuries had their antilegomena, or controverted books, as over against the homologomena, or universally accepted ones. Several of the former received a final classification with the latter only after generations had discussed their claims."

The views of those who do not admit the necessity of a negative answer, as set forth by Dr. J. B. Shearer in the same magazine (April, 1893), are referred to by the present writer. Their argument is based on the claim that Christ and his apostles "found the canon in existence as an authorized canon" accepted by "the Jews the world over" as complete and authoritative; and the further claim that there is no denying that this canon was "settled during the intermediate period between Malachi and Christ" by the members of the Great Synagogue who were sometimes prophets and high priests, assisted by some unheard-of oracle or miracle, and who collected the twenty-four books of the Old Testament and authoritatively closed the list against all further additions.

This "traditional theory of the canon" is assailed by Rev. Mr. Elwang as follows:—

"But for the existence of this synagogue there is absolutely no historical evidence whatever. It is not once mentioned either by Philo or Josephus, or any one of the many apocryphal or pseudepigraphical writers before the second century A. D. The wide and varied extent of the writings of these men makes it inconceivable that they should have omitted all mention of such a body had it existed and performed so important a function as the settlement of the limits of that sacred literature upon which the Jewish religion and Jewish life depended. The writers of the New Testament, as is well known, give no intimation that they ever heard of such a venerable and important body. 'There is no evidence from any literary source whatever nearer to the historical period to which the Great Synagogue is assigned than "Pirke Aboth," the well-known Mishnic treatise of the third century A. D., and all the testimony of "Pirke Aboth" amounts to is this: that in the chain of tradition from Moses to the scribes of the second century B. C., the Great Synagogue intervened between the prophets and "the Pairs" of Scribes, and that Simon the Just ranked as its last surviving member.' On the other hand, Kuenen, following Krochmal's lead concerning the identity of the Great Synagogue with the Great Convocation of Nehemiah 8: 10, has conclusively proved that the former is simply a mirage of the latter seen by Jewish writers of the earlier Christian centuries, writers whose views of the history of their people were both inverted and perverted."

But even these writers, we are told, in their references to the Great Synagogue, do not assert anywhere that it fixed the limits of the Old Testament canon once for all. That it did so was a bold invention of Elias Levita, a Jewish scholar of the sixteenth century, driven hard by the exigencies of controversy. Rev. Mr. Elwang proceeds to quote from 1 Maccabees, Zechariah, Malachi, Josephus, Jerome, Augustine, and others, to show that in the period between Malachi and Christ the direct inspiration of God had ceased among the Jews, and therefore there could have been no inspired definition of the canon. Nor did the Jews, the world over, Rev. Mr. Elwang asserts, at the time of Christ accept the present canon as complete and authoritative. We quote again:—

"It is well known that we are not in possession of anything like a 'complete and authoritative' list of the sacred books of either before or during the time of Christ. 'The nearest approach to a catalogue is the panegyric on the famous men of Israel in Ecclesiasticus,' or, according to the LXX., The Wisdom of Jesus, the Son of Sirach. 'The writer takes up the Pentateuch, Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve minor prophets in order. He also mentions the Psalms of David, and the songs, proverbs, and parables of Solomon. Daniel and Esther are passed over in silence, and Nehemiah is mentioned without Ezra.' Philo, contemporary with the apostles, and a voluminous writer, omits all mention of Ruth, Chronicles, Esther, Nehemiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Ecclesiastes, the Song, and Lamentations. The New Testament also fails us on this important point. Its writers employ a number of general terms for the Old, such as law, prophets, law and prophets, and sacred writings; and Jesus refers on one occasion to 'the law, the prophets, and the Psalms'; but the several attempts that have been made to find in these references a completed technical threefold division of the books have been barren. Granted that such a technical division existed, who can define the contents and limit of each separate division? Was it ever defined? It is very significant that no New-Testament writer ever builds a doctrine on, or even quotes from, a single book which was in dispute at that time."

The first historical attempt to fix the canon was made by the so-called Synod of Jamnia in 90 A. D., which acted by majority vote, with acts of violence toward dissenters, and whose decision did not allay the controversy. Nevertheless, the writer upholds the doctrine of inspiration of the Old Testament, and his grounds for doing so are "with the greatest brevity" thus set forth:—

"There is, first, by way of preliminary assurance, the general result of historical criticism to the genuineness and authenticity of the Bible as a whole, as well as the satisfactory issue of the special investigations into the merits of certain parts of it, such as the genuineness of the fourth Gospel. Recent 'destructive criticism' has not been able to destroy the 'impregnable rock of Holy Scripture,' but has done invaluable service in removing from it the accumulated and rank moss of centuries of human tradition.

"There is, second, as subsidiary proof, looking at the Bible as a whole, the argument from its organic unity, in spite of its diversity of authorship and the origin of the several parts at centuries of time and continents of space removed from each other. The Bible is a continuous whole, a completed design, its perfectly coordinated parts supplied by workmen often ignorant of their mutual labors. This is an old and now unappreciated, but, when understood, most convincing suggestion.

"There is, third, as further evidence, the twofold witness of the church and history throughout the world and centuries, back to the most primitive times, the former always recognizing the Bible which we now have as divine, and testifying to its satisfaction of the religious feelings and deepest needs of mankind; the other unequivocally affirming its uniform and unmatched influence for good upon the individual and society.

"There is, fourthly and conclusively, the testimony of the Spirit of God to the intelligence and heart of the individual believer and to the mind of the organized body of believers, in all countries and ages, removing doubts, illuminating saving truth, and assuring the soul and the church of their possession of the 'word of God' written."—Literary Digest.

INCREASE OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 17.—The report of the United States Commissioner of Education, Dr. William T. Harris, for the year ended July 1, 1896, has just been completed. It brings the educational progress of the country up to that date, and embraces the latest statistics the bureau has gathered. The report shows a total enrollment in that year in the schools and colleges, both public and private, of 15,997,197 pupils. This was an increase of 308,575. The number in public institutions was 14,465,371, and in private institutions, 1,531,826. In addition to all these there were 418,000 pupils in the various special schools and institutions, including business colleges, music conservatories, Indian, and reform schools, making the grand total enrollment for the whole country 16,415,197.

The report says the 178 schools for secondary and higher education of the colored race had slightly over 40,000 students enrolled, an increase of over 3,000 for the year. Then schools increased by 16 in number, mostly high schools. There were 25,092 pupils in the elementary grades, 13,563 in the secondary grades, and 1,455 in the collegiate departments. There were 4,672 colored students studying for teachers. Industrial training is a prominent feature in nearly all of these schools.—Sel.

The new census of Russia gives a total population of 129,211,113, as compared with 74,000,000 in 1859. Much of the increase is due to the acquisition of territory in Asia. Only three cities in the empire—St. Petersburg, Moscow, and Warsaw—have a population of more than 500,000. The rapidity of growth of the empire's population is seen by the following reports in census years: 1722, 14,000,000; 1742, 16,000,000; 1762, 19,000,000; 1782, 28,000,000; 1796, 30,000,000; 1812, 41,000,000; 1815, 45,000,000; 1835, 60,000,000; 1851, 68,000,000; and 1859, 74,000,000. There has been no census in Russia since the last-named year until 1897, which gives over 129,000,000. The population in round numbers by provinces is about as follows: European Russia, 99,000,000; Poland, 9,000,000; Finland, 2,000,000; Caucasus, 8,000,000; central Asia, 6,000,000; Siberia, 5,000,000. The males and females are about equal in number. The total area of Russia is 8,660,282 square miles.

A WORD IN A FIT PLACE.

A COPY of the Armory, published at Boston, Massachusetts, by H. L. Hastings, for August, has been sent us by some friend of the cause. In it is an article from Israel's Messiah, entitled, "A Refuge for Persecuted Jews." From this article we quote the following:—

Rabbi Isaac Leaser, of Philadelphia, the translator of the Hebrew Bible, says that the prophecy in the eighteenth chapter of the prophet Isaiah, "Ho! to the land with spreading wings, which is beyond the rivers of Cush, that sendeth on the sea ambassadors, and in vessels of gomeh messengers over the face of the waters," is a prophecy relating to America. Standing where the prophet stood, and looking "beyond the rivers of Cush," or Ethiopia, the first land we strike is the western world. And this land,—the very name of which was then unknown,—with its emblem, the eagle with "spreading wings," whose ambassadors are all sent by sea, in the swiftest ships, has opened to the sons of Israel such a refuge as no other land afforded for 1700 years. Into this land the teeming multitudes of earth have poured at a rate unexampled in history; and in this land was first enunciated the grand doctrine that all men were created free and equal; and that Jews as well as Gentiles had "a right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Some other nations have since ceased to persecute the Jews, but the statute-books of the United States of America have never been stained with laws against the exiled sons of Israel; and here for the first time since their dispersion, was an asylum opened where the Jewish wanderer could find rest, justice, and right.

THE FORCE AND VALUE OF ORDINATION.

It has been claimed by some that Joseph Smith, before his death, ordained certain men to office, and conferred upon them extraordinary powers. Among these men was Alpheus Cutler, at one time connected with the Temple Building Committee, in building the temple at Nauvoo. It is claimed that Joseph Smith ordained this man and some others, names not given by our informant, to all the powers and authority he himself held; all the difference between "Father Cutler's" ordination and that of the Twelve being that Father Cutler's was to be in force "from that very hour upon the whole world."

We have never seen any authentic account of the ordination of Alpheus Cutler and the men referred to; but are quite sure that no higher authority was conferred upon them than is contained in the office of high priest. It is a matter of report that just prior to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, a council of which the Presidency formed a part, decided to divide the United States and adjacent territory into districts by metes and bounds, and send a high priest into each, to take active oversight of the work in that district; which officer was to take his family with him, establish headquarters, and push the work of the gospel from that center. We have been informed that Father Cutler was one of these.

It is further stated, so we are informed, that it is claimed that the Twelve and Seven, who are designated as the "seven grand pillars of the church," were all ordained to "all the powers and authority which Joseph himself held, only Alpheus Cutler's was to be in force from that hour. Yet he must wait till Joseph was dead, and all the others of the seven were dead, or apostatized before he could begin his work."

There is no record of any such ordination, or any such instruction. The statement is upon its face absurd and carries with it its own refutation. It is true that the Twelve and the seven, if there were seven, when ordained to be high priests held the same powers and authority of priesthood that Joseph Smith held, they all holding the Melchisedec priesthood, the highest known to the church.

It by no means follows that because Alpheus Cutler was ordained an high priest, and with others appointed to look after the interests of the work of the church in a given locality, as presiding officer of that district, that such ordination and appointment conferred upon him the right to be president of the high priesthood, though he may have been eligible to be chosen by the church to such office, as the law states that such officer is to be chosen of or from among the high priests.

Again it is peculiar that the ordination of Alpheus Cutler should have been made "to be in force from the hour it was had, upon the world," and yet he could not perform the duties of that office until Joseph Smith was dead, the Twelve and seven all dead or all apostatized, and then he could perform the functions of the office, whatever it was that had been bestowed upon him.

In 1863, Joseph Smith was dead, the Twelve had adopted a dogma and practice the equivalent of apostasy, as many hold; but where were the seven? Alpheus Cutler was aged and paralytic, unable to speak in plainness, and utterly powerless to perform any of the functions of an extraordinary office or calling, if any had ever been pronounced upon him. If any district of country had been assigned to Bro. Cutler, it is not of record; nor did he make claim to such appointment to a given locality, that we ever heard of.

We visited Father Cutler in 1863, and would have been glad of a season of counsel with him; but he was not in such state of preservation and health as to permit; we could get no intelligent expression of thought from him. Yet at the same visit to Manti, the place where Father Cutler lived, some of his adherents prophesied that "his trowel would yet ring on the walls of the temple in Zion." This was stated to us soon after it was uttered, and our remark at the time was, that we too would predict, and our prediction was that "If Father Cutler's trowel ever rang on the walls of a temple in Zion, it would be a spiritual trowel, and would ring on a spiritual wall; for he would never lay a stone in mortar in the life of the flesh that now is." It was not long until loving hearts mourned the veteran dead, and friends bore his body to the grave.

It is also claimed, so our informants state, that "Father Cutler said that Joseph told him to wait till the Twelve set him off, before he could begin his work." This statement would favor the idea that Alpheus Cutler was one of those high priests who had been designated to take charge of districts; and, as such work as setting off the districts would have been done by the Twelve, he necessarily could not have entered on that work until his field was designated. Had Presidents Joseph and Hyrum lived it is fair to presume that the division of territory into districts would have been fully carried out. But, as soon as Joseph and Hyrum were out of the way, President Brigham Young assumed the right to direct, and the policy of districting the country and setting high priests to preside over them, was not carried into effect, as originally decided upon. A change in dogma and practice made a change of location necessary; and so Father Cutler's appointment with those of the seven, or whatever number had been selected, failed to be of effect. We can see no other reasonable deduction to be drawn from the facts so far as known. If our Cutlerite brethren have any facts of history, day and date, occurrence, etc., we shall be ready to give credence to them, so far as they are applicable to our work. But they will need to excuse us, if we refuse, persistently, to accept their statement of what is claimed for Father Cutler, without proofs of facts, absolute, or corroborative; especially when the claims stated are as mythical and inconsistent with acknowledged precedents and usages as the ones stated in this article.

It is also stated, so our informants say, that William Marks was not in good standing at the death of Joseph Smith. We may have heard this before, we think we have. The history shows, however, that William Marks was president of the High Council and also president of the Stake, at Nauvoo, at Joseph and Hyrum Smith's death. No better evidence of his good standing in the church could be given. That he was not in favor with some men in the church, possibly some leading men too, we think to be quite possible; for they feared his unflinching opposition to whatever he believed to be immoral and evil, his fearless denunciation of wrong, though it might be in men who were in high places and his friends. There may have been some who thought such a man dangerous. And so he was to the workers of iniquity; and of right he ought to have been. It is a great pity there were not more of them of the same kind. It might have saved the church the dire results that ensued from June 27, 1844, to the end of the chapter. It is useless to try to get rid of the effect that William Marks' adherence to the Reorganization has properly had, by charging that he was not in good standing at the Martyr's death. No charge of evil-doing has ever been made and proved against the man.

We cannot see what good would result to the claims of our Cutlerite brethren, if it were true that William Marks was not in good standing at the Martyr's death; it would prove nothing to their benefit. It is our conviction that it would be far better for the remnant of them to drop this useless contention about Father Cutler's claims, as stated by them, and falling into line with what may be found in the Reorganized Church that is in harmony with the faith and practice of the church before and at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, put their energies into a practical effort to help redeem Zion. The spiritual work of the church is sweeping grandly forward, hindered sorely from want of laborers and means to meet the demands for necessities; making the work one of "mighty faith" in God. We are sure of our spiritual ground and hopeful of the greatest success.

It is also asserted that not long before the arrest of Presidents Joseph and Hyrum, there was a quorum of fifty, chosen from among the best men of the church, which quorum was intended to take the place of the massed three leading quorums, to which what should be presented as revelations to the church was to be referred for examination and rejection, or approval as being from the Lord. We do not know who these men were; nor have we seen the record of their choosing and setting apart to this calling. Joseph W. Coolidge, who was the administrator upon the estate of the Prophet Joseph, and who settled at Glenwood, Iowa, after the exodus from Nauvoo, told us at his house in Glenwood, that such a quorum was formed, and that he was one of the fifty. It may be that Bro. Cutler was one of these; but if he were, it would not give him jurisdiction as has been claimed for him. Mr. Coolidge also stated in that conversation that President Young called that quorum together and prorogued it without ceremony and sine die. We have seen nothing in the books that would warrant the choosing of such a quorum, hence can say nothing of it. It may have become a necessity; if so, the necessity passed when the Prophet died and one assumed to succeed him who was "not a prophet, neither the son of a prophet," as himself directly stated.

THE WORK IN ENGLAND.

We cannot speak of the work outside of Manchester district as yet; but so far as Manchester district is concerned the condition of the work in England is much better than is generally supposed, and than we expected to find it. We are not very much surprised, however, for in America we had depended for information upon the communications of President James Caffall, who has been in charge of the mission for the last three years, and he, as every one who knows him is aware, is not given to sounding a trumpet before him as the hypocrites do, or to speaking loudly in praise of his own work. Great credit is due him, however, for his untiring efforts, wise counsel, and unflinching fidelity, which have contributed largely to produce this favorable condition of affairs. He will long live in the memory and love of the saints in England.

Elder Joseph Dewsnap, Sen., president of Manchester district, is an organizer, and possesses in large degree executive ability. He is assisted by a zealous and active local force, which is making itself felt. They have a systematic arrangement by which the local ministry are out filling appointments every Sunday except the first in each month, when each elder drops back into his branch for sacrament service. This arrangement is made with the understanding that if one of the traveling ministry is present at place of meeting, the local elder gives place to him.

We think that in our central places, where there are many elders, this plan or something similar could be adopted with profit, and if presidents of districts would organize their forces as President Dewsnap has done, there would be no reason to complain because "there is nothing left for a president of district to do."

The following is a copy of this "Rota Plan." We commend it to careful consideration:—

benefactors, taken from the Drake University Bulletin for July, 1897. We do not give this list with any thought that we have anyone among us, who, out of his millions, will endow Graceland with a magnificent sum sufficient for its usefulness for years to come; but, to show that even among men of the world, as ourselves and other religionists are pleased to call them, there burns the spirit of desire to aid their fellow men, by acts of benevolence which are more or less unselfish in effect, if not in intention.

Asa Packer has given to Lehigh University, Penn., $3,500,000; Johns Hopkins, to Johns Hopkins University, Md., $3,500,000; Isaac Rich, to Boston University, Mass., $2,000,000; Leonard Case, to School of Applied Science, Ohio, $1,200,000; James Lick, to University of California, $1,650,000; Peter Cooper, to Cooper Union, New York, $1,200,000; Ezra Cornell, to Cornell University, N. Y., $1,000,000; The Vanderbilts, to Vanderbilt University, Tenn., $1,775,000; Paul Tulane, to Tulane University, La., $2,500,000; W. C. De Pauw, to De Pauw University, Ind., $1,000,000; Leland Stanford, to Leland Stanford, Jr., University, Cal., $5,000,000; S. W. Phoenix, to Columbia College, N. Y., $650,000; Amasa Stone, to Adelbert College, Ohio, $600,000; John C. Green, to Princeton College, N. J., $1,500,000; Mathew Vassar, to Vassar College, N. Y., $908,000; George I. Seney, Wesleyan University, Conn., $700,000; Ario Pardee, to Lafayette College, Penn., $500,000; Benjamin Bussey, to Harvard College, Mass., $500,000; Joseph W. Taylor, to Bryn Mawr College, Penn., $450,000; Joseph Sheffield to Yale College, Conn., $500,000; Henry W. Sage, to Cornell University, N. Y., $342,000; E. P. Greenleaf to Harvard University, $630,000; J. P. Jones, to Haverford College, $500,000; Stephen Girard, to Girard College, Penn., $8,000,000; Jonas G. Clark, to Clark University, Mass., $2,000,000; besides the millions given by Mr. Rockefeller to Chicago University.—Bulletin.

In the financial statement in the Bulletin, it is apparent that the Drake University now needs $25,000 to keep its work going. Of this $10,000 have been already pledged. To expedite the remainder, the Bulletin has published the blank form of a common note of hand, and requested patrons to fill up the blank with date and sum and send it to the chancellor, together with any information that may be comforting to the institution.

Our object in thus bringing the affairs of the Drake University, of Des Moines, Iowa, to the readers of HERALD, is to state that the committee, which was appointed to have Graceland College erected, have done their work so far; and in doing it were

THE COLLEGE AND ITS WORK.
We have ever held it to be a foundation truth, that in the church and among Latter Day Saints, all that was needed in case of necessity or emergency was that the necessity be stated in plain-ness, and the remedy, if there was one, would be considered and applied. We present below a compiled statement of benefactions bestowed on different educational ventures in the United States, with the names of the obliged to get into debt, which is easily understood if a little thought is given to it. Coming as the erection of the building did right at the time of an almost universal collapse of business, the sale of lots in Graceland addition upon which dependence had been placed to push the building to completion, abruptly stopped with the few who had bought at the start to give the enterprise a send off. Donations ceased about the same time, and the later efforts of the committee were attended with great difficulty.

The school has run two years with too few students to meet expenses; these the committee have met by partial payments, and are held for the remainder.

The church as a whole is morally bound to meet the responsibilities of the committee, and ought to do so cheerfully. Not only in responding to the request for donations, but in sending their children to Graceland College, if intending to send them from home to school.

The committee have been disturbed, and we may add annoyed, by the observation of some, "Well, it is a local institution, benefits Lamoni alone; let Lamoni look after it and bear the burden, as she reaps the benefits."

This is not correct in either letter or spirit. The enterprise originated in and with the General Conference, and was made a church affair. The church appointed the committee and has renewed their appointment now for three or four consecutive years; and the church is responsible for the success or failure of the enterprise; and the words "the church" do not mean the leading men of the church alone, but do mean the whole church, rank and file, priests and people, high and low, rich and poor, at home and abroad.

We are not now building a temple, and hence there is no call for help in that direction; but we have built a college, and are striving hard to have the institution stand. Shall it so stand, as a monument of the good intentions of the church? Or fail as a reminder of our lack of faith in each other and in God?

This is not a plea for Drake University, but is a plea for Graceland College, our own enterprise at Lamoni. Drake University will likely be remembered by the thousands of dollars; will Graceland be remembered by the few?

Send to William Anderson, Treasurer, at Lamoni, or to Bishop E. L. Kelley, same place.

A HOPEFUL INDICATION.

It is a hopeful sign that the world is growing wiser, if not better, to know that there is a marked decrease in the consumption of that which intoxicates. See below:—

It appears from the returns of the Internal Revenue bureau for the last fiscal year that the consumption of alcoholic liquors in this country has undergone an enormous decrease. No friend of law, order, and the sacred institutions of the home will shed any tears over this showing.—New York Mail and Express.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH sends the following graphic note announcing progress:—

On board the steamer Lucania, Thursday noon, August 12, 1897; 2,436 miles from Sandy Hook lighthouse. Expect to be in Queens-town, Ireland, to-night, or early to-morrow morning; Liverpool, to-morrow night. First three days of the voyage were delightful; but since have had a rough time of it. Had to stay below all day yesterday. Impossible to stay upon the storm-swept and billow-washed deck. Some better to-day, but still the ship rolls badly I am well. Considering the heavy seas I have escaped seasickness remarkably well. Just been a little sick—have been sicker on shore many times. Able to take my rations. More soon.

Bro. D. E. Tucker writes from McDavid Florida August 18:—

Bro. C. I. Carpenter and I are laboring in new field, find it very difficult to get openings. Mostly private preaching.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER F. M. COOPER, of No. 583 Fulton Street, Chicago, Illinois, advises us that Elder John H. Lake, president of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin mission, is unable to attend the two days' meeting appointed at Mission, Illinois, for September 11 and 12. The meeting has been postponed until September 18 and 19, when Bro. Lake promises to be present.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith, of the Presidency, was present at the Old Settlers' Reunion, at Nauvoo, August 12, and was called upon and made a short speech. He moved into Hancock County, in 1839, so was probably as old a settler as was present.

The Herald Office will be repremented at the Maysville, Missouri, reunion by Bro. C. P. Faul, with whom a fairly complete stock of books, tracts, etc., will be found. He will also receive remittances and subscriptions for HERALD, Leaves, and Hope, and transact all necessary office business.

Bro. D. E. Daniels, of Lucas, Iowa, reports three good meetings held in the region north of Lucas, Brn. W. C. Nirk, Geo. Jamison, and C. E. Willey assisting.

Bro. James Bradley, of Amber, Iowa, aged ninety-three years, renews his HERALD subscription and says: "I want the HERALD while I live."

Bro. C. P. Faul will labor in the interests of the Herald Office at the North Missouri reunion, to be held at Maysville, beginning September 3. He will have on sale a goodly assortment of church publications, will receive money on HERALD, Hope, and Autumn Leaves accounts, receive new subscriptions for the church periodicals, etc. Those in attendance will please remember the opportunity.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors,
Amid these earthly damps
What seem to us but sad, funereal tapers,
May be heaven's distant lamps.

There is no death! What seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call Death.

DUTY OF PARENTS.

SECTION 68, verse 4, Doctrine and Covenants, commands the parents to teach their children and have them baptized at eight years old, and if they fail to do this, the sin is upon the heads of the parents. This lays a great responsibility upon the parents. Quite frequently we hear some one say, "I don't believe in having children baptized, as they do not understand what a sacred covenant they are making, and when older they have to be converted again."

To me this seems to be taking dangerous ground. God does not give advice unless it is for our good to follow it, and to our loss should we disobey. If Joseph Smith, Jr., was a prophet, it is as necessary to keep one commandment that came through him as another. Some of us say we know he was a prophet, and we all believe he was or we would not be in this work.

My personal observation has been this: That though many of the children that were baptized at eight years old became careless in their young woman and manhood, in their hearts they always believed this gospel, and in time came back as active workers; while others that were not baptized, although sometimes in the same family, never came in the church, but wandered farther away.

To me it seems like this: That when the child is baptized it is in the fold of Christ and guaranteed the great Shepherd's watch-care, and though they may wander and fall in deep ravines, yet the faithful Shepherd is always seeking for them, and when found tenderly, lovingly brings them back to the fold. To the mothers I would say, Teach your children, have them baptized, and leave the matter in the hands of Him that heareth even the ravens when they cry.

Your sister,

BELLE.

AMBER, Michigan.

Dear Sisters:—This is the first time I have ever attempted to write for the Home Column, but I feel it my duty to assist in this work. Although my talent is small compared with others, yet I realize that if we do not use that which we have we shall in that great day be held accountable for it.

It is now almost two years since we first heard the gospel, and the first sermon I ever heard I felt and realized that it was true, and he (G. D. Washburn) was a man sent of God. My husband and I were soon baptized, accompanied by two others, and in less than three weeks fourteen had been baptized. For awhile all went well; but soon some became indifferent and negligent of duty and thereby sin crept in unawares, not realizing that there was no such thing as standing still. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."—James 4: 17. Be careful of little sins. How great a mischief one unguarded point of character may cause us. One spark blew up the magazine and shook the whole country for miles around. One leak sank the vessel and drowned all on board. One wound may kill the body; one sin destroy the soul. Then take alarm at even an evil thought, wish, or desire; these are the germs of sin, the floating seeds which drop into the heart, and finding a favorable soil spring up into actual transgressions, there, like the rattle of the snake, the hiss of the serpent, to reveal the presence and near neighborhood of danger. The experience of all proves that sin is most easily crushed in the bud, and that it is safer to flee from temptation than to fight it. Sometimes God suffers us to be tempted and tried on all sides, but he will not suffer us to be tempted beyond endurance. If we truly desire to do his will his grace will be sufficient to overcome all. Then when we have first learned to care for our own vineyard we will be able to assist others. The higher a weight is lifted, the harder the blow when it descends. Now if we would tell upon society and our children with ponderous blows, we must see to it that we are uplifted as near to God as possible. All our powers will depend upon the elevation of our spirits. Prayer, meditation, communion, devotion, are like a windlass to wind us up aloft; it is not lost time which we spend in such sacred exercises, for we are thus accumulating force so that when we come down to our actual religious labor for God we shall descend with an energy unknown to those to whom communion is unknown. Be with God and learn of him. Get an education not from sin only, but from all narrowness and littleness of conception. It will put great thoughts into our minds and hearts and bold words into our mouths and lead us out of our village prisons to behold all nations of mankind. On this ground alone Christianity is the best educator in the world. It will not allow the soul to be mean. It forces the heart to be noble and hopeful. It is like a sea breeze blowing over a sickly land; like sunshine piercing the fogs of a long, dark night. If we have narrow sympathies, paltry conception, we are not scholars of Christ. Then let us come up higher.

As this is my first letter, perhaps some of the sisters would like to know more of me personally. We reside on a farm and I have a good kind husband. God has seen fit to bless me with a little daughter who is now four years old. Soon after we came in the church Bro. J. J. Cornish administered to her and a cystic tumor the size of a large egg was removed from under her arm, which confirmed what they taught, that the signs follow the believers. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever live worthy of the blessing God has bestowed upon me, and that I may so rear my little one that she may be an honor to his cause.

Ever your sister in the gospel,

MRS. JENNIE TURNER.

Dear Home Column:—I have often wanted to write, but time has slipped away, and I do not see as many letters as I used to. There are others who have let the time slip away also. I have often been cheered when reading the good letters from my brothers and sisters in the Home Column and Letter Department. My desire is to live faithful, do my Father's will, and keep his commandments. Unless we do this we cannot expect to receive the blessings he has promised to those who know and do his will.

Bro. Swensen was with us one week and preached four sermons, which were well received by the people here, and the few saints were strengthened and cheered. It seems to me I never heard the gospel preached plainer. I think no one who heard need make a mistake in the way. It was so plain. I desire to so let my light shine that some of the honest in heart will come into the fold. Truly it is worth while; it has much to do with our neighbors. We had not heard a sermon since last summer at the reunion at Fergus Falls, which was a feast for us all here. In answer to prayer we got there, and it comforted us till Bro. Swensen came, and he has promised he will return again this coming fall. I truly hope he will. I believe good can be done here. The people want to hear. We looked for Bro. I. N. Roberts, but it was not possible for him to come last winter. Hope he will not forget us. With love to all the saints,

Your sister,

ELDER T. A. HOGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

WE are frequently obliged to condense or abridge articles for want of space. This we very much regret, but we cannot do otherwise at present. However, we try at all times to do the articles full justice.

THE reunion at Blue Rapids, Kansas, has just closed—a very successful series of meetings. The Sabbath school workers too were alert to the interests of their work. A regular session was held on Sunday. During the week sessions of institute work, teacher's meeting, Sabbath school, etc., were held. Wednesday was the convention of the Northwest Kansas district. The reports in many instances showed an excellent standing. Some of the schools are small and remote, yet have indications of benefits received from district association and supervision.

At the afternoon session several very excellent papers were read and freely discussed. The night service was devoted to temperance. Bro. T. A. Hogas gave an address upon the subject, followed also by Bro. I. N. White. The meeting was productive of good.

The General Superintendent was present throughout the reunion to assist and encourage them. He enjoyed the visit very much and formed many acquaintances that will ever be dear to him.

The Lord bless and strengthen the little band of faithful, earnest workers. The district is under the supervision of Bro. William Landers, who seems to enjoy the confidence of all.

WITHIN the past few weeks many of our Sunday schools have returned their Intermediate Quarterlies, and asked for others, frequently writing very harshly and sometimes abusively to the Business Manager at the Herald Office. This is all wrong. He is in no way responsible for the context of the Quarterly. When the Quarterly is printed and properly mailed his responsibility ceases.

Schools often make mistakes and lay the fault to the office. How? By changing secretaries. The new secretary orders the Quarterlies; the Quarterlies continue to come to the old secretary; hence they have duplicate sets. Next some of them return the extra sets and make all sorts of accusations against the Business Manager. Now we repeat, This is all wrong. Mistakes may occur. We all make them, and when we do make a mistake we should be even glad to correct it. If others make mistakes, inform them in kindness, and the result will usually be better than if done in any other way.

Sunday School Department:—The Sunday school work in this district is onward.

The encouraging features are growing appreciation of the Sunday school's usefulness and the need of putting study, preparation, and spirituality into the work, and interest in new places.

Wherever there are scattered or isolated families of saints, and not number sufficient for a school, we are trying to establish home study from the Quarterlies. It has been taken up in two instances and proves very beneficial. In one case it has been the means of preparing two children for baptism and leading them to desire to enter the church.

The ministry have rendered us good assistance. At a convention last spring Bro. J. R. Lambert delivered an address in the evening that was not excelled by any of his fine sermons afterwards. Evidently the Sunday school has a high mission in the gospel plan, or God would not grant the inspiration of his Spirit to it as he does. Bro. Chatburn was ever a stimulus and encouragement to the work when he was in this district, while Bro. Turpen was always declaring his inability in the Sunday school line, and always doing all he could for it at the same time; keeping his eyes open for opportunities in his travels and letting the district superintendent know of them, besides throwing in a word himself in such localities.

We hardly think it reasonable to expect that active elders can be expert Sunday school workers, because that is a study in itself, and we think God never intended one set of persons to do everything, but that there are different departments of work and different ones delegated to take charge. But it is a great help, and we expect the ministry to let it be known which side they stand on, and ever be ready to give the general principles of spiritual advice.

Bro. I. N. White was an interested attendant at our late district convention,—I should say, an interested participant and helper.

He says: "I shall always make it a point from here on to be in time for the conventions as well as the conferences." In his remarks to the convention Bro. White advised Sunday school prayer meetings, saying the Sunday schools could no more expect to thrive without spirituality than the branches. We noted that advice with pleasure and it has been and will be the increased endeavor to establish regular prayer meetings with the schools in this district for the interests and welfare of the Sunday school work.

Our elderly brother, Bro. Summerfield, in an appreciated little talk told the workers that he believed strongly in teachers' meetings; and carrying the idea further he thought it would be of great benefit to branches if their local officers met to study and discuss their duties.

In his report to a late conference our district president, Bro. J. A. Tanner, commended the Sunday school to the local priesthood, and advised that they do all in their power for its interests, as it was giving life and impetus to the gospel work.

LOCKHARTVILLE, N. S., June 6.

Editors Herald.—Last week brought the "study in finances" to us, and I have spent some time with a good deal of satisfaction running over the lists and finding names that are familiar and thinking how nobly many are keeping the law and are thus means in God's hand for forwarding his glorious work. Nova Scotia's list is not quite as long as it ought to be, but there are names that will appear next year, as they have begun since March to pay their "bill that they owe the Lord," as one of them expressed it, since March. The Herald does not tell all the story, however, in detail; for many whose names do not appear have done nobly in sustaining the missionary.

Our numbers are not large and there are very few of the saints who have not aided me financially in some way during the year, and in a number of cases I know the effort was an actual sacrifice. I rejoice with such; for to believe in this work at all is to believe that all who make sacrifices for this work will be blessed of God. It matters not whether the missionary has wisdom enough to expend it to the best advantage or not; he has to answer for that, not those who give to the cause. I like that thought, "give to the cause." Sometimes the people give because they think the man is a good fellow and like to help him along. Well, the Lord is left out, and that means a good deal.

The indications are for a good deal of work yet to bring our fair province to accept the angel message, but we were rejoiced last Sunday in opening the door of the kingdom to one who has had a hard fight and has conquered in spite of tremendous odds from a human standpoint, having to step out from an influential position in one of the most influential congregations worshipping in one of the finest church buildings in Canada. It took years of teaching and circumstances and observation to convince Sr. May Quigley, the devoted little Baptist Sunday school teacher, that the church that she so much loved was not what it seemed to be. But when she hungered for more than it could provide, then she was willing to be found in the way of life—even the body of Christ. Now she wonders why those good, devoted, apparently consistent church and Sunday school workers cannot or will not see the light that seems now so plain. Indeed it is a wonder to us all, I presume, at times. Even in Lockhartville there are honest, earnest, consistent living workers who far excel many saints who see nothing in this work but what they abhor—people who honor us as neighbors and have never said an unkind word to or about us to our knowledge, but despise our religion. These things did stagger me for years until I could understand that men are about the same in all ages. Nearly nineteen hundred years ago our Savior said, "The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not" as given to us in the authorized version. But some anxiously inquire "which really is the light?" Here is a good test:

The light does not fear comparison—darkness always does. An unwillingness to compare is an acknowledgment of inferiority.

We spent an enjoyable day last Sunday in Rawdon. The little Sunday school is doing well. The prayer meeting was good and enjoyed by those who are in the line of duty. The baptism was all that heart could wish. The preaching service was well attended and the Spirit was present at confirmation. On Monday our company was brought to station by Bro. Dimock's two teams. Let me here state that although Bro. Dimock is an exceptionally busy man, I have never seen the time, whether in seedtime or harvest, cold or warm, good roads or bad, that he was too busy to take his team and go to the station several miles away—no "ifs nor ands" nor half-way work nor begging here or there; but he does like a man and seems to do it gladly. He is getting along in years and sometimes talks of leaving this stage of action soon, but I hope for the cause's sake that he will postpone that arrangement for many years yet.

I expect soon to go into Maine. Should write some of Cumberland County, but space forbids this time.

Yours, etc.,

H. J. DAVISON.

[Letter delayed in transmission—EDS.]

BLAIRSTOWN, Mo., August 19.

Editors Herald.—On August 5 I and my daughter May started for Hickory County by team. I stopped at Lowry City and preached for them on my way down and coming back. The saints there have a pleasant little hall for holding meeting in, and desire the elders to call on them when they can. We arrived at Hickory County, the place for meeting, Saturday evening of the 7th. The brethren had arranged an arbor on Bro. Ethan Paxton's place. Bro. A. White and myself were in charge, Bru. F. L. Sawley and William Mannering assisting in the preaching, Miss May White in charge of the music, which we found to be of great interest in making a grove meeting a success. The meeting lasted nine days. Eight were baptized. We organized a branch of about forty members, known as the Wheatland branch. The following brethren were ordained: Ethan Paxton elder, Frank M. Williams teacher, Wayne W. Paxton deacon. Each was chosen to preside in the branch in their respective offices, with the addition of J. A. Silvers as priest.

We are glad to note the change in the disposition of the people toward the work at this place. About one year ago I held a grove meeting near this same place, at which time some of the saints met a volley of rocks, and one morning we found rocks and eggs piled up on the preacher's stand; but on our return this time all seemed friendly toward the work and the best of order through all the meeting. We had a good hearing, say from one to three hundred. On last Saturday eight arose at one time for baptism.

When I look back a year ago to this place, remembering that there were only five or six saints and now a branch of forty or more, God having chosen from their own number an elder, priest, teacher, and deacon to administer in the gospel for them, surely we feel to rejoice. Next week I and wife and two of my daughters expect to attend the reunion at Nevada. Praying the Lord to bless his people, I am, as ever,

A worker until the Lord comes,
D. C. WHITE.

"HEAVEN'S INSURANCE POLICY."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., August 18.

Editors Herald:—It would give me much pleasure to answer Bro. Parsons in full on his above "favorite theme," but fear you could not spare the space. I will therefore content myself at present by saying that whenever the "church" authorities are prepared to make "perfect" the "perfect law of liberty" in temporal affairs, and give me and my family the same protection in sickness and death that I now get from the insurance company and sick benefit society, then, and then only, am I prepared to give up my interest in them, and pay into the church treasury the amount I now pay to them. But I must first of all be assured of "protection."

I pay my tithing and so does my wife also.
In bonds,

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—The Southwest Texas reunion in connection with the quarterly conference, was held at Oak Island, fourteen miles south of San Antonio on the Medina River, commencing August 6 and closed the 16th. The conference was held August 6 and 7, after which the reunion meeting commenced. While perhaps in number we could not cope with some of our reunions of the North, we feel thankful that God recognized us by his Spirit's presence.

Bro. George Montague had charge of the reunion. We regretted very much that so many of the saints of the district did not come, but what few did make the effort and pitched their tents and stayed throughout the entire meeting, I believe feel amply paid. Elder Montague and the writer did all the preaching until Friday, the 13th, when we were reinforced by Bro. L. L. Wight. During the meeting thirteen sermons were preached in English and Bro. W. H. Davenport preached two sermons to the Mexicans in their own language; thirteen prayer services and one sacrament meeting. Many were the bright testimonies given, and for a little congregation it seemed that we were just as happy as we could be, and if the writer is not mistaken this Southwest Texas work has turned a bright page in the volume of its history, and by the time the reunion season comes again many, by double, will be the tents pitched in the camps of latter-day Israel in this part of great big Texas. On Saturday, the 14th, the writer baptized two, and two more gave their names for baptism in the near future, and many more are near the kingdom; so we feel encouraged.

We are much indebted to Bro. Montague for his labors among us. At the closing meeting Monday, the 16th, which was a spiritual one, Brn. Wight and Montague, in company departed for Medina City and other points northwest in the mountains. The writer came to continue his labors in this city (San Antonio). I feel encouraged to continue efforts here, and hope for good. I left the seats under the arbor on the grounds of our late reunion and will fill appointments there; will preach to the Mexicans through an interpreter unless I can secure Bro. Davenport's services. I am anxious to see what can be done with our dusky brethren of Mexico. I think I can solve the problem of a Mexican mission right here in my district. Shall report our success from time to time.

Your brother,
H. P. CURTIS.

GALIEN, Mich., August 4.

Editors Herald:—I have been reading the good instructions and testimonies of my brothers and sisters in Christ in the Herald and Ensign; and always enjoy reading the same, and can hardly wait till the day comes to get a new one. I feel my weakness and inability to write, yet if there is not an effort put forth there can never be anything accomplished.

I thought a word from this part of the Lord's vineyard might interest some, as this has been a long standing mark to the church, away back in the years that Grandfather Blakeslee proclaimed the gospel message here, and others that have since passed away from their labors and are receiving their reward.

There are yet a few faithful ones living here that are striving to hold on to the rod of iron. It reminds me, however, of an old vineyard, some of the vines growing thrifty, others almost dead, and some quite dead. There are some, I feel, that with proper care will yet grow and bring forth fruit, and there are others that have indulged in the world and worldly evils that there is no spiritual growth; so the vineyard is not what we would like to have it. We are indeed living in a golden opportunity for saints to worship God and go to prayer and preaching services. I fear we do not appreciate the opportunities as we should, until it will be too late, or we are deprived of meeting with the saints. There is no standing still in the gospel work.

It requires a constant labor
All his precepts to obey;
If I truly love my neighbor
I am in the narrow way.

There is lots we can do, if only a kind word, or act ever so small, "for by our works we stand or fall;" and by our fruits shall we be known. Our daily walk and conversation should be patterned after our blessed Savior. I never realized these sayings so much till I have been severely tried in affliction, and at times my faith has been severely tried; almost despaired, and would have felt like giving up were it not for the hope I have in the gospel. But God is faithful and will not suffer us to be tried more than we are able to bear.

I know if we are faithful that there is a rest. I fear sometimes, but it is my prayer and desire that our heavenly Father will give of his Holy Spirit, that we may overcome all temptations and live humble, and do to others as we would have them do to us. This is a great lesson for us to learn, yet a command of our Savior.

We are looking forward to our two days' meeting to be held here September 4 and 5, and hope to have a time of rejoicing and have a foretaste of the meeting that will be by and by. Bro. C. Scott has done lots of preaching here, and has many children in the gospel, but how children are neglected sometimes. We would all like to see him and his wife and hear him preach again. Brn. Bronson and Robinson have been doing some good work here this spring and summer. Trusting I have not wearied you, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,
DORA B. GREEN.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—Our meetings were well attended yesterday; the writer occupied as speaker in the afternoon, with an attentive audience. Elder E. K. Evans spoke on the mission of Christ in the evening. Some said it was the best they ever heard. We are looking forward to the grove meeting next Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Wood, an outsider, as he is called, had three hundred posters printed, and then took his team and drove all over that part of the country and posted them up, giving notice for the meeting to all.

We are just fixing the grove up, by getting the small brush out, and plenty of seats in, so as to accommodate all that come. We look for Brn. E. C. Briggs and S. W. L. Scott to be in attendance. Everything in and around the city seems favorable for gospel work.

Yours for truth.

MANCHESTER, Eng., August 11.

Editors Herald:—We left Chicago for England, June 22. On our way we stopped off a day at Niagara Falls, also one day at Scranton, Pennsylvania. At Philadelphia we spent about a week; the rest of the time till July 17 at Brooklyn, New York. At each of these places we met with the saints, rendering them such aid as we could, and was welcomed by them.

On the morning of the 17th we boarded the beautiful steamer Campania for Liverpool. My brother-in-law, Mr. Derby, and his daughter Ida accompanied us to the vessel and were the last to bid us adieu. As the steamer moved off we kept each other in sight as long as possible by the aid of two small American flags, one waved by our friends on shore, the other by us on the steamer. We had to sail under the English ensign, but we kept "Old Glory" hung up in our stateroom. We found our accommodations quite ample, almost luxurious. We soon found Mr. Dalton, husband of Sr. Dalton, of Piper City, who is on a visit to friends in old England; also met Bro. Bradbury's friend, of Providence, Rhode Island. We also formed the acquaintance of a Baptist minister, to whom we explained the gospel, also the difference between us and the Utah Church. We had several little chats with a number of the passengers, and gave them our tracts. We met with no opposition, but all seemed to acknowledge that what we said was reasonable. We would liked to have had preaching services on Sunday, but were not allowed. But we employed part of the time in singing. I was appointed chorister, and several evenings were spent quite pleasantly in singing, speaking, recitations, etc.

The first three days on board it was quite warm, but a nice breeze generally enabled one to keep cool in the shade. The fourth day it became quite cold, so that we put on our winter clothing, including overcoats. It was then that our ship began to roll, and many were seasick. I escaped by hard work; but Sr. Pitt had to yield, but only for a short time. As a whole our voyage was a very pleasant one. One or two showers, but no storm. We had two births and two deaths on board. A little flurry of excitement was caused by a rumor that our ship was on fire. We saw the smoke, but it could not have been much, as it was soon extinguished. We had the pleasure of seeing a whale spouting water, really and some flying fish. The latter was a pretty sight.

On Friday morning we were up on deck early, to get the first sight of land. We were in sight of the Irish coast, which was welcomed by all on board. At six o'clock we were met by two small steamers, who received the mail and passengers for Queens-town. This delayed us thirty minutes. We were soon out of sight of land again till about noon or a little after, when we came in sight of the Welsh coast, and enjoyed the scenery very much. We landed at Liverpool at about six in the evening. Crowds were waiting on the docks to greet friends. We looked in vain for a familiar face. We felt that we were indeed strangers in a strange land. We followed our trunks to the custom house. The officer who examined our baggage was very kind, so that we did not have to even open our trunks for examination. He took our word that we had nothing chargeable of duty, which saved us a lot of trouble. We found our way to a comfortable hotel, where we remained till Monday. In the meantime we received a letter from Bro. Joseph Dewsnap, inviting us to his home. We were very pleased to accept the invitation, and met with a kind reception.

So far I find the English people very warm-hearted and kind. I am getting lots of experience even in this short space of time, but will not refer to it now, lest this letter be considered too long, but may say something about it in the future. I am feeling well and hopeful.

Yours in bonds,

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 20.

Editors Herald.—I drop you a line to let you know that I am still alive and at work. I arrived in Southern California in time for the reunion at Downey, July 8. We had a fairly good time at the reunion. Brn. Harris, Parker, Barmore, and the writer were present, also the local authorities and elders of the district, to assist in the good work. After the reunion was over, in company with Brn. Carmichael and Harris, I visited Garden Grove, Santa Ana, and San Bernardino. Leaving Bro. Harris at the last named place, on account of sickness of his wife, Bro. Carmichael and I went on to Los Angeles, where we held a two days meeting. I remained at Los Angeles all last week and over Sunday, preaching a number of times and attending an entertainment and ice cream festival, given by the branch to raise money, to pay for a carpet they had put on the floor of their meeting hall. They have their hall newly papered, carpeted, and seated with chairs; also a good piano to assist in the musical department of the service. With this equipment, Bro. Tilton with the violin, and the choir with their melodious voices, constitute an important part in the services. From Los Angeles I went to Tulare, where I preached two nights for the saints; then on to this place, to remain over Sunday, the 22d.

From here I will go to San Francisco and labor in the branches around there until the reunion at Oakland, which begins September 3. I find the work in Southern California in fair condition, with room for improvement, by wise management and a united effort by all. In the past some feelings have existed that ought not, on account of choosing elders to preside where there was a high priest living. But if all could realize that God is at the helm, and his purposes cannot be frustrated, and that right will finally prevail; then they could all work together with God, without any bad feeling, for the accomplishment of the purpose desired by all faithful saints, all things being done by common consent in the church, as the custom and law of the church provides it should be; no one should feel hurt at the selection made by the body, in either branch or district; and if unwise work has been done, time will correct it; and to this end let all work and pray.

The weather is very hot in this valley now; yesterday registering from 100 to 115 in the shade in various localities. The saints are looking forward with great anxiety in the Southern district for a visit from Bro. Luff; he having endeared himself to them by his labors of last year. The labors of Heman C. Smith are very highly spoken of by them; and the hope expressed that the Patriarch may soon visit them; also the presiding Bishop is held in very high esteem among them.

It inspires a man with the desire to aim high, and try to set a proper example, and in this way reach the standard of those who have preceded him. While all cannot be brilliant in the pulpit, we all may give force to our teaching by a proper example. I find the example of the leading elders of the church, has much to do with the lives and conduct of the members where they labor. I trust the time may soon come when the saints shall have reached that standard of living that will entitle them to be gathered in Zion and her stakes; where the law of consecration can be fully carried out; where we will have the same care for each other; and the land be sanctified by keeping the commandments of God thereon.

Yours in hope,

G. H. HILLIARD.

TOPEKA, Kansas, Aug. 8.

Editors Herald.—One year last October a branch was organized here by Brn. John T. and J. Arthur Davis, with eight members; since then there have been eight baptisms and one received by letter, seventeen members all told in a city of 40,000. We are trying to establish the work under very trying circumstances at present. We have put some of our church publications into the city library, among them the History of the Church. We need more help. I did expect a tent before this time; but after receiving over fifty dollars in cash, and a promise of the balance needed to purchase the tent; now comes the inquiry, Where is the tent? What can we answer? Can we say we could not get it? No; because we were promised the balance. Can we say there are not men to run the tent? No; Bro. Evan Davis, of Atchison, and the writer could try to keep it open for a few weeks until more help could be got if necessary.

The presiding officer was obliged to move to Scranton, twenty-two miles from here; but for awhile came every second Sunday to do the Master's will, leaving the priest to feed the flock. Now our brother is traveling with Bro. W. S. Pender in the ministry.

There are two Mormon elders preaching every night on the street corners, getting large crowds to hear them. They say they are going to stay six months. It is six weeks since they came; they are selling the Book of Mormon and the Voice of Warning as they go along. They came to our meeting three weeks ago, which is held at No. 370 Kellam Avenue, Oakland addition, every first and third Sundays of each month. Can any of the brethren come and help us for a season?

Let us be doing as God has called us; labor where God wants us, not where we want. If we do this then all will be well with us. See that the weak members are made strong first. This church depends on all its members to support it. We are the branches, and if we are receiving the proper nourishment from the vine by those who are called to feed the flock, we will grow in grace and in favor with God and Christ, and our reward will be great, and we will surely receive it, for God is just. That this year may be as God has desired it should be, a year of growth to the church, I pray that God will help us all to realize our duty and to perform the same with an eye single to his glory. Pray for me to this end.

LYONS, Kans., Aug. 22.

Editors Herald.—Are there tides in our lives as ministers for Christ? Sometimes it seems that way to me. This morning when the bells tolled out the hour for Sunday school, habit seemed to say, Go. I obeyed; but where? I moved towards the mellow sounding bells, with head bowed down. O, I wished for the society of saints. There came with that wish the thought, Father, give me of thy Spirit that thy servant may do the people some good. I pass the large Methodist church; no spirit there for me. I pass the Presbyterian church; I do not feel like going in. I come to the Christian church, and silently breathe a prayer that I may do them good. I am invited into the Bible class. The lesson is the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. I am invited to take the lead of the class, as the teacher feels his inability to cope with the lesson. God could not have chosen a wave on which I could ride to a higher tide than this one. The superintendent joins us. I show them the beauty of the gospel work when signs should cease and prophecy should fail, and that which is perfect should come.

The little bell tingles, tingles. "Bro. Robinson, will you review the lesson with the school?" asks the superintendent. Gladly I go forward, and the sweet spirit of charity seemed to touch every heart. Light has come apparently to all. The clouds of false teaching disappear before the shafts from the latter-day bow. My fifteen minutes are up. I retire to my seat. I am lauded by the superintendent, as light and understanding had come to him through the lecture or review. While the school is closing the pastor shakes my hand. "I see," said he, "by your remarks, which I am pleased to indorse, that you preach."

"Yes, sir," said I, "when opportunity offers."

"Well," said he, "I have been praying for a substitute to-day. My mind has not been able to settle itself as I desire, before a congregation, won't you preach for me?"

I gladly accept as special opportunity to present the gospel to this fine congregation.

I said to him, "What was your text, or subject?" Exodus 14: 15.—"The Lord said unto Moses, Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

Could text and subject be better selected for me? Those people had gone as far as the water, and were not willing to move out into spiritual paths. O, I felt the warming power of the Spirit, bringing the thrilling touch of spiritual fire to me. God blessed his servant with both liberty and power. At the conclusion the pastor shook my hand: "God bless you; I indorse every word you uttered."

Nearly all the congregation join in thanking me; they all seemed cheered; none seemed to reject, or oppose the subject.

I am invited to dinner with the pastor; there he finds I am a Latter Day Saint elder. We have three hours' discussion, with a lovely spirit accompanying.

The secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association sends for me for afternoon services. I go; offer prayer and address them.

I trust that God will water the seed and open the way for some of our elders in Lyons.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our grove meeting was well attended on both days, considering the inclemency of the weather, as it rained both days. The people seemed real interested and were well pleased with what they heard. Brn. Briggs and Scott failed to materialize; but Brn. H. H. Robinson and J. M. Baggerly greeted us with their presence and rendered great assistance with their able efforts in telling the gospel. Several are talking of being baptized in the near future. We now expect to purchase a tent for this part of the mission field; we raised nearly $40 during the meeting. There is a good interest, with bright prospects ahead.

R. E. GRANT.

GOODERHAM, Ont., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—The work in these parts is in fair condition, all things considered; but there is still much room for improvement. Many of the saints are idling away their time, indulging in, then justifying, fleshly habits; consequently have but little understanding and appreciation of the great work before us. Others I am glad to say have their eyes open to the needs of the work, and by making use of their opportunities are enjoying a goodly measure of the Spirit. May the good Lord continue his mercies to such and give space for repentance unto the careless, indifferent ones, for "how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." The following words from section 3, Doctrine and Covenants, show in what sense God wants to make use of us: "O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day."

Ye careless ones, do you want to stand blameless before God, or is it that you take no thought of your standing before him? If you are anxious to be saved, remember the above counsel and daily act upon it. If you will, you can do much good mentally, physically, and financially for this work. Value the real worth of your soul and the divinity of the work; awake from your slumber and join in with the earnest, anxious ones, with all your heart, might, mind, and strength. Reserve nothing for selfish purposes. Give what you have to God; buy the Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Mormon and meditate upon the revelations of God to-day. Don't be satisfied to know that there are such books only; but get them, read them, and grow in spiritual things. To rejoice in God you must know what he is doing for you and others.

The mission is in good condition (speaking of the whole), under the presidency of R. C. Evans, and is not likely to lose any ground; so far peace and love have prevailed. Evidence of our brother's call to the apostleship was clearly manifest at our late district conference, and of such a nature that none but the rebellious could resist. Again, may God speed the work in Canada, for we are occupying but a small portion as yet. Many counties in this province even have never heard of our work, but we are hoping, trusting, working, and praying for God to increase our ministerial force with good, able, spiritual-minded men, and open the way for the success of the church. Bro. Lake is kindly remembered by Canada saints, and often have I been asked, "When, or will Bro. Lake ever get over to see us again?" His kind, fatherly advice will never be forgotten.

Our fall conference convenes with Toronto branch. It is whispered around that probably Pres. Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley will be in attendance, which I am sure would be a pleasure to all Canadian saints. Year after year glides by and only one or two of our whole number ever get to see and hear the men appointed of God to lead the church militant. We would highly appreciate the visit. It would beyond question stimulate our whole-souled, hard working saints, and such we believe are worthy of the visit anticipated. The Lord grant your coming unto us.

Am busy preaching, visiting, etc., the Lord blessing me much. Night before last, after preaching, but before dismissal, a Methodist preacher asked a question which called out numbers of others. Quite a heated discussion resulted but the truth suffered none. Preacher backed down completely. Big victory for us.

Ever hoping for Zion's prosperity,

FREDERICK GREGORY.

BEAVERTON, Michigan.

Editors Herald:—Since April conference I have been laboring in Northern Michigan district. I have made several new openings. When we first went to New Sanilac the officers closed the schoolhouse; but part of the people wanted to hear us, so they broke in the schoolhouse and we went in and preached. This was done three times before they gave up. One of our worst opposers was a leader in the Free Methodist Church. He opposed us in every way he could; he went so far that his own class brought him before the church and he was expelled. While preaching there the people came from another neighborhood and invited me to come and preach. I did so, and baptized two ladies, a mother and daughter. After that I was invited to another neighborhood to preach. I preached three times in their schoolhouse. A man there had a fine grove on his farm, which the Methodists and Baptists had leased to hold camp meetings and picnics. He said to me one day after meeting, You had better have meeting in my grove, so I appointed meeting, and the Methodists and Baptists notified him we could not have it, but we had it all the same.

On July 23 and 24 we held a two days' meeting; Elder J. J. Bailey and the writer being the only elders present. We had a grand meeting. Very many are believing the gospel there. It is an old settled community, and I am safe to say very many of the people believe the gospel. I expect a large ingathering soon; several have said they were going to be baptized.

On July 3 and 4 I attended a picnic and meeting at Coleman; several saints and some outsiders from Beaverton attended; among the number a Free Methodist preacher. He had been attending our meetings at Beaverton some time before, but on the 4th I baptized him, and I believe he will be a good help to the cause. I will relate a circumstance that transpired relative to him. The first time I met or heard of him, I was in the post office, where I saw a notice on the wall stating there would be preaching in the hall at night by C. Irwin. As I read the notice the Spirit fell upon me, and I felt the man was honest, and I must attend his meeting. I did so and heard him preach. What he preached was all true. After meeting I invited him over to our meeting. The first sermon he heard he told the people that he had received more truth and Bible that night than in all the sermons he had ever listened to. He told the sister where he was boarding he wanted to see me and have a talk. We talked for several hours. The next Sunday night I preached on authority. When he went home he said to Sr. Manuel, According to that sermon I have no authority to preach, and I never will until I have.

On the 14th and 15th we held a two days' meeting at Butman. We did not have many out on first day, the weather being somewhat rainy, but we had a good meeting. We expected Elder J. J. Bailey and some others to help us, who did not come; but with Brn. Waters, Burch, and Badder we got along nicely. I baptized four, and several others said they were going to be baptized soon.

I have been in the church twenty years and I never saw such interest manifested as is in these parts. There is work for a dozen ministers that ought to be attended to at once. I am doing all I can to spread the glorious gospel, and the Lord is blessing me much in preaching his word; and intend to keep on doing all I can to advance the cause.

Yours in bonds,

J. A. CARPENTER.

COLUMBUS, Neb., August 20.

Editors Herald:—We have had a two days' meeting, that is a bright spot gleaming into this corner of the Northern Nebraska district, held on the 14th and 15th inst. Elders J. M. Stubbart, Fred A. Smith, and D. M. Rudd gave us some sound gospel sermons, which were well attended and good interest manifested by both the saints and others who came and worshiped with us. Bro. Stubbart was unable to be with us on the 14th by reason of sickness in his family, but was with us on Sunday the 15th. Bro. F. A. Smith was chosen to preside over the meetings. "In honor preferring one another." The weather was all that could be desired. The preaching on Saturday was by Brn. F. A. Smith and D. M. Rudd.

On Sunday morning Bro. Stubbart discoursed on authority of the priesthood; it was an excellent effort, and a complete demolishing of all pretenders who teach for hire and divine for money. Bro. D. M. Rudd took up the theme of "prophecy" in the afternoon, especially discussing the restoration of Palestine, and its kindred relations, as we see its development, contrasting its fertility to-day as against its barrenness in past centuries, overturning the claims of the most skeptical.

In the evening Bro. Fred A. Smith gave us convincing testimony of the restored gospel as delivered by the angel in this dispensation of time; himself aided by the Spirit of truth, left no room for gainsaying the divine mission of Joseph Smith, seer and revelator.

The attention and attendance were good throughout the two days' services. The Rev. Olcott (Methodist) was with us morning and evening, and D. Puls (Baptist) at night.

The sermons were very comforting to the members, especially to those who are nearing home and their promised rest with Christ the Son of God. The following notice appears in the Argus, published here:—

"Elders J. M. Stubbart, of Octavia, Fred A. Smith, of Omaha, and D. M. Rudd of Iowa, who conducted the services at the Latter Day Saints' chapel Saturday and Sunday, returned to their respective homes Monday. The services were very interesting and well attended. While here Mr. Smith had the pleasure of meeting an old schoolmate, Mrs. Hans. Elliott, with whom he used to attend school at Nauvoo, Illinois. The two had not met before in twenty years."

H. J. HUDSON.

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Roth closed a series of meetings here on last Sunday evening, held in the district tent. Twenty-four sermons were preached, all by Bro. Roth, excepting two or three, which were preached by Bro. Kephart. The average attendance was good, the tent being comfortably filled the most of the time, and often good sized audiences outside and in buggies in the street. All could hear as the tent was located close to the street, although this was not necessary, as Bro. Roth hardly ever speaks in whispers. He spoke in his usual plain, positive, and fearless manner, which awakened a deep interest in the minds of those who are not creedbound, but there were a few who had itching ears and who are determined to heap to themselves teachers. These could not stand a steady fire of truth and retreated early in the engagement. Friends were made for the cause of truth and prejudice removed. One old gentleman, a member of the Christian Church, said he would make it an especial object to go among the people of this city and set them aright in their mistaken ideas of us.

A number of others expressed themselves as being glad to learn that they had entertained wrong ideas of us as a people and are willing to be set right, while those who heard but little or none continue to shout "Mormons," "frauds," "deluded," etc., the most of latter being professing Christians. Five precious souls were gathered in and were buried with Christ in baptism, three of whom were adults, two of them heads of families, one a very promising young man, and two sweet little girls. Some more are near the kingdom who will doubtless yield an obedience in the near future.

Some of the city papers were very generous, offering to insert any announcement that we wished to make during the meetings, but a reporter of one of the dailies came to the tent to interview Bro. Roth to obtain, as he said, items for publication, and got into a debate as to which could lay best claim of being the Church of Christ, the Church of England or the Latter Day Saints; but Bro. Roth pressed him so hard and put such hard questions to him that he left, probably to study his catechism; and if the items ever found their way into that daily none of the saints have ever been able to find them.

Bro. Kephart has done faithful service here and has baptized four, one of whom is a man with quite a large family and has been a helpless invalid about four years, but the Lord is blessing him now and he is steadily gaining in strength. Saints, remember him in your prayers. We all feel hopeful and encouraged and are willing to labor till the Master comes.

WHAT CHEER, Iowa, Aug. 18.

Editors Herald:—Since leaving conference at Richland Creek, I have labored in Buchanan, Black Hawk, and Mitchel counties. In the town of Mitchel I secured the G. A. R. hall, but found the church members there had so much religion, and so little charity for others, that they would not come out and hear; they are thriving so well on the husks, they have no desire for the corn. I went to Clarksville, and was refused the use of two churches they were glad to have me occupy seventeen years ago; but I have the promise of a hall on my return later on.

I then went to a place called Antioch, where I also preached seventeen years ago. They gave me the use of the church, and a good hearing, with many requests to return, which I expect to do as soon as the farmers are through with harvest.

I then went to Waterloo and Dunkerton, where I found the saints at both places alive and ready to assist in spreading the gospel. I made arrangements to return there also when harvest is over. I stopped at Marshalltown, where I again found earnest saints, one at the Soldiers Home. I hope to do some work there soon.

I then came to Oskaloosa, where I found a small branch, but alive to the work, which is best told by the number I found very near the kingdom. I baptized Bro. Weldon, who is an invalid; and for three years a patient, loving wife had fed and cared for him like a child, as he has been confined to his bed and perfectly helpless for that length of time. He expressed a desire to be baptized when I baptized his daughter one year ago, but his strength failed him. This time the saints took it in hand and made a tank, put it by his bedside, filled it with water, and at an early hour on Sunday morning I took him in my arms and buried him in the water. He arose praising God with renewed strength, and in a few hours he got up and walked across the floor. That afternoon a number of the saints called on him, bringing a nice invalid chair with them, and on their departure, they left the chair with Bro. Weldon sitting in it.

I am now at What Cheer, where I found a few earnest saints, under the leadership of Elder Parley Batten, who is not only trying keep the fire ablaze in his own town, but in company with Priest Evan Jones, has taken up work in the country. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion I am your colaborer in the work,

W. H. KEPHART.

AN EVENING'S CONVERSATION.—
NO. 2.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

GEORGE.—But who were these saints reorganizing at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, and other places? Did they have the authority or priesthood with them to organize, ordain, etc.? Where was the church between 1844 and 1852, when this reorganizing movement began? And is it not just a little absurd that this small band of saints should claim to represent the true followers of Christ, and that all others had gone astray?

James.—Those questions are pertinent and natural, but are much more easily answered than I used to think. As to who these people were: The church at the death of Joseph Smith consisted of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred and fifty thousand. The lowest estimate places it at the former figure; and taking that as a basis from which to figure, and allowing all that the leaders of the church here in Utah claim; viz., twenty thousand that followed them to these valleys, and we have at least one hundred and twenty thousand that did not go. There were branches organized at Beloit, Wisconsin, and at Jeffersonville, Illinois, during the lifetime of Joseph Smith. These saints remained true to their gospel covenant, but refused to follow B. Young to the mountains, and also refused to believe in his right to the leadership of the church. They continued preaching the gospel, and in 1851 or 1852 were commanded to organize together, and that God would in due time send to them the seed of the Prophet. They obeyed the divine mandate, and this organization formed the nucleus around which the remnants of the faithful began to gather.

Among these saints were men who held the high priesthood, some of them having been ordained by Joseph Smith himself. I know that we have always been taught that those remaining in Illinois and other places in the East had no authority, and I used to be fanatical enough to believe it; but nothing looks more absurd when we stop to think seriously of it. The idea that because a person refused to remove from one place to another, that that alone would give them no right to further officiate in gospel ordinances, or in regulation of church matters! No charge of immorality was ever brought against these men who officiated in the beginning of the Reorganization, consequently they must have retained their power to act in all the rights and privileges belonging to the offices they held.

George.—But how could they ordain a president of the church and apostles unless they were apostles themselves?

James.—When the church is fully organized, and in working order, then it is the imperative duty and right of the Twelve to ordain and set in order the church, under the direction of the Presidency; but to say that there can be no circumstances where others can do so, is absurd. We have been taught to look at the Presidency and Apostles as having some especially high priesthood, and if they were taken away that the church would be helpless; but it is not the fact, however. All men holding the Melchisedec priesthood are equal, so far as their priesthood and right to officiate in the various rites, ceremonies, and ordinances of the church are concerned. Any power that they may obtain that distinguishes them from others is only executive in its nature. That power is given them by the people, not by God. It is true that God reserves the right to nominate certain officers of the church; but that nomination does not give them the right to act until the church has accepted them for the office by vote. Inasmuch then as the church has the right and privilege of bestowing this executive power upon a man, it is obvious that it would have the right to appoint anyone from the Melchisedec priesthood to ordain or set him apart to the office, especially in the absence of any of those whom the law makes the regulators of the church in these matters. If you will turn to section 107:11, 12, you will find this item of law:—

An elder has a right to officiate in his stead when the high priest is not present. The high priest and elder are to administer in spiritual things, agreeable to the covenants and commandments of the church; and they have a right to officiate in all these offices of the church when there are no higher authorities present.

This would give those who held the eldership and the high priesthood the right, under the direction of God and the church, to officiate in the ordination of "young Joseph" to the presidency of the Reorganization.

George.—But is it not true that there were others holding this higher executive authority that should have been called in to assist in the regulation of these matters? What about the majority of the Twelve that came here to Utah? Were they to be entirely ignored in the matter?

James.—God at least seems to have recognized the fact that there was no higher authority than that represented by the saints reorganizing at Zarahemla and other places. For when young Joseph went to him for counsel he was directed to go there and join them. This, if we accept the revelation to the young man as genuine, is conclusive evidence of a departure from the faith, and consequent loss of the right to act by virtue of the priesthood by those who once held the executive power to regulate the church. If we need any further proof, we find it in the fact that they had proven themselves unworthy of, and false to the trust reposed in them, in ignoring the revelations of God which he had given as a law to the church, wherein it was stated that Joseph Smith should appoint his own successor, and that that successor should be from the seed of the martyr, by one of their number aspiring to that position to which he had no lawful, divine, or hereditary right, and the rest upholding and abetting the wrong by sustaining him. We need not enter into a lengthy discussion of the departure from the faith, as this alone without repentance and retraction would be sufficient to justify such a statement as was made to young Joseph, as given before; but perhaps before we get through with our conversation further light may be thrown upon the departure from the faith of the majority of the Twelve.

George.—But we have been told that Joseph gave instruction to the church, that to remain with the majority would insure being found on the right side.

James.—I know that we have been told that, but I have come to the conclusion that he never said it; at least not in the sense in which it is used here in Utah. A measure is not necessarily right because the majority advocates it. The only way to judge a principle of law is by comparison with a standard of law. Such standard we have in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants. When a majority departs from the law laid down in them, it is obvious that they must be wrong, and that it is folly to follow them farther. Let us make a general application of the statement that the majority is always right. If it fails in a general application, it will fail in a special. The majority of the inhabitants of the world are not Christians; therefore Christianity must be wrong. The majority of the Christians are Catholics; therefore the Catholics must be right. If one would stop to think for a moment, he would at once acknowledge that truth has always been in the minority, so far as its advocates among men are concerned. But I can cite you to some passages of Scripture where the fact is made plain that God was with the minority. In first Kings, 19: 18, when Elijah complains that he alone of all Israel is left to worship and serve God, God gives him to understand that he has seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.

Here were only seven thousand that were free from idolatry out of about a million of people. Who here met with God's approval, the minority or the majority? Again, in Revelation 3: 4, God in sending his message to Sardis, one of the seven churches of Asia, said:—

Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy.

Comment upon this is almost superfluous. None can possibly deny, that if these few names in Sardis, that had not defiled their garments, had organized, and by the command of God gone forward in the establishment of his work, that they would have been accepted and owned of him. The passage here referring to the saints at Sardis could be applied with perfect propriety to the saints at Nauvoo and the east. There were a few souls who refused to bow the knee to the Baal of lust and misrule, that led the church or a portion of it into the valleys of the mountains, ostensibly to find safety; but really to escape the just consequences of their evil practices, and establish a kingdom of misrule and evil, over which one man was to rule, and did rule, for a brief time with absolute power.

George.—In a passage you gave me to read a few minutes ago, it was said the one whom God had ordained to be the successor to lead the church, should come in at the gate, and be ordained to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive, through him whom I have appointed. Does young Joseph fulfill this part of the prediction? I have been told that he does not teach nor believe in the gathering, and that was plainly a part of the revelations given to his father.

James.—You and I have, I believe, been intentionally misinformed on many of these questions. I am able to state positively that the Reorganization does teach the "gathering." But they teach, that like every other righteous principle, this has been abused. One of the strange effects of obeying this latter-day gospel has been and is that it creates an almost uncontrollable desire to gather together somewhere. God foresaw this, and endeavored in various ways and at different times to check the impetuosity of the saints in this regard; in proof of which, read Doctrine and Covenants 58: 56:—

And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight.

And again, section 63: 24:—

And now, behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning his saints, that they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste, lest there be confusion, which bringeth pestilence.

Also, section 101: 67, 68:—

Therefore, a commandment I give unto all the churches, that they shall continue to gather together unto the places which I have appointed; nevertheless, as I have said unto you in a former commandment, let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you.

Again, section 105: 24, 25:—

Talk not of judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works, but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people; and behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, Execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs.

And yet again, section 133: 15:—

But verily, thus saith the Lord, Let not your flight be in haste, but let all things be prepared before you; and he that goeth let him not look back, lest sudden destruction shall come upon him.

Surely the Lord must have seen danger in hastily gathering his people together, or he would not have been so particular in warning and rewarning them against gathering in haste. There is another thing that we have overlooked in our eagerness to gather here to Utah, and that is that it is an express violation of the revelations of God to teach Utah as a place of gathering. The Lord said, Doctrine and Covenants, section 57: 1, 2:—

Hearken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land, which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints: wherefore this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion.

Notice that the Lord says, this is the land which he has consecrated and appointed for the gathering of the saints, and the city of Zion. Now turn to section 101: 17-21, and read what the Lord says there:—

Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered. They that remain, and are pure in heart, shall return, and come to their inheritances, they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy to build up the waste places of Zion; and all these things that the prophets might be fulfilled. And, behold, there is none other place appointed than that which I have appointed; neither shall there be any other place appointed than that which I have appointed, for the work of the gathering of my saints, until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them; and then I have other places which I will appoint unto them, and they shall be called stakes, for the curtains, or the strength of Zion.

There are three important statements made in these two revelations. First, Zion is definitely located in the land of Missouri, and it is stated that that land is consecrated for the gathering of the saints. Second, "Zion shall not be moved out of her place." Third, There shall no other place be appointed than that which is appointed, until no room is left for the saints to gather therein. In all of the above, connected with the gathering of the saints, the Reorganization is strictly in harmony with. They have always urged the saints not to be in haste to gather, but to let all things be prepared before them; and when they did gather, they were to gather to the land and regions round about, that God had consecrated for that purpose. The result is that in those regions, and everywhere, they are gaining favor and grace in the eyes of the people, just as the Lord said they would. The result of leaving converts where we find them in the world, until they are prepared to go to Zion, has resulted in a more rapid spread of the gospel in the remote regions from Zion; and they have been able to materially assist in the preaching of the gospel, by furnishing homes for the missionaries in their various fields.

There is another way in which we should be prepared for Zion, and that is by living a godly life. Zion is said to be the pure in heart; and it is perfect folly for us to conclude that the moment a person is baptized into the church, that he is a fit inhabitant of Zion. I think that the Lord had in view the preparation, spiritually, for Zion more than he did temporally, when he made the declaration not to be in haste; because it caused confusion and pestilence. I heard an old man testify in a prayer meeting once that before he came to the vallies of the mountains from England, that he was told that here was peace and love personified. The saints were living together in harmony. He made every kind of sacrifice to get to these peaceful vales; and behold, when he got here, almost the first sight that greeted his eyes was two of the brethren chopping each other up with spades over a water ditch. They may have been amply prepared, financially, for their emigration to Zion, but spiritually they were not. The Reorganization has endeavored to impress both the spiritual and temporal preparation for Zion; and I was reading in one of the papers published at Independence, Missouri, a few days ago, the statement that by far the largest audience of worshipers that met together in that city on the Sabbath day was that which assembled in the "magnificent stone church," owned and occupied by the Reorganization. So, while our members that have gathered at the central stake of Zion may not be perfect, we are trying to carry on the work as originally inaugurated by our martyred prophet.

George.—How about the law of tithing? Does the Reorganization believe in that and practice it?

James.—Yes, we believe in the law of tithing, and it is coming more and more into practice every day. I know the word has gone out in this country that we do not; but that is because we have opposed what we deem is a false system of tithing, as taught by Brigham and his associates. If you will turn to Doctrine and Covenants, section 119, in your book, and read me the first four verses:—

George.—Reading:—

Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion and for the priesthood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them for ever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord.

James.—And in Deuteronomy 14: 22, I find the following:—

Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth from year to year.

I want you to especially note the words "interest" and "increase," as used in the two quotations. The word "tithe" means tenth, so the last quotation would virtually say give one tenth of all your increase. The two words, "interest" and "increase," are the same—that which you have remaining after the expenses of your living are paid. In departing from this law is where Brigham Young made the first, or one of the first, departures from the faith as taught by Joseph Smith, thereby showing to those who were not blind to his faults that he cared more for his own financial advancement, than he did the welfare of the people of the church. In an epistle dated Nauvoo, Illinois, August 15, 1844, and signed by Brigham Young, I find the following. Millennial Star, volume 5, page 94:—

Therefore, as soon as the twelve have proceeded to a full and complete organization of the branches abroad, let every member proceed immediately to tithe himself or herself, a tenth of all their property and money, and pay it into the hands of the twelve, or into the hands of such bishops as have been, or shall be appointed by them to receive the same, for the building of the Temple or the support of the priesthood, according to the Scriptures, and the revelations of God; and then let them continue to pay in a tenth of their income from that time forth, for this is a law unto the church as much binding on their conscience as any other law or ordinance.

And let this law or ordinance be henceforth taught to all who present themselves for admission into this church, that they may know the sacrifice and tithing which the Lord requires, and perform it; or else not curse the church with a mock membership as many have done heretofore. This will furnish a steady public fund for all sacred purposes, and save the leaders from constant debt and embarrassment, and the members can then employ the remainder of their capital in every branch of enterprise, industry, and charity, as seemeth them good, only holding themselves in readiness to be advised in such manner as shall be for the good of themselves and the whole society; and thus all things can move in harmony and for the general benefit and satisfaction of all concerned.

You can see here that while Brigham sugar coats the paragraph, by trying to show that it is for the good of all concerned, yet it contains a very bitter dose in its interior; viz., "they shall continue to pay one tenth of all their income." "Income" was instituted in the place of "interest" or "increase," in the former law, as taught by the martyr. "Income" is that which a man earns or receives for his wages or his investment. "Increase" is that which is saved over and above his expenses of living for himself and family. As an illustration; suppose I receive a salary of seventy dollars per month, it requires fifty of that to pay my expenses, twenty dollars would be my increase; and the Lord asks me to pay two dollars for his work. Brigham would require me, under his "one-tenth-of-your-income" law, to pay seven dollars per month. But upon the man who was getting more than he expended for his support, it did not work a hardship; but upon the man who by applying all his earnings could then scarcely eke out an honest living, it did. One of the distinct characteristics of this latter-day work, according to Malachi, as found in his third chapter, was:—

And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the Lord of hosts.

And St. John, in his first epistle, 5:3, says:—

For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous.

And Christ says, Matthew 11:28-30:—

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

Any man or set of men, then, who oppress the hireling in his wages, the "widow and the fatherless," cannot represent this latter-day work; and the ones who teach as a law that which is grievous and a burden to bear, do not teach God's law or commandments; and those who lay heavy burdens on men do not represent Christ. All of these things were done, however, under the "one-tenth-of-all-your-income law," hence brand those men who taught it, as contrary to God and his law, and as not correctly representing Christ.

If we had however taken as much trouble to have learned exactly what these "Josephites" did teach as we did to circulate the false stories about them, we would have learned that the very first revelation received by "young Joseph" for the guidance of the church over which he was chosen to preside, not only taught and directed that the law of tithing should be taught; but also made it impossible, only by a direct violation of its provisions, for any man to use the funds raised thereby to his own aggrandizement. Here is the revelation in full. It was given October 7, 1861:—

In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the purposes of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others, or for the purpose of self-aggrandizement by any one, be he whomsoever he may be. As I live saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment.

This has no uncertain sound, and none can be deceived as to its meaning; and your objection falls to the ground—that upon the law of tithing the son was not teaching the revelations of his father.

George.—Well; how about temple building, endowments, baptism for the dead, and so forth? You do not claim that the Reorganization is teaching these things do you?

James.—In answering these questions I can say that we believe in all that you have mentioned; but as it was with the law of tithing, so with these things,—a perversion of the law and purposes of these different things has occurred. First, I will notice temple building, as you mentioned it first. Turn to section 124: 39, Doctrine and Covenants, and you will find the following:—

Therefore, verily I say unto you, that your anointings, and your washings, and your baptisms for the dead, and your solemn assemblies, and your memorials for your sacrifices, by the sons of Levi, and for your oracles in your most holy places, wherein you receive conversations, and your statutes and judgments, for the beginning of the revelations and foundations of Zion, and for the glory, honor, and endowments of all her municipalities, are ordained by the ordinance of my holy house which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name.

Here the statement is plainly made that God always commands his people when he wants an house built for the purposes named. We have been taught that it means a perpetual command to build. But he does not say my people are "commanded always" to build; but my people are "always commanded." He says in the previous verse that he commanded Moses to build the tabernacle in the wilderness, and in First Chronicles, 28: 11–19, we are told that God commanded David to build the temple, and gave him the dimensions, and purposes for which the building was to be erected. David turns the whole thing over to his son Solomon to build, and gives him to understand that he received the whole directly from God, as you will find in the nineteenth verse:—

All this, said David, the Lord made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

God has not commanded the Reorganization to build a temple, and we are not presumptuous enough to build without a command. When he does so command we are ready to perform his will in the matter. It is not necessary, however, to conclude that because a people or church are building temples that they are for that reason acceptable to God. There are other things, of greater importance than that, if we believe Jeremiah, or the Lord speaking through Jeremiah. In the seventh chapter, verses three to five he says:—

Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place. Trust ye not in lying words, saying, The temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord, The temple of the Lord, are these. For if ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings; if ye thoroughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbor, etc.

This shows that the building of temples, and a reliance upon them, did not sanctify ancient Israel, is indeed it is not a direct prophecy of what is occurring right here among us to-day. There is another passage, which I find in Hosea 8: 14:—

For Israel hath forgotten his maker, and buildeth temples.

The people in those times evidently had also forgotten that God reserved the right to command in the building of temples; and in their arrogance and pride, went on with the building of these houses of God, thinking that that alone would sanctify them; and God calls them to an account, as I have just referred to in Jeremiah seventh chapter.

Conference Minutes.

EUROPEAN MISSION.

Annual conference met in the saints' meeting room, North Manchester, at six p. m., July 31, 1897; James Caffall, president, in the chair; at his suggestion F. G. Pitt was chosen to assist; W. R. Armstrong secretary. Elder Caffall opened the business session with appropriate remarks; also read his report. Reports of districts: Birmingham reported by C. H. Caton, Manchester by J. Dewsnup, Sr., Sheffield by John Austin, Wales (Eastern) by T. S. Griffiths, Wales (Western) by E. R. Dewsnup. Reports of isolated branches: London by J. Gerrard, Broadelst by Ed Tucker. Bishop's agent's report presented, examined, and found correct.

The Sunday school convention asked for time to carry out its exercises, when nine a. m., to 10:30 a. m., Sunday, and 8:30 a. m., to 10:30 a. m., Monday, were granted. The latter time was afterwards extended one hour. Notices of motion from Western Wales were presented, which were ordered to lie on the table until our next conference (1898). Resolved that we consider the proposed rules for the government of the conferences of the elders of the European mission. Considerable discussion followed, after which it was resolved that the rules become the standing laws governing the elders' conferences of the European mission; that they be printed and a copy be supplied to each elder of the mission. The rules are as follows:—

1. That a conference of the elders of the European mission be held annually; that it convene on the Saturday before bank holiday (Monday) in the August of each year.

2. Of whom composed. That all districts, branches not within the limits of districts, and missions comprising the European mission, be considered an integral part of such conference.

3. Objects of the conference.—These conferences shall have for their object, (a) The mutual intercourse of the elders engaged in the spread of the gospel, and for that purpose to do all in their power to encourage elders from all parts of their field to make special effort to be present at such conferences. (b) The deepening of spiritual life, so that the gospel may be more fully preached by good example of the preachers. (c) To do whatever business may be found necessary at the time for the better spreading of the gospel in these lands. (d) By counsel and advice to aid in all possible ways the work intrusted to our care.

4. Who shall preside.—That the missionary in charge of the European mission for the time being shall preside over such conference. In the event of there being more than one missionary in charge of said mission, the one holding the prior appointment shall preside, unless such missionaries by arrangement between themselves mutually agree which of them shall preside. In the event of the absence of any missionary in charge of the aforesaid mission, a president shall be chosen for the time being as provided for in "Book of Rules of Order, section 3, page 8, also 16: 16.

5. Secretary or Clerk.—That a secretary for the conference be appointed from amongst the elders. It shall be his duty to have charge of all books and documents in conjunction with the missionary in charge; and also send out the notices convening said conferences, stating time and place, such notices to be sent to district and branch presidents (including presidents of missions) one month before such date of convention.

6. Treasurer.—That a treasurer shall be appointed from amongst the elders whose duty it shall be to have charge of all moneys that may be subscribed in aid of the expenses of such conferences, and shall when called upon by the presentation of an official requisition, signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary of the conference, pay over upon such order such sums as may be necessary to meet the outstanding liabilities of such conferences.

7. Reports of districts and branches.—That the authorities of districts, branches not in districts, and missions, send a report of the spiritual condition of the work in their respective fields to each conference, such reports to be in writing, and duly signed by the president and secretary of such district or branch; said report to reach the secretary of the European conference not later than July 20 in each year.

8. Reports of elders.—That all elders or priests laboring by appointment from these conferences, or not included in any organized district, report their labors to the annual conference. All reports must be submitted in writing, handed to the secretary, and be read from the table.

9. Agenda.—That notice of all new business (except financial items) to be introduced at the annual conferences of this mission be written out and forwarded to the secretary at least three months before the convening of such conferences, so that due notice of the same may be sent to the several districts, branches, and missions, within its limits. That the secretary prepare an agenda of business thus sent in time for such conference, which business shall have precedence over all other business of like nature.

10. Order of Business, etc.—That in all business arising in or brought before these conferences the "Book of Rules of Order," as published by the church, be the guide and standard of appeal.

11. New rules, etc.—That no new rule be added, nor any of these be altered, amended, struck out, or rescinded except by a two thirds vote of the annual conference. That all notices for new rules, alterations, amendments, etc., be handed to the secretary in writing at least three clear months before the convening of the conference at which they are to be presented, and signed by not less than three members of the conference.

Resolved that the reports of elders outside districts be read. Elders W. Kendrick, R. Clift, T. and A. Bradshaw, J. Tankard, and F. R. Tubb were then reported for the Zion's Hope branch, London. Resolved that all licenses from branches outside districts be indorsed.

At the conclusion of the conference business, tributes of praise were offered to the integrity and uprightness of Apostle James Caffall. Our aged brother feelingly replied after which the conference rose and sang, "God be with you till we meet again."

Resolved that this conference of the European mission hereby expresses its unbounded approbation and admiration of the indefatigable labors and courageous toil of our dearly beloved brother and missionary in charge, Apostle James Caffall, who is now leaving us, and to record our deep love for him, and our hope, faith, and prayers that God may spare his labors to the church yet for many years, and endow him and his with all comfort, joy, and happiness.

Resolutions sustaining the general spiritual authorities of the church, the new authorities of the European mission, the treasurer, secretaries, presidents of districts, vice presidents, and presidents of branches, followed. Votes of thanks were tendered the brethren and sisters of Manchester (especially North Manchester) for the way in which they had catered to and cared for the wants of the visiting brethren and sisters.

Elder Pitt vividly described to the congregation the scene and his impressions when the late revelation was presented to the conference of 1897. The assembly with one voice indorsed the late revelation, after which they rose and sang, "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." A motion to adjourn was carried and proceedings closed with prayer. Sermons were delivered by Brn. F. G. Pitt and James Caffall, one child was blessed, and a number were administered to.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI.

Conference was held at Bruner, July 24, 25, Elder C. J. Spurlock presiding; Don W. Schofield clerk. On motion Elder I. N. White was requested to preside, with consent and aid of the district president. Branch reports: Bruner 34. Springfield 48; gain 3. West Plains 56; gain 1, loss 1. Woodside 38. Vera Cruz 72; gain 5, loss 11. Pomona 38; gain 1, loss 2. Ozark 32. Then followed the reports of elders, priests, and teachers. No report being sent in from Willow Springs, a motion was adopted that the district clerk take charge of the records of said branch, and correct them as best he could. Motion adopted that a committee of three be appointed to investigate the trial of Sr. Davis, of Vera Cruz; the investigation to be reported at this present conference. Motion adopted that the work of the district be divided between two district presidents; one to take charge of all branches west of and including Vera Cruz, Bruner, Ozark, and Springfield; the other to have charge of all branches east of Vera Cruz, including Willow Springs, Pomona, West Plains, and Woodside. Bro. C. M. Bootman was elected president of the east end of district. Bro. J. R. Wedlock was elected vice president of west end of district. President of district, clerk, and treasurer were sustained. Report of treasurer read and accepted. Voted that the Southwestern Missouri district reunion commence on September 10, at Mt. Grove. (Since then the time has been changed to October 8.)

The evening sermon was by Pres. C. M. Bootman. On Sunday forenoon Bro. I. N. White delivered an instructive as well as an all-inspiring and spiritual sermon, which was listened to very attentively and appreciated much by all present. The ordination of Don W. Schofield to office of priest was attended to by Elders White, Sparling, and Wedlock. Adjourned to Pomona, Missouri, November 5 and 6.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Eastern Maine District.—As I wish to reach all saints in this district, I will here give notice, that all having tithings or offerings for the support of the gospel can send it to U. M. Kelley; Indian River, Washington County, Maine. All money received will be promptly receipted.

We hope all may be moved upon to assist in this great work that we are engaged in, by contributing of their means just as God has blessed them. Let us all work together and the Lord will work with us, and God will bless the work that we do. Seek ye first to establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness. So, saints, don't forget what we are working for. Yours in hope,

U. M. KELLEY, Bishop's Agent.

Once more I am moved upon to call your attention, as members of the Northeast Missouri district, to a duty that is essential on the part of every Latter Day Saint, and that is the law of tithing. While it is true that many of the saints in this district are observing to honor this law, which is as much binding on the saints as the first principles of the gospel, it is also true that the major part of the membership of this district, comprising nearly four hundred members, do not observe this sacred law; for this reason I wish to impress upon all saints throughout the district the importance of observing this sacred law, for upon the complying with this tithing law depends the success of the gospel to a great extent, so far as its growth and advancement to the nations of the earth is concerned. This fact demonstrates itself even in our own district.

New places have been opened up by our well beloved missionaries, namely, T. W. Chatburn, M. M. Turpen, and D. E. Tucker; and while we feel the loss of such an able worker as Elder Chatburn, we are confident it will be gain to the southern people, in his present field; hence our district is spreading in territory, and the work started in new places is neglected for want of temporal means to send more missionaries into our district. Truly the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. How is this demand to be filled, saints? You and I know it is not only to pray to the Lord to send more laborers to the field, but it needs a little sacrifice on our part, financially; hence, then, "what doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he has faith, and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."—James 2: 14-17. Abraham was justified by works (verse 21).

It seems that the law is not fully understood by some of the saints, and the binding obligation we covenanted to observe. Let me say, it is one of the means, in conjunction with the other principles working in harmony together. It is not only directed to the ancients to observe all things what I have commanded you to do (Matthew 28th chapter); but also directly to us, as revealed through Joseph the Seer. This temporal law was and is yet the means provided by the great Jehovah to carry out his designs and purposes to the full accomplishment of his promises. Let us therefore, dear saints, realize our obligations—not only to say but to do; also that the work in this district may still continue to grow.

"Let us keep the camp fires blazing Let us sound abroad his word."

J. T. WILLIAMS,
Bishop's Agent.

P. S.—I wish to state that Elder W. Summerfield is one of the missionary force in this district, working jointly with M. M. Turpen, subject to direction of Apostle I. N. White.

A CORRECTION.

Bro. Weaver H. Rogers begs to call attention to a slight error in recent issues of the Saints' Herald and Zion's Ensign in which he is undeservedly credited with assisting with the musical work in connection with the tent services at Pittsburg. Not wishing to receive the unmerited kind wishes of his friends he will be obliged for a correction.

AN APPEAL TO THE SAINTS.

A home among the saints is wanted for three fatherless little boys, ages about two and one half, four, and seven years, also for a baby girl six weeks old. Those who are willing to take these responsibilities upon themselves and thus bring relief to a distracted mother, and assist to lighten the heavy burden of one of God's saints, (who is heavily handicapped through a bodily affliction,) in the fight for a livelihood, will please communicate with Sr. Eva Glover, Arlington Heights, Massachusetts.

Loren Gaultier, of Lamoni, Elder H. A. Stebbins officiating in the ceremony. Members of the two families and a few friends were present. The occasion was a very pleasant one, for Bro. Loren and Sr. Lizzie have the loving esteem of all, both those present and the community at large, as two who were most worthy to be united in the covenant that God has given for the lifelong happiness of his children.

DIED.

HUNTLY.—At Rockland, Maine, July 13, 1897, Mary A., daughter of Bro. Henry R. and Sr. Julia A. Huntley, aged 20 years and 6 months. She walked all the days of her life in the highest of morals. May God bless Mary. Funeral services by Elder J. C. Foss.

STOREY.—At the home of her parents, July 10, 1897, Sr. Nettie Storey, aged 20 years and 29 days. Deceased was born in York Township, Steuben County, Indiana. Father, mother, three brothers, two sisters, and a large circle of friends mourn. The remains were laid to rest in Teeters cemetery. She was one of the charter members of the Z. R.-L. S. at Clear Lake, and later became a member of the church November 6, 1895, in which she continued faithful until the end.

LAMBERT.—William H., son of Bro. John and Sr. Matilda Lambert, was born in Des Moines Township, Lee County, Iowa, March 22, 1873; died July 24, 1897, aged 24 years, 4 months, and 2 days. His life had been one of constant suffering for twenty years or more. He leaves a father, mother, two brothers, and two sisters to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder F. M. Weld, assisted by Bro. John Jervis.

TURPEN.—Bro. Moses Turpen, of Holden, Missouri. Born June 22, 1849; baptized June 7, 1874; ordained an elder June 9, 1884; departed this life in the faith and hope of the gospel August 9, 1897. Wife and seven children mourn. Sermon by Elder H. Resch.

BRADLEY.—At her home in St. Joseph, Missouri, Ethel Maud passed from a life of suffering to peaceful rest, August 7, 1897, at the age of 1 year, 7 months, 12 days. She was the youngest child of Bro. and Sr. Bradley. Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Terry at the residence.

RICHARDS.—At Huntsville, Missouri, April 3, 1897, Elder D. F. Richards. The circumstances touching the death of this faithful worker are painfully distressing. A few months previous to his demise he had suffered from lagrippe, but it was so slight an attack, that he was able to follow his daily vocation up to the day on which he died. The end came without a moment's warning, either to the deceased or his faithful partner, Sister Richards; for on awakening shortly after midnight our sister was alarmed to notice that her loving partner was dying. Elder Richards was a most faithful worker in the cause of the church, having, in 1892, worked in the mission in various parts of England and Wales in company with Brn. G. T. Griffiths, J. R. Evans, and J. W. Gillen, returning in the fall of the same year. He has also baptized many people in different parts of the States during his career, and was always heartily welcomed as a sound and steadfast expounder of the truth. He was president of the Huntsville branch, and there his loss will be keenly felt as well as at the neighboring town of Moberly. The interment took place on the 5th inst. at Eager church burial ground, Brn. Broad and Pement conducting the services. A great deal of sympathy is being shown Sister Richards and her three young children in their sad bereavement, and she wishes to thank all the saints who so kindly expressed their sympathy.

Day by day the voice saith "Come,
Enter thine eternal home,"
Asking not if we can spare
This dear soul its summons there.

Had he asked us, well we know
We should cry, Oh spare this blow!
Yea, with streaming tears should pray,
Lord we love him, let him stay!

But the Lord doth naught amiss,
And since he hath ordered this
We have naught to do but still Rest in silence on his will.

Royal makes the food pure, wholesome and delicious.

JEWISH COLONIZATION PLANS.

THE Hebrew Standard is one of a number of prominent Jewish papers which strongly disapprove of recent projects for re-peopling Palestine with the members of the Jewish faith. The Herzl plan of colonization, one of the latest, has met with earnest opposition from this quarter. It is noteworthy also that a convention of Jewish rabbis lately held in Montreal voted unanimously against this same scheme. A correspondent of the Standard writes to ask the reason why that paper opposes Dr. Herzl's plan. If this scheme is not a good one, then what solution of the Jewish problem is proposed, the writer asks. "Shall we fold our hands," he continues, "and silently look on while eight millions of Jews in Russia, Rumania, Morocco, and Persia are being oppressed, tortured, and treated worse than animals, or shall we help them to liberty and a home? Should a nation of over ten millions of able and cultured people be dispersed and subjected to every despotic czar and barbaric prince, or should we aid them in becoming a free nation themselves?"

To these questions the Standard replies, in part, as follows:—

"Buy Palestine and nationalize the Jews? Even if we had the ready cash, could it be purchased? Would the Sultan sell his land for any price? Would the Mohammedans agree to give up their country? The idea is absurd!

"But let us suppose we could buy it, and the Lord would put his Spirit into the Turks, and they were willing to barter it away for—how much? Who has an idea how many millions it would take? Where would the money come from?

"Then, again, if it could be bought, and we had the money also, what would become of the Turks? Would they leave the country and give it over to the Jews, or become aliens and make the Jews the ruling power?

"Surely, the many millions of Jews could not be domiciled in Palestine, the land could not produce enough to support them. Hence we look with perfect favor upon a colonization scheme, to get a few thousand Jews there to build themselves homes under the favorable regime of the Sultan, to plant and cultivate for themselves vineyards, orchards, farms, etc., but to nationalize them a Messiah would have to come, to be sure, and as a Messiah is not in sight—are matters to be forced against the prophecy of God?"

In an editorial note referring to the Herzl plan the Northwestern Christian Advocate says:—

"Jews like to be where the Gentiles are. They have aided Gentiles to subdue many new lands, and they may not now prefer to go apart and create a separate new country for themselves alone. That plan must include authority to keep Gentiles out of the new country. Palestine is a pleasant and promising land, but other countries also are attractive. Some Jewish leaders have had their eyes upon South America as the land of promise to the Jews. He who begins with a theory can make it fit almost any land, even if it relates to Patagonia. Human insistence upon excessive details has decreased respect for some things in the Bible. The really divine elements in God's plans and intents would get far more respect if we had less of literalness on the part of those who imagine God has clearly said that which others cannot see in the text of the Scripture. Perhaps the final gathering of the dispersed Jews will be in Central Africa. It is indeed written that 'The Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem.' Other texts may seem to designate Palestine as the location of the restored Jews, but that may not settle the main question."

Another and a still later attempt at colonization is being made by the Hebrew Agricultural Society of Philadelphia. The objective point in this case is the Salinas Valley, about one hundred and eighteen miles southeast of San Francisco, California. A detachment of sixty persons has already gone to this location. It is proposed that they shall take up the land under the homestead law. The colonists have taken no money with them beyond their traveling expenses, expecting to get their living in their new homes from the start. The American Hebrew characterizes this project as "a foolhardy undertaking," and says:—

"We hope that they [the colonists] will meet with success; we sincerely trust that they will prove the exception in the long list of colonies that have been started west of the Alleghenies in the past fifteen years. We cannot but fear, however, that it starts under very poor auspices, for experience is a wise though costly teacher, and sad experience advises against colonization. All of the colonies thus far planted, barring only Alliance and Woodbine, have been so many sink-holes in whose preparation valuable time and energy have been spent and in whose depths has disappeared all the money given by willing hands and hearts, anxious to prove by their deeds their faith in the regeneration of the Russian Jew through agriculture.

"Most of these attempts at colonization have not left even a single surviving farmer.

"More successful and more promising have been the single individuals or families who have sought farming with such means as they possessed and who have been aided by persons or societies to the extent that surrounding conditions warranted.

"We will watch the progress of this venture with interest, and will be glad if our prognostications prove incorrect."—Literary Digest.

WHAT IS THE TRUTH ABOUT SPIRITUALISM?

THE Scotch verdict, "not proven," or at least the verdict, not completely proven, is the answer that finds favor with M. Emile Faguet. Many of the facts of spiritualism, he thinks, have been verified—up to a certain point; but the mixture of truth and fraud is as yet a hopeless one, and we must wait for the scholars to reach some more definite conclusions than are now possible. M. Faguet writes (in the Revue Bleue) in review of a book by Alfred Erney, entitled "Experimental Psychism." He speaks of the different forms of manifestation as defined by Erny: typtology, the rappings of spiritual visitors; levitation, the lifting of objects by such visitors; automatic writing, and direct writing, by which beings of the other world write, using the hand of a medium or without the use of an intermediary; psychometry, or second sight; psychic or astral body, that inward fluid which is able to externalize itself, which can present to you your own double or may be borrowed by another spirit and may be photographed; teleplasty, or apparitions, faintly visible and even tangible, which are the extreme form of communication with either the living or the dead.

Referring to these various forms of spiritualistic manifestation, Mr. Faguet proceeds to speak as follows:—

"Now all these are facts; they cannot be denied; they are facts which have been observed, registered, catalogued, which—especially in the very conscientious labors of the London Society of Psychical Research—are presented to us in good order, in great number (more than five hundred), and explained by certain general hypotheses which may perhaps become laws, and which form at present a body of the doctrine.

"But are these facts verified? All verification is relative; nothing is absolutely, radically, irrefragably verified. They are the facts which are verified up to a certain point; that is all that my absolute impartiality can say.

"A good proof is that insisted upon by M. Sardou in 'Spiritisme,' that the most ardent spiritists are the scholars, chemists, physicians, naturalists, who commenced by being skeptical and hostile, and who gave themselves to the study of spiritism only to convince themselves of its falsity. That this is a serious and strong argument in its favor I do not deny. But is it sufficient? . . .

"Another proof is that of photography. This should be a sure one. But spiritists recognize and even proclaim the fact that so many frauds are among them that no one can tell whether the apparitions photographed are not really those in which fraud has played a part. The proof is not yet sufficient.

"In fact, certain confessions—very honest ones—call attention to mediums who for a long time were considered very authentic, but who later became frauds. M. Erny tells us: 'These people probably had psychic gifts at one time, but, as I have often repeated, sooner or later, when these gifts are found insufficient, public mediums replace them by means of cheating and disguises.' . . .

"At what moment can the line be drawn between authentic experiences and those without scientific value which the former simulate? Proof fluctuates.

"Another doctor of psychic science even believes that there is always some fraud mingled with the truth, and that 'fraud is as inseparable from mediumship as simulation from hypnotism.' It is not necessary to say that the proof wavers.

"That which strikes those of us who are neutral is that while 'psychic phenomena' are produced in the presence of savants, it is only when one is present. An assembly of savants see nothing. Nothing of the sort at the Academy of the Sciences, the Academy of Medicine, or the Royal Society of London. Does this prove that the psychic revelations are false? Certainly not! But it does not prove that they are true.

"These gentlemen treat us very scornfully. They say: 'Hallucination! It is the only word you have. One might admit that a person in certain morbid states might have false perceptions; but to suppose that ten or fifteen persons in perfect health, some of whom are incredulous, should have the same hallucinations at the same moment, and should all see the same forms at the same moment, is an absolutely puerile hypothesis.'

"Oh, that depends! On the contrary, nothing appears to me more natural than that fifteen persons, at night, in the dark, assembled with the same idea, should have a common hallucination.

"No; all this is interesting; it has all been observed; it has all even been proved; but the proof is not yet complete. It is necessary to reserve one's decision. . . .

"We await a science which is in progress of formation. We will wait until the scholars agree. No one doubts the fact of gravitation, because all the scholars agree about it; no one doubts the theory of microbes, because all the savants, with two exceptions perhaps, accept it. It will be so with spiritism, when it shall have attracted to it all the scholars of the world. . . .

"In the mean while I prefer not to decide on the grand experiments which are now being made. I have not much confidence, but I wish to see. The facts are accumulating. They are in the hands of honest, conscientious, calm, and scholarly men. The verifications are being made from day to day, patiently and tranquilly, without haste and without too much prejudice. They are not complete, but they will be. When this has been done, from all the facts, something can be selected."—Translated for The Literary Digest.

The English "Church Reform League" has addressed a letter to one thousand of the London clergy, which contains the following passage indicating the policy which has been determined upon for the present: "Experience has proved that, even under the most favorable circumstances, it is now practically impossible (even if it were desirable) for Parliament to 'reform and cleanse' the church; and therefore, instead of any longer wasting time and energy in fruitlessly trying to pass a series of ecclesiastical bills through Parliament, a large body of us have banded ourselves together in order to try and get one short enabling act passed which will make it possible for the church at any time, through her properly constituted and representative assemblies, subject only to the supremacy of the Crown and the veto of Parliament, to effect all necessary reforms herself."

IS IT INTENTIONAL?

THE following letter from Dr. John Gilbert, of Fall River, Massachusetts, shows a rather singular condition of things; providing there is an intentional method employed by the citizens of Salt Lake City, to convey to tourists the idea that Joseph F. Smith, second counselor to President Wilford Woodruff, and consequently one of the Presidency, is a son of Joseph Smith, the Martyr. We doubt Joseph F. Smith being a party to any deception of the kind, as he is evidently a too loyal son of his father to permit it.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 3.

Editors Herald:—The inclosed slips taken from the Fall River News, issue of July 31 and August 2, explain themselves.

Mr. George W. Penniman, the husband of Mrs. Mary L. Penniman, is an extensive traveler and lecturer. He personally informed me that he was in Salt Lake City several days, was frequently in the company of George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, that he got the impression that Joseph F. Smith, was the son of Joseph Smith, the founder of the church and that all tourists get the same impression.

I have no doubt that Cannon, Smith, et al purposely allow this impression to get abroad and make no effort to enlighten the public as to the facts.

I think it the duty of all everywhere to inform the public of the truth that the lineal descendants of Joseph Smith, the martyred prophet and translator of the Book of Mormon, repudiate the teachings of Utah Mormonism.

In bonds,

DR. JOHN GILBERT.

We also quote a paragraph from each of the clippings referred to in Doctor Gilbert's letter which states that Mrs. Penniman gathered the idea that Joseph F. Smith was the son of the Martyr:—

The Presidents of the church occupy seats reserved for them, just below the choir railing, and the Twelve Apostles sit just below them. President Woodruff was not present, owing to illness. As he is more than ninety years old, he is soon to be succeeded by another, who will probably be Joseph Smith, a lineal descendant of the Joseph Smith who gave to the Mormons their so-called inspired writings.—Fall River News.

[Visitors to Salt Lake City are usually told that Joseph F. Smith, the person referred to in the article, (not Joseph Smith, who is a different person and has no affiliation with the Utah Mormons,) the second member of the First Presidency, and who will undoubtedly be the successor of Wilford Woodruff, is a lineal descendant of Joseph Smith the founder of the church and translator of the Book of Mormon. We are informed that this is not the fact, but the Joseph F. Smith is the son of Hiram Smith, one of the ministers of the church and brother of Joseph. The error is a common one and few tourists have ever been informed otherwise.]—Fall River News.

We have several times noticed this mistake in identity made by tourists, no doubt arising from a similarity of names, the only thing upon which to found such an idea.

Joseph F. Smith, of the Utah First Presidency, is the youngest living son of Hyrum Smith, brother of Joseph, the Martyr, and who was killed in Carthage jail, that bloody 27th of June fifty-three years ago, and is the half-brother of John Smith, the Patriarch of the Utah Church. John is the son of Jerusha Barden, the first wife of Hyrum Smith, and Joseph F. Smith is the son of Mary Fielding, the second wife of Hyrum, to whom he was married after the death of Jerusha, who died in Kirtland, Ohio, before the removal to Missouri.

There is not one of the lineage of Joseph Smith, the Martyr, living in Utah and a member of the Utah Mormon Church — not one. The only children born to the Martyr, Joseph Smith, are members of the Reorganized Church, and are living away from Utah; two at Lamoni, Iowa, and one at Elgin, Illinois.

We fail to see how the Utah people permit such an impression to be gathered by tourists, if it is done by them directly, or passively to their knowledge. We can, we think, understand why they could and do wish that the sons of the Prophet were among them and advocates of the faith and members of the Utah Church, instead of being active opposers of some things which have made Utah people famous as religionists. The sons of the Prophet believe the faith of their father, and find no place in it for plural marriage, spiritual wifery, marriage for eternity by proxy, the Adam-God theory, the shedding of man's blood by man as an atonement for sin, Utah being Zion, the accretion of families by patriarchal adoption, and some peculiar views seeming to be the natural outgrowths of, or adjuncts to these views, as that father's faith became known to them by direct teaching and public documentary evidence, left on record by him.

The body of Brigham Young lies in a spot easily to be seen by the passing public, in a metallic coffin, under a massive granite slab; his statue stands at the head of a principal street in the city near by the great Salt Lake, that men may honor his memory as they pass. The bodies of Joseph and Hyrum Smith lie in an unnumbered, unmarked grave to which no man may make pilgrimage; while no monument stands anywhere to attract the eyes and thoughts of the passer-by. Their memory is honored by but few, and a just conception of Joseph's features is had by fewer still. Many who openly profess to revere his teaching put his name to an open shame by charging him with beliefs and practices specifically denounced by revelation from God through him and adopted by the church in solemn assembly, where prophets, seers, apostles, councilors, venerable presidents, and holy men of excellent repute among men and high standing before God, bore testimony that the revelations were true and were accepted as the law of God to the church.

We do not know who will succeed the venerable President of the Utah Mormon Church, Wilford Woodruff; but it is not likely to be a lineal descendant of the Martyr Joseph Smith, much as such a successor might be desired by some in Utah; unless sweeping and radical changes of opinion and faith should occur in places where none is now looked for.

THE BLUFF PARK REUNION.

THE Assistant Editor, accompanied by his eldest son, and in company with Brn. William Anderson and J. C. Clapp, and Prof. J. T. Pence, of Graceland College, left Lamoni on Monday the 23d ult. to attend the reunion at Bluff Park, near Montrose, Iowa. The party went via Keokuk, where they rested over night, arriving at the reunion camp at about 9:30 the next morning. By previous arrangement the writer found comfortable quarters, and in harmony with previous experiences, very large hospitality, at the cottage of Pres. A. H. Smith, who with his son Fred A. were already on the grounds, and who royally welcomed the incoming travelers; Professor Pence also finding quarters with Bro. Smith.

Repairing to the pavilion the congregation was found engaged in prayer service, which was followed by preaching by Bro. William Lambert, on the duties of saints. The good Spirit was present, imparting counsel and comfort, inspiring the speaker with words of encouragement and wisdom, and bearing witness of the Father's continuing good will and care. Briefly considering the history of the past and looking forward to what the future might demand and develop, the writer was made to realize that the work was the Lord's and would be carried forward to successful completion, however trying the conditions through which any might be obliged to pass as a result of loyalty to truth. This witness of the Spirit was reviving. We again knew that the Lord was present among his people, ready to direct and bless, that he would direct and overrule to final victory; and which knowledge was confirmed by subsequent similar enjoyments of those present at the various services attended. Preaching services were held at 2:30 and at 7:45 p. m., Brn. F. A. Smith and J. C. Clapp addressing the respective audiences on fitting themes and with liberty and light.

The reunion had provided that Wednesday, the 24th, be devoted to recreation as those in attendance might severally desire; and the day of outing was generally observed and thoroughly enjoyed. It will be remembered that the city of Nauvoo, the former "beautiful city" of the saints, and headquarters of the church from 1839-1844, is located (what is left of it with later changes) on a prominent point of land just opposite Bluff Park, and around which the Mississippi River winds in quiet majestic mien that dignifies the scene and with the varied landscape of encircling hills lends natural enchantment to the view, of a place already deeply interesting because of the vicissitudes of the past which culminated in the death of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, at Carthage, Illinois, the county seat of Hancock County, in which Nauvoo is located, and twenty-three miles distant. The saints in camp desired to visit the old city and view its landmarks; also to enjoy other legitimate and proper opportunities for change of scene and healthful recreation by which man also comes in touch with his Maker through his works, which please the eye, gladden the heart, and enliven the soul; and without the enjoyment of which life cannot be broadened, rounded out, and completed; hence the provision for "outing day."

Being unable to complete arrangements for a steamboat excursion, many took advantage of a trip down the river to Warsaw, Illinois, and return, through the government locks to Keokuk, via the steamer Van Metre, provided for by the Methodist people—a trip of fifty miles for twenty-five cents. The excursion was about half Latter Day Saint and half Methodist, and was greatly enjoyed by all who took advantage of it. The start was made from Montrose at nine a. m., Keokuk being reached about eleven and Warsaw about 11:40, where the excursionists visited points of interest, principally the restaurants, and incidentally the site of Old Fort St. Edwards, the original settlement; starting on the return trip at three p. m., arriving about seven p. m.

Not an unpleasant feature occurred during the entire journey, which was one of innocent wholesome enjoyment of the pure air and picturesque scenery of the Mississippi Valley. Perhaps the writer had developed extra capacity for enjoyment of such an occasion, because of years of early life spent upon the banks of the Ohio and its tributaries, also because of years of almost uninterrupted attention to office work. Be that as it may, all comprising the Bluff Park party caught the infection and sat on the upper decks of the steamer and viewed the changing scenes presented by the hills rising above the Father of Waters, unwearingly throughout the journey; varying and heightening the enjoyment by happy conversation and occasional song exercises in the cabin.

President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley and three of his children had arrived during the day; this made the ministerial quota complete. Besides those mentioned of the general missionary force present were Brn. J. R. Lambert, J. H. Lake, J. S. Roth, J. S. Suively, F. M. Weld, T. J. Sheldon; also Bro. A. S. Cochran of Lamoni, Bro. W. Vickery of Plano, Illinois; and Bro. T. A. Hougas, Superintendent of the General Sunday School Association and present in the interest of that feature of the work, and who, assisted by members of the Sunday school workers present, gave that department due and necessary attention.

President Joseph Smith was also domiciled at the Smith cottage, completing its quota of lodgers and adding to the enjoyment of its residents and of all present at the meeting by his words of instruction and spirit of joviality and good cheer. He occupied the stand during the evening hour, pleasing his audience and reviving himself in the effort.

The daily program provided for Sunday school exercises at eight, prayer meeting at nine, preaching at 10:45 a. m., and at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m.; the afternoon of Thursday, the 26th being devoted to special Sunday school work, that of Saturday to reunion business.

The prayer services throughout the reunion were richly enjoyed because of the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit. The evidences of its blessed influences were both felt and seen; many were visibly affected by its comforting and reviving power and readily voiced the sentiments it inspired them to utter, both in praise and testimony and in the outward gifts of the gospel. To us it seemed that no one privileged to witness its workings could doubt the presence of God with his people, nor that he acknowledged them as such.

Preaching and the devotional exercises continued as provided for. Various brethren occupying as appointed, to attentive and at times, quite large congregations. In the afternoon of Saturday, the 28th, a business session was held at which it was decided to hold another reunion about one year from date, the time and arrangements being left to a committee of five, composed of the following named brethren: William Anderson, A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, Daniel Tripp, and J. S. Snively. The committee, with Bro. Anderson as chairman, promptly secured the Bluff Park grounds for the reunion of 1898, and will doubtless announce further particulars in due time. They have secured the grounds upon such terms and have other features provided at such rates as to insure financial success and accommodations at reasonable rates; hence those who may contemplate attending the '98 meeting may be assured that the committee will provide every essential aid in their power to place at the disposal of visitors.

Sunday, the 29th, was the crowning day of the session—the best of the wine at the last of the feast, as it should be. The weather, which had been pleasant throughout, was well tempered to the gathering and all seemed attuned to harmony with the occasion. The Sunday school exercises were held at eight o'clock. At nine the regular season of prayer was held, in which many participated, the young with the older membership, giving unmistakable evidence of acquaintance with the workings of the good Spirit.

By 10:45 many people had come in by team and train from the surrounding country and towns, notably a number of the business residents of Keokuk, Fort Madison, and other places, and who with others present filled the pews and extra tent seats provided for the added attendance, or listened attentively as they stood in groups around the seated pavilion, which was taxed beyond its capacity. At 10:45 Prof. J. T. Pence delivered an address on the subject of Education, in the interest of Graceland College. It was an eloquent and earnest effort. Pres. Joseph Smith followed in a fifteen minutes' address, happily conceived and well received, defensive of the church and in statement of its loyalty to the constitutional law of the land and the principles of morality that underlie the social structure.

At 2:30 p. m., however, the President exceeded his former effort in a gospel discourse from the words, "If ye continue in my words, then are ye my disciples indeed," etc. President Smith was himself, and made one of the best efforts ever heard from his lips. His points were so plain and comprehensive that all seemed to see their force and realize to a degree their weight. Hundreds heard the gospel and to a degree sensed something of the spirit actuating the Reorganization, and were very favorably impressed with the character of the work and the people representing it. The saints especially were glad in the inspiration of the effort.

The evening and closing sermon was delivered by Bro. J. R. Lambert; a defense of the position of the church, characteristic of the speaker and a strong plea for justness in the examination of the positions held by our people.

The climax of the reunion was reached with the day's proceedings, and it closed in a spirit that the writer has seldom if ever experienced to such a degree, but never seen surpassed. All seemed to partake of a spirit of happiness unalloyed, unhindered in the least degree by any feeling or influence that prevented the fullest expressions of love and confidence in the good will and fellowship of one another—that which the Book of Mormon writers express as "most joyous to the soul," and a foretaste of what is to be enjoyed when the imperfections incident to humanity under existing conditions are sublimated. It was high in its character, exalting in its influence, and gave to those blessed to realize it a clearer understanding of the ends to be reached and the possibilities to be attained and enjoyed by those who overcome and keep themselves in the love of the gospel and the bonds of peace. It was in evidence that life in Christ now, in harmony with the statement of the Savior, "whosoever liveth and believeth in me," etc., was within the range of possibilities; indeed, that such is the spirit in which the children of God are to live and actualize the divine life in order to realize in truth and express in fact what the Savior declared: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." We felt that all present were helped to purer and truer conceptions and nobler intentions by the spirit and associations of the reunion, and that it was a pronounced success that would prove greatly beneficial to the cause in general; and while somewhat in doubt for a time as to the propriety of continuing another year, because of the financial stringency of of the times, were led to conclude that the decision to continue was a correct and wise one, and that if wisely conducted, the spiritual features being kept carefully in view, lasting good and widening confidence in the church and its faith and the conversion of many would result.

Some features of the gathering deserve especial mention, with others already noted: Four men, one of whom had been baptized by Bro. Lake in early years, came from Beardstown, Illinois, to hear the word. The one baptized renewed his interest and was received again into fellowship on his baptism and statement; the three accompanying him were baptized. On the day they left, two others, Brn. Shoemaker and Bartlett, also from Beardstown, came to the reunion, not knowing of the others nor of their obedience. Thus the work will be represented at Beardstown by six brethren. Fourteen were baptized; seven by Bro. J. S. Snively, seven by President Smith.

During the prayer meeting of Saturday, the 28th, the following hymn was sung in tongues by Bro. J. H. Lake, Sr. Newberry, of Montrose, interpreting. It was sung calmly and nicely to the tune Ortonville:—

The Spirit of the Lord is here,
It rests upon me now;
It brings sweet peace and comfort here
To dwell with saints below.

Then why be doubting? Do not fear,
The Lord is ever kind,
And often angels linger near
And powers of darkness bind.

Ah! yes, the time is drawing near
When Zion will be blest,
And all the true and faithful saints
Will enter into rest.

Press onward, saints, the victory win,
Your homes in peace adorn;
Be free from sin, yourselves prepare
For th' resurrection morn.

If this imperfect effort to convey to the HERALD readers a correct conception of the character of the late reunion is successful, especially if it brings to them a degree of the spirit of that occasion, the writer will be repaid for the endeavor. He believes he has not overestimated nor overstated the spirit and general features of the occasion, but has expressed what a number, competent to reach correct conclusions and render a judicious judgment, have expressed concerning the gathering. It is an evidence of the increasing good coming to Israel everywhere.

Some statements concerning Nauvoo may be of interest to those who have never visited the city. During the life of Joseph Smith the population of the city was estimated at about 25,000 to 30,000. It now numbers about 1,300 or 1,400. The site of the temple is covered with various kinds of buildings, from the store to the stable and saloon; and not a vestige of the original temple structure remains, except what material has been used in the erection of other buildings. A large two story stone building shows the massive temple rock in its walls. Near by, just north of the temple lot, stands the Roman Catholic church "of St. Paul and St. Peter," rearing its spire about two hundred feet in air, attracting attention, and seen readily as one approaches from the surrounding country, teaching a lesson that he who runs may read and which perhaps it would do little good to comment upon here. Opposite the church is a Catholic school.

The Homestead, the early home of the Martyr and his family, now the property of Pres. Joseph Smith, still stands on the river bank, where a portion of it stood as a log house (one of the first erected in the early settlement of the site of Commerce) when the saints moved in after the expulsion from Missouri. The original was added to and improved by the Martyr. The building shows the ravages of time, but may last for years to come. Directly opposite Main Street, east of the Homestead, stands the Nauvoo House, or rather the southwest corner of it, occupied by Sr. Bidamon and tenants, a substantial structure of brick and stone. The north and east wings of the building were torn down and the remaining portion (which had never been built above the second story windows or thereabouts) completed by the use of the material so obtained. The stone walls are massive and with the original brick work show the substantial character of the material and workmanship. Directly north of it stands the Mansion House, the later home of Joseph Smith and where he and his wife Emma kept house and hotel together, caring for visitors to the city pending completion of the Nauvoo House, we suppose. With the exception of the destruction of the eastern wing this building is in a fair state of preservation. It is a frame building, and now the property of Pres. A. H. Smith. Further east are some lots belonging to Bro. David H. Smith; and some distance away is a brick house occupied for a time by Lucy Smith, wife of the Patriarch Joseph Smith and mother of the Martyrs; who lived there with the family of one of her sons. Directly north on Main Street stands the frame cottage of Sidney Rigdon.

In other portions of the lower part of the city stand the brick residences of Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Joseph Young, brother of Brigham, William Marks, and others. Many have been torn down, but some yet remain as monuments of the past; some of them quite pretentious, for instance that of Heber C. Kimball, a good large brick structure well preserved. The Prophet's home is modest in comparison, and shows simplicity in its style and arrangement. The Masonic Hall, cut down one story, also remains in good state of preservation. Most of the buildings named are on the flats, a large tract of gardens and vineyards with the original streets grass covered, in marked contrast with the activity of years gone by. The business portion of the town is on the hilltop, about a mile distant.

Most of the inhabitants are frugal, industrious Germans, hospitable by nature and friendly to saints and other visitors. The general spirit of the people of the surrounding country is one of friendliness to the people of the Reorganization, which is slowly building up its branches in the district; not with a view to rallying again at Nauvoo, however, but with the object of preaching the gospel to the people. It may be possible, but does not seem probable, that the old sites may ever be more, or in any event much more to the Reorganization than what its past, including the memory of its sainted and martyred dead, has made it. This, however, is but an expression of individual opinion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—If priests, teachers, and deacons hold the Aaronic or lesser priesthood, why cannot a teacher officiate in all the ordinances pertaining to that priesthood?

Ans.—There are two reasons why, so far as the church is at present concerned; 1. Paragraph 11 of Section 17 of the church rules distinctly states that "neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands."

2. Because the church in conference assembled a year or so ago decided that neither teacher nor deacon could even pass the elements of bread and wine in the administration of the sacrament by the elder or the priest.

If any other reasons are asked for, in the way of a discussion of priesthood rights, we answer that we do not know. It would seem that these two were quite enough. Why the rule so stands we are not informed.

POLAR REGION EXPLORATION.

ANDREE, the polar balloonist, Peary, and others are in the field; yet zeal in polar research does not abate, and new expeditions are being projected, the last one of which we read being reported in the item given below. If there is concurrence in the force moving Arctic explorers with that that impelled Columbus, there must be something of moment to be discovered in the regions of ice and snow, or of the open polar sea, as the future may reveal. It is interesting to note the interest in the northern realm. It certainly must eventuate in greatly added knowledge of that present comparatively unknown portion of earth's domain. Mr. Stein seems to have practical ideas concerning plans for exploration:—

Berlin, July 24.—Robert Stein, an American geographer, intends to erect next year a permanent exploration station at the entrance to Jones' Sound. He is convinced of the necessity of exploring the polar region systematically, especially for commercial purposes, believing that a handsome profit is realizable from whales and other animals, probably from guano, and probably from precious metals.

He believes it desirable that there should be a methodical, scientific observation of the magnetic phenomena of the aurora and a study of the paleontology and geology of the polar regions. Mr. Stein proposes that the station shall be occupied by from four to six explorers, who shall employ Esquimau families.

TEMPERANCE STATISTICS.

ACCORDING to the following from an article in the Deseret News for June 1, by Professor Nydahl, of the Augsburg Seminary, the United States is a long ways debtor to the drink habit:—

The United States, the cradle of the movement and the foremost country in the ranks for morality, still spends more every year for liquor than for the necessities of life and for education. These are the figures:

The United States yearly spends for the conversion of pagans, $5,000,000; for brick for building purposes, $35,000,000; for potatoes, $110,000,000; for churches, $125,000,000; for schools, $165,000,000; for silk $165,000,000; for furniture, $175,000,000; for sugar and molasses, $225,000,000; for wolen goods, $250,000,000; for shoes, $335,000,000; for flour, $345,000,000; for books and papers, $370,000,000; for cotton goods, $380,000,000; for lumber, $495,000,000; for tobacco, $515,000,000; for iron and steel, $560,000,000; for meat, $860,000,000, and for intoxicants, $1,110,000,000.

AN ODD SAYING.

THE following is a good specimen of a clerical bull, or overdrawn simile:—

Suggestion from the pulpit.—“Brethren,” said a well-known Bishop the other day in the course of a sermon, “I beg you to take hold of your own heart and look it straight in the face.”—Tit-Bits.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JAMES CAFFALL, of the Twelve, who sailed from Liverpool, England, on Saturday, August 21, stopped off at Lamoni, enroute home, on Thursday, September 2, leaving for Council Bluffs, the day following. Bro. Caffall returns to America after an absence of over three years in the British mission, having been appointed to that field at the April Conference of 1894. He has labored industriously to build up the church in England and Wales, and returns looking younger in appearance, and in better health, than when he left. He arrived at New York on the 27th, but was delayed there and in Chicago. He reports the voyage a rough one during three days of the passage. He met Bro. Heman C. Smith in England, and who succeeds him in charge of the mission.

Bro. Frank Criley, representing the Herald Office, and well loaded down with a supply of church literature, departed for the Woodbine reunion on the 3d inst., prepared to supply visitors and friends in camp with a full line of church publications. Those present would do well to subscribe for or renew payment on the HERALD at the reduced rate—$1.50 per year in advance.

A large party of Lamoni saints, of the ministry and laity, arrived home from the Bluff Park reunion, on the 30th and 31st ult., among them President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley. President Smith left home again on Thursday, the 2d inst., for Onslow, Iowa, where he is to dedicate a church on Sunday, the 5th, and would go thence to Woodbine, to attend the reunion. Bishop Kelley is to leave home again next week, also going to Woodbine.

We understand that Prof. J. T. Pence, Acting President of Graceland College, will also attend the reunion at Woodbine with a view to representing the interests of Graceland College. Those interested in educational matters will find the Professor ready to fully acquaint them with the facilities and general features of Graceland.

The reunion at Blue Rapids, Kansas, closed August 23, with a pleasant and spirited meeting for prayer and testimony, when “God be with you till we meet again” was sung, and the benediction was spoken; so wrote Sr. Estelle Hart.

Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, left for Woodbine on the 2d inst., to attend the reunion. Sr. W. W. Blair and others, we understand, will also be present from our city.

Brn. D. E. Tucker and C. I. Carpenter are laboring in new fields in Florida. They find it very difficult to get openings and are engaged mostly in private preaching; card dated McDavid, Florida, August 18.

We note that Bro. C. J. Hunt shares with others in the belief that judicious advertising has a legitimate place in missionary work; and that as he moves along the local newspapers publish his card, stating his faith, announcing services, and inviting attendance, also attention to his “question box.” This time it is the Lake City Graphic, of August 26, through which Bro.

Hunt introduces himself to the people, and which the missionary is obliged to do, and should do, as they will not run after him. These are the days when push and printer's ink go hand in hand with success, and he is wise who will not neglect the prudent use of both. They can be used too, without the admixture of sensationalism, which has no place in the gospel economy, but is worldly in spirit and at variance with truth.

Sr. Catharine Salisbury, sister of Joseph Smith the Martyr, was present at the late Bluff Park reunion, and strengthened the saints by her testimonies and reminiscences of early days. She is aged and at times infirm, but is animated by love for the work and fellow saints that prompts her to attend what gatherings she can. We noted also the presence of Father Lambert, Brn. D. A. Hougas, H. T. Pitt, S. J. and F. A. Salisbury, C. E. Willey, G. P. Lambert, and others. Last, but not least, honorable mention is made of Bro. and Sr. Reed, of Montrose, who had charge of the boarding house, and who pleased and satisfied their numerous and devoted patrons.

Anti Jewish riots at Pilsen, Bohemia, August 23.

The union of the Central American republics is said to be endangered by dissensions.

President Borda, of Uruguay, was assassinated at Montevideo, August 25, while taking part in the celebration of the independence of his country.

The Cuban General Gomez wants Bartolome Masso for President of Cuba “because he shows not the least desire for office, in spite of the fact that he was the soul of the revolution,” etc. There is hope for any cause when its leaders are devoted to it and not to their own personal aggrandizement, as there is little or no hope when it is otherwise. Masso evidently possesses at least one important qualification for leadership—devotion to the masses of the people.

A commission is soon to meet in St. Petersburg to discuss the question of universal and compulsory education in Russia.

Forty thousand revolting tribesmen now confront the British troops at Khyber Pass, the most important strategic position on the Northern Indian frontier, and which the Afridi's and other tribes now hold possession of. Rebellious tribesmen are also rising up against British rule in other portions of India, and some of the native militia is deserting from the government. British forces are in the field and moving forward to suppress the insurrections. The situation is serious and may yet bring England and Russia face to face in Asia.

The visit of President Faure to St. Petersburg has resulted in a formal and open alliance between France and Russia. The reception of the French President was accompanied by manifest enthusiasm by the Russians of all classes. The French people are delirious with joy, and both populace and press openly predict the recovery of Alsace Lorraine from Germany. European statesmen see in the alliance the humiliation of the German emperor and failure of his effort to lead or control European counsels and to unite Europe against Great Britain.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"I walked in the joyous morning,
The morning of June and life,
Ere the birds had ceased to warble
Their sweetness of love and strife;
I walked alone in the morning,
And who was so glad as I,
When I saw the pale wild roses
Hang from the branch on high!"

A MAN'S GREATEST HELP.

THE BEST THING IN ALL THE WORLD IS TO HAVE HAD A GOOD MOTHER.

NOTING the tendency of mothers to escape the care and responsibility of training their own children, resorting to nurses, governesses, kindergartens, etc., Edward W. Bok, in the November Ladies' Home Journal, vigorously contends that woman should consider her God-given "duties" to her children vastly paramount to every "claim" that can be made upon her time. "It is one of the most baleful tendencies of the times," writes Mr. Bok, "that young children are placed so much and so entirely in the hands of nurses, and so far away from their mothers. I do not think that women exactly realize what the early teachings and influences of a mother mean to a man when he reaches years of maturity. The time which a boy spends at his mother's knee is never forgotten by the man. Our morality is learned there. Our characters are formed there. We are most impressionable when we are in a stage of absolute dependence upon others. What sort of a recollection is it for a man to look back to a line of nurses or governesses? What moral stimulus does he receive from the recollection of a mother inevitably reading some novel and resting in a languid stupor with fan and smelling bottle? What moral fibre is instilled into a child who sees his mother only as she flits before him between morning calls, luncheons, meetings, teas, drives, dinners, and theatre-parties? What does a boy learn at the knee of a nurse? Good? Perhaps. But just as often he learns that which is not good. Many a man has stood at the forks of the road in his life, broken-hearted and perplexed, only to have his mother's words, uttered to him when a child, come before him and point him the way. It is then that he realizes that the best thing in the world to a man is to have had a good mother, watchful, tender, and anxious, as only a mother can be where her child is concerned. In those supreme moments the lesson taught—not by the nurse, not by a stranger, not at the kindergarten, but at the mother's knee—becomes a precious recollection and a benediction. It means then a man's salvation. And in that quiet moment a man thinks of a good mother as he never thinks of any other woman. A look of tenderness comes into his eyes, a feeling of softness creeps into his heart, and the attitude of his earliest infancy comes to him as, unconsciously, he looks upward and breathes to himself the most precious of all words: 'Mother.' It remains for the mothers of to-day to determine how much that word will mean to the men of to-morrow." . . . He emphasizes the distinction between a mother's duties and the claims upon her time: ". . . When to a woman is given the sweetest delight that can come to her, motherhood, God gives with that delight a duty: the duty of a personal training of the child. Before that duty, all outside work—I care not by what religious, charitable, or philanthropic word you may call it—should fall. No matter what outside work a woman may be engaged in, the best can only be a claim upon her time, and not a duty. And duties never conflict. God gives no more duties to a woman than she has the time or ability to fulfill. The exactions of the world are not duties; they are claims. If there is time it is well to meet them. But claims being man-made and duties being God-made the former must often be ignored and should be put aside where the latter calls. Women should think of this and bear it in mind a little more constantly than they do, especially in these days of organizations."

STRATFORD, Essex, England.

Dear Sisters:—As time goes on I feel more and more that this is the work and plan of God, in which our Lord gave us an example by which we might be saved, if we walk in his footsteps. I know that this is the hastening time when he is calling his own out of the world to work with him for the benefit and salvation of others. Luke tenth chapter and twenty-first verse truly says, "Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Even so it is true, for I am but a babe in the kingdom of God. I have fallen and slipped many a time since I have been in the church. The temptations and trials of this life have been many to me, but not in the least do I regret it, for now the Lord in his own good time will make us stronger, when we are able and fit to receive him. I love all my brethren and sisters in our little hall in London. It is good to meet with them and praise God; it does me much good. I remember three or four years back a prophecy came to us through our respected Sr. Bradshaw, that we should have a place of our own to worship God in, and if we were faithful many would come in.

We have now our hall, and many are coming in, although it is not through my faithfulness, but that of others, although I feel the Lord has forgiven me all my errors. I feel I must praise God all the day long for his mercy and love to me, and my husband, and child. So cheer up and have courage, dear sisters, do not faint by the way if you have gone back a step or two as I did, for he has promised if we sin we have an advocate with the Father, who is ready to receive us. I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may be kept humble, that I may endure unto the end in Christ Jesus, Amen.

"Let the lower lights be burning,
Send a gleam across the wave,
Some poor fainting, struggling seaman,
You may rescue, you may save."

THE Nauvoo reunion recently passed into history. The attendance was not large, general interest fair. The Sabbath school workers were not behind in fulfilling their duties. Sessions of Sabbath school were held at eight o'clock a. m., which were entirely successful. Normal or institute work at four p. m., each day for three or four days.

The special day consisted of but one session, the presiding officers having seen fit to curtail the customary allowance of time for special Sunday school work. Of course we very cheerfully acquiesced on account of a seeming need of time for more preaching.

The General Superintendent arrived Sunday a. m. from Blue Rapids, Kansas, reunion, quite sick; was not able to be on duty till Tuesday. He left the last of the week for the Nevada, Missouri, reunion, stopping over Sunday with the saints at Independence.

UNIFORMITY.

Still we find many anxiously inquiring when we are to begin our uniformity of lesson texts in the three grades of the Quarterly. We are very happy to say to Superintendents and teachers take notice; and that beginning with October the lessons in all three grades—Senior, Intermediate, and Primary—will be upon the same text or subject. To illustrate: The subject of one senior lesson is "God is merciful." The Intermediate and Primary grades use exactly the same subject, but simplified to adjust it to the comprehension of the child mind. We will follow neither old or New Testament strictly, but lesson texts and illustrations to suit the subjects will be used wherever found. Before the time for the change comes, see that your present series of lessons is well "rounded up"—well reviewed and systematically fixed in the mind. Knowledge gained in a haphazard way is of but little service to us. Put it in order and we can make profitable use of it. To illustrate: A coat might be well and accurately cut out, and of good material; if properly put together it will make a good serviceable garment. But sew it together just as it happens to come and what have you? The arm may come where the collar should be; the collar may come where the pocket should be. In such a case, of what use would the garment be? The material is good and well cut, but must be worked over before it can be put to use. So, if you would get full value out of the lessons of the past quarter, or year, or even two years, we must put the various facts together in a logical, systematic way. Show the cause of an event also seek the result. Seek to discover the correct order of events and fix them in your memory. Seek also to discover the pleasure or displeasure of God in each instance. Let us complete the work as far as we have followed it, and not simply drop it. Begin at once. You have but a lesson or two at most till we change subjects.

FANNING, Kans., July 21.

HAVING a desire to cast in my mite, I will endeavor to relate a little of my experience in the Sunday school work. In taking a retrospect of the past I can trace my acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures to the

TRAINING

I received in this department of religious work when yet but a child. And from then on as I grew up in years, my zeal and interest became permanent, without respect to place, people, or sect. I felt satisfied that I had received good myself, therefore I was desirous of sharing and imparting a measure unto others as best I could. And, when six years ago I embraced the true gospel of Christ, I was prepared to enter into the Sunday school with all of my former enthusiasm and delight. I had always believed that the Sunday school was a noble cause, acceptable unto God; but now I know that it is.

MY EXPERIENCE

as a teacher has been a pleasant and profitable one to me. One needs all the light and information he can get to make the lesson both attractive and instructive to the class;

hence the importance of much preparation in prayerful study. It don't pay for us to teach in our own strength. "Ask and you shall receive, seek and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you," is as precious a promise as any that ever graced the lips of the great Teacher. Our heavenly Father has things to impart to his people for the asking. Shall we ask?

Again our blessed Master expects from the hands of those who would become coworkers with him in advocating the righteous principles appertaining to his kingdom. Paul wrote to saintly Titus: "Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded, in all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity; sound speech that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you."—Titus 2:6-8.

TRUE AND CONSISTENT LIVES

From my

EXPERIENCE AS A SUPERINTENDENT,

I can truthfully attest that there is a solemn responsibility attaching to this office. So keenly have I felt it sometimes that I would shudder at the thought. I fear that those who properly realize this are few and far between. With tears have I oftentimes plead for divine aid and support. Having received great joy and satisfaction within my soul as a token of my acceptance, I have been greatly blessed. I will relate one instance how the Lord acknowledged my weak effort. One Sunday recently during our closing exercises, seeing quite a number of little children before me, I was led to admonish the parents to teach their offspring to pray, and to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. I also related to them how I had been raised up by pious parents according to the light they had, and how they had taught me to pray when a child. Not only has that habit stayed with me through life, but it was the means of bringing me into the fold of God. . . .

During that session the Holy Spirit rested upon me standing as I was before the school. Now, what does all this prove? First that of the Sunday school organization. Secondly, that the opportunities for doing good in the Sunday school are many; therefore God will hold us accountable how we spend the time here in his service. Thirdly, the responsibilities upon fathers and mothers in Israel are great indeed. Prayer is the key by which we unlock the door through which blessings flow from our Father above. . . .

Saints, the

that lie before the Sunday school movement are immense. With a corps of men and women whose hearts are in the work, and whose love for their fellow creatures is unbounded, the great future alone can reveal the results of their labors. May each of us bear in mind the language of the Apostle Paul, which ought to be written in letters of gold in every Sabbath school, "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Gal. 6:9.

CASTLE ROCK, Wash., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—At last we are in Washington. How long we may stay here depends upon circumstances. Since writing you last week, besides closing our series of twelve preaching services at Lebanon, eight at Foster and nineteen at Waterloo. The result of these services of course cannot be told at present, but six were baptized at the last place, making thirteen since striking Oregon. At Waterloo, the evening of August 4, as your writer was steadying his nerves for the effort of the evening, we were somewhat surprised and considerably pleased to see Bro. Joseph Luff enter the tent. My nerves were all right at once and Bro. Luff did the speaking that evening, and also for each evening following until Monday the 9th. Such preaching ought to convince and win the honest hearted ones wherever it is done. Bro. Luff had come from Heppner to Lebanon and Bro. A. P. Morris brought him over to Waterloo with his buggy. The distance from Lebanon to Waterloo is six miles. Bro. Luff returned with Bro. Morris, but came back the next night prepared to camp with us.

Well, I acted as cook, and had for a stove an old tin pan turned over some rocks. Placing the fire between the rocks, I cooked on top of the bottom of the pan. One fact gave me courage, the sisters living at Lebanon and Sweet Home had furnished us with plenty of bread, butter, pie, cake, and fruit. So I did not wear my stove out (nor burn it out either), but still when Friday evening a new camp stove arrived from Lebanon for us we were not sorry. And when Saturday evening Mrs. Hall and Morris—two of the latter, mother and daughter—and Bro. Alma Morris, all of Lebanon, and Bro. John Morris and family, and Mr. H. Watkins and family of Sweet Home arrived, it was with a very cheerful spirit that I resigned the position of "cook and dish-washer" into the hands of the sisters. Sunday morning, Mrs. Slavons and Woods, of Foster, drove in, also Bro. Thompson and wife, of Sweet Home. Of course the day passed pleasantly, and although only a few blocks away there was a merry-go-round in full blast, and races and other amusements going on, still there was peace at the tent. The most of the saints left for home before the evening meeting, but Mrs. Hall and Morris, of Lebanon, still camped on the ground, and my former position as cook did not come back to me.

Our meetings were continued till Sunday evening, the 15th inst. Bro. Luff spent the week at Sweet Home, but came back Sunday with Bro. John Morris and spoke for us Sunday evening, the 15th.

Monday was fully occupied by moving to Lebanon, and Tuesday morning Bro. Holt and myself started for this place. In Portland we tried to find Sr. B. V. Springer, but found that she had gone East. We met a young Sr. Sund, also the daughter of Sr. Springer (I cannot recall the name now). After a short visit with them we hunted up lodgings and the next day, finding that the low water prevented the boat from running to this point, took the train, and arrived about 1:30. Here we have found a welcome with Mr. and Sr. Crum, and here we will begin our meetings to-night in the city hall. We think the opening will be a good one, but can tell better after trying. Our health and hopes are very good. Our address at present is Castle Rock, Washington.

Your brother in Christ,
A. M. CHASE.

MANCHESTER, England Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—Please state that on consultation with our Bishop's agent, Bro. Thomas Taylor, I learn that tithes and offerings are less by far at this time than last year and prospects for the future less bright; in view of which fact, and the further fact of Bishop Kelley's article of recent date, I am of the opinion, that for the present it were better for Bro. J. W. Rushton, of Leeds, England to continue in his avocation.

I realize the embarrassment of this position; but all things being considered, it were better. The Bishop expressed to me his readiness to aid the mission financially as far as wisdom should direct, but the Bishop can't fill the church coffers; this is a work for thousands.

I know by God's grace Bro. J. W. Rushton would do good, and I would feel glad to see him on his mission, according to the action of General Conference of 1897 appointing him to labor in England under the missionary in charge. I suggest as I see and understand.

In bonds,
JAMES CAFFALL.

LOYD, Wis., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—I am striving in my weak way to build up the kingdom of Christ on earth.

Soon after the General Conference I received word from the authorities of Southern Wisconsin that they wished me to operate their gospel tent another season. I immediately put myself about getting ready, and on the last days of April I went to my field of labor and began to visit different points with a view of finding localities in which to operate our tent most successfully. In the meantime the quarterly conference convened at East Delavan. This conference confirmed the wish of the district authorities and appointed me to operate the gospel tent with Elder J. T. Hackett. Accordingly, accompanied by my faithful wife, who came to our assistance, we began operations at Hanover, Rock County. However, we soon discovered that there was no interest there, so after a week's stay we moved to a point one and one fourth miles west of Syene and six miles south of Madison, in Dane County, and set up on Bitneys Hill, by the side of the public road. We marveled and were indeed astonished at the large crowds of people that gathered nightly at our meetings, and we frequently heard the expression, "I am glad you came." We soon discovered that some were very much interested in our work.

Elder Short came over and put in some of his "big shots."

We remained at Bitneys Hill until July 13. We then moved into the city of Madison. We had a lovely spot on Chandler Street. On July 18, I had the pleasure of baptizing four adults in the beautiful Lake Monona. These were the fruits of our labors at Bitney's Hill. We had large audiences most of the time while we were in Madison, but a large portion of them were children—little boys and girls. Elder Short accompanied us and insisted on doing the most of the preaching and we "submitted." Elder W. A. McDowell, our missionary in charge, dropped in and gave us some of his pleasant discourses.

Not deeming it wisdom under the circumstances to remain any longer in Madison, we removed to Ableman, Sauk County. We had quite large gatherings at our meetings, but we soon discovered by observing the class of people who attended that there was no interest there. We stayed long enough, however, to place before them the fundamental principles of the gospel of Christ, and then pulled up and moved our tent to the Willow Valley, in Richland County. Elder Hackett reluctantly remained home, so we (myself and wife) were left to run the business alone as best we could. My brother and brother-in-law, D. R. Wildermuth and Jot Stout, came over from Loyd and took us to the Willow Valley. We set up our tent in my sister's dooryard and began meetings on the evening of August 3. We had large gatherings each evening and the Lord blessed me with great liberty while presenting the restored gospel to that people. Elder Joshua Hackett came over on Sunday and gave us two rousing sermons and went back on Monday. We regretted very much to lose the companionship and assistance of this worthy young elder. We remained in the Willow Valley two weeks and had a splendid hearing all the way through, and now the word comes to us from there, "Come back again."

By earnest request we removed our tent four miles farther west, and now have it set up "on the ridge," and although it is a busy (threshing) time, we are having large gatherings for a country place (an average of fifty-five persons each evening).

Tuesday, the 24th inst., it became necessary for my wife to return home to Plano, Illinois, to look after our domestic affairs. This season makes her fourth with the gospel tent. Right in this nick of time, when I began to wonder if I must run the whole business alone, Providence—that kind friend who never fails us—brought about a pleasant surprise; for our worthy brother, Elder W. A. McDowell, dropped in and is now in his masterly way assisting your humble servant to hold up the banner of King Emanuel.

We expect to remain here till time to pull up and ship the tent to the Wilder for the fall conference. We trust we have done some good for the cause we all love so well. We feel sure that we have tried our best and have worked faithfully and diligently to spread the gospel of peace among the people.

In gospel bonds,
ELI M. WILDERMUTH.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—The cause here is onward and steadily advancing and partaking of that slow but sure growth that has characterized the Reorganization. We have learned by experience than no outside element can be successful in warfare against our creed, which is "All truth." We stand to-day and have stood upon the foundation that our fathers as a church stood upon, and need not by any means be ashamed of our hope. We cannot but conclude that the greatest of all hindrances that this work is subject to at the present time comes from within. Inactivity and nonperformance of duty will never advance this work as it should. This is an individual work, and every Latter Day Saint ought to see to it that in all things this work is first; and then something else.

Bro. J. T. Kinnaman has of late been laboring effectively in this vicinity. Several added to the church and many interested as a result.

Hopefully,
WM. E. LA RUE.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—After tent services in Clearwater I pitched tent between Clearwater and Neligh, at Grecian Bend. On account of harvest, etc., was not greeted with a very large attendance, but some good was done. Continued till August 1, when I baptized six. Assisted, July 31, in a business meeting of the Clearwater branch, when confession was made by a former member, covering all the grounds of complaint against him, and the branch accepted it and he was again numbered with the household of God by baptism, rejoicing in the mercy of God in so tenderly dealing with him while in darkness, and in permitting him to receive the witness of his acceptance. One baptized had formerly been a class leader of the M. E. Church, and says that with his past efforts to serve God with sincerity of purpose, he had never been perfectly satisfied, that there seemed to be something wanting; but now he was perfectly satisfied.

Preached at Orchard on the 4th inst. in the United Presbyterian church to large and attentive audience. This is the first sermon in the place, and had it not been for other duties pressing, would have continued longer, as desired. Bro. and Sr. W. H. Blalock live here, and are zealously seeking to advance Zion's cause.

Sunday school convention of the Central Nebraska district was held at Meadow Grove on the 6th, at which I was in attendance. An excellent and profitable time was had, the Sunday school workers being much encouraged. The district conference was held on the 7th and 8th, and pronounced the best ever held in the district; the priesthood feeling more clearly the responsibility of their several offices, and a more hopeful feeling on the part of all present prevailed. Two were baptized by Bro. J. W. Jackson. One thing, quite observable in this district as in all others where the Sunday school convention is held the day previous: the increased attendance at the conference sessions, especially of the younger members of the church, and with their attendance comes to them, as is plainly seen, an added interest in the workings and business of the church. Continued on the 9th and 10th, at Meadow Grove, and enjoyed seeing evidences of increased interest.

On the 12th and 13th I replied to a lecture delivered at O'Neill by a Mr. N. S. Lowrie of the Presbyterian Church, who thought it necessary to make a tirade on us after the stereotyped order; and it had the effect of causing some of the leading citizens to want to hear the other side, and did us a favor rather than harm. Although Mr. Lowrie was in the town, yet he was conspicuous by his absence. On Sunday eve as per announcement Rev. (?) J. G. Shick of the M. E. Church, delivered another very abusive talk against our people and faith, and I was present to enjoy (?) it. He took for the basis of his remarks the history of the sons of Belial abusing the concubine of a certain man and then she was divided among the twelve tribes and they invited to consider the horrible deed done and speak their mind. (Judges 18, 19.) Especially did he urge them to speak their mind, and referred to the fact that God sent the children of Israel to revenge themselves of the deed done, and then applied it by saying that for a people to steal one of their members was as bad as for one to steal a horse, and as one of their members had left the M. E. Church and become a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church, they should consider it and speak their mind, and as directly as it was possible for a man to do and not speak the words "mob law," advocated the people rising up and executing revenge against the Latter Day Saints. This is the place where a barn was burned when this sister was baptized. This man Shick is a man whose mind is wrought upon by a spirit to be unfair and do evil to the saints, but he is working the overthrow of the M. E. Church and his own destruction. His talk was a personal attack on the members of the church living at Inman, and then made a sweeping charge that Joseph Smith and all his followers were "lewd impostors," and inferred so plainly that it could not be mistaken that the object for which we secured female members was "prostitution and to satisfy the baser passions of men." I write these expressions so as to show what the saints at Inman have to endure, and what kind of a spirit is moving upon the ministry of the other churches there. This same man Shick last winter said that the death of Joseph Smith occurred for the same reasons that the deaths of cattle thieves had occurred in Western Nebraska, and that was because the law could not be executed speedily enough to justify the conditions, and thought the mob in either case was justified; and taking the two together it shows plainly the desperate spirit of the man, and the worst feature is, he says that God instructs him in regard to delivering the lecture and what to say.

At the close of his talk, after he had urged them to not forget the text but speak their mind, I asked for ten minutes to speak my mind, and he replied with a very emphatic "No, Sir!" Then I asked the privilege of asking one question, and that was denied, and the meeting was closed instanter; but as soon as closed I announced a reply would be given the next night, which was listened to by about forty. The saints endure their trying conditions nobly and are winning favor by their discreetness, and the Spirit of God is present in their gatherings.

On the 17th I came and pitched the tent in Neligh, continuing over Sunday. Services were sparsely attended until Sunday night, when there was a large audience, and several requests for me to return.

On Monday I am to Norfolk and arranged for tent work there. I then came to Omaha, where I met Brn. W. A. Smith and Samuel Wood where they were holding tent meetings with some prospects for good, there having been several baptisms already, and others nearly persuaded. I spoke with good liberty, although but few present on account of rain.

I am now resting by preparing work for the Woodbine reunion, and looking after home interests.

The saints here seem to be cheerful, yet somewhat neglectful of their own interests in not attending to their duties as devotedly as they could with spiritual profit. A good feeling prevails among the members generally. With faith in the ultimate triumph of the work, I am a lover of truth,

J. F. MINTUN.

OKARCHE, Oklahoma, Aug. 22.

Editors Herald:—We had a very interesting meeting at McLoud. Good attendance all the time. One baptized, others quite favorable. We opened here last night to fair house. Other meetings in the country will attract some of our friends, but we are hopeful in the day of harvest. I believe the armies of the world are now mustering their forces preparing for the conflict just prior to the coming of the great king. This is a day when men's hearts are failing them for fear. We hope by the grace of God to hold onto the rod of iron that leads us on to victory.

The Lord has blessed us in our labors and many friends have been made for our work. Bro. W. S. Macrae is a valiant worker and makes many warm friends. I am glad to be with him again after a separation of nearly two years. May God speed the work is my prayer.

CADILLAC, Mich., Aug. 23.

Editors Herald:—We spent over four weeks in Traverse City, doing the best we could in the tent, but the people there did not seem to be very religiously inclined as a rule—the most of them seemed to be after fun and the pleasures of the world. Shows and opera plays, bicycling, pleasure resorting, etc., going on all the time. There seemed to be much prejudice against our people as well, by reason of Traverse City being near where the Strangites operated, and many stories were revived concerning consecration, etc.; much of which no doubt were true. Still other things we do not believe, we can well judge by the many false statements made about us.

After putting up the tent I traveled all over the city calling at many places, giving tracts, and advertising our meetings, etc. It is sometimes amusing and sometimes otherwise, to hear what some will say when invited to attend meetings at the tent. Here are some of their sayings:—

"What denomination is it?"

Latter Day Saints.

"Ah, I knew old Joe Smith."

All right, if you did, sir, you knew nothing bad of him.

Another. Come to the tent; we have meeting every evening; come and hear the true gospel preached by the Latter Day Saints.

"Oh, I know all about them; I have an uncle and aunt out in Utah!"

Ah, we are not that kind! And if they would listen, a general explanation would follow. And another, when invited:—

"I know all about them; I was on the island when Strang was shot."

O, but we are not that kind! Then another explanation. One more: We have preaching over in the tent on Sixth Street; we would be pleased to have you attend.

"Do you think I would stoop so low? The Mormons stole a yoke of oxen from my father, and killed and ate them," etc.

To a group on the the street; gentlemen; meeting in the tent on Sixth Street—commence in about thirty minutes; everybody come! One of the crowd:—

"Get out, you dirty Mormon; I knew—I—I knew that old Joe—Joe Young, the rascal, —and I—"

Say, who do you mean; Joseph Smith, or Brigham Young!

"Both of them; my father helped to kill him down in Ohio."

No he didn't. Smith was shot in Illinois.

"Well, I guess I know; I was there!"

No you were not; Smith was shot before you were born.

"Well, I was right there when they got their gold bible; I have been right down in the hole."

No you haven't; that hole you were in was the one the pigs made.

"Whoop," and a "Hurrah!" which brought the police around. I started for the tent, with, "Come to the tent, boys."

I believe it is a good thing to shut such fellows off in that way sometimes, when we know they are willful. Captain Wood met Captain Kinney, one of the night police (who is an old time Latter Day Saint) one day, and asked why they allowed that tent in there. Captain Kinney talked to him, and persuaded him to come out and hear. Captain Wood did so, and followed it up, and finally asked for baptism. We visited the mayor, the editors, et al., and we feel sure we broke down much prejudice and did much good, baptized four persons, and advised Captain Woods and some others to wait a little longer, and carefully study the matter over; and after a time if they felt fully satisfied of the work, and that they could live it, etc., that they would find some one to administer the ordinances of the gospel to them.

I left Bro. James Davis (son of old Bro. Robert Davis) and his wife with them, who were my helpers in the tent while there, a good brother and sister, and whose hearts are in the good work; and no doubt Bro. James will baptize five or six more before long. I have moved the tent here, and was joined by Bro. W. D. Ellis, who will assist me here. We have held five meetings here; tent full every night.

Very truly,

Editors Herald:—I have been here about seven months and have never seen a saint. I have wondered many times if any saints were living near here. Through the kindness of friends I receive the Herald and Ensign; and in reading the Herald I saw that I. P. Baggerly was in charge of this part of the State. I rejoiced when I learned that there was one family in Paris, sixty-five miles from here. I had hoped that the work would have been planted here. There is a letter at Isaca, Texas, for Bro. Baggerly. Although isolated, I feel that the Lord is blessing me in advancing the principles of the gospel in my weak and humble way. I find prejudice very strong here, but believe there are some honest in heart; many minds have become poisoned by Gregg and other such writers. A good many people here are over religious. I say baptism is essential to salvation; they deny it. Then I quote scripture to prove it; they cannot refute it, and all they do is to get angry.

I rejoice in the onward and upward move that the church is making; since conference I have been blessed more than for some time before. As I read the account of the conference, and especially the filling of the quorums, I knelt several times and thanked God with a heart overflowing with joy and gratitude. I expect to leave this place first part of next month and go to my former home, Detroit, Michigan.

Editors Herald:—I notice in Herald of 28th a reference to my conduct in connection with certain Brighamites. I have met the "Elder Charles A. Streeper" mentioned; he was among the number I met in Scranton, Pennsylvania, last fall. Now I am charged with running away when a "representative man" appeared. It is well known that while I was in Scranton I tried constantly to get these elders to meet me, but failed. As to a "representative man," Elder S. W. Richards, who was then in charge of their work in the eastern part of the United States, was there, as also David Gill, who had subcharge of that region where we were.

When I left Scranton at that time, I went to Cohocton, New York, on purpose to be among them, and tried to have them meet me there, and suffered the same results. This whole matter can be settled readily. The above is my home address, so let me hear from their "representative man." I will guarantee he will not need to wait long. But shall I hear from him? "Ah! there's the rub." I have hoped one of them would make a stand; but "hope deferred maketh the heart sick." Let me hear from you, Elder Streeper.

Our late reunion held on Cape Cod was a decided success; said by some to have been the best one ever held in this district. We were deprived of the services of preaching men from the west, so the local talent had to brighten up their armor and close in. Tomorrow I go to Providence to assist in the opening of the new chapel the saints have built on Bellvue Avenue. Church interest is on the increase here—some names are in for baptism. Meetings are well attended. Hopeful for the end, I am,

Sincerely yours,

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Aug. 25.

Editors Herald:—I notice a letter in Herald of August 18, a letter from Bro. J. M. Scott, written from Louisville, Kentucky. From his writing I think he has been misinformed in regard to the work being opened up in Louisville. A few lines from me will leave a better impression on Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr's, work in that city. August, 1892, I commenced working for the Louisville Forge Co., and was in their employ one year. While there I formed the acquaintance of Mr. James Riggle and family, and often spent my leisure evenings talking with him and others on gospel themes, and distributing tracts, Heralds, and Ensigns, had him read the Voice of Warning. In the meantime wife and I visited them and they visited us. While over there one Sunday morning, Riggle and I called on a Rev. James Metcalfe, whom I had met before, and while at his house, several neighbors gathered in to hear us talk about the fulfillment of prophecy and the latter-day message. We became so interested that the greater part of the day passed before we left. Some said if that was Mormon doctrine they would like to hear more. Not long after this, Rev. Metcalfe and others started a free "gospel mission" up town. When I heard it I wrote him and told him my brother was coming that way, and if they wanted to hear the gospel as restored in the last days, to open their mission and it should not cost them a cent, and if we taught anything not in harmony with the Bible, to give it a public airing.

The mission was opened and Bro. Scott came. The first time he gave them three discourses; they invited him back. He passed that way a few months afterwards and gave them three more sermons, the last one on the Signs of the Times. Bro. Scott was blessed wonderfully, and at the close of the meeting, Mrs. Riggle came up and gave Bro. Scott her hand and demanded baptism; then invited us to come to her house and preach, about three miles from the mission. We went over the next Friday night and Bro. Scott dispensed the word to them, and they invited him back to the hall again. When he came the third time their free gospel mission had closed for good. Too expensive on so few, was the cause of closed doors. This Mr. Metcalfe told me last Sunday. Bro. Scott gave them seven discourses in all. Bro. W. H. Kelley talked some in those meetings, and some of those people have heard M. R. Scott, Sen., David Scott, and others. Does this look like "floating under our own colors?" If those people told Bro. Scott we tried to deceive, they misinformed him. Some of those people have been acquainted with me for six years or more, and know that "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation."

Wisdom should be used in opening new places where people's minds have been prejudiced against this work. It is good policy to feed them a little on first principles, show the unchangeability of God's works, then they can see that all of Adam's long race must be saved through obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ; then their minds are prepared to receive the angel's message. I have known some of our ministry to go into new localities and preach on Book of Mormon subjects, or the divine calling of Joseph Smith, or throw clubs in our religious neighbor's yard. Is this wisdom? The minds of the people must be schooled first.

I have just read the first volume of Church History. This is a grand book and should be in the home of every Latter Day Saint, the price of the book is no item.

Editors Herald:—I am still strong in the faith and firm in the latter-day gospel, and feel that God the Father is still remembering us as a people. I feel that I ought to be careful how I use the talents God has given me, for I am made to feel that the time is at hand that those whom God finds are not using the talents he has given them will be cast aside. There are quite a number of good earnest saints here who are willing to work, for which I am thankful to God; and above all there is an effort being made to bring the truth of the gospel to the Mexican race in their own language, some two or three sermons having already been preached.

JOHN E. RITTER.

NORTH MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.,

September 1.

Editors Herald:—I believe I have not written anything for the Herald this conference year, so have thought best to write. One reason why I have not written is that other of the brethren have written such glowing accounts of their work, and how the gospel is winning its way with them, that I thought if my work was to be measured by theirs as they write it, it would look small. I am still alive to the interest of the work and am doing what I can to spread the same. The most of my labor so far has been confined to the city of Minneapolis and the country close by, and I am satisfied that some good has been done. I have three appointments for each Sunday; two in the city and one about four miles out in the country. The one in the country is in a church known as a union church, and last Sunday it was well filled and good interest is shown by all who come. One man said last Sunday that he had heard more in five minutes there than he would hear in an hour in a sectarian meeting. I spoke an hour and twenty minutes, so he must have heard quite a little from his standpoint.

A good many are learning our side of the religious controversy through the preaching of the word as they come to our meetings, also through the daily papers, as they are making very favorable reports concerning us. This I believe is as it should be; for the true aim of all good papers should be to enlighten their readers. I called upon the editor of the Minneapolis Times and requested him to publish a short article I had written, and he willingly did so and said that the aim of a paper should be to print both sides and let the reading and thinking class judge for themselves. I think we will have no trouble after this to get a hearing in that paper.

I met and had a short talk with Elder Murdock, of the Utah Church, and if all that are sent out by them are like him we have nothing to fear. He is fifty years old and did not know where Lamoni was; whether it was in Minnesota, Iowa, or some other State—did not know where Joseph Smith lived, nor anything about our claims. He did not think that there was much difference between us, but I am of the opinion that he thought there was before he left. I saw him some two or three days after our talk, met him on the street and he would not speak to me. He claimed to be sent out without purse or scrip, but was stopping at a first class hotel, and some one had to pay for it. He claimed to belong to the Seventy. And yet had lost both feet and had wooden ones, and it was very hard for him to get around. How can such a man travel without money to pay his way? I am of the opinion that if he had to walk he would not go far in a day. They can do us no harm.

I expect to baptize at least one this week, an old man seventy-three years of age. He had not been to meeting for fourteen years until he came to hear me last year; now he is a regular attendant and wants the gospel. Had another old man out to hear that had not been to hear preaching for thirty years; said that it was all Bible. So it goes, and the end is not yet. Some are believing here in the city and have said they would obey. I shall not urge anyone into the water, but let them take their own time to come. I believe it is better to convert before they unite than to do it after they come in. Do not believe very much in hasty baptisms myself.

The Lord has blessed me of late to my heart's content in preaching the word. I cannot express it better than by saying that I have been let loose to roam at will in search of truth. To him be all the praise.

Yours in the faith,

E. A. STEDMAN.

SOMERVILLE, Victoria, July 25.

Editors Herald.—Bro. Kaler and I have just returned from a five weeks trip up north and were amply paid for the sacrifice on our part. A journey by buggy of one hundred and eighty miles was easily accomplished in four days, and without any complaint through having to sit so long at a stretch, and at times in the pouring rain. The monotony was taken away by the beauty of the perpetual green "Australian bush," where the stately trees seemed almost to stretch themselves to the sky to bask in the passing clouds, and the dense jungle beneath interspread with broad leaves and beautiful clinging vines, made the scenery enchanting. The silence of the forest is occasionally broken by the warble of some sweet songster, the laugh of a jackass, or the bound of a kangaroo, which are numerous in this country; and we were made to rejoice that our lot had been cast in such pleasant places.

Our stay with the saints of Nambucca was both beneficial and instructive to all who are in anywise interested in this great latter-day work, and oftentimes we were led to exclaim,

O marvelous work and a wonder,
How true thy teachings are!
It fills our souls with ecstasy
By glad news from afar.
Sweet angels from the courts above,
Bring tidings in our day,
To lead us gently on in life,
In the strait and narrow way.
We hear what God the Lord doth speak,
'Tis peace unto the saints,
Which greatly cheers the weary souls,
And new life gives the faint.

It was our pleasure to listen to one of the most remarkable prophecies that ever we heard; and had all of our faultfinders and quibblers about tithing, and the Bishop not doing his duty been there, it would have forever put an end to that matter. Here is a portion of it:—

"O ye, my people, saith the Lord; why do ye walk in crooked and perverse ways? Turn and cleanse yourselves, every one of you, and walk in the path that leadeth to life eternal. O, ye, my people, in times past, ye have robbed me in withholding my portion; but ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Have I not filled your granaries from year to year, and yet ye have left my storehouse empty, and prevented my work. Behold, if ye will not hearken to me in these things, ye shall be torn and scattered, and I the Lord will not permit you to dwell in this place."

This caused a little serious consideration and the conclusion arrived at was that an important part of God's law had been sadly neglected; and if the earthly riches were not wisely used, who would commit unto them the true riches? I think it would be wise for some of our brethren who quote with such emphasis, "Woe unto me if I preach not this gospel," and consider this one for a while. "And it shall come to pass that every soul which shall not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." The Lord has said that the law of tithing is in force now and has called upon the Twelve and Bishop to execute it; but do we expect them to come and compel us to pay a tenth of our possessions? Certainly not. We sing, "God will force no man," and I am sure the Bishop will not try it either. Then we ought to be wise and believing, and not have to be rebuked like some of old times, who received the following, "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

Some seem so slow in this matter of tithing, that I am afraid "the days of grace" will pass unimproved, and great loss will be sustained.

During our stay at Nambucca, old troubles were settled up, a better understanding was had among the officers, and the prospects looked better for permanent work. Before we left there the Lord in his kindness spoke these few comforting words to me:—

"Verily, thus saith the Lord unto thee, my servant Cornelius, I have heard thy prayers concerning this mission; behold, I will give thee power in time to come to prosecute the mission of the Australian Colonies to a fuller extent; for I the Lord have many people here to be gathered out, and you shall have the pleasure to see it fulfilled, saith the Lord. Amen."

It will be ten years the 28th of next June since I arrived in this country, and in my weakness I have tried to stand at my post and stem the tide, and at present I have no desire to leave until the Lord shall say it is enough. I feel in no wise discouraged or disheartened, for I know the work is of God and will triumph by and by.

Hoping to be successful in obtaining a crown, I am, fraternally,

AN EVENING'S CONVERSATION.— NO. 3.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

JAMES.—As to endowments. We believe in the endowments of God's Holy Spirit, as promised in the Bible by Christ, and as enjoyed by the disciples on the day of Pentecost. This endowment brings to us, Peter says, all things that pertain to life and godliness. (2 Peter 1: 3.) And Christ says:—

But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.—John 14: 26.

Again:—

But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me.—John 15: 26.

Again:—

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.—John 16: 13.

And Paul, in speaking of the influence of this endowment in First Corinthians twelfth chapter, says it enables us to say that Jesus is the Christ. It brings us wisdom, knowledge, faith, and the various miraculous powers connected with the gospel; and in Ephesians fourth chapter, he says, in regard to its general influence on the church, it is for the "perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ." Now it seems to me that there is nothing left for these secret endowments that we are given here in Utah to do in the way of benefit to us. Besides, I find the gospel of Christ squarely against secret ordinances, and secret chambers. In the Second Book of Nephi, chapter eleven, verse forty-seven, in my book I read:—

For behold, my beloved brethren, I say unto you, that the Lord God worketh not in darkness. He doeth not any thing save it be for the benefit of the world; for he loveth the world, even that he layeth down his life, that he may draw all men unto him.

And in the twelfth chapter, seventy-third verse, he says:—

There is nothing which is secret, save it shall be revealed; there is no work of darkness, save it shall be made manifest in the light; and there is nothing which is sealed upon the earth, save it shall be loosed.

The endowment given to the disciples on the day of Pentecost was open to the world—all could see its wondrous effect upon them, as you will learn by reading the second chapter of Acts; and in the eighth chapter, it is related that "Philip went down to Samaria and preached Christ unto them." When they had believed and been baptized, he did not tell them they would have to go up to Jerusalem to receive their endowments; but the narrative says:—

Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost.—Acts 8: 14, 15.

So it was with Paul, when he had found the twelve disciples at Ephesus: Laid his hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost and spake with tongues and prophesied. No necessity in those days to make a long journey to receive their endowments; but the work of the gospel, and its ordinances, were consummated right there, and they entered into the full enjoyment of their privileges.

Christ in giving his instructions to his apostles, as found in Matthew 10: 26, 27, says:—

Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known. What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light; and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops.

Now you know that we never received such instructions as that from our leaders in days gone by, when we have started out on our missionary work. No; the secret work of the endowment house was to be a secret forever. Our lips were closed. Christ again was brought before the High Priest for trial, and we again witness his boldness. See John 18: 19-21:—

The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine. Jesus answered him, I spake openly before the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why asketh thou me? Ask them which heard me, what I said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

But our leaders, it seems, were in constant fear lest some of those who had heard them in these secret ordinances should tell something. Brigham Young, in speaking of some who wanted their endowments, said:—

Well, he gets his endowment, and what for? To go to California, and reveal everything he can, and stir up wickedness, and prepare himself for hell.—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 144.

Our leaders could not have correctly represented Christ then.

If there was any more needed to convince one that Christ was very much opposed to anything of a secret nature, we will only have to refer to one more passage of scripture. This you will find in Matthew 24: 24-27. Christ, in this chapter, is giving his disciples some idea of the perilous times that are coming to pass in the last days, and he says:—

For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they would deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold he is in the desert; go not forth: behold he is in the secret chambers, believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

I emphasized three words in this passage that I want to call your attention to. You will notice that the whole chapter relates to the end of the world, and what shall transpire then. Then in speaking of certain ones that shall come in his name, and say that he is in the desert, we must not go forth; if they were to say that he was in the secret chambers, we must not believe it. Can you see any application of this passage to what we have been told for years; that he was, by his Spirit at least, in the desert and in the secret chambers? I confess that when I first had my attention called to this passage, that I was almost startled by the language, and yet I have been so blind, I could not see it until it was placed before me by these ministers of the Reorganization. You can no doubt see now why you have been taught to think that these men did not believe in the endowments, because they have combatted these false and secret things practiced in the name of God; but which bear no resemblance to the real genuine article, as taught by Christ and his apostles, and by Joseph Smith.

In regard to baptism for the dead, I will have but little to say; as I think that after reading the passage from the Doctrine and Covenants, which I shall ask you to read, that very few words will explain to you the reason why we do not practice it. Please turn to section 124 and read from verses 31 to 36.

George.—Reads:—

But I command you, all ye my saints, to build an house unto me; and I grant unto you a sufficient time to build an house unto me, and during this time your baptisms shall be acceptable unto me. But, behold, at the end of this appointment, your baptisms for your dead shall not be acceptable unto me; and if you do not these things at the end of the appointment, ye shall be rejected as a church, with your dead, saith the Lord your God. For, verily I say unto you, that after you have had sufficient time to build an house to me, wherein the ordinance of baptizing for the dead belongeth, and for which the same was instituted from before the foundation of the world, your baptisms for your dead cannot be acceptable unto me. For therein are the keys of the holy priesthood ordained, that you may receive honor and glory. And after this time, your baptisms for the dead, by those who are scattered abroad, are not acceptable unto me, saith the Lord; for it is ordained that in Zion, and in her stakes, and in Jerusalem, those places which I have appointed for refuge, shall be the places for your baptisms for your dead.

James.—Comment upon this passage is hardly necessary; but I want to call your attention to a few points in it. First. The Lord says that he gives the saints a sufficient time to build the house, and at the end of the appointed time, if it is not finished, the church will be rejected as a church, with their dead.

The temple was not finished at all, as the following testimony will fully prove. At the dedication of the St. George temple, January 1, 1877, Brigham Young said:—

We built one in Nauvoo. I could pick out several men before me now, that were there when it was built, and know just how much was finished, and what was done. It is true we left brethren there with instructions to finish it, and they got it nearly completed before it was burned, but the saints did not enjoy it.—Mill. Star, vol. 39, p. 118.

Another writer, in speaking of the Nauvoo temple, tells us exactly how much was done, and how nearly it came to completion. His testimony is as follows:—

In no sense can it be said truthfully, that any part of the temple at Nauvoo was completed, with the possible exception of the main assembly room into which the front doors opened. The basement, in which was the font, was incomplete; the stairway, to the left of the font, was not relieved of the rough boards laid on the risings, on which the workmen went up and down; the upper assembly rooms were not accessible, the floor not being laid, neither the doors hung nor the walls plastered. Besides this, the inside ornamentation was by no means finished, even in those parts called completed.—Saints' Herald, Jan. 1, 1872.

These quotations prove conclusively, taken as they are from both sides of the controversy, that the temple was not completed. God declares that he will give them sufficient time to complete it; that meant that he would restrain their enemies, and remove all obstacles that might stand in their way, if they would only be diligent and righteous. I have already read to you a quotation from one of the early epistles of the Twelve, instituting the one-tenth-of-your-income law. One of the reasons that this epistle was written was to raise money to build this very temple, so it is claimed; but God would not allow the using of such ill-gotten means for the purpose of building a house to his name. The end would not justify the means. In their eagerness to fulfill the temporal part of the command, they forgot the spiritual part; forgetting that God also had said, in another place:—

And it shall come to pass, that if you build a house unto my name, and do not do the things that I say, I will not perform the oath which I make unto you, neither fulfill the promises ye expect at my hands, saith the Lord; for instead of blessings, ye, by your own works, bring cursings, wrath, indignation, and judgments upon your own heads, by your follies, and by all your abominations, which you practice before me, saith the Lord.—Doctrine and Covenants 124: 47, 48.

God could not recognize the oppression of his people by approving it, even though it was for the building of temples in his name; and while we claim that the house was not finished, as directed by the Lord, yet it is evident that that was not the only reason that the Lord had for rejecting the church at that time.

The second part of the passages you read, that I wish to call especial attention to, is that which says:—

And after this time, your baptisms for the dead, by those who are scattered abroad, are not acceptable unto me, saith the Lord; for it is ordained that in Zion, and in her stakes, and in Jerusalem, those places which I have appointed for refuge, shall be the places for your baptisms for your dead.—Doctrine and Covenants 124: 35, 36.

I have already shown you that the Lord had located Zion in Missouri, and had declared that no other place should be appointed except that land, until it should be filled; and as the Lord says, that in our scattered condition our baptisms for the dead shall not be acceptable to him; because he has ordained that in Zion, Jerusalem, and Zion's stakes are the places for the performance of these rites, I am bound to accept the fiat, and declare all others illegal in his sight, except those which are performed in the places, and according to the way his words designate.

The Reorganization is waiting now for God to remove the injunction placed upon the further practice of this rite, and the preparation of the places given as ordained for that purpose. We do not propose to forget that God has reserved the right to command his people in these things, and we are trying to observe the law requiring spiritual advancement as a necessary qualification for this important work, and trust that when the command comes we may be ready, not only financially, but spiritually, to carry on the work acceptably to God.

George.—There is another question I will ask in regard to young Joseph and the Reorganization teaching the revelations of Joseph the martyr. You know that they have always fought against the doctrine of polygamy, and we have always been taught here that it was one of the revelations of Joseph Smith, and that he also practiced it. Can you give me any good reason for believing that it is not of God, and that Joseph Smith had nothing to do with it?

James.—In the first place, the question with me is not as to whether Joseph Smith practiced it or not. The question is, "Is it of God?" I do not believe that Joseph Smith was infallible; but as I said in the beginning of our conversation, those who lead us are just as much bound by the law as the least member of the church, and must be judged by the law. But I will deal with the question as to whether Joseph Smith taught and practiced the principle or not, and will state positively that the evidence is not sufficient to convince me that he did teach or practice it; although for years I believed with you that he did; but my belief then was based more upon the fact that some one told me that he did, than any evidence I had received for myself. We will first deal with the question as to whether the doctrine is of God or not. We have always been taught that God had a hand in raising up this nation and making her Constitution, and that one of the objects had in view was the so forming the laws and Constitution that it would be possible for the Church of Christ to be established here, with its laws and ordinances; and the Lord believing it to be true, gave this instruction to the saints in August, 1831, section 58: 21-23:—

Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land: wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold, here is wisdom.

It always seemed strange to me that if, as we are led to understand, the Lord raised up this nation for the purpose named, that he allowed the nation to make laws which would practically make it impossible to establish such a law as polygamy. And he no doubt foresaw the fact, that the nation would, and had established laws prohibiting the practicing of polygamy; and yet his instruction was: "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God, hath no need to break the laws of the land." If, however, we take those laws governing the church up to the death of

Joseph Smith, we find that there was nothing contrary to the laws of the land. And we are to continue to teach them as the law of the church, as is evident from the following:—

Thou shalt take the things thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues.—D. C. 42: 59, 60.

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit.—D. C. 42: 12, 13.

Then follows several items of law, among which I find:—

Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent, shall be cast out. Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else.—D. C. 42: 21, 22.

It was easy enough to obey these commands, and also obey the laws of the land. Again, we were told that polygamy was instituted for the purpose of peopling the earth, and to furnish tabernacles for preëxistent spirits that were clamoring for an earthly existence; and that the monogamic system of marriage was not adequate to perform this obligation of ours to furnish these tabernacles. But I find in these covenants and church articles that we are to teach, as a law to the church, this:—

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation, and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.—D. C. 49: 15–17.

The very reason why the leaders of the Utah Church declared polygamy was instituted, God says monogamy was given, that is that the world might be filled with the measure of man according to his creation before the world was made. God's plan was consistent with the laws of the land, which he said we should obey, and by so doing we need not disobey his laws; but the other was in flat contradiction to both.

The Book of Mormon is also referred to in the above instruction given to the elders, priests, and teachers of the church, and in that I find that polygamy is called a "grosser crime" than pride and its attendant evils; and the Lord says that he had led the people out of Jerusalem that he might raise up unto him a righteous branch, and for this purpose he commands:—

Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women.—Book of Jacob 2: 6.

And in the record of Zeniff, as found in the Book of Mosiah, in speaking of King Noah it says:—

For behold, he did not keep the commandments of God, but he did walk after the desires of his own heart, and he had many wives and concubines.—Mosiah 7: 1.

In the Book of Ether I find the following:—

And it came to pass that Riplakish did not do that which was right in the sight of the Lord, for he did have many wives and concubines, and did lay that upon men's shoulders which was grievous to be borne; yea he did tax them with heavy taxes; and with the taxes he did build many spacious buildings.—Ether 4: 5.

As I look over Utah, and see the four magnificent temples, the spacious tabernacle, and assembly hall, and the mansions which were built for the leaders of the people here, and all by the hard earned dollars of the poor people, I feel like paraphrasing the language of the history of these two men, and applying it to Brigham Young and his fellows.

And it came to pass that Brigham Young began to reign, and he did not walk in the ways of his predecessor. For behold, he did not keep the commandments of God; but he did walk after the desires of his own heart; and he had many wives and concubines; and caused his people to commit sin, and do that which was abominable in the sight of the Lord. Yea, and they did commit whoredoms and all manner of wickedness. And he laid a tax of one tenth part of all they possessed; a tenth part of their gold, and of their silver, and a tenth part of their ziff, and of their copper, and of their brass, and their iron; and a tenth part of their fatlings; and also, a tenth part of all their grain. And all this did he take to support himself and his wives, and his concubines; and also his priests, and their wives, and their concubines; thus he had changed the affairs of the kingdom. For he put down the priests that had been consecrated by his predecessor, and consecrated new ones in their stead, such as were lifted up in the pride of their hearts. . . . And it came to pass that Brigham built many elegant and spacious buildings; and ornamented them with fine work of wood, and of all manner of precious things of gold, and of silver, and of iron, and of brass, and ziff, and of copper; and he also built him a spacious palace, and a throne in the midst thereof; all of which was of fine wood, and was ornamented with gold, and silver, and precious things. (Book of Mormon, Record of Zeniff.)

And again we might paraphrase the language of Jacob to the Nephites, and represent the Lord speaking to the people here in the valleys of the mountains as follows: Behold the "Josephites," your brethren, whom ye hate, because ye have been taught to believe that they are apostates, are more righteous than you: for they have not forgotten the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto our fathers, that they should have, save it were one wife; and concubines they should have none; and there should not be whoredoms committed among them.

The Bible, too, agrees with the Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon in condemning polygamy. In Malachi 2: 14, 15, is the following:—

Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously: yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant. And did he not make one? Yet had he the residue of the Spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth.

It seems to me that nothing could be plainer than this last quotation. The Lord declares that he had the residue of the Spirit, and could have created more than one wife in the beginning for man, but he only created one, "and wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed." And yet we are told by the leaders here, that polygamy was instituted to raise a godly seed. But here and also in the Book of Mormon God has declared exactly the opposite.

George.—Well; how do you account for the fact that God honored the offspring of polygamist fathers, as in the case of Jacob, for instance? The names of his sons are to be upon the gates of the New Jerusalem.

James.—If you will read the eighteenth chapter of Ezekiel, you will find there a declaration by God of the fact that the children shall not be responsible for the sins of the parents, and explains at length his law upon that matter, and concludes in this language:—

Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live. The soul that sinneth it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.—Ezek. 18: 19, 20.

No matter then what honor may be given to the son by the Lord, it is no evidence that he approves of the doings of the father; consequently that statement upon which the Utah people have relied so long as an approval of polygamy, is of none effect. I will now endeavor to give you my reasons for not accepting the claim that Joseph Smith had anything to do with the introduction of polygamy.

According to the claim set up by the people here in Utah, the principle was revealed as early as 1831, and Joseph Smith is represented in the first clause of the so-called revelation on polygamy as asking the Lord how he justifies David and Solomon in having many wives and concubines. The Book of Mormon had just been published to the world. He claimed it had been translated by the power of God, and in it this passage occurs:—

Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord.—Jacob 2: 6.

The lawyer, when he came to Christ, put the question, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" was answered, "What is written in the law? How readest thou?" And if Joseph Smith had been so foolish as to have asked the question attributed to him, what more appropriate answer could have been given than the above, given to the lawyer by Christ? On the 17th of August, 1835, the article on marriage, found in all the editions of the Book of Covenants published up to 1876, was formally presented to the church, and accepted as an article of faith; and in that I find the following:—

Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy: we declare that we believe that one man should have one wife; and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again.—D. C. 111: 4.

I do not believe that Joseph Smith was a hypocrite, and so I cannot believe he would allow such a statement to go before the world in 1835, if he had received intimations from God, in 1831, that polygamy was allowable and necessary to our salvation. In Joseph Smith's History, written by himself, he states that he finished the translation of the Bible, July 2, 1833. I have already called your attention to this important book, and I shall now present it in evidence here, by giving a change of passages, as found in King James' translation, which I am sure never would have been changed had it been true that this principle had been revealed to him in 1831. I shall only give a few comparative texts, but sufficient to show that no thought of the establishment of polygamy by using David and Solomon as examples had ever entered his head up to that time at least.

KING JAMES' TRANSLATION.

For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David his father.

And Solomon did sin in the sight of the Lord, and went not fully after the Lord, as did David his father.—1 Kings 11: 4, 6.

And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it to thee; and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes.—1 Kings 14: 8.

INSPIRED TRANSLATION.

For it came to pass when Solomon was old, his wives turned away his heart after other gods; and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, and it became as the heart of David his father.

And Solomon did evil in the sight of the Lord, as David his father, and went not fully after the Lord.—1 Kings 11: 4, 6.

And rent the kingdom away from the house of David and gave it to thee, because he kept not my commandments. But thou hast not been as my servant David, when he followed me with all his heart only to do right in mine eyes.—1 Kings, 14: 8.

These passages show plainly that Joseph Smith did not intend to use David and Solomon as examples of righteousness, and form, with the passages I have already given from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, such a bulwark against the introduction of the doctrine of polygamy as never was made by any one individual, and forever precludes the thought that any idea of polygamy was ever thought of in 1831, as asserted by Joseph F. Smith, in Deseret News of May 20, 1886, and republished in The Historical Record, vol. 6, p. 219.

Almost without exception the elders of the church, up to 1852, acknowledged that these passages were conclusive evidence of the fact that polygamy was not, neither could be, a doctrine of the church.

Sunday School Associations.

MANCHESTER AND SHEFFIELD.

The above-named association met at nine a. m., Sunday, August 1, 1897, in the North Manchester room. Elder Mather, district superintendent, opened the convention by speaking of the encouragement and discouragement to be met with in our labor. Elders Caffall and Pitt were present and took part in the meeting. Evaline Mather, eight years, sang sweetly Sankey's "Will you meet me at the fountain?" E. R. Dewsnup then gave notes of an address on "The growth of attention in the child mind," psychologically. J. Dewsnup, Sr., spoke, taking a retrospective view of our Sabbath school work in Manchester. In conclusion he said, "God bless the Sabbath schools." H. Greenwood desired to do his work efficiently and to interest the adults. He desired to make the work pleasurable, for in so doing good is sure to be done.

At the Monday session Joseph Arber read a paper entitled, "Our mission to the children." The paper was thoughtfully prepared and well received. Sisters M. and E. Gibbs sang and played the sacred song, "Jerusalem." Report of the district superintendent read: He had visited in turn all the schools in the district but one. He found some things which were encouraging and others which were discouraging. He felt willing to continue. The secretary said there were nine schools in the district, one of which had sent in no statistics. Total membership, June, 1896, was 406; June, 1897, was 426; average, 296. Income £32. 8s. 2½d. ($155.50). Expenditure £26. 19s. 4½d. ($124.40). Balance in hand 15s. 0½d. ($3.61). Losses during year, 28; gains 48; net gain 20. One school applied for incorporation, namely, Zion's Hope Branch, and was accepted. Resolved that the following be the officers for 1897: S. F. Mather superintendent, T. Taylor associate superintendent, W. R. Armstrong secretary, C. H. Barton treasurer. Elder Caffall offered some very encouraging remarks to the officers of the association, which were listened to with profit. Our aged brother's aim has always been to encourage, and his watchword, "Coöperation." Elder Mather gave a model lesson from the quarterly. Our brother's task appeared herculean considering the time at his disposal. The blackboard was freely used for notes. Notice of motion by Elder Taylor that the name of the association be changed was handed in. The proceedings then closed with prayer.

Miscellaneous Department.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Florida District; Greeting:—It has been suggested that we obtain a tent for our district, and as the demand for one is so great, and the suggestion seems to meet with favor from all with whom I have talked, I therefore make this appeal to all who are able and willing, to contribute to our tent fund, so we may have it for the next summer season, if not for this one.

Our missionaries can use a tent nearly, if not quite nine months in the year here, and as we have no houses in many towns in this mission, it would enable our elders to unfurl the gospel banner in many places where they are now practically debarred. Bro. A. J. Vickery has liberally started the contributions and is willing to help more. Anyone abroad who wishes to help in this enterprise for the spread of the gospel in our southeastern mission, will be receipted for all money sent and heartily thanked for the same. A statement of receipts and expenditures will be published in Herald, and entire satisfaction promised to all contributors. Send money to Bro. D. E. Tucker, Bro. C. I. Carpenter, or to me, all at Milton, Santa Rosa County, Florida.

Dear saints, please read section 114 of Doctrine and Covenants, which is the first revelation to the Reorganized Church, and note that it treats entirely on the law of tithing. Remember we owe God, and let us try to discharge the obligation. Let us not commence to economize at the Lord's house, when times get dull, but let us curtail some unnecessary expense, and do something to spread the glad tidings. Hoping to have a good tent in the field next season, and that more names will be on the Bishop's agent's book, and money in the local treasury to defray the expenses of our own mission, I am,

Yours in bonds,
STEPHEN D. ALLEN,
Dist., Pres. and Bishop's Agt.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

Yours in gospel bonds,
JOHN CAIRNS, Branch Clerk.

The two days' meeting for South Scott, Indiana, will change dates with the Flint meeting, owing to the announced date conflicting with the Disciples' annual meeting at Angola. The meetings will occur as follows: South Scott, September 25 and 26; Flint, October 2 and 3. This change is made by consent of both South Scott and Flint. Invitation remains unchanged.

THE SAINTS' HERALD
REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD was fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

AN INDIAN ON THE FUTURE OF HIS RACE.

ONE of the most readable articles in the August Forum was contributed by Simon Pokagon, the Pottawatomie Indian chief whose letter on the subject of Indian names appears elsewhere in this number of the Review.

After briefly reviewing the history of the relations of the Indian tribes to the white settlers of different nationalities in America, Pokagon says:—

“It is useless to deny the charge that at times we have been goaded to vindictive and cruel acts. Some of my own tribe, however, were soldiers in the Northern army during the civil war. Some of them were taken and held prisoners in the rebel prisons; and the cruelty which, according to the tales they tell, was witnessed there was never outdone in border warfare with the scalping-knife and tomahawk. And yet I believe that had the Northern people been placed in the South under like circumstances, their prisoners of war would have been treated with similar cruelty. It was the result of a desperate effort to save an expiring cause. I believe there is no reasonable person well grounded in United States history who will not admit that there were ten times as many who perished miserably in Southern prisons as have been killed by our people since the discovery of America. I recall these facts not to censure, but to show that cruelty and revenge are the offspring of war, not of race, and that nature has placed no impassable gulf between us and civilization.”

For the United States Government's present policy of expending money liberally for the education of the Indian citizenship rather than for fighting him, Pokagon has only words of commendation. He expresses much gratification in the work of the school at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and the various government schools. He strongly disapproves, however, of the reservation system as now managed.

“While I most heartily indorse the present policy of the government in dealing with our people, I must admit—to be true to my own convictions—that I am worried over the ration system, under which so many of our people are being fed on the reservations. I greatly fear it may eventually vagabondize many of them beyond redemption. It permits the gathering of lazy, immoral white men of the worst stamp, who spend their time in idleness and in corrupting Indian morality.”

*Pokagon finds that his people, when associated with these “squaw men,” “develop the wolfish greed of civilization.” He fails to see the wisdom of permitting the Indian nations to exist as independent powers within the bounds of the republic.

Pokagon also deplors the ravages of alcoholism among the Indians:—

“Were it an open enemy outside our lines, we might meet it with success. But, alas! it is a traitor within our camp, cunning as Wa-goosh (the fox). It embraces and kisses but to poison like the snake, without the warning rattle. Before I associated with white men I had supposed that they were not such slaves to that soulless tyrant as the red man. But I have learned that the cruel curse enslaves alike the white man in his palace and the red man in his hut; alike the chieftain and the king; the savage and the sage. I am indeed puzzled to understand how it is that the white race, whose works seem almost divine, should not be able to destroy this great devil-fish, which their own hands have fashioned and launched upon the sea of human life; whose tentacles reach out into the halls of legislation and courts of law, into colleges and churches—doing everywhere its wicked work.”

To Pokagon it seems almost a certainty that the Indian race will in time lose its identity by amalgamation with the whites. He does not speak of this as a consummation devoutly to be wished by either race, but as an inevitable result, to be accepted with characteristic Indian stoicism.

“The index finger of the past and present is pointing to the future, showing most conclusively that by the middle of the next century all Indian reservation and tribal relations will have passed away. Then our people will begin to scatter; and the result will be a general mixing up of the races. Through intermarriage the blood of our people, like the waters that flow into the great ocean, will be forever lost in the dominant race; and generations yet unborn will read in history of the red men of the forest and inquire, ‘Where are they?’”—Review of Reviews.

THE RETURN OF THE JEWS TO PALESTINE.

THERE are few subjects which exercise so perennial a fascination over the minds of many good people as the possibility of such a magnificent fulfilling of the prophecies as would be involved in the return of the Jews to Palestine. Dr. Emil Reich contributes to the Nineteenth Century for August an article which will fill these good people with ecstatic delight, for he tells us that the Jews are actually moving back to the Holy Land, moving along into two distinct groups, to which he gives the names of the religious and political Zionists. The religious Zionists are already in the field sending out colonists every year, so that they have already begun the repeopling of the Holy Land by the chosen people, but of much more interest is the action of the political Zionists, who have started their movement as a kind of counterblast to anti-Semitism.

“The work of the political Zionists has been up to this writing one of open propaganda for the establishment of a new Jewish State proper. Dr. Herzl, in a pamphlet published last year in several languages, boldly advances the idea that whereas the condition of the Jews in Christian countries is at present one of unbearable humiliation; and whereas anti-Semitism, or the engine of that general hatred and persecution of the modern Jews, is triumphant to a degree, so that no plausible means of stemming its tide can be, nor has been, suggested: be it resolved that the Jews of all countries who, after all, are nothing but Jews, and have never, nor will they ever, really assimilate with the nations among whom they live—that the Jews, the doctor says, shall abandon the inhospitable fields of Europe, and, repairing to Palestine, there reestablish their ancient State. Nor is the great journalist at a loss as to the precise institutions, laws, constitution, etc., to be adopted by that new State."

During the past month a congress has been held in the town of Basle, Switzerland, for the purpose of discussing this scheme.

Dr. Reich, who describes this new and interesting development of the Jews, does not think that Zionism is likely to succeed at present, or on its present basis, simply because its Moses has not yet appeared. It must be admitted that Max Nordau is a very poor substitute for Moses. Dr. Reich says:—

THE WEAKNESSES OF ZIONISM.

"The religious Zionists, therefore, by suppressing the national element in the dual character of Judaism, place themselves in an altogether false position, and will never achieve what in their innermost hearts they ardently wish to realize. The political Zionists, of the type of Dr. Nordau and Dr. Herzl, commit the opposite mistake or false feint; they suppress and disregard the religious element in the dual character of Judaism, and will consequently achieve still less than their opponents. It is hopeless to appeal to purely utilitarian and opportunist motives in trying to move a complex of people whose great hope and central interest are of a religious character. An exodus of Jews cannot be brought about by a power propped up by considerations of mere nationalism. For in the first place there are no greater anti-Semites than many of the Jews themselves. It is no exaggeration to say that nearly all modern Jews, who have received a genteel education at colleges and universities, are more inclined to anti-Semitism than Christians of the same social status. It is mere folly to think that those anti-Semitic Jews who are among the best gifted and most influential will associate themselves in a risky enterprise with the very people whom they inwardly detest. He who undertakes to unite men of so utterly divergent opinions and emotional tempers must needs have recourse to the one and solitary agency that can work such marvels—to religion. The two doctors, however, disregard religion; their enterprise is therefore divested of all chances of success. The exodus of the Jews of to-day from Europe can only be made in a manner in no way different from that in which was achieved their exodus from Egypt some three thousand years ago. A Moses is required; a man full of divine inspiration and an energy fraught with religious zeal. Religion is not, like feudalism or guilds, a mere phenomenon of the Middle Ages; it is an historic category, an indestructible factor of all national life, and, with the Jews, the factor of all factors. The anti-Semitic Jews will keep aloof from Dr. Herzl's enterprise because they dislike the nationality which the doctor wants to perpetuate. The pious and loyal Jews will keep aloof from it because it disregards the religious element of Judaism."—Review of Reviews.

DRIED POTATOES NOW.

The opening up of a demand for potatoes peeled, sliced, and dried like apples promises to give a fresh impetus to potato cultivation. By this operation decay is prevented and freight cost lessened. The potatoes are peeled and sliced by machinery, soaked two minutes in strong brine, drained, and dried at a temperature of about 194°. Before using the slices are soaked from twelve to fifteen hours, and have all the freshness and flavor of new potatoes.

The Catholic Gazette, of London, said some months ago that 15,000 persons had been received into the Roman Catholic Church in England in the fifteen months previous. Father David, the Rome correspondent of The Catholic Standard and Times, of Philadelphia, says that the true figures are 12,000 converts in twelve months. He adds that the converts come from the middle classes, and that the movement toward the Church of Rome has been accelerated since the publication of the Pope's letter denying the validity of Anglican orders.

The Abyssinian Church, the oldest organized national church in existence, is said to be about to abandon its policy of isolation and to enter into friendly relations with Western Christianity. It is likely to seek some form of union with the Orthodox Church of Russia.

Dr. Theodore Herzl, the promoter of the latest scheme for restoring Palestine to the Jews, has issued an appeal to the brethren in America in which he expresses great confidence in the success of his plan. He says: "I am of the opinion of my dear friend Nordau that the idea of a Jewish state is not an idea of my own. It is the old, never dead, immortal idea of our people. No matter what certain gentlemen with monkish mendacity and jobbing selfishness may say, the Jewish people wishes to reassert itself, it longs for its country. It wants to return home free and happy."

The German Jewish rabbis have declared against Zionism. They assert its aim is to found a national Jewish state disparaging to the messianic prophecies of Judaism, that Judaism obliges its believers to serve the country they belong to with all devotion, and to foster its national interests with all their strength until the Messiah comes. The rabbis are therefore summoning the Jews of Germany to keep aloof from Zionist tendencies, and by no means to attend the Zionist congress to be held at Basel at the end of August. The declaration is signed by the rabbis of Berlin, Frankfort, Dresden, Halberstadt, and Munich.

By a decree of the Russian Government, dated August 20, 1896, all schools in the empire not exclusively Jewish were closed against Jewish girls. The result was that the children of those parents who could not afford a teacher were left without any instruction whatever. The decree in question spread over the whole pale of settlement, and moreover forbade the attendance of girls in the Chedarin. The wealthier portion of the Jews in Russia are now petitioning against this decree.

The senate at St. Petersburg has declared that Jewish apothecaries may be domiciled in all parts of the empire, including Kohan and Tersk. The decision is the result of a test case fought by a Jewish apothecary.

The Methodist Protestant is authority for the statement that the trustees of a Methodist church in Alabama have introduced a tax of $10 per annum upon every member of the congregation who chews tobacco. It is said to "work well."

CURED BY FAITH.

BELIEVED AND WAS BAPTIZED.

ABOUT ten days ago Mr. L. M. Thompkins, who lives on Cedar Street, had a severe attack of kidney trouble which confined him to his bed. Later he suffered greatly with a calomel sore mouth, and on Sunday was suffering severely when Mr. Litney, a neighbor, called upon him. Soon after Mr. Litney went away the pain left him suddenly and he immediately rose from his bed, dressed himself, and went to the bay shore and joined a crowd of people gathered there to witness the ceremony of baptism, which was being administered by the Latter Day Saints and was himself baptized, since which time he has been up and about. The Latter Day Saints have been holding a series of meetings in a tent on the corner of Division and Seventh Streets for several weeks, and Mr. Thompkins has attended some of the meetings and become somewhat interested in them.

The way Mr. Thompkins tells the matter is something like this: He was lying in bed Sunday suffering with intense pain, when he saw from his window the crowd of people coming from the tent on their way past his house to the bay for the purpose of baptizing some of the converts. He groaned and somewhat involuntarily said, "O Lord, if I could be rid of this pain I would get up and be baptized myself to-morrow." He kept thinking deeply and finally exclaimed, "O Lord, if I could be rid of this pain I would get up and go now and be baptized." He says the pain immediately left him and he arose, went to the bay, and was baptized as stated above.

Mr. Thompkins says he has been considerably inclined to infidelity for a long time, but this experience has convinced him of the truth of revelation. Another thing that tends to strengthen him in his faith is that he asked God, if it was his will that he should make public his experience that he should send a representative of the Eagle to call upon him, which request was apparently fulfilled when the reporter called this morning. Mr. Thompkins is an old resident of Grand Traverse, who has always stood well in the esteem of his neighbors, and whose word may be relied upon. The Eagle has tried to give only the facts in this case and its readers are left to draw their own conclusions.

The foregoing is from the Traverse City, Michigan, Eagle, of August 17, sent us by Bro. J. J. Cornish, and tells a plain straightforward story of God's goodness to one who believed and believed unto obedience. In this case the brother was not only healed in body, but received health of spirit, and thus entered "into life," by "keeping the commandments." As a rule, people are ready to be benefited in a temporal sense, without special regard to obedience to the truth in heart and soul, hence the sensational rush after "faith healers," so-called. The "honest in heart," however, desire the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and manifest their integrity by honoring it through faith in God and his word.

It is well that the Great Physician has provided a sure remedy for the evils that afflict the world in body and in soul. It is also well that he requires a conformity to truth upon the part of those who seek to worship him, for man himself is benefited and redeemed by obedience to divine law.

This is but one of many cases of healing wrought under the influence of prayer and the preaching of the word. All are not published, but if reported by elders and saints, a large volume would be required to record them.

CONVERSION FIRST.

TO SAVE men and women—not simply to baptize them—should be the aim of all gospel workers. Neither the church nor the individuals entering it are benefited morally by the enrollment of names on its records, unless a growth results. The wisdom of God was as clearly manifested in making repentance a prerequisite to admission into the church as in fixing water baptism as the ordinance by which sins are to be remitted. The soul that is truly converted, under the preaching of the word, will be as anxious to repent as to be immersed; and the man or woman who determines to get place in the church by going down into the water only, had better not be immersed by a servant of Christ at all. Even the divinest ordinance, fraught with eternal good to "the humble seeker after life, may prove a curse to those who take advantage of it from sinister design; or who have no intention of abiding the conditions to which it proposes to lead. If faith sees not Christ in the rite, or if love for him prompt not the action toward it, it were better to refrain.

While the word justifies us in concluding that "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved," it does not authorize the conclusion that all we are to believe is that baptism is essential; nor does the promise of salvation hold good to an individual who makes that the sum of his or her belief and service.

"Except ye repent," "except ye be converted," and "except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees," are fully as important considerations in the gospel philosophy as is "except a man be born of water;" and a failure to practically respect them will forfeit to the neglecter all the good intended by the other.

To bring reproach upon the Church of God is a sin of no trifling character. If men and women are bent upon pursuing a career of unrighteousness, or have no hungering and thirsting after righteousness, they should not add to their present evil the guilt of attaching themselves in name to the body of Christ. That which is not of faith is sin, and baptism in water can bring no remission of sins unrepented of. "If ye love me, keep my commandments," said Jesus. Baptism was included in those "commandments;" but he did not wish them to observe that rite unless they loved him.

There is no part of the field so hard to operate in successfully as that wherein some have formerly obeyed as to the form of baptism, but have given no evidence of change of heart. The influence of the conduct of such did not cause the church to suffer before they added their names to its list of members, but afterwards the church was made to bear the curse of that influence. If they were intelligent enough to comprehend this, they surely must answer for the added sin eventually. If they were not capable of comprehending this they certainly were not fit candidates for baptism, being mentally incompetent.

It is not held that a minister must always know that a candidate is worthy before baptizing him; but it is demanded that he shall inform all candidates regarding what is expected of them when taking on them the name of Christ. A zeal to baptize is commendable if a jealous regard for the sacred reputation of the church accompany it; but baptisms performed without this are as likely to bring dishonor to the administrator, the church, and the candidate, as they are to do otherwise.

The church, without doubt, is the arena whereon the great conflict between right and wrong in the human character is to be engaged in; but it is not the platform whereon a man should step to make a more public exhibition of the vileness that he has wedded himself to and from which he has neither desire nor intention to be divorced. It is the acting place where is being witnessed the successes and failures, the rising and falling of struggling sons of Adam who, though contaminated with sin, are nobly fighting for a victory over self and Satan; but it is not intended as a place into which men shall enter and advertise their shame, thereby making the place appear as an undesirable habitation for virtuous and pure-minded people.

The church doors are open to the vile and the ignoble who, becoming weary of sin and having learned of Christ, are anxious to climb the gospel ladder to virtue and holiness by his help. All the church facilities are placed affectionately at the disposal of such, and though they fall and fall again, a ready hand is extended to help them in a renewal of effort; but there is no promise of salvation in sin. The mission of Christ and his followers is to save men and women from sin, and there can be no success in this line without the desire and earnest cooperation of the one in need.

Glory to God and honor to his church comes not from the mere fact that "not many wise or noble" were chosen therein; but rather from the fact that those so chosen were transformed—were cleansed from their baseness, and made to take on virtue, wisdom, and true nobility. There is no credit accruing to the church from the conduct of a minister or member who profanes his tongue with filthy conversation, coarse jesting, and ribaldry, and who descends to the level of whatever carnal conditions confronts him, and then publishes to those who have knowledge of his ways that God always chooses the "base things of the world, and things . . . that are not, to bring to naught things that are." Conspirators and evil designers choose such persons too. Corrupt schemers make such selections as that. It is in the change wrought—the transfer from vileness to purity, from coarseness to refinement, from carnal groveling to holy aspiration, and from the image of personified sin to the image of Christ—that gives glory to the author of our holy religion. This change is only possible to those who are willing to be coworkers with God, and content to abide the divine process of purification.

Our mission is to save men from sin. In the pursuit of this we must show ourselves freer from sin than when the gospel reached us. We must inspire men and women with an admiration for what we recommend, by allowing it to reveal its power in purifying us. With consistency we can then announce the possibilities of the gospel, and invite only those who desire to become godlike to unite with us. Let us carry the Christ image in our hearts, and labor always for the transfer of that image to the hearts of all upon whom our influence is brought to bear.

ITEMS FROM ENGLAND.

ON August 21 Elder James Caffall, who has been in charge of the European mission for three years, sailed from Liverpool for New York, en route to his home at Council Bluffs, Iowa. As we waved him adieu, as he stood on deck of the steamship Lucania, our feelings may be better imagined than described. Bro. Caffall has left a splendid name behind; so far we have heard only words of praise.

Turning from the ship's side, and having some time to wait for our train to Manchester, we, in company with Bro. John Dewsnup, visited the "Brighamite" headquarters at No. 42 Islington Street. There we had quite a lively brush with several elders from the land of Salt. Elder Rulon S. Wells, who has charge of the mission, and also of this office, was absent, and we found Elder Blake temporarily in charge of the office. From what Elder Blake tells us they are getting weaker-kneed than we had thought. He informed us that they were not only instructed not to debate with us; but that they were not permitted to debate with anyone, in public or on the streets. What a change since the elders came here in an early time, and accomplished such a wonderful and marvelous work in all this region of country. Then they did not hesitate to meet every form of opposition which arrayed itself, in public or private. Now these men, claiming to succeed these courageous elders, are required, with craven cowardice, to refuse to canvass their position with any opposition. They even discourage the asking of questions in public, and invite those who have questions to ask to visit them in their private rooms. How weak and contemptible they are required to appear!

However, Elder Blake assured us that there was an elder in Manchester, George Bradshaw by name, who would delight to meet us in public debate. We wrote Elder Bradshaw a letter of inquiry on the subject, but so far have had no reply. Elder Blake informed us that they had changed their policy regarding emigration, and now advised their converts to be in no hurry to emigrate. He informed us that they were now having greater success, and prospects were brighter than they had been for any time for twenty years. Inquiry in other directions does not confirm this report, however.

Here, as in America, they publicly proclaim that polygamy is a thing of the past, and that the practice no longer obtains among them. Those of our people who reside in Utah, or who have been there any length of time, know just how much faith to put in this pretense. However, whether they have abandoned the practice or not, they certainly have as much confidence in it as ever, for Elder Blake hurled the assertion at us, with considerable emphasis, that "any man who opposes polygamy is a corrupt man, and I know it."

We wondered how those men in Utah, who fought polygamy to its death, but who now seem to be in such close rapport with the Mormons, would enjoy that. How long can two walk together and not agree? We shall see.

"At work secretly;" "Two Mormon missionaries are proselyting in Cleveland;" "Differences between the Utah and the Reorganized Churches," etc. Under the above headings, with others, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, of August 9, published a lengthy interview with Bro. Willard J. Smith of the Reorganized Church, now laboring in Cleveland and vicinity; in which Bro. Smith quoted copiously from the sermons and other public utterances of Brigham Young, Jedediah M. Grant, and others who ruled in Utah in the palmy days of Brighamism, and when Brigham practically reigned according to his tyrannical will.

Bro. Smith placed said teachings and practices of the church in the mountains in contrast with the claim of the Utah elders; who, quoting from the Seer whose teachings they have departed from and upon whose name they have cast odium, say, "We believe in being honest, true, chaste, benevolent, virtuous," etc. Bro. Smith called attention to the proselyting methods of the Utah elders, who go from house to house claiming to be in harmony with the law of God and man, but who secretly believe in polygamy and uphold their leaders past and present. He also called attention to the action of the Utah Legislature in 1896, which passed a law legitimatizing all children born in polygamy since the issuance of the "manifesto" by Wilford Woodruff in 1893, and by which manifesto it is claimed that polygamy ceased among the Mormons and became "a thing of the past," "a dead issue." Elders Mayhew and Butt, operating in Cleveland in behalf of the Utah Church, made reply to said interview, stating among other things the following:—

Mr. Smith is merely throwing mud. He and his people are mad because we will not come out and harangue with them in public on these points. Such procedures would be lowering to our religion. We prefer to do our work quietly and to let public disputation alone. It is one of the instructions that we are under not to answer these men. . . . As to plural marriages or polygamy Mr. Smith must have just awakened from a long dream not to know that that is a dead issue in Utah and the reason for it so being is the Mormon Church obeys the law of the United States which forbids the practice of polygamy. We are freed of all responsibility in carrying out God's commands when our enemies come in and prevent us from doing as we would. The Lord no longer requires the duty at our hands but at the hands of our enemies. As to the remainder of Mr. Smith's remarks concerning us we are content to say, "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

The Master "spoke openly" among the Jews, and with the scribes and Pharisees, and in their synagogues. The policy of the Utah elders is "in secret," and which he condemned. It is clear that polygamy is still believed in by them if it is not practiced.

THE ELECT LADY.

THE Disciple John in his Second Epistle makes a direct appeal to the Elect Lady, whoever that may be. From certain expressions in it we conclude that the special elect lady referred to by John was the church.

Look to yourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

John was writing from a neighboring city and closes his epistle, "The children of the elect sister greet thee."

It has been variously supposed that the elect lady was some one with whom John was well acquainted and loved, but the most favorable opinion is that it was the church.

THE following is sent us by a brother, who writes feelingly and to the point on the subject named; that is, fasting, and a result:—

Editors Herald:—In Herald of the 21st of July it is stated that the yearly fast as suggested by Bro. Hiram Holt, of California, and so appointed by the late General Conference, will become one of those permanent helps in the organic body as spoken of. As there are some who cannot appreciate the worth or necessity of such an observance, beyond the dominion and power of the mind to correct and keep the flesh in due subjection to the inner man, that of itself would be sufficient incentive to such an observance; but it appears that it possesses other desirable observances. None can understand in what way the simple abstinence from two meals on that day would profit the body or individual; but it will at a glance receive the verdict of the entire body by an observance of this order. Let every member learn what two meals a day costs them; and leaving out that amount on the fast day, hand it to the Bishop's agent, then everyone will fully comprehend the worth of fasting. This is only the remark of one—to be approved or disapproved or modified by those in authority.

A. S. GUINAND.

EXPLANATION.

To fast without giving the worth of the two meals, say that the two meals were worth twenty cents, at night the one that fasted and didn't pay the amount would be that much better off than he was in the morning; so that to fast without paying would be accumulation instead of distribution.

BRO. A. E. STONE, of New Canaan, Connecticut, sends us a clipping from a local newspaper, containing an article on the decadence in Christianity, from which we quote the following racy bit:—

Now, God sends every man into the world to do a work, and in doing that work will he have fullness of being. Again, Jesus said: "I and my Father are one," meaning thereby not in personality, but just as father and mother in a well regulated family are one—in aim, purpose, and endeavor. Every man, therefore, if he would be truly himself must become one with God. That's the meaning of atonement, at-onement. Christianity, therefore, with the individual, is a matter of characterization. To be a Christian means to be Christ-like, to accept Jesus as the Ideal after which to mold life and character. It has nothing to do with the silly teachings which so split up and antagonize the churches to-day. And at their doors must be laid the causes which have made society what it is. When the churches will drop these puerilities and take up and hand out to the world the plain and simple truths so nobly proclaimed by the Master, society will quickly come into that condition in which Christian precepts and practice will be the only practical things. 'Tis little short of blasphemy to profess Christianity and then assert its impracticability. And 'tis the quintessence of hypocrisy to profess to be Christians and yet not to follow the teachings of the Master.

C. G. COOK.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., July 22.

ALL HERALD readers will be interested in the following items referring to the late Jewish movement, and the proposed visit of Emperor William to Jerusalem, which may lead to the exertion of his personal influence in the interests of the ancient city and Palestine:—

Basle, Switzerland, Aug. 30.—At to-day's session of the Zionist congress the delegates present unanimously adopted with great enthusiasm the program for reestablishing the Hebrews in Palestine, with publicly recognized rights. A dispatch was sent to the Sultan of Turkey, thanking his Majesty for the privileges enjoyed by the Hebrews in his empire.

Munich, Aug. 30.—The Neueste Nachrichten says it has been definitely settled that Emperor William will visit Jerusalem at Easter next year. The officers of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, on which the Emperor will make the voyage to Jaffa, have been informed of his intention to go to Palestine. The Hohenzollern will be accompanied by the cruiser Gefion. The Emperor will spend two months in the Holy Land.

THE WOODBINE REUNION.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH writes of the Woodbine reunion as follows:—

Camp of Israel, Woodbine, Iowa, September 10, 11:23 a. m.

The voice of the Bishop is ringing through the camp, from the platform of the tabernacle, descanting on the temporal law as essential to spiritual progress and the better salvation, clear and distinct. He is feeling well, his voice is clear and strong, and of course his logic is good, as usual.

The camp is in excellent condition, clean and orderly; about a hundred and sixty tents already pitched and others going up from time to time. The weather is warm, the only drawback being that the long dry spell and constant travel over the roads adjacent to the camp makes the air dusty, at times quite so, when the wind blows from the south and west.

The song service is good, the choir being arranged in a similar manner to what it was at Bluff Park. Several of the young members of Bro. Clarence Wilder's Woodbine band, under their leader, with his violin, are adding to the beauty and melody of the service. The band also gives the camp a treat during the afternoon intermission, gathering on the green near the tent and playing excellent selections. This soothes and enlivens the saints during intermission.

The preaching has been fully up to standard, so far as I have heard it. Yesterday was a regular Smith day; I occupied the morning, Fred A. the afternoon, and A. H. the evening. The latter effort was the best I ever heard from Bro. Alexander on one of his favorite topics: "Where do we go to when we pass over to the other side?"

There is a possibility that we will not meet here in '98, the owner of the land being a little inclined to push an advantage in order to force a sale of the land. It is likely to go to Dow City.

The health of the camp is fairly good. All are enjoying the occasion.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. E. COHRT writes from Smithland, Iowa, September 1:—

We have just closed one of the most successful meetings ever held here; meetings were in charge of Brn. H. O. Smith and J. C. Crabb. Four were added last Sunday by baptism.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Cadillac, Michigan, August 30:—

I left the tent in charge of Bro. Ellis long enough to go to Farwell to attend a two days' meeting. We had a good time; many came out to hear, some of whom had not heard before. Five more were baptized and others seem to be interested. Farwell is where we intend to put the tent next after we get through here. We have better interest here than we had at Traverse City; tent nearly full every night. Surely they cannot listen so earnestly and not obey—some of them at least. In good health and spirits.

Bro. Joseph Squire, Brooklyn, New York, August 31:—

Elder James Caffall called on us on his return home from his mission to England. The saints were pleased to see him and to hear his voice in defense of the gospel truth. We only wish he could have remained with us longer, but we could not expect such, as he had been from home so long. Elder A. E. Stone, of New Canaan, Connecticut, also called on us and assisted Bro. Caffall in the preaching service. We enjoyed the visit of these brethren very much.

Charles J. Hunt, Fort Dodge, Iowa, September 10:—

Bro. Joseph Carlson and the writer began tabernacle meetings in this city last evening with a very good attendance. Bro. W. W. Whiting intends to assist us in a few days. The daily papers publish articles for us.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Maysville reunion opened with forty tents and seven covered wagons on the grounds; so writes Bro. C. P. Faul, the secretary. Brn. Terry, Roberts, Roth, Davis, and Summerfield, of the missionary force, present.

Bro. D. L. Shinn has been operating with good success in portions of Greene County, Pennsylvania, and as a result some good people, including a popular local minister, are favorably impressed, and investigating the faith. Others, however, are alarmed, hence the appearance of a lengthy screed on Joseph Smith, with new features and marked differences from previous accounts, in the Waynesburg Progress of August 19. Bro. Shinn is an experienced campaigner and right at home with the pen, and by which he has done good service heretofore. He will look after the matter at an early day. He is now busy in tent work at Pittsburg; "tent packed full on Sunday night."

The Providence press made very favorable mention of the late opening of the saints' new chapel in that city and gave a comprehensive synopsis of the sermon by Elder F. M. Sheehy.

We may be able to publish the article entire in a later issue.

Bro. M. T. Short in his labors in Wisconsin has set himself to work both with pen and voice. The Badger State Reporter, issued at Lancaster, has a column article on Latter Day Saintism from his pen, in its issue for September 3. It is a clear statement throughout and speaks in evidence of the writer's expressed desire to correctly instruct the good people of "Badgerdom," as the brother puts it. The Grant County Herald of the 2d, also published at Lancaster, has a two-column article from Bro. Short's pen—a historical and doctrinal account of church affairs. The Herald promises its readers another article, on the Book of Mormon, from Bro. S.

Sr. Ida Minkler, of Lorain, Ohio, asks prayer for her afflicted daughter. She has been helped by prayer and use of oil consecrated for use by the sick; but desires entire recovery. They lately enjoyed a prayer meeting held at Ashmont, fourteen miles from their home, by Bro. F. C. Smith.

Pittsburg coal miners have accepted the compromise rates arranged by representatives of the miners and coal operators. This practically settles the great coal miners' strike.

King William, of Germany, at last accounts was visiting and toasting King Humbert, of Italy. It appears that while potentates toast one another freely and pledge friendship, alliances follow where it is believed that national influence will be most widely extended thereby. The European situation becomes more complex.

A short time ago the cablegrams reported that the plan of a joint guarantee by the powers of the indemnity to be paid Turkey by Greece had fallen through, and that Austria had urged that Great Britain be not further consulted. Later news is to the effect that Britain's premier has acceded to Germany's proposal for terms of settlement, and by which the latter is practically given control of Grecian finances in the interest of German investors.

Work has been commenced on another Chinese railroad; thus the forces of civilization are penetrating the realms of heathendom. Russia has obtained further and added privileges from the Chinese government and is widening her influence and extending her efforts in the celestial kingdom.

At the late conference of the Zion movement, in Basle, Switzerland, Dr. Nordeau introduced a resolution favoring the reclamation of the Holy Land by the Jews. The resolution was adopted.

Czar Nicholas, of Russia, has decided to abolish the Siberian exile system. This is a very important movement and will open up a vast territory to progressive occupation, and remove from Siberia the odium it has long been under as a place of exile and oppression. The young Czar deserves a place of honor with his grandfather, Alexander II., who liberated the Russian peasantry from serfdom.

Others besides Le Plongeon claim America as the cradle of the race. At the late meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, at Toronto, Ontario, Professor F. W. Putnam, Mr. Claypole, and others, presented arguments in favor of the American origin of man. However, Sir John Evans, retiring president of the association, and the majority of scientists, locate the earliest evidences of man's appearance on earth in Asia. Professor McGee, who had been on the United States Geological Survey that included the country about Trenton, New Jersey, where special ancient relics have been found, wound up the debate with some strong American arguments, prophesying the time when the rest of the scientific world would have to see things from the standpoint of the United States investigators.

The notorious anti-Jewish Deputy and agitator, Ahlwardt, who visited the United States in 1896, has opened a small cigar shop in Berlin to make a livelihood. The Jew is in favor with the modern world.

A congress of high Russian ecclesiastics has voted Tolstoi's adherents dangerous to the State; also to prohibit the publication of Lutheran books in Russia. Tolstoi and the Lutherans may suffer for a time, but the Russian clergy will not long be able to thus rule and dominate. A tolerant spirit is at work, even among the population of Catholic Russia.

Ogden Goelet, an American multimillionaire, said to be worth $100,000,000, died recently on board his private yacht in American waters, from starvation, because of inability to assimilate food.

Yellow fever is reported at New Orleans and in portions of Mississippi. A government expert found but two cases, and none in the crescent city.

The strike of British engineers for an eight hour day's work is extending to the various trades connected with engineering.

Added to the late news of short crops in Europe and the Argentine Republic, and famine in India, now come authentic reports of great drouth in Russia and impending famine in Ireland. We shall give a fuller statement next week if possible. Who cannot discern the significant signs of the times? Perilous times have already come.

Bro. Elbert A. Smith, in charge of the Herald Office bookbinding department, left home for a trip to Northern Iowa on the 7th inst., accompanied by his wife.

Bro. John X. Smith, of Clinton, Iowa, sends us a well-written account of the late Eastern Iowa district conference, held near Canton, Iowa. We regret that press of other matter already in hand prevents publication of it.

British forces are successfully coping with the uprisings in India. The Swatis have surrendered large stores of arms and ammunition. The Ameer of Afghanistan has openly repudiated complicity of his officials in frontier troubles, and has also made efforts to quell agitations among the tribesmen. The Afridis are becoming quiet and the Mad Mullah, the head of the fanatical movement, has become displeased because of some tribal movements and returned home.

Guatemala is in a bad way. A financial panic has ruined many firms and civil war is imminent because of the acts of the President, who insists on being declared dictator and who has caused the death of a number of citizens that have patriotically resisted his pretensions. Some sort of microbe seems to be spreading unrest and general trouble among the kingdoms of this world.

Madrid advices of the 9th report a Cuban victory. The town of Victoria de las Tunas was captured, including the Spanish garrison three hundred strong.

Great Britain is said to have obtained concessions that may give her control of the Nicaragua canal.

Crops in the United States are suffering because of the prolonged drouth.

Leading Spanish papers discuss the possibility of war with the United States, growing out of the Cuban policy of the latter and the fitting out of filibustering expeditions to Cuba in America.

Later advices dated the 10th report a number of new cases of yellow fever at New Orleans. Biloxi, Scranton, and Ocean Springs, Mississippi, are also reported as infected and against which other ports have instituted a rigid quarantine.

Brn. E. L. Kelley, Frank Criley, J. A. Gunsolley, Professor Pence, and others returned from the Woodbine reunion on the 13th.

Japan is providing more warships, at home and abroad.

September 11. — The coalminers' convention at Columbus to-day accepted the operators' terms. This means that miners in Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania will go to work at once; and those in Indiana and Illinois when operators in those States pay the price.

General Lee, returned from Cuba, states that Weyler and his staff will be besieged in Havana before winter. Europeans regard Spain's position as desperate. Carlists are said to be preparing for an uprising immediately on the settlement of the Cuban question, when they can do so without suspicion of lacking in patriotism.

Great excitement prevails at Madrid over the capture of the fortified town of Victoria de las Tunas by the Cubans. General Weyler's recall is openly demanded. The Premier and Minister of War, General Azcarraga, has cabled to Weyler for a full explanation. A Spanish expedition will be organized to recapture Victoria de las Tunas, lest the Cubans hold the place, establish it as their seat of government, and thus comply with one of the necessary conditions under which the United States may recognize them as belligerents. The Spanish Minister of the Colonies has decided to hasten the application of Cuban reforms, and notices of popular elections are posted for October 10.

Forty striking coal miners were shot down by a sheriff's deputies near Hazelton, Pennsylvania, September 10. The situation is complicated and State troops have been ordered out.

At the Columbus, Ohio, convention of representatives of the coal miners much opposition was shown against accepting the compromise terms of sixty-five cents, agreed to by the operators. Up to September 10, the third day of the session, the leading question had not yet been voted upon, because of dissensions among the delegates.

Twelve persons were killed and fourteen wounded in a railroad accident on the Santa Fe near Emporia, Kansas, September 8. Twenty-five were killed and six injured on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad near New Castle, Colorado, on the 9th.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Tarry not in idle yearning
For the moments that are gone;
Yesterday hath no returning,
And life's stream is flowing on;
Flowing on with joy and sorrow
Towards the dark, unfathomed sea—
Ever onward to the morrow
That conceals eternity."

AMUSEMENTS.—CONTINUED.

A MOTHER says, "You continually preach the gospel of work, do tell us what we can have the children do." We will try to give some helpful suggestions, commencing with general characteristics of work suitable for children. Their work should always be suited to their strength. Left to themselves children are apt to undertake things that are too hard for them, especially in the line of lifting. Often work is required of them which overtakes their strength, and thus leads to permanent injury, dwarfing the body or producing deformity. I know a lovely lady who has been an invalid for years from this cause. She was the oldest of a large family of children, and spent most of her early years in taking care of "baby." She was not very strong, and lifting and lugging heavy babies so much produced curvature of the spine, from which she will be a sufferer until her death. Children's work should tend to symmetrical development of their bodies, and the more it takes them into the fresh air the better. So far as possible, in their early years let it be with their parents; you have more patience with your children, more interest in having them do their work well, than anyone else can be expected to have. More important than this is your child's instinctive love of being with you which makes a thing done in your company a pleasure, instead of a task, as it might seem if performed in the company of servants. It makes the children respect work if you share it with them, and puts them on their mettle to do it in the very best way possible. Then it gives valuable opportunities for becoming acquainted with them, their ways of working, and their habits of thought. Their work should involve a degree of responsibility suited to their age, thus developing fidelity and judgment. Give them definite things to do and depend upon their doing them. Let your supervision be as little conspicuous as possible, so that the child feels that he is responsible for the work that is intrusted to him, and that if he neglects it somebody suffers in consequence. With little children we must tell them explicitly how to do things; as they grow older, and as early as possible, they shall be told what to do, and be left to exercise their own judgment as to the best method of doing it. If a child is never left to do this he will grow to manhood with very little judgment.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

VENTILATION.

PURE air to breathe is the first, the constant and the last need of man, but because he receives it from the atmosphere without labor and without price, sometimes pure, at others impure, he becomes so accustomed to taking it as it comes that he does not realize there is any responsibility in the matter.

When primitive modes of life were used, the tent or the hut was usually open enough to afford fresh air. But now things are different, and we ask, How can we best ventilate our homes? The first duty lies in the selection of the place upon which to build our house. It should be built in a healthy climate and in a healthy place, not near any stagnant water nor where refuse or decaying matter or gases are discharged. If you live in the country where stock is kept, have all out-buildings as far from the house as you can, and have them on lower ground, so that the drainage will be away from the house. Let your well be placed near the house on high ground, and let the ground for a few feet around be elevated at least a foot. This will carry surface water away from your well, so that all the water that enters the well will be filtered by passing through many feet of earth before entering it.

These general suggestions are given on sanitation of the home and should be applied as far as can be. All cannot live in healthy localities nor on hilltops. In cities they are not always practicable. Ventilation proper is "the act of renewing the air" of the place, whether house or other place.

The school laws of Belgium require that there shall be one hundred and fifty-seven cubic feet of space in a schoolroom for each scholar. Holland requires one hundred and twenty-nine, Bavaria one hundred and sixty-six, and Sweden two hundred and sixty cubic feet.

Ordinary air contains two parts of carbonic acid in ten thousand parts of air. When it contains more than six parts to ten thousand parts of air it is unhealthy. A healthy person will exhale six tenths, or a little over one half foot of carbonic acid per hour. Consequently to keep the air pure he will require about three thousand feet of cubic air per hour. An ordinary room will contain say two thousand cubic feet of air. If occupied by four persons they will require twelve thousand cubic feet of air. Hence the ventilation should change the air in the room six times every hour. This is seldom attained in ordinary dwelling houses, but it shows us what should be.

The ordinary means of ventilation are the windows, doors, natural porousness of the materials of which the house is built, defects in joining, and in the cold part of the season the stove or fireplace. The stove takes its air from near the floor, taking up those impurities of the air which are heavy. Hence the additional draft should be from the tops of the windows, that those impurities which are lighter than the air, and rise to the ceiling, may be carried away. The amount of this ventilation can be determined by a person going out doors for a short time; then if the air seems foul and oppressive on his first reëntering, it is foul, and more fresh air is needed. Sleeping rooms should always have one window slightly opened near the top and the door leading into the hall or other room open. If this is not desirable, then the same or another window should be opened from the bottom. This will guarantee a circulation of fresh air in the room. The extent of this ventilation is determined as before stated.

Don't be afraid of letting in the night air. All mankind from Adam down has breathed it one half of the time all their lives. There is no other air to breathe during the night. If you could close up your room so tight in the evening that no fresh air could enter during the night, you will see, by the computation made in the first part of this paper, that there are no bedrooms large enough to supply two persons with pure air during the night, and in an ordinary bedroom one person sleeping alone would be smothered to death before morning.

Special care should be given to cellars and space under the floor where there is no cellar, and ventilation provided, so that no impure air will rise through the floors into the rooms above, and let it be remembered that you seldom find a floor so tight that air will not pass through it. Let a good drainage pipe be laid as low as the foundation. I have traced many cases of sickness to dampness under a house or to a cellar containing water or decaying matter. The air is also contaminated by throwing dishwater and other kitchen refuse near the house and sometimes near the well. This is of course a filthy habit that is not common. A custom obtains with some people of banking their houses in the fall with stable manure. Few things are more unseemly and improper.

Respectfully,

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

ON Monday, August 30, the general superintendent, "knapsack in hand," plodded into the camp of the saints at Nevada, Missouri, it being the reunion of the Clinton and adjoining districts. He found many open hands and open hearts upon his arrival, several of which were former acquaintances. Cordial greetings were extended, which he felt came from deep down in the soul. The district superintendent, Sr. Vina H. Goff, had been detained at home by sickness in her family, but the Sunday school work had been well begun by Sr. Ella Miller, the assistant superintendent of the district. She had held a regular session of Sabbath school on Sunday morning and work arranged to go right along each morning and evening. We found a little band of earnest, interested workers there, who are willing to do all they can for the work; and to them belongs considerable credit for good work done.

Here, as in many other places, we find a few who have not yet learned to love and to appreciate the Sabbath school work. But we are happy in the thought that the work of the reunion drew some of them and convinced them that God's hand is in the Sabbath school work.

Sessions of Sunday school and of normal work were carried on at eight o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m., each day up till the special day—Friday. Bro. I. N. White, president of the reunion, seeing the one hour from eight to nine a. m. inadequate to the work to be done, kindly and voluntarily extended the time to nine thirty; thus greatly aiding in the work. Many thanks, Bro. I. N.; we appreciate help in this way.

Our general secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, was with us two days, and as usual was alive and alert to the work—giving some good instruction and encouragement to the workers there. All said "Come again, Bro. W. N."

On the special day we had Sabbath school at nine to ten thirty a. m.; Sunday school, prayer and testimony meeting at ten forty-five. Many prayers were offered and testimonies borne to the interest of Sabbath school work. A splendid spirit prevailed throughout. There was not time enough to hear from a half who would have gladly borne testimony. The afternoon session consisted of an address by the general superintendent on "The call of the Sunday school,"

a chart exercise by Sr. Ella Miller on "Solomon's temple," and an address, "The Sunday school work in the Clinton district," by Sr. Vina H. Goff. The night session was devoted to the temperance cause. The address was made by Bro. T. A. Hougas, followed by Bro. I. N. White. The subject was handled plainly, but in a way approved by both saints and those of other faiths and of the world.

We closed our work at Nevada with a teachers' meeting Saturday morning. Our train being scheduled to leave soon, we were at once inducted into the saddest season of all—the time to part. Our stay had been short, but we had formed many acquaintances that were and will be dear to us. We had renewed old acquaintances with a degree of joy not always felt, even among saints; and when we clasped the parting hand we were made to feel that "the heart must speak when the lips are dumb" the feelings that crowd within us. After many a sad "God bless you" and "Good-bye" we were hastened away to respond to a summons in another field.

Thus ended our work at another reunion—the fourth one for the season—and we think if amidst all the cares, the obstacles, and the discouragements incident to our work we can feel such pleasure, such joy in the association of our friends and coworkers here what will it be when all toil, anxiety, and care have ceased? May we well and faithfully "occupy" till he comes.

We expected to be at Maysville reunion two days, but a late train caused us to lose one day; and failing to get our "permit" extended, we thought it would not justify the extra cost. So we came direct to Woodbine, Iowa.

Bro. C. R. Duncan left the Nevada, Missouri, reunion early to prepare for another reunion to be held in Oklahoma—the first gathering of saints in the territory. He, with Bro. W. S. Macrae and others, will look after the interests of the Sabbath school, Religion, etc. The "Department" bids them Godspeed in their work.

While the reunion season is on we are constantly moving or being moved about, hence are unable to keep the department work up as it should be. We have several questions on hand, each of which we desire answered by several of our experienced workers, but are unable to get our mail sufficiently regular to make anything requiring correspondence a success. We will, however, furnish bits of from the various reunions, that all may know something of what is being done thereat. Never before was there such a universal demand for Sunday school work at these gatherings. We sincerely trust that these demands may in a measure be supplied.

The Rev. William Hunter, missionary in Manchuria of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, writes: "There is a movement toward Christianity throughout Manchuria. The people in large numbers are casting out their idols and taxing the powers of missionaries to provide native preachers, who, in their turn, are overwhelmed with the great number with whom they have to deal."

Letter Department.

MAYSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—Our North Missouri reunion so far is a great success, both in number and spirit, with flattering prospects of more yet. The preaching has been very good, also the prayer service. There are fifty-four tents and twenty wagons in camp and two hundred and ninety-four campers. The outside attendance is not flattering, but the saints are being fed on spiritual food and great good will result. Brn. Davis, Roth, Stebbins, Jones, Turpen, Campbell, Bellville, Roberts, Kinnaman, Pender, Keeler, and White have preached so far, with good liberty as a rule.

Saints are here from Nodaway, Northeast Kansas, Northeast Missouri, Independence, and Decatur districts; health of camp generally good.

The growth of our reunions has been remarkable and many new converts are being made each year to the benefit of the reunion. Thursday was children's day, and a grand day it was too. Fourteen children were baptized at the noon hour; they were confirmed by J. T. Kinnaman, H. A. Stebbins, I. N. Roberts, and I. N. White. It took one hour to confirm, at which a beautiful vision was seen indicating God's approval of the work done. At night Bro. I. N. White preached one of his characteristic sermons.

The spirit of the saints is excellent. The serpent tried to enter, but received a fatal blow by the Spirit of Christ obtained by earnest prayer. The young people's prayer meeting at 7:45 a. m., proves a success. The general order of meetings is: Young people's prayer meeting at 7:45; prayer meeting at nine; preaching at 11 a. m.; preaching at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m.; curfew at 10:30 p. m.

A goodly number of the bright and beautiful young are in attendance and manifest a wonderful interest in the work. Surely the work moves and as it devolves upon the young, will move with great rapidity. The peace of God broods over us as the gentle distillation of the dew, giving new life and imparting of the divine nature.

With peans of praise and glory to God,
I am,

Your servant,

J. M. TERRY.

GALIEN, Mich., Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—After a tour of over three hundred miles of Michigan scenery by horse and buggy, we alight in Galien, to begin two day services. The influence of these meetings are penetrating the dark prison walls of "Mystery Babylon," and eyes are opening to the "entrance of the word." In Eaton County we occupied the First Congregational church for three services, with good effect, we think. The Lansing representatives were on hand, and assisted in the song service. A splendid opening there for a good work to be done. The effort at Hartford was good. Elders Briggs, Daniel, Baggerly, and the writer were present, and administered the word. New faces greeted the speakers and interest depicted thereon.

REPLY TO ELDER BAYS.

LAMONI, Iowa, Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—In Herald for August 25 is published a letter from Elder D. H. Bays, which was evidently intended as a reply to my reference to debates in general, in this mission, and a prospective one with Elder Bays in particular.

Elder Bays informs us that he does not wish to be misunderstood nor misrepresented by former brethren and friends. These desires are right and commendable; but is it not a little strange that after making these statements, he should not only fail to show wherein I had misrepresented him, but he does not directly affirm that I misrepresented him on a single point! My first statement, to which he seems to object, is as follows:—

"My attention to and decision on some five or six prospective debates have been demanded since the adjournment of conference. Among the rest our former brother and minister, D. H. Bays (now of Persia, Iowa) comes to the front, and is willing to tear down, if he can, that which for many years he sought to build up."

Now, when I stated that Elder Bays "is willing to tear down, if he can, that which for many years he sought to build up," I certainly made a mild statement of the facts in the case. Let us see. Elder Bays commenced his ministerial career with the Latter Day Saints in 1861, and resigned his office as one of the First Quorum of Seventy in 1892. For many years of this long period of time he was either a general missionary or an active local worker. But now, according to his own statements, found in his letters sent to me and H. O. Smith, and plainly indicated in his published letter, our people had challenged M. T. Brown, of Persia, Iowa, former minister of the M. E. Church, at that place. Brown asks Elder Bays if he will debate with us, and the answer is, "I will, if they will furnish a representative man to meet me." July 27, Elder Bays wrote to H. O. Smith, of Woodbine, Iowa, in which letter the following sentence occurs:—

"The challenge, issued by members of your church here, has been accepted, and a willingness, on my part, expressed to meet the issue."

The truth is that Elder Bays was so "willing" (that is the word I used, and it is the word he uses) to tear down what for years he sought to build up, that he accepted a challenge which was not made to him, but to the minister of the M. E. Church! And then when Elder H. O. Smith decides that there is no necessity for a debate, Elder Bays gets out of fix, and seems to be sorely disappointed!

When Elder Bays signified his willingness to oppose our faith, he wrote out three propositions as follows:—

"1. Is the Book of Mormon a divinely inspired record of the people of Ancient America? D. H. Bays denies.

"2. The Baptist Church is in perfect accord with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization, and is in fact the Church of Christ. D. H. Bays affirms.

"3. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is in perfect accord with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization and is the only true Church of Christ. D. H. Bays denies."

More than three months after the above propositions were submitted, Elder Bays, at the request of H. O. Smith, sent propositions to him, agreeing with the above, except that in number 2 we have the following:—

"The church whose membership are known as 'Disciples of Christ,' is in perfect accord with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization, and is in fact the Church of Christ."

Just now we go back to 1892. On April 1 of that year, Elder Bays wrote up his resignation as a minister of the church, after a ministerial experience of thirty-one years with the Latter Day Saints. In this paper, which covers nearly eleven pages of letter paper, Elder Bays mentions his doubts and difficulties, and then adds: "When these difficulties first began to appear, I sought through a more thorough examination of, and comparison between the standard works of the church, to remove them. But instead of accomplishing the task imposed, I found the situation to become more grave and complicated."

The reader will please remember that among these "standard works of the church" the Bible occupies the leading position.

A little farther along Elder Bays says: "I have sought light upon the vexed questions from every available source, but without avail."

What Elder Bays means by "the vexed questions" will appear when we mention his reasons for resigning. First, he objects to the inspirational claims of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; second, the Book of Mormon; third, the Bible; fourth, Elder Bays claims to have discovered "that the several writers of the several books of the Bible, whoever they may be, do not claim to have written the books attributed to them by inspiration, but I find a marked and irreconcilable disagreement between them on questions of vital importance, thereby destroying the last vestige of any ground upon which to base an argument in support of the dogma of plenary inspiration." Fifth, the Inspired Translation.

It will be seen from the above that one of the vexed questions is the Bible. Elder Bays gives much space to a consideration of this question; that is, in a comparative sense. His talk about "destroying the last vestige of any ground upon which to base an argument in support of the dogma of plenary inspiration," is but a man of straw, and is not sufficient to hide his evident unbelief in the claims of the Bible, at the time he wrote up his resignation. I herewith give his own words when writing up his objections to the Bible:—

"Ministers of the gospel are expected to believe and teach the inspiration of the Bible. During the latter years of my ministry, I made this a question of special inquiry, and quite contrary to the generally received opinion, I found nothing to sustain the belief that the Old and New Testaments, or any particular book in either, were written by divine inspiration. Hence I have been led to reject the dogma of 'the divine inspiration of the Bible,' as wholly untenable."

The leading statement of my letter concerning Elder Bays is now more than vindicated by the elder's own words.

Elder Bays makes a guarded but evasive statement, in order, it would seem, to fasten misrepresentation upon my statement. He says that since his withdrawal from the church five years ago, he can very truthfully say that he has evinced little desire or disposition "to tear down" whatever of good either himself or others had sought to build up, etc. My statement was that he "is willing to tear down, if he can, that which for many years he sought to build up." This statement is frank and true, but the trouble with the reply is, that what Elder Bays once regarded as "good" and true, he now regards as bad and false; hence the statement lacks frankness, and is extremely evasive.

I have before me a letter signed by W. B. Toney, and dated at Standley, Indian Territory, August 23, 1897. I give the first paragraph in full:—

"Elder Asa S. Cochran, Lamoni, Iowa; Dear Bro. Cochran:—I am in receipt of a long letter from a Davis H. Bays, of Persia, Iowa, who has formerly been a member and minister of the church; and he states that he has a work now in the press that will be out about October the 1st, entitled 'The Mormon dogma examined and refuted.' And in his letter to me he states that he never saw a miracle, never received the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands, nor did anyone ever receive it under his hands, in this church. I am having trouble with that element down here, and as soon as they see his book advertised they will send for it, as they will think it will be the thing to tear down Toney with. Has not this same D. H. Bays borne bright testimonies to the truthfulness of this work? and how can I get hold of that data? Will send for his book as soon as it is out, and get prepared for them, and if you will help me by giving me what I desire, it will be appreciated."

Of course Elder Bays wrote his book since his withdrawal from the church. It is fair to presume that this work and the writing of his long letter to our young and zealous Elder Toney were done within that period of time when such splendid opportunities offered themselves to Elder Bays for tearing down the work of others, had he only been disposed to improve them!

I have carefully read what Elder Bays says of the challenge made to Elder Brown of the M. E. Church as appears in his published letter and his correspondence with Elder H. O. Smith. It is not claimed that this challenge, concerning which so much has been said, was offered to any other than Elder Brown. I submit, then, that if Elder Brown or Bays, one or both of them, accepted this challenge, they were under obligations to affirm the faith and claims of the M. E. Church. What has the faith and doctrine of the Baptist Church, or the (so-called) Christian Church, to do with a challenge offered to a Methodist minister? Let Elder Bays either drop the claim that they accepted the challenge made to Elder Brown or let him step forward with the necessary indorsement of the M. E. Church, to affirm and defend their faith, and oppose ours.

Elder Bays claims that Elder Joseph Seddon promised to send his propositions to me, and repeatedly informed him that he had sent them. This is a matter between Bays and Seddon. I have only heard from one side hence neither affirm nor deny. However, I utterly fail to see what object Elder Seddon could have in hiding up the propositions from me, and then lying about them. If the sequel should prove that he has done so, he must bear the legitimate consequences of his folly and wrong.

Elder Bays propounds the following query: "How came the propositions submitted to Joseph Seddon, and supposed to have been lost, to fall at this particular juncture into the hands of Hyrum O. Smith? Who will answer?"

If Elder Bays had waited a few days before sending off his letter for publication, he would have had the answer from H. O. Smith himself, who wrote it under date of August 25, and in answer to some strong and reflective statements made by Elder Bays. The truth is this: When I received the letter from Elder Bays I at once wrote to H. O. Smith, requesting him to write to Bays and Seddon. He did so, not knowing what had become of the propositions any more than I did. Therefore, he properly requested Bays to send the propositions he wished to debate. He wrote to both of them on the same date, and received their replies on the same date, Seddon's letter containing the propositions which were written up when Elder Bays was a Baptist, and Bays' letter containing the ones which were written up after he became a member of the Christian or Campbellite Church.

Now here we are favored with query No. 2: "How many of the 'five or six prospective debates' have been declined, as has been the one now under consideration?"

Answer.—If all of them had been declined on the same or similar grounds it would have been consistent and right. But I will answer more specifically and directly. Three of the five or six materialized, and as usual, we lost nothing by the contests. One has been declined, because the first Baptist minister with whom we negotiated refused to have anything more to do with it, except to negotiate for another. He refused to be governed by the Bible as a standard of evidence, because the Mormons could prove anything by that book! Then the second man, the champion, who has held at least one debate with the Latter Day Saints, sought an advantage in the wording and arrangement of propositions, and finally refused to be governed by King James' translation of the Bible. I am glad Elder Bays raised this question, for it has given me a good opportunity to bring out these facts. I am prepared to prove all I have affirmed.

In answer to my first query, Elder Bays says:—

"In my former efforts in defense of the faith of the saints, I fearlessly defended what I believed to be true, and if success crowned my feeble efforts, it was largely due to the fact that I tried to inform myself upon the issues to be discussed. In my future efforts in the forensic arena I shall as vigorously assail what I believe to be error, regardless of what my opinions in the past may have been. The truth and the truth only is that for which I wish to contend.

"As to whether 'a more signal victory' shall be achieved in such efforts, must necessarily depend upon the tenability—the logical and scriptural soundness of the positions assumed. I shall disdain in the future, as I have ever done in the past, to descend to unfair or doubtful methods in order to maintain my ground. I can no more oppose what I believe than I can defend what my conscience does not approve."

Elder Bays might have consistently added to the first paragraph of his reply the following: "Should I succeed in debate with the Latter Day Saints, it will be largely due to the fact that I am thoroughly informed on the issues to be discussed." In which case, of course, it would not prove the correctness of his positions. See?

Is that what we hold debates for, to see which of the two disputants is the better informed? But in the second paragraph of his reply he puts victory upon a different basis, making it "depend upon the tenability—the logical and scriptural soundness of the positions assumed." In truth, are not these conditions of success just as essential to true victory when defending the faith of the Latter Day Saints, as when defending the faith and doctrine of the Disciple or Christian Church? If not, why? This shifting of positions in writing an answer to one query is rather a bad "give away."

In answer to query No. 2, Elder Bays says: "In the estimation of Latter Day Saints and some others, No. In the estimation of many others, and possibly a few Latter Day Saints, Yes."

But one of the leading witnesses referred to in my query is Elder Bays himself. "Did Elder Bays ever lose a battle that was fought on fairly worded propositions; that is, when he was defending the faith of the Latter Day Saints," according to his own testimony? Why did he not tell us? Is it not a fact that Elder Bays' published letters in the Saints' Herald will show that he won many victories when engaged in controversy with those who opposed the faith of the Latter Day Saints, in the estimation of himself, the Latter Day Saints, and a large part of the "outsiders" present? In a letter dated at Doniphan, Kansas, March 10, 1870, I find the following:—

"Since writing to you from White Cloud, I have held several very interesting meetings, prominent among which was one in the above place in December last, when I replied to a sermon by the preacher referred to in my last, in which he attempted to prove that I was advocating a 'species of infidelity,' in that I preached baptism for the remission of sins; and by the grace of God I had liberty to expose the fallacy of his argument to the satisfaction of almost the entire community."—Herald for June 15, 1870, page 373.

In his previous letter referred to, Elder Bays speaks of preaching on the subject of the gospel when "the Spirit gave power to the word spoken."

When a Latter Day Saint, baptism for the remission of sins was a gospel truth to Elder Bays, when a Baptist, it was heresy; but now, as he belongs to the Christian Church, it is true again! It is right for a man to change whenever he finds that he is wrong; but some changes, made at certain times, under certain conditions, and after years of splendid opportunity for religious thought and investigation, need looking into.

In November, 1871, Elder Bays writes again, as appears from Saints' Herald for December, 1871, page 747. In this letter he states, "I have held three public discussions; two with a Baptist minister, and one with a Christian (or Campbellite) preacher."

With the Baptist minister, he discussed "the subjects of the laying on of hands, for the impartation of the Holy Spirit, and the enjoyment of the 'spiritual gifts' by the Lord's people, and the divine calling of Joseph the Martyr."

At this discussion, Elder Bays informs us, the religious element which is so strongly opposed to the Latter Day Saints, predominated; and yet when a vote was called, the Baptist only received a majority of some twelve or fifteen! "A physician, a gentleman of intelligence," said to Elder Bays, "The difference in the vote was simply this—while your opponent had a small majority on his side, you had the head and brains of the house on yours."

Elder Bays continues:—

"Monday, September 11. I met Mr. G. T. Webster in debate, on the subject of the 'laying on of hands' and 'spiritual gifts,' which resulted in the most signal victory over error that I ever had the pleasure to witness."

Bays' friends called for a vote, but Webster's moderator and another minister of the same denomination, strongly opposed it.

Following Elder Bays into Texas, and elsewhere, we have the same old story, as told by himself. Debate after debate is held, at "the entire discomfiture" of his opponents; and that too, as stated by the people without, as well as within. Was all this success and victory the result of Elder Bays' ability as a man? If so, what may we not expect by this time? With added years of study, observation, and experience, it may be that he is now able to prove a religious system to be true, even though it be more egregiously erroneous than "the Mormon dogma."

DAVISVILLE, O., Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—Soon after my return from Missouri, little Gertie Smith, daughter of I. M. Smith, was taken down with a bad phase of typhoid fever. She living with us, necessitated my staying home a few days longer than I anticipated. Her father having arrived to take care of her, I started for Belle Grove, West Virginia, to attend the conference, calling at Wheeling on the way, remaining there over one Sabbath. Here I was joined by W. J. Smith, and together with L. D. Ullom we took passage on the steamer Kanawaha for Millwood, West Virginia. After having traveled some miles by rail, wagon, and foot, we reached Sand Hill—the place where the conference was to be held—late on Thursday evening, tired and ready for supper and bed. We were kindly cared for by Bro. and Sr. Rhodes.

On Friday evening we preached to a large and appreciative audience. The conference convened Saturday forenoon and was a grand success throughout—the best ever held in the district. The spirit of peace and good will prevailed from beginning to end. The preaching was by Bro. W. J. Smith and myself. Large congregations attended each service, and excellent liberty was enjoyed by the speakers.

Prior to our arrival, and during our stay there, threats of violence were made by some of the very pious preachers and over-religious bigots, to break up the conference and drive us out; but in this they experienced a great defeat, as the Lord brought to naught their ungodly schemings, by turning the hearts of scores of those who came to hear. Hence it was that we gained a great victory over the enemy. One was baptized by Bro. J. L. Goodrich, and five others just before the conference began, and there are many more in that part of the country who will sooner or later obey the gospel, providing proper efforts are put forth there. A goodly number of the saints, both of the ministry and laity, were present, the largest representation we ever had in the district, all of whom seemed to be very happy and enjoyed themselves immensely.

We took our departure on Monday, the 30th ult., and after a hard day's travel through the heat and dust, arrived at Syracuse, Ohio, where we were domiciled for the night in the comfortable apartments of our congenial brother, Thomas Mathews. His excellent wife spared no pains to make our visit cheerful and pleasant. We were sorry to learn on our arrival here, of the sudden death of Bro. John Harris. His wife has been left to bear her sorrow all alone. May God give her comfort in her sore bereavement.

On Tuesday we took a ramble over the hills and along the Ohio River shore, where I spent the most of my boyhood days, and visiting the cemetery where hundreds of the old time friends have been laid to moulder away in the cold, damp grave. I stood by the grave of my brother, next in age to me, where thirty-seven years ago we stood weeping as we placed his earthly remains in the silent tomb. Many are the changes which have taken place since then, as many who then wept have gone "the way of all the earth." These scenes of my childhood days brought many, many things to my mind that I had forgotten years ago. The one thought which struck my mind most forcibly was the fact that time is fleeting, and hence the great necessity of making preparation for the change which will take place sooner or later, so as to be prepared, not only to meet with those of my father's family, but those of my loved children, whom I know are in a blessed state of peace, and for whom my poor heart yearns, and longs to greet in the resurrection of the just.

Brethren J. L. Goodrich and L. D. Ullom having preceded us to this place (Davisville), had appointments out for us last evening on our arrival, and two sermons for to-day. We have experienced a good feeling since coming, have been kindly received by the saints here. We shall leave here soon for Sinking Spring, Highland County, Ohio, to attend the Ohio district conference, to be held at that place the 4th and 5th inst.

From the conference we expect to visit Middletown, and from thence to Cincinnati, where we learn that a band of five Utah Mormon elders are operating and creating considerable stir. We think it wise to keep an eye on them, hence we go there with a view of arranging to begin operations there.

Yours in gospel bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

HOT SPRINGS, Utah, Sept. 3.

Editors Herald:—Yesterday we pulled up the tent at Ogden and shipped it to Sandy, where Brn. McKiernan and Hansen will receive it and operate with it till time for the reunion. It had been occupying a place in Chase's yard for just one month, and the last two weeks was pretty well filled every night, to hear that "terrible" man Wight, whose name has been on everybody's tongue, and not always coupled with enviable qualifying terms. However, he has made friends both for himself and the cause he so ably represents, and completely discomfited and put to silence some who dared to oppose; and not a few of the good citizens of Ogden are viewing our work in a new light.

Last Sunday he led four promising young ladies into the water, and another sister was baptized the Wednesday previous by Bro. Toombs. Others have decided to come with us as soon as practicable, and still others are preaching and defending the doctrine, and branding the dominant church here with cowardice, etc., for not daring to meet the issues. However, Bro. David Walker, with whom we had a few evenings controversy in Ogden Valley last June, and who brushed up against our folks in Lamoni a year ago, has agreed to meet him after the busy times are a little over. As Bro. McKiernan would say, "If they don't fulfill the promise, they can make another just as good."

In justice to our friend Walker, we can say that we believe he will be glad to fulfill it; but we believe he would be wiser at the conclusion.

Bro. Wight was to return to Salt Lake

City yesterday, where we hope he may have a little needed rest. The writer is en route to Malad, Idaho; but being storm bound at the comfortable home of Bro. Toombs, thought it well to mention concerning the good work here. The Ogden saints have rendered it extremely pleasant for the missionaries, anticipating and providing for their wants ahead. May they be rewarded.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—Apropos of the manly and honest confession of Bro. J. D. Erwin, in a late Herald, permit the following suggestion: If the members of the church would not persist in making of the traveling missionary a veritable dumping ground for all their conjured, imaginary, or real wrongs and slanderous stories, with imputations of infidelity against others, it would be easier for him to hold his peace. There are many who seem to think that the elder must be a paragon of perfection, and sponge-like be constantly taking it but never emitting that received. They think that they have the unrestrained privilege to parade the weakness of others constantly before his mental vision; but if he perchance, by lack of thought, or out of the abundance of his overwhelmed soul says anything that they take exception to, they by act adjudge him guilty of the unpardonable. I have found in my limited experience that those who censure others the most for repeating things, are the ones most guilty of the sin themselves. Instead of pointing to the other party, let us be frank, and move that the confession made by the brother, of having repeated what he should not, be made unanimous. I have never met a man or woman in the church but what could do better along these lines. It is best never to confide in a living soul that which would embarrass you to father anywhere. The majority of the human family are more or less "two-faced." They can say a great deal when at a respectable distance from the one spoken of. "The tongue has killed more men than the sword."

If a traveling elder would divulge a tithe of what is confided in him, or relate but a fragment of the faults of others recounted to him, he could start a miniature insurrection nearly every day. Too many talk too much about others, and if perchance, after a time, they hear that others are talking about them, they are highly incensed. I have heard something about "chickens coming home to roost," and conclude it is best to "do to others as ye would that others should do to you;" hence if we would not desire to be talked about (we may be anyway), we should not talk about others.

There is a plan divine by which all these things can be rightly settled. If one hears anything damaging to the character of another, it is his duty to acquaint the party first, of the charge made, or if he reports it to another it should be the branch teacher. IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER. Then it becomes the teacher's duty to examine, and the one relating the story should be made to prove it, or admit his cupidity. If one believes all that supposed friends tell him what others say about him, he would be in the slough of despondency most of the time. It were better to discourage their tale bearing; a man who would communicate to you that which was given in confidence to him might repeat the act, compromising you.

"A still tongue makes a wise head." I fear that if all were executed, except the wise, by this standard, that God would have to make another Adam.

It is a universal weakness to disparage men's acts, to forget their virtues, and magnify their defects. Would that all could be like Christ.

"Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." If there is a Latter Day Saint who has never said aught against anyone, then I am willing to suffer a stoning at his hand for having misjudged him.

Please say to the many friends who were in attendance at the Park Bluff Reunion that I did not stay away from lack of interest. Thanks to the committee for their invitation, and to the saints for their expressed desire for my presence. Legitimate reasons for my absence.

Am hopeful for Zion's triumph.

P. S.—Either during the Thurman Reunion or since, my Doctrine and Covenants has been misplaced. It is flexible back, interleaved with alternate blank leaves, on which I have written much valuable matter. Whoever has the book now, will confer a favor in sending to me.

WASHBURN, Me., August 30.

Editors Herald:—I cannot report baptisms since leaving home last June, but have labored hard and successfully in New Brunswick and Maine. Have been plowing new fields, and the work is opening up beautifully and the seed has been sown by the aid of the Spirit, and some one will do some gathering in soon. I leave here to-morrow with scores of invitations to return. Yesterday's services were exceptionally remarkable for interest, the presence of the Spirit, and crowds.

My experience this summer has been of a trying nature; yet I feel satisfied that nowhere else could I have been of as much use to the Master as where I have been. I have been thrown among eight different kinds of religionists, and feel glad that it is not necessary for any believer in this faith to take one step back or sidewise, but right ahead every time. I have striven to be courteous in my talk, and have argued for hours with Adventists and others, and when leaving would receive a hearty handshake, and a "God bless you, brother, come again." The Baptist minister, A. A. McDougal, has treated me like a Christian man, has attended my meetings, and led in prayer. I have attended his meetings and been invited into his pulpit. We have talked several times a half day at a time upon our faith. His study has been my favorite resort. He has let me have his team to go out into the country to preach in what is called his field. I tell you, brethren, there is nothing gained, but a good deal lost, by abusing other people because they are in the dark—comparatively. Say, if this doctrine will not make a gentleman of a man, how far will it go toward making a Christian of him?

The saints as a rule are feeling well and hopeful. May the Lord help and bless them until we shall eventually triumph.

SCRANTON, Miss., Sept. 5.

Editors Herald:—Last Tuesday night, shortly after services about seven miles from here, at Escatawpa, Bro. T. C. Kelley was waited upon by a mob of unmasked persons headed by a Methodist preacher and school-teacher, who informed him that he must pull down the tent and leave the country. He, in company with other brethren, came to my place next day and we went to the courthouse to put the matter in the hands of the authorities.

The brethren in charge let the tent down according to promise, but hoisted it up again and had meeting in it Wednesday night. This incensed the mob and on Thursday between four and five p. m. about fifteen, some of them leading citizens, went to the tent, pulled it down, piled the seats close to it, poured about three gallons of oil on it, got matches out to fire it; but better counsel prevailed, and they desisted from burning it.

Next evening a deputy sheriff at Moss Point served papers on them, by whose instruction we do not know. They expected to have a kind of mock trial and get off easy, but our attorney got wind of it next morning when the trial was to take place, who there withdrew the charges, had them rearrested on our affidavits, and the case is to be tried at Scranton on Monday.

Some overtures had been made to us at Scranton to compromise, and supposing that matters had quieted down, Bro. Kelley essayed to go again to the tent, and was beaten at a lonely place on the way by two persons, with pole, board, and fists; but the parties were called off by portions of the mob before any serious damage was done him. Pray for us.

In an editorial note referring to certain items in the comparative summary of statistics of the Presbyterian Church, North, prepared by the Stated Clerk, Rev. W. H. Roberts, the Presbyterian Journal (Philadelphia) mentions the following points as worthy of special consideration: 1. The decline in the number of candidates for the ministry. 2. The small increase in the number of churches, only fifty-eight. 3. The decreased number of persons added both on examination and certificate as compared with six previous years. 4. The large number of adult baptisms as compared with the number added on examination. 5. The decline in the total contributions of nearly $1,000,000.

AN EVENING'S CONVERSATION.— NO. 4.

BY ELDER H. O. SMITH.

I SHALL now give you the testimony of Joseph Smith himself upon the question, and then follow it up with the testimony of others up to and including 1850.

On May 8, 1838, a list of questions and their answers was submitted by Joseph Smith, and published in The Elders' Journal, No. 2. I quote them as they are found in The Historical Record, p. 439, and among them is:—

7th. "Do the Mormons believe in having more wives than one?" No, not at the same time. But they believe that if their companion dies, they have a right to marry again.

The next is a notice, published in the Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 423. Date of paper, February 1, 1844, not quite five months before the death of Joseph Smith, and is as follows:—

As we have lately been credibly informed, that an elder of the Church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints, by the name of Hiram Brown, has been preaching polygamy, and other false and corrupt doctrines, in the county of Lapeer, State of Michigan.

This is to notify him and the church in general, that he has been cut off from the church, for his iniquity; and he is further notified to appear at the special conference, on the 6th of April next, to make answer to these charges.

JOSEPH SMITH,
HYRUM SMITH,
Presidents of said church.

So much for the testimony of Joseph Smith and his teachings. Now I will take up the testimony of others on the question.

Under date of August, 1842, Millennial Star, vol. 3, p. 73, Parley P. Pratt published as follows:—

But, for the information of those who may be assailed by those foolish tales about the two wives, we would say that no such principle ever existed among the Latter Day Saints, OR EVER WILL; this is well known to all who are acquainted with our books and actions, the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants; and also all our periodicals are very strict and explicit on that subject, indeed far more so than the Bible.

The next is two certificates, signed both by men and women of Nauvoo, and published in Times and Seasons of October 1, 1842:—

We the undersigned members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and residents of the city of Nauvoo, persons of families, do hereby certify and declare that we know of no other rule or system of marriage than the one published from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and we give this certificate to show that Dr. J. C. Bennett's "secret wife system" is a creature of his own make, as we know of no such society in this place, nor never did. Signed, S. Bennett, Geo. Miller, Alpheus Cutler, Reynolds Cahoon, Wilson Law, W. Woodruff, N. K. Whitney, Albert Pettey, Elias Higbee, John Taylor, E. Robinson, Aaron Johnson.

The other certificate is:—

Next I read in Times and Seasons, dated November 15, 1844, a letter signed "An Old Man of Israel," and which reads in part as follows:—

The saints of the last days have witnessed the outgoings and incomings of so many apostates that nothing but truth has any effect upon them. In the present instance, after the sham quotations of Sidney and his clique, from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, to skulk off, under the "dreadful splendor" of "spiritual wifery," which is brought into the account as graciously as if the law of the land allowed a man a plurality of wives, is fiendish, and like the rest of Sidney's revelation, just because he wanted "to go to Pittsburg to live." Woe to the man or men who will thus willfully lie to injure an innocent people! The law of the land and the rules of the church do not allow one man to have more than one wife alive at once; but if any man's wife die, he has a right to marry another, and to be sealed to both for eternity; to the living and the dead! There is no law of God or man against it! This is all the spiritual wife system that ever was tolerated in the church, and they know it."

In commenting on this letter, John Taylor, who was then editor of the Times and Seasons, says:—

For the communication of "An Old Man of Israel," and the letter of Elder Addison Pratt, from the islands of the Pacific Ocean, we bespeak a hearty welcome. They are genuine.

In line with the foregoing, I read an item or two from a fragment of an address by P. P. Pratt, published July 1, 1845, in Millennial Star, vol. 6, p. 22, Wilford Woodruff being editor:—

Again, beware of seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils, as first introduced by John C. Bennett, under the name of "Spiritual Wife" doctrine; and still agitated by the Pittsburg Seer, and his followers under the same title. It is but another name for whoredom, wicked and unlawful connection, and every kind of confusion, corruption, and abomination. . . . "THE SPIRITUAL WIFE DOCTRINE," of J. C. Bennett, and numerous other apostates, is as foreign to the real principles of the church as the devil is from God, or as sectarianism is from Christianity.

On page 44 of same volume, Wilford Woodruff takes occasion to call the attention of the saints to this address, and says:—

I wish to say to all the saints and officers throughout the land, that I have carefully perused an article published in the last Star, entitled Fragments of an address by P. P. Pratt, and it is strictly in accordance with my own views and principles, and I hope that all the elders, officers, and saints, over whom I am called to preside, will consider the address made to them, and will act accordingly. Let no officer, or member of the church, pretend to present any principle to any person whatsoever except it accord with the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, with righteousness truth, and virtue.

And in volume 10, Millennial Star, p. 137, 138, is this from the pen of Orson Spencer:—

How much vigilance is requisite in order to keep the wheat field clean from tares? Without constant scrutiny the first you know, tares, rank and cumbersome, are springing up among the wheat. Noxious weeds frequently grow faster in the garden than the most precious plants, and poisonous fruit often wears a most enticing verdure. In all ages of the church truth has been turned into a lie, and the grace of God converted into lasciviousness by men that have sought to make "a gain" of godliness, and feed their lusts on the credulity of the righteous and unsuspecting. In the midst of the general prosperity of the churches throughout the British Isles, we sometimes observe the stealthy tracks of beasts of prey. These animals come in the night and spoil the vines, and when the morning dawns, lo! the sight of their unhallowed tracks causes sorrow and mourning. Next to long hackneyed and bugaboo whisperings of polygism, is another abomination that sometimes shows its serpentine crests, which we shall call sexual resurrectionism. The teachers and abettors of such a doctrine have no need to hang out their colors in order to show their pedigree. And they have no need to preach it long, in order to make their "calling and reprobation sure." Such wandering stars as J. C. Bennett and Higbees do not seem to be sufficient beacons to keep some restless and aspiring spirits from the maelstrom of pollution and apostasy. "Fools ever will be meddling," says Solomon. The doctrines of corrupt spirits are always in close affinity with each other, whether they consist in spiritual wifeism, sexual resurrection, gross lasciviousness, or the unavoidable separation of husbands and wives, or the communism of property. We have barely to say of such "false teachers," that "their damnation slumbereth not." Except they repent and break off their sins by righteousness their wickedness shall be made manifest, and all their righteousness which they have done will be remembered no more in their favor. Let the saints keep a cautious eye upon teachers that promulgate marvelous things beyond the first principles of the gospel.

And to show that the elders of the church, or some of them at least, considered the texts which I have quoted sufficient to prove that polygamy was false, and an adulterous doctrine, I refer you to an article entitled, "Who is the Liar?" in Millennial Star, vol. 12, p. 29, and written by one Thomas Smith, in answer to a Mr. Bowes, who had written against Mormonism, and accused Joseph Smith of teaching a system of polygamy. The lies are enumerated, and under the head of twelfth lie I find this:—

12th lie.—Joseph Smith taught a system of polygamy.

12th refutation.—The revelations given through Joseph Smith, state the following: "If any commit adultery, they shall be dealt with according to the law of God." "He that looketh upon a woman to lust after her; or, if any commit adultery in their hearts, they shall not have the Spirit." "Thou shalt love thy wife, and shalt cleave unto her, and none else." "We believe that one man should have one wife."

And lastly I want to read you the statement of John Taylor. This occurred in a discussion which was held in Boulogne-sur-mer, France, in July, 1850, and is found in Orson Pratt's works, page 8, of the discussion. The pamphlet containing a report of the discussion being bound in with others written by Pratt. In that discussion Taylor and his associates were accused of polygamy, and he replies in the following language:—

We are accused here of polygamy, and actions the most indelicate, obscene, and disgusting, such that none but a corrupt and depraved heart could have contrived.

He then reads the article on marriage, from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which I have before called your attention to. All of this goes to prove that the "books," and all of Joseph Smith's teachings were opposed to the doctrine of polygamy, and I am bound to accept it as true, if I look upon it with an unprejudiced mind.

George.—But what are you going to do with all this mass of living testimony of women, who claim to have been the Prophet's wives, and others who claim that he taught them the doctrine of polygamy?

James.—I claim they have invalidated their own testimony by contradictions, a few of which I shall point out. The manner of bringing forth the purported revelation on polygamy was shady, to say the least. In the Supplement to Millennial Star, vol. 15, p. 31, Brigham Young says:—

This revelation has been in my possession many years; and who has known it? None but those who should know it. I keep a patent lock on my desk, and there does not anything leak out that should not.

This was uttered in 1852, 29th day of August, over eight years after Joseph Smith was killed; and when he was asked why the document was not in Joseph Smith's handwriting, and why he had only a copy to present he said that Emma Smith, Joseph Smith's wife, burnt the original. Emma Smith declared,—and adhered to that declaration to her death,—that she never saw it, nor heard of it, until it came from Brigham Young in Utah.

Brigham Young knew that he could only fasten the bands of polygamy upon the people by asserting that it was Joseph's measure, and so he had to drag the name of Joseph Smith in the mire. In so doing, like those of old, he had to suborn witnesses to give color to his statement that Joseph was the author of the document.

I will now give you a few testimonies of these witnesses. In 1879 Emma Smith died, and on her death-bed she reiterated her testimony in regard to her husband's innocence of the crime of polygamy. She was questioned by her oldest son, it having been asserted that he was afraid to ask his mother of these things. Some of the questions and their answers I will give you:—

Q.—What about the revelation on polygamy? Did Joseph Smith have anything like it? What of spiritual wifery?

A.—There was no revelation on either polygamy or spiritual wifery. . . .

Q.—Was there nothing about spiritual wives that you recollect?

A.—No such thing as polygamy, or spiritual wifery, was taught, publicly or privately, before my husband's death, that I have now, or ever had any knowledge of.

Q.—Did he not have other wives than yourself?

A.—He had no other wife but me; nor did he to my knowledge ever have. I know that he had no other wife or wives than myself, in any sense, either spiritual or otherwise.—Saints' Advocate, vol. 2, p. 50.

The publication of this created quite an excitement in Utah, and Joseph F. Smith began hunting up testimony to endeavor to prove that this testimony was false. The result was published in Deseret News of May 20, 1886, and republished in the Historical Record, vol. 6, p. 224. The first testimony I quote is that of Eliza R. Snow. She says:—

It is a fact that Sister Emma, of her own free will and choice, gave her husband four wives, two of them are now living, and are ready to testify that she not only gave them to her husband, but that she taught them the doctrine of plural marriage and urged them to accept it.

I wish you to notice the closing sentence in this quotation, and then compare it with William Clayton's, the next that I give:—

Hyrum said to Joseph, "If you will write the revelation on celestial marriage, I will take and read it to Emma, and I believe I can convince her of its truth, and you will hereafter have peace." Joseph smiled, and remarked, "You do not know Emma as well as I do." . . . Hyrum then took the revelation to read to Emma. Joseph remained with me in the office until Hyrum returned. When he came back, Joseph asked him how he had succeeded. Hyrum replied that he had never received a more severe talking to in his life, that Emma was very bitter and full of resentment and anger. . . . Two or three days after the revelation was written, Joseph related to me and several others, that Emma had so teased, and urgently entreated him for the privilege of destroying it, that he became so weary of her teasing, and to get rid of her annoyances he told her she might destroy it and she had done so.—Page 226.

You will notice the discrepancy in the two testimonies. One claims that Emma taught and urged the acceptance of the doctrine of plural marriage. The other that Emma was so bitter against it that she burned the document teaching it.

Lucy W. Kimball also testifies as follows:—

Shortly afterwards I consented to become the Prophet's wife, and was married to him May 1, 1843. . . . I am also able to testify that Emma Smith . . . gave her consent to the marriage of at least four other girls to her husband, and that she was well aware that he associated with them as wives within the meaning of all that word implies. This is proven by the fact that she herself, on several occasions, kept guard at the door to prevent disinterested persons from intruding, when these ladies were in the house.—Pages 229, 230.

Emily D. P. Young, she being one of those whom Emma had been so kind to—according to Lucy Kimball—and had guarded the door while her husband was with them, testifies as follows:—

Accordingly on the 11th of May, 1843, we were sealed to Joseph Smith the second time, in Emma's presence, she giving her free and full consent thereto. From that very hour, however, Emma was our bitter enemy. We remained in the family several months after this; but things went from bad to worse, until we were obliged to leave the house, and find another home. Emma desired us to leave the city; but after considering the matter over, we decided to remain with our friends.

Nothing could be more contradictory than this testimony; but I have one more to give from Lucy Kimball. You will remember that she stated in the testimony I have just read to you, that she was able to testify that Emma not only gave her consent to her own marriage to her (Emma's) husband, but that she gave her consent to the marriage of at least four other girls to him.

In her testimony as given under oath, in the late Temple Lot Suit, she says in regard to her marriage to Joseph Smith:—

Emma Smith was not present, and she did not consent to the marriage; she did not know anything about it at all. No, sir, she did not know anything about my marriage to her husband.—Plaintiff's Abstract, p. 374.

I believe I have quoted enough testimony to prove to you that the testators are not reliable. That their testimony would be thrown out of any court on earth as unworthy of belief on account of its contradictory nature. I might multiply this contradictory testimony, but I think this will suffice.

But I want now to call your attention to Sr. Emma Smith. You know that we have been told that her testimony was not reliable, and every opportunity has been improved to blacken her character. But take her testimony, as I have quoted it to you to-night, and compare it with the contradictory evidence given by the traducers of her character. In 1842 she placed her name to a certificate that the only system of marriage known in Nauvoo and the church, was that given in the Doctrine and Covenants. She always maintained that testimony, down to the day of her death; never deviating from it.

Eliza R. Snow placed her name to that certificate with Emma Smith. But in 1852 and since, she declares that she lied then, but asks us to accept her statement now as true, that she was married to Joseph Smith, June 29, 1842, when the date of the certificate denying it was October 1, 1842. After thus comparing the testimonies, please answer in your own heart as to which is most worthy of credence, Emma Smith or Eliza R. Snow, and the others. I maintain that there is no one who understands the nature of evidence but what would take her testimony against all the others, even though it were unsupported by others; but we have others who bear the same testimony that she does, and have always borne it as she has done.

I have other and to me positive testimony that Joseph Smith never practiced polygamy. On page 233, vol. 6, of the Historical Record, published by A. Jenson, of the Utah Church, he gives the names of twenty-seven women who were, he asserts, Joseph Smith's wives. The first one, Eliza Beaman, was married to him in 1841. Two others were married to him the same year. Two in 1842. Nine in 1843. The rest of them, dates were not known. Here are three that were married to him three years; and two two years; and nine one year prior to his death, and the others, thirteen in number, it is safe to conclude, if we accept this testimony, all the way from three years to one year prior to his death. Twenty-seven women in all; and they, or some of them do, testify that he "associated with them in all that the term of wife implies," and yet not one of them ever bore a child by him! While his wife, Emma, had children by him up to and after his death,—one son being born in the November following the June in which he was killed. It could not have been because these women were barren, or could not bear children; for the reason that all, or nearly all, raised large families by other men afterwards.

Louisa Beaman was a plural wife of Brigham Young, and died in 1850, at Salt Lake City, May 15; the date of her union with Young is not given; but the history states it was after the death of Joseph Smith, so it could not be longer than six years, and during that time she bore three children to Young. Fanny Alger, history says, married a man in Indiana and had a large family.

Almera W. Johnson married a man by the name of Reuben Barton, and between 1847 and 1851 buried five girls at Council Bluffs. How many she raised is not stated.

Lucy W. Kimball (Walker) married Heber C. Kimball in 1845, and gave birth to nine children by him.

Emily D. P. Young says that after the Prophet's death she married Brigham Young, and in February, 1846, "The day after crossing the river, I might have been seen sitting on a log in a blinding snowstorm with a three months' old babe in my arms." And says further, "I am the mother of seven children by President Young."

I need not add anything more to prove that nearly all of these women were very prolific with other men, but did not bear children by Joseph Smith; and there can be but one conclusion, and that is that he never lived with them as wives, and all of these stories have been simply manufactured to bolster up a false system and further illustrates that

O, what a tangled web they weave,
Who practice solely to deceive.

And further shows that the accusation which our leaders bore in the mountains have been bringing against "young Joseph" and his brothers, that they, in fighting polygamy, are endeavoring to tear down what their father died to build up, is totally false, and that there is not a principle of original Mormonism but what they tenaciously adhere to and promulgate.

George.—I wish to ask one more question, James, and if it can be as satisfactorily answered as the others that I have asked, I am ready to yield the point, and that is, What are you going to do with the testimony we have been bearing all these years? Wherein we have declared that we know that all of these doctrines were true and from God?

James.—I have expected you to ask that question, as it was one that troubled me to some extent. But as I began to examine into my own testimony, and assurance of the truth that I had received, I found that my whole testimony was based on the evidence I received when I first heard this gospel, and I made the mistake that thousands of others have made before and since, in that I thought that the testimony received then included everything that had been attached to that gospel since. But it is a false position to take. Each principle must stand or fall according to whether it is true or false. God, I believe, will bear testimony to all truths taught by himself or his servants.

But upon this question of polygamy we might, had we not been so blind, have seen that God would never have borne testimony to the truthfulness of a principle which he had so unqualifiedly condemned in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, and Bible, and we should have taken for our motto the saying of Paul in Galatians 1: 8:—

Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

It would have saved us many an error, if we had gone to the "law and the testimony," instead of the living oracles, or those seducing spirits, who are ever ready to take advantage of our zeal and credulity, to give false testimony on matters temporal and spiritual.

The Apostle John says:—

Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.—1 John 4: 1.

We failed to do that with the spirits which taught us polygamy and its kindred evils. According to Christ's word, this latter day was to be noted for the various devices that should be resorted to by the powers of darkness to deceive mankind.

For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect.—Matt. 24: 24.

And in Revelation 13: 13, 14, is the following:—

And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast.

Because a person has power to perform miracles is not a conclusive evidence that they are therefore acceptable to God. Every principle taught must stand upon its merits or demerits, when submitted to a comparison with God's word regardless of the external manifestations that may accompany its presentation. There are several ways in which the Spirit of God manifests itself. Paul says:—

To one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit. To another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another interpretation of tongues.—1 Cor. 12: 8-10.

But there is, however, another attribute of the Spirit that is indispensably necessary to show that one is acceptable to God:—

But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law.—Gal. 5: 22, 23.

No matter how much of the miraculous part of the Spirit's fruits I display, if I lack the latter, I am not acceptable to God. Paul very distinctly draws the line between these two fruits of the Spirit, when he says:—

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as a sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.—1. Cor. 13: 1, 2.

One of the characteristics of this latter-day work has been the cry we have made, that God has restored to us these miraculous manifestations of his Spirit, and I am afraid that we have desired these things too much, to the exclusion of the more weighty matters of the law: "Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." The more I study God's word the more I am impressed with the wisdom of the statement, "To the law and the testimony." God has not left himself without witness, no matter what subject; no matter what law you contemplate, until it seems to have been made so plain that a way-faring man, though a fool, need not err therein. Paul in this fifth chapter of Galatians distinctly draws the line between the fruits of the Spirit and the fruits of the flesh:—

This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. . . . Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.—Gal. 5: 16-21.

Now I maintain there is but few of these works of the flesh but what is the direct result of the belief in and practice of polygamy: so it is not necessary for one to go to God for an evidence of its truthfulness and divinity. It bears the stamp of the flesh on its face. It has caused adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, envyings, and murders; and hence, cannot be from God. When I see a person claiming the wonderful manifestations of God's power, and looking into their daily life I find the fruits of the flesh, as given by Paul, I say, There is a mistake somewhere. But if I see God's power in miracles and healing given to a person, and with it love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, I say there is no mistake here,—God is with this one. While I have been guilty, in a measure, of upholding the doctrine of polygamy, I thank God that he did not permit me to partake of the "accursed thing."

I have one thing that shall be an unceasing cause of regret to me, and that is that long ago I did not perceive where I stood. And now I find consolation only in the fact that I was not willfully but blindly wrong. But God being my helper, and his word my guide, I intend to spend what little time remains to me on earth in endeavoring to right the wrong, so far as in me lies, by teaching others the true way; and by casting in my lot with the sons of the Prophet, help them to redeem their father's name from the foul blot that has been placed upon it by those who should have been his best friends.

George.—Well, as it is getting late, I must take my departure; but before I go I will state that I have been highly pleased with what you have told me in regard to the belief of the Reorganization, and while I came here hoping to show you the error of the step you had taken, I must confess that you have much in your favor, and promise to investigate these matters more fully; and it may not be many days until I will be with you in belief. What I have heard to-night has more of the old time ring of the gospel message we used to hear in the beginning of this latter-day work, when we were sent forth with the Bible in our hands, and told to preach what we found therein, and to preach it fearlessly; and that what could not be proved by the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, was heresy. In my further investigations I suppose I may call on you for information any time I wish.

James.—Yes, sir; as I told you in the beginning of our conversation, nothing gives me greater pleasure than to converse upon these themes, and to give my reasons for my hope and faith; and by day or by night I hold myself in readiness to give all the information in my power. And I thank God for this opportunity to talk with you, and while I do not urge you to accept of the faith at once, yet I hope you will not cease your investigations. The truth of God does not lose, but grows stronger by investigation; and I pray that God may bear witness of the truths I have given you to-night, even as he bore testimony to you and me in the early days of the church.

(Concluded.)

WHOOPING-COUGH.

PERHAPS the following might prove helpful to some tried mother or save the life of some bud of promise:—

John Ellis, M. D., tells us that while attending "a clinic at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, held by the late Prof. Willard Parker, when a little child was brought in suffering from whooping-cough. Prof Parker, looking around upon the students, said: 'Here, Gentlemen, is a case of disease which, like the smallpox, measles, and scarlet fever, runs a definite course; if you will let the patients alone they will generally get well, but if you commence dosing them, you will often bring on complications and they will die.' This statement, coming from a medical man of his prominence, surely was worthy of consideration."—Personal Experience, p. 13.

The practice of the late Dr. R. C. Elvin, of Nebraska City, in extreme cases, was a drink of tar water and a syrup; one third olive oil, two thirds strained honey.

In behalf of the little ones,

REUNION NOTICES.

Southeastern Illinois reunion will convene at Arrington Station, Wayne County, on the Air Line railroad, October 1, at ten a. m., continuing ten days, as heretofore mentioned. We hope the saints and friends will make arrangements to attend with tents, lanterns, and such things as will place them in neat and comfortable circumstances. We are expecting Elders I. N. White, of Independence, Missouri, M. H. Bond, of St. Louis, Missouri, with those of the district to be present, accompanied with strong desires of the saints and friends that Bishop Hilliard will make one of his Paul-like visits, as is his custom, upon that date.

DIED.

MARCHANT.—Elder Robert A. Marchant passed peacefully into the slumber called death at eight p. m., August 19, 1897, at his home in St. Joseph, Missouri, lacking twelve days of being sixty-nine years old. Ever valiant in testimony in life, as an elder ready to defend the faith, he passed away in peace with God. His body rests in the beautiful and quiet Ashland cemetery, his spirit in paradise. Because he was useful and active in life, he will be missed in death. Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Terry from 1 Thessalonians 4:14, assisted by Elder I. N. Roberts, on Sunday, August 22, at 2:30 p. m., at the church.

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.
NEW REVISED EDITION.

The manuscript of this edition was carefully compared with the original authorized edition of 1835, which was adopted by a General Assembly of the church at Kirtland, and known as the Kirtland edition. Some typographical errors that crept into and passed through later editions have been corrected, and some omissions supplied.

The revelation on the late Civil War, the "Minutes of the General Assembly" of 1835, the minutes of the "Joint Council" of 1894, and the revelations given to the Reorganized Church to date, are all included in the volume. The "Lectures on Faith" are omitted, but may be published later in pamphlet form, or for those who may want them.

The concordance has been revised and enlarged, greatly aiding study and general use of the book. The concordance, and lists of names of persons and places mentioned in the revelations, are included in the volume.

Ready reference to the book is greatly facilitated by the substitution of figures for the old style Roman letters in section and page headings. The figures can be read at a glance.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

THE SAINTS' HERALD

REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD was fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch hook agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

FLOUR OF THE ENTIRE WHEAT.

ITS FOOD VALUE AS COMPARED TO WHITE FLOUR EASILY TAKES FIRST PLACE.

The importance of the general subject that we are considering in this issue of the Clinic cannot be overestimated. The knowledge of what to eat, how to eat it, and when to eat it to best maintain that state of complete physiological equilibrium called health, is of paramount importance; and I believe that the general use of patent process, white wheat flour, in its widespread effects, is one of the greatest curses that has fallen to the lot of humanity out of the progress of modern civilization.

The fathers of the present day often bemoan their physical condition, and wonder why they are not as strong and robust and able to endure as their forefathers; the mothers wonder why they lose their teeth in their first or second pregnancy, and neither stop to think that what they are depends upon what they eat, and what they are not depends in great measure upon what they do not eat. Plainly speaking, America feeds its hogs and horses that which belongs to its men. Among the foods we eat, the cereals easily take first rank. In fact, when properly utilized they offer us the elements of a most perfect nutrition, and setting aside meat products as secondary, we will consider the possibilities of this class of food and show briefly how completely, in the almost universal use of white wheat flour, we are deprived of them.

In the study of cereal foods, it is only necessary to remember that the gluten of these foods is their nitrogenous and only really valuable food element, that on which depends their life-sustaining value, and that in the unfortunately fashionable white flour, this is almost entirely removed; the starch, by far the more inferior element, being left behind, constituting the bulk thereof. Therefore from a chemical standpoint, the use of white flour is foolish in the extreme, and from a physiological standpoint it is little less than criminal.

Any observant person can pick out dozens of families in which from "necessity" baker's bread forms the main staple of diet, that have not a sound set of teeth from the father to the child two years old; families in which cholera infantum and convulsions are common in the children, and dyspepsia and constipation the rule with the adults, while the whole family is pasty in color and lacking materially in bodily strength and endurance. They are the people that get very sick quickly and recover slowly, because they have no reserve force. Let these same persons change to a diet of entire wheat, and the effect is almost marvelous.

In the first place it will take only about half as many loaves of bread made from flour of the entire wheat to supply food for a week, and all be far better nourished; for it has been conclusively shown that one has to buy four barrels of white flour to get as much actual food as is contained in one barrel of a properly prepared flour of the entire wheat. Therefore, to get the actually necessary amount of vital food, the stomach must digest four times as much starch as nature intended it should, while at the same time the pocket pays four times as much money for this as is necessary. While this may be done for a time, for the average stomach to keep it up is manifestly impossible, hence the eating of this immense amount of starch soon destroys digestion, and is constantly adding new victims to the overcrowded ranks of dyspepsia, while the pocket book is being unnecessarily depleted as above-mentioned.

Being deprived of four fifths of the nerve food intended by nature, the body is wanting in nerve force, which alone will enable it to keep up digestive processes and the other functions of natural life. In the second place, after a few months, through supplying to the system the elements of nutrition of which it was deprived before, constipation is overcome, new and purer blood is formed; all get clearer complexions and rosy cheeks, and the frequent visits of the doctor are dispensed with, because the family is coming back to health again. And if, perchance, from exposure or other cause they do get sick, the reaction to proper medicines is prompt, and recovery speedy and natural.

It is high time that our people stopped this devitalizing habit of eating impoverished white wheat flour and begin to intelligently consider and weight the consequences. It is slowly and steadily sapping and reducing our vitality, while upon our children and children's children it is entailing imperfect development, physical degeneration, and actual disease. There is no essential flour food that may not be made better and nicer from the flour of the entire wheat. With everything for it and little or nothing against it, it would seem as if the question would at once be decided in favor of flour of the entire wheat; but such is not the case, for as men and women stick to other bad habits and justify themselves therein, so will they adhere to the use of this white wheat flour until our physicians, and advanced thinkers among the laity, educate them up to a more full and complete knowledge of the subject.

Besides the many objections, from every standpoint, to the white wheat flour, we knew of only one to flour of the entire wheat; and that is that under ordinary conditions it is apt to keep poorly, making it necessary that the distance from the ripe kernel, through the mill and the market to the customer, be made as direct and short as possible. But it is probable that our entire wheat manufacturers, like the Franklin Mills Company, Lockport, New York, Farwell and Rhines, Watertown, New York, etc., will soon overcome this by supplying flour in suitable packages so carefully put up that it will keep perfectly.

Modern chemistry has shown us that the fifteen or more elements found in the human body are also found, and in about the same proportion, in a kernel of ripe wheat; therefore in the preparation of wheat for food justice is only done by retaining them all. Dr. Nichols, Editor of the Boston Journal of Chemistry, once said: "I entertain the profoundest respect for a grain of wheat. It is a most marvelous combination of substances admirably adapted for the building up and sustenance of the tissues of the human body." So says the writer; and there is no question but that wheat ["corn"] was designed by the Creator as the food for man.

More than this, history is replete with the famous physical achievements of the soldiers of ancient days, and going further into the subject we know that they lived almost entirely upon cereal foods, and that these were prepared in the most crude manner, yet containing all their vital, life-giving principles. Who has not read of the valor of Wallace, the Bruce's and their Scottish clan; how when they met the English in battle, they were the marvel of their foes. These same scotsmen carried with them, as their sole food, bruised oats and wheat; which they mixed up with water, placed upon a convenient stone, and after roasting before an open fire, ate what their healthful appetites demanded, drawing therefrom a physical vigor and endurance which has never since been equalled.

Our modern American cookery leads us to eat because it tastes good rather than because a healthful system demands it; and we not only eat many wrong things in season and out of season, but we eat much more food than we need, because our good housewives have a way of fixing it up to tickle our palates. The modern table custom is wrong end to. If desserts and fancy dishes must form a part of the meal, they should be eaten first, and not after we have eaten enough of other and more wholesome things. We have unfortunately retained the much eating and drinking customs without the vomitarium of our Roman ancestors. We leave an overloaded and wrongly loaded stomach to struggle with its burden, while custom allowed them to step to the vomitarium and throw it up.

Baron Von Liebig long ago predicted that this almost universal eating of white or starch flour would ultimately result in disaster to the race. The truth of this is now plainly to be seen in the almost universal lowering nerve force, which never before in history was so general as now; in the great prevalence of nervous diseases, filling our asylums and sanitariums, both public and private; and in the sudden breaking down of persons apparently in the full tide of health and vigor. Is it any wonder when we are trying to fight the battle of life with only twenty to twenty-five per cent of the nerve food that the Creator in his wisdom intended us to have.

Take the saloon away from the men, the corset away from the women, and feed three generations on the flour of the entire wheat, and America would take such a bound into perfect healthful physical development, business prosperity and millennial civilization, as can scarcely be conceived. If these apparently somewhat dogmatic statements, statements for which there is abundant proof, shall set my medical brethren to thinking, the purpose of this brief paper will have been well served.—W. C. Abbott, M. D., in Alkaloidal Clinic for May.

It is a significant fact, says the Christian Register, that in meetings of trades-unions in Germany the words of Jesus are repeated as a call to brotherhood and social unity, while a mention of the church is often hissed. A socialist said recently that, if the commune were ever established, it would be "the first fair chance for those who desired it to live according to the precepts of Jesus."

Professor Luthardt, of Leipsic, has recently published a significant article on the state of theology in Germany. He declares that the liberal ranks of the destructive theology are showing the undoubted signs of disintegration, and that the prospects for a reaction in favor of positive theology are better now than they have been for many years.

THE Herald Office has decided to offer its patrons an excellent opportunity to secure a useful and valuable premium — the celebrated "Self-Pronouncing Sunday School Teachers' Bible," the same as the "Oxford Bible," with "helps" and "maps," in good large print, bourgeois type, with marginal references; printed on thin paper, flexible binding; size 8½ x 6¼.

For one (1) new subscriber to the HERALD and $3.25 in cash, we will send the HERALD for one year to any address and a copy of the Bible to the remitter.

Or, anyone sending us ten (10) new subscribers for the HERALD at $1.50 each, cash accompanying orders, will receive a copy of the Bible.

We want one thousand new subscribers for the HERALD within the next ninety days. The church paper has been reduced in price and should circulate in every home of and be read by all Latter Day Saints.

Here is an excellent opportunity to aid the cause and to secure a first class help in general work, a serviceable and up to date Bible.

We hope to hear from all interested at once.

Does the HERALD circulate among all the families of your branch? If not, it ought to reach them. Can you not help us to place it in the hands of all the membership, also among those not of the faith? Strangers will read it and take it. Try them, and let us hear from you.

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 22, 1897.

"JEWISH MOVEMENT IS STRONG."

THE HERALD readers have an especial interest in the subject of the reoccupation and development of the land of Palestine by Jews. We therefore present them some additional items connected with the late Zionist conference at Basle, Switzerland. The first one appears under the heading given above. The second is published with other general matters of news from the British metropolis. The third speaks of the attitude of the Pope of Rome toward the movement:—

London, Sept. 4. — When Dr. Theodore Herzl, the so-called "new Moses," made his farewell speech at the meeting of scientists at Basle, Switzerland, during the week, he declared the congress had been worthy of itself and of Israel. Then ensued a dramatic scene—tears, kissing, and rejoicing, begging description.

Though Rabbi Adler of London declares that the scientists' congress was mischievous, it is the opinion of the thoughtful in the political world that this movement will have to be reckoned with in the near future.

The two main objects upon which an expression of opinion was asked for upon the part of the scientists in all lands were the establishment of a Jewish common center and the formation of the machinery to carry it out, and they were favorably acclaimed by all present.

PURCHASE OF PALESTINE.

London, Sept. 4.—The Jewish congress at Basle, convened by Dr. Herzl of Vienna, has aroused in this country a deeper feeling than one of mere curiosity. It is not altogether a dream that as a part of the final solution of the Eastern question Palestine might find itself a neutral State, guaranteed by the European powers. While in the hearts and heads of cultivated Englishmen the question of the return of the Jews to their promised land has always exercised a strong fascination, although as a matter of practical politics any realization of the dream has seemed to the outsider to be in the distance, Dr. Herzl's plan of direct purchase from the Sultan has the flavor of the stock exchange, and presents many grave difficulties, of which perhaps the least is the raising of some hundred million dollars for this purpose. It is curious to remember how the greater side of this movement was foreshadowed by the genius of George Eliot, who in "Daniel Deronda" prophesies through the mouth of Mordecai the coming of a new Jewish polity—grand, simple, just, like the old, and the dawn of a day when the outraged Jew shall have an equal defense in the world of nations with the outraged Englishman or American. This great writer's forecasts have ere now been verified in after history, though in this case the fulfillment may not be the scheme adopted by the Basle congress.

London, Sept. 11.—France, which protects Catholic interests in the Orient, has been appealed to by the Pope to prevent the success of the Zionist movement, which is regarded with horror at Rome. Mgr. Bonetti, the Apostolic Delegate at Constantinople, has been recalled to Rome in order to devise means to oppose the Jewish plans to purchase and colonize Palestine, which plans are not as formidable as generally believed.

If the statement of Dr. Grunhut, a Hungarian Hebrew and head master of the German school at Jerusalem, is to be credited, there is plenty of good land there; but the poverty of the Hebrews of Jerusalem is terrible. Out of a population of 50,000 there are 30,000 Hebrews, of which number 28,000, he asserts, live on the alms of their European coreligionists.

It is declared that the possibility of Palestine being partitioned among newcomers is too remote to be considered.

There are eleven millions (11,000,000) of Jews in the world to-day, of whom one half are in Russia. Implanted in the mental and physical fiber of the great majority of the Jewish people are the traditions of their religion, and because of which they look for the restoration and final glory of "Israel." The leading feature of the Jew is his faith, all else being of a secondary character, hence the warmth with which he cherishes the beliefs of his nation and the tenacity with which he clings to his hopes of final deliverance from Gentile rule and oppression. This accounts for the pathetic scenes described by the correspondent in the item of the conference given above. It shows what depths of emotions are stirred within the heart of the Hebrew at the prospect of again occupying the land glorified to him by the memories of Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Samuel, David, and Solomon, and the dealings of Jehovah with them and the people.

It should be remembered that those among the Jewish people who discourage or scout the idea of a reoccupation of Palestine by Israel, are most if not all wealthy Jews, and those called "Reformed" Jews; called such because they have accepted a modification of the ancient faith, comprising chiefly the ethical principles of the law of Moses. These Reformed Jews have largely discarded the ritual and ceremonial obligations of the law of Moses, but profess to cling to its moral precepts. They accept what to them is a progressive adaptation of its basic principles to modern methods of thought and life. These Jews are of the wealthy and well to do classes, who have made or are making fortunes among the Gentiles; hence are well satisfied with their temporal conditions and not stirred by religious fervor nor pressed by poverty to turn their eyes toward the ancient home of their ancestors. They are also free from political oppression; indeed, are in many cases occupying influential positions in the commercial, financial, social, professional, and political life of the modern world. These are the strictly modern Jews, to many of whom the traditions of the fathers are indistinct unrealities, because they have engrossed themselves in the strife for wealth, which is a passion with many of the later generation, reared in the Gentile cities, influenced by the spirit of money getting, by the business opportunities and unspiritual character of the world. It is this class of Jews, we repeat, that like their fathers, know not the things that belong to their peace, but are blinded by the god of this world and absorbed in the modern Babylon.

There are many exceptions even among them, however, who hold fast to the faith of the fathers and devoutly believe and pray for the peace of Jerusalem, and who believe that God will yet speak comfortably to her and say that her warfare is accomplished, her iniquities pardoned, and that her promised Messiah and Deliverer shall come. These among the influential and wealthy Jews are willing and ready to aid the great masses of their Jewish brethren who are yet in oppression, many of them in cruel bondage because of the prevailing sentiment toward them.

One half of the eleven millions of Jews are in Russia; poor outcasts, many of them, disliked and spurned by the ruling classes and peasantry alike. They are denied many privileges of citizenship and have but limited opportunities for advancement. Many will remember the hostile attitude of the late Czar Alexander toward them, how under his edict thousands were banished and driven from his domains. The fanatical Russian Catholic yet sees in the Jew the persecutor of Christ and the apostles, to whose graven images he bows in blind superstitious devotion. Many Jews are also scattered throughout more tolerant portions of Europe, but where a strong Anti-Semitic sentiment yet prevails and at times breaks out in open persecutions. For centuries past his ancestors have been persecuted and driven, by Christian and heathen. Every form of proscription has been put upon him, every method of expression of hatred toward him been crystallized into edicts and laws to rob and drive him. Under conditions of these kinds the Jew has deepened his hold upon the faith of his fathers, which has been his strength and stay and upon which he has based his hopes for deliverance.

The Jew is a religious creation. While the Gentile has distinguished himself by conquest, by devotion to political economy, art, science, etc., the things that pertain to this world, the Jew in this respect stands in marked contrast. Called out by Jehovah to become his peculiar people, the witnesses for God, the very features of his national birth are religious in character; and though the sons of Israel have distinguished themselves in all lines of progress and learning, the Jew stands forth to the world in the unique character in which the faith of Abraham and of Moses has created him—a witness for God and a standing protest against the growing irreligious spirit and skepticism of the age.

With a career so strange and remarkable, with a character so manifestly preserved amid the cruel persecutions that have sought to reconstruct and recreate him according to Gentile models, it is not strange that the Hebrew people, in their movement toward the reestablishment of a nationality in Palestine, are attracting world-wide attention. Ancient civilizations have decayed, but the Jewish people have survived. Modern civilization has reached its zenith and already shows signs of retrogression, disorder, and disruption, but Israel moves forward toward reconstruction, unity, and national fraternity. The Gentile ideal has been one of conquest, blood, ambition, worldly advancement, and improvement in things temporal. The Jewish ideal is spiritual, enduring, eternal. It is interwoven with the God idea, with a view to its ultimate development, and controlled by God's own supervising care throughout, both in its prosperity and adversity. Rome, the ancient city of Gentile rule and conquest, the mistress of the world, the representative head of Gentile dominion, that destroyed Jerusalem and scattered Israel abroad, is now dead as a political center, and is destined to die as a religious one. She no longer rules the councils of state, but is chiefly known because of her past history of blood and tyranny; and, religiously, she stands to-day the head of a false spiritual economy, in direct opposition to the one of which Jerusalem is the representative earthly head; one too that has been the opposer of the Jewish people and that continues her influence against the restoration idea. Jerusalem, the city of the great King is the metropolis of the Jew, the center around which cluster the hopes of the nation. The city of peace is a living force to-day. It has given to the world its true spiritual conceptions, its sublimest hopes of life here and hereafter. Christ, the Desire of all nations, and of Jewish origin, was born in the city of David; and in it he is yet to reign in equity when all dominions shall serve and obey him. Jerusalem therefore is from above, and is representative of the rule of God—the reign of right. With her scattered children she hopefully awaits the coming deliverance when Babylon shall fall. Paraphrasing the words of the ancient apostle we may say of her later history and without exact comparison with Sinai, but with reference to the Gentile dominion over the Jew, "For this Rome is Israel's bondage, but Jerusalem, established from above, is yet to be free;" for the Jew and his city are heirs of promise that are to arise and shine, while Rome exists as typical of the things that are politically and spiritually wrong and that are to be shaken. Jerusalem therefore will remain among the things that cannot be moved. She is destined to become with Zion the seat of government, the true eternal city, the heavenly Jerusalem: "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it."—Rev. 21:24. It is the force behind her high destiny that is moving in her behalf. With the beginning of the end of Gentile rule Jerusalem and her land are to rise in favor and importance. While Babylon falls, Jerusalem is to rise.

The outcome of the present movement can only be conjectured. Should it fail, it will undoubtedly aid the general movement toward reoccupation by enlisting and educating the forces that favor the project. The plans remain to be matured and executed. From a Gentile standpoint the Mohammedan dominion over Palestine may present an insurmountable obstacle; but the Father of Israel has dealt with earthly monarchs in past ages; and, too, when they oppressed both Israel and his land. "He that keepeth Israel will not slumber nor sleep." The Bible student is familiar with the instances of past history. Whatever may be the obstacles to surmount, Jewish occupation, independent, or under some form of political permission or guarantee, is sure to come, and evidently at no distant day.

The Sultan of Turkey is by no means secure. The signs of the times indicate the speedy termination of Mohammedan rule. It came into power as the climax of Israel's downfall. Disobedient Israel's capital became a prey to the sword of Islam, the false prophet, the child of Hagar; repentant Israel restored means the downfall of forces that have hitherto triumphed against him. The seed of Isaac, the son of Sarai, the child of promise, are to inherit and reign. The descendants of illegitimate Ishmael have no legal claim to heirship and rule; the wrong is to fail, the right to prevail. Evil has but a temporary existence, after all; it is only the true in character that is permanent. This God himself has set his hand to make manifest, to demonstrate. His lines are stretched throughout the earth in behalf of that policy — the policy of truth. His paths are straight, his course is one eternal round, and he cannot be turned from his purposes.

Whether the Jew buys Palestine from the impoverished Turk, or whether other powers secure it to him when the Ottoman Empire is dismembered, as a guarantee for his loans to them, he is destined to secure it in some way. The Bible student will have renewed reasons to study the Eastern question. He will see the hand of destiny apparent in its development. Rulers will be moved to act for Israel's good.

Most of the early elders of the latter-day work have passed away. With them "the gathering of Israel" was an inspiring and leading theme. They were not mistaken in declaring it, though the religious world largely ridiculed the idea in 1830-'44.

The early saints and elders, like faithful Abraham, walked by faith, seeing the promises and being persuaded by the written word and the Spirit of truth that moved upon them. The present generation is seeing and is yet to see remarkable evidences of the fulfillment of the prophecies.

The attitude of the Roman Catholic hierarchy is interesting. In the middle ages the dominant church was the persecutor of the Jew. The nation that crucified the Christ was treated in any but the spirit of mercy by the Popes and their adherents. It is not strange that Rome yet opposes. It is in harmony with the spirit of its past acts and attitude toward the Jew. Ecclesiastical Rome, moved by motives of wily policy, evidently sees in the present Jewish movement a factor that may disturb the financial and political equilibrium of present conditions in Europe. Ever ready to gain prestige with ruling powers in her own interests, she inveighs against the effort of the Jew. The wrong is generally selfish and shortsighted.

London dispatches of the 11th announce from Odessa that the late Baron Hirsch's plan to colonize the Argentine Republic with Russian Hebrews has been abandoned in favor of the establishment of Hebrew schools in Russia. This is another indication that Jewish colonization outside of Palestine is being abandoned. It will be remembered that some of Baron Hirsch's millions have been spent to assist Jews in Palestine, with other means of wealthy Hebrews contributed to aid poor colonists there.

A decree of the Russian government, in 1896, closed all schools in the empire not exclusively Jewish against Jewish girls. This with other evidences of Anti-Semitic sentiment in Europe but serves to stimulate the Jewish exodus to Palestine. The appeal of prominent Jewish rabbis in leading European capitals, to manifest devotion to present governments by remaining away from the Basle conference of the Zion movement, will prove of but little avail. Present governments have little real use for the Jew, whom they have robbed in the past and may not be above robbing him in future, as Russia has done in late years. The Jew is not wedded to present governments, either by tradition or experience. Dr. Theodore Herzl, the promoter of the late movement, may be an enthusiast; but he is correct when he says, "I am of the opinion that the idea of a Jewish state is not an idea of my own. It is the old, never dead, immortal idea of our people. . . . The Jewish people wishes to reassert itself."

Israel will doubtless be ready for additional favor—the receiving of the "new covenant" in Christ, the law, written not on tables of stone but engraven in the heart and mind. The church has a mission to the Jew, though now the preaching of the gospel is to the Gentiles. The great purposes of God, the restoration of all things spoken of by the prophets, are being brought to pass. "God hath not cast away his people whom he foreknew. . . . Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid; but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy. Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fullness. . . . For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead? . . . And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. . . . For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance."—Paul, in Romans 11.

The Gentile fullness now comes in,
And Israel's blessings are at hand:
Lo! Judah's remnant cleansed from sin,
Shall in their promised Canaan stand.

We see more clearly as events transpire the fulfillment of the "sure word of prophecy," and can, with all of Israel, lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

THE Editor left the sanctum on Thursday, September 2, for the Eastern Iowa district, over which genial brother and elder, C. E. Hand, presides, for the purpose of assisting in dedicating a building erected by the Butternut Grove branch, for worshiping uses. He reached Centre Junction, on the Chicago and Milwaukee, at five o'clock on Friday morning, and thence accompanied Bro. W. B. Thomas and family, Brn. Brooks, Eckhart, and others to the rendezvous, twelve miles distant, by wagon.

The Sunday school convention for the district used the day and evening in its business and entertainment, under the direction of Sr. Ella Green, superintendent.

To the surprise of the Editor, the district conference had arranged to meet at the same time and place, and it was under the rule of the conference that the services were held. The business was dispatched during the day, and in the evening a most interesting sermon was preached by Bro. Warren Turner, formerly of the Apostolic branch of Clinton. This service was in charge of Bro. J. X. Smith, a priest of the branch at Clinton, and his conduct of the service was very feeling and impressive. He was for many years a minister in the Baptist Church, and has welcomed the angel's message gladly.

A prayer and sacramental service occupied the morning hour; and at 10:45 a. m. there was a house packed full to the outer court waiting the dedicatory service. These were in charge of the Editor; the choir being led by Bro. W. LaRue of the Buffalo Prairie branch; Sr. Nellie Hills, a daughter of Bro. Samuel Powers, one of the early apostles of the Reorganized Church, was at the organ. The exercises began at 10:45 a. m. A song, "In thy name, O Lord, assembling," was sung and Bro. L. E. Hills led in prayer.

The following statement was read:—

STATEMENT.

Sometime last spring the suggestion was made to build a house in which to worship, and by vote it was decided to purchase the building now completed; and moving it to its present site, remodel and finish it in suitable way for use. A committee was selected consisting of W. B. Thomas, Edwin Green, and Orillus Green. A soliciting committee comprised of Susie Green chairman and treasurer, Amelia Thomas, Orillus Green secretary, Henry Rhue, and W. B. Thomas, who circulated lists and secured a subscription $455.35 in amount.

Upon consultation as to site, Orillus Green offered the land on which the building stands, and it was accepted. The foundation was prepared and the building moved, workmen secured, and the work done unto completion.

Of the amount subscribed the whole has been paid, except about fifty cents, a remarkable instance of good faith in the history of church building.

There remains in the treasurer's hands the sum of $35 in round numbers; all bills are paid so far as known, and the building is ready for dedication and occupation. A deed to the property has been executed by Orillus Green and his wife, running to the church; and there seems to be no reason why the offering which has been made may not now be completed and the building dedicated to holy and right uses for worship and church business.

Besides the amount subscribed and paid in cash, there has been an aggregated amount of labor $220, and of material and fixtures an estimated amount of some $75 not enumerated in bill of items. This makes a total of $750.35 as cost of building, including the amount on hand, and excluding the value of the land on which it is situated.

This is a creditable showing, and reflects credit on the saints of the Butternut Grove branch, their friends, and the soliciting and building committees; which ought to be an example to other branches seeking to build. Unity of purpose and effort have marked the occasion of building this house; and it should be the prayer of all that it should be continued, the branch be extended, and the cause of the Master honored.

The sermon was by the Editor, the topic being a consideration of the question, "What doctrine should be preached within these walls and in this pulpit? Text, John 7: 17: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."

The best of attention was paid to the services, and when the benediction was pronounced by Bro. C. E. Hand, all felt that the peace of the Lord had been with his people.

The afternoon service was a sermon by Elder J. W. Peterson, the subject, the gospel and probation after death—a scriptural doctrine. The evening service was a sermon by the Editor, text "Seek ye first the kingdom of God." It was listened to in deep interest. Bro. LaRue was in charge, and did his part well. He is a young man of good promise. The day ended pleasantly, all seeming to enjoy the services and the genial association of the brethren of the one faith.

The branch numbers about forty members, and is called the Butternut Grove branch, from an old time organization that once existed nearly forty miles away. The house is a very neat one of 28 by 36 feet in size, plainly finished inside and out; and by reason of a concurrence of circumstances is an instance of the least expenditure of means for the best results of any we know, as see statement. It stands in a valley between high hills; on one of which dwells Bro. Orillus and Ella Green, and on the other stands the house of Mr. Edwin and Sr. Susie Green. These families with that of Bro. W. B. Thomas, twelve miles away at Centre Junction, and a number of others scattered here and there, form the branch; and from the location of the church in the valley and the peculiar condition of the membership, the Editor suggested that the name be changed to the Green Valley branch. This would give the name of the Green Valley church to the little building; and would be both pleasant and appropriate, especially as there remains nothing of the characteristics of the appellation of the Butternut Grove branch that it is now necessary to perpetuate.

We met on this occasion Bro. James Bradley and wife, now aged ninety-three and eighty-three years respectively, and who have all their lives long been companions, and are yet sufficiently hale to enjoy the meetings and association with the people of their religious choice.

The local brethren entertained a hundred and thirty-eight of the brethren from the district round about, and the estimated attendance in round numbers would be between four and five hundred. The occasion was one that will be long remembered in the district.

And so in parting with the saints amid the hills of eastern Iowa, we commended them to the Lord with confidence that there would be a good work done by the forces now at work there. Brn. Hand, Peterson, Sutton, and others will be heard from.

THE WOODBINE REUNION.

THE Woodbine Reunion was the largest, and in several respects, one of the most successful we have yet held. The success may not be in number baptized, though this was over half a hundred; but in spiritual enjoyment, and moral force and prestige it was most excellent. The order on Sunday, the last day, was the best we have had since the Missouri Valley session, the cause for which is not yet accounted for, unless it be that there was nothing allowed on the grounds by way of attraction, only the services of the church.

The rules governing the camp have become well known to the saints, and a general acquiescence in them and their usefulness, made police duty much more effective and serviceable.

Some of those uniting by baptism were men who have long been partially or wholly convinced; but, like the impotent man at the pool, have been waiting the stirring of the waters by the angel; this for them came at this session, and they went down into the stirred pool with those who helped them, and were healed of their spiritual blindness.

The preaching was uniformly good, some of it above the ordinary in pith and force, the speakers being endowed of the Spirit richly. The younger recruits to the ranks are pressing the veterans close in the race for usefulness in the great Master's cause, and the veterans are giving thanks and praising God that he is hearing their call and sending men to the rescue. There was not a breath of envy or jealousy in the ministerial force from start to finish; each went to his post at the call, and responded with all his powers to the demand for service.

The tone of the prayer and testimony meetings was good, especially the one held Sunday morning, in which seventy-eight testimonies, six prayers, and four songs were heard in seventy minutes, spirited and pleasing, some of them soul-stirring and uplifting.

The throng on Sunday, the last day, was great; but not an oath was heard; no one under the influence of strong drink was seen; and little or no smoking was indulged in on the grounds in the vicinity of the big tent. Everybody seemed willing to observe the rule; and if any were found transgressing, yielded good-naturedly to the admonition of the man with the "star on his coat."

A water panic was started on Saturday afternoon, caused by the breaking of a pipe; but this was soon discovered and quickly repaired. Thousands upon thousands of gallons were used on Saturday and Sunday; but the supply was ample, and the day closed with standpipe full and the tanks in good supply.

There was some sickness on the grounds, the most of it the result of carelessness in eating and drinking, and the heat; but the prompt attention and excellent administration service of the administering committee, attended by the health and life-giving forces of the Spirit, gave relief from anxiety and pain, many being instantly healed upon administration. There were no deaths, and none left the grounds in danger or extreme sickness that we heard of.

The Woodbine reunion for 1897 is now a thing of the past, and the energetic committee is already at work for 1898. What the harvest will be does not yet appear, but as we are enjoined in Holy Writ, "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that," we may take heart of grace, and trust the Master for the complete fruition of all our hopes.

A FEW COMMENTS.

BRO. M. F. GOWELL sends us an excellent article on whole wheat flour diet, which we publish on the cover of this number. The Word of Wisdom says "wheat for man," naming it as the food par excellence, that specifically adapted to his "constitution and nature." The article referred to tells why it is valuable and explains how man deteriorates in physical power and diminishes his strength and hold upon life by substituting a part for the whole, the less for the greater value of the wheat kernel. "Custom doth often reason overrule" is an old saying, illustrated by much of present habit and diet. We believe that a full observance of the Word of Wisdom includes the use of wheat as God gives it to man—of all its good and necessary properties. The subject is worthy of thought, the recommendation of practice.

It is in our power to rise to added usefulness and to enjoy greater happiness by living "by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." Not to mention alcoholic liquors and tobacco, tea and coffee have largely been dispensed with by progressive Latter Day Saints. There are further steps to be taken in harmony with the "word," with a view to adopting the whole code, as it relates to excessive and unseasonable use of meat diet, and the return to the whole wheat bread of our fathers and mothers, who were possessed of sturdier physical fiber, because they ate simpler and wholesome food. Plain living and high thinking go together; they form a true basis for mental and physical health and happiness, as they guarantee lives of usefulness. The coöperation of all concerned in the home circles would aid in bringing about a higher and better order of things. We trust that the sisters, who reign in the home circle, will more fully look into the questions involved and that all will be willing to stand by them in the excellent work of dietary reform.

We have made this note at the risk of being called a hobby rider and of being considered as overdoing it. We believe that Latter Day Saints should observe the law that brings both temporal and spiritual salvation; that to be preserved by law is to honor it and thus receive its benefits. "Prevention is better than cure." The Word of Wisdom contemplates prohibition of and protection from disease by obedience to the laws that govern and preserve the life of body and mind. Israel of old became a hardy race, and the Jew to-day escapes prevailing epidemics because he inherits what his fathers bequeathed to him of physical force, under the hygienic code of the Mosaic economy. When modern Israel learns to fully observe the law given of God for physical, moral, and spiritual redemption—the redemption of the man entire—the whole man—our people will not think of returning to many of the evil and hurtful modes of living now in vogue in the modern Gentile world.

Perhaps we have said enough for the present, but we join with others in the belief that we should in all things live in harmony with "the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all saints in the last days." Great blessings are promised to those who so do, and which blessings we believe we need in order that power needed to accomplish our work may be given us. The present generation feeds upon much trash that as manufactured articles are destructive both to health and morals. In consequence of such evils we have been warned by revelation.

One thought more: Whenever any people have honored God's law they have risen superior to their surrounding conditions and above the level of prevailing human miseries. In Enoch's day we have a perfect expression of this fact, a demonstration of the possibilities of attainment under the rule of "the law of the spirit of life." We understand that this is the work of God's people, who are called to be the light of the world. We believe we ought to rise, in the interests of our own salvation and that of others; that through our example others may see the path of life and walk therein in this day of evil and darkness that is trying the sons of men. The call of the gospel is therefore to reach higher ground. The coming rising generation of God's great spiritual army will hardly think of disregarding any feature of the law given of God for man's government and ultimate perfection.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. A. GRANT, St. Clair, Michigan, September 10:—

We located the tent here Tuesday last and have held three meetings up to date, the audience increasing each evening. We expect Bro. R. Etzenhouser to assist us next week. Two more have been baptized, so we are not discouraged but hopeful. It is very warm, but the evenings are pleasant.

Bro. John Shields, Wabash, Ontario, the 9th inst.:—

I have been here a week now. The saints are feeling well in the work. We have a good and still increasing attendance of outsiders.

Bro. J. C. Chrestensen, Jasper City, Missouri, September 15:—

The Spring River district conference convened September 10, at Webb City, Missouri. Business was transacted without a jar. Old officers reelected. Prayer, testimony, and sacrament meeting a spiritual feast. Preaching all that could be asked for by W. C. Cather, J. M. Richards, and F. C. Keck. Attendance quite large, notwithstanding the dry, hot weather, and dusty roads.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Cadillac, Michigan, September 13:—

We put up the tent in this place in one part of the town and put in three straight weeks, making twenty-four sermons and baptizing seven. We then moved over to another part of the town and am having tent full nearly every night. Bro. Ellis was only with me a few days, when one of us had to go to another place; then Bro. Peter Price, of Burdickville, a young brother, a priest, a nice man, helped me all he could. It looks as though several will obey here.

Bro. F. G. Pitt, writing from Morriston, South Wales, the 6th inst., says:—

Will you kindly publish my address: No. 14 Gloucester Road, Bishopston, Bristol, England. Wife is making her home in Bristol; her health is better. Our conference at Llanelly passed off pleasantly. I am feeling well in the work; see plenty to do; hope to be able to do my part. The hardest part so far is outdoor preaching. I am trying to break myself in to this kind of work, as it seems the only way of reaching the people in some places. I have been greatly blessed thus far with liberty, though warned that severe trials are just ahead. Have been quite busy, but will write a letter soon. Weather very wet and cold.

Bro. R. J. Parker, Oakland, California, the 13th inst.:—

Reunion over last night; have had a splendid time; some very spiritual meetings; all the saints seemed revived and cheered. I leave for El Dorado, California, to-morrow.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

GRACELAND COLLEGE opened its fall term with a largely increased enrollment of students. Prospects are excellent for further additions during the present term, and for a steadily growing patronage. Both our own people and citizens of the surrounding country, where they are known, show decided interest in Graceland. The faculty has also been increased by the addition of Prof. T. J. Kelley, Instructor in History and other branches. Bro. Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, has been appointed in charge of the Department of Instrumental Music. College prospects are brightening. Work is needed, however, and the friends of our educational institution should remember its interests that it may become more firmly established as a growing power for good. It wants students, and can give them excellent tuition at reasonable terms and under favorable surroundings and conditions.

An experienced and capable missionary in the field makes the statement that at a point where he has labored of late thirty-two persons were formerly baptized, at a series of meetings, and of whom but two remain in the fold of the church. This statement furnishes food for thought. Were the thirty cases of "hasty baptisms"? It certainly seems difficult to believe that the parties referred to were converted. The cases cited furnish additional examples of imperfect work, either on the part of those baptizing or the parties baptized. It is manifest that the work of anyone, however great its present aspect may cause it to appear, must stand for just what it is in fact, in the day of accounting; and that hay, wood, or stubble will not abide the time of fiery testing, that shall try "every" man's work. No one can afford to build hastily or superficially. No true and capable man will do it.

Bro. William Sparling is engaged in tent work at Springfield, Missouri. A handbill announces his meetings, sermon topics, and "All questions answered from the stand." "No connection with Utah Mormonism."

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, visited the branch of saints at Scranton, preached there and at adjoining points, in August. He expects to return and aid them as he can. Bro. A. N. Bishop was in local charge, and had baptized one of late.

Bro. Hiram Rathbun, Jr., has labored at Belding, Michigan, at intervals, last fall and this summer, and has baptized three, leaving others investigating. He hopes to continue the good work, though hindered by illness. The traveling ministry who could visit that point would find a home with Bro. O. J. Wheeler. The saints number eight, have rented a hall, and will also organize a Sunday school.

Have you read our "premium offer," on second page of HERALD cover? Please take note of it. You may be personally interested in securing a copy of the Bible and in aiding the publishing department of the church.

The ministry are requested to send in names of those newly baptized, also of those not taking the HERALD, that we may send them sample copies of the church paper. Please remember the Herald Office, addressing such names to the Business Department.

Nuggets of silver, said to be the first ever seen in mounds, were found by Professor Loveberry, Assistant Curator of the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Society, near Ringgold, Pickaway County, Ohio.

Sr. Anna Nielsen, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, writes at length of the Woodbine reunion, expressing her satisfaction with the experiences had among saints present. From all accounts received it is evident that the gathering was a successful one. We note that the Woodbine, Maysville, and Bluff Park meetings voted to continue in '98.

Arrivals at Lamoni during the past week include Bro. Ellis Short and family, from Independence, Missouri;

Brn. H. A. Stebbins and E. Keeler, from the Maysville reunion. Departures, Bro. F. M. Weld to Illinois, Bro. C. Scott to Central Iowa, Bro. Frank Criley to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

The maps prepared to accompany the report of the committee on American Archæology have been received and the report will shortly be published. The maps have been prepared by direction of the committee by Bro. G. F. Weston, of Buchanan, Michigan. They are six in number. Bro. Weston is now at work on a "home and office size map of Book of Mormon lands, size 28 x 38," and expects to have copies ready about October 15. Both the report and the accompanying maps will prove exceedingly helpful to students and advocates of the Book of Mormon. Work will be pushed with due speed, and date of issue be duly announced.

Bro. A. M. Merrill, of Boston, formerly a missionary to Africa under direction of Bishop Taylor, of the Methodist Church, writes a brief summary of the causes that led him to the light and satisfaction that have been his since rendering obedience to the gospel restored. He failed to find rest and comfort in his former spiritual associations and can appreciate the contrast that knowledge of the truth enables him to discern.

The State of Illinois has passed a new educational law, and will enforce it at once, under which the evils of the liquor, tobacco, and other narcotic habits will be held up before the children by precept and by physical demonstration. From the lowest primary grades until pupils have finished the second year of high school work scholars will be taught the destructive effects of using stimulants. Ignorance of those evils will not long exist, if such measures become universal.

Indiana Methodist laymen are pushing a movement to change the plan of church control. They demand a change from "the existing autocratic policy of the church."

Yellow fever has obtained a foothold at Edwards, Mississippi, and in other parts of the State, and was spreading at last accounts to an alarming extent. The State Board of Health has instituted a rigid quarantine, prohibiting all railroad and steamboat transportation lines from allowing any person to get off trains or boats at any point in the State, or from handling mail, baggage, or freight from infected points. Train crews only, from points not affected, are allowed to get off at terminal points. Passengers to other States from healthy districts are permitted to pass through. The situation is panicky and many people are leaving. Mobile, Alabama, and New Orleans also have some cases. The State capital of Mississippi, is said to be depopulated, its business houses closed, its newspapers suspended. Yellow fever has also appeared in Nicaragua.

Hot weather was causing the spread of yellow fever in Mississippi and at New Orleans the 17th inst.

The recent drouth was broken by storms of wind and rain on the 16th which prevailed throughout Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri, and Kansas. The rain was beneficial, but in many places in most of the States named the storm was very destructive to life and property.

The grave condition of affairs at Hazelton, Pennsylvania, caused by the shooting of miners by the sheriff's deputies, is being modified by the presence of troops and the disposition of those in charge to conciliate the miners and preserve the peace. The crisis is thought to be past.

Death and disaster by flood and storm swept the Texas coast on the night of September 12. The towns of Port Arthur, Sabine, and Sabine Pass were inundated and covered to a depth of six feet. Heavy winds from south and north drove the waters of the Gulf and Sabine Lake upon the towns and engulfed them and the surrounding country. Sixteen bodies have been recovered; deaths are estimated at thirty. Towns and ranches for forty miles along the coast were devastated. Much suffering has resulted. The rice crop was totally destroyed in Jackson County. It was valued at $150,000 and in one week more would have been harvested.

THE INFINITE.

(Dedicated to Bro. E. L. Kelley.)

Nay, 'tis not the life that dies,
'Tis not the soul within;
But that corruption which supplies
The vagaries called sin.
The vain thing which we name the man,
'Tis that which hath a finite span.

Our sojourn here is but a breath
'Twixt two eternities;
When comes the shuffling off by death
Of Earth's infirmities.
Then ever restless soul is free—
It lives—it is infinity.

Not here that wondrous mystery
Of life to come is told;
'Tis ours to bear all patiently;—
The future will unfold.
That which to mortal ken is sealed
Will to the spirit be revealed.

There is no death! 'tis only change
That gives us true release;
And to the soul gives freest range
To joys without surcease.
Then let us in this life prepare
To live the life that's over there.

Who doubts he hath immortal soul?
Who doubts that power Supreme?
Who doubts that death will sure unfold
The future of life's stream?
Let him but cast his eyes above
And see the greatness of God's love.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Not only now but always.
May I be thine;
Not only here but elsewhere,
Great God, be mine;
But if my will grows wayward,
Still bring me in;
And though my faith be clouded,
Count it not sin."

TEMPERANCE.

I HAVE many times scanned the pages of the Herald, thinking perhaps I might find something that would bring more satisfaction to my mind in regard to the subject of intemperance than I have ever yet experienced; but with my mind still dissatisfied I will write, expecting that some one with greater ability, and one perhaps who has lived nearer his God than I, and as a consequence would receive greater light, might be able to at least lessen the mysteries of my mind. Why the subject of intemperance is not more fully discussed in the church publication is often spoken of.

A deeper subject cannot be found. To be temperate in all things means so much. Temperate in our talk at home, as well as abroad. Temperate in our work, in our eating, as well as our drinking. What is worse than a person of an irritable temper watching every little wrong? Many a woman is addicted to this kind of a temper and yet is considered the most devoted wife and mother in the world. Her temper is of such a kind that her goodness is of such short duration that we learn to shun her. She would think it no great task to die for her children, but to look at herself she cannot or will not. The gloom which she casts over the whole house is too much for the children, and they grow up eager to get out of the house. Then parents wonder why after they have spent so much for the children to amuse them that they cannot appreciate home. What can this be called but intemperance? How many times do we see children afraid to go around where their parents are? Not afraid of the rod, but of that fault-finding which the child has learned to hate as an adder. Far better take that child into your confidence. Supposing he has done wrong; do you always do right? The most successful teacher of the day is the one that rules by love, not fear. Many a child has been picked up on the street who knew of nothing but wickedness. Ruled by love, told that he was somebody, in place of telling him that he would never be of any account, or that you could scarcely tolerate him, has grown to be a noble man. Think of this, and see if it is not possible the fault might not be altogether in the child. Place yourself in the same boat and you might not go far before you would wish to jump overboard.

I know that parents to a great extent have sown the seed that they harvest in their child. I am not selfish enough to think a child will inherit any more from a mother than from a father. I am willing to look at this as I think I should. If it is too late to remedy some things, I am thankful that I have been told of my faults (of course I could see them, but not so plainly as others). How much better I would feel when the person coming to me would confess their own wrong which was just as great. How they had struggled with the adversary and how much better they felt when trying to look at the bright side of all things. This certainly is trying to be temperate.

How often are we made sad by the tongue of the slanderer. This is one of the worst forms of intemperance. In one way or another it manages to keep up some kind of excitement. It drips sugar just as easily as gall. It will hide a curse under a smooth word and its enjoyment is never greater than when it can blight the life of some one. How man or woman can keep at such work and take delight in it we never could see. But no soul in high estate runs in this channel. It proves that somewhere there is weakness or an evil nature. Education and refinement is no proof against it. It only helps to accomplish its hellish design. How such people are to be pitied! Their tongue has brought reproach upon their own head. The true Christian should ever stand ready to forgive and be found with patience and charity toward all men. No matter how great their sin, God is the judge.

Intemperance generally spoken of means the drinking of intoxicating liquors to excess.

This habit certainly has brought more misery into the world than any other one thing. Why it has so different an effect upon the human system cannot be told. Some can drink for years and still remain the same old drunkard, while another will scarcely be known as a drunkard before it temporarily dethrones his reasoning faculties. The effect of alcohol upon the system and the sad results which follow are known to all. When I look at the effect it has from a sensible standpoint, I wish it were in my power to help wipe it out of existence. Not until then will prohibition rule. I think the time will come when drunkenness will be looked upon as a disease, not a habit. I do not see how a man can vote for the manufacture and sale of whisky and at the same time call himself a Christian. Men have been heard to say, "Whisky does not bother me. I have got sense enough not to make a hog of myself!" A hog will not touch it. If some are blessed with such reasoning faculties that they are able to resist all such evils, perhaps their work is in bettering the condition of affairs of the day. I know that I, voting the true sentiments of my conscience, cannot cast a vote allowing one man to sell what, if another should give away, places him where the law will handle him to the fullest extent. Are we waiting to see a far worse inroad made in our home than that made by death, or are men so void of natural affection that they cannot feel for all mankind? None feel a deeper sorrow for the drunkard or his child than do I. Look at those poor little children suffering for the bare necessities of life. We do not need to look at its present wants alone. See that puny little babe. What a sad story! That child has inherited what must go with it through life. Such a thing as good health it will never enjoy.

When I meditate upon this it causes me to delve deeper into the mysteries of our existence, and my first thought is, O God, where is justice in this? That child as pure and innocent as a dove, and such a curse upon it! Children born under such circumstances, what would be their disposition? The question is, If such a person reaches maturity and it follows the same footprints, are we justifiable in condemning its actions, regardless of what it might be? How often I have thought this over and over again, when we see men, that have lived honored lives, crazed by the fiery demon, become such fiends that they better deserved the name of anything than that of man. Our first thought is of the man, but far more miserable is that mother that has seen the babe of her youth brought to such shame; that young wife chained down amidst want and strife, left with a family, perhaps with no means they are thrust into a heartless world. This only increases her sorrow.

We are told that all things work together for good to those that love God, and that out of our afflictions good will come. This is indeed a consoling promise. I know that it is my duty to be of some use to others. When I think how weak I am and how little I have done for the Master, when I have listened to the testimonies of the saints where they have received such wonderful manifestations either through vision or angelic administrations, and I am led to say, "Great God, what was I created for?" When I have prayed with all the earnestness of my heart when a just God could not help but look with compassion upon my prayer, and not the faintest whisper came, I would think, Where would I be now if I had not been taught in my youth and it had been instilled in my mind that there was a just God? I have tried to so live all my life that when I am no more my life would be a testimony to be told by some one. And now I pray God to enlighten my understanding, endow me with wisdom that I may be able to see myself as I am, and with his help solve the dark mysteries of this life and give me patience and charity which is the greatest of all gifts, that I may be able to forgive as willingly as I ask forgiveness, and I hope that I may never be called to do a mighty work unless my own life is worthy of imitation. It must look like mockery in the sight of God if our everyday associates know our life to be one of strife and contention, slander and backbiting, all our sweet and kind temper to be used among those that we desire to be our friends. We know that man can be deceived, but not God.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

"LAST but not least" might be truly said of the reunion at Woodbine, Iowa, recently closed, that it was the last that the General Superintendent will visit during the season in the interest of the Sabbath school, and, too, it was not the least. All are probably aware that this reunion is the oldest as well as the largest one held in the church. And, too, its territory includes one of the oldest district Sunday school associations of the church—that of the Galland's Grove district. Further, the reunion territory is fortunate enough to contain several of our foremost,—most zealous, and most competent Sunday school workers. These workers have for years past been and the results of their efforts are marked on every hand. Hence we were not at all surprised upon our arrival to find the Sunday school work moving along in a manner bespeaking no uncertainty. Our earnest and untiring fellow worker and brother, J. F. Mintun, was early on the ground and had begun and carried out the program up to the time, and had secured an interest in the work not seen at the reunion before. To him, with his associates of the committee, belongs the credit of a complete and practical program well prepared.

THE PROGRAM

which was carried out consisted of sessions of real Sabbath school and of normal or training work at eight o'clock in the morning and at four in the afternoon. Synopses of the work done at these meetings will be presented in the "department" from time to time.

THE SPECIAL DAY

included the afternoon and night sessions only. A Sunday school prayer and testimony meeting was held at 7:30 o'clock Saturday morning—a very interesting and profitable session.

We believe the interest in the Sabbath school work greater in the reunion this year than ever before. Only a few years ago it was very difficult to secure the attendance of more than from one to two or three dozen people to the Sunday school sessions, and still less at the "training work." This year the attendance the first meeting was 170; 167 the second, 200 the third, 266 the fourth. At this juncture a consisting of four young sisters, going "two by two," made a thorough and systematic canvass of the camp, ascertaining the number of children and of adults on the grounds, and obtaining a promise to attend Sunday school from as many as they could. The results revealed that over 900 people were in camp, and that 459 of them promised to attend Sunday school. When the time came, notwithstanding the heat and the dust, 438 were in attendance—doubtless the largest attendance ever had at a Sunday school session at a reunion of the saints. The interest in other work showed a similar increase. May it thus continue to increase, and God receive the glory.

WINTER is slowly approaching. Are you preparing to keep your schools in session during the winter? You should be. Your school should run the year round. Most schools do, and why not yours? Why dismiss your school for a little cold weather? You do not close up your own business; why then suspend the Lord's work?

Priestly Road Sunday School,

BIRMINGHAM, England.

Dear Editor:—I thought I should like to give you an outline of our progress in the Sunday school. We held our anniversary on May 30, 1897, and I am pleased we had such a pleasant time. The spirit of music and singing prevailed among the children; they seemed filled with joy at the instruction received and the prizes given them. There was a good gathering at the evening meeting and pleasure was expressed in every countenance. We invited Bro. Swan, of Northfield, to deliver an address, but circumstances so overruled that we had not the pleasure of hearing him; but he wrote an apology, which we hand over for publication with our report to the Herald.

Among our brethren and sisters in attendance was our esteemed president, Thomas Taylor; although getting old and having a long way to come, he still takes an interest in our Sunday school. We ask you to pray for him, that his life may be spared, and that he may still be an instrument in the service of God in helping the Sunday school work.

We have considered the advisability of starting a society for the young men and women; (namely, a mutual improvement class and other interesting subjects of mental and moral use,) when time and circumstances permit.

We have a building fund taking up subscriptions, therefore we hope soon to build a meeting room, and then we can hold week night meetings, and more fully organize our school.

We are pleased to state that the offerings are more than double last year's taking. We have a system of giving each child a collecting card, and we find it has worked well up to the present time. Therefore, under the great blessings of God, we look forward to the expansion and progress of our beloved Sunday school.

Dear brethren, we pray that God will bless the aid and efforts of the General Sunday School Convention.

Yours sincerely,
EDWARD MATTHEWS, Supt.
POLLY MUNSLOW, School Sec.

N. B.—Bro. Caffall, our missionary in charge, gave us some spiritual counsel and splendid instruction on the education and training of the young. May God bless him.

[The "apology" referred to is on our desk. We regret very much that we have not the space to publish it in full, for it contains many excellent words of advice exhortations, and items of information pertaining to past and present in England. We insert the following portion, however, and would like to hear from our brethren "across the deep" again. We feel an abiding interest in our brethren and the work in that far-off land.—ED.]

"In the days of long ago, 'when might was considered right,' the fathers taught their sons the use of the carnal weapons of warfare! Taught them how to use the sword and shield; how to couch the heavy lance; how to draw the bow and let fly the quivering arrow; how to acquit himself as a warrior; and so the boy, grown to man's estate and his education considered complete, goes forth to do battle for lord, or king, or country! Learning was left to the Monks and the Holy(?) Friars; and in the early history of this our native land, it was rare indeed to find anyone outside the religious houses who could read or write. The chief business of men's lives was fighting. Rough, wild times were they; but as the children had been taught, so when men, they went forth to do battle for considered right, which often as not was wrong.

"But to-day the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual; and ye who are to be the strong men and warriors of the future, ye who are to be the heroes and heroines in the army of the Lord, let me urge you to become earnest, brave, and faithful soldiers of Christ the King.

"To-day you are but children; to-morrow, or in just a little while, you will be men and women, 'so swiftly does time fly.' And never in the days of chivalry did lordly knight or warrior bold go forth to nobler conflict than that in which you will engage. Never did warrior set forth in cause so glorious. Never was there offered so great a reward, as to they who shall fight the good fight, and keep faithful to the end. 'Tis here in the Sabbath school that you shall be equipped to go forth as conquerors over many foes, and marching forth in the strength of the Lord, and your hearts filled with the love of Christ, you shall oppose yourselves to wrong. The world is full of sin."

BRO. WILLIAM R. ARMSTRONG, of Manchester, England, writes: "During our recent Whit week (Pentecost) celebrations, we had a procession numbering nearly three hundred persons. The majority were Sabbath school scholars. We had an open air meeting here in one of the public parks."

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa.

Editors Herald:—Permit me to inform the saints of my safe arrival at home on the morning of September 4, in time to occupy my chair at the breakfast table, which had been vacant for three years; and as a willingness to sacrifice home comforts for the gospel's sake neither diminishes a love for home nor severs family ties, I may say the meeting of wife, children, and grandchildren was joyous.

We sailed from Liverpool on August 21, at four p. m., arriving at New York on Friday evening the 27th. Custom office inspectors put the passengers through a rigid examination; first, by having every one give a statement of what articles they had that were subject to duty, which was taken down and forwarded to the customhouse, while each received a ticket with a corresponding number, with the list of goods; and at the customhouse building the trunks of each passenger were opened, contents examined, and if articles were found not stated in the list given, it remained with the officers to confiscate or otherwise. The rigidity of this examination may be perhaps attributed, in part at least, to the fact of the government being made aware of much smuggling going on; and it would appear that those doing something smart or cunning, like to tell it—and in the days of idle gossip, stories soon find wings. But it is best to be just and fear not.

Practical seafaring men would perhaps pronounce the trip a pleasant one; but to the writer and many others of the thirteen hundred passengers, the wind the first three days was sufficiently strong to force them, through not a very desirable method, to impart unto the fish that swim in the sea quite a liberal share of that which found a lodgment in their several stomachs. But as there will come an end to all worldly struggles, though trying they may be, on the fourth day at sea the writer ceased to supply the fish.

Securing baggage after arriving in port, was not an easy task; fortunately, however, I was met and greatly assisted by a very active young brother, a son of Bro. and Sr. Squires, and by 10:30 p. m., after making three or four changes, found a resting place at the above brother and sister's house in Brooklyn, New York. The repose enjoyed that night was never sweeter.

Saturday 28, was tired or lazy, probably a little of both; the following day being Sunday, I attended a Sabbath school in the morning, and social meeting in the afternoon, and as per request, preached to the saints of Brooklyn in the evening. Bro. W. H. K., take notice, and pardon me for invading the sacred precincts of your spiritual dominion; you may as well be lenient, because the deed is done.

Monday, under the kind direction of Bro. G. Potts, tramped through the streets of New York and succeeded in procuring a fairly cheap ticket for Chicago—a distance of nine hundred miles. Leaving the big city at 6:30 I reached Chicago on Tuesday night, one hour and a half late, missing connection with a western train, necessitating a twenty-hours' stay in Chicago. Trunk failed to appear, necessitating travel and inquiry. Failed to avail myself of any advantage in half rates allowed to the clergy by railroad companies; three years had brought a change, not favorable to me, in my then position.

Leaving Chicago Wednesday, struck Lamoni on Thursday, September 2, astonished, and received a cordial welcome from some of the natives or saints of that quiet village; appreciated the kind reception of the few, and would have been glad to have accepted the many kind invitations to visit, etc., but time was too limited. Arrived home as above.

My assignment to the European mission was by me an unanticipated event, but being sent, I came as you know; and despite some unpleasant exigencies, I will look upon my ministerial efforts and time spent among you, as some of the most pleasant in my experience in the latter-day work, and for your wellbeing and spiritual development will ever pray. In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

SEMINOLE, Ala., Aug. 19.

Editors Herald:—I see nothing from this part of the vineyard. The work is going forward in this region. I obeyed the gospel three years ago last June; and, in the August following I was ordained an elder; and I am assuredly satisfied that this great latter-day work is of the Lord. I have been an eyewitness to the healing of the sick through the ordinance of laying on of hands, and have seen and know the manifestations of the gifts of the Holy Spirit, at various times.

In November last I had two visions. The first came about in this way. On November I there came here two elders of the Utah Church. They stayed with me two days and nights and preached twice. We talked together a great deal about church matters, so that after they were gone, I, being troubled, went unto the Lord in prayer and asked of him that he would reveal unto me in some way the true church; and, on the 10th of the month, after I had retired to bed but had not yet fallen asleep, a man dressed in white apparel came in at the door, approached the bed, and smote me on the right side, and said to me, "Arise, come, and follow me!" I arose in the spirit and followed him whither he led. We walked side by side about a half mile, when he spoke and bade me stop, which we did. He raised his right hand, and said, "Look." I looked in the direction to which he pointed; and in the north horizon above the trees appeared the Holy City, the New Jerusalem. From the city to the earth there was a span of broad steps; at the bottom of which there was a great gulf, in appearance black as the darkness of the dungeon, and within there was as it were dark and turbid waters boiling and rolling from center to circumference. About half way down the span of steps, and going downward was a large, portly, red complexioned man with large, red whiskers and mustache. I said to the angel, "Who is this man?" He answered, "This is Brigham Young, going down to the dark regions, for apostatizing and bringing in the damning heresies of 'Adam God,' 'Blood Atonement,' and 'Plurality of Wives.'" The angel then turned and left me.

After this, on the night of the 20th of the same month, the same man came to me and in the same manner as at the first. We went to the same place, and at his command stopped. The whole elements, so far as I could discern, with the exception of a small space in the north, became a map with divisions of all shapes that the mind could conceive, except square; and of all colors, except white. When I had observed this map for some time the angel said, "Look." I looked to the north at the open space, and there rose a star, white as the driving snow, apparently six inches in diameter. Soon it began to move and spread, and as it would come near to any one of the divisions of the map such division would first turn dark and then disappear and the star and its brightness would fill the space the division had occupied. This continued until the map and its divisions had entirely disappeared and the star filled the whole canopy; and, blazoned across the canopy appeared the name, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

These things I saw, and this is why I am striving to do the will of my heavenly Father, and to induce others to do the same.

Your brother in gospel bonds,

C. L. LONE.

TONGANOXIE, Kan., May 21.

Editors Herald:—I have copied from the Alkaloidal Clinic, a medical journal published in Chicago, (May number,) an article on "Flour of the Entire Wheat," which I thought would be suitable for the Herald cover, either entire or in part, as you might think best.

It is evident to anyone who thinks much on what is good for the body, that in the white flour and potato diet so common, there is an excess of starch, overtaxing the digestion in one direction, and a lack of nerve, bone, and muscle food, without which starvation to an extent must take place.

I have had poor health to contend with, and have to some extent overcome it; and could perhaps to a greater extent if not traveling, and thus unable to select my food; but I am satisfied by my observation and experience, as also through the "Word of Wisdom," that "wisdom is justified of her children;" and wish that all might hear her voice, and possess that great desideratum, "A sound mind in a sound body."

Fraternally,

STANDLEY, I. T., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—I have thought that a letter from Standley, historic of the great work, would doubtless interest some and possibly all. About seven years ago the branch was organized. There had been a few faithful saints here who had not been idle, and had tried to have their manner of life correspond with the beautiful gospel they endeavored to teach their friends and neighbors; namely, W. R. Pickering and wife, L. S. Moore and wife, Ellis Short and wife; also Bro. Herke, now of Weir City, Kansas, Sr. Eva M. Bailey, and Grandma Short. About January 1, 1891, Bro. S. V. Bailey preached a number of sermons; afterward Bro. J. W. Gillen, and later Bro. J. D. Erwin. At the time of Bro. Erwin's coming he found a people who were ripe for the harvest, and like John the Baptist, in that mountain wilderness, he baptized twenty-five or thirty in two weeks. After this a permanent branch organization was effected, a number of the brethren were ordained, and a steady growth began.

We have been visited by Brn. Heman C. Smith, George Montague, A. C. Hart, I. P. Baggerly, John Moore, M. T. Short, and perhaps others; all did noble work and baptized some; and thus the work moved on steadily and surely.

About September 15, 1896, Bro. W. B. Toney, then a Christian minister laboring in the Choctaw Nation, became interested, and like Apollos of old, came to Standley to see if he could not be instructed in the Lord more perfectly. He heard preaching, asked questions, attended saints' meeting, believed, obeyed, and was ordained, and has since made a faithful and efficient laborer. He is a young man, and has a bright future. The branch now numbers about one hundred and forty. In the last four weeks twenty have been baptized. Brn. Toney, E. D. Bailey, Ellis Short, and A. E. Elliott do local work, assisted by the priests and branch officers; and a more faithful and willing branch is hardly to be found. The gospel is being sounded all around for twenty-five miles.

The saints, or most every one, observe the temporal law, and although mainly poor, this branch has paid about one thousand dollars tithing in the past twelve months. The good Lord has been merciful to his faithful saints, and his word has been verified, as the sick have been healed, the lame made to walk, and the powers of death been beaten back from the homes of some, for which we all feel grateful.

The work was vigorously assailed recently by a Christian minister, and a discussion was agreed upon. Question: The identity of the two churches; the place, Antlers, Indian Territory; time, November 8; Elder Chism, of Texas, representing the Christian Church, and Bro. I. N. White our church. And in this connection I desire that it should be understood that Bro. White did not get up this discussion, and rather urged that some one else be selected; but he was urged to accept, and finally consented.

With entire confidence in the most favorable results of the angel message, I am,

Your brother,

ELLIS SHORT.

MINTER, Texas, Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—I came here some two weeks ago; have been preaching in the Methodist church for fourteen nights; had fair audiences and good attention. The gospel as preached by us was never represented here before. Many friends seemed to be made, and some are considerably interested. I have an impression that a branch will be raised up here. I have agreed to return in October. I go from here to Blossom, eighteen miles north, by request of some of the best citizens of the place. Thus the way opens up, as promised, that we would be "received by those without as well as those within." And this has been true in my case this year to a marked degree, thank the Lord.

The saints will please take notice, my address is Lamoni, Iowa. All matters addressed to me there will reach me. I have not seen a Herald or an Ensign for over a month.

I. P. BAGGERLY.

ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 30.

Editors Herald:—Am away in northern part of Ontario, preaching away wherever the doors open. Calls for preaching are more than I can fill, and there seems to be a better feeling among the people of late, in that it seems easier to bring them into the great gospel net. In the fore part of this month I went northwest of this place to vicinity of Port Elgin, and amid much opposition I preached the gospel to those who never heard an elder preach before, as a result six were baptized—one being a consumptive of two years standing—his death was expected a year ago; but through the providence of God he lingered until an elder came, although getting worse all the time. The baptism did not hurt him in the least. Coming to this vicinity, ten days ago, we at once began work, preaching every night; many are interested, while four have been baptized, one a promising young man, who has just received a second class certificate. We expect more to follow suite shortly.

The work seems to be spreading in these northern parts; a spirit of inquiry is manifest among the people. May it continue, and may Israel take advantage of it by sending in their tithes, that more elders may be sent to the Master's vineyard.

Yours in bonds,

DANIEL MACGREGOR.

KNOX, Indiana, Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—We are now conducting the two days' meeting with the saints at Knox. A splendid feeling prevails. Our audience last eve was large. 'Tis good to see our people so highly respected here. But, be it said, the saints have earned a name with the people of this city which is enviable, and a feeling of more than kindly interest manifests itself. Hope grows not dim, but that there will be additions to the numbers of the Knox branch. May God bless these saints to realize full hope.

We have quite a number of new bright faces attending. Coldwater next.

On the wing,

HAVERHILL, Mass., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—On Sunday I spoke three times here, although I was very unwell; but my Father held me up while I addressed the many that sat before me. In the evening I spoke to a full hall on the necessity of obedience to the one gospel plan ordained of God to save the race. Two ministers—a Methodist and Freewill Baptist—were present. The Baptist thought I was right on baptism, but if he had time he would like to talk with me till twelve o'clock that night. Well, I was very tired and weary, but I would only have been too glad had the reverend put in his desired time. At the close some were for and others against. I found the few saints strong in the faith and pushing the work the best they can.

Cleveland, August 15.—I spoke here in the forenoon, and in the evening listened to our beloved brother, Willard J. Smith. Here I stopped with Brn. Gillespie and Smith.

On Monday Bro. Griffiths called on me on his way to his mission, and told me of places he wanted me to visit and preach to the people. This J. C. will cheerfully do to the best of his ability.

Next I visited Akron, and found Bro. Palmer, president of the little branch, in good spirits.

Sunday, the 15th, we went out to Bro. Frank Sprengle's, near Krumroy, and spoke on the promised kingdom of God to his obedient children, continuing meetings through the week at the schoolhouse to fair sized congregations. At this place I met with a Mr. Abraham Grabell, of Canton, the home of President McKinley. He spoke in highest terms of the President; how everybody in the city loved him; and more so because he was so kind to his invalid wife, "for," said he, "he fairly worships her." Mr. Grabell is very hard of hearing. He was treated by the great pretended healer, Mr. Schrader, a few days ago. He said that Schrader administered to him twice, and all to no benefit. To me he said, "And I don't know of anyone being healed or reaping any benefit whatever." "Why," I said, "I saw by the paper before I left Maine how people went to him on crutches and canes, and walked away without them." "Yes," he said, "because Schrader would not let them have them, and tried to make them believe they were healed when they were not. And no wonder why they received no benefit; for after Schrader left the hotel they found twenty whisky bottles in his room that he had emptied in a few days."

I go now to hold over next Sunday at Akron.
Yours truly,
J. C. FOSS.

CONIFER, Colo., Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—I have been much pleased with the good news brought us of late, for it is like a drink of pure water to a thirsty soul to read the good news from afar, to know that the glorious gospel is spreading, and that souls are being added to the church daily. And then again it is very cheering to read the grand testimonies of the brethren and sisters.

I am glad to report that the work is onward in this Eastern Colorado district, for according to the reports brought in at our late conference, held in Denver, August 28 and 29, there have been over forty added to the church in the past six months; this is not so bad. On the 18th of August I had the pleasure of baptizing a brother and sister who came from Buena Vista, over one hundred miles, to be buried with Christ in baptism, believing the one who officiated had authority to perform these sacred ordinances. The brother's and sister's name is Burbridge; he being a son-in-law to Bro. W. R. Steele, late of Park City, Utah; but now located in the land of Zion, Missouri. Bro. Burbridge has been a member of the M. E. Church for a number of years, and a member in their choir, and we have one more added to the sweet singers of Israel. The pastor of his church was very loth to give him up, because of his zeal and energy in that church. He has been a reader of the Herald and the Ensign for some time, and having heard the writer preach two or three times, became convinced of the truth and saw that the M. E. Church did not have and enjoy the same gifts and blessings that Christ promised should follow the believer. He likewise saw that the ministers did not have the authority to officiate in the ordinances of the gospel.

Our late conference in Denver was a good one. It was well represented. One of the Twelve, Bro. J. W. Gillen, and Brn. Roush, Bozarth, and Thomas, of the Seventy, were present. The preaching services were by J. W. Gillen, O. B. Thomas, and J. B. Roush; three grand discourses, which were edifying to the saints, as was also an excellent prayer and testimony meeting on Sunday afternoon.

Yours in gospel bonds,
JAMES KEMP.

MAYSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 14.

Editors Herald:—The best of the wine was at the close of the feast. As the end neared, the saints became better acquainted, and stood closer together in spirit. A universal feeling of love prevailed and grew in intensity; and so it occurred that the most solidly spiritual meeting of all was the Monday morning prayer meeting, when the "remnant," to the number of fifty, spent near three hours in prayer and testimony. The meeting as a whole was a grand success.

The good Master approved by sending his Spirit to cheer and comfort by day, and a chorus of angels to sing psalms of praise by night.

Bro. I. N. White gave us much good counsel, and Bro. Charles Jones was listened to attentively in sermon and testimony. I hope he received as much cheer as he gave. Bro. I. N. Roberts, with his jocund disposition, gave life and activity to the campers, and administered spiritual food in his sermons. Bro. Stebbins portrayed vividly the hope of the saints, and in well-chosen words imparted cheer and comfort. Bro. J. S. Roth was heard in his able and scriptural way in defense of the gospel, enlivening his discourses by the spice of witticism.

All the sermons delivered by the thirteen different elders who preached were well received. There were twenty-four sermons, eleven prayer meetings, a quarterly conference, a Sunday school convention, and two business sessions held during the ten days. There were sixteen baptisms—all save one were children of the saints. The young saints took a very active part, and held some very interesting prayer meetings. They passed not the social mark in their joyful associations together. "The middle aged and the old forgot not the gladness of their youth," and were happy in each other's company. The main topic of conversation was the gospel. It was unanimously voted to hold another reunion in 1898, at the same place. Keep a lookout for the date, and begin now to prepare to attend the "North Missouri Reunion" in 1898.

NECESSITY FOR CONFIDENCE IN THE PROVISIONS OF THE LAW.

DURING the last few years this country has undergone a financial crisis that has brought mourning and sorrow to many, because of the straits and difficulties brought upon the people by unjust and unwise legislation, if we may credit the reports and statistics of the public press. The rich have become richer, the poor have become poorer; while all classes, both rich and poor, have suffered more or less on account of existing evils, which we are told are caused by lack of confidence.

While reflecting on the terrible effect of this condition of things, I am led to say, How long, O Lord, will this continue? And the voice of inspiration, as taught in the sacred books, speaks as with a voice of thunder: Till mankind learns righteousness, honors God, and has confidence in the law he has kindly given; namely, Love thy neighbor as thyself. Then oppression will cease in all its forms, and good will and peace take the place of envy and strife, confidence be restored both financially and spiritually,

Then the earth will be as Eden,
And the Lord will bless his own.

This divine and heavenly rule is from the highest authority known to man; it applies to all, prince and potentate, and is the only rule that will break the oppressor's yoke, and bring peace and good will to suffering humanity. This rule applies to man's entire being, both with regard to temporal wants and spiritual needs. It is much in little; it contains the basic principle of all the good that ever did or ever will come to man. It is the corner stone on which is laid the hope of the saint and the admiration of the skeptic. And while lack of confidence in this God-given rule is the cause of much distress and suffering financially, it does not stop here.

The religious world is more or less afflicted by this terrible disease. Lack of confidence has crippled the efforts of the church all through the generations of the past. Do you ask proof of a lack of confidence? By this simple rule: When they substitute for doctrine and rule of government the creeds and opinions of men, the religious world to-day not only betrays a lack of confidence in the rules of life given by the great Teacher, but entirely ignores some of the plainest commands received from God, and say they are no longer needed. Nothing can more fully and plainly demonstrate this fact. Did you ever pause and think, when you read the statement made by the great Teacher, when questioning his disciples as to who men said he was, and who they thought he was?

Peter replied: Thou art the Son of the living God. Christ said: "Flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven; and upon this rock [this revelation of God to man] will I build my church." It is further stated by the same authority that "man shall not live by bread alone; but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God."

The great Builder of the church evidently expected to have something to say in regard to the building and construction of the church that was to be called by his name. One of the

New Testament writers says the church is "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the corner stone." Also, that "God hath set in the church" "apostles" and "prophets," "pastors" and "teachers," etc., "for the work of the ministry," and "the edifying of the body of Christ." The same writer certifies that the gospel he preached was not of man, neither was he taught it by man; but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

To these men it was said, "As my Father sent me, even so send I you;" go, and teach "all things whatsoever I have commanded you." By these scriptures we learn these men were called of God; and by the authority of Jesus Christ were sent as his ambassadors, and were to be guided in all their labors by the Spirit of revelation; and upon the condition that they observed the rules he had given, he would be with them to the end. He told them if they wished to honor and show love and respect to him, it could only be done by keeping his commandments, "even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." And the record tells us that many believed the testimony of these men, and by obedience became witnesses of the divinity and power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. And so long as they followed the instruction given, their confidence in the gospel was unshaken; they could endure trials and suffering that only tended to increase their love for one another, and the truth they were sent to teach. But in an evil hour the seducer crept in and sowed tares, and by the end of the first century, according to the record of John the beloved disciple, written on the isle of Patmos, they were in a sad condition, more or less in transgression, lost their first love, showed their lack of confidence in the plan that Christ had taught, and substituted something of man's invention. Several serious charges were preferred against the once flourishing churches in Asia. To sum up the matter, it was said by the great Builder of the church, "I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead."

And further on down the centuries, after discarding the rock on which the church was intended to be built, they substituted Popes for apostles, and prophets were discarded altogether. Instead of the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins, as taught by Jesus, also by Peter and Paul, they have taught infant sprinkling, because more convenient; evidently having no confidence in the God-given plan; and so to-day, among the churches that call themselves Christian, confusion and lack of confidence in the gospel of Jesus Christ, as taught in its fullness, reigns supreme. They have a form of godliness, but have no confidence in the power thereof. And this lack of faith or confidence has permeated the whole Christian system. Read what the Church of England says in one of her Homilies,—that the whole of the Christian world, for many hundreds of years, has been sunk in the most damnable idolatry. No confidence in the membership; the membership have no confidence in the clergy, because they have "transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant." "Trouble" and "perplexity" on every hand, "wars and rumors of war," such were the words of Christ to those that had retained their confidence in his methods of adjustment. When ye shall see all these things, come to pass, lift up your heads, for redemption draweth nigh. The testimony of the prophets of old must needs be fulfilled.

The Prophet Isaiah said the people which sat in darkness saw a great light; and to them that sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up. This has had its fulfillment, and those that were looking for and saw the light, with them confidence has begun to increase. The gospel that Christ said shall again "be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations," is again restored; truth has again dawned upon the world, and upon those that are seeking after God with a desire to know and do his will. The everlasting gospel, with all its gifts and blessings, is offered to the race through the medium of apostles, prophets, and teachers as in days of old. Believers speak in other tongues, as the Spirit of the Lord gives them utterance; the blind have received their sight, the sick have been healed, the lame made to leap for joy; in short the signs follow the believers, as taught in Mark sixteenth chapter. Confidence has increased in those that have heard the word and with joy received and obeyed it, because of the marvelous light that has dawned upon them.

The church that Christ commenced to build, nearly nineteen centuries ago, suffered more or less defeat because of lack of confidence among those that were coworkers; it was simply deferred, postponed; not destroyed; not prevailed against.

And, gentle reader, I am reminded that the same cause will produce the same effect in our day; and it seems to me the exhortation of one of the early apostles may well and properly apply to the Church of Jesus Christ to-day: "Therefore, we ought to give more earnest heed" to the things that have been spoken, and left on record for our profit and learning, ever remembering the word of the Lord to the elders of this church, "Ye shall see that my law is kept." I know it is said that law is arbitrary and compulsive; but I think and believe that when men and women are taught obedience to gospel rules, and they begin rightly to put them to the test of practical everyday life,—their confidence in the wisdom and judgment of a loving Father will increase, and that which to some appears irksome and compulsory will become to those that govern themselves by the law of God a manifest token of his good will. Our daily wants and necessities, such as what we shall eat or drink; our daily needs, such as rest, sleep, and recreation, are all wisely provided for, and suitable advice given to bring us the best results. But how is it with the best of us in these matters? We lack confidence in the rules given of God, and eat and drink to excess, overtax our systems, and thus bring upon ourselves sickness and distress. We then call upon the elders, and apply for the ordinance appointed for the healing of the sick; and if not healed, we think there is something wrong with some one else. I hope no one will brand me as a faultfinder in this respect. I have taken this method of bringing these things to your remembrance out of good will to all concerned, hoping to receive reproof in kindness when given.

I notice in the revelations given to, and acknowledged by the church in 1835, there are laws permissive and laws imperative; the same in the revelations given to the Reorganized Church. And I venture my opinion, that when branch, or district, or the church as a body, apply the permissive law where the imperative rule should govern, we then, be it whosoever it may, show a lack of confidence in God's appointing, whether we so intend or not. I admit the motive may be termed good so far as it goes.

But this decree has been ringing all through the centuries since the days of Enoch, and has been renewed in our day. When ye do "whatsoever I command you," then "I am bound;" "otherwise ye have no promise." The Lord has given us his law, and has said it was to govern his church, as set forth in covenants and church articles, and requires that we not only say but do what is written. Our hope in receiving the good the gospel brings is based upon cheerful, intelligent obedience to the rules given. Whenever defeat or disaster has come upon the church, or its individual members, it has been because they have followed human wisdom, and treated lightly the things received from God.

This lack of confidence brought the whole church under condemnation in 1832; and because of evils that crept in, many made shipwreck of faith. The last revelation given in 1894 seems to be a reproof to certain officials, showing their lack of confidence in God's plan for preaching the gospel and caring for the membership, as I understand the revelation. "It is the duty of the Twelve to ordain and set in order all the other officers of the church." "Did you say it was the duty of the Twelve to ordain and set high priests or elders to preside in large branches and districts?" Yes, sir; so reads the law of God; and it says, "Then will those officers set in the church be useful," because they will then occupy the place intended; "and he who gave the law be honored, the differences between the quorums be healed, confidence be restored, and good will and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain." And in my judgment, before confidence can be restored, this injunction to observe the law already given must prevail—must govern; and the resolution authorizing the membership of branches and districts to select and appoint their own officers be laid upon the table of experience as the result of human judgment.

PASTORAL.

Last April, the First Presidency placed me in charge of Eastern Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Iowa. Bro. James Caffall was assigned to the same field with the understanding that we should agree upon a division of territory upon Bro. Caffall's return to America. We have agreed upon the following division:—

Eastern Nebraska, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, in charge of Bro. James Caffall, of 308 Oak Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The State of Iowa alone will be left in my charge. This is the division, so far as charge is concerned; but it will be understood that both Bro Caffall and myself are at liberty to labor anywhere within the limits of the entire mission upon an understanding with each other.

Your brother,

J. R. LAMBERT.

REUNION NOTICES.

The Southern Missouri district reunion will convene at Mt. Grove, Wright County, Missouri, October 8, to continue ten days. We expect a large gathering of saints, and good speakers will be in attendance. All try and come. Let us have a good time.

Presidents of districts, and branches not in districts, would oblige the mission secretary by supplying him with the postal address of the several elders in their respective districts and branches. All officers and members of the church not in districts or branches are also requested to send their names and postal address to the mission secretary at the under mentioned address. Members of the church would do well to keep us informed of favorable opportunities for preaching, especially in new localities. Address,

WM. R. ARMSTRONG,

Ministry reports to be made in writing. Let us hear from you, brethren, whether you are able to attend this meeting or not. Those who have been assigned charge of the local work in their various parts of the district will please make a general report, briefly itemizing labor done under their charge, giving the condition and needs of your respective localities, and the prospects for the future, so the district may see what all are doing for its interests and the advancement of the cause. Forward reports to George Tryon, Huntsville, Missouri.

J. A. TANNER, Pres.

London district conference will meet with the Toronto branch, October 2 and 3. Trains will be met. All are invited to attend. Statistical and ministerial reports are requested from all branches.

MAGGIE MACGREGOR, Sec.

Florida district conference convenes with the Edendale branch, October 2 and 3. Would advise all clerks of the various branches in the district to have their books in proper condition, reports made out promptly and correctly, approved by the branch, signed by the president, and forward to me, so they will not fail to report. It seems to me that there is a gradual improvement throughout the district in the work. There is greater interest by all concerned. The local as well as the traveling ministry is doing good work and pushing forward the cause of Christ. There is an effort being made now to raise funds to buy a tent to use in the district. I hope all that possibly can will contribute something, as I believe some people could be reached that way that probably would never hear the true restored gospel without it. Then it would do to use in our reunions and other important events. Hoping this will be in time for all to get ready for conference, I am,

Your colaborer in the work,

B. L. JERNIGAN, Sec.

The Southern Illinois district conference will convene at Arrington, Illinois, October 8 and 9, at ten a. m., during the time of reunion. Branch clerks, you should make out your reports early and have them approved by your branches, so that you can bring them with you to the reunion. Important business will come before the conference. It is hoped that all of the saints will attend that can do so. The officers of the district are to elect. Everyone invited to attend.

DIED.

MCINTOSH.—Elder John A. McIntosh, "Uncle John A.," was born April 14, 1806, in Logan County, Kentucky; was married to Miss Susannah Boren, in Tennessee, in 1826. A son and daughter were born to them, of whom Cornelius, now of Crescent City, Iowa, survives him. He united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1838, in Johnson County, Illinois, being baptized by Elder Zachariah Wilson. He was ordained in 1838 in Johnson County, Illinois, and was at once sent into the missionary field, and did excellent work in Tennessee and Kentucky; and was laboring in Arkansas in 1844, when the news of the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith reached him, upon which he returned to Nauvoo. His first wife dying he married in 1843, a cousin, Nancy McIntosh, probably in Tennessee. Two children blessed the union, when the mother was called away by death. After this second bereavement, Elder McIntosh was again married, to Malinda Black, in December, 1853. Of this union ten children were born, five of whom are living to mourn the departure of their father. He removed to Galland's Grove, Shelby County, Iowa, in 1856; at which place he heard the news of the Reorganization, and united with it, renewing his covenant by baptism under the hands of Elder E. C. Briggs, November 27, 1859. He was active in the local ministry work for a number of years; and also did some missionary work away from his home. He was ordained a high priest October 8, 1869. He removed to Denison, Crawford County, Iowa, in December, 1895, where, on August 8, 1897, he fell asleep in Christ from the natural decay incident to old age, aged 91 years, 3 months, and 25 days. "Uncle John A." was a man of naturally brilliant parts, of strong convictions of right and wrong with the courage of his convictions, of unshaken honesty and fidelity to truth, and maintained his faith in Christ and his gospel to the end of his life. He was entitled to and received the "Rest of the people of God" into which he has now entered. To his ashes Peace; to his spirit Glory.

HAMILTON.—At her home in New Washington, Crawford County, Ohio, July 2, 1897, Sr. Jane Powers Hamilton, aged 52 years, 6 months, and 13 days. Sr. Hamilton, whose maiden name was Jane Powers, was married to Samuel Hamilton, November, 1886, being at the time widow of Joseph Hopkins, to whom she was married December 27, 1869, by Rev. Wm. Shelton, of St. Paul's church, Buffalo, New York. Mr. Hamilton departed this life May, 1894, at Omaha, Nebraska, where they at the time resided, and Mrs. Hamilton, after arranging her business at that place, returned to her former home, New Washington, Ohio, where she continued to live until the call came to pass to the other side. Sr. Hamilton united with the Reorganized Church about eight years ago, and since that time has been an earnest and active worker in the church, using her efforts and means to sustain the same and to spread the gospel. She left at her death one daughter, two sisters, two brothers and many friends where she lived, to mourn their loss. The funeral services were in charge of Elder G. T. Griffiths, of Temple, Ohio, and sermon preached by E. L. Kelley, Lamon, Iowa, in Good Hope church, near New Washington.

PHILIPS.—Near Hay Springs, Nebraska, September 3, Emmet, son of Charles and Sr. Etta Philips, aged 2 years and 3 months.

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.
NEW REVISED EDITION.

The manuscript of this edition was carefully compared with the original authorized edition of 1835, which was adopted by a General Assembly of the church at Kirtland, and known as the Kirtland edition. Some typographical errors that crept into and passed through later editions have been corrected, and some omissions supplied.

The revelation on late Civil War, the "Minutes of the General Assembly" of 1835, the minutes of the "Joint Council" of 1894, and the revelations given to the Reorganized Church to date, are all included in the volume. The "Lectures on Faith" are omitted, but may be published later in pamphlet form, or for those who may want them.

The concordance has been revised and enlarged, greatly aiding study and general use of the book. The concordance, and lists of names of persons and places mentioned in the revelations, are included in the volume.

Ready reference to the book is greatly facilitated by the substitution of figures for the old style Roman letters in section and page headings. The figures can be read at a glance.

THE THREE BOOKS
AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

SERMONS.

Twenty-six sermons by leading ministers of the Reorganized Church, formerly published as "supplement sermons" in the SAINTS' HERALD.

Neatly bound: Paper covers 30 cents; cloth 75 cents postpaid.

An excellent volume to circulate among investigators.

Two hundred and eight pages of choice reading matter on subjects of interest to investigators.

The principles of the gospel set forth in plainness and in interesting, attractive, narrative style.

BRADEN-KELLEY DEBATE.

Propositions: 1. Is the Book of Mormon of divine origin, and are its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people? 2. Is the Church of which I, Clark Braden, am a member, the Church of Christ, and identical in faith, organization, ordinances, worship, and practice, with the Church of Christ as it was left perfected by the Apostles of Christ? 3. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in fact the Church of God and accepted with him?

Cloth, 396 pages, price.....$1 50

$1.50. $1.50.

THE SAINTS' HERALD
REDUCED IN PRICE.

Recognizing the closeness of the times and with a desire to place the church paper within the reach of every member, the Board of Publication has decided to offer THE SAINTS' HERALD at a reduced price for one year from the date named, as follows:—

On July 12, 1897, the price of the HERALD was fixed at $1.50 per year, payable in advance.

This reduction applies to both old and new subscribers, on the following conditions:—

Cash must accompany all orders for new subscriptions, as stated.

Former subscribers who are in arrears, who pay up on old subscriptions and renew one year in advance, will receive the benefit of the reduction in price from the date named—July 12, 1897.

Those who have already paid in advance will receive the benefit of the reduction in price at the dates of expiration of present subscriptions, and for the year following said dates, if renewing in advance.

This is a reduction of twenty-five per cent, both in the price of the church paper, and of the revenue derived from it. It is therefore necessary that all avail themselves of the new departure and greatly enlarge the list of new subscribers; and also that those indebted pay up all past due accounts.

Branch book agents and the ministry who can do so, are respectfully asked to second the efforts of the Board by obtaining new subscribers for the HERALD and working in the general interests of the Herald Office—the church publishing plant.

FROM CHICAGO PULPITS, ETC.

INCREASE OF EVIL.

BISHOP FALLOWS, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Chicago, recently preached a sermon on "the increase of evil." Among other things he said:—

"The third is increased parental watchfulness over the children and particularly over boys from ten to sixteen years of age. If curfew could prevail in Chicago for five years the bridewell, Glenwood, Feehanville, and Pontiac would not be overcrowded as they are to-day.

"Lastly, we need a sterner administration of law. Robberies accompanied with violence have been so numerous that we may need the methods of Mr. Justice Day in Liverpool, England. For deeds of personal violence there the lash was unsparingly used, accompanied with long terms of imprisonment for the habitual criminal. This broke up the gangs which had so long infested that city. Corporal punishment in such cases, instead of brutalizing, became a potent agency in reformation."

DR. HENSON ON STALWART MEN.

"A young man was lately arrested in New York at the instance of his wife because he was amusing himself and astonishing the other habitués of the fashionable hotel where he was quartered by using bank bills to light his cigarettes, and thus literally proving that he 'had money to burn.'

"A sadder sight is witnessed when a young man, religiously reared, and inheriting a reverential faith in the priceless truths that make for noblest manhood and underlie our whole Christian civilization, begins to put contempt upon them, and one by one to fling them from him, or with ghoulish glee burn them up in the fierce fires of infidelity, by way of demonstrating the largeness of his liberality. There is no bankruptcy so utter as bankruptcy of faith, and no soul so miserable as one that is all adrift upon a sea of doubt.

"A man thus parting with the faiths of his childhood may call himself a rationalist, and yet there is no behavior so absurdly irrational. Many thousands are literally 'all at sea' and destined ultimately to be engulfed in the deep or wrecked.

"Never were so many rudderless and compassless craft tossed about in a hopeless, helpless way on the sea of life. Never were there so many human souls just ready to despair for lack of something solid to cling to, and hence the frightful and phenomenal frequency of suicide and lunacy.

"Sneer at religion as one may, the fact remains that nothing on earth has such power to gird and guide, and to develop men who can stand the brunt of life's stormy shock. The higher and nobler the truths embraced and the firmer the grip that embraces them, the sturdier the type of character that is evoked. In this regard Christianity so preëminently towers above all others as to deserve to be denominated the faith once for all delivered to the saints.

"Better any faith than 'no faith' towards which our modern thought seems drifting and which will throttle every noblest aspiration, remove every wholesome restraint, break down every moral fiber, and hopelessly wreck our boasted nineteenth century civilization."

FIFIELD ON CHICAGO'S PERILS.

"Although we speak of the peril of living in Chicago, we are not attempting to degrade and slander our city. Here are two cities in one—the gilt and the guilty. In the one are our noble institutions, the churches, the splendid schools, the philanthropic agencies. These are stepping-stones toward a noble and useful career. In the other portion of our city are the highways of evil, the roadbeds along which Satan loves to go.

"Some feel that Chicago is the worst city of our nation, but such must speak from ignorance or prejudice. All our great cities, with their crazy quilts of populations, are not gardens of Eden with the tempter fastened out.

"We should be interested in those who move to the great city. Far better were it for many had they never changed the starlight of the meadow for the gaslight of the town. It were better for a countless number if they had only heard the roar of the mountain stream and never had listened to the roar of metropolitan life, whose angry flood has swept so many away.

"What are some of the perils of living in Chicago? One comes from being so little known. A life among so many strangers, away from the restraints of intimate friends helps many to take the guilty road.

"In a great city we grow familiar with vice. The Devil, were we to meet him every day, would not seem half so horrible. Unless one is girded with mighty resolutions, familiarity will dull caution and we will yield to the peril.

"In Chicago temporal things are constantly emphasized. Amid all this mammon worship and singing before the golden image, can irresolute and ambitious people keep from being infected?

"Anti-Christian influences abound in Chicago as in all great cities. City people live fast. They burn the candle at both ends. They bring tired bodies to new duties, and seldom break the chains of daily toil. Almost impossible is it to preserve the Sabbath.

"Those in Chicago should cultivate a helpful acquaintance, strengthen good resolutions, look up as well as down, and amid our city's many voices hear the still small voice of God."

DR. JACKSON ON THE SABBATH.

"A Chicago Summer Sunday" was the theme of Dr. Jackson last evening at the Hyde Park Baptist Church. He described what the Sabbath should not be and what it should be, as follows:—

"The modern question is: 'How can we use Sunday so as to make it contribute to the truest enjoyment and the loftiest culture of the human race?'"

"First, it ought not to be a lazy day. To lie about the house all day unwashed and unshaven is not true rest.

"Second, it ought not to be a holiday in the hot pursuit of pleasure, which is indeed the hardest work. But no one can begrudge the workingman a few quiet hours in the park on the summer Sunday or an hour of instruction in the art gallery or museum on a winter Sunday afternoon.

"Third, do not make it a feast day. We do not advocate the cold meals of the Puritan Sabbath. On the only day in the week when the family can have time to enjoy a dinner together, make it attractive without overloading the table. Have mercy upon the wife and mother. Give her a quiet Sunday.

"Fourth, do not make it a visiting day. Be careful how you rob another's home of its sacred hours. Why should people who do not care to go to church keep away, by their untimely visiting, thousands of others who would like to go?"

"What is needed is good common sense in the observance of Sunday. We can lay down no laws. Sunday laws have always been a burden. We need to enjoy its rest hours with moderation and to spend some time in the culture of our higher nature and the service of our fellow-men."

MRS. CRANE ON "HEREDITY."

"It was formerly thought blindness, deformities, and all forms of disease were direct visitations of providence on account of sin. It is now understood these manifestations are the natural consequence of the violation of natural laws. The law of heredity is essential to the perpetuation of the human race, and carries along both the evil and the good. But in its source the working is greater than immediate parentage, for these parents had parents. So the ancestry of a child would in a few hundred years reach back to thousands, and these on to hundreds of thousands and millions.

"The law is beneficent even with all its severity, for suffering is correction, and the whole natural and moral order is pregnant with helpful agencies. The evil will at last be worked out and only the good will remain."

DR. RAY ON LIBERAL CHURCHES.

His theme was the assaults made on the Christian church in all ages from foes without, but he also declared that some of the hardest blows came from spies and traitors within the church itself. In spite of all, however, he maintained the Christian religion was stronger to-day than ever before.

Referring to the charge that the liberal church in Chicago is declining, he said:—

"It is a thousand times better to have a little belief in a spiritual, everlasting God, in right and wrong and eternity, than to have no belief. In my judgment the liberal churches have not enough belief. They ought to hold more.

"I am told a morning paper says the liberal religion is decaying in Chicago and in the United States; that the people who hold that religion will not pay; that it is only the orthodox who can be relied upon to carry on the church of God. This is not the whole history of the liberal church. The liberal church has included some of the greatest statesmen, some of the noblest and wisest of men.

"But the single fact is that while the orthodox churches are marching straight forward, increasing in power and wealth and usefulness, the liberal churches are decaying. A church may have a minister whom it calls its head, and it will thrive, but not for long. That religion and that church which does not rely upon Christ as its head, but relies upon any man will fail. That is the history of eighteen centuries; it is the history of to-day."

TEN DOLLARS A WEEK FOR EIGHT.

It does not seem possible that the table for eight people can be provided for ten dollars a week. But Mrs. Rorer, the most famous cook in America, says it can be done. She has tried it and knows. She proves her case in the Ladies' Home Journal for October. She gives twenty-one menus covering a week's meals, and gives full, practical directions by which any woman can make as attractive meals as Mrs. Rorer explains, for this small sum of ten dollars.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

THE Herald Office has decided to offer its patrons an excellent opportunity to secure a useful and valuable premium — the celebrated "Self-Pronouncing Sunday School Teachers' Bible," the same as the "Oxford Bible," with "helps" and "maps," in good large print, bourgeois type, with marginal references; printed on thin paper, flexible binding; size 8½ x 6¼.

For one (1) new subscriber to the HERALD and $3.25 in cash, we will send the HERALD for one year to any address and a copy of the Bible to the remitter.

Or, anyone sending us ten (10) new subscribers for the HERALD at $1.50 each, cash accompanying orders, will receive a copy of the Bible.

We want one thousand new subscribers for the HERALD within the next ninety days. The church paper has been reduced in price and should circulate in every home of and be read by all Latter Day Saints.

Here is an excellent opportunity to aid the cause and to secure a first class help in general work, a serviceable and up to date Bible.

We hope to hear from all interested at once.

Does the HERALD circulate among all the families of your branch? If not, it ought to reach them. Can you not help us to place it in the hands of all the membership, also among those not of the faith? Strangers will read it and take it. Try them, and let us hear from you.

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 29, 1897.

THE PREACHERS' RULE.

THERE is a class of ministers among the so-called evangelical denominations that assumes the prerogative of authority to hold the members of their flocks in spiritual check, and dictating to them who they shall not hear as teachers. Among those whom these ministers proscribe are the elders of the Reorganized Church, the reason assigned for such prohibition to hear being that those elders teach heresies.

Several times during this season's campaign in the ministerial field we have met with this "evangelical" advice, "Stay away from those 'Mormon' elders. They are heretics and deceivers. Do not go to hear them."

This advice was given congregations in Perry, Iowa, where Elders Roth, Scott, Morgan, and others held meetings in July. It was given at Defiance, Iowa, where Brn. Wight, McDowell, and others held services during the summer; and was also reiterated in the field where that veteran preacher, J. C. Crabb, has been at work, and in some others as well.

While that sort of a "know nothing and don't find out" policy may do with some congregations, experience has taught us that there are men in all communities, who, if their privilege of self judgment is interfered with by the dictation of another, will go straightway and do the thing they are commanded not to do. Some of this sort have been found in the congregations referred to; and, having heard the forbidden preachers, they have accepted the doctrines taught and are now rejoicing in the truth, and are free.

Bro. Columbus Scott, in referring to the prohibition of the preachers to stay away from the Latter Day Saints' meetings, entered his protest against such unsound policy about in this fashion: "The Latter Day Saints of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ are of such nature that if the presiding elder of the Lamoni, St. Louis, Council Bluffs, or any other branch, for that matter, was to tell his members not to go and hear the ministers of the M. E., Baptist, or other churches, they would be sure to disregard such restriction and would go and hear the forbidden man; if for no other reason than to show their indignation at such treatment."

Bro. J. C. Crabb, speaking in reference to the same sort of policy pursued by the preachers, said in substance: "It is as well that those members of sectarian churches who are disposed to be so governed and controlled by their preachers as to pay heed to such advice and command to stay away from the meetings of the Latter Day Saints, should not attend; because they are not the sort of people that make good saints; and the Reorganized Church does not want them; has no use for them, as they would be of no value to the cause. Men or women who would be contented under such an aspersion upon their good faith and common sense would not be likely to so inform themselves as to be able to make an intelligent defense of their faith if assailed—they depend altogether too much on the preacher to make good Latter Day Saints."

To our own way of thinking, while admitting the need of the good offices of the shepherd of the flock to keep members well informed and free from liability to imbibe false doctrines and be led astray, it is of the utmost importance that all members of a congregation be fully impressed with the sentiment that every man is to live, die, and be judged, rewarded, or punished upon his own individual merit, or demerit; that no one—not even the preacher—can be made the scapegoat for his sins, or the honor bearer of his reward; neither be rewarded for his good, or punished for his evil. Why then should the preacher assume so grave a task as that of dictating who he should or should not hear, in the way of religious teachers.

During thirty years and more of preaching the word, we have known comparatively few Latter Day Saints who have left their faith and church under the preaching of other denominational, or unbelieving teachers. And during all that time we have never felt called upon to warn the members not to hear or not to attend the meetings held by other men. It has always appeared to us that to tell Latter Day Saints not to go and hear other men upon their theories and convictions of religious beliefs, was either to do violence to the manliness and good sense of the members, or was a direct and telling confession that we were not satisfied that we had the truth and were fearful that the others, whom to hear was forbidden, had; a thing we have not yet been willing to confess.

By advices from England we see that our Utah contemporaries and fellow believers in the angel's message, have taken another turn in their fear of open discussion, and that is by discouraging anything like an examination of their views in the presence of the public. "How have the mighty fallen!" The privilege of public questions is avoided, a thing unheard of in the days of the martyrs, Joseph and Hyrum, whose advice and injunction to the ministry were, "Call on them to meet you in private conversation and public debate. Tell them to bring forth their strong reasons," etc. Now, alas! the advice is, "Discuss with no one. Especially avoid the Josephites."

It smacks somewhat of arrogance and intolerance, for us to so persistently demand of these Utah people that they submit their cause to the opportunity of a public examination by the Reorganized Church. But, the sons of the prophet Joseph Smith are not disposed to remain content under the aspersion cast upon the name and fame of their father by the whilom advocates and defenders of that polygamous theocracy, without making an effort to bring the calumniators to an open account; and, if it needs be to persistently challenge comparison of facts and opinions. It will not do for these one-time champions of what was once called Mormonism, to take shelter under that flaming screech, "Truth is mighty and will prevail," seeking under its cover to avoid investigation. For, Truth is aggressive and will not submit to Error, is equally as correct an axiom. So, buckle on your armor ye elders of the angel's message, as the same was delivered from 1827 to 1844, and give no quarter to the error and wrong under the influence of which so many made shipwreck of their faith.

It is an insult to the intelligence of freemen to say to them, Do not go and hear. Keep away from these men. Do not discuss. Do not offer opportunity for the public asking of questions.

PRESIDENTS Joseph and Alexander H. Smith had an interview with Bro. James Caffall, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and found that returned veteran soldier for Christ recovering from the relaxation resulting from the comparatively cool atmospheres of Old England to the unusually heated region of America, and Western Iowa in particular.

Bro. Caffall returns from a three years' mission in England and Wales in good spirits and fair health. He has been much blessed and has left the mission in excellent condition. He speaks of the local brethren in kind terms and praise. He has the good will and confidence of all and has made a good record for himself and the cause he represented.

So far as we are informed Bro. Caffall has been careful and judicious in his administration of the affairs of the mission; and is justly pleased and proud of his success.

We are authorized to state that the appointment of Brn. Heman C. Smith and Frederick G. Pitt had no reference to conditions arising from the official action of Bro. Caffall; and must not be taken in any sense as being intended to reflect discredit on him or his administration.

The same may be said of other officers of the English mission. The appointment was made for reasons which were deemed sufficient by the Presidency, without being intended to cast reflections upon any, so far as known to the Presidency. We are pleased to greet Bro. Caffall again, and when he shall again take up the warfare, as agreed upon between Bro. J. R. Lambert and himself, we bespeak the good will and coöperation of the saints among whom his labors shall lie.

BRO. WILLARD J. SMITH.

THE report of the committee appointed by the brethren of the Twelve by advice of the Presidency, last spring, to inquire into matters pending in the city of Detroit, Michigan, contains the following:—

Elder Willard J. Smith was relieved of all embarrassments that stood in the way of his entering the mission field. And, by the advice of the respective missionaries in charge interested, he was appointed to labor in the States of Michigan and Ohio.

By similar action Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser was placed in the field for Detroit and vicinity, so that the work might be looked after in both fields.

We are pleased to call the attention of the saints in the fields named to the action of the committee above recited, and the appointment of these brethren. We confidently expect that a proper respect for the work will secure a better feeling in those portions of the field affected by the investigation of the committee; and speak for cordial coöperation of the ministry in the results of the inquiry.

We learn with pleasure also that Bro. E. C. Briggs was found to be freed from just accusation and is free to pursue his work in his field undisturbed.

Misapprehension and misunderstanding have had much to do in the past with missionaries in their charges, and these have been magnified to the hurt of the work; and we will all hail with joy the day when these hurtful things shall have been overcome.

THE COAL STRIKE SO FAR.

THE following, cut from an editorial of a leading journal of the day, will give the reader an idea of the actual cost of such a strike as has been going on for awhile. If this loss fell on those able to bear it, it might not be quite so bad; but as it falls most heavily on the laborer, it seems fearful; especially when it is taken into the consideration that there was already hard times and much suffering among the classes most affected by the strike:—

The strike which has just come to a nominal conclusion has been noteworthy from several points of view. In the first place, it will have been in operation at the expiration of the ten days allowed for the settlement of terms between the miners and their employers for a period of more than eleven weeks, at a cost to the 100,000 to 125,000 miners affected by it of $13,000,000 to $15,000,000 in loss of wages. Taking into consideration the loss of profits to the mine-owners, and to other interests affected by the strike, it is safe to say that it has cost the country an aggregate of not less than $22,000,000 to $25,000,000. Then, again, the strike has been memorable for the fact that while it was entered upon with the advice and approval of the national and district officers of the union, they were among the strongest advocates of the final settlement, on the ground that the terms were the best that could be secured. The only loss of life during the progress of the strike was at Lattimer, Pennsylvania, where a number of anthracite miners marching against some operatives who had refused to stop work were shot down by the sheriff's deputies, although this had no immediate connection with the strike inaugurated on the Fourth of July last, unless of a "sympathetic" character. On the whole, the miners are entitled to credit for their forbearance from actual violations of law, in spite of hostile demonstrations at a number of individual points, and the fact that there has been no destruction of property such as has occurred during previous strikes.

In this connection some statistics of the history of strikes in this country for the period from 1881 to July, 1894, taken from the report of Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, may be instructive to both employers and employed.

The principal facts will be found embraced in the following table:—

Total number of strikes, 13½ years.....	14,390
Average duration in days.....	25.4
Establishments involved.....	69,167
Employees thrown out of employment.....	3,714,406
Employees in successful strikes.....	1,188,575
Employees partially successful.....	462,777
Employees in strikes which failed.....	2,061,384
Wage loss to employees.....	$163,807,866
Expended in assistance.....	10,914,406
Loss of employers.....	82,590,386

The proportion of successful strikes for this period is estimated at 44.69 per cent, of those only partially successful at 11.25 per cent, and of those which failed at 44.23 per cent.

The strike just ended does not furnish any departure from the general rule as to loss for those engaged in it. On the contrary, their loss seems to have been in greater proportion than usual, and it will require years of labor at increased rates of wages to make up the amount actually lost in wages.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. W. WIGHT, Salt Lake City, August 13, writes:—

Our attendance here is largely on the increase, the "successor" proving an interesting theme. Baptized a man yesterday, making five individually, of late. Good news from Brn. McKiernan and Hansen with the tent. Start Wednesday for reunion at Pleasant Grove. Am hopeful and feel to praise the Lord!

Bro. J. J. Cornish writes from Cadillac, Michigan, September 20:—

Bro. Ellis baptized two last week, a few miles east of here. I two more here, yesterday. We move the tent to Farwell this week. It is getting cool for tent work now.

Bro. George Jenkins, writing from Byrneville, Indiana, late date, says:—

We are doing the best we can to advance the work in this part. We haven't had any rest since General Conference—on the go all the time. More calls are still coming.

Bro. W. R. Armstrong, Hulme, Manchester, England, September 6:—

Three members have just been added to the Salford branch; one brother and two sisters.

Bro. D. E. Tucker, Seminole, Alabama, September 16:—

I am laboring in Baldwin County, Alabama; find a good prospect for work in this county. Have baptized three here, and two more to be baptized to day, and several next Sunday. Yellow fever in Mississippi and Mobile; so reported.

Bro. Wentworth Vickery, Plano, Illinois, September 20:—

I have just returned from the two-days meeting held at Mission, the 19th and 20th, which was a very enjoyable season. Services were very much in the usual order and a goodly portion of the Spirit enjoyed in preaching as well as prayer service. Brn. J. H. Lake, F. M. Cooper, and T. J. Sheldon were present and spoke the word with much earnestness and power to the joy and satisfaction of those who heard. Bro. John Midgorden was ordained an elder and Charles Hougas a deacon, by Brn. Lake and Cooper. There were present of the local staff of the ministry Brn. T. Hougas, Geo. Scheidecker, A. Hayer; and of the traveling ministry Leonard Houghton. We trust that lessons were received that will be of lasting good to all present.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

CONTINUED absences from home have retarded some of the answers and notices due to correspondents and officers in the church work.

Bro. T. C. Kelley has been subjected to the wrath of superstitious folly, and the persecution usually following; and, besides being warned to leave the region where he was preaching, at Escatawpa, Mississippi, he was waylaid, abused, and beaten by two, aided by several others. Bro. Kelley bore with the evil treatment as patiently as an American citizen, and a Christian ought. Efforts were to be made to secure protection; and we look for the result with anxiety. We hope for good, but these are perilous times. Men are heady, sensual, devilish; and some are still held in bonds of religious bigotry.

Bro. Willard J. Smith and Sr. O. H. Riggs, at Cincinnati, Ohio, have been interviewing Elders Maus and others from Utah, in that city. And from the account given of the interview we should conclude that those elders were but poorly equipped for the maintenance of the peculiar positions assumed for that Utah Church by Presidents Brigham Young, H. C. Kimball, J. M. Grant and others. Sr. Riggs writing of the interview pronounces their arguments as being thin. A challenge to discussion offered by Bro. W. J. Smith to these men was ostensibly accepted; but we expect that when the authorities hear of it no discussion will be allowed.

In HERALD of September 8, in account of Bluff Park reunion, a typographical error made us to say sites for "site." We agree with Bro. Bond in the opinion that the old sites will be rebuilt in their time; but not necessarily in all respects as in the past.

Presidents Joseph Smith and Alexander H. Smith returned to Lamoni on Tuesday, the 21st inst.

Bro. R. M. Elvin was called home on the 20th inst. because of sickness in his family.

Bro. and Sr. William E. Landers, of the Northeastern Kansas district, made a call at the Herald Office during a visit to relatives at Lamoni, the past week.

The saints at Coalgate, Indian Territory, were revived and much encouraged by a visit from Bro. S. W. Simmons, who had labored effectually among them. He baptized some and left the branch in greatly improved condition. Letter from Bro. H. T. McLain, dated the 20th.

Sr. Jennie Hughes, of Sumner, Oklahoma, wishes to obtain the address of William Kirby, author of an anti-Mormon work, and with whom a lady investigating the faith wishes to correspond. Brethren at work in the Territory had created an interest, but some were opposing by making use of Mr. Kirby's book.

Bro. Frank Criley returned home from a trip East on the 25th.

Conference of the Massachusetts district will be held October 30, instead of former date announced. See notice.

A brother, a layman in a distant field, writes us that from what he has seen somewhere in the HERALD of late he judges that some one has informed the editors of matters affecting him. We assure him that he is mistaken in the supposition, as his name was, previous to his letter, unknown to us. What is admitted into the HERALD is published from principle, without personal motive and without partiality—unless it be partiality to truth and its methods, without respect to persons.

Bro. James Moore, of Jackson County, West Virginia, writes of his interest in the work of the church. Removed from the precincts of his branch, he would that he could oftener meet with the brethren. Brn. Griffiths, Smith, Goodrich, and others of the ministry had rendered good service in the district.

Bro. G. H. Godby was preaching in Northeast Kentucky, in new places, at last accounts. Brighamite elders were also in that field and their work being noted. Prospects were promising for a good work being done as the true teachings of the faith were being brought out.

Newspaper articles written by Bro. M. T. Short and published in Wisconsin papers, also handbills announcing meetings and topics, indicate that he is making a vigorous effort to reach the people. People who read will often think, though they may not hear. The work of the minister is to get them to thinking, and there are various ways of doing it. Bro. Short was preaching at Lancaster, in a band stand and at local schoolhouses.

A copy of Autumn Leaves for February, 1889, is wanted by a sister. Anyone having it for sale will please write the Herald Office, stating price.

Emperor William of Germany visited Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary, at Buda-Pesth, Hungary, September 20. During the visit he referred to the dreibund—the alliance between Germany, Austria, and Italy—as follows: “Our alliance, concluded in the past by our people, stands firm and indissoluble. It has secured peace to Europe for a long time and will do so still longer.” The greetings of the emperors were cordial and demonstrative. However, while Emperor William took occasion to laud Hungarian bravery in resisting Turkish troops in past years, he failed to mention the defeat of Austria by Prussia. He also failed to make mention of his recent visit to Russia and of the Franco-Russian alliance; or of his late attitude of favor toward the Sultan in settlement of terms with Greece in the interest of German creditors. During the Emperor’s visit an attempt was made to assassinate both Emperor William and Emperor Francis Joseph. A mass meeting of 30,000 workmen was held in the city, and after the speechmaking the vast crowd formed in procession and marched through the principal streets, carrying flags, banners, etc. Placards bearing the inscription, “No rights, no fatherland,” and demanding universal suffrage, were freely displayed. These conditions show the frail character of the foundations of the so-called bases of peace in Europe, where both internal and external conditions are liable to cause serious outbreaks at any time. It is noticeable that in press accounts of the recent interviews of monarchs the subject of disarmament of the immense European armies was not even referred to.

A cyclone swept over portions of the province of Lecce, Italy, September 21. Forty persons were killed, seventy wounded, and property destroyed.

Both houses of the Hawaiian Congress have voted unanimously in favor of annexation to the United States.

President Diaz, of Mexico, demanded a rigid investigation of the killing of his late assailant; as a result Velasquez, late chief of police of the Mexican capital, has confessed that he ordered the killing of the prisoner.

Toledo, Ohio, has introduced manual training into its high school course. Boys are taught useful trades, and girls are trained in the domestic arts; including cutting, fitting, and making of garments, also in cooking upon hygienic principles, and in the arts.

Judge Payne, of Chicago, while delivering an address at Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois, said among other things: “Life is made up of a few general principles; sincerity, truth, devotion to the right. What is it that afflicts this country just now? It is dishonesty. The fact remains that what we lack in this country is honesty, sincerity of character. To get rich we sacrifice everything that is right.” The Judge’s statement is in harmony with Paul’s predictions concerning the perils that would exist in modern times, caused largely by men becoming “lovers of themselves,” hence inconsiderate of the rights of others and disobedient to God. In noting the signs of the times we are admonished by the Savior to “discern” them; evidently that we may understand and escape the evils that exist in the present, and do our duty with a view to better conditions in the future when truth and right shall prevail. “Honesty,” “sincerity of character,” and love to God and fellow man are certainly needed and badly needed in the modern world.

Tribesmen 2,000 strong attacked the British at Sodda, India, on the 16th, but were repulsed. On the 21st the Haddah Mullah with a large and well-organized force of insurgent tribesmen attacked the camp of Sir Bindon Blood. Fierce fighting followed, lasting five hours. Drafts from eight regiments of English cavalry have been ordered for shipment to India.

tempted to drive away miners at work at Hazelton, Pennsylvania, on the 20th, but were controlled by the State troops present. Attempts to resume work are only partially successful.

The whaling ship Falk, from Hammerfest, Norway, has brought the third carrier pigeon message from Andree. It was dated July 13, and indicated that he had safely crossed the open water north of Spitzbergen and was then sailing over the great frozen sea and going eastward. This helps to verify his reported safe arrival in Arctic Russia.

The London News announces an agreement between Russia, Germany, France, and Austria, over Turkey, and that further changes in the Levant will lead to eventual division among these powers.

Peace dawns in the Soudan. Agents of Great Britain and the Mahdi have agreed that the former shall not advance beyond Khartoum. The Mahdi remains King of Khartoum, and Zobein Pasha continues to act as Governor of Darfur, under British protection. Britain obtained promise of Abyssinian neutrality by guaranteeing the western frontier of King Menelik.

Russian newspapers contain accounts of widespread distress in the provinces of Tula, Moscow, Orel, and Kursk. The ground is so dry that it is impossible to sow winter wheat,

John Dillon and other Irish members of Parliament have sent a memorial urgently requesting that Parliament be summoned to meet at once for the purpose of voting funds for relief of large districts in Ireland threatened with famine and ruin owing to failure of potato crops, weather-spoiled grain, and general agricultural depression. They represent that demand for rents the coming winter will cause the ruin of the peasantry and lead to agitation and disturbance.

According to press dispatches General Stewart Woodford, United States minister to Spain, in a late interview with the Duke of Tetuan, presented a statement of the great losses sustained by American commercial and industrial interests because of the long-continued Cuban war, and intimated that unless Spain could bring it to a conclusion within a reasonable time, the United States might find it necessary to take such steps as would be calculated to pacify the island, prevent further destruction of property, permit full resumption of business, and subserve the best interests of humanity. Some reports state in addition that an ultimatum, fixing a time limit for the ending of the war, was presented. Spanish advices deny that there was anything more than a friendly formal diplomatic interview. It is probable that the representations of Minister Woodford were in the form of a quiet but firm hint to Spain, to be followed by stronger statements and insistence if necessary. Spanish papers make angry comment, while the general European press and governments, with the exception of Austria (the Spanish Queen Regent being an Austrian archduchess), concede the right of the United States to interfere. The Independence Belge, of Brussels, recognizes the right of the American government to intervene and insist that Spain shall hasten the pacification of the island, and adds: "They cannot consent that the struggle shall be prolonged indefinitely through the blind infatuation of Spanish statesmen." Food supplies are advancing in price in Madrid. Spanish bonds are depreciating in value. The government is seeking additional loans. There is fear of yellow fever being imported from Cuba and America. Don Carlos, the pretender, claims to have 100,000 volunteers ready to support him and denies that he has abandoned his claims to the throne of Spain.

Yellow fever has continued to spread at Mississippi points, also at Mobile and New Orleans, where new cases have been numerous. Cases were reported at St. Louis, Cairo, Louisville, Beaumont, Texas, and New York. St. Louis and Cairo patients recovered without spreading the disease. Hundreds of refugees are fleeing to the north. A rigid shotgun quarantine is being maintained at many points. Health officers of Mississippi refuse to permit transmission of mail matter from infected points.

At a late meeting of the Congregationalists at Ripon, Wisconsin, "a plan whereby vacant churches might be filled," was discussed. At Saratoga the Unitarians discussed, among other topics, "the points of contrast and difference between Unitarianism and the New Orthodoxy." Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"What's the use of always fretting
Over ills that can't be cured?
What's the use of finding fault with
What we know must be endured?
Does it make our burdens lighter
If we grumble 'neath their load?
Does it make life's pathway smoother
If we fret about the road?
Better use our time than fill it
Full of sighs and vain regrets
Over some imagined blunder,
As does he who always frets."

BY THEIR FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW THEM.

THE author of this logical and oft quoted sentence is one with whom all Bible students are familiar; namely, Matthew; and it is found in the seventh chapter, sixteenth verse of his writings. Matthew evidently applied the language to professors of religion; but it is so full of truth in every sense of the word that it may be applied to any other class of people, and in fact to almost anything that one might mention having the power of production, whether of fruit, vegetable, or animal life.

We are sometimes made to wonder at the lofty claims made by people, when at the same time the daily lives of these people are vastly different from what they teach and claim to practice. Often we see men who are sent out by the different societies who claim to be raising a standard for people to adhere to, and at the same time that those men are preaching or teaching purity of life to others, they themselves are not observing the laws of God in that they defile themselves with both food and drink which cannot do otherwise than pervert nature, and make men and women unhappy by poisoning the mind so that it is incapable of performing its intended duties.

Those who are close students of physiology will know at once what foods and drinks are not good for the building up of either the spiritual or physical body, and now after knowing what is good for us in the way of food and drink, the next task, and a decidedly more difficult one, is to observe these things in the daily lives, for if we do these things we will not have to wait until we are dead to know whether there be any truth attached to the theory, but will know after putting it to a fair test that God meant just what he said when he prompted the words, "by their fruits ye shall know them." And those who are out teaching the people one thing, and practicing another, will in the minds of the thinking people fall short of the results which they intended to accomplish.

Now the very best thing in the world for us to do, knowing that we cannot hide our faults, and that ignorance will only add to our discredit, is to set to work to study and search for truth in whatever line of work we intend to follow.

The Bible says that in the latter time there would be people who had no light in reality, but would try to guide other people, and that the inevitable consequence would be that both would fall. And now as we have such ample warning as this, why not heed it, and do our own thinking about all these things? If one has a reasonable amount of intelligence, he can study out the puzzles of life just as well as anyone, and how much more satisfactory it is to know that one has settled his own mind on a solid truth that cannot be shaken. Such men and women the world, bad as it is, cannot help but honor. They have learned well the lesson that by their fruits they are known, and what if they expect to do work for God or man which will be of lasting benefit, that they must make their life agree with what they teach; for precept truly is good, but not nearly so convincing as example.

Men cannot say to their sons and daughters, Live pure and cultivate all that is good and noble in your hearts, while they themselves use intoxicating liquor and such language as would cause a blush of shame. One cannot take that which does not justly belong to him, even though it be ever so little, and expect people to have confidence in him as an honest man. He cannot do one little mean act in life without that act showing itself in his character, his actions, his very face. Truly these little actions of our daily lives are the fruits, figuratively speaking, and we know just what kind of a man or woman we meet by this fruit. Some of the fruit mentioned in Holy Writ is that of love, joy, peace, charity, kindness, and forgiveness.

These traits of character are the ones that make men and women really happy. One cannot do a good deed without feeling the pleasure resulting from that deed; and when we meet with people who show us that these traits of character really are found in them, we congratulate ourselves that we have found a real good Christian man or woman. And we all know how pleasant it is to meet with people who have such an ennobling influence over us, as to cause us to have a desire to overcome our little faults and failings, and be more noble in our everyday lives. And the more one studies this subject, the more interesting it becomes, for it is the greatest test, the scales, we might truthfully say, which will be used to judge us both in this life as well as the one to come. So, look well to see what kind of fruit you are growing.

IDA DAVIS.

KEB, Iowa.

Dear Home Column.—I have just returned home from Prayer Union, and I want to write to tell all the sisters what a strength the Prayer Union has been to us sisters in this place. There our heavenly Father has blessed us with his Holy Spirit time and again, and we are being built up in the faith and strengthened to journey on each week. We are few in number, but many times God has verified his promises to be with two or three, when they are gathered in his name. We have often wondered why the lessons for the Prayer Union were not in the Herald now. I can truly say that they were good, and for one wish that they would be continued. The way we do here is to select from old Heralds the lesson that is nearest to the date of the time of meeting. The sister at whose house we meet is looking for the lesson, another sister, in her turn, taking charge of the lesson.

We have Daughters of Zion meeting the second Thursday of every month, and we gain knowledge and instruction thereby, nearly all the sisters in the branch taking active part.

I love to get the Herald, and I first turn to see the requests for prayer, and to the Home Column. I love to read the letters that Sr. Burton writes, for they are so full of the Spirit. I rejoice that it is permitted the sisters to help in teaching this gospel, that brings joy and peace to all who embrace it.

We are surrounded by trials and troubles of a temporal nature, but God at this time is blessing us with his Holy Spirit in peace. I have often thought after reading the Herald that I would like to write, but feeling my inability, I would not attempt to do so until this time, for I know that so many who are more able could do so much better than I.

In this time of trouble I am glad to say that the saints of the branch have remained here together, for we desire not to be scattered. We have sacrificed some and worked some to get our church building paid for, and I hope that it can soon be dedicated. I remember at one meeting of the Prayer Union God through his Spirit spoke unto us sisters, who had not our companions in the church, that if we were only faithful and continued in prayer that God would hear our prayers in their behalf. And he has, for two of them have come in and will prove workers in his gospel. Two others are still on the outside, and my companion is one of them; and, dear sisters, I ask that you may remember him in your prayers, that his interest may be aroused, and that he may in God's own time obey the gospel in which I rejoice.

Your sister,

Editors Herald.—I have not written you for many years, during which time I have traveled thousands of miles and have talked with hundreds of people about this great latter-day work. In some instances I have been exceedingly reserved and said nothing when being strongly censured for my views, but not being morose or affected with taciturnity, I was anxious and careful lest my silence should be interpreted for want of ability to support my position. I have met so many who were positive and dogmatical in their own opinions and will dispute to the end, and who will also resist the brightest evidence of truth rather than suffer themselves to be overcome or yield to the plainest and strongest reasonings.

I have met others who would affect wit on all occasions, and be full of conceits, and puns, quirks or quibbles, jests and repartees, which sometimes agreeably entertain and animate an hour of mirth; but they have no place in search of truth. While they carry about them at other times a sort of craft, and cunning, and disguise, and act rather like a spy than a friend to the truth, they make an ill use in freedom, in conversation, and immediately charge heresy upon anyone who happens to differ from their sentiment which authority or custom has established, even in points of moment. Sic sentio, sentiam; that is, so I believe, and so I will believe, is the prison of the soul for life and bar against all improvements of the mind; and if they even suppose examination necessary, that they might be charged as tending to apostasy if they attempt to examine them. Persons are applauded for presuming they are still in the right. As Mr. Locke says, He that considers and inquires into the reason of things is counted a foe to orthodoxy, because he may possibly deviate from some of the received doctrines. And thus men without any industry or acquisition of their own, lazy and idle as they are, inherit local truths; that is, the truths of that place where they live and are inured to assent without evidence. This has a long and unhappy influence, for if a man brings his mind once to be positive and fierce for propositions whose evidence he has never examined, and that in matters in the greatest concernment, he will naturally follow this short and easy way of judging and believing in cases of less moment, and build all his opinions upon insufficient grounds.

If the ministry to-day, throughout all our land, would only instruct their followers to be careful in determining questions which were difficult yet of vital importance, and not take up with partial examination, but turn their thought on all sides, and gather in all the light they can towards the solution, and take time to use all helps that are to be obtained before they fully determine, except only where present necessity of action calls for speedy determination, the judgment rendered against those in opposition to their belief would be far more satisfactory.

I verily believe that true teachers would instruct their hearers to not be hasty in coming to a determination of difficult or important points, that they should be taught to remember that it is worth waiting to find out truth, and not give assent to either side of a question too soon, merely on this account: that the study of it is long and difficult; but rather be contented with ignorance for a season and continue in suspense till attention, meditation, and due labor have found out sufficient evidence on one side.

Some are so fond of knowing a great deal at once, and talking of things with freedom and boldness before they understand them, that they scarcely ever allow themselves attention enough to search the matter through and through. If we were taught to maintain a constant watch at all times against a dogmatic spirit and fix not our assent to any proposition in a firm and unalterable manner till we have some firm and unalterable ground for it, nor till we have arrived at some clear and sure evidence, till we have turned the proposition on all sides and searched the matter through and through, so that we cannot be mistaken, and even where we may think we have full grounds of assurance, be not too early nor too frequent in expressing this assurance in too peremptory and positive a manner, remembering that human nature is always so liable to mistakes in this corrupt and feeble state.

A dogmatic spirit has many inconveniences attending it. It is some good degree of improvement when we are afraid to be too positive. Our assent ought always to keep pace with our evidence, and our belief of any proposition should never rise higher than the proof of evidence we have to support it, nor should our faith run faster than right reason can encourage it. Nor should we in any case apply ourselves to read any human author with a determination beforehand either for or against him, nor with a settled resolution to believe or disbelieve, to confirm or to oppose whatsoever he says; but always read with a design to lay our minds open to truth and to embrace it, as well as to reject every falsehood, though it appears under ever so fair a disguise. How unhappy are those men who seldom take an author into their hands but they have determined before they begin whether they will like or dislike him. They have got some notion of his name, his character, his party, or his principles, by general conversation, or perhaps by some slight view of a few papers, and having all their own opinions adjusted beforehand, they read all he writes with a prepossession either for or against him. Unhappy are those who hunt and purvey for a party and scrape together out of every author all those things and those only which favor their own tenets, while they despise and neglect all the rest. Yet take this caution and I would not be understood here as though I persuaded a person to live without any settled principles by which to judge of men, and of books, and of things, or that I would keep a man always doubting about his foundation. I believe men should have good logical conclusions in all matters where controversy is apparent. Yet we should not be fond of disputing everything pro and con, nor indulging ourselves to show our talent of attacking and defending a logic which teaches nothing else is of little worth. This temper and practice will lead us just so far out of the way of knowledge, and divert our honest inquiry after truth which is debated or sought. In set disputes every little straw is often seized to support our own cause. Everything that can be drawn in any way to give color to our argument is advanced, and that perhaps with vanity and ostentation. This puts the mind out of a proper posture to seek and to receive the truth. Be not ready to charge ignorance, prejudice, and mistake upon others; but show how free we are from prejudice by learning to hear contradiction with patience.

Let it be easy for us to hear our own opinions strongly opposed, especially in matters which are doubtful and disputable among men of sobriety and virtue. Give a patient hearing to arguments on all sides. Otherwise those in our presence would have occasion to suspect that it is not the evidence of truth which has led us into this opinion; but some lazy anticipation of judgment, some beloved presumption, some long and rash possession of a party scheme, in which we desire to rest undisturbed. If our assent has been established upon just and sufficient grounds, why should we be afraid to let the truth be put to the trial of argument?

We should utterly banish out all conversation, and especially out of all learned and intellectual conference everything that tends to provoke passion or raise a fire in the blood. Let no sharp language nor noisy exclamation, no sarcasms nor biting jests be heard among us, no perverse nor invidious consequences be drawn from each other's opinions, and imputed to the person. Let there be no willful perversion of another's meaning; no sudden seizure of a lapsed syllable to play upon it; nor any abused construction of an innocent mistake. We should not suffer our tongue to insult a modest opponent who begins to yield. Let there be no crowing and triumph, even where there is evident victory on our side,—God forbid.

All these things are enemies to friendship and ruin to free conversation. The impartial search after truth requires all calmness and serenity, all good temper and candor. Mutual instruction can never be attained in the midst of passion, pride, and clamor, unless we suppose, in the midst of such a scene there is a loud and penetrating lecture read by both sides on the folly and shameful infirmities of human nature.

Whosoever, therefore, any unhappy word shall arise in company, that might give us a reasonable disgust, suppress the rising resentment, be it ever so just, and command our soul and tongue into silence, lest we cancel the hopes of all improvements and transform the learned conversation into mean and vulgar form of reproaches and railing.

The person who begins to break the peace sometimes falls under shameful conviction of silent reproof. From the vices and follies of others observe what is hateful in them; consider how such a practice looks in others, and remember it looks as ill or worse in ourselves. From the virtues of others learn something worthy of our imitation. From the deformity, the distress, or calamity of others, derive lessons of thankfulness to God and hymns of grateful praise to our creator, governor, and benefactor, who has formed us in a better mold and guarded us from those evils. Learn also the sacred lesson of contentment in our own estate and compassion to our neighbor under his miseries.

There is another point on observation I wish to make: Our observations of persons should not be for the purpose of indulging busy curiosity which is ever inquiring into private and domestic affairs, with an endless desire of learning the secret history of families. It is but seldom that such a prying curiosity attains any valuable end, and it often begets suspicions, jealousies, and disturbances in households, and is a frequent temptation to persons to defame their neighbors. Some persons cannot help telling what they know. Our observations of persons and their conduct should be chiefly designed in order to lead us to a better acquaintance with things, particularly with human nature, and to inform us what to imitate and what to avoid, rather than furnish matter for the evil passions of the mind, or the impertinences of discourse, or the reproach of the tongue. Though it may be proper sometimes to make our observations concerning persons as well as things, the subject of our discourse in learned and useful conversation, yet what remarks we may make on particular persons, especially to their disadvantage, should for the most part lie hid in our own breasts till some just and apparent occasion, some necessary call of providence, lead us to speak them. If the character or conduct be greatly culpable, it should so much the less be published. We may treasure up such remarks of the follies, indecencies, or vices of our neighbors as may be a constant guard against our practice of the same without exposing his or her reputation on that account. It is a good old rule that our conversation should rather be laid out on things than persons, and this rule should generally be observed, unless names be concealed, where-soever the faults or follies of mankind are our present theme.

Let us keep our minds as free as possible from passions and prejudices, for these will give a wrong turn to our observations, both on persons and things. The eyes of a man in the jaundice make yellow observations on everything and the soul tinctured with any passion or prejudice diffuses a false color over the real appearances of things, and disguises many of the common occurrences of life. It never beholds things in a true light, nor suffers them to appear as they are. Where proper observations are made, let self with all its influence, stand aside as far as possible, abstract our own interests and our own concern from them, and bid all friendships and enmities stand aloof and keep out of the way in the observations that we make relating to persons and things. If this rule were well obeyed, we should be much better guarded against those common instances of misconduct in the observations of men, the false judgments of pride, and envy. How ready is envy to mingle with the notices which we take of other persons! How often are mankind prone to put an ill sense upon the actions of their neighbors, to take a survey of them in an evil position and an unhappy light, and by this means we form a worse opinion of our neighbors than they deserve, while at the same time pride and self-flattery tempt us to make unjust observations on ourselves in our own favor. In all the favorable judgments we pass concerning ourselves we should allow a little abatement on this account.

Another important point on observation that comes to my mind is not to be too hasty to erect general theories from a few particular observations, appearances, or experiments. This is what the logicians call a false induction, when general observations are drawn from so many particulars as to become certain and indubitable. These are jewels of knowledge comprehending great treasure in a little room; but they are, therefore, to be made with the greater care and caution, lest errors become large and diffusive if we should mistake in these general notions. A hasty determination of some universal principles without a due survey of all the particular cases which may be included in them is the way to lay a trap for our own understanding in the pursuit of any subject, and we shall often be taken captive in the mistake and falsehood. We ought not to expect to arrive at certainty in every subject which we pursue. There are a hundred things wherein we mortals in this dark and imperfect state must be contented with probability where our best light and reasonings will reach no farther. We must balance arguments as justly as we can, and where we cannot find weight enough on either side to determine the scale with sovereign force and assurance, we must content ourselves perhaps with a small preponderation. This will give us a probable opinion, and those probabilities are sufficient for the daily determination of a thousand actions in human life, and in matters of religion as well. Reason itself invites us to assent and act according to the best evidence we have, even though it be not absolute and complete, and as God is our supreme judge, his abounding goodness and equity will approve and acquit the man whose conscience honestly and willingly seeks the best light and obeys it as far as he can discover it. But in matters of great importance in religion let him join all due diligence with earnest and humble prayer for divine aid in his inquiries.

We should take heed lest some darling notion, some favorite hypothesis, some beloved doctrine, or some common but unexam-ined opinion be made a test of the truth or falsehood of all other propositions about the same subject. Dare not build much upon such a notion or doctrine till it be very fully examined, accurately adjusted, and sufficiently confirmed. Some persons by indulging such a practice have been led into long ranks of errors; they have found some petty hypothesis or principle either in philosophy, politics, or religion upon slight and insufficient grounds, and establishing that as a test and rule by which to judge of all other things.

It is not good judgment to become frightened nor provoked at opinions differing from our own. Some persons are so confident they are in the right, that they will not come within the hearing of any notions but their own; they caution out to themselves a little province in the intellectual world, where they fancy the light shines and all the rest is darkness. They never venture into the ocean of knowledge, nor survey the riches of other minds which are as solid, and as useful and perhaps are finer gold than they ever possessed. Let not men imagine there is no certain truth but in the sciences which they study and among that party in which they were born and educated.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. A. RICHARDSON.

Editors Herald:—In your issue of September 1, page 556, is a letter dated Topeka, Kansas, August 8. It is written by a brother whose interest in the progress of the gospel we do not question. Nevertheless, the letter contains a statement respecting the purchase of a tent in the Northeast Kansas district which is objectionable, and needs correction. The statement is: "I did expect a tent before this time; but after receiving over fifty dollars in cash and a promise of the balance to purchase the tent, now comes the inquiry, where is the tent? What can we answer? Can we say we could not get it? No; because we were promised the balance." The brother himself favors the purchase of a tent, and yet his statement is calculated to hinder or defeat such purchase by throwing out the impression that the project had either failed or been given up. It has not been given up nor can it by any possibility fail, if the "promise of the balance" of the money necessary to buy the tent to which the brother alludes is ever paid.

It is a fact that a committee appointed by district conference to raise money to buy a tent had secured over fifty dollars for that purpose. It is also a fact that the last conference held in the district continued this soliciting committee and added to it the name of another brother who had assured the conference that he could, acting as solicitor, raise the balance of the money necessary to purchase the tent. This incident is no doubt what the brother alludes to when he says: "We were promised the balance." Whether it is or is not what he refers to, if any person or persons have promised that they individually will pay what is yet needed to purchase the tent, they have an excellent opportunity to do so. Let them pay the money to the soliciting committee at once, that the tent may be bought. The committee appointed to buy a tent reported that they only had about half money enough to buy such a tent as they thought necessary and were discharged by the conference; but the soliciting committee was continued and its numbers increased, as already stated.

All that has been done in the matter was done by action of the district conference. Hence, if an error was committed, the district conference is responsible for it. It occurs to my mind, that the best place to protest against the action of district conference is at the conference itself; and the best time to protest is before the measure has been adopted. If it passes despite the opposition thus offered, why not patiently submit to the ruling until another meeting of the conference, and then, if thought practicable, protest again?

Respecting the brother's personal criticism, that I took the priest of his branch with me on a missionary trip, my answer is: I returned him in good order and acted upon my own judgment with the information I then had. With the same information I would do the same thing again. Respecting, therefore, the little I have to do in connection with this blessed cause, and the duties that devolve upon me and that not of my own choosing nor by my own solicitation, let me say to all concerned: If you have information pertaining to that work which you think I ought to know; if you have criticisms which you wish to make, or protests which you wish to offer for my own benefit and that of the gospel work, please send the same to me. I will be thankful for them. Don't wait too long. That is like "looking the barn after the horse is stolen." My permanent address is Fanni, Kansas. Anything you send will receive courteous consideration and qualify me to act with better discretion. My action will be governed, however, by the dictates of my own judgment and conscience thus enlightened. Yours faithfully,

WILL S. PENDER.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—It may surprise some of our friends to learn of the date and place of this writing, but we hear that it is "the unexpected that happens" in this world, and that's what has happened and has been happening to us for the few weeks past.

Two weeks ago this morning an advertisement of a very low excursion rate from St. Louis to Toledo, Ohio, became the source of a temptation to visit the scenes and home of other days, together with the hope that a change from the hot air of the city and a journey and sojourn for even a short time among old friends, fresh air of the northern country clime, etc., might prove of benefit to the failing health of Sr. Bond, and in this respect we certainly were not mistaken: her health and appearance being already clearly improved. Ticket limit, ministerial duties in our field of labor, etc., will, however, hasten our return to St. Louis this week.

We are now writing in the old temple, all alone—surrounded by the inspiration which the memories of the past invoke.

Yesterday morning, and one week ago Sunday morning and evening, we spoke to a good congregation of saints, old friends, neighbors, relatives, and under the inspiration that moved men to preach, and men and women to receive this great latter-day message in 1827-30, and on and up to this present time.

After morning service the rite of baptism was administered, followed by confirmation and prayer meeting; the good Spirit present in warning, instruction, and prophecy—the writer being comforted by instruction and revelation through prophecy and promise concerning matters of inquiry in regard to future duties and plans—a partial answer at least to prayer. Bro. I. M. Smith occupying the pulpit in the evening in the delivery of a characteristic scriptural argument in favor of the doctrine of the church.

Here are we upon the place of former scenes, events, and happenings—with the work of men which future ecclesiastical history will canonize—with a heart and brain filled with reflections of the work of men whose generation is fast passing away; but whose work will grow to fame and appreciation as the years multiply, and the great fact of the permanent character of their building becomes apparent to the practical student of occult manifestation or Bible history, prophecy, and promise.

Yesterday, while going to the place of baptism, the house and chamber room where Sidney Rigdon received first the Book of Mormon was pointed out to me by a citizen of the place, not of our faith however. The details of events leading up to the acceptance of the claims for the divinity of this record by Mr. Rigdon stated by unbiased and thoroughly competent and accredited witnesses, are of a most convincing sort save to men of the Clark Braden spirit and temper of mind or rule of judgment in life. We can all afford to await the day of triumph of truth, and anticipate with pity only the defeat and sentence of the Pharisee and that worst of all infidels, the hypocritical professor of a religion whose defense is darkness and deceit.

The old town seems quiet and full of rest—dare we say peace? Rest at least to the physical sense; from the turmoil, noise, dust, and heat of a great city; only to taste, and go back again to the battle to which duty summons us.

Willoughby, our old residence, has improved physically in appearance,—and in this regard the most lovely spot in which we ever dwelt. Electric cars from Cleveland to Painesville now pass or stop at the door of our once pleasant home—ours no longer. When shall we possess our home and inheritance? When pang of parting or of the pains that distress and cloud our life shall forever, aye forever pass away.

Wednesday or Thursday we expect to start on our return trip,—we hope it may prove more pleasant in some regards than was our outward journey. The excursion train being heavy laden was two hours late at Toledo, the morning following our departure from St. Louis, and the boat with which we expected to make connection for Cleveland was gone. Spent part of the day in looking over the city, and in afternoon took small steamer for Put-in-Bay, arriving there at nine p. m. The day following up to two p. m. was spent in exploration of that beautiful island—the grand Hotel Victory overlooking the lovely marine picture presented by rugged shore, cliffs, and open bay, beautiful grounds, and magnificent court with its flowers, and the great appointments of this famous hotel or summer resort. Here we also ran across Willoughby friends, also on excursion from Cleveland. At two p. m. the boat left for Cleveland, and on its passage encountered the worst storm of the season. Heavy winds and fearful storm of rain, lasting until we reached Cleveland. A veritable cyclone formed north and west of the path of our vessel, and certainly alarmed everybody, I think, and striking us might have prevented this writing. It, however, passed north a little ways, and its spent force struck the lake shore about forty miles distant, tearing up trees, unroofing buildings, and doing great damage all along the shore from Cleveland to Willoughby, and even here in Kirtland its effects being distinctly felt.

Seasickness that overtook nearly all on board the vessel, including Sr. Bond, may, however, have proved to her at least a blessing in disguise, as she has been better ever since.

The gospel promises, and prophecies, dreams, etc., unfulfilled as yet, tend to allay fears in time of danger, however, and suggested that at that time at least we were not “born to be drowned,” and leads me to reflect that at more than one period in life I have been in sympathy with St. Paul, in a measure, in his experiences of travel upon the treacherous sea.

I was once a passenger on the ill-fated City of Columbus, from Savannah to Boston, which in a return trip went to pieces on the rocks at Martha's Vineyard, nearly every soul, one hundred and ten, on board perishing. The same thing occurred with the Alpine, a Grand Haven and Chicago boat, every soul perishing. I was a passenger on both of these vessels in a violent storm off Cape Hatteras and just out of Chicago just before disaster overtook them, and the memory of these things led me to think or say that last week's experience might prove my last; but Nellie said, “My dream, you know. I dreamed we were in Willoughby and Kirtland only a month ago,” when it was the last thing in our expectation. Well, thank God for the gospel and its wondrous gifts and favors to oftentimes unworthy us.

Our work, the Lord said yesterday, was not done; but I don't want to be saved by a whale—or “Jonahed”—for or through disobedience, however.

We read of the Nauvoo reunion, and are glad of the good success of the meeting. We wanted to be there, but we think a providence not of our own ordered otherwise, and we submitted. Of the St. Louis district we may write later, but trusted that our regular correspondent might write of happenings of interest.

Brethren Lake and Griffiths are away in mission fields. I. M. Smith here on account of sickness of his little daughter, but leaves this week. W. H. Kelley goes soon to eastern mission. Weather dry, dusty, fair season for crops, corn and grapes fine, apple and peach crop largely cut off by frost, and peaches from Missouri supply in part the Cleveland market. This, however, is a beautiful country to look at; wooded hills and clear streams, fertile fields and pleasant and diversified scenery and landscape, and “every prospect pleases and only man is vile.” Alas! how slow are we to interpret and appropriate God's goodness, and lawfully use his bounties, and apply his meaning to our daily lives. Like Zion in Independence, so is Kirtland, “beautiful for situation;” and the statement made in current Herald concerning Nauvoo and the old “stakes” is not altogether concurred in by the writer, as it seems that the promises of a return to—a repairing of—and building up of the old foundings and the “waste places” are as clearly under the promises as any other prediction of latter days.

In the faith,
M. H. BOND.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 14.

Editors Herald:—The interest in the city and north at Englishville, where we have been holding several grove meetings, is still good. There was large attendance at all the meetings in the grove last Sunday. Six more, all heads of families and people who have the respect of all, were baptized in the afternoon. These are the fruits of the labors of Brn. E. K. Evans, H. H. Robinson, J. M. Baggerly, J. A. Cavanaugh, and others who have labored in that vicinity.

Our Baptist friends are willing that we should use one side of their church houses; that is, the outside, making it real roomy; so we have concluded to purchase a gospel tent, and at the present time there are over seventy dollars signed, with bright prospects ahead for enough to get a first-class tent. We hope to scour every nook and corner, that the gospel may be preached as a witness unto all, believing there will be a large ingathering as a fruit of proper labor.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—We listened to a very good discourse last evening by Bro. James Cocks, upon the seventy weeks spoken of in Daniel 9: 24, illustrated by a very fine chart. The subject was handled fairly well by our brother, and bespeaks well for the future if continued; and those who fail to embrace the opportunity when offered to hear these subjects, miss a grand opportunity of learning some important truths relative to the restoration of the gospel in these days, and the bringing to pass the purposes of God in the last days. The writer has no fears regarding the future usefulness of our brother, and believes that many will yet be glad to hear what he has to say in the defense of the latter-day work. In gospel bonds, SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—We have our tent on the corner of Dale and Springfield Avenues, and have the largest crowds yet. And the tent is set up in our own neighborhood, and we only looked for a moderate turnout when we thought of the old proverb; "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," etc., does not work out here. The people are very anxious to hear, and many seem very much interested. The saints and ministry will remember the discussion at our late General Conference on the best methods of running tent meetings; some thought it the best to not at first tell what we were. I thought I would try it, but it was a failure to my mind. I advertised on my bills gospel tent meetings, instead of Latter Day Saints' gospel tent, as I always had done; and when the people found I wished to keep my true name a secret, it caused suspicion to arise in their minds right away. I will inclose a sample of my bills, which take very well. I then give an outline of what I intend to show, and I preach almost altogether from my charts and a blackboard, which I think is the best method of reaching the people.

BEVIER, Missouri, Aug. 31.

Editors Herald:—I wish to inform you, dear saints, in behalf of the Bevierites that we are making a little progress and sacrifice for the good cause that we are engaged in; our little branch is at present trying to live in harmony with our profession, and in some degree show our faith by our works. The saints are sacrificing temporarily in proportion to the means that God has blessed them. The sisters sewing society here deserves much credit for the financial aid it gives as offerings to the Bishop; and the local work, too. Bevier will have a church building when completed that the saints may be proud of. This improvement is mainly credited to the sisters' society. The old building has been moved twenty-eight feet to the north; and an addition built on, making a big improvement in its appearance. The members are contributing nobly, and a general interest is being taken. We have had good preaching by the missionaries since General Conference, namely, Elders W. Summerfield, M. M. Turpen, J. A. Tanner, and Apostles G. T. Griffiths and I. N. White.

The faithful labors of Elder T. W. Chatburn in this district the past year are highly thought of. He has left many interested in the faith, and caused them to think and study more thoroughly the plan of salvation. Let us hope that his labor will not be in vain, but that it will bring forth much fruit in future days. Elder J. A. Tanner, our district president, is also in the front, working with all his might, according to his circumstances. Each Sunday the local ministry are out preaching in schoolhouses in the country. There are two young Brighamite elders preaching in schoolhouses, but the locals are on their heels and explaining the difference. Bro. Tanner preached on the "successorship" and other points of difference, and invited them to attend, which they did. He gave them the privilege to reply the following Sunday, from the same stand, but they never showed up. Suffice it to say that their standard evidence on succession is Elder Roberts' work of the Utah Church.

In conclusion, permit me to invite all saints of Northeastern Missouri district to be present at our October conference, to be held at Bevier, in our neat and substantial little church. The little sacrifice and efforts put forth will not be regretted by the Bevier saints, for we will surely be rewarded in the end. Wishing all the saints God speed, I remain, your brother in the one faith,

J. T. WILLIAMS.

BEVIER, Missouri, Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—Elder Thomas Loynd has agreed to meet me in discussion September 22 on the following proposition: "Resolved that Brigham Young was a prophet of God, and as such was the legal successor to the prophetic office of Joseph Smith the Martyr, and that all of his teaching, doctrine, and practice was in harmony with the teaching, doctrine, and practice of Joseph Smith and the church under Joseph's leadership." He to affirm the above, and I to affirm a like proposition in favor of the present Joseph.

I am acting in harmony with the advice of Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge, so you see I am not running any risks upon my own peculiar ideas. Elder Loynd and E. Tanner (my cousin) have been operating in this county since June.

In bonds,

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Aug. 26.

Editors Herald:—Our "first steamer" from California arrived on the 19th, bringing our mail very early in the month. They now are on a trial trip, and if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the government here she will run continuously and we will have a line of steamers here instead of the vessels. This will bring us two weeks nearer to California than before. They are also talking of running a small steamer from Tahiti to the Paumotus and Marquesas. If so, our mission work will be much aided and the long uncomfortable trips in small vessels and boats up to the Paumotus will be avoided, and the discomforts which Bro. and Sr. T. W. Smith, Bro. and Sr. Devore, Hubert and Alice Case, and others have endured will be much mitigated.

And so the beautiful promise of God to us missionaries at the conference of April, 1894, is still having its fulfillment: "Angels shall go before you and prepare the paths for your coming; doors shall be opened for you; you will be received by them within and without, and you will be enabled to enter in and occupy and accomplish good in his name. Amen." And as we see our way opening up before us, we are endeavoring to enter in and occupy. So now we have Petero Derrien around this island preaching to large congregations; has baptized six already. Tehopea, Tuterihia, and others here on their way to Riatea to open up again the work in that island. Bro. Case writes hopefully from the Paumotus, and we have up to date printed sixty-three thousand pages of doctrine and history, including the tract, "Plan of Salvation," all the size of the Autumn Leaves, and are sending this out among the islands everywhere. So undoubtedly "the way is opening up before us;" thank God for his mercy and goodness unto us!

We were also very much pleased to see by the Herald that the good Lord was also blessing the missionaries in California and Oregon and opening up the way before them. May he continue to do so, and they increase in power and might in delivering the glad tidings to the multitudes on the Pacific coast, that their hearts may be made glad and sinners converted.

We are quite well. Peace to all the Israel of God.

J. F. BURTON.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—"The lion has left his thicket and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way." There are now eight men in this city representing the Utah Church. To hear them tell it they are going to do a great work here. They are preaching on the street corners and scattering tracts, Voice of Warnings, and doing a general proselyting work. I met them first last Friday night, and had quite a tilt with them. We had not talked long before they thought best to go to their room. There was a good crowd present and I gave them a public challenge to discuss the issue between us. At first they refused to meet us, but several in the crowd said that they would like to hear a discussion between us, and offered to help pay for a hall. One man said he would give a dollar, and gave me his card where to find him. When they saw the feeling that was there, one said he would meet us. But I am of the opinion that it was merely to satisfy the feeling present. If I had been free to have made arrangements then and there, I could have held him fast, or made him back down, and would have gained a decided victory. The feeling of the people present was just right and were with me. But the one in charge being four hundred miles away, I had to write and wait for an answer and the form of a resolution to discuss.

I have written an article for the daily papers, showing some of the differences between us, which I think will do good; and shall let these men know that we are after them. They get it quite hot from some that are present, and don't stop long after they are through speaking. One of them told me that he had been in West Virginia, and had met our people there, and found them a good people; spoke well of them. If we had fifty dollars now to hire a hall near where they are preaching on the street, it would be money well spent, for we would get a good hearing; but the members here are poor and not able to raise it. I shall try and get a place as near as I can and do all I can to hinder their work. Shall let them know that we are alive, and not afraid to meet them.

Many are learning our position that have never heard of us before, and when they hear our side, are friends at once. Some, of course, cannot see anything good in Latter Day Saintism, while others are surprised when they hear and learn our faith. "Why," they say, "I have believed that all my life." Some seem to take to it as readily as a duck takes to water, while others are afraid of it, as some people are of water. But the gospel has come to stay and I shall defend it as long as I have strength of body and vigor of mind; and pray that truth and right may prevail, and the honest in heart rejoice in the God of Israel.

Yours in the gospel,

E. A. STEDMAN.

POMONA, Missouri.

Editors Herald:—I have just opened up a new place for preaching southwest of Marshfield. I learned from a friend of a Sr. Christy from Oklahoma, living here, and so I thought I would come out and see if I could preach. We got a small schoolhouse, and I preached fourteen sermons. The seating capacity of the house on some nights was entirely occupied, while some were standing and some were outside the house. Sr. Christy is a good singer, and led the music on children's day; she also played the organ and took an active part in the entertainment. On children's day two other preachers and myself were called on to address the people. There is a union Sunday school here in which Sr. Christy and her husband take part. The people treated me very kindly, inviting me to share in their hospitalities, and also inviting me to return and preach again. Sr. Christy's husband—a nonmember, but a jolly good man—expects to go with me to Wright County to-morrow to trade for a farm. I hope he will locate where he and Sr. Emma may do much good in the cause of Christ. May God speed the cause of truth is my prayer in Jesus' name.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

PIPER CITY, Ill., Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—Since General Conference I have been busily engaged in the cause we love so well, traveling alone, on foot, behind a faithful horse, on board Nahum's chariots, going from place to place breaking the bread of life to saints and others who would receive it. In the month of July I was for awhile in Amboy, the place where the long to be remembered Amboy conference was held. There are a number of saints living there yet; some of them will remember the evening when the small congregation gathered at the house now occupied and owned by Sr. Emily Stone, to hold prayer meeting. And how Bro. Joseph came from Nauvoo and acknowledged his allegiance with the little band of struggling workers. But what a vine that little plant has grown to be; its branches have reached the ocean's crest on every side—east, south, west, and north; its tendrils have crossed the foaming ocean waves, and gone to the islands of the sea.

But to return to the scenes of my ministerial pathway, I discover there are too many events to give mention of all. Debates with local preachers, arguments with deacons, talks with members, etc., long walks over hot and dusty roads, and late hour drives, all go to make up a ministerial life, or at least it has been so with me.

I have just closed a series of meetings at Streator a few days ago. I found the saints of that place to be very warm hearted when once kindled with a little of the old time zeal. While there I spoke two evenings in the American volunteer's hall, by invitation, to a full house. And while I was telling them of the mission and atonement of our Savior, and how that he is to return and set his feet upon the Mount of Olives, and show the wounds in his hands, feet, and sides, I could see several of the congregation nodding their heads.

From your brother in gospel bonds,

LEONARD HOUGHTON.

ARGENTINE, Kans., Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—Last night we closed our meetings at Rosedale, and our closing meeting was a crowning success; to-day we turn the tent over to be used in other parts of the district. We pitched the tent in Argentine, August 21, preached every evening and twice on Sundays until September 8. We were ably assisted by Elders R. May, J. A. Robinson, D. F. Winn, A. Allen, J. Emmett, W. H. Pease, George Hicklin, and E. Harrington; the brethren all did well. One thing was especially noticeable, only our own doctrine was advocated, other denominations were not held up to ridicule, for in so doing we only close the ears of the public, and drive the people from us.

On the 9th of this month we moved our tent to Rosedale, a new field, and the thoughts of the people seemed to be, This sect, which is everywhere evil spoken against, has come hither also. We preached every evening until last night; our effort there is crowned with success. After the close of the meeting last night many came up to bid us good-bye, and expressed themselves as being thankful to God for what they had heard and learned in regard to God's will concerning the children of men; several private houses were offered us there, in which we could hold meetings. We accepted that of Mr. Morran, because it is best located, and made announcement to that effect for every Friday evening. We were ably assisted by Elders D. F. Winn, J. Young, G. Hicklin, and A. Allen. The prospect for the establishing of a church there in the near future is good.

THREE KINDS OF POOR.

THE care of the poor has occupied the minds of good men in all ages of the world, and in so doing they are following the example of our Savior, who took a special interest in their welfare. In order to make our ideas plain and more easily understood, the writer has divided the poor into three classes.

THE UNFORTUNATE POOR

are those who by reason of circumstances over which they had no control have been made so. The person may be a cripple, or blind, or by reason of old age, or any other condition that would make him unfit to perform manual labor; or perhaps because of continual sickness in the family.

MADE POOR BY OTHERS are those who by confiding in others have by fraud and other deceitful and dishonest means been deprived of all they possessed.

THE LAZY AND SHIFTLESS POOR are those who will not work if they have the opportunity, and do not take proper care of what they may possess; and their habits of idleness make them a burden on society wherever they are found.

The latter class is by far the most numerous, and if they could perceive the error of their ways, the care of the others would be made quite easy. Giving such persons steady employment at good wages, or furnishing them land, will not relieve them of the burden of poverty. It is an individual work, they need to be "regenerated," "born again," to put away the old man and his evil ways, and put on Christ, and live in the sunshine of his eternal truth.

The writer works for a corporation that employs about five hundred men, and the majority of them receive good wages; very few below fifty dollars per month, and many much more; work the entire year, and their pay always sure. The majority have worked from five to twenty years, very few have homes, or money saved; and when I say that the majority waste the greater portion of their earnings it is simply the plain truth, without any exaggeration whatever. And this condition is universal in our country. If the saints do the same as others, they must expect to be in like condition; and observation teaches me that they are very similar—doing what should not be done by those living in the light of the gospel.

One brother has suggested that we should seek God's direction in the matter; a good and noble thought, surely; but of what avail would it be to us, viewing it in the light of past history. The Word of Wisdom contains promises that should be worthy our consideration; "health," "wisdom," "knowledge," "not be weary," "the destroying angel shall pass by." The law of tithing promises us that we shall not be "burned at his coming," "shall pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it," "will rebuke the devourer," and he "shall not destroy the fruits of your ground." What attention do we pay to those instructions? In a branch of less than one hundred members, not less than twenty-five dollars per month is spent for liquor, beer, and tobacco; no guesswork, an actual fact. If the same state of things exist in other branches in proportion to numbers, what a terrible waste.

I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.—D. C. 81:3.

"Buy all the land lying westward between Jew and Gentile," was said in an early day. In 1873 the Lord said:—

Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.—D. C. 117:11.

The elders sought to carry out God's counsel, and began to procure means to make a settlement at Lamoni, tried to raise fifty thousand dollars to buy land, and received less than thirty-five thousand dollars, and immediately the cry of "speculation" went up from many of the saints, and some of the elders joined in the same cry. What has been the result of that spirit of disobedience? Land that could have been purchased in the "regions round about" has trebled in value.

I was not in the church in the '60's, but have heard it said that at one time Bro. Joseph, while traveling in Western Iowa and Eastern Nebraska, advised the saints to take up the rich lands and make homes for themselves, but some of the would-be wise ones said, "Bro. Joseph is young yet, and without experience; we will wait and gather to Jackson County."

One of the greatest needs to-day in the church is for the saints to learn obedience to God's law, and when that is done, there will be no poor. It is useless to try man-made plans; God's plan is the only one that will work.

The writer is in favor of coöperation; but to make it successful, we must observe the "golden rule" in our conduct with each other, or it will fail. I will suggest a plan of coöperation on a small scale, and if we cannot work harmoniously in little things, it will be useless to try it in large ones.

Brethren A. and B. are living in a village or town; their homes join each other, and each has a cottage, we will suppose. Then let them buy the following things, and others they might think of: One cow, one churn, one horse and wagon, one set of garden tools, one washing machine, one wringer. If two farmers do the same thing they will save half on their machinery. This is the principle on which all our great coöperations work, combining their money and experience, and cutting down expenses. They have learned the lesson of forbearance; can we do likewise? If not, it is useless to try coöperation.

PAUL PARKER.

IS IT NECESSARY FOR SAINTS TO CARRY LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES?

I HAVE just read with interest Bro. A. H. Parson's article, "Heaven's Insurance Policy," in the Herald of August 4, 1897, and as in closing he says, that to him it is a serious question, and should be discussed, I hope I may be privileged to take part in the discussion. In 1 Timothy 5: 8, we find this reading:—

But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

Paul is writing to Timothy, and is referring to the saints. He uses harsh language, and it is evident he wanted to be understood. Why does a brother toil day after day, whether it be at the desk, at the bench, the plow, or with his pick and shovel? Is it not to provide for his family? Is that wrong? You answer, No. Then I ask, Is it wrong, if, with true love for his family, that brother makes provision against their coming to want, in case he is suddenly taken from them? You may say, that under the perfect law of the gospel, his family will be provided for. But, is there any word yet received from God that will warrant me in believing that he will do for me that which it is possible for me to do myself?

If I plant a field of potatoes and neglect to cultivate them, may I safely trust God to cause the sun to kill the bugs and weeds, and cause the potatoes to grow? May not the following words of Jesus apply to temporal, as well as spiritual things?—

For whosoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.—Luke 8:18.

We see this statement verified every day of our lives. Now the question arises, which is the better way, to provide for the family in case of death? Our brother objects to the insurance company, because it is a man-made institution, but recommends the savings bank. Is the bank a God-made institution? He says the companies sometimes fail. Do banks never fail? The companies get wealthy. Do bankers always die poor?

Let us look at it from a business standpoint, as he says. You deposit twenty-five dollars a year in the bank. About the second year you are taken sick and die. How much will your widow receive from the bank? Fifty dollars and interest. That is provided you have not drawn the money from the bank while you were sick, or at some other time. You pay twenty-five dollars a year premium for a policy in some good insurance company, and if in one week or less, after you are accepted by the company, you should die, your widow or children would get one thousand dollars. You may have to pay more or less per year according to age.

Which is the better plan? You do not have to pay all your life. You can get limited payment policies. You do not lose all you have paid in when you stop; provision is made for that in the policies of all good companies. You do not have to die to be benefited. At stated periods of time you can draw out your cash with interest or draw an annuity in your old age. Your family has been protected and you have made money besides. I do not refer to those cheap insurance societies, so many of which have failed, that they are not worth considering. I mean old line insurance companies. You join no lodge, you do not parade the streets in a brilliant uniform. You can spend all of your evenings at home. There is nothing about it to take the time that should be devoted to your God and your home. It is simply a business transaction.

The question is asked, "Are we not robbing God by supporting these man-made institutions?"

What is to prevent tithing this money as it is paid into the company? It is money saved. It is increase.

Then again, a brother does not insure, but pays in tithes and offerings; say ten or twelve dollars per year, which is more than the average. If he should die in ten years, leaving his family in poor circumstances, the church would have to pay his funeral expenses and provide for his family, for a time, at least; and would it not have been better if he had carried a policy that would bring his family five hundred or a thousand dollars?

Have we any reason to believe a brother who does not insure pays any more in tithes and offerings than he would if he did insure? A brother who loves his family and does everything in his power to provide for them and promote their happiness, is quite sure to be a man who loves his God, and will be found to be "a lively stone in the building." I do not wish to infer that because a brother does not insure he does not love his family as he should. Everyone has a right to his own opinion, and no doubt there are many who honestly think they would be doing wrong to insure their lives.

Now I ask, Why do we insure our buildings, our church buildings, that have been dedicated to God? Is it not because it is wisdom to do so? Does it indicate lack of faith in God? What is the difference if I insure my life? It is only providing against loss in the one case as in the other. Are we serving mammon when we invest our money that it may bring us increase? What is the difference if I buy a farm as an investment, or a life insurance policy? One is as legitimate as the other. Life insurance is a safe investment, as is evident from the fact that such men as John Wanamaker, C. A. Depew, J. D. Rockefeller, and other millionaires carry so many hundreds of thousands of dollars in these companies. Is it wrong for Latter Day Saints to do the same if they can? Why was the law of tithing instituted if we are to have nothing to tithe?

Are we to condemn the insurance companies because a certain brother who paid his dues to them regularly failed to pay his tithes to the church? But these companies are getting wealthy through this business. Well, suppose they are, is it because they make so much on each policy, or is it because they issue so many? Am I to deny myself a suit of clothes when needed, because my clothier is getting wealthy?

I believe the quotation is misapplied, "Come out of her, my people." Are we to shun everything, whether good or bad, simply because it is of the world? I know Jesus said, "strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life;" but it is not necessary that we ourselves become narrow that we may walk therein. I believe we as saints are entitled to all the good we can honestly get along the way. Let us not be like those to whom Jesus said, You "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

I am not an agent for any insurance company, neither have I any other object in writing this friendly criticism than that we may come to a better understanding. For when man realizes that he owes a duty first to his God, then to his family, and then to the world at large, will he come nearer living up to the perfect law of the gospel.

Ever praying for the welfare of God's people, that they may prosper both spiritually and temporally, I remain,

Your brother and colaborer,
CHAS. H. LAKE.

INSURANCE POLICIES.

In a recent Herald I read an article on "Heaven's Insurance Policy." I wish to give my views on insurance. It is true that people differ upon this question as on others. Bro. P. gave his idea very forcibly in Herald of August 4. If a brother attends to his church duties and pays his share towards defraying the expenses of his branch, and pays tithing, etc., and at the same time is holding an insurance policy, and is a member of a respectable order, will that brother be lost?

In these hard times it is prudence for a man of moderate means to lay up in store for his family, in case he be taken away from their midst. Death is sure to come sooner or later. I have known a good brother that held an insurance policy and was a member of an order. While he was thus a member of the order and held a policy, I failed to know another man in the church that accomplished more for the church, and took care of his family at the same time. That man has gone to rest. Who dares to say that he did not earn a heaven's insurance policy while upon earth? Yes; and through his forethought and love for his family, his children enjoyed a good education, and his wife a comfortable home. We are told in scripture that he that provideth not for his family is worse than an infidel.

I would ask, Does the providing cease when the man dies? The church cannot do anything for his family after he is gone. The church is not in temporal business, but rather in spiritual work. Insurance and orders are in temporal business. These orders are nothing more nor less than a body of men coöperating together in order to alleviate the sufferings, and to keep their families from destitution. The writer is a member of a good order and carries insurance. What could the church do for my family were I to pass away? Absolutely nothing; therefore, it seems to me that if a man loves his family he will do all within his power for their benefit.

Brethren, let us not be too cranky upon these things. There is nothing like the happy medium. The writer has been a chaplain in the lodge, and while praying prayed that the members might receive the light of truth. Through our effort prejudice has been allayed, and friends made for the church.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Northwest Kansas; Greeting.
—At the district conference held at Blue Rapids, Kansas, August 12 and 13, I was chosen to preside over the above-named district. I realize to a degree the responsibility and care of the work thus placed upon me, and sincerely ask the hearty cooperation of each officer and member. I hope each will esteem it a pleasure to assist in the great work of the Lord according to the law, that the work may move forward. In the revelation of 1887, eighth paragraph, we are told: "Let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all." From this we learn that the burden and care of the work is not placed on the few alone, but is "intrusted" to all. Each should therefore feel an equal interest in the advancement of truth according to their ability.

I trust that officers of branches will seek to work in unison with each other and labor gently with the erring, endeavoring to lead them into the path of virtue and truth, always remembering to keep on hand a goodly supply of charity to draw upon when necessary. Yet as men of God stand firm for the law, remembering that we must one day render an account to the great Judge of all in what manner we have executed his divine law governing the children of the kingdom.

I trust to be able to visit each branch this fall that we may counsel together for the good of the work. Praying that peace and prosperity may be enjoyed by all, I remain,

Your colaborer in the kingdom,
L. F. JOHNSON.

THE REUNION AT WOODBINE.

After one of the best meetings the church has ever experienced, the reunion of '97 has passed into history.

At ten a. m., September 3, an organization was effected by which the First Presidency of the church was placed in charge and S. C. Diggle made secretary, who chose J. F. Mintun for his assistant. An administering committee was also appointed consisting of J. F. Mintun in charge, Frank Criley, C. E. Butterworth, W. H. Garrett, D. M. Rudd, D. A. Hutchings, J. A. Gunsolley, Fred K. Hansen, and F. B. Blair. In connection with this committee, there were 146 administered to and there were experienced some remarkable cases of healing. As a partial result of the meeting in the way of good works there were 51 baptisms; 31 by H. O. Smith, 8 by Chas. Derry, and 8 by J. F. Mintun; 53 were confirmed and 11 children were blessed.

One of the features of the meeting was that of the Sunday school in charge of General Superintendent T. A. Hougas and J. F. Mintun. The work done in this department was of the highest order. We will not forget to mention the Religio work in charge of the leading representative, J. A. Gunsolley, who proved to those in attendance that he is alive in the interests of the Religio. The great number attending these meetings showed that his efforts were appreciated.

On Saturday, September 11, the business session was held, which resulted in selecting Woodbine as the next place to hold the reunion by an overwhelming vote. The old committee consisting of S. B. Kibler, F. C. Oviatt, H. D. Swain, H. O. Smith, P. C. Kemmish, A. M. Fyrando, and S. C. Diggle were retained. The reunion opened with $11.00 to its credit and closed with $32.00 in its favor.

The various services throughout the reunion were marked by a wonderful degree of spirituality, and some expressed themselves to the effect that it had been an event in their Christian experience. In detail the reunion was most gratifying and satisfactory.

S. C. DIGGLE, Sec.

SCIENCE AND THE IMAGINATION.

No notion could be more mistaken than that science and the imagination have a dislike for each other. The fact is, as the whole proceeding of the great science conference now going on at Toronto shows, the two are the best of friends. The question which some time ago used to be much debated, whether the advancement of science was not likely to extinguish the spirit of poetry, now seems ridiculous. Our foremost scientists are half poets. The fascinating address of Sir John Evans at the opening meeting on "Paleolithic Man" was in reality a kind of epic, in the construction of which the imagination played quite as conspicuous a part as what is called pure science.

And the famous scientist himself confesses as much. After marshaling a number of facts, with admirable simplicity and lucidity of exposition, he admitted that they did not amount to much without the aid of the imagination. There were some small stone implements, evidently fashioned by human hands for human uses, dug up here and there in various parts of the world, bearing a striking resemblance to each other, although by the testimony of the rocks some of them may have been millions of years older than others; but of what significance were they unless the imagination could reproduce the man who made and used them, and the conditions under which they must have lived? As Sir John himself said: "Is not this a case in which the imagination may be fairly invoked in aid of science? May we not from these data attempt in some degree to build up and reconstruct the early history of the human family?" And so he imagines our primitive ancestors beginning somewhere in tropical Asia—nobody knows how many millions of years ago—to develop as best they knew how the art of living in such conditions as they found surrounding them, until the need of "fresh fields and pastures new" started the long series of migrations. It is not imagined, however, that those earlier migrations were undertaken with any Klondike rush and fury, but rather with a kind of infinite patience as presuming there must be time enough.

Lord Kelvin, it is true, is disposed to make great account of mathematics in the advancement of the sciences. The possibility of a metaphysician undervaluing mathematics, he says, has always seemed to him one of the greatest marvels of contradiction, which that very wonderful phenomenon in matter, the human mind, can develop. Of all classes of thinkers, he declares, the metaphysical class is the one that ought to pay homage to mathematics. And yet in the signally important contributions both to pure science and to applied science made by Lord Kelvin himself, his genius for mathematics would have made but small headway without the "proleptic glance" the forecasting lead of the imagination.

If the imagination alone would flutter with aimless and impotent wing without the support of mathematics and the various factual sciences, it is equally true that the sciences would trudge around but wearily and with little enough of the real advancement if it were not for the imagination. And the especial value of these great science conventions is in the bringing together of so many men of so many various special aptitudes, supplementary to each other. — Chicago Tribune.

FUTURE CHRISTIAN DISCOVERIES.

THE recent discovery of the "Sayings of Jesus" in an ancient ruin in Upper Egypt gives a special interest to an article by Prof. James Hardy Ropes, of the Divinity School of Harvard University, on "What we may expect from Christian discoveries" in the future. Referring to certain archaeological work now in progress, Prof. Ropes says (The Congregationalist):—

"The older sources of discovery have not lost any of their importance. Geographical exploration is just now prosecuted at Jerusalem with brilliant success by Mr. F. J. Bliss, who has been solving vexed questions of topography by following the ancient wall round the southern side of the city. Such work as his will illustrate the Old Testament, will surely bring to light architectural antiquities, and may disclose inscriptions. From the libraries more discoveries will be made of the same sort as in the past. New manuscripts of the New Testament, some of them of great interest, doubtless remain to be discovered. Only last year one was bought by the Russian Government in Asia Minor; an interesting one has lately been reported from Athens; a few years ago a Syriac translation, perhaps the oldest translation of the Gospels known, was found at Mount Sinai. Quite as much may be expected from the careful investigation of manuscripts already known, but little examined, which lie on the shelves of scores of libraries."

After speaking of the "Teaching of the Twelve Apostles" and other rare fragments of ancient literature which have come to light in recent years, Professor Ropes says: "The one great prize sought for and dreamed of by students of the New Testament and early church history, is the work of Papias, Bishop of Hieropolis in Phrygia, in the first half of the second century after Christ. His interpretations of the oracles of the Lord must give us the key to the various knotty and disputed questions pertaining to the origin of the New Testament."

Professor Ropes also raises the question whether the Gospels are in danger of being superseded by these newcomers, "or, to put it more reasonably, that our idea of our Lord could be considerably modified by some new knowledge." On this he says:—

"It may be confidently replied that this is wholly unlikely. It is probable that the canonical Gospels have preserved practically all the tradition of the evangelical history which came beyond the borders of Palestine at all. The writers of the second, third, and fourth centuries were profoundly interested in all that could be learned of the life of Christ. They occasionally mention extra-canonical sayings that they have picked up here and there, and reverence for the Gospels does not prevent them from transmitting such. But of these, all that can possibly be thought genuine do not amount to twenty, and no one of them is sure enough or important enough to change our conception of Jesus and his teaching. One gets strongly the impression from studying these remains that the work of the writers of our Gospels, the laboriousness of which we seldom realize, was done with a thoroughness which practically exhausted the sources of knowledge at their disposal. We have, doubtless, not indeed a complete account of Jesus' teaching, but yet a complete account of the topics on which he taught and of the ideas which he most emphasized.

"And it is further to be noted that outside tradition can seldom or never have such certainty as that contained in the Gospels of the New Testament. Our reliance on them depends partly on their early date, now well ascertained, but also on the guaranty of the Catholic Church. They contain the history as those churches which had heard the apostles preach received it. They were accepted because they offered not new tradition but old, and the writers were in a sense the agents of the churches. The perpetual tradition of the church accredits them as it does not any other documents whatever. But the final test must be the consistency and intelligibility of the account of Jesus and his teaching which the Gospels furnish. The real difficulty with all such tradition as these logia, or the other extra-canonical sayings of Jesus that have been collected, is that they lack the support which in a large mass of material the several parts give to one another, and that they have no context to make them intelligible. No one can tell what surprises may be in store, but of rivals to the Gospels there can be no question, and of valuable direct light on the life of our Lord there can be comparatively little hope. Indirect light, ancient documents which will make clearer to us the conditions in which our Gospels were written and how they were collected, and information about the complex life of the early church, we may hope for in considerable abundance."—Literary Digest.

The editor of the American Monthly Review of Reviews makes some pertinent comments on the recent shooting of striking miners by deputy sheriffs at Lattimer, Pennsylvania. He shows that the local prejudice against these foreign-born laborers was intense, that many Americans who had worked in the mines before the foreigners came had drifted into other occupations in the Pennsylvania towns and villages of the coal regions, and that the mine owners had brought in more laborers than were needed, which helped to keep wages close to the starvation point. These conditions go far to account for some of the deplorable doings at Lattimer.

Zion's Herald warns the Epworth League of four dangers to which it is exposed: First, that of being "conventionized to death;" second, that of being "ministerized to death;" third, that of being "benevolentized to death;" and fourth, that of being "politicalized to death."

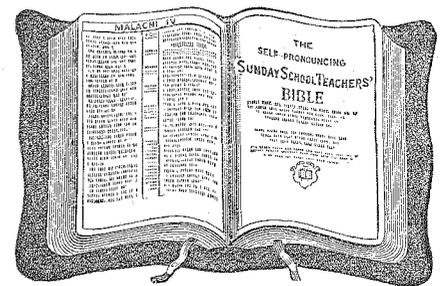

BLASTS FROM THE RAM'S HORN.

Sheep are sometimes taken over a bad road to a good pasture.
 It is easier for water to run uphill than for a selfish man to be happy.
 Blessed is the man who knows how little he knows of other people's business.
 Every drunkard's wife knows that there is a devil.
 Before he can live right he must first love right.
 Thought without purpose is like seed spilled on the ground.
 God never made a cow that gave milk punch.
 Happy the man who finds and removes the particular cause of his misfortune.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"SPURIOUS SPIRITUAL GIFTS."

QUERY.—What is the remedy for a large branch grievously imposed upon through the unrestricted exercise of spurious spiritual gifts, posing as a "Thus saith the Lord"?

Query.—If the high priest who presides over the branch does not possess the gift of discernment and so confesses, whose privilege or duty is it to shield the branch from those who would deceive the saints by exercising spurious and false spiritual gifts professedly under the influence of the Holy Ghost?

It is difficult to answer these questions, for obvious reasons. The queries presuppose the existence of a condition that ought not to exist anywhere.

One source of safety to the branch lies in this, that no instruction requiring branch action, or action of the branch officers is to be accepted and acted upon unless such instruction comes to the branch through its properly constituted authorities, or such authorities have the testimony of the Spirit for themselves. If the presiding elder or high priest, has not the "gift of discernment," and is conscious of his lack, he should not proceed in any action suggested by a "thus saith the Lord," until he has taken counsel of his fellow officers, and there is a concurrence of testimony. Branches are not to be run in their affairs, after organization has been perfected, by the gifts manifested here and there, by this, or that member, man or woman, as the case may be, nor contrary to the written law, which says, "Thou shalt take the things which are written in my scriptures to be my law, to govern my church."

To proceed differently to this is to open a door to possible imposition, both upon individuals and the branch. Anything of revelation important to the well-being and safety of the branch would be likely to come through the branch presiding authorities, if the Lord had respect to the organization and the officers chosen under it; hence revelations for branch government through other sources are open to suspicion, more or less.

All the answer we could make to the second query, other than as given above, would be that the "privilege and duty" of safeguarding the branch in the case supposed, would devolve upon the assistant officers of the branch, if present; in their absence, it is the privilege of those holding the Melchisedec priesthood to exercise the gift of discernment, and detect the improper manifestation. In doing this, wisdom, which is the best gift, is to be exercised, and this will direct that due discrimination as to the gift, its kind, importance, action, or purpose, and the results likely to follow if the manifestation be false, be all taken into the account, and course taken from such consideration. To openly and strongly denounce a gift as false, without such an examination, or consideration, might do far more harm than to let it pass. The character of the person through whom the manifestation is had must also be considered; whether strong or weak, wise or simple-minded, honest or tricky, etc., all of which will at once suggest to the reader that it is no slight task nor pleasant to preside over a large branch, and be an overseer of the flock.

We presided at Plano for several years, and one year at Lamoni. During these periods we very seldom had occasion to denounce any spirit, or manifestation as fraudulent, or spurious. The most of those not clearly genuine were usually self-convicting and passed over harmlessly. And of those that made any trouble, the trouble was too often the result of interference with the officer's privilege to rebuke, reprove, detect, etc.

"The spirits of the prophets are subject unto the prophets," was written a good while ago, and seems to be of good application now.

"Try the spirits" was also good advice, and is also applicable now. This does not mean that one man may by his own will, and following his own feeling, decry the gifts of his fellows; but does mean that when a man essays to try the spirits, and that which they bring, the action must be "to the law and the testimony." The "law" is the written word, the "testimony" is the history, teaching, and arguments of both ancient and modern saints under the operation of the law.

No large body of saints should be hurt, if now and again there should happen to be a manifestation of doubtful origin. There is a spiritual development, going on in most branches that would soon cause a detection of such exhibition, to the safety of the body. Besides this, where there is a number of the elders present in a branch that a spiritual consultation may be had in a priesthood meeting, there would be an equilibrium established and no long-continued deception could ensue.

We think this is enough on this subject, as it is manifestly impracticable for the editor to write so minutely and specifically that every variation from a right spiritual line in a branch large or small, could be at once observed and the perpetrator of the fraud punished, in the editor's absence from the place of observation. Nor could we point out the individual member of such branch, who might hold both the qualifications and duty to denounce false spirits. We are not of the opinion that the danger is extreme, though there may appear to be danger.

"SIGNS IN THE HEAVENS."

ONE of the brethren has left with us a tract bearing the heading given above and written by one J. H. Allen, from which we publish the extract that follows, in which we give the writer's leading points. We do not indorse the statements, but present them among other curious predictions being made, for what time may show them to be worth.

Following the first item we give another, with the heading "May destroy all life," a press dispatch which gives recent statements of scientific men. It is evident, both from ancient and modern predictions of holy writ and from scientific observations, that momentous happenings in the heavens above as well as upon the earth beneath, will occur in "these last days:"—

Dr. Frank M. Close of Oakland, formerly president of the Tacoma Academy of Science, said recently to a reporter of the Morning Call:—

"I do not wish to be considered an alarmist, but I am prepared to tell of the data that are indisputable, and let nature do the rest. The late seismic disturbance which extended over the Middle and Southeastern States, was one of the preliminary throes of a great cataclysm the culmination of which may not occur for several years, and may be located far distant from this region.

". . . What are known as the 'Babylonian tablets' are a set of inscribed plates—book leaves written thousands of years before the Christian era, in which is given an account of the Noachian deluge. These tablets . . . are now in the British Museum at London. They state that Capricornus was the ruling sign of the zodiac at the time of the deluge.

"Berosus, a Chaldean astronomer, wrote the history of Babylon, and quoted the Babylonian tablets, and he further declared that when the sun and planets again together occupied the zodiacal sign Capricornus, another world flood would happen. It is proper to say here that the term 'flood' or 'deluge' does not mean the end of the world, nor the total extinction of life upon the globe, but the subsidence or sinking of a great body of land, such as a continent, beneath the waters of the ocean, as in the case of Atlantis and Lemuria. Every nation upon the globe preserves the legend of such catastrophes, one of which was the 'flood.'

"Just now the planets are rapidly approaching that position in which the earth will be on one side of the sun and all the rest of the planets on the other, all ranged in nearly a straight line. To such arrangement the body of the solar system is trending. The majority are now there, the others rapidly falling into line.

"Beginning on December 9, 1901, and until the 26th of that month, the sun and all the planets will be in a direct line, and only the earth will be alone at one side of the sun at the end of the line, and the balance of the planets on the other side of the sun; and the entire solar system, sun and planets, will occupy astronomically the zodiacal sign of Capricornus.

"Whether the conclusions of the Babylonian astronomer prove correct, remains to be seen. The fact exists that the planetary conditions will obtain." . . .

This, Plummer says, is very apt to tangle up equilibriums and pull the North Pole out of shape, perhaps way around where the equator is—that is, if the axis changes, the ice fields will be directly under the sun and the equator will be in the vicinity of the North Pole. . . .

MAY DESTROY ALL LIFE.

New York, Sept. 12.—Astronomers are now watching with increased interest the big sun spot which has been in great activity for the last two years, and are speculating on the outcome. It is said the molten mass is likely at any time to burst from the sun's surface. Professor Siverimus J. Corrigan, Director of the Goodsell Observatory of Carleton University, on this subject, says:—

"A new planet may at any instant break away from the sun, and the terrific explosion which will necessarily accompany this breaking away will produce a great disturbance of the entire universe, but particularly of the earth, perhaps completely smashing it, and surely destroying all animal life on land as well as in the waters.

"The results of my investigations on this subject indicate that the earth is closely approaching a critical epoch in its career; yet the day or the hour of visitation 'no man knoweth,' but these results have convinced me that it is imminent. Look to the sun.

"Neither is this tremendous disturbance of the earth and the destruction of life upon it completely unprecedented. A similar detachment of solar matter by the same means is known by scientists to have occurred twenty-three million years ago, a period simultaneous with the paleozoic age, at which time all animal and vegetable life then existing on the face of the earth was completely crushed out."

Commenting on Professor Corrigan's statement, Professor Garret P. Serviss says:—

"Every astronomer knows that the sun is the parent of the earth and of all the other known planets. The famous discovery, two years ago, of the strange solar element, helium, in the rocks of the earth, was really a beautiful proof of the substantial identity of the two bodies, the sun and the earth. Helium on the earth is a mark of parentage, like a peculiar strain in the blood of an animal. No astronomer doubts that our globe, and all its comrades, had their origin from the sun.

"The idea which he suggests, that the birth of a new world should have the effect of destroying the life of an older one, has a peculiar significance. Granted that a planet may be born from the sun in the way he points out, the consequences indicated might well result. Life on this earth is possibly only through a very delicate balance of conditions and forces, and the evidence is daily accumulating that even comparatively slight disturbances in the sun are capable of affecting that balance in various ways."

LAGRIPPE AGAIN APPEARS, ETC.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The medical press warns the public against a probable recurrence of influenza. For months past that disease has been raging in severe form in the district of Merv, Turkestan. The number of victims is immense, and although there are fewer deaths than formerly, the violence of the epidemic is said to have increased rather than lessened. The latest reports show that the attacks of influenza leave severe results, such as heart affections, paralysis, etc.

From the foregoing it is apparent that lagrippe is to reappear among the destructive elements that promise to wage war upon human life with a view to its destruction. Latter Day Saints have for years expected just such visitations, and others that are to follow in multitudinous forms and phases. We doubt, however, if as a people we have made the preparation necessary to escape the ravages of the destroyer, by observing the Word of Wisdom and all the commandments, through which immunity from the destroyer and other needed blessings are promised. We would evidently do well to give the subject closer attention. It is said that to be forewarned is to be forearmed—by preparation.

The brute creation has also suffered with influenza or epizootic, which greatly afflicted the horses throughout the country a few years ago and which for a time threatened to "cut off" the "horses and chariots" of "the Gentiles," according to prophetic prediction. Below we give an account of a new pest which has appeared among the cattle in Texas, and of interest in this connection:—

A new and terrible pest has invaded Texas. It is a horned fly, called by scientists hemitobia serrata. The bite of this insect is poisonous. The ugly winged thing is provided with two horns, like those of a cow. This fact, and the one that they love to hover about the horns of cattle, have won for the fly its common name. The pest first made its appearance in Williamson County, Texas. They are half the size of a blue-bottle fly, and land in swarms on the cattle, worrying them to death.

THE FAMINE AND THE DROUGHT.

ADVICES via London state that plentiful rains have at last fallen in India and that the famine is practically at an end. Relief work is reported to have been suspended, and the people have gone to sowing their lands for a new crop. In this connection the Chicago Tribune has something to say of the prevailing drought in America, which we give below. Famines are by no means confined to the eastern or southern hemisphere. We may see them in our own land at no distant day:—

Although America has never suffered from a general and devastating drought of this character one of more than ordinary severity has prevailed throughout the eastern portion of the Mississippi Valley, affecting most severely the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin, with portions of Iowa, Missouri, and Kentucky. While this has injuriously affected corn and other maturing crops over a wide extent of territory, reducing the yield from thirty to fifty per cent, it has been still more damaging so far as the next year's crop of winter wheat is concerned. Up to the present time the ground has been in no condition for plowing throughout a large area, and where sowing has been attempted the grain in many cases has not even sprouted. As a consequence a shortage of the winter wheat crop of next year of not less than one hundred million bushels is already predicted, while fall pastures are being cut short, affecting the outlook for stock at the beginning of winter most unfavorably.

If a drought of a few weeks, like the present, over a comparatively limited extent of territory can inflict so much damage in a land like our own, where a surplus rather than a scarcity is the rule, what must have been its effect in a region possessing the tropical climate and the crowded population of India, with its products for the support of human life limited to rice and a few other grains which have proved almost a total failure for the present year?

BRO. J. A. TANNER, of Bevier, Missouri, who lately discussed points of difference with Elder J. A. Loynd, of the Utah Church, writes that he has been enabled to gain a complete victory for the right. The following from the Bevier Appeal (date not given) is in evidence of his success:—

The debate held at the L. D. S. church between Elder J. A. Tanner, of this city, and Elder Loynd, of Utah, closed Saturday evening. Elder Loynd affirmed that Brigham Young was a prophet and the legal successor to the prophetic office of Joseph Smith, Elder Tanner taking the negative side. The discussion was conducted throughout very pleasantly and in the true spirit. Both ably advocated their respective sides, but Elder Tanner is generally regarded as having presented the most effective arguments and made the best showing in the discussion throughout.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. J. ANTHONY, Basalt, Idaho, September 20:—

I preached to a large turnout of Brighamites last night, on succession. Had considerable sharp shooting at the close. I asked for their house again, but they said no; and thus it is.

Bro. C. E. Crumley, writing from Los Angeles, California:—

The work is slowly onward here. Bro. Hilliard left a broad wake of good influence behind him. Bro. Harris, the only missionary in our parts, has been spreading the truth through various towns. He is now in Los Angeles for a few days "hammering" away at the Utah question. Woe to the follower of Brigham who stands before him. Local work is slow but progressive. We have a district president, Bro. Carmichael, who learns his duty and does it. We have an occasional baptism—one to-day. Most of those baptized are first led to investigation through the efforts of lay members. The same love of God and his work which fills hearts in Lamoni, inspires Southern California saints to action and to noble resolutions.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Reed City, Michigan, September 24:—

We took down the tent yesterday and put it in a car billed for Farwell, and baptized two more, and left for this place. To-morrow we commence in Farwell. All told in Cadillac eleven were baptized, and many others are believing. Bro. Peter Price will go with me to Farwell. He speaks once in awhile and helps all he can. It is hard for one to preach every night in the tent. I am very tired and have a bad cough and cold. I need rest, but there seems to be no place to stop.

Elder John Kaler, Tuncurry, New South Wales, August 24:—

No less than twenty-three have been baptized in New South Wales of late by Brn. Wells, Broadway, and Butterworth. I expect to move to Sydney soon; have been getting out timber to build me a house there on church lot. The Lord has been with us to bless and assist so that we rejoice in this great latter-day work.

Bro. G. M. Shearer, Walker, Missouri, September 27:—

W. C. Cather, of Weir City, Kansas, has been preaching here for two weeks with fair interest, quite large crowds, and the sermons were telling; quite a lot of talk on the streets in regard to the preaching. Bro. Cather is a bright light in this work and will prove to be a mighty power. He has been blessed in every discourse.

Bro. R. M. Maloney wrote from Downs, Oklahoma, concerning the late reunion of the Oklahoma saints, that it was a decided success and wrought results very favorable to the work in the Territory. We give here with an extract from his minutes, being obliged to omit reunion minutes, for obvious reasons:—

We count the reunion as a success in many ways. The saints were blessed and strengthened in the faith. The Sunday school work is better understood and new energy is put forth in that line. A committee was appointed to arrange for a reunion in 1898. A gospel tent fund was started and ninety dollars subscribed during the reunion. Quite a number of church books were placed in the hands and homes of the saints. There was no jealousy nor discord among any of the saints that the writer observed, but our camp meeting passed off peacefully and pleasantly, and we are encouraged to believe that the work in Oklahoma is on better footing than ever before. Oklahoma is a new field and we are anxious and hopeful for the progress of the work here. Our reunion has given us courage, new life, and energy to press on and labor till the Master calls. We ask for the cooperation and prayers of all the saints that our efforts may be well for the latter-day work.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Farwell, Michigan, September 30:—

I am right in it here; tent full of people every night, and they seem to be quiet and interested. We look for much good to be accomplished here. But I am rather drilled out; young Bro. Price only is with me, and he is now on the sick list. We have good weather for tent work.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH left Lamoni on Thursday, September 1, for Toronto, Ontario, to attend the conference of the London district, which convened on the 2d and 3d inst.

Brn. William Anderson and J. S. Snively left Lamoni on the 28th ult. for the Nauvoo district. Bro. I. N. Roberts, who lately returned from Kansas points left on the same date for Minnesota, much improved in health.

A line from Bro. F. R. Tubb with inclosure informs us that Bro. Heman C. Smith was preaching in the saints' mission hall, Bow Common Lane E., London, England, on Sunday, September 5, morning and evening; also on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Handbills announced the services and the speaker and "missionary from America."

Bro. G. W. Carter, of Kerr post office, Caldwell County, Missouri, who has lately moved to Far West, writes that he finds the people ready to hear the gospel. He hopes to see many enter the fold, also to see saints gather where once driven out by violence; and that they may so live that no fault can justly be found with their conduct.

Conference of the Mobile, Alabama, district postponed until December 4. See notice.

Bro. C. M. Fulks reports improving prospects for the work at Coalgate, Indian Territory. Saints there had been strengthened by the labors of Bro. S. W. Simmons, who baptized some, ordained others to act for the branch, and left the work on a better footing with some investigating. The saints were trying to keep the unity of the Spirit that the light may be seen and heeded by others.

The Minneapolis Times of the 27th ult. has a communication from Bro. E. A. Stedman, on the subject of theology as taught by Brigham Young. It is designed to inform the public concerning some points not brought out by Utah elders at work in the twin cities.

Bro. Henry and Sr. Lucinda Fry, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, wish to obtain a home among saints for their ten year old grandson, Jesse Fry, the child of their deceased son. They write that he is a good boy and used to farm life; a home at Lamoni or the region round about preferred.

Bro. Peter Muceus, of Porsgrund, Norway, who was baptized into the church in the State of Wisconsin, sends for printed matter, for reading and distribution. Bro. Muceus is a priest. He intends to study the word with a view to preaching it in his native land.

The local press makes favorable mention of the baptism of thirteen at New Castle, New South Wales, already mentioned by the brethren. Baptismal services are generally impressive and almost always make a favorable impression upon thoughtful people. Wisely conducted, they leave lasting impressions upon many.

The Roslyn, Washington, News, of the 11th, makes friendly mention of Bro. H. L. Holt and his preaching. It says: "One marked feature of the services is the absence of the 'Hat,' which is usually so much in evidence at the modern church." It spells hat with a big H, indicating that some folks have been overdoing it. It is refreshing to the newspaper man to meet a minister who is laboring solely because he loves the truth and wishes to present it to his fellows.

The Fort Dodge, Iowa, Chronicle of the 27th ult. publishes an article on the Book of Mormon, written by Bro. C. J. Hunt. The subject is clearly stated and will doubtless be understood because free from reflections upon other sects, which, we are sorry to say, has characterized some articles that have come to our table from other points of late.

The Midland Monthly, published at Des Moines, Iowa, contains an illustrated article on "Anti-polygamy Mormonism" or the "Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints," in its October number; written by a young newspaper man of Ottumwa, Iowa. The engravings are good. The article itself contains some correct statements, for which we give the writer due credit. However, some of its statements are untrue and unjust, and with its sensational features will do us more harm than good. Some of the writer's misstatements in regard to church doctrine and attitude toward political matters are gross misrepresentations, and place the church with its people in a false light. Aside from an interview with the President of the church, the writer seems to have been unfortunate in obtaining much of his information from unofficial and unreliable sources. He has failed to comprehend, hence has failed to interpret the underlying principles and spirit of our work.

The Greek cabinet failed to receive a vote of confidence from the national legislature and resigned, on the 30th.

A summary of the progress of yellow fever in the South, since the outbreak of the epidemic to October 1, shows a total of 783 cases and 69 deaths. The plague is slowly spreading.

Buenos Ayres advices state that during the past week or so crops have suffered more from drought and severe frosts than from locusts.

Thirty-eight miners were wounded, several fatally so, in a fight between rival factions of Polanders at Girardville, Pennsylvania, the 27th.

Prime Minister Badeni, of Austria, who tendered his resignation with a request to Emperor Francis Joseph for permission to fight a duel with Doctor Wolff, the leader of the German National party in the Reichsrath, and who fought and was wounded, has been continued in power, the Emperor refusing to accept his resignation.

Japan has extended her modern system of treaties to the United States, Mexico, Brazil, Peru, and Chile, and is negotiating treaties with leading South and Central American nations. She has also made treaties with Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, and other leading nations. The treaties are to go into effect in 1899. The light of the western world is shining in upon oriental nations, preparing the way for the emancipation of the world.

September 29.—The late Spanish cabinet, under the leadership of General Azcarraga, Premier and Minister of War, has resigned. It is supposed that the liberal party, under Senor Sagasta, will be given the reins of government. Senor Sagasta favors the recall of General Weyler from Cuba and the granting of reforms, including a plan equivalent to home rule with a Governor General nominated by the Spanish government. The situation in Spain is critical and full of interest.

There is significance in the statement that the United States War Department has spent over twenty millions of dollars, most of it for coast defenses, since the month of July. It begins to look as if the governments of this world are basing their ideas of armaments on an opinion that "peace" is to be "taken from the earth."

Mussulman notables in Crete have petitioned the great powers and the Sultan to save them from starvation, which is threatened by destruction of their homes and supplies.

Warsaw advices dated September 28 report an extensive plot, supposed to have been engineered by socialists, to kill the Czar of Russia. The principal street in Warsaw, over which the imperial party would pass was tunnelled, for the purpose of using explosives. German officers and Polish citizens are said to have been arrested, as implicated.

Berlin advices of the 27th state that the Prussian police are on the track of a powerful anti-dynastic movement in South Germany, which includes many members of the best families, among them two notable university professors; also that Berlin authorities were endeavoring to conduct the inquiry with the utmost secrecy. From present indications the growth of democratic ideas among the people has become so deeply seated as to defy arrest, even by the monarchical police. Emperor William may see a republic established in Germany at no distant day. The world is moving, and the purposes of Providence in behalf of humanity are "ripening fast," unfolding almost every hour.

British troops have met determined resistance and with some repulses on the Indian frontier of late. Advices from Simla, October 3, show that tribal chiefs have arranged a plan of coöperation to oppose the British advance.

Senor Sagasta, of the Spanish Liberal party, has been selected by the Queen Regent to form a new ministry for Spain. It is understood that General Weyler will be recalled from Cuba and that reforms will be instituted in the island at once. The Cubans declare they will accept nothing but absolute independence.

A new ministry has been formed in Greece. Grave difficulties growing out of the late war, confront the new cabinet.

A Guatemalan, removed to Mexico, says the people of Central America are tired of misrule, robbery, and political upheavals, and want to be annexed to the United States.

"There is a jewel which no Indian mine can buy,
No chemic art can counterfeit;
It makes men rich in greatest poverty,
Makes water wine, turns wooden cups to gold,
The homely whistle to a sweet music's strain;
Seldom it comes—to a few from heaven sent—
That much in little—all in naught—content."

"DIFFERENT NATURES REQUIRE DIFFERENT TRAINING."

NATURE, as Webster defines, is peculiar constitution, hence our family circles are diversified by different natures, dispositions, and characters. Every child is marked by some peculiarity, which distinguishes it from all others, and nowhere can two children be found who are exactly, in all respects, alike.

To train is to entice or persuade. Thus we may teach and instruct; but to get those to follow what we teach is sometimes very difficult. It not only takes time, patience, and perseverance to teach and train the different dispositions which may be placed under our care, but we need more than this; we require the aid of God's Spirit to help us in so important a work. I believe all can say within themselves that many times they feel unequal for the responsibilities placed upon them; for after using our best judgment, as we consider, our object to accomplish that which we desire fails. Then it is we need our heavenly Father's help to assist us that we may decide what is best for us to do.

I believe every mother who has been placed in so responsible a position should look well to the interest of her children, and see that their conduct and habits are pure and upright. Some children are more easily influenced by their surroundings than others. These should be guarded very carefully, for habits once formed are hard to be broken. "Just as the twig is bent the tree is inclined." Every child should be taught to obey and respect those who are placed over him, whether parent, guardian, or teacher, for if we can implant the right of principle within them, a good work is already begun.

I cannot begin to tell how all natures should be dealt with; but will mention some who have come under my own observation. A child with a sullen disposition is not responsible for that which it may have inherited from its parents, therefore they should take this in consideration, and deal with it accordingly. To force or use any severe form of punishment with one of that nature may be the worst form of training, while to reason or advise would be the best method. Those of a determined or willful disposition should be placed upon their honor, if they are old enough to comprehend their duty after its being explained to them.

Small children are great imitators, and naturally whatever their parents do or say they will most likely do the same. If we would have our children act with respect and courtesy toward us, we should act with respect to them. Solomon said, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." To find out what is the right way to train them is of great importance, and there is much attached to the work of training.

I believe the gospel should be taught as the first stepping stone. As soon as their young minds can grasp the idea of there being a Supreme Being, they should be taught to reverence their Creator; also have the principle of faith explained to them. They can then feel they have a helper in every time of need, a friend that is closer than a brother. We do not know how many trials and disappointments children have while at play. I shall never forget, at one time, when quite small, how disappointed I was. Some girls came to visit me. After taking out all my toys and getting things all ready for play, some of the girls were angry and were going home. I did not know the cause and felt very much disappointed. After they had gone I ran into the house, telling my mother how badly they had treated me, and had not even stayed to help me put the things away. I told her I did not like them, and felt vexed at them. She told me I should not feel that way toward them, for our heavenly Father was sorry to see any of his children angry, and if I would ask him he would help me to treat them kindly when I should meet them again, and I must not even mention it, for I must forgive and forget. This seemed to satisfy me, and ever after this when trials or disappointments came I asked my heavenly Father to help me. This implanted the principle of faith within me that has never left me until this present time. When placed under difficult circumstances I take it to the Lord in prayer, and have always realized an answer, although at times I do not receive the answer at once.

If we could only get our children to confide in us, I believe a great many of the difficulties which now seem to exist would be removed. A child who confides in its parents, particularly its mother, never wanders very far from the path of duty, for there are but few mothers who do not teach their children to comply with all that is just.

The implantation of principle is of unspeakable importance, and especially when culled from time to time out of the Bible. The child feels its parents' authority supported by the Bible, and the authority of the Bible supported by its parents' influence.

A FEW KIND WORDS.

They have a right to be here,
For God intended to bless
This earth by their presence,
When we come to our rest.

I HAVE have often thought that I would like to give my views in regard to training children; but then I would think, "There are so many who are more able to write than you, that your time would be wasted." But now I am going to try, because I love the little things, and I try to have as much patience with them as my heavenly Father has had with me, and if they get cross and fretful I try and divert their minds away from the things that are troubling them, and I find it is just as easy to do that way as to begin to whip them. I shudder when I think of their tender flesh being pounded, because perhaps they have pushed a teacup off the table with their little elbow. I remember such a case, but I have seen so much of it for small mistakes that I have thought if I were God I would punish such people, for they seem to deserve it; (I mean those that whip.) It is said by some that sin is a part of their natures, and that it is like a disease, and the worse the disease the more medicine it takes to cure.

Well! the older I get the more I can see the beauty of taking my medicines, if I have to take them in homeopathic doses. Therefore I believe that fight with little children is time wasted, and that patience and tact is far better if used with judgment and skill. It is an old saying, "Bend the twig rather than break it," and I know for myself that when I wanted to grow a beautiful plant I was always very careful in training it. I know that it is said, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." Thus they will quote what Solomon said. Well, I do hope the Latter Day Saints will keep out of the troubles that Solomon went into, and then perhaps they will not have to get angry at a little child.

Now I have a little more to say to fathers and mothers. Please do let your children know that you love them. Not just at Christmas time, but every day. I believe the fathers and mothers love their babies. Let them know it. Why not continue to let them know it as they grow up? When they get past twelve years old they need some one to help them. Fathers, do not let a cold stone wall grow up between you and your boys. The same kiss and hug that you give him when a child will not spoil his young mustache; that is, if you have continued it up. I do not mean a kiss and a kick, I mean a kiss and God bless you. And what is good for fathers and boys is just as good for mothers and girls also. Now I would ask you to remember how we pray to our heavenly Father to let us have his Spirit so that we may know that he still loves us, and how good we feel when we get it. Let your children have a taste of the love of God from you as they grow in years, and you will never regret it.

Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

SEND us your articles, your paragraphs, or your selections. Our supply is running low. Questions, too, are in order at all times.

When writing for the "Department" be sure to observe, 1. To write plainly. 2. To write on but one side of the paper. 3. To make your articles short and to the point. 4. That short paragraphs, or even sentences, are often as useful as long heavy articles. 5. To sign your full name (which will not be published if you so desire).

The reunion season is now over. Did you attend one of the reunions? Many of us did. Did you "absorb" anything in the line of Sunday school or Religio work that you can apply to your work in your local school? Will you apply it? or will you simply let it pass and you keep right on in the same old rut? I trust you will be among the wise who, when they see an improvement, will at once seek to adopt it.

Below is a copy of circular letter sent to the various schools of the Fremont district by the assistant superintendent, Bro. Joseph Roberts, of Thurman, Iowa. It was designed to help superintendents in reviewing the period of Hebrew history just studied:—

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

THE Sunday school work is of vast importance and should not be allowed to suffer on account of a lack of interest in the different departments, but we should continually keep an eye on this work in all its different phases; for if in any part it is neglected the entire organization must suffer loss. How important then it is that we be able to view the whole machinery by becoming thoroughly acquainted with all its needs, by a prayerful study in regard to what are the best ways and means by which the greatest good can be accomplished.

No doubt we all, especially we who are not in more favored localities, feel the necessity of a better understanding in regard to the best way in which to accomplish the greatest good. And the question now is, How to bring about that better understanding, that uniformity of action may prevail.

The organizing of the general and district associations should by all be appreciated, that we may thereby have system and order, instead of confusion. But when we consider the distance that even the district associations are from a great number of Sunday school workers, and how limited the time while in convention, we think there is very great need of organization in reach of all, that the Sunday school work may receive new life and energy in all parts of the district. Have certain places where the officers and teachers of say two, three, or four schools may frequently meet, that we may each have the benefit of the other's experience, and also consult in regard to new methods and thereby become so strengthened as to infuse life and energy into the different schools.

We should live in touch with this work every day, all the time. I know that our environments have much to do with the progress we make in this as well as in all other parts of church work, but we should so order our surroundings as to be most conducive to spiritual growth.

I know we housewives are always busy. We cook too much; we eat too much. A full stomach, a stupefied intellect. You say variety is conducive to health, and so it is; but we do not have to cook it all the same day; cabbage to-day, turnips to-morrow; ample time to study Sunday's lesson.

We need not be afraid of eating too little, unless it be in time of real famine. It is spiritual food that we use so sparingly; not that it is not prepared, but that we have become so entangled with the things of this world as to repel the Spirit, rather than invite its holy presence.

Inasmuch as the Sunday schools are stepping stones to the church, yea, real auxiliaries, they should engage the attention of the entire church; and when we consider the wonderful influence that the elders have, we think that every elder, whether local or traveling, should encourage the Sunday schools by their presence, and also by a word of cheer and comfort, that the whole school, both officers, teachers, and scholars, may take new courage and press on, when they may otherwise give up the school and go home thoroughly disgusted with Sunday school work, feeling that no one is interested and therefore that their work has all been a failure. . . .

We hear much said about coming up higher. It is preached, and it is talked; but it must be practiced.

We receive encouraging reports of the Sunday school work in various districts, for which we feel truly thankful; and we of this district should take courage and move forward, determined to do all we can for the advancement of this grand work, praying for the power and influence of the Holy Spirit that we may intelligently move forward, realizing that the blessings of heaven are resting upon our labors.

KEWANEE, Ill., Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference and Sunday school convention, held at Buffalo Prairie, was quite well attended, the young saints taking an active part at the convention. Preaching by Brn. J. H. Lake, D. C. Smith, and T. J. Sheldon, which was well received, made the sessions instructive and interesting. Branch reports show a gain of membership throughout the district.

The saints' new brick church building in this city is progressing exceptionally well, and the trustees are worthy of high congratulations for zeal and ability, as the entire charge is given to them, and all who behold the building express entire appreciation and satisfaction. It now appears that the saints here will have more prestige and consideration from the higher classes, and a greater opportunity for bringing our beliefs before them than ever before. Meetings are continued each Sunday morning, with Sunday school immediately after in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, which are comfortable and pleasant. These meetings, with Young People's Willing Workers and Prayer Union, held at the homes of saints, keep the spirit of zeal and fellowship awake.

Brn. J. D. Jones and W. Willitts are filling appointments at a neighboring town: so prospects seem bright, and prosperity forthcoming, although the saints have not inherited the earth as yet; but with faith, hope, and charity, we trust to continue the journey of life, and be found worthy of such an inheritance with the redeemed.

Your brother in Christ,
ALMA WHITEHOUSE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 15.

Editors Herald:—Our district tent was first set up three months ago, and several have stated that this has been the most successful season since it was stretched. This opinion is no doubt formed from general appearances, for eternity alone will reveal the full extent of good done this year, as well as years past. Counting to-night, we have had nine weeks of preaching under this canvas, at five points in the district, and the apparent fruits have been seven baptized and a good many believers. The work has been under the supervision of our missionary, Elder M. H. Bond, who also did a great deal of the preaching.

The local ministry have assisted more this year than heretofore. Six of them have preached, and several others have actively aided in the singing, prayer, and other service not so noticeable, but none the less important. As far as I could observe, every effort was blessed with power, and surely we have great reason to thank our Master for these and many other blessings received up to the present time.

At Oak Hill (know as Gravois or Beckville), excepting two nights, we held four weeks of continuous preaching, with two sermons each Sunday, and baptized four of the seven mentioned. And right here I wish to note that gospel work done there, perhaps thirty or thirty-five years ago, by your senior editor and others, still lives in the hearts and souls of the now members of the Reorganized Church, who still bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

The tent is now pitched in the northwestern part of the city, just outside the limits, on Bro. Frank Gall's lot. Bro. Gall has kindly done most of the incidental work about the tent, as he and his estimable wife have cared for it in general, and made visitors welcome spiritually and temporally. The weather turned bad after the first few days, but I feel sure that the efforts which were especially blest, will result in good.

From these experiences I suggest that the best way to reach the people of large cities is with tents. A tent should be made of oiled, light weight material, nearly if not quite round, with one center pole separately fastened, so as to raise and lower the tent by means of block and tackle. It should be dropped every night. This will not only cover the furniture, and thus better secure it from rain and pilfering, but will also save it from cyclones and tornadoes; for this latter element we have had to reckon with this year to the extent of about twenty dollars. A portable organ and canvas folding seats in number about seventy-five. One elder in charge will do if he has an organist. And if a choir of about eight could attend regularly, or even occasionally, and sing those songs composed by the saints, for those who work spiritually, there would be abundant success almost anywhere in the city.

I should mention that the police have shown great anxiety to give us full protection of the law, but we have had no trouble either in St. Louis or East St. Louis; further, I want to thank Bro. John Novis, of Oak Hill, for assisting in watching the tent there.

Yours,
JOHN S. PARRISH.

COATS, Ark., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald:—I started to my mission field August 27, and according to previous appointment stopped at Cane Hill, Missouri, and preached at night to a very attentive audience. I am glad to report the Sunday school at Cane Hill progressing finely under the supervision of Bro. Philemon Frisbie. Next day I arrived at Coats, and preached to a full house of eager listeners, being assisted by Bro. D. R. Baldwin, of Ravenden Springs. He preached in the forenoon on Sunday and I in the evening. At the close of the meeting several, who are not of our faith, requested us to come again, and we arranged to begin a protracted meeting September 18.

I received an invitation from Bro. J. A. Sinclair of near West Plains, Missouri, to be present at his forty-fourth wedding anniversary, which they would celebrate September 1. Seven of their children, many grandchildren, besides saints and friends were present, and all seemed to be happy. Dinner was announced, and behold a long table spread with bounties good enough for a king. Afterwards we repaired to a beautiful grove, where seats had been prepared for the occasion, and I had the privilege of addressing the audience upon the sacred tie of the marriage covenant. At night I preached at the Bootman schoolhouse, and continued each evening until I delivered seven sermons, being assisted by Bro. C. M. Bootman. One was baptized at the close of the meeting, and several more seemed to be somewhat interested.

The next point was Vera Cruz branch, Douglas County, Missouri, having been summoned to serve on an elder's court, to try two brethren for unchristianlike conduct. I will suggest that the saints everywhere will do well to heed the instructions given by Paul to Timothy, which reads: "Against an elder receive not an accusation, but before two or three witnesses."—1 Tim. 5:19. While we were at Vera Cruz met many brethren and friends whom I had not seen for three years; some of them gave me a pressing invitation to stay longer and preach for them, but I felt like duty called me to my own field of labor. When we had finished the business, we started for my home, Pomona, Missouri, a distance of fifty miles; as there are no railroads we had to make the trip with a team. Brn. C. M. Bootman, John B. Graham, M. B. Williams, and I were the crowd, and I believe that each enjoyed the trip. We arrived at my house late Wednesday evening, the 15th, and I enjoyed a stay of two days with my family.

I came here the 18th, according to previous appointment, and began a meeting the same evening and on Sunday. People came six and seven miles, and a few saints came fifteen miles. Half of the people could not get in the house. There is a good interest manifest. I have had a lonesome time introducing the angel message to the people of North Arkansas, and at times I have thought I was doing no good at all. But I have learned that it takes a long, steady fight to revolutionize people's minds and build up our work in new fields. I now see the mist is clearing away in this field. During my absence I received invitations to go to ten counties in the north half of the State to preach the gospel. Among them an inquiry from a Baptist preacher wishing me to tell him something about our faith. I opened a correspondence with him, and sent some of our literature. A few days ago I received a letter from him, stating that he is converted, and wishes me to come and baptize him. He said, "I have preached what the Baptists called the Bible for nine years, but God has shown me that the Latter Day Saints are right."

I am truly glad that the time has come when I can report favorable news for the work in North Arkansas. Now we need to pray the Lord to send more laborers to Arkansas.

Some sectarians are writing and challenging for discussion, but I shall do as I have done before, hold them off until I see that a discussion is absolutely necessary.

JOSEPH WARD.

PARRISH, Ill.; Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Slover and I have been holding meetings at the above place, and four were baptized on Tuesday; one a Christian preacher. Our Master graciously bestowed his Spirit, to our confirmation and joy. The cause is in a fair condition I think at that place. Before coming here I held meetings at Springerton and Bungay two weeks, but there was not much interest at either place. I visited a sister of the Utah faith and explained the difference between the two churches; she hardly knew anything about the history of the church or about polygamy. We left her very favorable to our claims, and think she will come into the true church ere long. We came to Odel school-house yesterday; meeting last night, school full, good liberty; will remain over Sunday. Pray for us that we may receive health, wisdom, and strength for the work; all the saints are talking of going to the reunion of the district at Arrington Station, on Air Line railroad.

Yours in the faith,

V. D. BAGGERLY.

RODGERS, Texas, Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—I started last Saturday to go to Gatesville, Coryell County, to meet some members of the church there to carry me to Pidcoke, some sixteen miles away, where I expected to do some preaching; but missing train connection at McGregor, did not arrive at Gatesville until Sunday, so did not meet anyone to carry me to Pidcoke. I did not have money to pay for conveyance, and could not walk that distance and carry my grip, so I turned back and stopped off at Rodgers to visit the saints there. I found them getting along about as usual. Bro. E. D. Thompson is at his shoe bench, mending shoes for the public, and arguing on the Scriptures with those who don't agree with him. He keeps his Bible right at hand to refer to. He has lived here for some time, but is talking about moving to Wichita County for the health of his wife and daughter Tennie; and he says he wants to get where there is a branch of the church. It may be that he wants to get into a new section, where he can do more preaching.

I aim to leave here next Monday. I have to do what preaching I do in a small section of country, on account of scarcity of money. I have received three dollars and forty-two cents this conference year. My family has not received anything from any source as to the church. I hardly ever preach the law of tithing, because I am a missionary, and fear some one would say I did it for my own and my family's benefit; and so very little tithing is paid in this section of Texas. The Bishop seems to think this district ought to pay the expenses of one missionary. I guess I have spoiled the district, in paying my own expenses for so long and not calling upon them. I suppose they thought I had plenty of money, but this is to notify the district that I am not able to pay my indebtedness at this time, and if you can pay your tithing to the church, then the church can pay my family what is owing them. The money must be paid into the Bishop's hands before he pay pay it out. "Pay that thou owest;" the Lord not excepted.

I am still yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion at Bushrod park is over, and many hearts were made to rejoice as the faith and hope of the saints were explained by the various speakers. Three of the speakers are worthy of special mention; Brn. Hilliard, Barmore, and Parkin. Bro. Hilliard delivered the crowning two sermons of the last day. In the morning he took for his text Matthew 16:17-19, and showed that the "gates of hell" had not and could not prevail against Christ's church. He followed in the evening on the same subject, proving that "if his church could not cast the Devil out, it had no power to save, and if it has not power in this world to cast him out, what assurance have we that Christ will have power over him in the other world?" He showed that there has been a conflict between Christ and the Devil all down through the stream of time, and that Christ would finally wrest his power from him and gain a complete victory. When we enter Christ's church we enter the conflict too, and we must not be discouraged, but have faith in God, and appeal to him in the name of Christ, and have faith all the time. His sermon was more than well received. We have only one George H. Hilliard, but I wish we had more. The saints are all jubilant.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., Aug. 18.

Editors Herald:—Last Sunday the president of the Hamilton branch (New Castle) baptized thirteen in the Hunter River; and today we officiated for two more. This makes sixteen in the last three months. Half of them were the fruits of the work of teachers in the Sunday school.

The children in this country have a slight advantage over some others by the knowledge received at the day school, where scripture lessons are a part of the course of study. But the children of the saints' Sunday school would not need to depend on that alone. The excellent instruction contained in the Quarterlies, which is inculcated by faithful teachers, prepares them for the kingdom sooner than those belonging to parents of other churches. I noticed that the superintendent of the saints' school sometimes curtailed the lesson review and finished by catechizing the children on the first principles of the gospel. Hardly a child in the school can be found who cannot pass the examination satisfactorily. It is a common thing, too, to see the same juveniles at the mid-week prayer meeting. These are among the hopeful signs in our ranks in this land.

Mr. Ben Tillett, the socialist and labor orator, worker, and agitator, of London, is now in the colonies for his health and on a lecture tour. He is naturally eloquent; and the irregularities and evils of the financial, industrial, and social departments of the world's affairs furnish him with favorable material upon which to spend his eloquence. The papers are criticising his positions, which serves to bring out both sides of the great and crying problems now before the world.

One point was of interest to me, and that was the hope which he expressed that selfishness would be put away among the great suffering mass of laboring classes of humanity. Such, he said, only defeated their aims. Here is the crux of the whole position. Several socialistic schemes have been tried and failure resulted; because the perversity of human nature, with its selfishness, ambition, or jealousy stood in the way to success. The principles of the colony or community were nice on paper, but impractical in the present constitution of human nature. The world is helpless after all, and needs regeneration. And He who offers to regenerate the human heart also provides the best plan of Christian socialism to be obtained. We claim to have this plan and regeneration, restored by the Author. What tremendous importance there is in our message! Are our efforts as a church, to herald these glad tidings to others, commensurate with the importance of the message and our responsibility in the same? If we can answer in the affirmative, happy are we.

I go to Sydney this week to expose Utah elders who, I am informed, are introducing themselves as elders of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Foundry Hill, WHITLOCK,
Tennessee, Oct. 1.

Editors Herald:—The work is onward in this part of the mission, we are glad to note. By the united efforts of Brn. Henson, Snow, and the writer we have added by baptism sixty-one, and there are many more "almost persuaded." Bro. Henson is a "stalwart" for this country, and is the very best in my acquaintance for warming up the old branches and watering those who have been converted for years, as well as others. He has done the major part of the baptizing and is the right man here, and should be richly sustained.

We organized a Sunday school yesterday and sent for supplies—the first in the district that I know of. The "yellow jack" is in close proximity; the people are praying for frost. Bro. T. C. K. is quarantined at Scranton. Afflictions come not singly. May the good Lord abundantly provide.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 20.

Editors Herald:—I wrote to the Herald about seven years ago, asking for the prayers of the saints in my behalf. I had been suffering from acute neuralgia for many months; and as I sat some days after writing, thinking now that the Herald had been published and mailed, and some had received their papers and in the evening would pray for me and I would be healed, suddenly the pain all left me and it has never returned.

I have received instant relief from pain many times through the prayers of the saints; and now I believe the Lord will give me strength according to my needs if the saints will kindly remember me in their secret prayers. I have six small children and my duties are many; but if I work but a few hours at what I did not consider hard work in the past, I am not able to be up at all the next day. I ask you all to pray for me, dear saints, that if it is the Lord's will I may become robust and strong, and I will try to be faithful as I have tried in my weakness.

ARTHUR, Ont., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald:—Am busy in the work, preaching and visiting every day; am at present feeling very unwell. The Lord is blessing my labors abundantly of late; am having full houses; many are interested while multitudes are scorning; yet notwithstanding the opposition, the cause of God is rolling forth. It seems to move the faster when persecution rages and slanderous stories go the rounds. Twenty-four have been baptized this last month and others are about to step into the kingdom. I expect Elder R. C. Evans shortly to organize a branch.

I find lots to do; more calls than I can fill, and it seems much easier to convince and convict the people of late than ever before in my work. Was sorry to learn of the persecution that fell to our brother, T. C. Kelley, in Mississippi. Truly Satan is not dead yet and has not forgotten his old tactics of killing off the saints. May the Lord help us to be faithful that we may be accounted worthy to suffer when Satan shall again seek to destroy God's people. No doubt persecution will be more general when the endowments from heaven are given to the ministry.

As ever, in the conflict,

RITCHIE, Ill., Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—The late two-days' meeting held at Mission branch, LaSalle County, was in many regards a success. The weather was ideal; the social services were peaceful and spiritual, and the preaching represented "unity in diversity." Two young brethren were ordained to the priesthood, and if prayers and good wishes have influence on life's successes, doubtless they will have attained a full measure at the end of their earthly working days. Brethren John H. Lake, T. J. Sheldon, W. Vickery, L. Houghton, and G. Schiedecker were present, besides a number of the resident brethren contributed materially to the success of the meetings. "It was good to be there."

We passed on from Mission to visit scattered Israel in Braidwood, Coal City, and other adjacent places. Thus far we have found all in the faith, and in most instances in the spirit of the gospel. Everywhere the time to visit seemed too short to me, and in some instances my soul was filled with love and gratitude to God in witnessing how those isolated saints are kept in the beautiful life and faith of the gospel by reading God's word and living to enjoy the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. Our Lord made no mistake when he said: "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up unto everlasting life." I fully realized that there was no spot on this earth where it was not "good to be a saint of latter days."

In company with Bro. L. Houghton we began a series of meetings last evening in an M. E. chapel in this neighborhood. We hope to continue the effort so long as the interest of the work shall demand, or circumstances permit. We had a good-sized audience last evening, but we do not accept it, necessarily, as a compliment to preachers to have a large congregation to hear the first sermon. We seek for wisdom and strength to do our duty, leaving results with God.

Believing all will be "crowned" who "strive lawfully," I remain, "in hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." F. M. COOPER.

LUCAS, Iowa, Sept. 29.

Editors Herald:—On August 1 I secured the use of the Coal Creek Union church, thirteen miles west of Oskaloosa, used it one week, when the Baptists and United Brethren, who have regular appointments there, closed the door against me at the close of the first week, and threatened me with eggs, "rare done." But this was stopped by those they call sinners. After being shut out, I went to Oskaloosa, expecting to go north the next afternoon; but while I was walking on the streets, I was met by three men, who asked me if I was the man that had been preaching at Coal Creek. I told them I was; they said, "We are not members of any church, but we helped to build it a Union church, and still help to keep it up—help pay two preachers—and we demand equal rights and justice to all. Will you come back if we will secure the church?" I told them I would. They got up a petition and circulated it among the donors of the church, and returned to Oskaloosa, and took me back, opened the church, where we had fair congregations for two weeks. I left several near the kingdom, and they have since sent for me to come back, and I expect to visit them soon after conference.

From there I went to Pekay; again I was shut out of the Congregational church, but the good people of Pekay who have not been poisoned by sectarianism opened the large new schoolhouse, when I held meetings for about three weeks with good interest.

I had the pleasure of baptizing Sister Calbert, whom I feel confident will be an active and useful member, and there are several more that will follow soon. I organized a Sunday school and a cottage prayer meeting. There are several good saints in Pekay, and I have no doubt of the success of the work in that place.

At the close of our last services, in behalf of the saints and friends, Sister Campbell presented me with a fine Bible; and the good people of Oskaloosa and Pekay, knowing that it takes money to travel on the cars, amply supplied my wants in that line. I went from there to Lost Creek, held two services, expect to return and hold a series of meetings.

EAST AURORA, N. Y., Sept. 23.

Editors Herald:—After an absence of nearly six weeks from my field of labor, on account of sickness of my little girl, I am glad to be able to report that all is fairly well, and that I am again in my field. One week ago yesterday I landed in East Aurora, and was made welcome at the home of Bro. Philip C. Fisher and wife. The next evening I opened up the fall campaign at East Elma, and have preached there every evening since then. Congregations are not large but some few seem interested and, for their sakes, I am working and praying. Preaching every evening, and then riding four and three fourth miles in the night air, isn't the best for the health of the preacher; but as there seemed to be no alternative, I have been doing so, feeling thankful to have a good home at the end of the ride.

I hope my correspondents will be charitable enough to forgive any seeming negligence on my part, the past four weeks.

My permanent address is Temple, Lake County, Ohio.

In gospel bonds,

ORTING, Wash., Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—I am alone again, as to ministerial help. Bro. Chase having remained at Castle Rock. We left Waterloo together, intending to come up into these parts; but means were getting short, so concluded to unite our funds and separate; Bro. Chase and Bro. S. Crum to put up the tent in a large hop field. Preach nights and pick hops during the day, and make a small raise. But I have since learned that business matters prevented Bro. Crum from going with him, leaving Bro. Chase to do his own picking, cooking, singing, praying, and preaching, all of which he can and will do without complaint; but it is no soft job—to put it in western form—I can assure you. I am proud of the Latter Day Saint ministry, and I believe the Lord is.

I went on up to Ellensburg some two hundred and fifty miles (where I was met and kindly cared for by Bro. Dawson and family) to see what could be done there, and to meet a Campbellite divine who had made a bitter attack on the faith, it being supposed that a discussion might grow out of the affair, I preached in his presence, giving as full a presentation of our faith as I could in the time allotted me, not forgetting those parts most offensive to him, then gave opportunity for reply; but silence reigned; neither he nor the audience wanted any more doctrine or debate.

At Roslyn, my next stopping place, I met a small band of saints holding up the standard as best they can amid much wickedness, who seemed pleased to meet me, which pleasure was mutual. The use of the Baptist church was obtained, where we did our best—saints and minister—to tell the old story for nine evenings; results not as great as we desired; three were baptized, the fruits, I judge, of Bro. and Sr. Smith's labors. I there had the pleasure of meeting Bro. David Davis, a son of old Bro. Davis, so well and favorably known in California. I was reminded of the old saying, "A chip off the old block." Perhaps I need not say that I was well cared for and my temporal wants not forgotten by the saints of Roslyn. I also met Bro. Enge, an earnest worker, who walked thirty miles to attend one meeting, and gave me a dollar. I cannot say, Go others and do likewise, for that seemed too much of an effort.

On Thursday I came here, found a noble little band of workers and an appointment out for that evening, so no time was lost in the change, and that is what we elders like. The Christian meetinghouse had been obtained here, in which we have held six services. The attendance has not been large, but we are encouraged in knowing that God's Spirit has been present, and we felt an occasion that is of enough importance for it to attend we can well afford to. Some here seem much interested. Bro. Enge drove the opening wedge here, and he may well feel proud of the results of his efforts that were followed up by Brn. John Davis and J. C. Clapp. These brethren are held in high esteem in these parts; and Bro. John, having been longest among them, they think he belongs to them; and I think the sooner they are allowed to possess their property the better.

At Castle Rock we held fourteen well-attended meetings in the city hall, upwards of one hundred in attendance; baptized three and left several more that will unite at no distant day. Was kindly cared for at the hospitable home of Bro. Crum, whose honest life there has done much towards aiding the interest of the cause. I am feeling well in body and am hopeful. May God bless our cause, is my prayer.

Until further notice my address will be Castle Rock, Cowlitz County, Washington, care of Samuel Crum.

SANDYVILLE, Iowa, Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—I reached this place on the 21st; began services the same evening in the old district tent. Am abiding with Bro. Joseph Knox and wife, while holding a series of services. Am not able to speak yet of possible developments here. Preached twice on Sunday the 19th at Des Moines, and in the afternoon baptized a brother, Henry T. Watson, an intelligent man, fifty-one years old. Some may remember him as an investigator at Woodbine reunion in 1896. I think him an humble man.

Will saints of Des Moines district, who can, aid Bro. J. S. Roth financially, who is at Nevada, Story County, with the district tent. Bro. and Sr. W. C. Hardy are the only saints living at Nevada. Bro. E. B. Morgan will aid in the labor, preaching the word, at Nevada.

Bro. J. F. McDowell is in our district for a brief rest up, visiting sister and niece; has recently encouraged the saints at Runnells, in a ministerial way; will visit other points, and expects to be with us till after the conference to be held at Runnells, October 8-10. We expect a large attendance at the conference, in fact quite a reunion; and we hope all will come praying for a divine blessing on the work in this district, and a blessed, spiritual conference. We also anticipate a goodly attendance of the younger people in the interests of the Sunday school work. Saints must arouse themselves and apply their energies to greater faithfulness and diligence, and put on "the whole armor of God," and be prepared for developments of grave character in the world at no distant day. "Gentile times" are closing, and new elements are coming to the front in the revolutionary order of things in churches and in state. Let us remember and remain on the great foundation of the gospel restored.

Pray for the laborers in the Lord's vineyard.

Editors Herald:—At this writing I am in the employ of the United States government, engaged in eating and resting by day, and sleeping in quite a comfortable tent at night. Uncle Sam does not pay anything for this service, but insists on its being done for ten days, before he will permit me and about five hundred others to leave the place. I have been many times invited to enjoy the hospitality of others, but this is the first time I was ever compelled to accept.

The yellow fever scare has already done a vast deal of injury to this southern country. Business is paralyzed, and travel is suspended between all coast and many other southern towns, except under strict quarantine regulations, and quite a number of towns have "shotgun" quarantine, and will not allow anyone from the infected portions of the country to enter them under any circumstances.

"Experts," are disagreed as to whether it is really yellow fever or not. Some say it is, and some say it is not. So the poor unfortunate ones who have the fever are denied the satisfaction of knowing the name of the disease from which they suffer. So far the death rate has been about three in one hundred, while in 1878, I am told by a Dr. Adams, who was here at the time, it was about seven in every ten. There is no need for so much alarm, only Uncle Sam has a few hundred thousand dollars on hand to be used for yellow fever epidemics, and some of the quarantine doctors wanted an epidemic, and one would not come along, and so they had to "get up" one. The money was not comeatable in any other way.

A lady near Scranton had fever. The local physician said it was "dengue," but the expert said "yellow." The local man gave up his own head and doctored by the aid of the "experts" for a few days, treating her for yellow fever. The lady grew worse. The local man then laid off the expert's head, and replaced his own upon his shoulders, and ceased treating her for yellow fever, and she was soon all right. It makes one think of the poor woman spoken of in the New Testament, who had "suffered many things of many physicians, . . . and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse."

The loss to the business of the country will be millions, besides great inconvenience to those who want to pass from place to place; and many who are dependent on their daily wages for a living are being fast reduced to the verge of starvation, and all because "men's hearts falling them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Truly all things are in "commotion." It is just what might be expected. Who that believes the Bible can be surprised?

My time will be out in the camps on October 3. I go then to Garland, Alabama, to attend conference there the 9th and 10th.

Editors Herald:—The work is progressing finely in this part of the vineyard. The Grand Rapids branch held its two-days' meeting a few miles north of here August 14 and 15 and meetings have been continued every Sunday since then until September 25. Elders Baggerly, H. H. Robinson, R. E. Grant, and E. K. Evans assisted and gave us many glorious sermons.

On September 12 Elder R. E. Grant led six into the water and buried them in baptism. I think there are others very near the door. The church doors in this community still remain closed against us, but we still have places to meet.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Hilliard has left us. He preached on the "latter-day Apostasy," Sunday evening, from 2 Peter 2:1, 2, and 1 Timothy 4:1-3. I wish every Salt Lake Mormon could have heard it. He showed that they, the leaders, had fulfilled these predictions and the "way of truth" spoken against. His sermon was listened to with good attention. He also spoke in the morning for us on the text, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." Psalms 53:1. And again for the folks at Oakland. I did not hear that, but others said it was good. The work here is onward. We have some things that hinder, but in the main we go ahead.

TACTICS OF DISCIPLES.—NO. 5.

BY ALVIN KNISLEY.

TAYLOR.—“We have a record of what the apostles did, and God’s will revealed to man through them, and, as we have this, we do not need the apostles in person in the local congregations of Christ in order to do wondrous works to cause men to turn to Christ.”

Comment.—On a parity of reasoning we might say that we have a record of what the elders and deacons did, and therefore we do not need them in person. If the fact of our having a record of what the apostles did, and of some revelations given to the saints through them is evidence that we do not need them now, the same argument will hold good in the case of the elders and deacons. Or it will hold good in the case of any other officers, so long as it happens to relate some of the things they did. The New Testament does not pretend to record all the things the apostles did, neither does it pretend to give or record all the revelations given through the apostles for the benefit of the church. The New Testament is of a historical and doctrinal character. Some very important things the apostles did, and some doctrines of equal importance which they taught are therein written. This is admitted by everybody, I believe, who even professes to believe the Bible. But who knows, Mr. Taylor, but what there were doctrines not in the Bible of equal importance with those contained therein, taught and practiced by primitive Christians and obligatory on modern Christians? I can tell you who knows; the Latter Day Saints. One good consolation is the fact that there is enough written there to prove that the Disciple Church is not the true church.

Taylor.—“We have their word, and if men cannot believe them, they would not believe though one was raised from the dead.”

Comment.—You do not know that we have all their word that was even written. And if what they wrote was the word of the Lord, writing it did not constitute it his word. It existed before it was written, and was his word written or unwritten. Before it was written it was delivered orally from the mouth of God’s chosen ministers, who took not the honor upon themselves. And as Paul declares to the Thessalonians:—

For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance.—1 Thess. 1:5.

Taylor.—“We have all the words of prophecy that are necessary in order to our salvation in a written language, and therefore when we wish to hear one of the prophets speak, just open the Bible and read.”

Comment.—On the same ground we might say we have all the words of preaching necessary for our salvation in a written language, and that whenever we wish to hear a sermon or a preacher speak, we can just open the Bible and read. Likewise, the Bible gives an account of Christ feeding several thousand on a few loaves of bread and fishes; hence, whenever we get hungry, to save the trouble of baking and cooking now-a-days we might just look up that portion of scripture and read it! Ah! Mr. Taylor, to read of blessings people received eighteen centuries ago is not sufficient for us; we want them ourselves. And as regards the continuation of apostles and prophets, with the other officers mentioned in the New Testament, we have this from Paul:—

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.—Eph. 4: 11–13.

This quotation may seem rather long to the most of our readers, with whom it is so familiar. I hope, however, that their Heralds will chance fall into the hands of some one else with whom it is not so familiar as with themselves. Its importance consists in its giving the names of some of the officers of the ancient church, as well as indicating the object of their being placed in it, and the length of time designed for them to continue. “Till we all come in the unity of the faith;” “unto a perfect man,” etc. It is easily perceived that that time is somewhat distant yet. Apostles and prophets, with the other officers, were to continue until the arrival of that period designated by the apostle.

In conversation with a Disciple minister one time on this subject—the necessity of having some men now which they have not, as Christian officers—he argued that they were not now necessary. I asked him about some holding inferior offices, if they were not now necessary, saying that “I heard you say in your sermon the other Sunday that your people ought to get an ‘evangelist’ here to hold services”? O, yes, he believed in having evangelists, and I think admitted the right of deacons as well, if not elders and bishops. But I told him that all those officers with apostles and prophets were to continue till we come in the unity of the faith,” etc., quoting to him the language of Paul. “Well,” he said, “that time has arrived, that period came, that promise was fulfilled; hence, away with apostles and prophets.”

“Then,” I said, “if that time arrived, why do you have those other officers, seeing they too were to continue, with the apostles and prophets, till those stated conditions came? Paul says, God gave apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, to continue till the saints ‘came in the unity of the faith,’ ‘unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.’ Now if that time has not yet come, we need all those officers; if it has come we need none of them, or one no more than the other.” It is, perhaps, needless to say that I had the poor preacher “boxed.”

Taylor.—“God does not make revelations to any person now, as his work was made complete when he made his last revelation to the apostle John.”

Comment.—Again you assert that which you do not know to be true. The former clause of your sentence, in which you assert that God does not reveal himself to any person now, is based on the latter, which asserts that God’s work was completed in the last revelation he gave to John. By his “work” we will allow that you mean his written word, his revelation, as it is scarcely probable you would believe him to have no more work to do now or henceforth. Yet you are constantly saying things just as silly.

There is neither proof that the revelation God gave to John on Patmos was the last revelation given to any one on earth, or that the revelation he gave to John completed his work of revelation. If there is to be any credit attached to the early fathers for the works they wrote, the very opposite of your statement is true. They testify that God continued to reveal his mind and power during the second, third, and also the fourth centuries. (See Church History, American edition, page 254; Mosheim's History, vol. 1, p. 78; sermon 94 of John Wesley, on The More Excellent Way.) If I were to take time here to search, I could give lots of other references to different works now extant, which testify to the continuation of those divine manifestations for a considerable period after the deaths of the apostles. The fact of John's book being the last one in the Bible is no reason that it was the last one given.

Taylor.—“In God's word we have a record of miracles. But what were they for? The purpose was to cause men to believe.”

Comment.—We deny your statement. But even if it were true, your conclusion that miracles are not now needed does not correctly follow. The purpose of a miracle depended on what its nature was. Some miracles were performed for one purpose and some for another. Some were performed for the restoration of sight to the blind, others for hearing to the deaf; others to empower the lame to walk. But instead of making whole the blind and deaf for the use and benefit of those senses to the ones enjoying them, you would lead us to believe that they were cured for the purpose of making some one else believe that Jesus was the Son of God.

Taylor.—“Are they necessary now? . . . No.”

Comment.—Why not; if they were done to cause people to believe. There are over a billion of unbelievers now out of a billion and a half of people.

Taylor.—“Unless the record, or Bible, was wiped out of existence, and the world was left bare in superstition and ignorance.”

Comment.—The fact of the Bible having existence does not preclude the necessity of modern miracles if they were anciently done to make believers. The Bible does not claim to take the place of miracles. If it does, why not produce the passage? This you do not do. You cannot do it, because there is not such a passage to be found in it. The New Testament tells of some of the miracles performed by Christ and the apostles. It also tells some truths and unfolds some doctrines believed by the best people on the earth at that time. Those doctrines and facts had existence though, before they were written down. Writing them down on tanned skin did not constitute them what they were. Miracles were performed while those truths were personally carried forth and delivered by the apostles; why should they cease to be performed simply because those truths were written down. If miracles were done to make people believe it is evident that they are needed now if anything more than before they were written. If people would not believe the testimony of living witnesses, they would be less likely to believe the testimony of dead witnesses, especially when it is eighteen hundred years old. Paul says:—

Covet earnestly the best gifts; and yet show I unto you a more excellent way.—1 Cor. 12: 31.

Quoting this, Mr. Taylor proceeds to quote part of the following chapter, the thirteenth, and particularly the eighth verse, where Paul says:—

Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

Taylor.—“Now, is it not a fact that there are not any divinely inspired prophets living now?”

Comment.—No; because there are. The passage quoted does not justify your conclusion.

Taylor.—“Is it not a fact that speaking in unknown tongues—with-out first learning the tongue—has ceased?”

Comment.—Yes; and it is equally true that it has revived again, and is now enjoyed by the people of the Lord. It ceased with many other things, because of wickedness and apostasy, but returned when the gospel was restored to earth in the fore part of this century.

Taylor.—“Is it not a fact that supernatural knowledge has not been handed down in succession from the apostles, and therefore has vanished from men?”

Comment.—It may be a fact, but that is not a reason that it is not now enjoyed or possessed by any. It is a fact that the true church has not been handed down or existed in succession from the apostle's days. But the true church has been restored, and supernatural knowledge, which is one of its components, was restored with it.

Taylor.—“Show (!) me the man who can perform one miracle.”

Comment.—I can't do it. There is, however, One above who can perform one miracle, and who has performed many miracles in these last days through the mediumship of his chosen servants. He is continuing to perform them day by day in restoring sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, raising his people from their beds of sickness and affliction, and in many other cases too numerous to mention. Peter said:—

Why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk.—Acts 3: 12.

He could not do it independently of the intervention of God.

Taylor.—“Show (!) me the man who can speak one unknown language to him, and can interpret it in his own language!”

Comment.—We could show you many men who have spoken in unknown languages and interpreted them by the same power by which they spoke them. This is one of the spiritual gifts mentioned by Paul in 1 Corinthians 12. He says “the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.” To one was given one gift, to another another gift, “dividing to every man severally as he [God] will.” Those gifts are precious, and cometh from God, and are not enjoyed by the will of man, but by the will of God.

Taylor.—“They cannot be found among the living of to-day.”

Comment.—It is as easy to say that they were not found among the living anciently, who are now dead. Many deny that they were found among them. Different men offer different excuses for not believing that miracles were performed by the apostles. Some men, like Hume, argue that it is a scientific impossibility. Whatever their excuses are, it is hard to conceive how they could be any more inconsistent than you are in the excuse you offer for denying modern miracles.

Taylor.—“Therefore, all claims to be in possession of them are utterly false and wholly untrue.”

Comment.—An easy way you have of reaching a conclusion. It is indeed amusing to see you. You do squeeze out a phantom of reason now and then, and after a few unproved assertions exclaim, “therefore all claims to be in possession of them are utterly false.”

Taylor.—“Since we have arrived at the period of perfection in the body of Christ, we do not need the apostles, and so on.”

Comment.—“Period of perfection.” Perfection in what? Perhaps you allude to divine revelation, or the Bible. You have not adduced an iota of evidence from the beginning of your review, of the Bible's being perfect.

Taylor.—“God did not intend for such to be after the institution of his Son was once established as a fact in the minds of men.”

Comment.—Such composed a part of the institution of his Son. Paul says:—

And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Cor. 12: 28.

When those components ceased, the church ceased to be established. We know the mind and intentions of God by what he says. Through Paul he says he set those officers and things in the church, and as he has failed to give us any notice of his intention to set them out, we insist that no one has the right to do it for him.

Our critic makes the following quotation from page three of the tract on “Discipleism”:—

McDowell.—

In “The Disciples of Christ,” by J.F. Rowe, page 29, we read that they learned “how to use the rules of Bible interpretation,—how to quote and apply Scriptures.” By what rule of Bible interpretation would they dispense with these essential qualities of the primitive Christian system? Thomas Campbell and his son Alexander staunchly averred that a universal apostasy had occurred from original Christianity. They found the entire religious world in possession of the merest “form of godliness, denying the power thereof.” This being true, and primitive Christianity having been vested with a divine power found in audible inspiration, how could that same form of a Christian institution be restored in all its parts without being rehabilitated with a similar inspiration of the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven?

Taylor.—“I wish to ask that man of sin again, if the word of God was ever lost—annihilated?”

Comment.—That depends on what you mean by the “word of God.” If you mean the written word, we answer that it has been partially lost; if you mean the unwritten word, we answer that it is impossible for it to be lost—so far as being destroyed, or what you call “annihilated,” is concerned. I might observe again that the existence of the word or law of God does not depend on its being written down. Jesus said, “Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away.” During the three years ministry of Jesus with his disciples, he taught them some very important truths. He told them that he would in process of time leave them, but that he would give them the Comforter to guide them into all truth, and bring past things to their remembrance, and so on. We have no record of Jesus doing any writing. So far as we can find out, his teachings were orally delivered to all the people with whom he came in scriptural contact from time to time. We doubt not, however, his ability to write. He said he only did or said that which he was commanded by his Father. And being guided by the All-wise and All-powerful God, writing or nothing else was too great for him to perform when it pleased God for him to do so.

The words which he taught, the laws which he enforced, whether general or limited in their application to individuals, were not made such merely by being written. And if they had never been written it would not prove that they were not delivered, nor that they were not what they were after their delivery. Some of them—but not all—were written by the apostles in after years, with some that they received from him by revelation after his death and ascension. There is no proof in the New Testament that all the laws and ordinances incumbent on primitive Christians are contained in that book. Some very important ones are mentioned it is true, but that there were none in force besides those that are mentioned, you know not.

You people, unsupported by reason or divine revelation, take the Bible as one round whole, a perfect revelation, a complete canon of scripture. This you do when you have not a particle of evidence that all God's laws binding on his people were even written down. Those that were written were written on perishable material and, as I have before observed, the originals are not known to be in existence at the present day.

But suppose they were, and suppose all that ever was written for God's people were handed down to us in a perfect, uncorrupted state, that would not prove that God's church exists, and that there is a people on the earth who have a right to preach and administer the ordinances of the gospel. The New Testament qualifies no one to preach and baptize, but it tells who were qualified. People in order to be adopted into the citizenship of your country, and be entitled to its rights and privileges, must have some one legally qualified by other or higher authority to adopt them. A mere knowledge of the law of how they are to be adopted will not adopt them; neither will the law itself qualify anyone to adopt them.

The Bible was so named in the fourth century, according to Chrysostom. We are told that the original manuscripts of the Old Testament, written prior to the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, perished in the destruction of the first temple at that time. So says Chambers' Encyclopedia. The same authority says that a man was afterward inspired to rewrite them, or to make a recension of other existing copies. Whatever may be the facts of the case in relation to this matter, is uncertain, even to the learned. But one thing is undoubted by the scholastic world, I believe, which is that the Old Testament was translated from Hebrew into Greek some time before Christ by seventy learned Jews. It is called the Septuagint or Alexandrian, and was translated in Egypt about 285 B. C. From that date up to the present, it has existed in Greek. There are, however, certain Hebrew manuscripts extant now, but not one of that precious volume entire is one thousand years old, or little earlier than William the Conquerer.

The New Testament was probably written on papyrus, an Egyptian plant. It is said to have been the least durable of any material that could be obtained for that purpose. Stanley Leathes, D. D., says it was written in Greek. It has been copied and recopied many times. It has also been subjected to many different translations by different translators. Each one differs from all the rest. And finally comes the Revised Version of both the Old and New Testaments, which is claimed to be superior to all those which preceded it. Yet the Revisers themselves confess that it contains "blemishes and imperfections." They admit that a perfect revision could not be given by organized efforts without being assisted by "divine help." That is admitting that we cannot have the Bible in a perfect, uncorrupted condition without inspiration. For divine help of that character would be inspiration. Then when they admit that their revision could not be perfectly accomplished without divine help, and afterward that there are blemishes and imperfections in their revision, they just virtually acknowledge that they did not have divine help. The Spirit shall "guide you into all truth," said Jesus.

There are forty-one extant apocryphal books of the New Testament, and sixty-eight lost books which are referred to in the writings of the early fathers. The division of the canonical books into chapters, verses, etc., is not the work of inspiration. Your great Alexander Campbell says, in Christian Baptism, page 39.

The various divisions and subdivisions of the sacred scriptures into chapters, verses, and members of sentences, are of human authority, and to be regarded as such. Anciently all the books of the sacred scriptures were written in one continuous manner, without a break, a chapter, or a verse. The division into chapters that now universally obtains in Europe derived its origin from Cardinal Cario, who lived in the twelfth century. The subdivision into verses is of no older date than the middle of the sixteenth century, and was the invention of Robert Stevens. Whatever advantages these divisions may have been in the way of facilitating references they have so dislocated and broken to pieces the connection as to not only to have given the Scriptures the appearance of a book of proverbs, but have thrown great difficulties in the way of any easy intelligence of them. The punctuations, too, being necessarily dependant on these divisions is so far from accurate; and taken altogether it affords a demonstration that there is no more divinity in the chapters, verses, commas, semicolons, colons, and periods of the inspired writings than there is in the paper on which they are inscribed or in the ink by which they are depicted to our view.

The various readings in the different copies of the New Testament manuscripts are of an immense number, each newly discovered copy increasing the number. So that Alexander Roberts, D. D., says that while they were reckoned at thirty thousand in the last century, they are generally referred to as amounting to no less than one hundred and fifty thousand at the present day.—Companion to the Revised Version of New Testament.

A question may arise in our minds in regard to the veracity of all these things. We see our mother's Bible before us which she not only taught us to believe, but which she revered as her own life. We see so many professing belief in it and extolling it to the heavens as the perfect revelation of God to his chosen apostles. But we have only to read it critically and studiously till we find these things largely confirmed. We read that the Lord repented of the evil he did: Jeremiah 26: 19; Exodus 32: 14. That he tempted people, or led them into temptation: Matthew 4: 1; Genesis 22: 1. That men awoke and found themselves dead: Isaiah 37: 36; 2 Kings 19: 35. That an evil spirit from God entered Saul: 1 Samuel 16: 14. That Jesus baptized with water and that he did not: John 3: 22-26 versus 4: 2. That those who journeyed with Paul when he was struck down heard the voice and that they did not: Acts 9: 7 versus 22: 9. That Ahaziah was two years older than his father, that he was forty-two when he began to reign, and that he was only twenty-two: 2 Chronicles 21: 20 and 22: 1, 2 versus 2 Kings 8: 26. There are scores of others. We cannot admit that the original writers made all those big blunders. Simply calling attention to them as they now exist throws no discredit on the good men from whom they originally emanated. They are in no wise amenable to God or man for the alterations that have taken place since.

Taylor.—"If so [that God's word was lost.—A. K.], then we would surely agree with him concerning another divine outpouring of the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven to guide some rechosen apostles into all truth."

Comment.—God's word is not his church. If his church ceased to exist, and if there was an apostasy as described in the Bible, another outpouring of the Holy Spirit is necessary any way.

Taylor.—"Strange to see that some men cannot discriminate between God's word and the apostasy of the people."

Comment.—Strange to see that others cannot discriminate between God's word and the church of God, or God's word and the right to administer it.
